MISGUIDED ENERGY;
A WASTE IN U.S.

Governor Faubus of Arkansas was the speaker at Veterans day observance at New Orleans, La. Monday. Just why, even in the South, he would be chosen to speak on such an occasion is rather disappointing. A clause in the preamble to the constitution of the American Legion states that it propose to "maintain law and order".

Most veterans' organization take the same position.

"And in spite of the lofty declarations of policy, the service men of New Orleans invite Gov. Faubus who qualifies as the number one citizen in the United States in the disregard of law and order. It simply shows that the principles they are supposed to be governed by are secondary to personal prejudices.

It would appear that in these days of uncertainty and confusion brought on by Sputniks and other world tensions, a speaker who brought a message of unity and strength to his hearers would have been much more preferable than one preaching disunity and disregard for law and order.

If these same people would quit using unlimited time, money and energy trying to keep the Negro down and from enjoying the rights which they themselves wrote into our constitution of the United States and use that same effort to cope with Russia, maybe the United States would have been the first to launch a satellite.

THE DES MOINES TRANSIT COMPANY TROUBLES

The Des Moines Transit Company, like most city street car systems over the country, continues to encounter difficulties due to declining revenue month after month.

The management has proposed a twenty-five cent fare for grown ups and fifteen cents for children and/or some reduction in service which would bring income in line with operating costs. While this is desirable, the proposal would simply alienate more riders and friends for the company.

The city council is opposed to the plan. In the meantime, it offers no solution, but to investigate.

The contract with the union has expired and of course there is the proverbial proposal for an increase in wages. This would be feasible if the company is making expenses. But it seems that a company which is already losing money, would further add to operating losses by increasing wages.

The Bystander does not oppose increase in wages within reason although the constant bidding up of labor cost does add to the upping of the cost of living today which must stop somewhere.

Of course, if the Des Moines Transit Company can stand the increase, so well and good but the riding public should not be required to pay beyond what is a reasonable fare.

THE CITY ELECTION

Last week, voters in Des Moines elected three members to the city council. It was one of the most interesting elections in several years and the voters went to the polls in large numbers.

The Bystander has said on more than one occasion that good candidates and issues determined the number of voters at the polls on election day and that was demonstrated November 5th.

In the election of Chas. F. Iles, Reinhold Carlson and Florence T. Myers, the people's choice placed on the council officials who are interested in what's good for the whole city, rather than projects generally designed to array one group against the other and who have been interested in their personal aggrandizements.

The previous election brought many voters to a realization that they had not been exercising their privileges as citizens of the community.

HEALTH FOR ALL

NEW DISEASE NEEDED

We went to a "Western" at the local movie palace the other night. Wide screen, full color, and all the cliches we expect and couldn't do without. But we came away with an idea for a new disease. Hollywood needs one, and maybe we can make our fortune out of it.

Public Knowledge

The trouble with the old familiar diseases is that the public is getting too knowing about them. And when they catch one bad mistake they are likely to lose faith in the whole story. In this particular Western it was consumption — TB — the good old standby of drama. The hero had a pal who coughed all through the film — not that it interfered with his aim. This character lived dangerously — he was going to die any day, and he didn't want to die in bed. One day, it caught up with him: Big scene where he coughs out his lungs and collapses.

Honors Tennis Champ
At Hampton Institute

Hampton, Va.—William Monroe, National Intercollegiate Tennis Champion from Charlottesville, Va., was honored at special half-time ceremonies during the Hampton Institute homecoming game against Lincoln (Pa.) last week.

Monroe's win over Archille Petit of Houston-Tillotson College, Texas, at Central State College, Xenia, O. last summer, marked the first time the championship has been won by a Hamptonian. It is the fourth time in the 27-year history of the tennis matches the trophy has gone to a CIAA team.

SPORTS

BY ALLEN ASHBY

If you saw the Iowa-Minnesota game last week you reached about the same conclusion that most of us reached. Iowa has one heck of a ball club. We can recall that in the thirties we use to sit and watch the Minnesota football machines literally grind the hapless Hawks into the stadium dirt. If Iowa held the Gophers to thirty-five points the papers and Minnesota would praise the boys for their brilliant but losing battle. And sometimes it was just that. No matter how great the odds were Iowa seldom gave up. So Saturday we were thinking of those days as we watched Iowa roll over a good hard fighting Minnesota club by that rather one-sided score. Bob Blackley of the northerners takes his place along with Williams and Lewis of the Westerners, Mitchell of Illinois, Pace of Michigan and Clark of Ohio state. Don't know when there have been so many fine backs in the conference.

Iowa's Mike Hagler can run with any of them. The guy isn't really very big, but he gets the job done. Looks as if Drake went down to Wichita feeling they were going to

on the floor.
"Can't you see he's dying?", the girl says when his friend rushes in demanding his help in a shooting match with the bad guys. But he doesn't let his friend down. In a few minutes he's leaping over fences and dodging bullets. When it's all over, he feels better than ever.

Unusualness

TB is a disease with many unusual qualities. But even so, TB couldn't fit the pattern of that story. No known disease could. So we'll have to invent a new one for Hollywood, one that will call up sympathy for the hero but won't cut down on his riding, on that won't disfigure his beauty or waste his muscles, one that will linger long enough to keep the audience worried throughout the picture but can still be cured at the last minute. a jinx team and were right for an upset. Would like to see the Bulldogs in a Bowl game.

High School

It was East High and one plugging hard running half-back against the speed merchants of North High. Those kids of North are really fast. When Al Collier of North lit off down that side line we thought it was off to the races. See you at the Roosevelt game. Would like to have seen Tech in one more game.

East Waterloo's Jim Hooseman has proved to be just about the major offense. Hope he goes to some college. So many potential greats have passed up college.

Without regrets—the day is done, and softly, with the setting sun; the evening breeze—in its embrace, brings fragrance to caress the face. The gentle song of a sleepy bird—whose melody is faintly heard, invites the tired world to rest, to nestle close to mothers breast—And murmur soft—the evening prayer—the words of praise—to Him up there. Last week, voters in Des Moines elected three members to the city council. It was one of the most interesting elections in several years and the voters went to the polls in large numbers.

The Bystander has said on more than one occasion that good candidates and issues determined the number of voters at the polls on election day and that was demonstrated November 5th.

In the election of Chas. F. Iles, Reinhold Carlson and Florence T. Myers, the people's choice placed on the council officials who are interested in what's good for the whole city, rather than projects generally designed to array one group against the other and who have been interested in their personal aggrandizements.

The previous election brought many voters to a realization that they had not been exercising their privileges as citizens of the community.

CONGRATULATORY MESSAGES

In the issue of October 31st, the Bystander stated that congratulatory messages sent to James B. Morris on his 35th Anniversary as Editor of the Bystander would be published this week. In view of the large number received, it has been necessary to select a few and only excerpts from them.

HEALTH FOR ALL

NEW DISEASE NEEDED

We went to a "Western" at the local movie palace the other night. Wide screen, full color, and all the cliches we expect and couldn't do without. But we came away with an idea for a new disease. Hollywood needs one, and maybe we can make our fortune out of it.

Public Knowledge

The trouble with the old familiar diseases is that the public is getting too knowing about them. And when they catch one bad mistake they are likely to lose faith in the whole story. In this particular Western it was consumption — TB — the good old standby of drama. The hero had a pal who coughed all through the film — not that it interfered with his aim. This character lived dangerously — he was going to die any day, and he didn't want to die in bed. One day, it caught up with him: Big scene where he coughs out his lungs and collapses on the floor.

"Can't you see he's dying?", the girl says when his friend rushes in demanding his help in a shooting match with the bad guys. But he doesn't let his friend down. In a few minutes he's leaping over fences and dodging bullets. When it's all over, he feels better than ever.

Unusualness

TB is a disease with many unusual qualities. But even so, TB couldn't fit the pattern of that story. No known disease could. So we'll have to invent a new one for Hollywood, one that will call up sympathy for the hero but won't cut down on his riding, one that won't disfigure his beauty or waste his muscles, one that will linger long enough to keep the audience worried throughout the picture but can still be cured at the last minute. Honors Tennis Champ At Hampton Institute

Hampton, Va.—William Monroe, National Intercollegiate Tennis Champion from Charlottesville, Va., was honored at special half-time ceremonies during the Hampton Institute homecoming game against Lincoln (Pa.) last week.

Monroe's win over Archille Petit of Houston-Tillotson College, Texas, at Central State College, Xenia, O., last summer, marked the first time the championship has been won by a Hamptonian. It is the fourth time in the 27-year history of the tennis matches the trophy has gone to a CIAA team.

SPORTS

BY ALLEN ASHBY

If you saw the Iowa-Minnesota game last week, you reached about the same conclusion that most of us reached. Iowa has one heck of a ball club. We can recall that in the thirties we use to sit and watch the Minnesota football machines literally grind the hapless Hawks into the stadium dirt. If Iowa held the Gophers to thirty-five points the papers and Minnesota would praise the boys for their brilliant but losing battle. And sometimes it was just that. No matter how great the odds were Iowa seldom gave up. So Saturday we were thinking of those days as we watched Iowa roll over a good hard fighting Minnesota club by that rather one-sided score. Bob Blakley of the northerners takes his place along with Williams and Lewis of the Westerners, Mitchell of Illinois, Pace of Michigan and Clark of Ohio state. Don't know when there have been so many fine backs in the conference.

Iowa's Mike Hagler can run with any of them. The guy isn't really very big, but he gets the job done. Looks as if Drake went down to Wichita feeling they were going to

WITHOUT REGRETS

Without regrets—the day is done, and softly . . . with the setting sun; the evening breeze—in its embrace, brings fragrance to caress the face. The gentle song of a sleepy bird—whose melody is faintly heard, invites the tired world to rest, to nestle close to mothers breast. And murmur soft—the evening prayer—the words of praise—to Him up there. For Him we know, though we never met; has made this day, . . . without

ATTAINMENT

Attainment means the goal is reached that all the barriers have been breached. we've crossed the moats of violent stress; and climbed that craggy wall success. Attainment by sheer force of will—through jungles that can maim and kill, the hazards of the city streets; where danger stalks and death repeats.

Attainments of a mind defiant, from an unknown to a mental giant—to whom no thing's insoluble; no problem is impossible. Attainment of that supreme goal—serene mind and peace of soul. Acceptance of that master plan, designed for every thinking man.

crease of 89 yards on his total rushing gain (from 1,604 to 1,693), an increase of 84 yards on net gain (from 1,595 to 1,679) and extended his number of carries by 14 (from 245 to 259). All of these are conference records.

The old records were set by Bright's teammate, Normie Kwong, who had a total gain of 1,440 yards and a net of 1,437 yards and most carries of 241.

Kenny Washington, Jr. In Football Headlines

Los Angeles, Calif. Remember Kenny Washington, famed halfback of the U.C.L.A. football team twenty years ago? Well there is a new one around these days making new football headlines.

It is Kenny Washington, Jr., son of the older Kenny, a left-handed passing sensation who is the T-quarterback for Dorsey High School. Young Kenny was made prep of the week by the Mirror-News last week on the strength of his three touchdown passes that led to the 26-21 upset of Los Angeles High last week.

Washington, Jr., a 5-foot 10-inch, 170 pound junior is playing his first season at quarterback after putting in a year as fullback on the squad.

"Dad was the first to show me how to hold a football said Kenny, "and how to throw it. We often play catch out in the yard. He also tells me about all the mistakes I've made after each game. He's helped me a lot."

Young Kenny Washington Jr. doesn't know just where he will go to college but admits that he would like to go on the heels of his father to U.C.L.A.
