

New Model City To Be Shown at New York Fair

NEW YORK (Special)—A magic carpet ride through space two miles above "Democracy," the perfectly integrated garden city of tomorrow, will feature the central theme exhibit of the New York World's Fair which opens April 30, 1939.

The exhibit, created by Henry Dreyfuss, industrial designer, will be dramatic in form. It will reach a stirring climax when, out of the distant skies above the floating audience, will trolleys marching legions of workers, symbolizing the interdependence of man in modern civilization.

Nearer and nearer they will tramp, until the whole arch of heaven is filled with towering figures, arms upraised, singing the song of tomorrow. As the final strains of this marching air die away, great streamers of colored light shoot forth from the zenith, drenching the sky from horizon to horizon in all the hues of the rainbow.

A Dramatic Show
This dramatic show will be housed in the eighteen-story Perisphere, companion structure to the 700-foot Trylon, which constitute the architectural focus of the fair.

An entirely new method of projection, utilizing slides instead of film, will be employed to throw the moving figures on the sky. New methods of fluorescent lighting will be used.

The garden city itself will be a model—one of the largest ever built and the first to portray a full-size metropolis catering to a million people and complete in every last detail. This city of tomorrow will serve 1,000,000 people, but no one will live in it. Homes will be in suburban developments. Factories also will be located in satellite towns, and broad green belt areas will circle both city and towns.

Model City Possible
City planners, engineers, architects, landscape architects, airport specialists and other experts collaborated on the design of "Democracy," and so accurate is the model that, according to Mr. Dreyfuss, it could be given concrete reality today were sufficient funds made available. Blueprint drawings have been made, not only of street layouts, harbors, airports, athletic fields and civic centers but of traffic and pedestrian over-passes, theatres, hospitals, shops, bridges, dams and apartments.

The entrance to the theme exhibit will be high up on the side of the Perisphere fifty feet above the ground. Access will be by means of the two longest moving stairways ever built in this country. Visitors will enter on two levels and step on to two magic carpets or revolving platforms placed one above the other and moving in opposite directions.

Slayers of King's Deer Suffered Chain Penalty

The Lorna Doone country of England's Devonshire, often called the fairest in the island kingdom, is set high on the green hills of Devon, which rise abruptly from the Bristol channel.

Visitors wonder why the roads are so narrow, and the hedges alongside so high. It is because in olden days the deer could eat the peasants' crops, but if the peasant should kill or ever harm the king's deer hanging in chains would be the punishment. Hence stone and hedge barriers were erected around each field to keep out the deer, relates a correspondent in the Los Angeles Times.

All that remain as reminders of the Doones in the pleasant valley are a few moss-covered mounds, ruins of the foundations of the village of eleven stone cottages.

Nearby is Oare, a small hamlet of thatched cottages clustered around an old stone church. It was in this place of worship that Lorna Doone was shot by Carver Doone at the climax of her marriage to John Ridd.

From their valley fortress the Doones made raids on unwary travelers crossing wild and lovely Exmoor forest. This gorse and heath-covered expanse of rolling hills and valleys was until a few years ago the scene of many a holdup. Gibbet hill is pointed out as the place where the Doones were executed, bringing about the peaceful reign.

Rayon Made From Various Solutions of Cellulose

No one person deserves the entire credit for inventing rayon, which is the recognized trade name in the United States for all synthetic fibers formerly known as artificial or imitation silk, regardless of the process of manufacture, asserts a writer in the Indianapolis News. The lustrous filaments of the fiber are made from various solutions of modified cellulose, such as wood pulp in a proper solvent, which is pressed or drawn through orifices and solidified by means of a pre-

London Bridge Situated At Head of Navigation

London bridge is the first or farthest down of the bridges across the Thames at London. It is situated at the head of navigation, about a half mile above the Tower of London.

But the present London bridge is not the one celebrated in the nursery song, nor in the proverb to the effect that "London bridge was made for wise men to pass over and fools to pass under." That famous old bridge, which stood for more than 600 years, was finally demolished more than a century ago, observes a writer in the Cleveland Plain Dealer.

The site has probably been the location of a bridge from very early times in London's history. But the earliest bridge in this location is not mentioned until the Eleventh century. It was a wooden structure which was destroyed by a storm and high tide November 16, 1091.

The first stone bridge, the famous bridge spoken of above, was built between 1176 and 1209 on a wooden foundation. It consisted of 20 arches. The roadway was 926 feet long, 60 feet above the water and 40 feet wide. Houses were built upon the bridge, and in the course of time it became a continuous street with three openings on each side of the river.

The buildings on the bridge were repeatedly devastated by fire, most notably in the great fire of 1666. The eleventh span from the South-west end formed a drawbridge flanked by a tower built in 1425, and on top of which were stuck the heads of persons executed for treason. All the super-structures were removed in 1757. In 1832 the old bridge itself was torn down, the new and present London bridge having been opened the year before.

Strychnine Is Obtained From Poison-Nut Seeds

Strychnine is one of the oldest poisons known to man, and is none other than the Kuruchilla of the ancient Hindus, according to a writer in London Tit-Bits Magazine. In Europe it was described as having no medicinal value as late as A. D. 1640, but in India it was used centuries before in the treatment of dysentery, fevers and dyspepsia.

The drug is obtained from the seeds of the Strychnos Nux Vomica, or poison-nut tree, which grows in the East Indies. They are broad, flat, about an inch in diameter, covered with tiny, downy hairs, and very bitter when tasted. The seeds are also commonly known in various parts as "dog buttons," "Quaker buttons" and "rat's bane," and are contained in a fruit which closely resembles an orange in shape and color.

Strychnine is a cruelly violent poison, causing agonizing convulsions.

Word 'Raisin' From Latin

The word "raisin" is of ancient origin, derived from the Latin word for "cluster of grapes," "racemus." The name was at one time restricted to the small yellow grape grown in limestone soil near Smyrna, in Asia. The average time of drying and curing a tray of raisins is about three weeks, all depending on the weather. The earliest picked grapes dry in 10 days and the later ones take four weeks or more. The bunches are cut from the vines and placed on shallow trays, two feet wide, three feet long, and one inch high, on which the grapes are allowed to sun-dry, being turned from time to time by simply placing an empty tray top side down on the full one, then turning both over and taking off the top tray. After the raisins are dried they are stored away in the sweat boxes until they are packed and prepared for shipment.

Eighteenth Century Ice Cream

The famous Josiah Wedgwood, English ceramic maker of the Eighteenth century, listed "ice cream cups" again and again on his price cards, showing that even in that day this dessert was known. In fact, a recipe for making it was dated 1669. Fruits, sugar, and cream combined were placed in an earthen pot, packed with ice and "much salt," and frozen, much as we freeze ice-cream. Washington, Jefferson, and Madison are known to have served it at social functions in this country by the end of the Eighteenth century.

The Battle of the Skagerrak

The Battle of Jutland was called the Battle of the Skagerrak by the Germans. It was fought in the North sea between the British Grand fleet, under Admiral Sir J. R. Jellicoe, and the German High Seas fleet, under Admiral Reinhard Scheer, on May 31, 1916. The encounter is memorable as being the only occasion throughout the World war on which the rival battle fleets met, also for the fact that it left the British fleet undisputed master of the German one up to the day of the latter's surrender.

Chief Justice Marshall 'Made Constitution Live'

Born in Germantown (now Midland), Fauquier county, Va., on September 24, 1755, John Marshall was the eldest son of Col. Thomas Marshall, a distinguished officer in the French war and the War of Independence, and of Mary Keith, a member of the Randolph family.

Because school facilities were meager in Fauquier county in those days, relates Leslie Hartley in the Washington Star, John was educated largely by his father. He had no college training except a few lectures on law and natural philosophy at William and Mary in 1779. He abandoned the study of law at 18 to enter the Revolutionary army. As a member of his father's regiment, he took part in the battle of Great Bridge, in which he displayed great courage.

In 1781, after leaving the army, Marshall began the practice of law in his native county. The next year he was elected to the Virginia assembly, serving as legislator during eight sessions. Later he moved to Richmond and, from 1788 to 1791, was that city's representative in the assembly. He was also a member of the federal convention which met in 1788 to discuss ratification of the Constitution of the United States. This issue was hotly debated, and it was largely through his convincing arguments that ratification was carried.

He refused the attorney generalship and the ministry to France, but, in 1789, accepted appointment as special envoy to France, serving with Charles Cotesworth Pinckney and Elbridge Gerry. After serving in congress and as secretary of state, he was named chief justice, a post he held until his death in Philadelphia.

As chief justice he rendered numerous decisions of prime importance to the nation. At a period when the powers of congress were poorly defined, when the processes of constitutional government were still in the experimental stage, he is credited with having "made the Constitution live."

French Horn Is a Tube Twelve Feet in Length

The french horn comes to us via the old hunting horn. Experiments in its use began in the Eighteenth century. The horn in F is a tube, 12 feet long, coiled around itself. The usual construction is one in which the body of the horn terminates in a conical ferrule 90 inches from the rim to the bell. Into this ferrule crooks or bent tubes fit. The horn is a transposing instrument, the various crooks giving sounds lower than the notation.

Real improvement began with the introduction of valves, whereby the length was instantaneously altered, notes a writer in the Chicago Daily News. Three valves place a full chromatic scale at the service of composers. There are two methods of "stopping": one by inserting the open hand, with fingers close together into the bell, and the other by using a mute, usually of metal, pear shaped and pierced for free passage of air.

The first composer to use valve horns was Halvey. Up to the time of Mozart two players were considered sufficient. It is not uncommon for composers to write compositions calling for six or eight horns.

Bible Does Not Mention Names of the 'Wise Men'

The names of the "wise men from the East" who followed the star of the new-born Jesus to Jerusalem and Bethlehem are not given in the Bible. Neither does the Bible mention the number of wise men, nor their nationality. Early churchmen fixed the number at three, probably because the Biblical account mentions three gifts—gold, frankincense and myrrh, writes Flora MacFarland in the Cleveland Plain Dealer. A tradition as old as the Second century (resting on Psalms LXXII: 10, and Isaiah XLIX: 7) refers to the three wise men as kings, and at a later period the names Melchior, Gaspar and Balthasar became attached to them. Melchior means "king of light," Gaspar, "the white one," and Balthasar, "the lord of treasures." The first king offered gold, the emblem of royalty; the second, frankincense, in token of divinity; and the third, myrrh, in prophetic allusion to the persecutions which awaited the Child.

Many Bible scholars suppose the three wise men to have been Magi, members of a priestly order of ancient Media and Persia. Medieval legend calls them the Three Kings of Cologne, and the cathedral there claims their relics. They are commemorated on January 2, 3 and 4, and particularly at the Feast of the Epiphany.

Washington's Prayer in Pew in New York Chapel

Future Train, Ship for New York Fair

NEW YORK—Here is the smoothly stream-lined train of the future (on top) and the fully enclosed, storm-proof, air conditioned liner of the World of Tomorrow as Raymond Loewy, industrial designer, conceived them for a large, free focal exhibit on Transportation at the New York World's Fair 1939. The display will include every stage in civilization's transport progress as well as every vehicle used since the day of the cave man.

States' Buildings at New York Fair

NEW YORK—This sketch was made from final plans for the Court of the State Buildings at the New York World's Fair 1939. Here the various states of the union, most of which have taken space for their displays, will exhibit their natural advantages and industrial accomplishments. The English section is shown above. There will also be French and Spanish areas.

using bright-colored feathers, bone ornaments, shells and beads. The main part of the wedding is a simple action—the groom goes to the bride's home, takes her by the hand and leads her to the new home he has made ready.

Meaning of Name Antonia

Antonia is the feminine form of the Latin name Antony or Anthony and has the same meaning—"praiseworthy, or beyond praise." It is attractive and dignified, but not common, notes Florence A. Cowles in the Cleveland Plain Dealer. Antonette is a French diminutive of Antonia and so might be interpreted as "little praiseworthy one." Marie Antoinette of Austria (1755-93), queen of France, was too gay as a girl, untrained for her job and too headstrong later, but she met death by the guillotine bravely.

Socrates and the Hereafter

Plato ascribes to Socrates a very definite view as to future retribution. "In truth," said Socrates, "if I did not expect to find in another life gods at once good and wise, and men better than those of this life, it would be foolish of me not to be disturbed by the approach of death. But I know that I look to finding myself among just men. I do not fear to die because I am confident something still remains after this life, and that...

Nicaragua, Honduras Seizure

William Walker, in 1853, attempted unsuccessfully to found a new republic in northern Mexico. He next planned an expedition against Nicaragua, and in 1855 took the capital, Granada. Elected president and his government recognized by the United States, he next restored slavery. Meanwhile his enemies were closing in on him and in 1857 he surrendered for protection to a United States sloop of war. Later he made an unsuccessful attempt to recapture Nicaragua. In 1858 he attempted an expedition against Honduras, but was thwarted by shipwreck. In 1860, on a second expedition he captured Truxillo, but was soon compelled to flee. Subsequently he surrendered and was turned over to the Honduras government. Condemned by court-martial, he was shot at Truxillo on September 12, 1860.

The Early Americans

From data accumulated, archeologists are of the opinion that, long ages ago, the Americas were at least partly populated by a race of Caucasian stock that came from Polynesia and other parts of southeastern Asia and found its way to the western coast of South America by way of the Caroline islands and Easter island. The sun circles and dolmens built by these white men in Peru closely resemble prehistoric examples in central Asia, Europe and England. The hair of the oldest mummies left by their descendants is yellow and red and very fine—much different from that of the Aztecs and other early inhabitants. It is also known that they used iron tools and were highly skilled in masonry, using building methods and architectural design found in Asia and Europe.

Use for Ancient Calendars

In the old days almanacs served a purpose, but even those who consulted them most zealously didn't rely altogether on the printed word in preparing daily schedules. The skies, the birds, even the animals bore portents. If the chickens roosted unusually early, that was a sure sign of rain before morning. If fireflies clung close to the ground rain was in the offing, and it was an omen if an owl hooted in the daytime.

Sargasso Sea Named for Herb Growing in Wells

Fear of the Sargasso sea and similar phenomena dates back more than 2,000 years. Aristotle wrote of their perils. Before his time Phoenician mariners carried home with them stories of how immense fields of sea plants had endangered their ships. In the Fifteenth century a merchant of Cadiz sent a galleon a hundred leagues westward, east winds swept the galleon into the area of weeds and calms, and freedom was gained only after many difficulties.

Christopher Columbus had heard of the sea before he set out from Palos, relates Frederic Babcock in the Chicago Tribune. He plunged into it on his way to San Salvador in September, 1492. He named it "The Sea Weed Meadows." As he sailed slowly on the weeds grew thicker and thicker until they spread out on all sides like a great flooded plain. He took soundings, but could not find bottom. "His compass needle went wrong, pointing to the northwest instead of to the Pole emerged into a clear space, where the water was like a mirror. It was so still, in fact, that it was stagnant. So the becalmed Columbus was as badly off as when he had been in the weeds.

Mutiny grew among the crews. It might have prevented the discovery of America had not a breeze come out of the southwest. The explorers escaped after having had their plans—and ships—tangled up for nearly two weeks.

Where did the sea get its name? The Portuguese with Columbus saw in the weed a resemblance to the herb sargasso, which grew in the wells in their homeland.

Comets Are Cold Except When They Are Near Sun

In size comets range from ones barely large enough to be seen with a telescope (without doubt there are still smaller ones) to giants a million miles in diameter, with tails 100 million miles long. These big ones are by no means as formidable as the above dimensions would indicate. For one thing, they are quite cold except when they are near the sun; the light they give off is not their own, but is produced by the sunlight that strikes them. The farther they are from the sun the dimmer they become, according to Dr. Thomas M. Beck in the Chicago Tribune.

For all of their tremendous bulk, they have astonishingly little matter to them. Occasionally individual comets have passed very close to one of the outer planets such as Jupiter. At such times the planet's gravitation deflects the comet completely out of its course, but the most accurate observations have failed to reveal that the comet has the slightest effect on the planet.

The conclusion is that even the giant comets have less, and probably very much less, than a millionth of the earth's mass. There is far less matter per cubic inch in a comet than there is in the most perfect vacuum yet produced by man, and still less in the comet's tail.

Crusader's Castles Dot Early Syrian Districts

Wonderful monuments of bygone civilizations with their amazing diversity of architectural styles are gifts of Beirut to the world.

Extending from Beirut as ancient and modern gateway to Asia and seaport city for Syria and Lebanon are countless exhibits of human migrations and ambitions of early centuries, notes a correspondent in the Los Angeles Times.

Beside the waves yawn the burial chambers of Phoenician necropolis; further inland astride the first spurs of the mountains from the walls of Crusaders' castles, with the splendor that was Rome to be found on the desert plains of Palmyra.

The tiny corner of the world is the birthplace of three great religions. From Beirut, which dominates the maritime horizon and displays the tops of the Lebanon mountains, are the famous grove of cedars, from which Solomon built his temple in Jerusalem, with the 50 giant trees preserved as a shrine commemorating this biblical occasion.

At Tripoli is the famous castle erected by the counts of Toulouse, maritime masters of Tripoli at the time of the Crusades. Beyond the century-old orchards is the famous white spot known to the ancient as El Mina, the port.

The Castle of Massaf is known as the largest castle built by the crusaders and covers an area of 60 acres. Near the famous castle are the small castles, abodes of the Latin knights. Following the route founded by the first Macedonian kings entry is made to the ancient city of Latakia, famed for its early Gothic architecture as built by the architects who came from Chartres.

Antiochia, one of the three greatest cities of the Roman world, has its relics of pagan days by its Byzantine architecture exhibited in mosques with the high-pointed minarets suggestive of Turkey.

Indian Ate Wells' Heart To Share in His Bravery

The heroic band of settlers and soldiers who perished by tomahawk and scalping knife during the Fort Dearborn massacre in 1812 consisted of 91 men, women and children who left Fort Dearborn on a trek to Fort Wayne, Ind., on orders from the war department. They were beset by Potawatomi Indians concealed in the sand dunes. Only 36 survived the slaughter.

In the Fort Dearborn foyer of the Chicago Historical society's special tribute is paid to Capt. Nathan Heald and his wife, Rebecca, whose spirited resistance, even when death seemed inevitable, evoked the admiration of the savages. Heald's red sword sash and sword are on exhibit, as are his wife's rawhide trunk and the tortoise-shell comb she wore in her hair. These articles were seized by an Indian squaw during the fighting, later to be reclaimed by friends.

Capt. William Wells led the garrison as it marched to destruction. Wells was so admired as a man that the Indian who killed him paid him the great honor of cutting out his heart and eating it in the belief that he would share his courage.

EDITORIAL POLICY
 It shall be the editorial policy of the Iowa Bystander to voice the convictions of the Negro. Praise and criticism will be constructive in its nature, with a definite regard for the progress of all. We are under obligations to no race or organization, but we are free to print what we honestly believe, and we propose to do so with independence and fearlessness in defense of the principles of right as we see them.

LOOK HOUSING TO CONTINUE

Dr. Robert C. Weaver, special assistant to Nathan Straus, chairman of the National Housing Authority, has announced that Negroes have benefited nationally in the $800,000,000 program under that department. In some states this is true, for numerous social housing projects have been erected in several cities and no doubt Negroes have been able to finance homes through the FHA.

Unfortunately, Mr. Weaver has not been in Des Moines; neither has this sincerity toward the Negro, about which he speaks. Here in Des Moines the officials have drawn an imaginary line around every section, where Negroes live and put thumbs down on loans in their sections. And not only do they refuse to make loans, but also to a white person living in or near a so-called Negro neighborhood.

This policy does three things: First, it prevents Negroes from taking advantage of low cost loans to finance their properties; second, it refuses to serve the economic group—white and black—for which the project was primarily intended; third, it forces whites who may have no objections to living near a Negro pull away from him in order to take advantage of a government loan—in fact it breeds segregation.

As far as Iowa is concerned, Negroes have profited by none of the benefits the New Deal has offered except relief and the Home Owners Loan Corporation. The former has been in the lowest bracket of what it has had to offer, Housing facilities in Des Moines are poor and even though the FHA proposes to aid people secure better homes and modernize their old ones, every effort has been made by the department here to keep them from any of these benefits.

THE CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION NOT IMPARTIAL

Upon petition of a number of citizens, the Des Moines city council asked the Civil Service Commission to investigate the "third degree" charge placed against three policemen and determine whether the fine of $75 each enforced by the public safety department was adequate.

The hearing was held last week and was attended by a large group of citizens—black and white.

And, frankly, it was the biggest farce ever conducted by a so-called disinterested commission. The Bystander had been led to believe that this was an impartial body set up to administer the law and make decisions on the basis of the facts presented at the hearings; that its members had no authority to interview witnesses in advance and on opinions on the basis of those interviews. And yet this is just what was done by some members of the commission—a rather dangerous practice to follow.

While the Coyle case is a closed book as far as the commission is concerned, they have made many people suspicious of their closed door sessions.

Rev. John William Johnson was born in Fulton, Missouri, October 18, 1885, and died September 25, 1938, at Broadlawn hospital. He had been a resident of this city for eighteen years. He was married to Lillian May Vinecot of Fulton, Missouri, June 19, 1905, and to this union nine children were born. He was a member of the Calvary Baptist church of Fulton, Missouri, and on coming to Des Moines he was united with the Maple Street church, where he was a deacon and active in the work. Some time later he became a member of the Union Baptist church, where he was an active deacon until August 10, 1935, when he entered the ministry and became pastor of Mt. Hebron church of Zookspur. Surviving him are five sons, Elder Earl Johnson, evangelist; Wilson, Charles, John and Her-chairman of the executive committee, also addressed the group and urged each team to reach their quota as early in the week as possible to insure the success of the drive.

The goal of the citywide campaign has been set at $40,000, of which the Crocker Street branch's quota is $700. The first report dinner was held Monday noon with the team under the captaincy of F. O. Morrow reporting $152.50 in pledges. The total reported up to Wednesday noon was $378.25.

More than twenty workers are soliciting pledges and memberships in the drive and are combing the city in an effort to "go over the top" by Friday noon. Members of the team are A. P. Trotter, W. C. Buice, Otis James, G. B. Tucker, T. L. Howard, Rev. G. W. Robinson, John M. Estes, W. L. Oliver, Alford R. Ashby, Bert A. Harris, Fred N. Morrow, Jr., George Robinson, Jr., Leland W. Fritz Pollard and Horace Johnson "say it with touchdowns" for North Dakota U. Henry Washington, one of the game's longest passers, and Woodrow Strode are yet a large part of the team at U. C. L. A. In the east, All American Broad Holland of Cornell is as tough as ever, and Ed Williams of N. Y. U. rates as one of the nation's leading backs. Williams added a damaging blow to the idea that "southern schools won't play against Negroes" by going the route against North Carolina U. and being the best back in the field. Having been definitely established as a Negro, Wilmeth Sidat Single of Syracuse stamps himself as a grade A passer and now Duke university, also of North Carolina, says: "Sure they'll let him play when they meet

COLLEGE

Among our own schools it looks as if Morgan will go on forever. Xavier, after dropping the opener to Bishop, has developed a powerful machine and rates with Florida A. & M., Lincoln of Jefferson City, West Virginia State and Kentucky State as one of the leading Negro college teams. Arkansas State, southwestern champs of last year, are having plenty as the boys take revenge for previous beatings from the Lions.

HIGH SCHOOL

Here at home, Ike Miller of North and Fred Williams of East set themselves as the leading Negro grid-ders, but "Big" Jim Thompson, who plays all over Roosevelt's line and then "picks the apple a little," is getting to be some footballer and may take his place at the top of the heap yet. Cliff Lovelady of Valley is still the best passer for our money. Among the reserves we have seen Wally Hill and Charles Howard, Jr., of North stand out, while at East a whole host of boys have filled in well as substitutes. The list includes Harry Saunders, Frank Kaiser, Orville Bell, Lucas, Davis and one or two others whose names we do not have just yet.

SEMI - PRO

We had a bad taste in our mouth last week-end. The Chicago Brown Bombers evidently just picked up some easy change. Those of us who recalled their game against the Comets last year were led to believe that the Chicago boys had a better team than last year. But they just apparently got together for this game and the Comets, with Bob Vandevere setting the pace, romped over them, 28-0.

Another example of local buildup was the Red Bruce vs. John Paycheck fight recently held here. Those of us who didn't know were made to believe that Bruce was a great fighter. A year ago he was number seven on the light heavy list, but the boy is just a "washed up has-been," as we all discovered.
