Tells World Council About West Africa

Chicago, Ill.—(CNS)—Wearing the bright costume of West Africa, Mrs. Rena Karefa-Smart, though born in Bridgeport, Conn., told the World Council of Churches all about life in British West Africa.

As one of the youngest participants on the World Council of Churches' program, Mrs. Karefa-Smart, 33, was one of two women to address the Council in McGraw Memorial Hall on "The Tensions of the World and Our Unity in Christ."

She wore a light blue outfit of handwoven cloth, consisting of a lappa or skirt, and a handembroidered blouse. Across her shoulders she carried a stole which African women use to bind their babies to their backs, papoose fashion.

The young consultant to the World Council is the daughter of a A.M.E. minister. While traveling for the United Christian Youth movement, she met her husband in Oslo, Norway. He is Dr. John Karefa-Smart, an ordained minister and also a public health officer. The couple has two children, Rosalee May 5, and John Jr., 3½. They are at home in Free-town, Sierra Leone, British West Africa.

Charles Looking Vicious Before Sept. 15

Monticello, N. Y.—(CNS)—Former heavyweight champ Ezzard Charles, who is taking his workouts very seriously as he trains for the championship bout on September 15, looked especially vicious this week. At one time he battered Gene Jones, a 210 pound heavyweight for two rounds. Charles and Rocky Marciano will meet in Yankee Stadium.

Marshall Says Negroes Owe 'Great Debt of Gratitude' To Men Like Dr. Ransom

New York.—Tribute to the public services of Dr. Leon Ransom, leading attorney, who died at his home in Washington August 25 was paid last week by officials of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

Arthur B. Spingarn, president of the NAACP and himself a lawyer, noting Dr. Ransom's many years of legal service to the cause of Negro rights, said: "While many talented lawyers became too busy with their private affairs to devote much time to public service, Dr. Ransom over the years gave brilliant and devoted attention to legal cases in the civil rights field, often with no more reward than his bare expenses and the satisfaction of having established a new frontier in civil rights law for the benefit of his people."

Owe Great Debt

Thursgood Marshall, special counsel of the NAACP, recalling the years of advice and actual trial work given by Dr. Ransom to numerous NAACP legal cases, declared: "Negro Americans, whether they know it or not, owe a great debt of gratitude to Andy Ransom" and ~~named~~ him who battled in the courts down a span of years to bring us to the place we now occupy in the enjoyment of our constitutional rights as citizens."

"In helping to build up the NAACP legal program step by step, in the skill which he gave to individual cases and to the planning of strategy Dr. Ransom left a legacy to the whole population. One of his finest and most lasting contributions was the legal education he gave as professor of law to scores of students at Howard, including myself," Marshall praised.

Active in Rights

Dr. Ransom was a graduate of the law school of Ohio State University and received the highest marks ever to have been earned up to that time. He began working with the NAACP as soon as he joined the faculty of the Howard University Law School in 1931. One of his first important cases involved George Crawford of Loudoun County, Va., which he defended jointly with the late Charles

4 Teen-Age Thrill Killers Indicted for Brutal Murder

New York.—(CNS)—Four youthful killers—all white and from the ages of 15 to 18—were indicted last week on first degree murder charges which may send them to the electric chair.

Known as the "thrill killers" for their startling admissions to crimes for the fun of it, the four are directly charged with torturing Willard Menter, a Negro burlap bag-maker, who was burned on his bare feet with lighted cigarette, beaten and then marched seven blocks and thrown into the East River to drown. Menter was a father of two young children.

Through their counsel, the "thrill killers" have pleaded not guilty. All boys were in high school and from good homes. They are Jack Koslow, Melvin-Mittman, Jerome Lieberman, and Robert Trachtenberg.

Phyllis Wheatley Republicans to Meet

The Phyllis Wheatley Republican club will meet Tuesday, Sept. 14, 7:30 p.m., at the home of Mrs. Katherine Shelton, 1129 Eleventh street. All members are urged to attend.

World Renowned Scientist Julian in New Role at Fisk

Nashville, Tenn.—Dr. Percy Lavon Julian, world renowned chemist, Spingarn Medalist, 1947, friend and board member of Fisk University will come to Fisk in a new role this month. He will continue at Fisk a series of research projects that he has been conducting for the past twenty years. It has been his plan to carry on at various institutions certain researches resigned to develop young scientists. Dr. Julian is well acquainted with the Research Program at Fisk, having been a consultant at various times since he was an instructor of chemistry from 1920-1922.

Great Leader

In making the announcement, President Charles S. Johnson said, "This relationship will improve to a tremendous value the scientific program at Fisk, and it will serve to satisfy the urge of a great leader in increasing the scientific manpower potential of Negro and other youth."

Since the first of the year Dr. Julian has assumed responsibilities as head of his own research laboratory, The Surban Chemical Company, Oak Park, Ill. Since 1932 he has been director of research of the Soya Products Division of the Glidden Company of Chicago.

Many Awards

Dr. Julian is a native of Montgomery, Alabama. He received his A.B. degree from Depauw in 1920 and received Phi Beta Kappa honors that year also. He received the M.A. degree from Harvard in 1923. Later he attended the University of Vienna on a General Education Board fellowship in 1929, receiving his doctorate in 1931.

He has received many honors, citations, and awards. The National Association for the Advancement of Colored People honored him by presenting him with their highest award, The Spingarn Medal in 1947. In 1949-1950 he was the "Distinguished Service Award" recipient. The Chicago Sun-Times named him "Chicagoan of the Year" in 1950 also. He has served and is now serving on the following boards: Mandel Clinic, Michael Reese Hospital, Provident Hospital, Roosevelt College, Round Table of Christians and Jews, all in the Chicago area. Other memberships include the World Service Board of the First Congregational Church of Oak Park, Illinois, the New York Academy of Science, and the American Institute of Chemists.

Maryland University Sees No Negro Problem

College Park, Md.—(CNS)—The University of Maryland will open its doors for the new semester with a maximum of six Negro students in the undergraduate schools.

According to its new president Dr. Wilson Elkins, three Negroes have been admitted, one rejected and three still pending. He also sees "no avalanche of Negro students this fall."

More Negro University Graduates Recorded For 1953-1954 School Year

New York. A total of 46,343 Negro students was enrolled in U. S. colleges and universities during the 1953-54 academic year, it is reported in the current issue of The Crisis, official publication of the NAACP.

Of these students, 44,621 attended predominantly Negro colleges, while 1,722 attended racially mixed institutions.

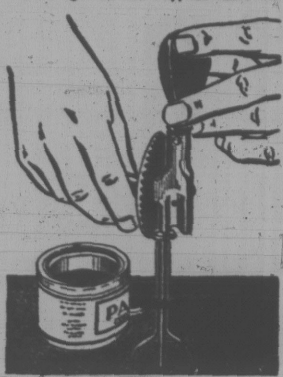

The largest enrollment of Negro students in a mixed college was recorded at Ohio State University in Columbus, O., with 835 Negro students. The University of Southern California in Los Angeles was next with 318 Negroes enrolled.

The Crisis article notes that the figures cited are not complete, partly because "more and more of the racially mixed schools have given up the practice of keeping records by race."

During the academic year 6,139 Negro students graduated from U. S. colleges and universities—236 more than was reported in the special education issue of The Crisis last year. The predominantly Negro colleges with the largest student bodies were, in addition to Howard University in Washington, D. C.: Southern University, Baton Rouge, La., 3,051; North Carolina A and T, Greensboro N. C., 2,932; Prairie View (Texas) College, 2,627; and Virginia State College, Petersburg, Va., 2,215.

Here's Way to Mix Paint
AN EASY way to mix paint or enamel in small cans is to use an old egg beater. Simply cut down the revolving vanes so that the center rod remains a little longer. In this way, the vanes will be kept off the bottom of the can. Wind a piece of wire around the vanes stems to hold them. This device will mix the contents more thoroughly than a paddle or stick. (Illustration courtesy Popular Mechanics.)

Temping Terrace Fare

Eating out of doors doesn't necessarily imply cooking out of doors. The home terrace plus simple picnic fare can equal just as much out-of-doors atmosphere as a picnic in the park. Frankfurters and rolls by all means. With beans of course. But with a flourish or two, the "Fruitishes" are simple. Diagonal gashes in the frankfurters look nice and prevent unsightly splitting. Onion, green pepper, tomato sauce, a few drops of Tabasco, and a whisk of Accent* do wonders for the canned beans. Toasted frank rolls lend crispness. And the mixed pickles go without saying.

Important too, is the fact that serving this terrace menu to a crowd wouldn't be expensive at all.

Smothered Frankfurters.

1 tablespoon butter or margarine 1 teaspoon Worcestershire
1 small onion, chopped 1 1/2-cup can Boston-style baked beans
1 small green pepper, diced Salt to taste
1 8-ounce can tomato sauce 12 frankfurters
Few drops Tabasco 1/2 teaspoon Accent*
Heat butter or margarine; add onion and green pepper; cook over low heat until soft but not brown. Add remaining ingredients; simmer 15 minutes. Cut diagonal gashes in frankfurters at 1/2-inch intervals; grill until lightly browned. Toast split frankfurter rolls. To serve, place 2 toasted halves of roll on each plate; top with two frankfurters; smother with bean sauce. Makes 6 servings.

Iowans Find Much Activity During Tour of Army Reserve Summer Training Program At Camp McCoy, Wis., During 103rd Infantry Division Two-Week Period

During the Iowa Military District's two-day News Lift to Camp McCoy, Wis., August 23 and 24, Miss Marie Ross, reporter of the Iowa Bystander, and the only woman member of the group of thirty-two Iowans on the tour, photographed a few of the visitors and Iowa reservists of the 103rd infantry division and non-divisional units in their summer training program.

First Sign of Fall to a city-dweller like me is not a falling leaf but kids trooping to school. Stop signs appear overnight in certain streets and one sees a little pigtailed thing to remind him of a very early "love".
Our kids are being educated and, sometimes we wonder for what. Johnny dreams of being a cowpoke and Jane's idea of a career is baton-twirling or ballet.

So maybe you want to clip this column and stick it under their noses later. Because you see it's about social work—mostly from "Career Briefs" by Pratt Institute in New York.

To all of us the lives of people are of great interest. Their struggles for recognition. How they deal with financial disaster. (Remember the depression?) Their efforts to find happiness and keep it. The demands of

Look Article that Baseball Has Helped Race Relations Tullulah Bankhead Says in

New York—Tullulah Bankhead, the fiery Southern actress, said that the entrance of Negro players into baseball has improved race relations considerably.

Writing in the current issue of Look Magazine, Miss Bankhead says that Negro players, with their superb grace, speed and reflexes, have boosted the caliber of major league ball.

Bigots

"And baseball has done something for the Negroes too," Miss Bankhead points out in Look. "If nothing else, it has unbogged some bigots!"

As far as Miss Bankhead, a rabid Giants rooster, is concerned, the amazing Willie Mays is already as great as Babe Ruth. Willie is the difference, she says, between last year's Giants, which finished 35 games behind the Dodgers, and this year's club, which is driving to the pennant.

Tradition

And why shouldn't Willie be great, Miss Bankhead asks in her Look article? "He has a tradition to live up to. It's the Alabama tradition."

"I was brought up in Jasper, 30 miles from Birmingham. Willie was born in Fairfield, just a little south and west of Birmingham."

"The stars sort of fell on Alabama when it comes to Negro athletes," the famous actress says. "The great and ageless Satchel Paige was born in Mobile. Monty Irvin is from Columbia; Joe Louis was from Lexington; and Jesse Owens, the great runner who upset Hitler's 'Master Race' theories, was from Danville."

social work an interesting and vital profession.

You and I, We're Old Enough. We know how few people are able to handle serious trouble unaided. Most need help, some much more than others, depending on childhood experiences, education, economic circumstances.

So, as our country has progressed from log cabins and Indians to towering skyscrapers and television, the number and usefulness of social agencies in every community has increased. People in trouble can get more and better help.

Instead of The Cops and the paddy wagon you can call a trained social worker. A social worker who in very real sense is the public conscience and whose job is a bigger one than we sometimes imagine.

The words get a little big now but I want to quote directly. A social worker must see "that assistance is provided in such a way as to protect the dignity of the individual, to maintain or restore his initiative and self-reliance, and to provide help in understanding himself so that he can deal with his own problems to the extent of his capacity."

"The Common Skills required of the social worker include the ability to accept without prejudice the behavior of the individual needing help, the capacity for understanding the underlying causes for his behavior. The social worker may be called upon to help change the community, to establish new agency services or extend existing ones, to modify an individual's environment, or to be part of a team treating the total needs of a particular person."

A Big Job All Right. But there are plenty of kids growing up now who can handle it better—and with more relish—than a lariat or a baton.

And those kids of a generation ago who are now social workers in Des Moines—in the 33 United Campaigns, for example—are proof of it.

There's a need for more like them. So when I wait for the kids with their books to pass, I play a game. I guess which ones will grow up with tolerance enough, understanding enough, love enough in them to be of real help to those others who in one way or another will need help.

First Step For Teaching Self-Control Can Be Taken Very Early In Child's Life

By Afton Smith, Assistant Professor

How can a child obey his parents and at the same time control himself? What does self-control mean? Does it mean freedom to do as one pleases regardless of the rights of others? An old story goes that in the early days an immigrant stepped upon the shores of America and crossed down the first man who crossed path. He was amazed when he was arrested, for he said he had always heard that America was a free country where one could do as he pleased. He had a wrong notion of freedom and of self-control.

Self-control means freedom for the child to learn to control his own personal desires and impulses so that he can get along with people. A small child does not know very much about this kind of control and unless he has some chance to practice day by day, he will not be able to get along very well with people when he grows up. He cannot learn complete self-control in one day or in one year, and the problem is how to transfer control from the parent to the child as fast as the child is able to manage his own behavior.

The first step in teaching self-control can be taken very early in life.

today he says that "it was truly God's will" for him to be a minister.

Elder Ford, the ninth member of a family of eleven, came to Chicago in 1943 with only twenty-five cents in his pocket. When asked why he came to Chicago in the heart of the winter with only twenty-five cents he replied: "I heard God say: 'Chicago is your field'." He later went to Evanston and served as assistant pastor under Overseer D. C. Williams, and God did truly bless his ministry there.

While working in Evanston he met Miss Margaret Little and was united to her in holy matrimony. After serving two years in Evanston and being ordained by the late Bishop W. M. Roberts, he returned back to Chicago and began to preach on the street corners.

To be able to continue his street ministry he sold tires for Firestone and washed cars. He later went from the street corners to a storefront located at 4633 South State street.

During this time his oldest son, Charles, was born, and following two years later their daughter, Janet, was born.

From the storefront, he moved to a tent and later to a large hall at 5949 South Michigan Avenue. From this hall he built one of Chicago's most outstanding churches, the St. Paul Church of God in Christ located at 4528 South Wabash and also owns Chicago's oldest house.

District Superintendent

Elder Ford served as district superintendent of the South Shore District and chairman of the State Ministers' Council of Northern Illinois for eight years. Later he was promoted to national-director of public relations of the Church of God in Christ, and he along with his committee is responsible for the street being named after Bishop Mason. He also serves as second vice president of the National Publishing board, a member of the board of education and is the overseer of the State of Iowa. He has nearly completed one of the finest churches in Des Moines, Iowa. The local church and the state of Illinois received the news of his appointment with great pride.

much about them. He usually cooperates without fuss. If his parent is cheerful, scolding and punishment usually are not necessary. On the other hand, a battle which ends in punishment may be very exciting, though painful. As excitement rises, cooperation vanishes. Complete parent control becomes necessary, leaving no room for child's practice in self-control.

Many visitors were in town during the Labor Day weekend for the Iowa Buxton club's annual homecoming picnic: At Union Park Sunday afternoon the picnicers assembled in another area of the park. The former spot, where long tables could be lined parallel, had been damaged by the recent flood that destroyed many parks in and around Des Moines.

The afternoon was hot and I had spent most of it talking with former Buxtonites and enjoying delicacies from their picnic baskets, long before I discovered that on a far side of the shelter house, the reunion committee had been giving away free collards.

Glasses and cups were scarce so a long line formed—but I had saved a paper cup, a souvenir from the Walden-Thompson lemonade jug, and had no trouble in amply quenching my thirst while others waited for glasses and cups to be washed.

Fried chicken, baked ham, barbecue were popular meats along side of the many vegetable dishes, salads and endless varieties of cakes and pies. Mrs. Ella Gibbons had little difficulty in convincing me that her golden browned fowl would have less calories than the fresh apple pies on her table.

Every year at the picnics, some good Buxtonite or descendant always brings along a freezer of homemade ice cream, in memory of the days when the handle had to be turned until the arm ached before that velvety mixture was frozen. And, for the past four years, I always arrived at that particular table, just after the freezer had been drained.

But, this year, I went to the park with my spoon and I kept an eye searching for anything that looked like a ice cream freezer. Soon a gentleman arrived carrying a big freezer over his shoulder. He placed it at an empty table. His family came and soon the table was covered with food. A daughter got busy filling paper cups. And, immediately I made an acquaintance with Miss Rosalie Robinson of 1352 Dixon, who said her mother made the cream. It was certainly delicious and given freely to many who asked.

Every year at the picnic, two brothers from Omaha, Nebr., make the occasion a special one for seeking out a representative of the paper to renew their subscriptions for another year. They are Messrs. Phil and Stanley Bolden, who said they enjoyed the paper.

Food is always an interesting subject and much anticipated whether one is at a picnic or visiting an army camp.

On the recent trip to Camp McCoy, Wis., to view the summer training of the Iowa reservists during the period of the 103rd Infantry Division, it was interesting to note the anxiety shown, when mess time arrived.

Our army air force plane landed at the Camp McCoy airport shortly after 11 o'clock that morning. A welcome committee of officers met the Iowa Military Districts guests of over 30 men and one woman.

We gathered in the doorway of one of the hangars where we were briefed by officers of the summer reserve training camp and welcomed by the commander, Maj. Gen. George H. Olmsted, who told us how we, in our communities, could help create public opinion in favor of getting men who have had active military duty, in the reserves to be fully trained in the event of any emergency.

Each of the visitors was given, press folder, name card and a pass and then we boarded busses for the main camp area.

On bus, one of the officers in charge asked if we preferred to go to our quarters—or to midday mess—and invariably everyone favored getting a bite to eat.

Long lines of men waited to get into the mess halls, but the guests, with officers' privileges, did not have to wait long. We got into the lines, had our aluminum trays filled with the menu of the day—a thick slice of roast beef, dehydrated potatoes and brown gravy, green beans, salad, a whole pear, devil's food cake, ice tea.

Anxious to get started on the tour of the afternoon we ate hurriedly, carried our trays to the kitchen, emptied the garbage in the disposal, sorted the silver from the glassware

A post car took me to a guest house, where a room had been reserved. The officer in charge of our group which had been assigned to visit the artillery, Col. E. R. Hufstadter informed that we would go to some areas on the main post during the early part of the afternoon and that I did not have to change my attire—but when he returned shortly in a big army truck, he had changed his plans, he said.

"We are going to one of the mountainous areas—and I think you had better put on your slacks," he advised.

Well, to slip from street clothes down to slack attire, while an army truck with men waited at the guest house door, was really a fireman's task—because, men can be awfully restless if they have to wait for a woman to dress—or redress. But, pronto, I returned in my blue denim slack suit and heavy oxfords.

Soon, we were leaving the main post area, heading for a wooded section where the tall Christmas trees grow. A bright sun was shining—but, in the far corner of the sky, were a few clouds.

We rode for miles along side of the purple grasses, sage, blooming golden rod and brown-eyed Susans before our escort spotted the area where units were training with the big 155 mm guns.

We left our cars and truck nearby and walked a few yards to watch the training crews go through their non-firing artillery exercises.

Under the tall trees where the big guns were concealed, it was difficult to tell whether the sun had stopped shining, but shortly we knew, for a sprinkle of rain started and before we could make up our minds whether it was a sprinkle or a shower, a down-pour was upon us and Mayor Van Dreser and Legionnaire Al Faber dashed along side of other visitors for their cars and trucks. The training crews covered their ammunition and guns, remained at their posts, and the men put on their ponchos (tent-like raincoats).

A blinding rain continued as we left the muddy heavy artillery area and headed back for the main post section of the camp, where the sun was still shining.

My new blue slack suit was rain-soaked and mud-splattered—so back to the guest house I went for another change. A post car returned and I joined other visitors—who had seen infantry and new recruit training units. The retreat started as companies of reserve soldiers marched to main area and executed their commands with precision. Then it was time for food again. We entered the mess halls where long lines of men were waiting. The menu of the evening featured tuna salad, corn-on-the-cob, shoe string potatoes and cantalope. The rest of the evening was ours to go to a movie, the officers club or call it a day. That I did, as breakfast mess time was 6 a.m. the next morning. (Continued)

LET'S KEEP THE RECORD STRAIGHT

Last week's NAACP news story from Washington criticized members of the 83rd Congress for their failure to pass any civil rights legislation and accused members up for election of running on "another's rights record". The release chides Senate Majority Leader Knowland for mentioning the Supreme Court decision against school segregation, cessation of segregation in the armed forces, anti-bias action in the nation's capital, appointment of Negroes to government posts, and other actions of the Executive branch of the government as a part of the achievements of the Republican party.

Of course, the NAACP is trying to secure full enjoyment of citizenship for the Negro and strikes out where it finds that everything is not done promptly to get it.

It is generally agreed that the NAACP was warm bed fellows of the administrations in Washington from 1932 to 1953; that during this time the administration controlled Congress, which at times they boasted large majorities. And yet not one civil rights bill was passed during all the years. But when the Republicans gain control and the margin is slim, they expect them to pass civil rights laws in less than two years.

The article mentions the nonsegregation in interstate travel measures introduced by Congressmen Powell of New York and Dawson of Illinois, both Democrats. These bills were before Congress under Democratic administrations but got nowhere.

Undoubtedly, calling up any civil rights measure would have perturbed a filibuster in the Senate without favorable results. And the Republicans knew it would jeopardize their legislative program. And the Democrats did likewise during their control of Congress.

The Bystander does not approve the tactics of either side in this matter but when the record is put down, let's include it all; not just a leaf to make a point. As a matter of practical politics both sides had trouble holding their party together. Senators Humphrey and Lehman found this out and acted accordingly at the Democratic convention in 1952.

Under the rules of the Senate now in force, no civil rights legislation will be passed.

On the other hand, like Roosevelt and Truman who did some things without the help of Congress to bolster civil rights, so is President Eisenhower. As a matter of fact, Mr. Eisenhower has gone further in his almost two years, than any administration in thirty years.

LESS WORRY THAN DAVID LAWRENCE THINKS

David Lawrence, writing in the Des Moines Tribune, raises the question whether northern public schools will absorb the Negro teachers who lose their jobs as a result of desegregation in southern schools. He cites the distribution of Negro teachers in northern schools arguing that even in those states with a large population, the number is small.

There are several reasons why there should be little worry about this for like the pupil population, the program will proceed not with terrific speed but gradually.

In the larger northern cities, Negro teachers are well represented not only because there are more Negroes but also because Negro leaders can and have been more aggressive to spur opening the field.

For years, states like Iowa even though Negro youngsters received the same training as white, yet found it necessary to go South to teach. But now like Des Moines, those same communities will be absorbing many of these teachers as Des Moines is today.

Many small towns and communities are short of teachers. Occasionally, one here and there has employed a Negro teacher successfully. Undoubtedly we shall have more of this because these teachers come fully qualified. With all these advantages there is little concern that this problem will not be solved successfully.

UNIONS CUTTING THEIR OWN THROAT

The Des Moines Automobile mechanics are on strike. Pickets have been parading in front of the auto companies for several days. No progress for settlement has been achieved.

The Bystander does not know the grievances of the mechanics. It does believe that like most strikes, the clamor for higher wages by the few accounts for pushing the cost of living up and up. Frankly these fellows look pitiful to the onlooker. Most of them can't afford it. Naturally ally they are disappointed. But this same union is one which has consistently blocked Negroes from membership and of course a chance to earn a decent living in a garage.

Without attempting to raise the race question beyond good taste, this one is so glaring that it hits a fellow in the face every time he sees it. And don't forget union men, this action is poor campaign propaganda to the legislature to get them to legalize the closed shop.

membership after conferences between the union's business manager, W. T. Smith, Mr. Hill, and representatives of a small all-Negro building trades union in Miami.

Significance

The significance of admission of Negroes into the Dade County union, Mr. Hill pointed out, hinges on the fact that membership in the AFL union is a condition of employment in the major construction installations in the area.

To date, Negroes have been denied employment at the twenty-three-million-dollar Homestead Army Air Force Base and on all other construction jobs in Dade County because of non-membership in the AFL, Mr. Hill noted.

Rigid Policy

He observed that a rigid policy of segregation still exists in all other AFL building and construction trades unions in Dade County and throughout Florida, including unions of carpenters, tile setters and painters.

"The same vigorous action that resulted in securing the admission of skilled Negro craftsmen into the AFL Bricklayers, Masons and Plasterers Union in Dade County will be used to end the policy of other Florida crafts unions which deny to Negro workers the right to earn a decent living," Mr. Hill asserted.

"Where membership in the Union is a condition of employment and where Negroes are denied membership solely because of color, the NAACP will use all possible means to secure admission of qualified Negro workmen into the established Union."

Virginia's Attorney General Cites His Contempt for NAACP

Richmond, Va.—(CNS)—Attorney General J. Lindsay Almond, Jr. has cited the NAACP as the "National Association for the Agitation of Colored People." He also adds that the NAACP is "alien to the South, alien to the concepts principles and mores of the South and cares nothing for the welfare of the Negro race."

Almond's speech was a follow-up of his original one which called the Supreme Court's ruling as a "clear and unequivocal violation of the 10th

HEALTH FOR ALL

EATING FOR TWO

The old belief that pregnant woman must eat for two has been largely exploded. In modern pre-natal care, the doctor keeps close watch over his patient's weight and diet. This is particularly important because she may be gaining weight and still be under nourished.

A well-balanced diet during pregnancy is essential to the welfare of both mother and child. Moderation is the watch word. A weight gain of from 15 to 20 pounds is usually regarded as best. It is sometimes more important for the prospective mother to learn what not to eat than what she should eat.

Some women have special problems and conditions that require individualized diets, but the average pregnant woman should have from 2,500 to 3,000 calories a day. The diet should contain one and a half pints of milk; one serving of citrus fruit or tomatoes, one of potatoes, at least two of leafy green or yellow vegetables, some of which should be raw; one serving of whole grain cereal and four slices of bread with butter; one serving of meat or fish, or such substitutes as beans, eggs, and cheese, and eggs and cheese three times a week.

It is important to remember that all the necessary foods must be present in the diet to protect the health of both mother and baby. One important nutrient cannot be left out or reduced, or one increased at the expense of another, with out upsetting the balance.

Modern mothers are inclined to laugh at old superstitions about eating during pregnancy, such as the belief that a baby would have a strawberry mark if its mother were frustrated in her longing for strawberries. It's nonsense, but it's not a laughing matter. To give her baby the mark of glowing health, the mother will eat sensibly, following closely the diet prescribed by her doctor.

Ezzard Charles-Rocky Marciano Heavyweight Title Bout Over CBS

BY ALLEN ASHBY

The local high school season gets under way this week. Everybody says Roosevelt is the team to beat but you just can't count out East High. Then Tech is very likely to stage some upsets, just when some prospective champ can't afford to have it happen.

Last year we thought the Rough Riders would go through unbeaten. This year we don't know. North will bear a lot of watching if the coaches can turn up a leader. Their trouble has been lack of a leader since about 1950. It will be a lot of fun watching the teams.

Tennis

We watched the tennis matches on television last week and listened with interest the comment of Jack Kramer, the promastore and former National Champion Tony Trabert.

Kramer said Trabert was not getting the proper wrist action on his back hand shots. Reminded us of the days when Bill Ashby, Chet Williams, and Vince Arvey used to watch each other's matches and point out the little things one was doing wrong. When we sorta drifted apart and stopped doing that we became easier to beat and almost never did get back into a winning stride again.

That is the main thing lacking in our tennis today. We don't have anyone who can criticize games. Knowing the fine points of the game is a must; so just anyone can't do that no matter how willing he may be.

No Initiative?

Today we watch players in various sports not make a move unless their coach or manager tells them so. It is getting so that baseball, football and other team sports and in some cases, boxing, have taken the invitation and the inventive genius away from players.

A base runner has only to duck his head and run, listening for the voice of the coach. There is no need to watch the ball. You will be told when and how far to run.

The quarter back doesn't have to worry about the various types of play he might meet. The coach calls all the plays and takes the praise when the club wins.

Even in tennis, now the coaches can be seen working their players between sets and at each opportunity. A player doesn't have to figure out his opponents game. Just hang on for a set and the coach will come to his rescue.

When if ever will we have the boys who placed a premium on brains, daring and courage again?

Russ Hodges to give blow-by-blow, Jack Drees to Handle Between-Rounds Commentary of the Big Fight which will be blacked out on Home TV.

New York—Exclusive blow-by-blow coverage of the Rocky Marciano-Ezzard Charles return heavyweight championship bout will be aired over the CBS Radio Network on Wednesday, September 15. It will be blacked out on home television.

The ringside description of this 15-round fistic thriller from Yankee Stadium, New York will be sponsored by the Pabst Brewing Company with Russ Hodges, one of the nation's top sports reporters, giving the blow-by-blow account and veteran sportscaster Jack Drees handling the between rounds commentary.

Radio broadcast time of the bout will start at 10:30 PM, EDT. It will be carried over the full CBS Radio coast-to-coast network in addition to outlets in Puerto Rico, Alaska and Hawaii and will mark the 19th world's championship boxing bout broadcast sponsored by Pabst Brewing Company.

Charles, veteran Cincinnati boxer and ex-heavyweight champion, and Marciano, the Brockton, Mass., pulverizer, met at Yankee Stadium last June in what was considered one of the great heavyweight title bouts in the history of the sport. Charles put up a brilliant stand against Marciano but the Rock came in the closing rounds to take a close decision and retain his title. A return bout was inevitable.

WE SET OUR GOAL

We set our goal, for high or low, and look above; or down we go. The choice is ours, to climb or fall, if we would climb, hear Jesus' call.

He will help us all the way, make light our load, throughout the day. If you believe, all is well with you; for your heart will sing, if you are true.

I know what Jesus did for me, for I chose His way, and I am free. When we all play a Christians' role, then we win, however high our goal. — Glenn A. Gallagher (First American Serial Rights Only)

Out of the Living Past—The Negro

by MARION E. HOCKENHULL

The truth about the ancient gods can never be hid, regardless of how many pictures are being shown portraying the lives and customs of the Ethiopian people by other races.

The ancient African Pharaohs and the Ethiopian queens who were called Candaces—saw to that by their jealousy and selfishness. First, no one could be a Pharaoh or Candace unless he or she belonged to the black race. They themselves were referred to as gods and goddesses.

To represent divine royalty one had to be black. The African national colors are: red, blue and black.

Most Powerful

In one of the great tombs of one of the royal families, to the left of Horus, seated back-to-back with Ra upon a similar throne, sits Amen-Ra and all of the Egyptian gods. He is the most powerful—with his blue-black complexion; his corslet of golden chain armour; his head-dress of red, blue and black plumes.

This Amen-Ra of the blue-black complexion is the most ancient type of this god. He represents divine royalty in which character his title is: "Lord of heaven, of the earth, of the waters, and of the mountains."

Yankees Waiting For Indiana To Fold

New York. — (CNS) — The New York Yankees save every confidence they will make it six pennants in a row if the Indians will only cooperate and the rest of the league, too. They expect any moment that the Indians will stumble, ride into some rough weather and the Yankees can come sailing through.

Says their mastermind Casey Stengel: "They don't have it wrapped up yet. They just think they have. Don't forget they haven't had a slump all season. But if we can beat them again and keep the pressure on them, we might scare them into one."

The Yankees are planning to win all of theirs. "We can't afford to lose any more," as Stengel puts it. Meanwhile, they are expecting the Chicago White Sox to cooperate with them for the pennant push by slowing down the Indians.

their likeness, even a million years to come.

Solomon Sang of His Color The Ethiopian King Solomon sang of his complexion in the Songs of Solomon in the fifth verse: "I am black, but comely, O ye daughters of Jerusalem, as the tents of Kedar, as the curtains of Solomon." He also spoke of tending the sheep in the sun, so there could be no mistake as to what he meant. Solomon had jet-black curtains hanging from his windows.

The Ethiopians thought the blacker they were the closer they were to God; as they considered the kisses from the sun were straight from God. Black was the most outstanding color. The black-bull Apis (a-pis) was venerated as the incarnation of Ptah, the local god of Memphis, and after it death was embalmed and kept in a vault, while a new born black calf was chosen to be the new Apis.

The Chaldeans

An ancient African tribe known as Chaldean was among the first rulers of Babylon, first called Jerusalem. Hummurabi (ham-oo-ra-be) made Babylon his capital extending it to the Mediterranean. And he, too, received his laws from the Sun-God.
