UNITED STATES SUPREME COURT DECREE:

Denies 'Friends' Of Ala. NAACP

Keokuk Wins Ike Smalls Trophy

The Iowa Branches of the NAACP resolved to show by way of Little Rock—its pride in youth who have marched with honor toward equal opportunities in education.

The 18th annual conference which met in Burlington, Ia., Saturday and Sunday affirmed again its dedication to the democratic way of life and determination to gain the right and privileges constitutionally guaranteed all peoples as an integrated part of our democratic society.

Resolutions

Other resolutions adopted were: We pledge our endless support to the NAACP . . . in order that its program will be effective and uncompromisingly carried out in the state.

We are reminded that we are still faced with our even present list of glaring inequalities and costly discriminatory practices in areas of housing and employment . . . No real need will have been met until all peoples are fairly employed and properly housed.

Be it resolved that such a period in recognition of past laborers in the organization be a definite part of all future annual conferences.

Keokuk Wins

Keokuk was presented with the Ike Smalls Traveling trophy for tripling its membership. Mr. Smalls, Des Moines, Life membership chairman, presented a pin to Mayor Arthur Drebenstedt as a representative of a city "setting an example in race relations."

Negro Students With Good Grades Can Secure Jobs

"We make our own breaks," stated A. B. Musselman, co-ordinator of diversified occupations and apprentice training, at Des Moines Technical High School, in a speech at a dinner meeting Monday at the YWCA, Ninth and High Street.

Speaking on "Co-ordination in Employment," Mr. Musselman asserted, "Students are hired on records alone."

"Records at Tech are quite complete," and even though students of the minority group "must be above average," we have "no trouble placing him" if he has good good grades," he said.

In preparing a child for his vocation, he pointed out that motivation, preparation, and persistence are of prime importance.

"I believe if Negro boys knew they had to be above average they would work harder in school," Mr. Musselman said. "We do have areas where Negroes could apply."

When questioned about the statement during a discussion period, Mr. Musselman said Negroes can apply in "all areas."

Dr. Robert M. Johnson, chairman of the group, posed the question, "Is the Commission (Des Moines Inter-Racial) performing its functions as a clearing house for information and solution of problems for all minorities or is it 'reduplicating' the NAACP, thus, representing Negroes only?"

Group discussion of the question resulted in the appointment of industrial, and membership committees to be headed tentatively by Mrs. Leon S. Jones and Mrs. Dorothea Wertz, respectively.

Make Glantons 'Honorary Citizens' of Nashville

One of Des Moines' "adopted sons" and one of Murfreesboro, Tenn. "favorite," Atty. Luther T. Glanton Jr. and his wife Atty. Willa Glanton became "honorary citizens" of Nashville, Tenn., Friday Oct. 18.

The certificates of honor were presented by Ben West, the city's mayor, at a dinner given by the history department of Tennessee State University. Preceding the dinner, Atty. Glanton made the keynote address to the general session of the Middle Tennessee Teachers Association in Nashville.

Born in 1913 in Murfreesboro, Glanton is a graduate of Tennessee State University and Drake University School of Law. He took advanced studies at Northwestern University, Chicago, Ill., and La Sorbonne University, Paris, France.

After graduating from Drake he served as president of the Des Moines Pan-Hellenic council; Des Moines conference of the NAACP; State conference of the branches of the NAACP; and the Des Moines Chapter of ADA. Following admittance to the Iowa Bar in 1942 Glanton served five and one-half years as assistant county attorney for Polk County, a position Mrs. Glanton is holding presently.

Currently he is a member of the Des Moines Human Rights and Job Discrimination commission, Des Moines Area Council Commission on Interracial Fellowship, and the Governor's Committee for the United Nations.

Born in Hot Springs, Ark., Mrs. Glanton is also a graduate of TSU and Robert H. Terrell Law School, Washington, D.C. She was admitted to the state bar in 1952 and has held the position of Assistant Polk County attorney since July 1956.

Robinson Encourages Little Rock Children

New York, Seven of the nine Negro children of Little Rock, Ark., who braved the threats of a mob in their attempts to enter Little Rock's Central High School under federal court order received some encouraging words from Jackie Robinson last week.

The former baseball player and present national chairman of the NAACP's fund-raising campaign spoke to the seven children from this city by long distance telephone. Two children were ill and unable to participate in the conference call.

Speaking individually to the Little Rock children, Mr. Robinson praised their high courage in the face of the mob and told them of his sympathy with the hardships and fright they underwent before federal troops moved in to restore order in the mob-ridden town.

The conversation took place on Oct. 17. The children spoke from the home of Mrs. L. C. Bates, president of the Arkansas State NAACP. Two of the mothers also spoke to Mr. Robinson, who praised their refusal to give in to fears of what might happen to their children if they made the attempt to go to school.

Alabama Group Appeals $100,000 Fine Imposed Earlier by State Courts

Washington, D. C.—Seventeen organizations, seeking as friends of the court, to aid the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, in its fight with the State of Alabama, met with refusal, by the high tribunal, Monday.

In the initial state court battle, the state attorney general took action against the NAACP on the ground that it had failed to register with the state government, and had furnished legal help in racial segregation cases in that state.

$100,000 Fine

State courts enjoined the organization from conducting business or organizing, and eventually fined the NAACP $100,000 for failure to supply correspondence and membership lists.

for a hearing on a plea for a permanent writ. The court action is to prevent any acts that would damage the property of William J. Myers, first Negro resident there.

He said a car driven by James Edwin Pippin, 25, and one of the funeral procession collided at an intersection, triggering the incident. He estimated that 25 white and Negro men were involved.

Weight of Numbers

State state, through Atty. Gen. John Patterson, objected to what he called the "emotional and highly colored statements of opinions" in the brief filed by the organizations.

He said that the organizations were trying to influence the court through sheer "weight of numbers."

The supreme court ruled, in a brief order, dismissal of the request.

The brief was filed by: American Jewish Congress; American Baptist Convention; Commission on Christian Social Progress; American Civil Liberties Union; American Friends Service Committee; American Jewish Committee; American Veterans Committee; anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith; Board of Home Missions; Congregational and Christian Churches; Council for Christian Social Action; United Church of Christ; Japanese-American Citizens League; Jewish Labor Committee; National Community Relations Advisory Council; United Synagogues of America; and the Workers Defense League.

Mrs. Bates Tells 'Little Rock Story' in New York City

New York.—Mrs. L. C. Bates of Little Rock, Ark., state NAACP president and key figure in the controversy over school desegregation at Little Rock's Central High School, will address a public meeting here on Nov. 3.

Her "Report on Little Rock" will be the first such account of recent happenings in the Arkansas city to be given in the New York area.

Also scheduled to address the NAACP-sponsored meeting, to be held at Williams Institutional Church in Manhattan at 3:30 p.m., are Jackie Robinson, former baseball player and national chairman of the Association's 1957 fund-raising campaign, and Roy Wilkins, NAACP executive secretary.

National Board

In addition to her presidency of the Arkansas State NAACP, Mrs. Bates recently was elected to the Association's national Board of Directors.

It was she who first led the nine Negro school children to Central High School in Little Rock, in an attempt to protect them against possible mob violence, and then made the decision that the children should not return to the school site until they had been assured of bodily protection by President Eisenhower.

During the height of Little Rock's school disorders, before the President sent in federal troops to halt anti-Negro demonstrations at the high school, Mrs. Bates counseled the nine Negro children at her home and drove them to the school in her automobile.

Persecution

Because of her role as an integration leader in Little Rock and Arkansas, Mrs. Bates was subjected to persecution by persons who chose to remain anonymous. Burning cross-

Nine Negro Students Go From Home to School Alone; Faubus Reclaims Guardsmens

Little Rock, Ark.—For the first time in nearly six weeks, the nine Negro students attending Central High School went all the way from their homes to school Friday without military escort.

They arrived at the school separately and entered unnoticed by reporters. Previously they had been taken to and from the school in an army station wagon. Guarding them as they walked across the campus to the school entrance was discontinued a week ago.

Six Still on Guard

Army and school officials said then that if all goes well, the six soldiers still on guard inside the school may be pulled out, although troops would remain outside the building.

Meanwhile on the same day, Gov. Orval Faubus reversed a previous stand and said he was taking back under state control the 8,500 Arkansas National Guardsmen, who were released from federal service earlier in the week.

Claiming he took them back to prevent "jeopardizing the position of the Arkansas guardsmen," he demanded the immediate release of the 1,800 retained by the federal government.

Mediation?

Faubus, who previously has said that only the removal of the Negro students could end the crisis, revealed late last week that "certain moves" are being made which could result in the mediation of the federal-state deadlock.

How to Work With ICHS And Give Lonely Children Foster Homes, Loving Care

BY MRS. FRANCES HAWTHORNE

(This is the last in a series of three articles about the Iowa Children's Home Society, a private child-caring, child-placing agency).

Since 1888, the Iowa Children's Home Society, a private child-caring, child-placing agency, has given both temporary and permanent care for Iowa's children. Here again they have made no exclusions of races or sects. As in adoptions, Negro foster parents are a great need . . . because ICHS provides boarding care for needy children through foster homes in the community.

Unlike adoption cases, all foster home care is concentrated in Polk County because of the need for close supervision by ICHS caseworkers and supervisors.

Difference

"There is a distinct difference," Edward Harris, supervisor of foster home care, stated. "Boarding-care through foster homes rarely leads to adoptions. We have had cases where a child was liked so well they wanted to adopt it and we had to refuse because we had made previous plans with other couples for adoption of the child."

The most important requirement of foster parents is that they are expected to give a foster child all the love and care of a real family and home."

Foster homes are state-licensed at no cost to parents and the ICHS in turn is licensed. State regulations stipulate that only two children sleep in one room regardless of the room's size. However, the number of children allotted to one foster home depends on the size of the home and amount of emotional giving.

Reasons

ICHS pays foster parents $10 a week and provides clothing and medical supplies for the child. Foster parents provide a roof, food and loving care. Because foster homes are not permanent a child, unless adopted, may have many foster homes while growing up.

Like adoption cases also, children come to ICHS seeking foster home care because of divorces and deaths of parents, and court orders charging parental neglect. In addition to these reasons, some come because of long illnesses of parents. If the mother needs to be confined to a hospital for three or four months, she can place her children with ICHS and be assured they will be placed with good foster parents temporarily until she is well and able again. Cases from schools where the child is emotionally disturbed and gets involved in fights or chronic absenteeism, are referred to the agency for treatment and adjustment.

Treatment

Too, children who are emotionally disturbed and need temporary separation from parents, are usually placed in a residence hall maintained by ICHS. There they are able to gain a new perspective. These cases usually come for treatment to ICHS by direct reference from other agencies. No Negroes have been referred to the agency, the staff of supervisors said.

The Iowa Children's Home Society has high hopes of helping every child that is brought to them, but cannot unless they get community cooperation—through more adoptive parents and more foster homes. These are their urgent needs and primary concerns.

Personal Touch

By MARIE ROSS

The hunting season of the year—when thousands of Iowans go out into the fields in search of the elusive fowl, the pheasant, will be opening within a few days, and nothing, at that time is more important to some of the hunters.

Their guns, shells, heavy clothing, boots, lunch boxes, supplies of food, and cars—all are being readied for the annual shoot.

No matter how cold the weather, how deep the snow, how muddy the fields, how far the distance, man will climb the most rugged hills, sleep on the ground, endure hardships, walk miles and miles—all in the name of hunting and 'call it fun,' AME Bishop F. D. Jordan told an annual conference last month.

The men laughed—even though the bishop added that "when you ask some of these same persons to come a few blocks to do something for the church or attend a meeting, they will say: 'It is too much of a sacrifice.'"

Nevertheless, the hunting fever is on the rise—and soon the birds will be piling up in iceboxes and deep freezers—to be brought out for some special dinner or holiday meal.

I have heard some housewives say: "I don't know how to cook a pheasant."

The books say pheasant may be roasted and stuffed; or split down the back, placed on a gridiron, the inside down and broiled after covering with a baking tin and broiling slowly at first. Then served with cream gravy. First prepare the pheasant by cutting out shot, washing thoroughly but quickly, using baking soda in the water. Rub the bird lightly with garlic for seasoning. Of course, should the hunter return from the pheasant search with nothing but rabbits, here is a tasty rabbit recipe.

Broiled Rabbits

After skinning and cleaning the rabbit, wipe it dry, split down back lengthwise, pound flat, then wrap in tinfoil, well buttered. Place on buttered broiling pan, and broil, turning often. When sufficiently cooked remove foil, lay rabbit on hot platter,

After Halloween events, pumpkins can be seen around many homes, especially where there are children. Sometimes the housewives and mothers cook the pumpkins and put them away for the coming season of pumpkin pies.

In some homes, the Jack-O-Lantern is pitched into the trash or barbage with the clutter from the Halloween parties.

If you like pumpkin and want to keep some for the holiday pies, then you can dry it as well as can it. Here is a recipe.

Dried Pumpkin

"Prepare a large kettleful as for stewing. Let boil briskly until all the water has evaporated, then let boil slowly, stirring often until very dry, and beginning to brown slightly. Put on plates in a moderate oven to dry. Hang up in a closely-tied paper bag. When wanted for use, take a piece the size of an egg and put it in a quart of warm milk over night. It will be ready for use in the morning."

It was sometime in 1955 when the column ran a recipe on "Sweet Potato Candy" for the holidays. The recipe was sent by Mrs. Maseline Dorsey, R. 2, Box 375, Napoleonville, La., who at that time promised to follow up with her favorite "Sweet Potato Ice Cream."

Well, just this week, Mrs. Dorsey's recipe arrived—and now Mrs. Emanuel Davis, of 1115 Eleventh Street, who has been waiting for it, can get her freezer ready, for I am sure she is one who likes her ice cream the year-around.

Relatives From N. Y. Attend J. Bell Rites

Sgt. and Mrs. Stanley Johnson and son, Waynard, and Mrs. Dorothy White, of New York City, were in Des Moines last week to attend the funeral of John Bell, father of Mrs. Johnson and Mrs. White.

While here they stayed in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Hawkins, 1338 Freemont.

Dorsey, penned this note with her recipe:

"I am sorry I kept you waiting so long . . . I hope it is not too late because ice cream is good at all times."

Sweet Potato Ice Cream
1 cup boiled sweet potatoes strained and mashed; ¼ cup sugar; 2 egg whites; 1 cup milk; 1 teaspoon vanilla; ½ cup whipping cream; ½ cup toasted chopped pecans.

Add ¼ sugar to the mashed sweet potatoes; beat egg whites until stiff and add remaining sugar. Combine sweet potato mixture, egg white mixture, milk and vanilla. Freeze at high speed. When firm, beat, fold in whipped cream and nuts. Freeze again at lower speed.

"Believe me it is good," ended Mrs. Dorsey as she sent "love and best wishes."

A note About The Flu: At the city market the other day, a clerk remarked that: "People are buying red onions to beat the flu." I asked her how these people were using the red onions. She said: "One woman cuts up red onions and places dishes of the chopped onions in her window sills to keep the flu from coming into her home."

"Another woman chops her red onions, covers them with sugar and takes frequent tablespoonsful of the syrup to keep the flu from her body." Take your choice! Take a few onions on your hunting trips.

In Learning to Share Children Need Help in Distinguishing Group, Individual Ownership AN IOWA HOMEMAKER'S SPECIAL

Iowa City, Iowa.—"Perhaps your youngsters, like ours, have tried to bring home 'their' share of park benches—reasoning that if they belonged to everybody, they had a right to bring their share home," Professor Lloyd Lovell said in a talk to parents recently. He is an assistant professor at the State University of Iowa—Child Welfare Research Station.

"And probably you, too, found explaining why they couldn't be taken home was a little complicated," Professor Lovell continued.

Variety

Sharing may seem so simple to adults that they fail to realize the variety of rules that apply. We tell our children that they must share their sandbox, but they cannot share their toothbrush—that public property belongs to them but they cannot exercise their right of ownership to the extent of bringing a park bench home.

Learning to share begins, usually, with objects, Professor Lovell explains, but many other things are shared, too. Responsibility is often shared and so is reward. "As we help our children learn to share the concrete, we lay the foundations for their valuing the sharing of the more abstract," says Dr. Lovell.

Ownership

Sharing depends upon understanding of the complex concept of ownership. Parents must help children distinguish between group and individual ownership and the different conditions that govern each. They can help by making clear the

ATHLETICS SHOW THAT IT CAN BE DONE

When Wisconsin University football team played Iowa University on October 19, a Negro first string quarter back led the team in a brilliant direction of the team. He is an all around player and the crowd was quick to agree with the much heralded publicity which preceded him.

This represents tremendous progress in the Big Ten and other conferences for there are many living players today who remember the period when Negro players were assigned line positions only. Twenty years ago coaches began to realize that much of their talent was being wasted by the use of such a silly rule particularly when the backers of teams students, alumni and friends of a school wanted to win games and it made little difference who did the job.

And while Iowa has not had a Negro to play at first string quarter back, it has had two captains: Homer Harris and the late Cal Jones. Captains are elected by their team mates, so it can be seen what they thought of Harris and Jones by giving them the leadership of their teams.

Up to a few years ago, Negroes did not play basketball in the Big Ten. Indiana broke the ice, coming up with one of the finest players in Hoosier history.

Today, hardly a basketball team appears on a floor which does not include a Negro and they have given an excellent account of themselves.

Generally speaking, sports have provided an excellent opportunity for Negroes to demonstrate their ability to think as well as act in stiff competition. It has done much to create better racial relationships and serves notice on various areas of endeavor that men can play and compete together without harm to each other.

The University, athletes official and his team are to be congratulated upon their willingness to use their best talent where it counts the most, without regard to the color of a player's skin.

VOTERS SHOULD APPROVE
SOUTHSIDE POOL

The primary vote last week surprised a lot of people, the Bystander to be sure, for the ballot contained such a conglomeration of candidates that most people found it somewhat a job to separate the sheep from the goats.

But conditions drift along, some times until they can get no worse and it is then that the people wake up and very often come up with a good program.

Fortunately, that is what happened at the city primaries for all six candidates for councilman are individuals who will bring something to the city besides a chance for getting even with somebody—a situation which has existed for the past two years.

On the ballot for the election Tuesday is a proposal to build a swimming pool on South Des Moines.

Pools are now located in North, East and West sections of the city. Southside youngsters must travel considerable distance to enjoy these facilities. This, of course, violates the principle that recreational facilities should be placed in convenient spots for those who are to enjoy them.

True, a new pool will add a few mills to the tax dollar but the government is being called upon to provide additional services each year, most of which are desirable—at least the people vote for them. Projects such as this provide excellent supervised facilities for youngsters which should be encouraged wherever possible.

The voters should approve this project.

Mob Welcomes Satch
in Buenos Aires

Buenos Aires, Argentina—Trumpeter Louis (Satchmo) Armstrong arrived in Buenos Aires Monday night to an overwhelming welcome from a near-rioting crowd of Argentine fans.

Firemen turned hoses on the crowd before Armstrong attempted to leave the plan that brought him here with his band.

When the musicians came down the ramp the crowd broke through police and fire lines and almost forced Armstrong to the ground in the wild greeting.

"Somebody could have got hurt and if we get hurt we can't blow," said Armstrong.

Armstrong later told a news conference he thought the U. S. government could "put its foot down" to stop racial conflict in United States. "But you know the government is run by southerners," he added.

Moore, Spieser in Detroit Title Clash

Detroit Michigan.—Ageless pugilist, Archie Moore, will defend his light-heavyweight crown against slugging 28-year-old Chuck Spieser in scrap-hungry Detroit, January 1. Detroit hasn't had a championship tilt since the Ezzard Charles decision Jersey Joe Walcott in 15 rounds in 1951.

Moore and his co-managers Charlie Johnston and Doc Kearns have a choice between a $100,000 guarantee or 40 per cent of the net receipts, including TV money. Last April Spieser was knocked out by Tony Anthony in three rounds. Moore later fought Anthony and kayoed him in seven rounds.

Hurrah! Tech Wins
... Over East, 7-6

It seems that Thanksgiving and Christmas and New Year's and all the joyous celebrant times came in one tremendous package to Des Moines Tech in their 7-6 upset victory over favored Des Moines East last Friday night.

All around were heard some yells. . . students yelling for a victory that was seemingly sensed even before the game and even after the Scarlets' first half 6-0 lead.

And so it happened . . . the proud Engineers had become so inspired that after 10 previous meetings with East, sometimes suffering humiliating defeats (last seasons, 39-6 and in 1955, 63-7) they came back in the second half determined and ready to see that it would not happen again . . . for the eleventh time.

Larry Yarrington grabbed a loose football on Tech's 45 yard line to start the winning march down field in the third quarter.

Double Reverse

Extra good passing and driving advanced the Engineers to the Scarlets' 15-yard line. And then quarterback Wayne Shearer called the hazardous double reverse that completely fooled East, and the fleet, state 220-yard dash champion sailed into the end zone for the tying touchdown. Fullback John Reaver kicked the winning extra point.

Some say it was the flu bug that beat East, a fumble and so forth and so on. But it can also be rightfully assumed that:

Tech was on the gridiron
The gridiron was hot
She couldn't lose
For the stuff she's got . . .
Or, at least the stuff she had last Friday night.

HEALTH FOR ALL

What Would You Do?

You're leaving the hospital. The doctor says you're ok. He reminds you that you have to be careful and You've licked tuberculosis this time, but you don't want to go through it again.

Now, as you return to normal living, you would like to forget the whole thing. You tell yourself it's nobody's business but your own that you've had TB. Why advertise the fact? Some people with old fashioned notions about the disease may be afraid of you. Some employers may hesitate to hire you. It's been hard enough to take months out of your life for TB. Now you want to catch up on your living. You don't want to be hampered by the fact that some people you meet will have outworn superstitions about the disease.

Misinformation

So, will you try to conceal the fact that you've had TB? Then, how will you explain when you have to refuse some extra-heavy or overtime work, or when you have to break up the party early so you can get your proper rest? Or will you be a good sport? And risk another breakdown with TB?

What would you do? Well, there's one thing we can all do. We can make it unnecessary for TB patients ever to face such a question. We can help correct misinformation about TB. We can help spread the word that ex-TB patient is not a danger to others, that he's less likely to be spreading TB germs than the person who boasts of never seeing a doctor. We can give him the fair chance that is all he asks.

SPORTS

BY ALLEN ASHBY

We have argued for years that football is forty per cent spirit, thirty per cent ability and thirty per cent luck. Well, you could just about have seen all three elements decide games over the week-end. For instance, everyone knows about the Iowa game with Furlong of Iowa catching a pass that bounced off a defenders fingers for a TD pass. The wildcats had little else but hustle and fight to match Iowa's superior ability. So it took a lucky break to beat them.

The same situation prevailed at Oklahoma where the Sooners had their hands full with a team that matched them in determination and ability. So again the football gods smiled on Oklahoma and a much needed break comes to them again they win 14-13. People argue that a winning team makes its breaks, a theory that we disagree with. True a good team will get a break because they tried something but that isn't, in our book, making a break. In Iowa's case the teams passed but would you say the Hawkeye's made Fowler of Northwestern deflect that ball into an Iowa man's hands?

At Norman, Oklahoma the Sooners quick kicked but do you suppose that Oklahoma players threw the Colorado onto the loose ball so it would become a free ball and Oklahoma recovered?

Oh well, everyone is watching for the Michigan game and the guy who said Iowa didn't have a tough game until the Minnesota game is wondering why he said that.

High Schools

The absence of cheers at East High stadium last Friday night was caused by, we are sure, you know what now. One East sider went wobbling down east sixteenth street muttering: "I

THE MIND

THE MIND is like unto a field,
An untapped source of many things,
That feed the body and the soul;
From whence all our creation springs.
The mind's a storehouse, always full,
If guided, trained, and kept well-fed;
Files unnumbered gifts of lore, . . .
Inquiring and learning, thru lift til dead.

The mind remembers, both good and bad,

From news or books, from sea and sky, . . .

All that we hear, taste, feel and see, come a part of what we'll be . . .

The mind defines and plans the way,
To ease the job of daily living, . . .
And smooths the paths of every day;
By loving, helping, and forgiving.
Some minds are like a swamp, or bog, while others search for truth on high.

Some down in filth, live in a fog; . . .

And never look, up to the sky . . .
The countenance reflects the mind,
you learn to take a second look;
For lines denote what sort you find;
A face is read just like a book . . .

Shall we then summarize the facts,
Ancestral traits are left behind,
Each one is what they thing and act;
for each can train, direct, the mind.

Johnny Bright Gains
Record 1,501 Yards
For Canada Grid Team

Regina, Sask.—Johnny Bright, former Drake University great, has set a record 1,501 yards gained along the ground for the Edmonton Eskimos, a Canadian professional team.

Bright, powerful fullback, in compiling this amazing yardage has established the Canadian Western Football Conference individual rushing record for one season. The former record of 1,440 yards was set a year ago by one of Bright's teammates, Normie Kwong. There is a difference of 61 yards in the new and old records.

Globetrotter in N. Y.
Hospital for Checkup

New York City.—While Willie Gardner enjoys having a "complete rest", nurses enjoy the happy face in room 615 at St. Clare's Hospital. A smiling guy, Gardner's biggest laugh is the "small" 6 1/2 ft. bed which just isn't long enough. Being a Globetrotter star, the giant player who's just 24 years old, has only one worry: to get back and get on the team. He wants to play more than anything else. Meanwhile, he's being "mothered" by Abe Saperstein, owner of the famous team, who believes Gardner has the real makings of a star and one who'll do the Trotters proud.

Willie, unmarried, complains that too much laziness gets him. He feels it in the legs. "I've never been sick in my life" he says. His mother, Mrs. Versie Gardner, from Indianapolis, speaks to him on the phone to see how he's doing. He tells her he's lonesome and just wants to get back to work.

But word from the front office reveals Gardner may not be in the game this season—due to the squad work he's already missed. Doctors, who are checking him thoroughly, are looking for the cause of the fluctuation in the cardiographs.
