Jackie May Not Go—Hints Brooklyn Prexy

Brooklyn, N. Y.—(CNS)—They've had Jackie Robinson signed, sealed, and delivered to any number of clubs in the past few weeks but the latest is that Jackie might not leave at all.

According to Walter O'Malley, president of the Dodgers and the one who's been getting most of the blame for the failure of the team this year, "I would like to have 24 other Robinsons on the club." Then when pressed further if he would trade Jack or not because of his recent pop-offs, O'Malley replied: "Robinson is an expert at the art of sending up trial balloons and sometimes he says things he later regrets."

That leaves you still guessing as to the disposition of Robbie but it is not as definite as many would have you believe.

Governor Beardsley Proclaims 'First Aid Week in Iowa' Oct. 4-10

Governor William S. Beardsley issued a proclamation designating the week of October 4 to 10 as "First Aid Week in Iowa."

In the proclamation Beardsley called on all residents of Iowa to join the nationwide campaign to protect their families against accidents by being prepared to deal with home accident emergencies and providing their homes with basic first-aid equipment.

Last year almost 10 million men, women and children were killed or disabled as a result of accidents, according to National Safety Council statistics.

Beardsley, in issuing the proclamation said, "Every Iowa citizen

Virginia Public School Conference Urges Quick Student-Teacher Action

Beckley, W. Va.—Public school desegregation "as soon as possible" and "not later than September, 1955" was called for here by delegates to the tenth annual conference of the West Virginia Conference of NAACP Branches.

A resolution on schools adopted by the assemblage further urged that teachers as well as students be included in integration action to comply with the Supreme Court decision which held segregated public schools to be unconstitutional.

Commenting on the school strike in White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., which resulted from school integration there, the delegates said in a statement:

"We deplore the un-American conduct of the protesting group of parents and students against integration in Greenbrier county schools and commended Negro parents for the manner in which they handled the difficult situation.

Within Rights

"Negro students were within their rights to register at white high schools and it is unfortunate that the board of education rescinded its order."

Conference delegates heard J. W. Robinson, assistant supervisor of in-

Mrs. Rush Finds Women in Turkey Now Independent; 'Cairo the Place to See'

BY MARIE ROSS

Cairo, Egypt, is a place that is just a beautiful as any place you would want to see," remarked Mrs. Gertrude E. Rush, Des Moines veteran attorney who returned recently from a tour to eleven countries of Europe and the Holy Land.

With a special interest in the Holy Land about which she is doing a series of writings, the Iowan said her main interest in Cairo was to see the wonders of the world, the Sphinx and the great pyramids, the tombs of the kings, which stand upon a sandy plateau below the city of Memphis, the Valley of the Kings, the isle where Moses was born.

"All of Cairo is strictly modern, but in other parts of Egypt, I was surprised to find that the inhabitants still build and live in their mudhuts in villages of ten or 20 persons. The homes reminded one of dog houses—no windows, just a fence around them; and the women there still were veiled, dressed in long black robes and they carried everything on their heads. Their children work, too, as there is no child labor law. Men and boys were building a highway at eighty cents per day.

No Rain in Egypt

"Egypt never has rain, but there are beautiful farms and gardens, green grass, trees, all kinds of vegecan contribute to his family's safety by preparing to deal with home accidents and emergencies properly. I therefore urge all citizens of our state to not only take note of the importance of first-aid practices, but to replenish their supplies with essential items commonly used in first-aid emergencies."

Oklahoma Makes First Move To Integrate Schools

Oklahoma City, Okla.—(CNS)—Oklahoma made its first move last week to integrate its schools. Its Legislative Council Committee on Education has approved a recommendation to the Legislature for a constitutional amendment to make it legal for the two races to go to school together. The Legislature, however, won't meet until January.

Oklahoma has had segregation since statehood. For it to be removed, it must be eliminated from the state constitution, and changes made in the financing of the schools. The committee's vote in favor of the changes was unanimous.

tables. Irrigation is from the Nile. "One thing there I didn't like was the milk," Mrs. Rush said as she told of her experience with buffalo milk served with her coffee. "I just didn't drink any more coffee."

From Cairo she went to Iraq, the country known formerly as Mesopotamia, freed from the Turks during the World War.

"That is where the Garden of Eden is located at the capital city Baghdad. The Arabs have ruined everything and there's nothing left but a few palm trees growing in the valleys of the Tigris and the Euphrates rivers.

"A primitive form of civilization exists. The natives sleep on the ground, cook outdoors, take clothing down to the river to wash, go in bare feet. I saw nothing modern out in the country. They have date, palm and olive trees.

"Not far from there was Basra, the landing place for our plane, and it was very modern, with large hotel, beautiful cars," Mrs. Rush talked.

Got Sick in Baghdad

"The old city of Baghdad was beautiful and modern but out from there you find the ruins of the time of Sinbad the Sailor, Arabian Nights. I drove 55 miles to Babylon in a 120-degree temperature. There was not a speck of shade and that is when I

Parole Board Chairman

Scovel Richardson

Washington, D. C.—Atty. Gen. Brownell Tuesday designated 52-year-old Scovel Richardson, first Negro member of the federal board of parole, as board chairman for the coming year.

Richardson, who resigned as dean of the school of law at Lincoln University, Jefferson City, Mo., last year to become a board member, succeeds as chairman Dr. Paul Tappan, of Danbury, Conn.

NAACP Will Put Specialists in Southern States

Baltimore, Md.—To desegregate the South's public schools as rapidly as possible the NAACP will within the next three weeks "place in the southern states at least four trained experienced educational specialists to work full-time with organized groups and individuals of both races" on school integration, it was announced here Sept. 19 by Thurgood Marshall, NAACP special counsel.

Mr. Marshall, who successfully argued the case for integrated public schools before the Supreme Court, opened the annual membership drive of the local NAACP branch at Sharp Street Memorial Methodist Church.

The civil rights attorney recalled the NAACP 1954 annual convention last June set September, 1955, as "the time limit within which we will seek (school) desegregation by ne-

Many Communities Have Taken Steps to Abide by School Integration Rule

New York—Resistance to school integration, as in Milford, Del., and White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., is the exception rather than the rule in communities which have taken steps to abide by the Supreme Court's anti-segregation ruling of May 17, Thurgood Marshall, special counsel of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, said here Sept. 23.

Mr. Marshall, who headed the battery of NAACP lawyers who argued the public school segregation cases before the Supreme Court last December, cited successful integration in Baltimore, Washington, St. Louis and other border state cities.

Gone Ahead

"In West Virginia 12 counties have gone ahead with complete integration and 13 others have initiated programs of partial integration," he said.

"Schools in Dover, Wilmington and other communities in Delaware have been integrated without incident. The flare-ups in White Sulphur Springs and Milford are spectacular only because they are the rare exceptions."

According to a report received by the NAACP attorney from Dr. J. Kenneth Morland, a noted white sociologist who made an on-the-spot investigation, the trouble in the West Virginia city stemmed from resentment of the fathers of some of the white boys on the football squad against the presence of two negotiation and without litigation."

He described all sections of the NAACP, local and national, as "determined to use every resource possible within the framework of our American government to get desegregation in public schools . . . without the necessity of continued and prolonged legal action."

He noted that "where local school boards refuse to negotiate in good faith and are determined to flaunt the law of the land . . . we have no doubt the Negroes involved will then be forced to seek redress in the courts as a last resort."

U. S. High Court Asked to Save Alabama Youth, 17 Sentenced to Die in Chair

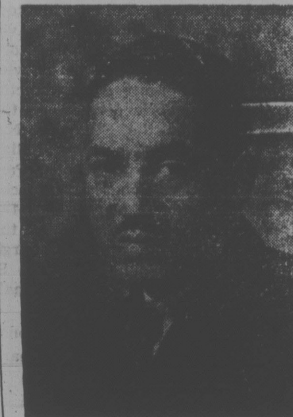

Washington, D. C.—The United States Supreme Court was asked last week to save the life of a 17-year-old Negro youth found guilty of rape and sentenced to die in the electric chair by an Alabama all-white jury.

Petition asking the United States Supreme Court to intervene in the case of Jeremiah Reeves, Jr., a little-educated, mentally unstable youth who was arrested and charged with the crime November 10, 1952, was filed by NAACP Legal Defense attorneys. They charge the lower court with depriving the youth of his constitutional rights and of systematically excluding Negroes from the jury.

Reeves was accused by a white woman who claimed she had been raped by an unknown assailant some 6 months before.

To State Penn

He was taken to the state penitentiary at Kilby, Alabama, held for 3 days and not permitted to see or consult with anyone. He was subjected to constant questioning in a room with an electric chair and told that if he did not confess to the crime, and also to 6 other crimes, he would be electrocuted. He was

Threats of violence in White Sulphur Springs were calmly met by Negroes who were prepared to defend their children. Dr. Morland told the story of an elderly Negro woman who reportedly loaded two guns, parked her car near the school, and openly vowed to shoot anyone

Potatoes A La Mom

Dad and your strenuous-playing, fast-growing brood announce a meal's not a meal without potatoes; and maybe you're sick of them the same old ways.

Tonight, how about concentrating your recipe prowess on the spuds, and serve simply with sliced cold meat. These potato cheese croquettes fill the bill to a T for something fillingly different, go with practically anything else you have on hand, and will make the whole family wonder where you've been hiding your talents for improvising.

They'll sit up and take notice on taste too, when you include Ac'cent* in the mixings. Ac'cent is the seasoning that points up subtle natural flavors, blends them together harmoniously for delectable enjoyment in the eating. Use it in all your meat and vegetable cooking for the best in good taste.

Potato Cheese Croquettes
2 cups cold (leftover) mashed potatoes
1 egg, beaten
1 cup grated Cheddar cheese
Break up potatoes. Beat egg in blender until frothy. Add potato pieces gradually, beating at medium speed until blended. Stir in cheese, salt and Ac'cent. Shape as desired. Dip into crumbs, then into milk, and again into crumbs. Fry in shallow hot fat until golden brown on all sides. Makes 4 to 6 servings.

Republican Women To Honor Eisenhower Appointees At Dinner

Washington, D. C.—National and local Republican Leaders and guests from many points will be present at the National Airport Terrace Dining Room, on Saturday, October 9, to hear Archibald J. Carey, Jr., first alternate delegate to the United Nations, Maxwell M. Rabb, associate counsel to the President, and cabinet secretary, Carmel Carrington Marr, area adviser to UN Ambassador Henry Cabot Lodge, Bertha S. Adkins, assistant to GOP Chairman Leonard Hall, and other Republican notables, at the Virginia White Speel Club's luncheon honoring appointees of the Eisenhower Administration.

Fifty Honorees

Officially named The Virginia White Speel Republican Women's Club of the District of Columbia, the club—open to all GOP supporters—is directing special effort to the advancement of Eisenhower policies in the Nation's Capital, and to applying its action and influence to general and minority problems.

Schedule Third Annual Gerontology Meet At SUI Oct. 11-12

Iowa City, Iowa—The State University of Iowa's Institute of Gerontology will hold its third annual conference Oct. 11 and 12, with authorities in several fields joining private citizens in a search for ways to make the life of today's older person more happy and more useful.

Dr. Steven Horvath, acting director of the institute and professor of physiology in the university's college of medicine, says the theme of this year's conference will be "In Your Own Back Yard." Much of the program will be devoted to sessions on how communities can try to meet their individual problems.

Dr. Nathan W. Shock, chief of the section of gerontology in the National Institutes of Health, will speak at a conference banquet. Other speakers include Dr. Woodrow Hunter from the Institute of Human Adjustment at the University of Michigan, and Sterling S. Winnans, director of recreation for California.

Dr. Horvath says he hopes that private citizens from all parts of Iowa whose work brings them into contact with older people or who are interested in the welfare of the aged will attend the meeting.

Growing Awareness

"The meeting manifests the growing awareness that Iowa—and the nation—must begin meeting the problems created by an increasing number of older people in our society," the physiologist says.

Horvath points to the jump from three million persons over 65 years of age in the United States in 1900 to an estimated 13 million in that age group today. In Iowa alone, there are some 270,000 citizens who have passed the 65-year mark.

Interest in their problems gained impetus in 1952, when state and national leaders attended SUI's first annual conference on gerontology to discuss health, social and economic problems of aging. The Iowa Institute of Gerontology was established shortly thereafter.

United Campaign

BY BILL HECKMAN

11-15-26-28-33-38—we're calling signals for the United Campaign of Greater Des Moines. Oct. 11, the women's division begins door-to-door solicitation of housewives, retired persons, and small residential business men and women. On the same date management and labor join hands to contact workers on the job.

Oct. 15? That's the traditional kickoff date, but there is nothing special scheduled for that day this year. The closing date of Des Moines' third is Oct. 26.

WHO'S IN? 28 Community chest groups, the Red Cross, Cancer Society, Kenny Polio Foundation, Mental Health, and the USO. That makes 33—a pretty big team, and an important one. And since some of the agencies provide several district kinds of service, there are actually 38 services in the UC.

THE GOAL? 1 million 3-4-7-7-3 dollars. That's 4% more than a year ago. And it compares with almost a 6% increase in community campaigns all over the country, according to our latest report.

4-0-3-9-1. That's the UC telephone at 615 Locust, second floor. It's the number to dial when you want information of any kind about UC and often too about any health, recreation, or welfare problem.

I'm not the only quarterback. One other I'd like to mention is Jim Duncan of the Drake Radio School. He calls the signals superbly in the new UC film "A Talk with Jim," which General Pictures made for us. The film runs about twelve minutes. And it's available for showing to

The fifty honorees—nine of them on foreign assignments—are from 21 states and the District of Columbia, and represent the North, Southwest, Pacific Coast, Midwest, West East and Border states.

Appointments range from Delegate to the United Nations, Little Cabinet member, and Virgin Island Governor, to Page Boy at the United States Supreme Court. Eight of the fifty appointees are women—three of them lawyers.

Officers of the club are Mrs. Ida Smith Taylor, who is completing her second term as president, Mrs. Isador Letcher, Mrs. Wilda Marshall and Mrs. Margaret Key Kelson, vice-presidents; Mrs. Marie Blake and Mrs. Beluah Murphy, recording and corresponding secretaries, and Mrs. Marion Westmoreland, financial secretary.

Mrs. Clara Calhoun and Mrs. Viola Martin are co-chairmen of the luncheon committee. Mrs. Constance Daniel is chairman of guests and invitations.

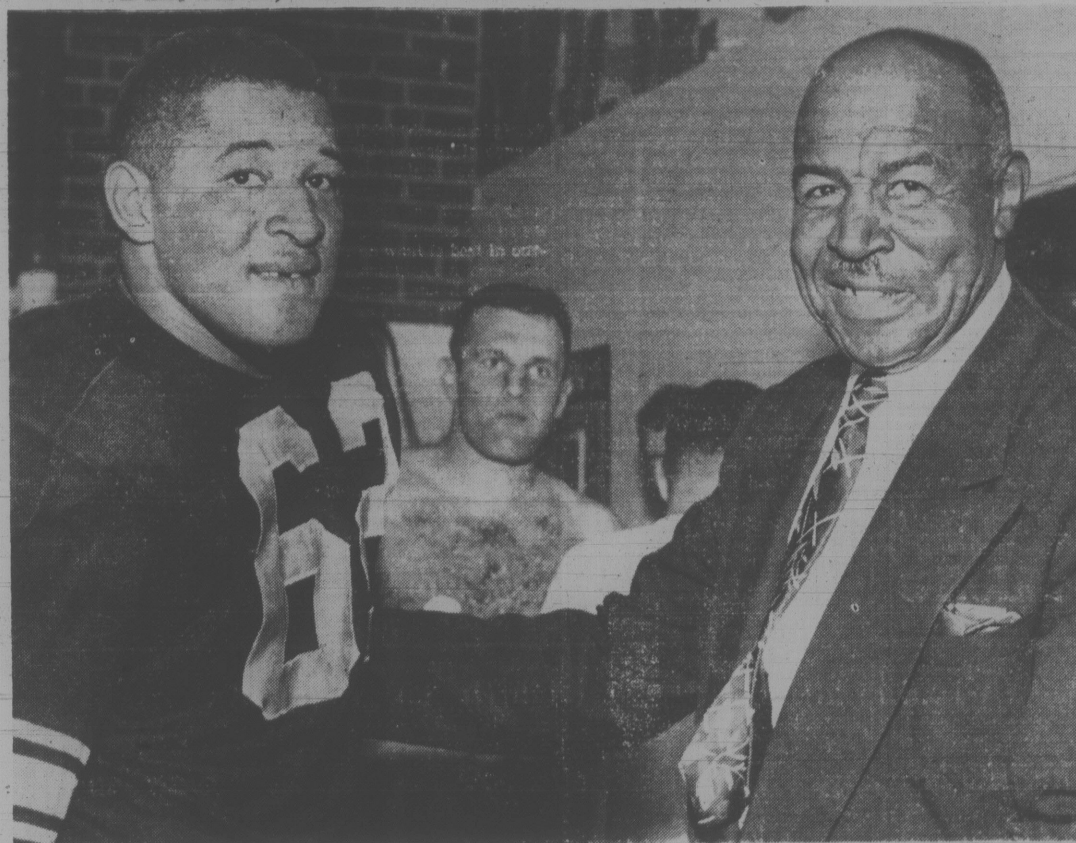

groups anywhere in the greater DM area. Operators, machine, and screen can be furnished if you wish. Phone that number (4-0391).

ONE MORE PLAY now before time out. Saturday, Oct. 9 is another important date to all those interested in UC. During the day, Boy Scouts, Girl Scouts and Camp Fire Girls will deliver fouders explaining this year's drive to all householders.

And in the evening there will be a United Campaign Variety Kickoff Show on WHO-TV featuring top artists of that station.

Those are a few of the plays of the UC team. It will be a good game.

Smarten Guest Towels With Crochet

GUEST towels are welcome shower or wedding gifts. With touches of handwork, they indicate thoughtfulness and special pleasure in giving. For a fine linen towel, a delicate edging crocheted of fine cotton makes a nice decoration. Heavier linen calls for thicker borders. And the rough texture of turkish toweling, is enhanced by crocheted flower motifs centered and sewed to the towel. Directions for making these guest towel decorations are available. Just send a stamped, self-addressed envelope to the Home Sewing Department of this newspaper, and ask for Leaflet No. 4044.

Reports On American Negro By South African Writer

New York—A famed writer and authority on inter-racial problems says that America, as opposed to his own country, is moving steadily away from segregation.

In the first of two articles in the current Collier's, Alan Paton, author of "Cry, the Beloved Country," writes that in his own country of South Africa people for and against segregation waited anxiously for the U. S. Supreme Court school ruling. They all wanted the same thing: to have America on their side.

Paton, on assignment from Collier's, recently completed an exhaustive trip across this country studying the question of "The Negro in America Today."

Starts in D. C.

Starting in Washington, he talked to J. Ernest Wilkins, the first Negro to hold sub-cabinet rank, who told him that the future for the Negro people in America was never "so full of hope." But Sen. John C. Stennis of Mississippi predicted that Negroes who wish to vote in his state would have a "very difficult assignment."

The South, Paton found, was "beyond question a different place from what it was when I last visited it." It was unforgettable, he records, to see white holdiers saluting a Negro officer or to see a Negro marine relieve a white marine or guard at a Naval base in South Carolina.

To S. C.

Paton interviewed Gov. Byrnes of South Carolina who justified segregation on the ground that nature had decreed different categories which were not to be mixed. Paton comments that the governor would like to "declare himself to be on the side of the angels—were he not afraid that the angels might be on the side of the Negroes."

More importantly, in Gov. Byrnes statement to him that South Carolina would not interfere with integration in colleges or on military posts, Paton sees that no one state will ultimately oppose the United States.

"No Christian," he continues, "can but rejoice in the way that the Churches have received the Supreme Court Decision." And integration of the armed forces, of workers and facilities in federal areas together with school integration represent a "tremendous victory in the war against segregation."

Note: Mr. Paton's second article in Collier's will deal with job and housing discrimination.

got sick from the heat. It felt like 150 degrees to me.

"Though sick I went to the Lion's Den, walked down Procession Street, saw the Hanging Gardens, Tower of Babylon, then motored back to Baghdad and had to have two doctors," the veteran lawyer revealed. After resting a couple of days in the hotel, she was able to continue her journey and from Baghdad went to the administrative center of Syria, the city called Damascus.

Traveled 'Straight' Street

In Damascus Mrs. Rush walked down the street called "Straight," where merchants were sitting down on the ground in little stalls.

"The cobblestone street was just wide enough for a car to travel it. On other streets our donkeys took up the whole street," Mrs. Rush compared. She went to the mosque to see the tomb of the head of John the Baptist; to Lebanon to the Temples of the Idle God, to the Cedars of Lebanon where she picked a few sprigs and brought them back as souvenirs; and to Mt. Herman where it snows the year round.

"Jericho is just like the Crusaders left it. The walls that fell down when Joshua was there are just rocks piled up. I was disappointed in the River Jordan. It isn't any larger than the Des Moines River. It had overflowed its banks when they wrote that song about the wide river Jordan.

"The bridge is a narrow wooden one. The Dead Sea is much smaller than it used to be. I put my hands in it this time. Nothing can sink in the Dead Sea and nothing can live in it—too much salt water. Little kids get out there and swim and play in it without any fear.

To Jerusalem

"I was through the city of Jerusalem, through the Temple. The Mosque of Omar stands on the grounds. I saw the Holy Sepulchre, Mt. Cavalry, In Bethlehem I went to the Mount of Olives, where Jesus taught the Disciples the Lord's Prayer; then down to Gethsemane, the foot of the mount, where Jesus prayed. I put my hands on the rocks and made my knowledge of the Bible more real.

50 acres where Ruth lived, is wheat. Not far was Rachel's tomb; the tomb of Mary is out from Jerusalem."

Mrs. Rush noted that "not all of the Arabs are Christians but they believe that Jesus was a good man and might have been the Son of God—and they don't want to take any chances—so these Arabs and the Crusaders have built up the Holy Lands some."

To Turkey

In Turkey, Mrs. Rush said she ran into a number of women lawyers in Istanbul where she visited the Saints of Sophia Cathedral, former palace of the King of Turkey. The women now are independent and educated and you can go any place there and speak English, which they learn in the university.

From Turkey the Iowan went to Madrid, Spain, where she stayed at Hotel Royal and on Sunday, refrained from going to the Bull fights.

"All of Madrid is modern. The ancient part of Spain, in Toledo, where I saw little boys working for five cents a day."

From Spain Mrs. Rush went to Lisbon, Portugal, where the climate never gets over eighty or below fifty; and half of the lawyers are women. That was the end of the line and I was ready to come back home."

One of the Iowan's pleasant memories of her trip was in Luxot, on the River Nile, in Egypt, where an Egyptian brought to her hotel every morning fresh flowers. "I slept in an old fashioned post bed with lace canopy and I thought I was a queen like Cleopatra."

Personal Touch

By MARIE ROSS

After Saturday evening, when the doors of one of Des Moines' first and oldest places of business closes, a city market, here will be no more.

The building located at Second and Locust streets, in recent years curtailed to the Growers' Market, will be torn down, brick by brick, to make way for a wide open space to park motor cars. Seems almost a sin for that to happen to such sturdy looking buildings as the two-story brick, and steel structure of the old market and the one-story brick and frame construction adjoining it.

Notice was given for the grower's market to be vacated by October 1, but time was extended two more days, to end this week, Saturday.

Now residents living in the Capital City of the nation's leading farm crop state, Iowa, will have no central place to go to get their home-grown vegetables, dairy products, and farm products, like other cities do. Neither, will the truck farmers in the rural areas around the Capital City and the country people on acreages who raise food products, have any central place to go to market their products, as other cities do. They will be forced to go back to huckstering, peddling food to stores, to compete with foodstuffs that are being shipped in from other states.

Market places in cities have been busy centers, vital to a community's existence. They were necessary in the beginning of time. They have served the public during the country's World Wars, during periods of food shortages, rationings, strikes, labor shortages; and they will continue to be needed as long as appetites crave home-grown foods.

Customers this week at the city market here have been saying, "goodbyes and market people have been reminiscing of the days when they first came to the Des Moines city market with their wagons filled with their farm products and, planning for the future."

Lincoln Unit To Meet October 5

Lincoln Unit will meet Tuesday, October 5, at the Post clubrooms, to make plans for the annual membership dinner on Thursday, Oct. 14.

Oldest of the market folk, Mrs. Katherine Newell of 2419 E. Fourteenth street, who celebrated her eighty-sixth birthday, eleven days ago on Sept. 19, came to city market forty-two years ago.

"It was an open market with just a pop over it and we huddled about stoves and wrapped in blankets to sell our wares. Farmers brought their products by horse-drawn wagons and parked all around the market which took up the whole end of this corner of this street," she recalled.

Asked what she would do now, Mrs. Newell said she plans to get some winter clothing done, and "get ready for old age."

"I expect I will be working before long," she added, informing that her nephew, W. I. Goode, has a big market on E. Fourteenth street.

Mr. and Mrs. F. A. Garland, 1224 E. Madison avenue, have operated a booth at the city market for 37 years. They first came to the market from their acreage in a mule-drawn wagon.

"We moved to the rural district of Des Moines to rear our three children and they had no time for juvenile delinquency," Mrs. Garland stated.

When she goes home this week end, she plans to get started on household duties. "I plan to clean my cupboards first, and entertain my children and grandchildren and do all of the other things I have not had time to do," Mrs. Garland said.

Thirty-seven years ago Mrs. Katherine McCormick, 77, of 1710 Evergreen, came to the market. She and her husband who has been dead 20 years, raised their food products on an acreage.

Now that the market is closing, she plans to keep house for her grandchildren.

Thirty-eight years ago Mr. and Mrs. Charles Pink, whose farm is in Runnells, Ia., began selling their products on the city market.

"It was our only way to support ourselves as my husband has been lame all of his life. He is 77 years old and we have reared three children," talked Mrs. Pink.

"We have our garden at home and we'll probably sell there."

Delinquency May Begin As Soon As a Child Must Manage His Own Moral Life Without Parents' Help

Two pictures recently appeared in the newspapers. They can tell us more than a book of sermons.

One picture showed a hapless, bewildered 17-year-old youth on his way to the penitentiary to serve a 50-year sentence. He had committed murder. His father is with him in the picture with his arm around him.

The other picture shows a youth of the same age in a stupor in a hospital, fighting for his life. He had been in a automobile wreck. His father sits by the bed, head bowed on the covers in grief.

"To Late" Each of these pictures could be titled "For Late." According to the newspapers, in the first case the boy had no family life. He had lived at

Easy To Love

When the child is three and cute it is easy to love him and care for him. When he is ten and a nuisance it is easy to send him out to play and get rid of him. A stack of comics and money for a movie are very comfortable ways to keep him quiet.

Delinquency does not always begin at adolescence, although that is when we hear most about it. Delinquency may begin at ten or before. It may begin as soon as a child must manage his own moral life without help from parents.

It is too late to worry about the adolescent when he has committed a crime. The time to be concerned is the day he is born.

REPRESENTATIVE POWELL
HAILS PRES. EISENHOWER

Every American should read the article "The President and the Negro" appearing in the October Reader's Digest written by Rep. Adam Clayton Powell, Jr., Democrat, from New York. He enlightens his readers on the things President Eisenhower has accomplished toward his determination that there be no second-class citizenship in America.

Rep. Powell, like many other Negroes, were apprehensive about the Negro's progress because candidate Eisenhower refused to commit himself to the passage of any legislation on civil rights. In fact he said, "I feared his election." But said Powell: "In less than two years in the White House President Eisenhower, without political trumpeting, has quietly started a revolution which, I firmly believe, means an era of greater promise for Negro citizens. Today I think I understand what the President believes, and why he believes it. I know now that he practices what he preaches."

"Our Chief Executive does not believe that civil rights are primarily the responsibility of the politician. He believes this issue a problem for every citizen and that, though personal leadership, by personal example, Americans can be counted on to follow, decent instincts without legislation. In an open letter to me in the early months of his administration, he made this declaration:...

"I shall continue to devote my earnest efforts to advance the spirit as well as the fact of equality. We shall not take a single backward step. There must be no second-class citizens in this country. To achieve our purpose we must work together and not be content until we have gained our goal." Said Mr. Eisenhower.

"These were fine words. The President has proved he means them."

And after all it is the sound view. Civil rights should not be a political issue for if we believe what we have placed in the Constitution and declarations pursuant thereto then each man should be accorded every right the law of the land guarantees him.

As Rep. Powell says, no President has done so much to eliminate second-class citizenship and all without fanfare. Certainly coming from one of the leading Negro Democrats, it is unusual reading for in spite of differences in politics he recognizes the truth and has not been too selfish to state it.

HAWKEYES OFF TO BRILLIANT START

The much talked about Hawkeye team had its first baptism of fire for the 1954 season against Michigan State College Saturday and came up with an impressive victory.

Followers of the Iowa University Football team were treated to two fine experiences last Saturday—experiences they won't forget soon.

During the half time Duke Slater and the late Nile Kinnick received their formal plaques in the football hall of fame presented by Dr. Virgil Hancher, president of the University. Both Duke and Nile's father were modest in their responses but like all great sports they say the job could not have been done without the help of the other fine men on the team.

Like the first game with any squad, several mistakes were made which experience usually level off. But both teams displayed unusual ability and training as only a well cracked versatile aggregation could put on.

Iowa is in for a great season this year and the fans will back them to the limit in their quest for a berth at the Rose Bowl on January 1st.

FIGHT FOR CIVIL RIGHTS MUST GO ON

There was time that what progress Negroes made could be found in Negro papers only except in a few instances. But today they come so thick and fast that seldom is a daily paper printed that does not carry news of new advances. They should be read carefully just as the Negro paper should be read for they carry history in the making.

These fast moving events have a tendency to lull a lot of people to sleep feeling that since the blessings are coming, they need do nothing but sit and wait for them to fall in their laps. Of course, this is false reasoning.

Armies win battles but they must consolidate their gains in order to hold them. Over the years, the NAACP and other organizations have fought desperately. They have accomplished much. But they cannot quit. They need continued support and help of all and particularly those who by experience and training are in a position to spearhead the movements for more advancement.

who laid a hand on her children, saying that she was old and did not have long to live anyhow.

Mr. Marshall deplored the amount of newspaper publicity given to the exceptional cases.

Big Story

"The big story," he said, "is that integration is being widely accepted in practically all the communities where it has been tried. The transition has been so smooth in Washington that the program of integration has been greatly accelerated."

"In Carthage, Mo., Negroes have been welcomed to the formerly all-white high school and two have been elected to class office. The trouble spots have unfortunately been magnified out of all proportion to their importance."

Mr. Marshall and his staff of lawyers are preparing to present the NAACP recommendations for the Supreme Court decrees at the hearing set for December 6. In ruling segregation unconstitutional on May 17, the Court called for further argument before handing down a decree on when and how to implement its decision against public school segregation.

Reeves was indicted on November 14 despite his continued plea of innocence.

Court Cleared

At the trial, which began November 26, the judge ordered the court cleared with the exception of witnesses and court officials. A motion by Reeves, attorney to have a public trial, as required by the federal law, was rejected by the judge. Two other motions made by Reeves' attorneys were also denied. One was to have the press and a private stenographer remain in the courtroom, and the other attacked the method of selection of the jury. Although 43.6% of the population in Montgomery County is Negro, a maximum of 6.5% of any jury panel was ever Negro. Often no Negroes appeared on juries at all. Jury commissioners selected jurors from among their own personal acquaintances.

President Tubman
Aids Opposition
Editor in Liberia

Washington—Tubman's great personal concern with the development of a strong, free press in Liberia is demonstrated in a recent incident when vandals broke into the premises of THE FRIEND, a newspaper critical of his Administration, and caused considerable destruction to type and press equipment.

Condemning the act and ordering the Department of Justice to take the necessary steps to apprehend the culprits, President Tubman authorized a $4,000 award to anyone instrumental in the apprehension of the felons.

In a personal note to the distressed editor, the President wrote: "If your printing press has been damaged to the extent that it cannot be used at the present time, I can place at your service, free of cost, one of the Government Printing Office presses to be used by you freely for civil, political or any other service within the law that you may desire, until you can have your press repaired or a new one purchased."

The devil is always busy. His influence must be combatted every time he raises his head.

HEALTH FOR ALL

NOSTALGIA

With the first leaves falling from the trees come the first attacks of seasonal nostalgia. The attacks seem to increase in frequency and intensity through October and normally come to an end with the first snow.

In children, nostalgia is usually simple homesickness that can come at any season if they are away from home. It is easily cured by returning-home. In adults, it is more serious since it takes the form of yearning not only for the real past but also for what "might have been." The symptoms closely resemble those of spring fever. The victim has difficulty giving attention to routine duties. He withdraws, when possible, into solitary brooding. Some cases exhibit severe melancholia.

Dead Leaves

Attacks often seem to be brought on by close association with dead leaves, as in raking or shuffling the feet through them. Contact with the smoke of burning leaves may seriously aggravate a mild attack of nostalgia.

A moderate amount of wistful brooding over the past is relatively harmless. It is only when the victim of nostalgia begins to mull over his own weaknesses—the shortcomings that have prevented him from fulfilling his youthful "dreams of glory"—that his health is really in danger. In this stage nostalgia can become genuinely incapacitating.

To safeguard our mental and emotional health, psychiatrists tell us we need to focus on what is best in ourselves. We must make a conscious effort to recognize and develop the best in our lives and in our personalities. The treatment for a case of seasonal nostalgia will vary with the individual. It may mean thorough fall house cleaning, an adult education course, a new hobby, or a new hat. In any case it calls for a change of emphasis from the negative to the positive.

Stearns proved his ability to crack the middle with the big boys and Calvin Jones and John Hall were in there rattling teeth with blocks and tackles. That's when Jones launched his campaign for All American honors in a big way. Eddie Vincent proved a tower of strength on defense knocking down several long ones. Then he did his share of ball lugging.

State had three fine performers in Eddie Bolden, who was so dangerous that nobody dared celebrate until the last whistle was blown, Ellis Duckett whose famed pass-catching was held to not much by Vincent; and the other guy, Lewis, who was great on defense. We were near the end zone and we could hear the blocks and tackles so you know they were playing this one for keeps.

This Iowa team in our estimation didn't play quite as well as they will later. They have possibilities and could go a long way. There will be enough written and said about that one for weeks to come, so all we need say is we were there.

North High School

North really lowered the boom on Dowling. Don't know how good North really is but will find out in a couple of games.

The Roosevelt team has from time to time turned in games that left a bad taste in the mouth. Wonder why with all their material those boys don't get wise and play a clean sportsmanlike game?

If we had a hat we would take it off to North's Franklin Irving and Bobby Shaftoe.

MIRRORS

There are halls of many mirrors that reflect the passing throng, vain one preening for the chase pursuing pleasures, wine and song, Empty minds thrive on excitement reckless, headlong, drunk with greed, None could face this mental mirror, fate has cursed their lust for speed. What a waste these heedless creatures, leave along their fouled-up way, maimed and soiled, diseased and dead loss and heartbreak mars each day. If there were some magic mirrors all must face each early morn, that would show what lurks within; all would pray to be reborn. To be reborn into His light, that shines so bright and clear; and to see what can be through eternity, how His love does conquer fear. The world could live in brotherhood, that's the only way to live, then all man's ills would disappear when he learned to live, to give, and to forgive.

Out of The Living
Past—The Negro

BY MARION E. HOCKENHULL

We have been visiting in Syria, and Damascus. But now we are saying goodbye to them; and, almost in the same breath, hello to Palestine and Jerusalem. They are just that close together, and, of course, in the continent of Africa.

Let us give you a brief idea as to how Palestine is dressed in the early spring. She usually throws over herself a cloak of wide flowers, sprink-

Palestine Divided

Palestine may be divided into three botanical provinces: the province of the "share-plain," the plants of which belong to the floral garden of Mediterranean basin. The other two we will name later.

Palestine, like Syria, was first called Aram in honor of an Ethiopian; the leader of an African tribe, and called the land of Canaan.

Palestine in Hebrew Peleseth—the Egyptians wrote it at Karnak as Pulusatu. The Greeks said that Palestine was a part of Syria. And they called it Philistine Syria.

But regardless of what it was called then or now, if one of the natives from there, kissed by the sun, were to come here he would sit in the same jimcrow cars with his Afro-American brothers. And his children would have some of the school doors closed in their faces, but—it is time to discuss Jerusalem.

First Called Jeru

Jerusalem was originally discovered by the descendants of Ham, and was first called Jeru, after the name of the leader of their tribe. A native of Jerusalem is called a Jebusite.

Jerusalem known to some as the "Holy City" to some as the "Fish Gate"—and to the world as one of the most famous cities of Africa.

About 3,800 years ago, Ethiopians ruled Jerusalem with an "iron hand". We shall pause here to clear up something which has caused much misunderstanding. In early Biblical days there were many black-skinned people converted to the Jewish religion. One of the Ethiopian Candace

Gun accidents are not confined to hunting grounds. Many shooting tragedies occur in places where they are not expected—in homes and automobiles.

They are always caused by idle guns that were not being used for shooting but which were kept loaded, anyway. To keep an idle, loaded gun in a home or automobile is a good way to sign someone's death warrant. Children in particular are attracted by guns, and every year there are pathetic newspaper stories about children, unlocked closets, and loaded guns. Every year there are other tragic reports about hunters who wanted to save some time by putting loaded guns in their cars. They saved a few seconds, but it cost their lives.

Guns have only one purpose: to kill. When they are not being used for hunting, it is criminal neglect to keep them loaded. At the end of a day's hunt, empty your gun's magazine and chamber and then take a second look to make sure. At home, keep guns and ammunition separate and locked away. Idle guns must be unloaded guns. There is no other safe way.
