Iowa Bystander Celebrates 42nd Anniversary

NEW DEAL LASHED AT GRASS ROOTS CONF AB One of the Oldest Weeklies In the United States Today

NEGRO DELEGATES OUTLINE RESOLUTIONS
Springfield, Ill., June 14.—The Mid-West Republican Conference got under way Monday morning at 10:30 with Jake Allen of Chicago handling the gavel. After the preliminaries incidental to the order of the day, consisting of the seating of the various delegates and the entertaining and passage of necessary motions incidental to a well rounded political setup, Mr. Allen turned the gavel over to Harrison G. Spangler of Cedar Rapids, Iowa, who was afterwards made permanent chairman.

Chairman Spangler, who is also one of the foremost moving spirits of the "grass roots," delivered an address replete with political invectives and with constant and effective charges against the New Dealers.

He divided honors with the honored guest of the day, Frank O. Lowden, former governor of Illinois, who was unanimously selected as the one properly qualified to express the grass roots' viewpoint on conditions in the middle west.

Lowden Speaks
Mr. Lowden was introduced by the chairman with appropriate words and delivered an address which in no wise indicated his seventy-five years of age. After reviewing the history of the Roosevelt administration in Washington, recasting its failures and its refusal to keep the faith with its own party pledges and program, Mr. Lowden turned his attention to the recent decision of the supreme court, nullifying the NRA.

He charged the Roosevelt administration with seeking to change the Constitution to conform to its viewpoint and referred to the decision of the court as having been sufficient in its force and effect to impress America with the importance of her own Constitution.

Sunday afternoon thousands of old and young Republicans gathered at New Salem to renew their faith and hopes in the continual progress of their country. The occasion was made memorable by the able address delivered by former Governor Arthur M. Hyde of Kansas. The Lincoln Liberty choir, under the direction of O. Jerome Singleton, consisting of a hundred and fifty voices, rendered music for the occasion.

Many Negro Delegates
Probably the largest delegation of members of our group, bearing their own expenses from the various states, was in evidence in this convention than has ever before attended a convention under similar circumstances. Every state with the exception of the Dakotas was represented.

At the call of Dr. J. R. A. Crossland of Missouri, a number of delegates representing the various states met at the Urban League on Sunday night and drafted a set of resolutions embodying the opinions which the delegation thought should be presented to the resolutions committee.

Among the prominent Negroes from other states were T. W. Bell of Leavenworth, former Congressman Oscar DePriest and Roscoe Conkling Simms.

Harry E. Wilson, James G. Brown and Attorney James B. Morris were the Negro delegates from Iowa.

On Thursday afternoon will be held the election and installation of officers.

MRS. MAUDE BREWTON TO PRESIDE FIFTH TIME

Social Workers Close Conference

OXLEY AND TAYLOR GIVE ADDRESSES
Montreal, Canada, June 14.—That government aid is the only possible remedy for the deplorable situation in which Negro labor finds itself was the main contention of Leat. Lawrence A. Oxley, chief of the Division of Negro Labor, U. S. Department of Labor, who was one among several outstanding personages to address the National Conference of Social Work, which ended its four day session here this week.

Delegates from all parts of the United States and from Canada were in attendance at the meeting, which saw many problems affecting the race along social lines thoroughly gone into.

Present and taking an active interest in the program was Miss Frances Perkins, secretary of the U. S. Department of Labor, and Miss Katherine Lennox, director of the Childrens Bureau, Department of Labor.

Jobless Survey is Launched in Iowa

Howard in Charge of Obtaining Data
A statewide survey among Iowa Negroes to be carried on largely by persons on relief, to gather unemployment data, earnings, labor organizations' affiliations, age groups and other information, was launched last week in offices of the Iowa emergency relief administration.

Howard in Charge
Charles P. Howard, Des Moines attorney, is in charge of the project, with offices in the DEBA headquarters.

Associated with Howard is Luella Baker and several other employees, who will prepare questionnaires to be used in the survey and aid in selecting interviewers.

Jobs For 25
Howard said the plan contemplated employment of at least twenty-five, and possibly fifty interviewers and other helpers, all from relief rolls and employed on regular work relief schedules.

Majority in Des Moines
While the project was called statewide, they said the small Negro population in Des Moines would make the survey in those places unnecessary and expensive. If it were restricted to Des Moines it should be carried through as a regular city or county project.

The occupational classification survey cards soon will be available the same facts about 75 per cent of the Negro population of the state.

Jobless Survey is Launched in Iowa

By Everett Wadsworth Staff Writer
Twenty-eight years after the surrender of General Lee to General Grant at Appomattox, the closing drama of the North-South conflict, the Iowa Bystander came into existence in the old Register block in Des Moines, Iowa, June 8, 1893. The founders were Charles S. Ruff, editor; Thaddeus S. Ruff, associate editor; Joseph H. Shepard, manager; and John D. Beckley, treasurer. Ben J. Holmes, E. T. Baskin, James Todd, William C. Cook, J. E. Barton, and Jeff Logan were the directors.

"All of these men, with the exception of myself, were born prior to the War of the Rebellion," Mr. Ruff related Wednesday in the interview as he vividly recalled incidents and happenings of the "boy soldier."

"Mr. Ruff, entered since 1898, and occasionally active in local politics, and his brother, Charles, now living in Peoria, Ill., are the only founders alive today. The Peoria Transcript Journal, which daily awarded a membership medal for fifty years of service in the Typographical union to Charles Ruff in March, 1935.

A Sideline
The paper was a "sideline" for the uplift of the race rather than for pecuniary benefit, as all of the founders were employed. Mr. Ruff said, "Iowa congressmen co-operated wholeheartedly in the establishment of this newspaper and were actively engaged in other enterprises for the benefit of the colored people." He stated the veteran printer, through their efforts and other white business and professional people, he explained, the weekly was founded on the principles of the Republican party.

Major John T. Lacey, Sixth district; Col. David B. Henderson, Third district; Col. Pete Heppburn, Eighth district; John A. Hull, Seventh district; Major Conger, Seventh district; and John H. Gear, second district, represented Iowa in congress at that time. "These soldiers had served in the war and were eager to make amends to the Negroes," Mr. Ruff reminisced.

Elks in Midwest Kansas City Meet

W. J. Shepherd Elected Vice President
Kansas City, Mo.—W. J. Shepherd, district deputy of Iowa, was elected first vice president at the tenth annual, midwestern association of Negro Elks, held Sunday, Monday and Tuesday. The Heart of America lodge entertained the convolve, which is said to have been the greatest held here in recent years. Nathan W. Thatcher, Kansas City mortician, presided over the sessions.

Grand Exalted Ruler Ibbot J. Finley Wilson, the "Little Giant" of Elkdom, was present. The welcome from city officials was the most cordial experience in previous years by the association. Through the invitation extended by the mayor in person, the 1936 convention will be held in Denver.

The Des Moines delegation from Hawkley's lodge, No. 160, consisted of Paul Exalted Ruler W. J. Shepherd, James C. Hudson and Irving W. Chatham, formerly resident of Kansas City. Hudson acted as tyler and Chatham was on the ways and means committee. Others from the Iowa lodge were John Williams, Eddie Allen, Roosevelt Carter and James Moore.

Elks in Midwest Kansas City Meet

Des Moines Delegates
Program of the United States government in the financing of a large scale, low-rent housing projects in some thirty-five cities of that country, was outlined by R. R. Taylor, of Chicago, who talked on the question: "Is Social Service Background Adequate Training For Housing Managers?"

Italy Says "Honor at Stake Must Settle An Old Score"

Mussolini Hurls Dare As Many African Troops Continue Arming
BOTH SIDES READY
Rome, June 14.—(Special)—Literally thumping his nose at the rest of the world, Italy's fascist dictator, Benito Mussolini, in the strongest terms at his command, told an enormous crowd at Cagliari, Sardinia, Sunday that he intends to go ahead with his war with Ethiopia. He was reviewing the Sabauda division prior to its embarkation for East Africa.

That the ignominious route and slaughter of the Italian army by the black soldiery of Ethiopia at Adowa in 1896 still rankles was indicated by Mussolini's assertion that Italy had "an old and a new score to settle" by actual conflict with the African empire.

Attacks England
He stirred every corner of Europe with a thinly veiled attack on Great Britain, whose actions in attempting to bring about a peaceful settlement of the Italo-Ethiopian crisis, had aroused his ire. "Italy," he shouted to his cheering millions, will "imitate to the letter those who would now preach us a sermon, but who have demonstrated that when they were creating an empire and defending it, they never took into consideration world opinion."

"We have an old and a new score to settle, and we shall settle them. We shall not take any account of what is said beyond our frontiers, because we, we alone and we exclusively, are the judges of our interests and the guarantors of our future."

Italy's "Power and Glory"
Mussolini gives as his excuse to attack Ethiopia that the nation's "power and glory" are involved in the dispute. It is usual for nations declaring war to say that they are fighting to defend themselves or their possessions. In this instance, Mussolini can only claim that Italy's "power and glory" has been questioned.

Dispatches received here late in the week, from Addis Ababa, capital of Ethiopia, were to the effect that a former general of the Turkish imperial army, Vahid Pascha, had gone there from Cairo, Egypt, to take command of Emperor Haile Selassie's forces. The Turkish government was reported to have denied that Pascha was connected with its army and stated that the soldier, who is regarded as an able commander, has lost his Turkish citizenship.

At the twenty-seventh commencement of Iowa State college, among the thirty-nine who received master of science degrees was Willis Joan Ewing of Ames, Iowa. ## Negro Graduated From Iowa State

Office
Backed by the Bystander's influence, John Fowler, lodge official until his death in 1931, was elected file clerk in the senate, and H. R. Wright, prominent attorney, who died in 1932, was file clerk in the house, the only colored men ever employed there.

This paper, Mr. Ruff said, helped to put in office Charles Stewart as comptroller, Geo. H. Choquet, Sr., as assessor, and Frank Blagburn, now of Washington, D. C., as marketmaster. "With the co-operation and support of Iowa Negroes now, the Bystander could do even more than they did forty years ago," Mr. Ruff concluded.

Gay Nineties
During the "gay nineties" this was what was happening: Mrs. Mary Church Ferrel was president of the National Association of Colored Women, which met in Nashville in 1897. H. A. Rucker, collector internal revenue in Washington. Cotton States Industrial Exposition in 1905. President hospital established in Chicago. American Medical Association organized in Atlanta in 1896. DuBois appointed history and economic professor at Atlanta U. Rev. Francis J. G., accepted former pastor of Fifteenth Street Presbyterian church in Washington in 1890, which he still resides.

In the Iowa State college library. Miss Ewing is also the first to graduate with a master's degree in horticulture or any phase of agriculture at Iowa State college. She plans to continue research work at Columbia university in New York for her doctors of philosophy degree.

Subsistence Plan To Be Explained

Father Ligutti To Address Home-Stealers

His remarks and advice can be of unlimited aid in the securing of such homesteads.

The talk at the Community Center will be an open forum. Any questions will be gladly answered by Father Ligutti or others present at the meeting. This project will make it possible for any one to receive a very modern home with all modern conveniences, as running water, bath tubs and sanitation, just as are used in the Granger plan. The government finances the places and completes the homes, with a suitable acreage for such tenant, and there are small monthly payments.

Dr. Kelly Miller Has His Say On Academic Freedom

Wherein the Old Gentleman And Scholar Writes Much

The issue of academic freedom is now raging throughout the academic and political world. Sundry universities and colleges are now under investigation for teachings and propaganda alleged to be subversive of democratic institutions, Freedom of conscience and speech is guaranteed to each individual by the fundamental law of the land. This right is denied only in cases of national danger and necessity. A few tough, stubborn spirits like the late Eugene Debs would not suffer this abridgment even in the times of war but as a conscientious objector, preferred imprisonment rather than sacrifice his freedom of conscience.

On abstract grounds, aside from concrete applications, this freedom is safeguarded to every American. "Freedom of speech" is a sonorous phrase which well fills and befits the mouth of the demagogue and the mob orator, it is easy to beguile the inflammable minds of youth by such demagogical appeal. With such phrases he calculates to make the welkin ring and the eagle scream. But when one enters upon the teaching profession, he takes vows of poverty and obedience—his freedom of utterance is restricted by the latitude allowed by those who support and control the institution in which he teaches. In this connection it is well to differentiate between the two classes of institutions. In privately endowed and controlled schools the faculty and student body are subject to the government and discipline of the Board of Trustees, who are at perfect liberty to encourage or curtail any extent of liberalism which meets the approval of parents and patrons. But in tax-supported schools the case is entirely different. The public has the undisputed right to determine the character and extent to which freedom of utterance is to be tolerated. If the state of Tennessee forbids the teaching of evolution any tax-supported school, any professor who accepts service is bound to live within the enclosed restriction, this limitation of academic freedom is self-imposed. The state establishes and maintains an institution to uphold and defend the body of doctrine, beliefs, received and accepted opinions which the people have adopted and approved and wishes to be inculcated upon the minds of future citizens. Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, President of Columbia University in which academic freedom is constantly an issue, declares "the state must always have a care lest it act to its own undoing through failure of intelligence and courage. Surely the tax-supported schools maintained by a republican form of government cannot, in honesty and decency, exert their influence to undermine or overthrow that government."

The immediate question at issue in several of our schools and colleges is as to whether a tax-supported institution should maintain an open forum for the discussion of the relative claims of democracy, socialism, fascism and nazism. This can not evidently be tolerated until the overwhelming majority of American people come to look with greater complacency upon these radical departures than they do at present. The Social Department of tax-supported institutions are expected to extol the virtues of democracy and not to serve as a laboratory for experiment in rival economic and political theories.

But, rejoins the red and the radical, there can be no progress in any human institution without freedom of thought and opinion. No sensible person is disposed to dispute this elementary principle; but throughout history the genuine reformers have had the courage of their conscience. The hater from within is regarded as an ignoble insect. Payroll radicals do not impress us with their nobility of character. Socrates drinks the hemlock, Jesus Christ dies on the Cross, Martin Luther is expelled from the Catholic communion, Eugene Debb languishes in jail at Harper's Ferry, Eugene Debb languishes in jail at Harper's Ferry, Eugene Debb languishes in jail at Harper's Ferry. The boundary of human freedom is extended by their noble sacrifices. Stalin, Mussolini and Hitler stepped outside the pale of existing order in order to more effectively destroy it. If professors and instructors in tax-supported institutions are genuinely convinced that some other form of economic and political government should be substituted for the one by which they are maintained and supported, they should have the decency and courage to withdraw from the payroll of such institutions and devote themselves, with detached energy, to the new order in which they profess so devoutly to believe.

No liberal minded American would maintain that there should not be provided open forum for the discussion of relative and rival claims of different forms of political and economic institutions. But no sensible American, I think, would maintain that such forums should be upheld under the aegis of tax supported institutions.

Annapolis, West Point and Howard University are supported in the main by taxes contributed by all the people. No risky experiment can be tolerated. They must therefore adhere, substantially to the doctrine to which all the people subscribe. Any officer or instructor on the payroll of any one of these institutions who insists of academic freedom to the extent of overthrowing the government by revolution and violence, does not show his courage but his folly.

—Kelly Miller.

Man Can Talk With God, Says Noted Psychologist

A new and revolutionary religious teaching based entirely on the misunderstood sayings of the Gallilean Carpenter and designed to show how we may find, understand and use the same identical power which Jesus used in performing His so-called Miracles, is attracting world wide attention to its founder, Dr. Frank B. Robinson, noted psychoanalyst, author and lecturer. "Psychiana," this new psychological religion, believes and teaches that it is today possible for every normal human being, understanding spiritual law as Christ understood it, to duplicate every work that the Carpenter of Galilee ever did—He believes and teaches that when He said, "the things that I do shall ye do also," He meant what He said and meant it literally to mankind, through all the ages.

Dr. Robinson has prepared a 6000 word treatise on "Psychiana" in which he tells about his long search for the Truth, how he finally came to the full realization of an unseen Power or force so dynamic in itself that all other powers and forces fade into insignificance beside it—how he learned in communion directly with the Living God using this mighty, never-failing power to demonstrate health, happiness and financial success, and how any normal, sane person, just send your name Jesus did. He is now offering this treatise free to every reader of this paper who writes him.

If you want to read this highly interesting, revolutionary and fascinating story of the discovery of a great truth, just send your name and address to Dr. Frank B. Robinson 252 6th St., Moscow, Idaho. It will be sent free and postpaid without cost or obligation. Write Dr. Robinson today—Copyright 1935. Dr. Frank B. Robinson—Advertisement.

"ATLANTA AFTER DARK"

A Fast-Moving, Six Chapter Short Short Story By JOSEPH STAFFORD

CHAPTER FOUR

Begin here: Helen Lee had only been in Atlanta a week when she was forced by bandits to ride on the running board of their car in making their getaway. She was rescued by Nick Collins and her father who had taken up the chase. Her handsome, tan skinned rescuer fascinates Helen and they become friends. She makes her first visit to a cabaret with Grace Howard, Harry Young and Nick. Returning home she finds a young girl there whom her father has adopted. The next day she goes on an outing with Grace, Bob Howard and Norman Johnson.

At Cliff Franklin's party, Nick becomes angry when Helen flirts with Jack Burton and does a dance which he calls out and utters. He scolds her insultingly and tells her she is just a country girl gone wild in the city. Helen is hurt and the following day she tells Fannie if Nick calls to tell him she's gone.

To spite Nick she goes out with Jack Burton and nearly falls victim to a passion that his wild style of love making aroused within her. Her father tells her that Jack Burton is a criminal and forbids her to see him again. Helen doesn't believe him and goes to her room and writes out a lonely highway. Nick stops on a road and puts his arm around her shoulder. Now go on.

"Having engine trouble dear," she inquired, starting at him with tender eyes and a longing smile. "None of our trouble, darling," he answered. "Why, that's news to me. Who is this little female that's doing so much to your heart?" "You, darling," he put his arms around her waist and drew her close to him. "Somebody's trying to steal you from me and I'm not going to stand for it."

She didn't offer resistance, preferring to lay cozily in his arms, tarrying at him submissively. He leaned down and their eager lips met and engaged in a passionate kiss. She slipped her arms around his neck and drew him close to her bosom. For a long while they lingered in a daze of contentment.

"Helen, dear," his voice was soft and loving. "Tell me that you don't love that man. Tell me you love only me." "For a moment she stared in awe at the seriousness of the expression on his face. "Don't be absurd Nick. It's impossible for a girl to fall in love with a man she knows nothing about. I guess you mean Jack Burton?" "Exactly. Now Helen, darling, forget him. He's not good enough for you. He's just a common racketeer—an enemy to society."

She sighed wearily, hoping he would change the subject. She didn't want to be told as though she was a helpless child. She wanted to find out a few things for herself.

"Please, Nick, don't spoil our evening," she begged. "You and I are together, let's be together. Why bring a chip of misery in—it all spoils the fun. We love each other, why worry about someone else?" "I'm sorry, dear," he apologized. "I didn't mean to offend you. I love you so much, darling, I only wanted to be sure you belonged to me alone."

He drew her close to him and spoke tenderly. "Now, that's what we love each other, can't we be married, dear?" "Helen could only gaze. She had not thought he would take it that serious, nor had she once given a thought to marrying him. She had just begun to see life—now what it was—all about and now he wanted her to forsake the world and give up everything for him. It was all too sudden for her. He had carried her too fast. She had to have time to think. Her heart began to pound wildly as she lifted her curious eyes to his eager face.

"But, Nick, this is all so sudden. I hadn't thought about anything. I've got to have time to think, like I managed to say." "I didn't mean to rush you, darling, but you love me and I love you, marriage is the only sensible thing. Oh, darling, can't you see I'm mad about you?"

He showered kisses on her neck, her hair, her lips, then faced her seriously. "I love you, darling—I need you—we can't go on forever being this way."

Her conscious brain wouldn't allow her to think clearly. She could only see him sitting there pointing out his love for her, rushing her to an unknown fate, and to say in her defense.

"I do love you, Nick," she breathed. "But you see, I'm just beginning to learn what love is all about. I've begun to go about and see things. Maybe we don't love each other as much as we think we do. You know, marriage is something we've got to take seriously. We must not be too hasty—least we go wrong."

A gloomy veil seemed to cover his face. "Then, you are not on pins," he confessed. "I was so afraid you would say someone else." She smiled, knowing he had thought she was going to say Jack Burton. "I know I had you fooled that time," she grinned. "Then you do love Nick Collins?" he questioned.

"Obviously," she blushed. "I was worried about leaving you here alone, but since you're engaged to Nick, I know he will take good care of you. I'm sorry I can't take you with me."

"I'm going away to handle a case for the two men that were here a few minutes ago. I'm leaving on the morning train. I will probably be gone for two weeks."

ing-out wondering. She found her self smiling at the menacing but thrilling thought of Jack Burton and his comely style of love making. Seemingly tomorrow was a long time to wait now. She wouldn't have to worry about her father, and not once had she given a thought to Nick. Of course, she was going to take her but somehow, she wished something would happen so Nick couldn't be there, she was quite sure. "I would have a much better time, but after all, she concluded, he wouldn't be any trouble. It was Jack Burton who made her heart beat fast but he didn't. He had tired her heart and then threw it out. She remembered he hadn't called her. It was her time now to sweep him off his feet the way he had done her. And then, too, she wasn't quite sure he wasn't the man she loved. She had to learn the mystery that surrounded him. Why people accused him of being a criminal, for she had seen a thing wrong with him. He had had an opportunity to catch her but he didn't. He had proved himself to be a perfect gentleman. But surely her father must have known something about him to speak the way he had about him. She didn't know what it was yet, she swore she would find out before she finally dozed off to sleep.

In the morning they had breakfast together and she stood in the door waving her hand and wishing him much success, as Grace's father got into the taxi.

"Goodbye, dear," he yelled as the taxi moved away. "Goodbye and good luck, dad."

She hurried to her room, picked up the phone and dialed a number. Before she could adjust the pillows beneath her head a hideous voice that sent shivers through her body had said: "Hello."

"Hello, Jack. Just thought I'd call you, seeing you weren't interested enough to call me," she smiled.

"Hello, darling! What a treat to hear your sweet voice. I thought I would never have this opportunity again—after the way I acted."

"Now, how late's not go into that again. I thought that little incident had been settled," she said and sighed wearily.

"Of course it has if you say so, darling. By the way, what are you doing tonight?" "I'm going to Grace's party," she answered.

"What a perfect coincidence—I'm going myself. Who's trailing—the old man or the boy friend?" "Nick, I guess," she answered. "Dad is out of town."

"That's great, darling. Well, hope that ere and that we can have a glorious evening without being disturbed," he grinned huskily.

"Until then—," she chuckled and hung the receiver up.

To Helen, Grace's party was more like a lovers' reunion than anything else she knew. Her young and sophisticated guests were few and were accompanied by their sweethearts. Grace's boy friend couldn't come and she didn't invite a girl for Jack Burton. She had decided to play the roll of a good hostess and entertain Nick while Helen and Jack were there.

As soon as she and Nick entered the house Helen knew there was friction in the air. Jack had met them at the threshold and had demanded she dance with him first ignoring Nick completely.

Nick was furious, but managed to remain silent, although his face reflected the anger that dwelt within him. Grasping the situation, Grace came hurriedly to the rescue. She greeted them with an air of forced civility, put her out on the floor to dance with Grace around Nick and forced him to dance.

"Darling, you're gorgeous tonight," Jack whispered with extreme tenderness and affection.

Helen blushed as she looked up at him and said: "I think you're wonderful too, Jack," and she meant every word of it. His eyes seemed to stare clean through her. This style was strikingly manly and commanding and his words were so tender and endearing. In his arms she felt as though he were lover put her mind in a maze of wistful emotions.

"Perhaps you would pay a little attention to me and your dancing," Grace reminded Nick scornfully.

"Oh! be silent thoughtfully, taking his envious eyes off Jack and Helen for the first time. "I'm sorry. Of course, you understand, Grace," he smiled.

Grace chuckled softly. The crowd had gathered around Rosie and Henry who were mixing cocktails.

"I've something to tell you, Nick," Grace said, after they had drained the contents of their glasses. "Let's go outside. For a moment Nick eyed her critically, then followed slowly as she led the way. She drifted to the far end of the porch and leaned over the rail. As he came up she turned sharply around and faced him with serious eyes.

"Of course not," he chuckled. He drew his case and she took one, thumped it on the back of her hand and he held the match for her while she lighted it and her god and master. His very touch sent shivers through her body and wild impulses to her brain. She couldn't resist showing her fascination. Again, she was under his spell as she was the day they had picked flowers. The very sight of his handsome took a deep inhalation, blowing the smoke out leisurely.

THE GRASS ROOTS CONFERENCE

Scores of Negroes went to Springfield, Illinois, this week to attend the Republican "Grass Roots" Conference where more than 8,000 delegates from 16 states and as many visitors joined in not only criticizing the New Deal but outlining a constructive program for future action.

Hopeful signs evidenced by the Negro delegates which observers must not overlook were: every delegate who attended paid his own expenses, a definite desire was manifested to insist upon being counted on the ground.

The conference at Springfield started the campaign for 1936 in earnest. It not only criticized the new deal but indicated in no uncertain terms the platform upon which it proposes to make the fight.

Meeting at the home of Abraham Lincoln, the conference dedicated the Republican Party to the principles upon which it was founded and pledged itself to carry on along the same lines pursued by Lincoln. Among them was a redeclaration of the principle that all men are created free and equal, possess certain unalienable rights and are entitled to an equal economic and political opportunity.

This declaration while not mentioning Negroes by name, aimed directly at those even in the Republican party who have strayed away from the principle of justice to the Negro.

The Negro has a great opportunity to join in the movement growing out of this conference and help materially to advancing the cause of the country and the Negro.

OUR ANNIVERSARY EDITION

This week the Bystander is printing its forty-second anniversary edition. It is easy to see how it should be proud that an institution like this has held together in spite of all the changes during such a long period.

Few business institutions in these parts are forty years old; less even among colored people in Iowa or any other place. Any business which has carried on all these years must have merited the support of its constituents and rendered service. This the Bystander has done. Of course everybody has not been pleased. This is to be expected, but there is satisfaction in knowing that most people have seen fit to remain loyal.

Two features ought to interest every Negro in maintaining the Bystander: first, the press has much force and every group needs the services of a press, which it can control. Second, it offers employment to boys and girls in keeping with their training in school. Each of these features is very important and should not be overlooked by any citizen when called upon to shoulder his share of the responsibility.

We appreciate the support given us in the past and pledge continued service in behalf of our constituents and friends.

Greetings from

Dental Health Education Hints

EQUINE PYORRHEA

Not all of the pyorrhea is confined to humans and strangely enough that in animals is caused by some of the same factors as in man. Our part of cleaning with the toothbrush and periodically by the dentist should be taken care of by the proper rough foods that animals eat but such has not been the case in recent years.

Sir Frank Colger, one of London's horse powers, decided to check the percentage of pyorrhea in the horses in that English town. Remember that there are four horse drawn vehicles in London than there are in any of the American cities. Therefore he has a sufficient number of them to examine. His statistics show that twenty to thirty per cent of London's horses had pyorrhea in the face of a past history for wild animals of no existent pyorrhea. Only when the animals were domesticated and fed soft food has there been a presence of pyorrhea because there is no roughage in the finely chopped grain fed horses. The animals allowed to pasture in the fields have a smaller percentage of pyorrhea because the grass contains sand and grit that prevents their food from remaining in the mouth long enough to become infectious.

QUESTIONS AND COMMENTS

Dear Dr. Dean:
You write in your column in April about the possibility of one dying from the loss of blood. I have had a couple of operations and each time the loss of blood made the doctors do a lot of work on me afterwards. In fact I am afraid now to have my tonsils out and also my bad teeth. Could you write me the best course to follow so that I will not lose so much blood if I should have my teeth out?
Miss H. B.

Des Moines, Iowa.
Answer: I regret very much that I can not print the necessary prescription and directions in this newspaper but if you will send me an addressed envelope I will be glad to give you the desired information. Since you bleed continuously when cut you will be wise to always tell your physician and dentist of this whenever you are injured or to be operated upon.

MASTOIDITIS

Mastoiditis is an affection of the mastoid, an organ situated behind the lobe of the ear and consists of a bony portion within which there is a series of cavities. In health these cavities are normally dry and contain no secretion whatever. When, however, the middle ear becomes infected from the throat, there is a liability of the mastoid becoming infected through a cavity which joins the middle ear with the mastoid. Sore throats should be treated as soon as there is pain in swallowing to prevent this extension into the middle ear and further into the mastoid cavity. If this infection is stopped in the throat there will be no necessity to operate later on the mastoid process where the infection does sometimes travel. Such an extension is not always the rule. Occasionally infection is blood borne from a focus of infection elsewhere and lodges within the mastoid process producing a mastoiditis even when there has been no preexisting sore throat. Tonsils which are known to be chronically infected should be adequately treated or removed completely. Mastoids should by no means be allowed to poison the system and any acute mastoiditis ought to have adequate treatment or operation.
