TENNESSEAN HAS SERVED WITH BOY SCOUTS SINCE OCTOBER 1927

New York—Among the 102 Negroes employed as full time professional leaders in the Boy Scouts of America, J. A. Beauchamp, assistant Scout executive at Memphis, Tenn., has the longest record of service. Mr. Beauchamp, a native of Opelousas, La., entered the professional service of the organization in October 1927 as Assistant to the National Director of Interracial Activities. He held this post five and a half years and then joined the Chickasaw Council at Memphis in March, 1934. This Council stands sixth in the nation in active members enrolled, having 2,304 Negro boys and leaders in its units.

15TH ANNUAL NATIONAL BRIDGE TOURNAMENT AUG. 15

Brooklyn (NNPA)—The fifteenth annual national tournament of the American Bridge Association will open in Atlantic City on August 15 with the largest attendance in the history of the organization, William R. Tate, editor of the "ABA Bulletin" announced last Monday. With the Seashore Bridge Club of Atlantic City playing host, contract bridge fans from as far west as California will join in the eight day competition which will extend through August 22. Of further interest will be the election for the first time since 1936 of a new national president of the organization to replace E. T. Bolshaw of Mobile, Alabama, who is retiring from office.

Hold Funeral Rites For Mrs. E. Brooks

Funeral services for Mrs. Emma P. Brooks, 83, of 1440 Fremont st., will be held Wednesday at Kyles A.M.E. church.

Dr. Lee B. Furgerson, Waterloo Physician and Surgeon 21 Years, Dies

Dr. Furgerson.

Waterloo, Ia.—Funeral services were held Thursday at 10 a.m. in St. Mary's Catholic church for Dr. Lee B. Furgerson, 49, of 600 Cottage street, who died in St. Francis hospital at 6:35 p.m. Monday, August 9, following surgery for an intestinal obstruction.

A practicing physician and surgeon here for the past 21 years, he had offices at 513 Lafayette street.

He had been a patient at St. Francis hospital since July 22, following a cerebral hemorrhage.

He had been taken to his home Thursday, but was forced to return to the hospital Sunday morning.

He was a member of American Medical society, Black Hawk County Medical society, Cedar Valley Lodge B. P. O. Elks, Six-Four Republican club, Kappa Alpha Psi social fraternity at Iowa City, Becker-Chapman post, American Legion and an active member of the State University of Iowa Alumni association. He was also a member of National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

He was currently president of Black Hawk Savings & Loan association. His church was St. Peter Claver Catholic.

On July 16, he had received a young medical graduate, Dr. J. H. Woolfolk, into his office to aid him in practice. Dr. Woolfolk was a resident doctor at Wendell Phillips hospital in St. Louis, Mo.

Lee Burton Furgerson was born Nov. 23, 1898, in Nabsota, Tex., son of Stephenson and Martha Ann Furgerson. He grew to manhood in Texas, and came to the State University of Iowa, where he received a medical degree in June, 1925.

He was employed by the Rock Island railroad until 1927, when he opened a practice in Waterloo above 220 East Fourth street.

Married in 1925

On Feb. 14, 1925, he married Lillie N. Williams at Rock Island, Ill.

Surviving are his wife, one son, Lee Burton, Jr.; four daughters, Mrs. Warren Nash, Betty Jean, Evelyn Lileah and Rebecca Sue, all at home; one brother, Atlas, St. Paul, Minn.; and two sisters, Mrs. Mattie Gillyard, St. Paul, and Mrs. Sarah Manor, Austin, Tex. One brother, Steve, preceded him in death.

Rev. Fr. Wendelin Kleine, O. F. M., pastor of St. Peter Claver Catholic church, said the funeral mass. Burial was in Calvary cemetery. The body was at Kistner funeral home. Parishoners and friends of St. Mary's Catholic church met at Kistner's at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday to recite the rosary.

JOE LOUIS SERVED SECOND TIME WITH $500,000 ALIENATION OF AFFECTIONS LAW SUIT

Chicago (NNPA)—Joe Louis, heavyweight champion, was served with notice of a $500,000 Superior Court alienation of affections suit for the second time last Friday at the Tam O'Shanter Country Club, where Joe was playing in the All-American Golf tournament.

Attorney Sol R. Friedman, representing the plaintiff, Rev. Matthew C. Faulkner, 32 Atlanta, Georgia, said they were giving Joe the benefit of the doubt. "Served notice of the case in April at his wife's home, 4320 South Michigan avenue, Louis refused to accept it as legal and said service was improperly made. His reason was that he actually lives in New York City, not in Chicago, and that his wife could not accept it for him."

It is now up to Louis to file answer in the case, which may go to trial in the fall, Friedman said. The suit charges that Louis caused the split-up between the Rev. Faulkner, a Baptist minister, and his beautiful wife, Mattie Carrier, 26, a New York Model.

Increasingly it is becoming evident that Africans are among the foremost and important factors in the operation of railroads on the continent. The above pictures show natives of Gold Coast, British West Africa, busily engaged in the operation and maintenance of the "iron horse."

NAACP to Map Plans For Continued Defense of Mrs. Ingram and Teen-Age Sons

New York.—Plans for the continued defense of Mrs. Rosa Lee Ingram and her two teen-age sons will be developed at a conference of lawyers called by Thurgood Marshall, special counsel for the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People which has charge of the case.

The decision to call the conference followed denial last week by the Georgia State Supreme Court of a petition for a rehearing of an appeal from a ruling of the trial court denying a motion for a new trial. The lawyers will explore federal grounds on which an appeal to the United States Supreme Court may be based.

Convicted Last Winter Mrs. Ingram and her sons were convicted last winter of the self-defensive slaying of a white farmer near Ellaville in southwest Georgia. They were sentenced to death—a sentence which was commuted to life imprisonment after the NAACP sought a new trial for the three. The case was taken to the State Supreme Court which affirmed the decision of the lower court.

Meanwhile the Ingram Defense Fund passed the $40,000 mark as NAACP branches, churches, other organizations and individuals continued to send in contributions. Receipts last week amounted to $666.05 bringing the total to $40,965.76. Contributors included the Golden Gate Mutual Life Insurance Co. of Los Angeles, $50; Standard Industrial Life Insurance Co. of New Orleans, $35; Gertrude Geddes Willis Life and Burial Insurance Co. of New Orleans, $25; and the Committee for Civil Rights, Brooklyn, $15.

SELECTIVE SERVICE DIRECTOR HERSEY SAYS NO CALLS BASED ON RACE OR COLOR OF INDUCTEES

New York (NNPA)—General Lewis B. Hersey, director of the Selective Service System, reiterated here last Wednesday that no calls, based on race or color, will be issued for induction of men into the armed services. As a result of abandoning the requisitioning of men on the basis of race, General Hersey said, he does not expect the strength of colored personnel in the armed services to rise above the fixed 10 per cent quota.

General Hersey had previously disclosed in Washington that Army Secretary Kenneth C. Royall had decided that under the 1948 Selective Service and Training Act the Army would not requisition men from Selective Service on the basis of color.

He told reporters here that colored men will be called "across the board" because the draft law calls for "just men, that's all." Asked whether he felt that non-racial calls would raise the strength of the Army above the 10 per cent ceiling fixed by the Gillen Board report on the utilization of colored personnel, he replied that unemployment among colored people might make more of them subject to induction but the higher rate of rejection among colored selectees would keep the ratio down.

He emphasized, however, that there will be no racial requisitions and said "What we will get will be what we get."

Army Secretary Royall Says He's Willing to Experiment With Racially Mixed Unit

Washington, D. C., (NNPA)—Army Secretary Kenneth C. Royall apparently has undergone a change of attitude on the question of the elimination of racial segregation from the Army and will experiment with a racially mixed unit.

Dr. Charles S. Johnson of Fisk University, conferred with Mr. Royall in his offices in the Pentagon Building last Thursday and afterwards said the Army Secretary told him that the world situation now is such that he can experiment with a mixed unit.

Mr. Royall has been repeatedly quoted as telling the Senate and House Armed Services Committees during hearings on the selective service act that he did not believe integration would work in the Army. According to Dr. Johnson, during his conference with the Army Secretary, Mr. Royall told him that he believed that for the most efficient use of manpower and for morale reasons in the Army segregation was not sound, was not right and would have to go.

"Dr. Johnson said the chief question with Mr. Royall is one of 'practicality'—just how it should go." He said that was the thing Mr. Royall was thinking about. "One point of beginning," Dr. Johnson said Mr. Royall thinks, is mixed units and he is ready to experiment with such a unit. Dr. Johnson stated that Mr. Royall had thought about setting up such a unit earlier, but a situation came up, particularly the Berlin crisis, which made it seem unfeasible at that time because the situation was one of general high tension. With that situation giving evidence of relaxing, Dr. Johnson said, Mr. Royall told him he can turn back to it.

Bird Sleuths Renew Quest For Strange Alaskan Bird

Bird detectives are getting set for another try at solving the mystery that has been leading luckless scientists such a long chase is the Bristle-thighed Curlew, the only North American bird whose nesting place and fledging young have never yet been found or described.

The latest expedition to go sleuthing for the haunts of the elusive bird in Alaska is sponsored by the National Geographic society in conjunction with Cornell university and the Arctic Institute of North America.

This member of the curlew family is a long-range commuter. Its habitat most of the year is the South Sea Islands in latitudes as far south as southern Peru and northern Chile. Yet toward the end of each spring it wings thousands of miles northward to the remote fastnesses of rugged Alaska to nest and raise its brood.

Only when the young are full grown—usually sometime in August—does the family depart from its sub-Arctic hideout to return to semi-tropical isles above and below the equator.

The Bristle-thighed Curlew is so called because of the lengthened shafts of some of its flank feathers which project from its sides like bristles or stiff hairs. The adult bird is between 16 and 18 inches long, with variegated brown plumage. It has a very short whistling call, and it feeds mostly on mollusks, crustaceans and other shore-flats life.

her trip to the Leadership Training Institute, at Crystal Spring, Mich. Mrs. E. P. Williams and Mrs. Nanna Herndon were guests at the Woman's Day services in Ottumwa, Iowa, Sunday where Mrs. Williams was the speaker.

The Evangelistic Revival campaign now in progress at Bethel church will close Friday night with a request song and candle-lit service conducted by Evangelist Churchill. Men's Day will be observed at Bethel church Sunday, Aug. 15th. Mr. Lynn White is chairman of the program.

Give Formal Dinner
 Mr. and Mrs. Bonnie Herndon entertained with a formal dinner party this week. After dinner the guests enjoyed a picnic at the Drive-in theatre. Guests included Rev. and Mrs. E. P. Williams and Evangelist Sallie Churchill.

Elks Grand Lodge Session In Cincinnati to Hear All Presidential Candidates

Washington, D. C. (NNPA)—All civil rights program, Governor Thomas E. Dewey for his administration of New York State, and Henry A. Wallace for his fight against segregation and discrimination, Mr. Wilson told Elks he had not hesitated to invite them to come to Cincinnati and "help us celebrate the Golden Jubilee" of the order.

Grass An Effective Tool For Reducing Wind Erosion

One of the greatest uses for grass is in erosion control. R. G. Hill, extension soil conservationist at Michigan State college, points out that when land is abandoned, nature generally soon covers it with a protective green covering.

Grass, including legumes, is an effective tool for reducing wind and water erosion. Crops such as rye or rye grass and sweet clover may be used as a cover crop in cultivated fields. They will aid in reducing erosion, may be plowed under as a green manure crop, or possibly as early spring pasture. Cover crop as an erosion control measure in orchards are effectively used by a majority of growers.

Grass mixtures are also being used effectively in establishing sod waterways. Such waterways, undisturbed by cultivation, slow down the speed of water and give added protection to the waterway with roots and top growth. This method of "walking" water off the land will save many fields from severe gullying. After water is controlled on a watershed, old gullies may be worked up, leveled, fertilized and reseeded.

Land too steep for cultivated crops without severe soil losses may bring a return to the operator by properly growing and harvesting a good legume. Strip cropping rotation, whether for wind or water erosion control, usually include a year or more of a high quality grass or legume.

Flickering Lights

Farm electric wiring may meet underwriters' requirements and pass all code inspections yet still be inadequate. A sure sign of loss in a circuit, according to A. V. Krewatch, extension agricultural engineer at the University of Maryland, is a flickering of lights when the milking machine starts, when the pump operates, or when the dairy refrigerator is on.

The answer may be more circuits with separate lines to pump, compressor or milking machine, or installation of heavier wire in present circuits. Installing separate circuits and possibly the rearrangement of the yard wiring is the better choice.

According to Krewatch, there is a real fire hazard in metallic-sheathed cable which has rusted and has become encrusted with whitewash. This is especially so if connections are loose. Binding post connections in switch or fuse boxes may get loose from building vibrations or may corrode because of too much moisture causing high resistance spots.

Town Hall Meeting

In order to give the Presidential nominees of the Republican, Democratic and Progressive parties or their representatives an opportunity to appear and address delegates to the Grand Lodge session, a "Town Hall" meeting has been added to the program.

The "Town Hall" meeting will be held at 8 p. m., August 24, at the Music Hall Auditorium. The grand parade will precede it in the afternoon and the military ball will follow it that night.

Delegates from Islands
 Delegates to the convention, Mr. Wilson said, will come from Central and South America, Panama, England, the Bahamas and Hawaii as well as from lodges in continental United States. He said Frisco Bingham will head a delegation from London, Dr. Edwards and Lionel Duncan will head the delegation from Panama, and Colonel John DeVeaux and W. F. Weir will lead the delegation from the Bahamas.

The Grand Lodge program will open at 3 p. m., August 21, with an educational meeting at Stowe School Auditorium. Mixing pleasure with more serious matters, the Elks' ballroom and cabaret opening is scheduled for 9 p. m., that evening in the Music Hall.

Double-Cropping
 String beans, limas, tomatoes, beets and carrots are some of the vegetables that can be used to double-crop the garden spaces where early crops such as radishes, lettuce, peas and sprouting grains have been harvested. The yield from gardens in the weeks before frost plus the vegetables that can be stored or canned, can substitute mightily for scarcer foods in satisfying, healthful and nourishing meals for the family. Gardeners save money and conserve other foods by double-cropping with succession plantings.

Little Known Golf Rules
 If a golfer is unlucky enough to slam his ball into a tree and have it strike him on the rebound, he can count on a penalty as well as a bruise. In match play, he loses the hole and in medal play, he is charged with two additional strokes. If he should find his ball in a hazard surrounded by sticks, twigs or other loose impediments, he may not remove anything without incurring the same penalty.

Maple Street Baptist Church Activities
 Rev. George Parish was in his pulpit Sunday. Rev. Gater preached. Men's chorus is sponsoring a program Sunday afternoon, August 15, 3 p. m. at the church. The Mission circle met Friday afternoon in the home of Mrs. Mae Wyatt, 1323 Crocker street. Sick and shut-ins are: Messdames G. Thomas, Fannie Davis, Della Wilhite, Alice Crutcher and Mr. Wm. Warfield.

Agriculture Dept. Warns Of Careless Use of 2,4-D

Friendships, neighborliness, and security from damage suits, all may be blasted by careless use of 2,4-D just as definitely as dandelion and plantain in lawns or mustard weeds in wheat fields can be killed by careful use. This warning from the U. S. department of agriculture applies both in towns and cities and on farms. It is based on experience and reports of difficulties last season when this "wonder chemical" caused troubles when used without adequate safeguards.

In towns, the trouble was most likely to arise when 2,4-D was sprayed on lawns and drifted in even the slightest quantities to the flower beds of neighbors. At least one company is adding 2,4-D to a lawn fertilizer mixture, and the dust from this can cause trouble. Nearly all the plants commonly grown in vegetable and flower gardens are sensitive to 2,4-D and even a trifling and invisible drift of spray or dust across a property line can be the cause of widespread killing of flowers, including many perennials expensive to replace.

In farm areas last season there were serious complaints by farmers whose crops were injured. Airplane application of 2,4-D dust to rice fields did an excellent and economical job of weeding, but many cases of serious injury to cotton fields were reported as a result of 2,4-D dust drifting or even mild breezes. Another cause of complaint was injury to alfalfa fields in the vicinity of wheat fields dusted or sprayed for weed control.

Peter Minuit and Manhattan
 Three hundred and twenty-two years ago the island of Manhattan became Dutch property as a result of the famous deal between Peter Minuit, representative of the West India company of Amsterdam, and the chief of the Canarsie Indians. On that island the heart of New York is now built. Peter paid the Indian chief 24 dollars for the land, that is, he paid for it with a box of trinkets "valued at $24." The valuation was made by the Dutch themselves. That $24 deal has gone into American history as the first formal trade of any kind on the island.

Century Plant
 Name "century plant" was given to a group of desert plants because it was mistakenly believed that they bloom only once in 100 years. According to the World Book encyclopedia, some varieties of the century plant flower every year, and others at longer periods, but none blooms so rarely as once in 100 years.

SINGS 'AIDA'

MURIEL RAHN

New York—Muriel Rahn, concert soprano star who became the first Negro artist to appear in the Yale Bowl Summer Concerts with the St-piece New Haven Symphony a few weeks ago, set another precedent when she took on the title role of "Aida" in the "Opera Under The Stars" series at the Triboro Stadium in New York on Saturday evening, August 7, with the Salmagundi Opera Company.

Six Points to Remember In Overcoming Avian TB

Tuberculosis in chickens is a disease of older birds, according to Dr. D. F. Eveleth, veterinarian of the North Dakota agricultural experiment station.

For the most part it is unlikely that there will be many deaths from tuberculosis in the pullet flock. One of the most satisfactory methods of eradicating avian tuberculosis is a combination of strict sanitation and the elimination of hens over one year old.

Dr. Eveleth stresses the point that "tuberculosis organisms are spread in the droppings of infected birds and that under North Dakota conditions these germs will live in the ground for at least three years."

The important points in tuberculosis control in poultry, as outlined by Dr. Eveleth, are: (1) Market all old birds before pullets are brought off the range. (2) Thoroughly clean and disinfect the laying house before bringing in the pullets. (3) Thoroughly cull the pullet flock. (4) Feed a well balanced ration. (5) Keep the laying house dry. (6) Keep the layers confined to house and sunporch to prevent spread of disease on the premises.

The spread of tuberculosis for the most part takes place on summer range and in the laying house. The range used for the young flock should be a field seeded to a vigorously growing grass or legume and on land not used the previous year for poultry or swine. This is important because of the resistance of the tuberculosis germs. It is very important that the range used be far enough away from the farmstead so that the birds do not come in contact with swine, because the disease appears to be transmitted readily from poultry to swine.

Illinois Offers Prizes For Catching Tagged Fish

An "All Illinois Fishing Rodeo" sponsored by the Illinois department of conservation started June 15. The statewide fishing contest offers anglers a chance to win prizes from $25 to $100. Prizes from $25 to $100 are awarded to anglers who catch tagged fish. Tagged fish have been released by the conservation department in more than 56 Illinois lakes. Each tag carries a number corresponding to one of the hundreds of prizes offered. There is no charge for participating in the fishing rodeo; any fisherman who catches a tagged fish in accordance with the rules is eligible for participation in this rodeo, with the exception of members of the Illinois conservation department and their families. Fish must be caught between June 15, 1948, and September 15, 1948, by use of rod and reel or pole and line. Either artificial lures or live bait may be used.

Fly and Mosquito Control

Many towns and cities in North Dakota are carrying out fly and mosquito control programs this year.

quilo control programs this year, says F. Gray Butcher, NDAC extension service entomologist and plant pathologist. Oiling of sloughs, and other mosquito breeding areas are principal activities. Minot has launched the most ambitious city program in the state, Butcher believes. Every one, he states, can help control mosquitoes by spraying their own shrubbery, the outside walls of their buildings and adjoining grass or weed areas. Use either DDT emulsions or DDT wettable powder diluted to about one per cent strength. The same DDT treatment will help control flies. Home owners can paint their screens with 5 per cent DDT oil solution. This kills flies and similar insects contacting the screens.

Wind Machines vs. Frost

Frost protection for fruit orchards at perhaps one-tenth the cost of operating oil heaters seems practical in some regions, through the use of wind machines which by creating turbulence and mixing of air, promote the natural flow of heat from the soil to the exposed foliage and fruit. Wind generators afford less frost protection than do heaters, however. Rows of heaters in remote corners and along orchard borders where cool air drifts in add to effective protection. Wind machines are placed about 32 feet above the ground where the air is usually much warmer than at ground level, and are built so that the air jets revolve slowly like a propeller.

Wire Production at Peak

Electrical wire manufacturers in the United States now are producing wire for homes and commercial buildings at the record rate of six billion feet per year, nearly three times the pre-war rate, according to figures released today by U. S. Rubber company. Reason for the high production is the postwar building boom. Almost 100 per cent of the homes being erected today are wired for lighting and appliances and, in some instances, electric heating. The average size home uses 1500 feet of wire. Large commercial and industrial buildings use much more wire. Most of the wire is made of copper insulated with rubber. The shortage of copper has stimulated interest in aluminum wire, which is plentiful, cheaper and lighter in weight.

How to Cut Down Losses Of Cattle During Summer

Livestock raisers are here given 10 tips on how to prevent losses and speed up gains of cattle during the pasture season this summer. The American Foundation for Animal Health has issued the following check-list of summer safeguards for cattle:

- (1) Don't let animals gorge themselves on lush, young pastures. Guard against bloat and grass tetany by making a gradual change to green feed.
(2) Inspect the herd once a week for evidence of pink-eye.
(3) In blackleg areas, have all calves vaccinated against this disease.
(4) Protect the herd against flies by spraying with DDT at least four times during the summer.
(5) Examine pastures periodically for the presence of poisonous plants.
(6) Check the herd regularly for accidental wounds through which screw worms may enter.
(7) If suspected cases of lumpy jaw develop, get those animals off pasture and away from the rest of the herd and have them treated immediately.
(8) When calves are unthrifty, suspect the presence of parasites. The parasite danger is especially great on old pastures and community pastures.

Change in Rates For Subscriptions

The Bystander has made some increase in subscription and advertising rates during the past 5 years, but for less than the cost it has been required to pay to produce a creditable newspaper. With the continued mounting costs, it must either ask the public to pay more for the paper, reduce the size or close up shop. Convinced that the public wants the Bystander to continue to produce a good newspaper, beginning July 15, the subscription rates will be:

Table with 2 columns: Subscription length (1 Year, 6 months, Single copy) and Price ($2.75, 1.50, .07).

A discount of 25 cents will be allowed as usual for payment before expiration.

(9) If cattle share pastures with stock from other farms, have them immunized against tetanus, blackleg and malignant edema.

(10) Bovine tuberculosis is still a problem, and cattle should be tested periodically for tuberculosis as well as brucellosis.

Electric Motor Industry Celebrates Its 40th Year

On an evening 40 years ago, 33 men, representing 25 companies, assembled to organize the American Association of Electric Motor Manufacturers.

It was the first trade association in the electrical apparatus manufacturing industry and the earliest forerunner of National Electrical Manufacturers' Association, which was formed in 1926.

Today the industry embraces 180 manufacturers across the land. Last year alone they produced more than 25 million motors, ranging from mid-gets to giants of 89,000 horsepower. George C. Tenney, editor and publisher of "Electrical World," says the electric motor made possible the production line and modern industrial techniques.

"More than any other factor," he declares, "the seven or eight horsepower at the command of every American worker, largely in the form of electric motors, is responsible for this country's vast productive capacity and a standard of living which is the envy of the rest of the world."

During the war, he pointed out, the industry produced millions of motors in 40 thousand different models. A B-29, he explained, required at least 300 motors, 125 on an LST and more than 900 on a battle wagon.

Economical Operation of Tractor

Tractor engines should operate within definite temperature limits for best economy and performance, according to Guy W. Glenger, extension agricultural engineer at the University of Maryland. To keep the cooling system working at its best he recommends: (1) Be sure the fan belt does not slip. There should be three-fourths inch deflection when you push against the belt. (2) Drain and flush the cooling system at least twice each year. (3) Keep the radiator clean to allow air to pass by all the cooling fins and tubes. (4) Use clean soft water (rain water preferred) to prevent the accumulation of dirt and lime inside the engine. Rust inhibitors used with soft water will prevent the formation of rust inside the engine.

Chicago Doctor Describes Facial Paralysis Repair

Several techniques for the surgical repair of facial paralysis are described by Paul W. Greeley, M. D., Chicago, in the "Archives of Surgery," published by the American Medical Association.

Facial paralysis may result from injury to the seventh, or facial nerve. This nerve may be damaged in several ways, including skull fracture, bullet wounds, injury from a mastoid operation, or tumors on the nerve.

According to Dr. Greeley, the best method of repair involves surgery of the injured nerve, with the intention of permitting the face to gain motion again. This may include the sewing together of the ends of the lacerated nerve trunk or the grafting of part of one nerve to another to fill in a gap if the injury has made one.

The uniting of one nerve to another, which has been used several times in the treatment of facial paralysis, is undesirable, the report says, because "the associated movements involved in trying to move the facial muscles are awkward and frequently more conspicuous than the original facial paralysis."

When nerve surgery cannot be undertaken, the article says that "the simplest and most satisfactory plastic surgical correction is obtained by supporting the paralyzed face with strips of autogenous fascia lata (a fibrous tissue surrounding the muscles of the thigh)."

Too Few Circuits in Home May Cause Loss of Power

Most families economize on electricity by being careful to turn off lights, but many do not realize that overloading circuits, using appliances unsuited to wiring, or investing in second-rate cords also cause waste, says Louisiana State university extensionist.

Too few circuits and too small wires cause dim or flickering lights and slow down appliances. This means less light, heat or power for the money spent on electricity, and also greater depreciation of equipment.

The way to avoid such waste is to provide adequate circuits and large enough wires when electricity is installed in building or remodeling the home. The average six-room house generally needs one to two circuits for the basement, four to six for the first floor, and two to four for the second floor. Adequate circuits should be installed to take care of present and also future equipment. It costs far less to put these in when the house is built than to install them later.

Wherever possible long circuits should be avoided to prevent loss of electric energy. With No. 14 wire, the outlets should be not more than 25 feet from a fuse box or panel board; with No. 12 wire, not more than 35 feet. If circuits must be longer in a large house, fuse boxes or circuit breaker panels should be installed on each floor, supplied by feeder wires, preferably of No. 8 size, from the service entrance box.

Special Treatment Needed Washing Summer Rayons

Summer rayons would give greater satisfaction in wear and appearance if women generally would not try to launder them like cottons.

Many women still do not realize that the two fabrics react differently to moisture and heat. Rayons become weaker when wet while cottons are slightly stronger. Therefore, rayons need gentler treatment both in washing and ironing. Rayons are more easily damaged by heat than cottons so should be pressed with a cooler iron, she says.

Rayons are not difficult to iron; they are just different. Usually they do not need to be as moist as cottons for ironing. They should be ironed on the wrong side of the fabric so that any shine left by the iron will not show up on the right side. The iron should follow the weave of the fabric, and the fabric should not be pulled or stretched or given much pressure with the iron.

Above all, the iron should not be too hot. It is a good idea to start ironing with the temperature set low and let the iron become hotter until the ideal heat for the goods is found.

Collars, pockets and trimmings usually need touching up with the iron on the right side. Use a pressing cloth over the rayon to avoid shining these places. Rayon crepes and jerseys are the most difficult to iron evenly because they have so much 'give'. A point to remember also is that crepes shrink more than plain-woven fabrics.

Agronomist to Collect New Grasses In Brazil

New grasses to improve California ranges will be collected in southern Brazil, Argentina, and Uruguay by Dr. R. M. Love, University of California college of agriculture agronomist during his leave of absence for a year.

Many stipa species of grasses are found in this region, Love said. The California stipes are among the hardest in this state, and the best of their South American relatives will be brought to Davis.

Prairie brome, one of the eight new forage grasses released to growers last fall, came from Argentina, Love added. He hopes to find others there which might prove suitable to California conditions.

Love is making the trip at the invitation of the Brazilian government which asked him to organize a laboratory in the state of Rio Grande do Sul to improve wheat and grasses. The Brazilian agriculture department has arranged trips to at least five experiment stations to study farm problems of that region.

During these travels, Love will have opportunities to gather grass specimens. He also plans to collect grasses in Argentina and Uruguay.

Love joined the agronomy staff eight years ago to work on California range problems.

Strange Dog Malady

An acute, contagious disease, apparently identical to a virus infection of dogs in Sweden, has made its appearance in the United States and may be responsible for many recent dog deaths across the nation, states the American Veterinary Medical Association. Thus far, the disease has been diagnosed in one dog in the Chicago area and in five dogs in Boston, and "there is well-founded suspicion that it has appeared in several other American cities." Acute tonsillitis was a feature of the disease as observed in Boston, the report stated, but this was probably a symptom rather than a cause. Research findings indicated that the disease was different from that which causes canine distemper. The liver was largely affected in all cases. Other symptoms included fever, coughing, loss of appetite, weakness, and finally collapse and death. Convulsions and other nervous symptoms were observed in some of the cases.

Chief Finds "Nice Wampum" in New York

Chief Tso points out his favorite—a $10,000 bill.

Saligo Tso, 62-year-old chief from the Navajo reservation at Ganado, Arizona, thinks the "wampum" situation in New York today is decidedly better than in 1626, when the Indians sold Manhattan Island for $24.

Chief Tso and a group of his tribesmen were in New York recently to participate in the Arizona exhibit at the International Travel and Vacation Show at Grand Central Palace. They not only made a big hit at the show but, in colorful striped blankets, shining silver jewelry and with tom-toms and bows and arrows, they attracted wide-eyed crowds as they wandered through the city's canyons.

One of their visits was to the Chase National Bank's Collection of Monies of the World, a display of some 75,000 specimens of ancient and modern currencies. Such rare items as fish-hook money, cloth money from the Congo, spirit money from Siam, and a 100-pound circular stone used as "cash" on the Yap Islands in the Pacific, evoked mild curiosity from the group. A string of caribou teeth once used as money in Alaska drew a smile to the lips of Chief Tso, and when he came to the beaver and coon skins used by Mississippi trappers he busied himself comparing these with his own beaverkin head-dress.

Checks signed by Lincoln, Washington, Charles Dickens and Francis Scott Key, a check "written" and "endorsed" by arc welding and "cancelled" by machine-gun bullets, a check for one cent made out by Henry Ford, and strange coins used in Biblical times drew reserved nods from the chief and his party.

But when asked what he liked best, the chief quickly pointed to a piece of U.S. paper money bearing a picture of Salmon P. Chase, who was Secretary of the Treasury under Abraham Lincoln, and said, animatedly, "This wampum nice!"

The picture of Mr. Chase (in case you don't happen to have one of the bills in your pocket) is on some rather rare present-day "wampum"—the $10,000 Federal Reserve note.

Animals Linked to Strange Disease

Physicians, veterinarians, and public health workers are joining forces to crack the mystery of an "acidulous malady called Q fever. It gets its name from Queensland, in Australia, where it was first reported as a disease of the human family. In the United States, the first outbreak was reported a little over two years ago, in Texas. Later, there was an epidemic among packinghouse workers in Chicago, and more recently it broke out in two areas of California. Q fever does not kill many of its victims, but it causes high fever and prolonged disability. Animals are thought to be the major source of the infection, but they never seem to exhibit acute symptoms. The germs of Q fever have been found in apparently healthy cattle, as well as in sheep, goats, and many species of wild animals. Dr. James H. Steele, chief veterinarian of the U. S. public health service, says that in the future "we may find this disease in practically every animal on the western plains and in the East, as well."

Mr. Joe Wiley, student of Loyola university, Chicago, is in the city spending a vacation with his mother, Mrs. Mildred Wiley, 955 17th street.

Cross the Border

"About midnight of the fourth we crossed the border. We had to have our baggage and tourists cards inspected and stamped. At approximately 1 a. m. we were ready to roll again and we reached our destination at 11:30 a. m. This was the very day that classes began.

"About two hours after we met the family with whom we were to live. It seemed as though we had known them for weeks. That's how much these made us feel at home. The family is a white family, but they have relatives of all kinds, brown and white. There are three boys and a girl in the family. One of the boys is in Mexico. City studying to be a doctor. The daughter has a fine shape, but she also has her father's nose. She has many, many attractive friends and acquaintances.

"The thing that struck me most when we first entered the house was the patio or inner courtyard. Every room in the house faces upon the patio. There is no roof over the patio and it has white walls. It is filled with various kinds of flowers and cactaries. All of the floors are of glazed brick or tile. Everything is wonderful.

PERSONAL TOUCH

By Marie Ross

Home town veterans who have been in Old Mexico during the summer where they are studying Spanish and customs are William Mason, well known young fighter and Lawrence Burke, both Drake university students. They are attending the Escuela Interamericana de Verano at Saltillo, Coahuila.

Of his experiences in Mexico, Mason wrote the following letter on August 3 to "Querida Maria:"

"Well here it comes at last. We left Des Moines at 10 p. m. Friday, July 2. We arrived at St. Louis about 8:30 a. m. the next morning and spent most of the day looking at the animals in the zoo. We were to leave St. Louis at 6 p. m. but there were such large holiday crowds that we were unable to catch the train originally scheduled for us. We caught a different train and went by a different route.

"The first classes are held at 9 a. m. in the morning. Burke and I only have one class together, a class in phonetics. From four in the afternoon until seven all the students are with individual tutors. We go wherever we please conversing only in Spanish. I don't think much of my ability but I do express myself more and I understand much better. We change tutors each week.

"The third day we were here I was riding on a bus with my tutor and we met an attractive girl. We were talking together, when suddenly out of a clear blue sky she asked me to marry her, and take her to the U. S. Everyone on the bus heard it and they were all looking and pointing. I told her I didn't know her, and she said she didn't know me either—so that made it even. Well, I won't tell you how this ended but it was very interesting.

"That same night we were invited to a fiesta and most of the people there were Mexican. It seemed as though they had all come to stare at Burke and me. As soon as anyone came through the door they

HOT WEATHER THIRST QUENCHER

When the weather's hot, tail cooling beverages hold the spotlight and the appearance of a frosty pitcher, accompanied by crisp cookies, is a refreshing sight. Most satisfying thirst-quenchers are drinks which are not too sweet and the attractive cooler pictured above is ideal for bridge parties or when friends drop in to visit. The delightful flavor of the sauternes wine combines invitingly with either lemon or lime juice, and the drinks may be prepared individually in tall glasses or mixed in a water pitcher.

COUNTRY CLUB COOLER (individual serving)

1 tablespoon sugar
Juice of 1/2 lemon or 1 lime
4 ounces Rona Sauternes
Sparkling water

In a tall glass combine sugar and lemon or lime juice. Add Rona sauternes and ice cubes. Stir well. Fill with chilled sparkling water or plain ice water and garnish with lemon or lime slice.

Iowa Bystander, 221 1/2 Locust Street, Des Moines 9, Ia.

F.N.C.—Ten years ago I met and fell in love with a nice fellow who has led me to believe all these years that we were going to marry. He has said time and time again that it won't be very long now but I am disgusted and refuse to wait any longer. Should I accept the attention of the new man who called and invited me places these past few weeks?

Ans: Indeed you should. You are no nearer the altar now than you were ten years ago so you may as well look around for a new prospect. The old boy friend is a confirmed bachelor—he can't for the life of him make up his mind to get married. Date the new friend—you're getting no where with the old beau, and refuse to devote all of your time to one man until you are formally engaged.

A.E.—I have a job, it isn't very hard but it is hot to work now. Must I stay on this job or quit? I can't seem to save any money any way and I don't have very much to show for what I earn.

Ans: Stay on the job—you're barely making ends meet now and if you gave up this income, conditions would not be very favorable for you. You need to look around for a better paying job—but hold on to what you have until you find one.

D.F.—I am thinking seriously of leaving my husband. We seem to care for each other but we live next door to his people and they insist on running our affairs. When I object it makes my husband mad with me. It tickles them to death to see us on the outs. I thought I would pick up and leave without saying a word to anyone.

Ans: That's not the solution to your problem. If your unhappiness is due to too much interference from your in-laws, the thing for you to do is to find living quarters in another section of the city. You and your husband love each other devotedly and would be very miserable were you to separate.

G.H.—I own five lots in a section of town that is building up. My daughter wants me to give her a lot on which to build. I told her to go ahead and build and I would make my will and leave her the lot when I passed. She will not consider building with this arrangement. Should I give her the lot now?

Ans: Yes—deed the lot to her so she can proceed with her plans to build. She couldn't very well get a loan on the property if she did not own it. Give it to her now while you are still here to see her enjoy it.

WHO IS RESPONSIBLE? LET'S FIND OUT

The Clean-Up and Beautifying Campaign closed a successful year last week. One of the spots the Bystander hoped would get into the competition is the site chosen for the new Willkie House located at the northwest corner of Seventeenth and Crocker street.

The place needs attention badly. Some officials of the Clean-Up committee have tried for weeks to determine whose responsibility it is to take care of this job. It is rumored that the board appropriated funds for the work but nobody has moved a shovel of trash or cut a twig of grass to this date. And there are loads of it on the lot.

If someone will call the Bystander and tell who is responsible to see that this job is done, he will be asked—in this column if necessary—to fulfill his responsibility to the community.

Besides, the people in the neighborhood complain that the present condition of the lot detracts from the looks of the neighborhood.

Let's have some action, please, and less buck passing.

WE USE THE VETO AND CRITICISE RUSSIA FOR IT

During the debate in the Senate over the question of taking up the anti-poll tax bill, Senator Morse called attention to the fact that some northern states made payment of a poll tax a qualification for voting and thus the argument made by southern Senators that the pending measure was aimed at the South had no basis in fact. The southerners admitted it but replied "we want no part of the bill."

The Senate of the United States is an august body but at times its debates reach a pretty low level. And this is true generally when Southern Senators are opposing fair consideration to Negroes. This was particularly true, when the question of payment of a poll tax as a requisite for voting, was being debated last week.

Here, the legislative branch of the government was trying to implement the constitution by removing restriction on the civil rights of a large segment of our population. It failed because a few demagogues were able to veto the plan. And yet when Russia vetoes a project before United Nations, we call them pretty bad names.

And Russia might veto any decent settlement of Russian-American relations in the conference our state department sought out and held with the Russian foreign minister while this poll tax debate was on in Congress. If so, they will simply use their dirty veto just as the demagogues from the South do in the Senate when civil rights are before that body for consideration.

TOO MANY PEOPLE DON'T UNDERSTAND

There is much misconception in the minds of some people about high prices and the power of the federal government to bring them down. Those people think that all that needs to be done is for Congress to authorize the rationing of commodities, roll prices back and everything will be o. k.

Of course such a theory is erroneous from an economic as well as legal angle for there is much more to the problem of doing this job.

Take an automobile as an example. If the price of a car today was rolled back to the 1942 level, then all elements which go into the production of that car must be rolled back and of course that means labor as well.

One of the chief difficulties is that we are not producing enough to go around and thus buyers are willing to pay any price to get what they want, the sellers want to get all they can for their products and thus the continued spiral of high prices.

Laws are not going to do the job of bringing down prices. The great forces of finance, industry, farming and labor must be brought together to accomplish the job of a voluntary cooperative basis.

EIGHT SUNDAY SCHOOLS AT WORKERS' COUNCIL

Eight Sunday Schools were represented at the monthly meeting of the Des Moines Sunday School Workers' Council which met at St. Paul church Tuesday. Mrs. Goldie Fant discussed "Missions in the Sunday School," the Rev. L. L. Barnes, "The Minister in the Sunday School," and Mrs. Zora Eving conducted devotionals and the program. The next meeting will be at the First CME church on Tuesday, September 14, when the subject will be "Recreation in the Sunday School." Mrs. Jeanne Morris is president of the council.

White Denounces Failure to Pass Rights' Measure

New York.—Failure of the Special Session of Congress to pass the anti-poll tax bill or enact any civil rights legislation in the face of the southern filibuster was characterized by Walter White, NAACP secretary as an "abject and unnecessary surrender to reaction and defeatism."

On his return to New York after spending the major part of his time in Washington during the special session, Mr. White denounced the "scuttling of the civil rights program by Dixiecrats with the aid of the Republicans who refused to accept their responsibility, as the majority party, of keeping the Senate in continuous sessions in a genuine effort to break the southern blockade."

Mr. White warned that the proposal to amend the Senate rules to permit cloture on all business before the Senate would be ineffective unless accompanied by the provision that cloture may be invoked by a majority vote rather than the two-thirds now required. He urged all NAACP branches and other organized groups to obtain written commitments from all senatorial candidates that they will vote for amendment of the Senate rules to permit cloture on all matters before the Senate on majority vote. Similar commitments, he said, should be demanded also of all incumbent senators.

Pay Heed To Highway Signs And 'Stick Around' Awhile

Signs and signals are among the biggest helps to safe driving, the National Safety Council says. "They give drivers warning of the dangers that lie ahead. But they are worthless unless seen and obeyed. The safe driver will follow these signposts:

1. Give signs, signals and markings the same respect you would a traffic officer. Here's one place you may lose if you cheat.

2. Reduce speed and be on guard when you see a diamond-shaped sign (this shape carries a warning) or a round sign (this signifies a railroad crossing is ahead).

3. Come to a complete stop at an eight-sided or octagonal sign. This shape means only one thing—stop!

4. Know what an oblong sign says. This shape carries regulatory messages such as speed limit.

5. Heed the cross-buck sign at railroad crossings. If there is a flasher or wig-wag, wait until it stops operating before crossing. There may be another train you can't see.

6. Watch for the signs of life even on familiar roads. Three-fourths of the drivers in fatal accidents lived within 25 miles of where the accident took place.

Fewer Tenant Farms

More and more farmers have become land owners in recent years and fewer have stayed on the land as tenant operators, the U. S. department of agriculture reports. A little more than a fourth of the nation's farms were tenant-operated in 1947, according to the January 1947 enumerative survey of the bureau of agricultural economics, based on a sample of about 15,000 farm interviews. The survey found that 26.9 per cent of the farms were farmed by tenants last year. This figure compares with 31.7 per cent tenancy in 1945 as shown by the 1945 census of agriculture, and with the peak of 42.4 per cent in 1930. The proportion of tenancy has fallen each year since the peak, the decline being especially sharp during the war. Many former tenants have not returned to farming since the end of the war. The reasons says the Bureau, probably include the continued chance for work elsewhere and the fact that fewer farmers are needed as technological improvements are made in agriculture.

CROCKER YMCA

Camp Period Aug. 19-26
YMCA Camp will be held next week beginning August 19 through 26 at Boone, Iowa. Nearly 150 boys will leave the interurban station at East Sixth and Court next Thursday. All boys who have attended camp in previous years are encouraged to sign up at the Crocker Branch YMCA, 1333 Keo Way. This year a special appeal is being made to boys who have never had a camping experience.

On Wednesday, August 18, at 10 o'clock in the morning at the Crocker Y, physical examinations will be given to all boys going to camp. Wednesday night at the same place the camp "how wow" will be staged. All boys interested in Y camp are invited to attend.

HEALTH FOR ALL

HAY FEVER

Those who think that a hay fever victim's attack of sneezing is a cue for smiles are ill-advised.

Hay fever is no laughing matter. In addition to the uncontrollable sneezing, burning throat, running nose and weeping eyes, the sufferer may have his general health underwritten through loss of sleep and appetite. Hay fever can also lead to infection of the sinuses, throat and bronchial tubes and is sometimes accompanied by asthma.

Hay fever is an allergy, or sensitivity, to pollen, dust or other substances which affects the eyes and nasal passages.

The allergy known as perennial hay fever, which can strike at any time of the year, is sensitivity to house dust, animal hair, feathers or certain foods. Seasonal hay fever is caused by certain pollens in the air. As its name implies it comes during the season when the plant which causes it is in bloom. Spring hay fever, caused by pollen from certain trees, is prevalent during April, May and early June. Summer hay fever, coming with the spread of pollen from such grasses as timothy and redtop, starts at the end of May and continues until the middle of July.

The most widespread type of hay fever is caused by ragweed pollen. Known as fall hay fever, it lasts from about the middle of August to the time of the first frost in fall.

Hay fever is serious enough to call for medical treatment. Its victim should consult his family doctor for relief. The doctor may prescribe treatment or he may send the patient to an allergy specialist.

By a series of allergy tests, the doctor may discover what substance is causing the hay fever and then prescribe specific remedies that may partially or completely cure the sufferer's sensitivity.

There are vaccines that prevent or make milder certain types of hay fever, and the doctor may recommend a series of injections with one of them during the month before the hay fever season begins. Injections during the attack may also bring relief. Removing pollen from the air, particularly in the sufferer's sleeping room, is another form of treatment. For this the doctor may advise an air filter, perhaps in an air-conditioning unit, or an electric pollen-remover. Or he may suggest a filter mask or small filter which can be worn in the nose.

There are also medicines and drugs used in treating hay fever. These drugs, of course, should never be used except under medical advice. Those who are using old prescriptions to relieve hay fever should ask the doctor about some of the improved remedies which have been discovered more recently.

District Tennis Meet On

The Des Moines District Tennis meet got under way as just about the biggest tennis project ever undertaken by the Hill Top Tennis club. How big the committee members never knew until they tackled it. But it is well on its way now and barring rain should wind up as one of the best tennis shows of the years.

The Hiltoppers will have to scuffle to keep all the finalists in all divisions from being white. There is an outside chance that one of our big three, Paul Williams, Chet Williamson and Bill Ashby, may squeak through. One or two might make it in the men's doubles but this chance is too slim to be counted on.

In the women's singles we are faced with three of the finest racket welders in the middlewest and there isn't much we can do about it. Marie Ross, Cleota Proctor, Edith Newcomb, Pat White and Thyra Johnson will go down trying hard but in the fall of the odds they face, they must go down.

It is the same all down the line in all other divisions. Janice Wolder has a bare chance to slip under the line in the girls' singles and slip it will have to be.

But it will be a fine meet and one that the people who helped put over may well be proud. The best one of the meet came from Fred Hawkins, Jr. Fred isn't much bigger than a racket and had never played a game "let alone a match." But he wanted to play in the Junior boys' singles. He was informed that most of the boys were seventeen, big and very good. Fred swallowed hard and said, "I still want in." So he got in to what had to be a good tugging, but he scuffed hard and says that won't happen next year.

There is a rising clamor for a Negro meet and if the fellows who argue with yours truly about it will make enough noise in the right places, we may have one.

Locals to K. C.

Chet Williamson and Bill Ashby played in the Missouri Valley Tennis meet at Kansas City. Chet reached the quarter finals in men's singles and he and Bill reached the semi-final round in doubles. They reported the best time they ever had there and an invitation to St. Louis.

VETERAN'S WHIRL

By JAMES L. HICKS

NNPA Staff Writer

Former colored officers and enlisted men who saw the Army's court martial system in action will be happy to know that the Articles of War have been revised under the Selective Service Act of 1948 and if the Army follows its new articles as closely as it followed its old ones, a colored enlisted man will have some semblance of cashing in on "Army Justice" when he is brought to trial by a military court.

An uninformed person reading this may conclude that a colored man had a chance before a military court under the old articles. If you reached that conclusion you have read exactly what was intended to be implied and it was meant for the uninformed. The uninformed person—the colored man who saw the Army courts operate—had drawn the same conclusion long before they read the opening paragraph.

The writer served for eighteen months as a member of the special court at United States Advance Base "B" in New Guinea, which between 1944 and 1945 had the responsibility of trying all special court martial cases on a base which at times had as many as 200,000 troops, of whom at times, half were colored.

The revised articles will eliminate some of the things which forced this writer to conclude that an enlisted man has two strikes against him when he is hauled before his superior officers on a charge of violating one or more of the 121 Articles of War.

For instance, under the new court martial procedure a lowly buck private is authorized to be a member of either a special or general court which will try his buddies in the ranks.

One has to have been a former officer and member of an Army court to realize what a shock this will be to the Army's brass and what a break it will be for plain old GI Joe.

You have to know that, despite what you have read to the contrary, the Officers' Corps in the Army is a "closed corporation" is lined up against the enlisted men as solidly as a back wall. Sounds a little old, but ask the next five former enlisted men you meet just how close they were able to get to their officers and you will begin to see what we mean.

With an enlisted man sitting on the court with his dislike for officers can't you just imagine what a howl he will raise if someone would even dare suggest such a deal when one of his buddies is coming up for trial.

Hay fever is an allergy, or sensitivity, to pollen, dust or other substances which affects the eyes and nasal passages.

The allergy known as perennial hay fever, which can strike at any time of the year, is sensitivity to house dust, animal hair, feathers or certain foods. Seasonal hay fever is caused by certain pollens in the air. As its name implies it comes during the season when the plant which causes it is in bloom. Spring hay fever, caused by pollen from certain trees, is prevalent during April, May and early June. Summer hay fever, coming with the spread of pollen from such grasses as timothy and redtop, starts at the end of May and continues until the middle of July.

The most widespread type of hay fever is caused by ragweed pollen. Known as fall hay fever, it lasts from about the middle of August to the time of the first frost in fall.

Hay fever is serious enough to call for medical treatment. Its victim should consult his family doctor for relief. The doctor may prescribe treatment or he may send the patient to an allergy specialist.

By a series of allergy tests, the doctor may discover what substance is causing the hay fever and then prescribe specific remedies that may partially or completely cure the sufferer's sensitivity.

There are vaccines that prevent or make milder certain types of hay fever, and the doctor may recommend a series of injections with one of them during the month before the hay fever season begins. Injections during the attack may also bring relief. Removing pollen from the air, particularly in the sufferer's sleeping room, is another form of treatment. For this the doctor may advise an air filter, perhaps in an air conditioning unit, or an electric pollen remover. Or he may suggest a filter mask or small filter which can be worn in the nose.

There are also medicines and drugs used in treating hay fever. These drugs, of course, should never be used except under medical advice. Those who are using old prescriptions to relieve hay fever should ask the doctor about some of the improved remedies which have been discovered more recently.

District Tennis Meet On

The Des Moines District Tennis meet got under way as just about the biggest tennis project ever undertaken by the Hill Top Tennis club. How big the committee members never knew until they tackled it. But it is well on its way now and barring rain should wind up as one of the best tennis shows of the years.

The Hilltoppers will have to scuffle to keep all the finalists in all divisions from being white. There is an outside chance that one of our big three, Paul William, Chet Williamson and Bill Ashby, may squeeze through. One or two might make it in the men's doubles but this chance is too slim to be counted on.

In the women's singles we are faced with three of the finest racket welders in the middle-west and there isn't much we can do about it. Marie Ross, Cleota Proctor, Edith Newcomb, Pat White and Thyra Johnson will go down trying hard but in the fall of the odds they face, they must go down.

It is the same all down the line in all other divisions. Janice Wolder has a bare chance to slip under the line in the girls' singles and slip it will have to be.

But it will be a fine meet and one that the people who helped put over may well be proud. The best one of the meet came from Fred Hawkins, Jr. Fred isn't much bigger than a racket and had never played a game let alone a match. But he wanted to play in the Junior boys' singles. He was informed that most of the boys were seventeen, big and very good. Fred swallowed hard and said, "I still want in." So he got in to what had to be a good troucing, but he scuffled hard and says that won't happen next year.

There is a rising clamor for a Negro meet and if the fellows, who argue with yours truly about it will make enough noise in the right places, we may have one.

Locals to R. C.

Chet Williamson and Bill Ashby played in the Missouri Valley Tennis Meet at Kansas City. Chet reached the quarter-finals in men's singles and he and Bill reached the semi-final round in doubles. They reported the best time they ever had there and an invitation to St. Louis.

By JAMES L. HICKS NNPA Staff Writer

Former colored officers and enlisted men who saw the Army's court-martial system in action will be happy to know that the Articles of War have been revised under the Selective Service Act of 1948 and if the Army follows its new articles as closely as it followed its old ones, a colored enlisted man will have some semblance of cashing in on "Army Justice" when he is brought to trial by a military court.

An uninformed person reading this may conclude that a colored man had a chance before a military court under the old articles. If you reached that conclusion you have read exactly what was intended to be implied and it was meant for the uninformed. The uniformed person—the colored man who saw the Army courts operate—had drawn the same conclusion long before they read the opening paragraph.

The writer served for eighteen months as a member of the special court at United States Advance Base "B" in New Guinea, which between 1944 and 1945 had the responsibility of trying all special court martial cases on a base which at times had as many as 200,000 troops, of whom at times, half were colored.

The revised articles will eliminate some of the things which forced this writer to conclude that an enlisted man has two strikes against him when he is hauled before his superior officers on a charge of violating one or more of the 121 Articles of War.

For instance, under the new court martial procedure a lowly buck private is authorized to be a member of either a special or general court which will try his buddies in the ranks.

One has to have been a former officer and member of an Army court to realize what a shock this will be to the Army's brass and what a break it will be for plain old G. I. Joe.

You have to know that, despite what you have read to the contrary, the Officers Corps in the Army is a "closed corporation" is lined up against the enlisted men as solidly as a brick wall. Sounds a little old, but ask the next five former enlisted men you meet just how close they were able to get to their officers and you will begin to see what we mean.

With an enlisted man sitting on the court with his dislike for officers can't you just imagine what a howl he will raise if someone would even dare suggest such a deal when one of his buddies is coming up for trial.

QUERY

To see Him in the blue of clean, clear summer skies And in the unfeigned frankness of a baby's eyes His presence in the swish and sway of ocean waves To feel ethereal breath upon the old yet unfamiliar graves. To hear Him in the crash and peal of thunder speak, To see in lightning bolts His wrath achieve its peak, The fury of the elements to see Him quickly quell. I pause and wonder then—what makes 'em infidel? Vera R. Douglas.

YOU MUST READ MEDICAL SYMPHONY

This book on the Negro, written by Dr. Gerald A. Spencer, one of New York City's leading dermatologists, reveals the contributions made by members of the race for medical progress in this country.

EXCERPTS FROM CRITICS

"I found 'Medical Symphony' highly informative, concise and to the point. Dr. Spencer has done the Negro a great favor in unearthing many facts in his field which the world should know." Mel Patrick, Pittsburgh Courier

"This sincere tribute to pioneers in the medical world who never faltered when odds were stacked against them, should proudly adorn the bookshelves of everyone who supports the true principles of democracy. 'Medical Symphony' is a Negro literary and historical achievement."
