Bury Black Veteran In White Cemetery

FORT PIERCE, Fla.—Interment rites for Specialist 4 Pondexter E. Williams were scheduled for Saturday afternoon, Aug. 29, in the lily-white Hillcrest Memorial Gardens from which the soldier killed in Vietnam had previously been barred solely because of his race.

Responding to a suit filed in the U.S. District Court in Miami by attorneys for the slain serviceman's mother, Mrs. Mary Campbell, and by the NAACP, the U.S. Department of Justice and the American Civil Liberties Union, Judge William O. Mehrkens ordered the cemetery to permit the burial of Specialist Williams.

The cemetery had advertised a free burial plot for any "honorably discharged" Vietnam veterans. However, the cemetery management refused to honor this commitment on the ground that the plots had been sold with the understanding that only white bodies would be buried there. A white woman, Mrs. John Diehl, who owned plots in the cemetery, donated a gravesite, next to that of her infant grandson, for the body of the Negro soldier. The cemetery still refused to permit interment without a court order. Judge Mehrkens handed down his order on Aug. 27.

Julius Williams, NAACP director of veterans affairs, was designated to represent the Association at the burial rites.

Mr. Gordy said: "To see the smile on Joe's face when he learns how his friends throughout the nation, and particularly in Detroit, rallied to his side in his time of need, not just with sincere sentiments, but with dollars, is a vision which will be with me as long as I live."

Executive Directors of the Salute were Detroiters Rosa Owens and Josephine Winfrey.

Davis Should Not Accept School Post

A vacancy on the board of the Des Moines Independent School District will occur when its chairman, Dr. Robert Keck, leaves for a new post. He is one of the liberal members of the board and upon his resignation expressed a regret that the little change in conservative thinking was one of the unsolved problems he regretted to leave.

Some members had suggested a Negro for the post. They know several have been candidates in the past only to be defeated. They also know that school board candidates sort of run as a team, but so far no Negro has been on the team. Here would be an excellent chance to place a Negro in a favorable position but the antiquated thinkers did not have the guts to do so.

Negroes serve on school boards in many cities—North and South. They are just people like members of the Des Moines board, who have no outstanding records in business, finance or government administration. Davis, a former board member, was sought out "in advance" and asked to serve. They suggested Davis, an able lawyer, so as to stop a forceful campaign by the liberal forces.

Davis should not accept. He should not allow himself to become a cat's paw to block minorities and liberal forces and this is just what is happening.

We have supported the school board over the years from its biggest struggle to defeat the Ku Klux Klan in 1926 and 1928. Surely, it is time for the present board to move ahead like other communities and include a Negro member among its members.

We talk a lot about equal opportunity and upgrading minorities; many business men here have done just

Press Conference On Skilled Trade For Minorities

The Des Moines Area Construction Training Program Administrative Board will hold a press conference at 3:00 p.m., Thursday, September 3, 1970, at the National Motor Inn, 921 Sixth Avenue, Meeting Room #1.

The Board will announce "The Des Moines Plan," a skilled construction trades program designed to encourage minority group persons to enter the building trades.

Urban League Head Say "Unions Must Desegregate"

As Americans celebrate Labor Day, 1970, some thought must be given to the contribution the labor movement has made to social progress in this country and how the movement relates to the goals and needs of the seventies.

It is fashionable to emphasize the similarity of interests linking labor with the black population, and to call for a coalition of worker and black groups for mutual support in seeking to achieve social justice and equal opportunity. The AFL-CIO made a notable effort in cooperation with civil rights groups to support extension of the Voting Rights Act and to defeat the ascent to the Supreme Court of judges with questionable records on civil rights. Black people also applaud labor for its work in the area of minimum wages and national health insurance.

But if it is to help close the widening chasms of alienation in our political, social and economic fabric, the labor movement will have to progress from formal expression of high resolve to specific implementation on the job-sites of America. Nowhere is this more clearly visible today than in the construction industry, where an anticipated manpower shortage affords an ideal opportunity for entry of more blacks into the building trades. An apprenticeship recruitment drive in which the National Urban League cooperates with Federal Government and the AFL-CIO has placed several thousand minority youth in the crafts. But, in reality, this program has mainly served to highlight the fact that the process is too limited and slow to meet the black community's need for construction jobs.

With Labor Day, 1971, as a target date, the spotlighted Building Trades Department of the AFL-CIO must now find a way to effectuate through thousands of local craft unions its national policy of broadening minority participation in the skilled trades. If industrial and other unions follow this lead, Labor Day will have new significance for 25,000,000 Black Americans.

AFL-CIO Prexy Says "Rights Yes, Preference, No."

San Francisco, Calif.—Speaking Thursday before some 2,500 delegates to the convention of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America, George Meany said:

"We are going to do it with justice to all; we are not going to give preferred status."

"We want black boys trained to the same extent as any other members of the union."

Allowing a partially trained man to become a union member would be "defrauding him because unless he is qualified he can't make a living," Meany said.

"I am completely in accord with the standards of the skilled trades that they are not going to lower the standards in order to meet this problem."

The top brass of labor has taken the stand for years but local unions have ignored it. In recent months a few cracks have appeared here and they are shown by the construction companies and some labor unions.

D.C. Entrant Wins Miss Black America Title

Stephanie Clark of Washington, D.C. was selected as Miss Black America at the conclusion of a pageant at Madison Square Garden Friday night. She topped a group of 32 contestants.

Miss Clark, one of 11 children of a government worker and a sixth grade school teacher, demonstrated that she knew where it was at when she extemporaneously answered the question, "What would you do if your man stared at another woman?"

"My man would not look at another woman," Stephanie said firmly and without hesitation, "because I would always do the most important thing for him and that is uphold his pride. I will never compete with him and I will always walk beside him."

A solid five-five, 130 pounds, with dimensions of 34-22-36, Miss Clark, won the title over 31 other contestants.

Iowa's Entry is 19th
Iowa's representative in the contest was Bonnie Jean Franks, 19, of Des Moines.

The new Miss Black America wins $3,000 from Motown Records, a trip to Puerto Rico; a paid personal appearance tour, including a USO stint in Vietnam and Thailand; a new wardrobe and a gold and diamond bracelet.

Someone asked the soft-spoken Stephanie what she thought of women's liberation.

She didn't hesitate. "It doesn't concern a Black woman. She knows her man and she knows that he needs someone to help him with his pride. It doesn't concern us."

Inside Rhodesia

Bleed for Their Brides

by Justin V. J. Nyoka

SALISBURY, Rhodesia — I have just attended a wedding which has set me thinking about the dilemma the young African faces when he reaches marrying age. Although he himself may be highly educated and far removed from the tribal society, and indeed, this may apply to his prospective bride, he has to comply with some of the most trying of the African marriage customs.

What makes the situation complicated is the fact that the old customs and the new (Christian) now exist side by side.

The young man who got married recently is a first cousin, and so I was put into the picture all along the processes.

Brides

First, he was charged Lobola, which for lack of a better word, I will call "Bride Price." In fact, it is equivalent of the English system of dowry. In the African custom, however, it is the man who pays out to his parents-in-law.

Before the introduction of money of hard cash, the blacks in all Africa paid Lobola in cattle, and this varied from family to family and from tribe to tribe, some charging more and others, less.

Things have now changed, and the blacks in this country have changed their marriage customs to suit the times.

My cousin, Evans Matanda, was charged, what is today regarded as moderate "fees" for his bride. He was asked to pay about $200 in Lobola.

But that was not all.

There were "gifts" he had to purchase for his mother and father-in-law.

Whereas in the distant past these "gifts" consisted of, say, a hoe or an axe, today the position is different. For the father, one has to buy a complete outfit: shoes and socks, trousers, shirt, jacket, overcoat and hat, and underweaters.

A choosy father-in-law may even suggest the shop where the purchases are to be made.

For the mother-in-law, it is also a complete outfit: shoes, dress and petticoat, a head-scarf and a rug.

All this my cousin had to pay on top of the Lobola. He hates, and I sympathize with him, the idea of figuring out how much all this costs.

After all this had been paid, Evans thought he could now go ahead and prepare for a church wedding.

Wedding

On the eve of the wedding, he came to our house almost in tears. His in-laws were demanding more money in small amounts. There was 10 for the aunt, 15 for the mother-in-law and a similar amount for the father-in-law.

There were other things to be paid for.

I drove them to the Roman Catholic Church in Highfield Township here in Salisbury.

The bride would not come out of the car until the aunt had been given some more money. I did not care to find out how much because to be frank, I had become disgusted with the whole business. I was fed up to the teeth.

That afternoon there was a reception. A modern wedding ceremony by any standards. A couple of Evan's workers and their families and other white guests attended.

I suspect they didn't know that the bride had been bled much in cash before.

RESGE'S

One Stop Family Shopping and Savings. 7th & Walnut

he could get his bride.

I am not so much complaining about an African custom, as against the commercializing of such a custom.

What a number of money-minded black parents are doing is to literally "fine" those who have decided to marry their daughters.

The consequences of all this are serious and obvious. It could mean the planting of tension between the newlyweds, which may eventually lead to separation.

It also means that they start life with hardly any money, which may also lead to divorce.

After the wedding, I talked to some African career girls about the custom of Lobola, whether they wanted their parents to charge it or not, and whether they themselves would charge Lobola when they became parents.

They agreed that a "certain amount" of Lobola was necessary to maintain the "dignity" of a good African traditional custom.

They all agreed that some parents charge excessively.

The Lobola system among black people, not only of this country but of Africa as a whole, will go a long way before someone says: Enough, no more.

The system applies whether or not the girl has been educated under the sophistication of London or New York. When she comes back to Africa - to Rhodesia, to be more specific - fantastic sums of money will be demanded for her Lobola. The more educated, the more expensive.

Precautions for Labor Day Weekend

A weekend that brought death to 15 persons on Iowa roads prompted Public Safety Commissioner Jack M. Fulton to state: "If that many people can be killed during an ordinary two-day weekend, how many could perish during the upcoming three-day, 78-hour Labor Day weekend?"

The weekend that saw 15 persons dying in traffic crashes was that of August 23-24.

Fulton explained: "Observing the traffic laws involves driving within posted speed limits and no faster than conditions dictate, not driving at all after excessive drinking and obeying all traffic signs and markings."

In conclusion, he said: "In figuring travel time, we should allow for frequent rest stops. For the average person, ten minutes of rest for each two hours of driving is recommended. And, by all means, let us all use our cars' safety belts."

The Labor Day holiday period begins at 6:00 p.m., Friday, September 4 and ends at midnight Monday, September 7.

Department records show that the average Labor Day weekend during the five year period 1965-1969 brought deaths to 15 motorists. Last year, 11 persons were killed in traffic crashes over the 78 hour period but in 1966, 27 persons perished in Iowa highway collisions.

Waterloo Rights Commission Goals Are Outlined

William L. Mosley in his transition into the position as Executive Director of the Waterloo Commission on Human Rights, would like to convey some of the general objectives we will be striving to attain.

The objectives of the Commission will be:

1) To strive to eliminate the artificial barriers and controls which deny the American right to choose one's own home.

2) To seek first through education, persuasion and negotiation to wipe out discrimination in public accommodations such as hotels, restaurants, places of amusement, etc. Should these measures fail, employ whatever enforcement powers the ordinance provides.

3) To assist in the development of programs to assure that there is equality in educational facilities and programs and that they are provided for all children according to their potential and varying needs.

4) To implement programs with the Chief of Police to create a knowledgeable and meaningful understanding of the special sensitivities of the black community and other minority groups on the part of all police officers.

5) To stimulate the business and civic community to become actively involved in the social problems in general and the employment problems in particular that produce the wide gap between the majority and minority citizenry.

6) To develop ways of anticipating, preparing for and relieving community tensions arising from racial differences.

7) To act as an interpreter and conciliator in those instances where tensions erupt into social disturbances and offer recommendations to hasten the necessary social change which may deter the recurrence of upheaval.

We will be incorporating the above goals into an affirmative action program in which we will initiate activities to alleviate problems in the aforementioned areas. We will be contacting you in the not-too-distant future for your assistance in implementing our project.

We hope the long-range dividends from this affirmative action program will realize an equalization of social and economic benefits for all members of our community regardless of race, creed, color, national origin or religion.

Goodyear to Build Plant in Chicago

President Joseph-Desire Mobutu of the Democratic Republic of the Congo, and

Russell DeYoung, board chairman of The Goodyear Tire & Rubber Company,

AKRON, Ohio, Aug. 24—Plans for construction of a $16-million tire factory in the Congo were announced today by Russell DeYoung, board chairman of The Goodyear Tire & Rubber Company.

The tire factory, the first in the Congo, will be located in Kinshasa, capital of the Democratic Republic, and is scheduled to be in production within two years.

Establishment of the factory is in keeping with the Congo government's program for encouraging foreign investment in the Republic, according to DeYoung. The Goodyear project represents the largest foreign investment to date in consumer products manufacturing in the Congo, he added.

Confidence in the economic future of the Democratic Republic of the Congo and prospects for rapid increase in the use of motor vehicles in the burgeoning nation were among the factors influencing Goodyear's decision to build and operate the tire plant, according to DeYoung who met with the Republic's President Joseph-Desire Mobutu in New York, during discussions which led to today's announcement.

DeYoung added that tire retread materials, conveyor belting, hose and rubber industrial products may be manufactured by Goodyear in the Congo in the future. He said that Goodyear intends to purchase all of the new factory's natural rubber requirements from sources in the Congo.

Senator Walter F. LET THE BYSTANDER KNOW ABOUT YOUR VACATION

When his car was new, Carl checked its gas mileage every time he gave it a checkup. He thought it would continue to give the same mileage, so why bother?

He didn't pay much attention to changes in the car's performance either. If anyone had asked him, he would have said it was good as new.

He drove about the same distance every month, on the same roads, at the same speeds, and he bought his gas at the same service station once or twice a week.

Then he noticed that he was buying more gas at a time and having to stop at other stations to avoid running out. Finally he checked the mileage on a single tank of gas.

The result shocked him. The car was using nearly twice as much gas as it did when it was new.

The B.F. Goodrich service man who put the car back in new condition said Carl was lucky it hadn't stopped running altogether. Carl probably saved himself a towing bill by taking the car in for service as soon as he learned of its high gas consumption.

Few motorists realize that their gas and oil bills are a good check on the condition of their engines. An excessive increase in amount of gas or oil used per mile driven is a definite sign that something is wrong.

In Carl's case, the car was good as new after it got a new set of plugs, new points, new spark plug wires, a new air filter, a carburetor overhaul and a PCV valve cleaning. B.F. Goodrich service experts say few cars continue to run when this much work is needed. These are the repairs most often needed in a tuneup, however.

Other things to look for when your gas mileage drops are 1) too rich a fuel mixture, 2) transmission or clutch slippage, 3) brake drag, 4) gummed up smog equipment, 5) gas line or gas tank leakage, and 6) a stuck automatic choke.

If your car starts to use more oil than usual, it may be due to something as simple as a leak, or as serious as worn or scored rings. It may also be due to the common mistake of overfilling the engine with oil.

Many motorists overfill with oil because they fail to allow enough time for the oil to run back into the crankcase before they check the dipstick after the car has been running. In this case the dipstick will show "add oil" when there is already enough oil in the engine.

Too much oil can blow out seals and cause other serious trouble. Don't believe a low dipstick reading unless the engine has been off approximately ten minutes.

It's coffee time any time in our part of the country. Every housewife has her own brand and way of making coffee. Here are a couple of hints that prove most successful:

1. Use a clean coffee pot. Coffee has a thin film of oil, so add detergent to the hot water when you wash the pot. Be sure to rinse well.

2. Determine the measure you like and stick to it. Most people use one tablespoon of coffee for each cup.

3. Watch your timing when you percolate coffee. Six to eight minutes is about right.

4. Use only fresh water and fresh coffee.

Follow these ideas and you'll be the best maker of coffee in your area.

PICTURE PAM WALLACE, A JUNE '70 GRADUATE of Hoover High School began her college career this week at Iowa State where her present plan is to major in journalism. As you know, Pam was awarded a scholarship by that school's journalism department. College offers a second career for this young woman. She enjoyed a year and a half in the employee of KRNT. Here she served as a tour guide, part time receptionist and secretary in the Promotion Department. Guy Koenigsberger is the department's director. A fun assignment enjoyed by Pam was serving as one of the receptionists at KRNT State Fair CBS Film showings.

FOR PAM A MEMORABLE OCCASION was meeting "Cissy" of Family Affair—Kathy Garver in private life. Cissy was very gracious and meeting her was a real pleasure. A recent big event for any girl was Pam's selection by The Mary Brubaker Show for its presentation of "The New You." She had been longing to fill in as a substitute and finally her opportunity came—just as it comes in business for some lucky girl! The role called for a Monday and Tuesday appearance. On Monday Pam was introduced to Sal, the hairdresser. He discussed how he would style her hair and select her type makeup. On this same occasion Sal styled her hair: the hair was piled high with curls about her face and forehead. Then came the important day, Tuesday! Sal restyled her hair by adding an abbreviated fall. Her face was made up on this occasion, too. It was then that she appeared on television so that viewers could see the "The New You" which Sal's artistry had brought into being! Needless to say, like most girls and women, Pam was thrilled. I wondered about Pam's reactions might be to the new beauty secrets she may have discovered. As one would suspect in one so young, she prefers less of the makeup, without losing the extra touches learned. She is adopting her version of the new hair style. Smart girl! Pam, you recall, is the daughter of the Herman P. Wallaces—Herman and Dorothy.

UNPLANNED VACATIONS CAN BE GREAT FUN! 1970 is my second time around with this scheme. My three weeks in Estes Park were a result of tentative plans made definite in early July for July 29. My surprise illness placed me in the hospital for about two weeks earlier with only two days to spare before our departure date. Excluding needles, pills, those icky X-ray preparations, and some aches, swelling and the usual accompanying weakness, hospitalization could be worse. So with this attitude let's add the sick period to the vacation! Not bad! Not bad! Upon my return home on August 23, I found my better half packing to go to a Detroit, Michigan, church assembly; he and two very young church attendees. Since I wasn't in the planned group, let's just say I repacked a small suitcase and "hitchhiked" with the small party. The Hollander Motel run by "Chico" is our favorite home away from home in Detroit. We again found roomy quarters there; an easy drive to our church and not too far from friends.

ENROUTE AND ON OUR RETURN DRIVE my turn at the wheel of the nine passenger Dodge station wagon did not lessen my appreciation of the "sights" along the way. Confidently, driving a SAAB is much more pleasurable experience.

Here we next have a smile from two of our friends. "BOB WRIGHT CARS—YOUR KEY TO THE WRIGHT CAR" read a large sign just outside the city limits of Burns Harbor, Indiana. (Bob, just couldn't resist)

"WATCH OUR BEES MAKE HONEY IN GLASS HIVES" read another sign on the outskirts of Lansing. "THE CATS ARE FREE, THE DOGS ARE FREE, THE KIDS ARE FREE, THE PEOPLE XXX XXX" was still another fun line! (Or don't any of you folks like billboards, etc.!!)

DISCRIMINATION
CAN'T ALWAYS HIDE

The Iowa State Fair closed Saturday with a record breaking attendance. Among concessions at the fair was a stand which was selling chances on a trip to Minnesota. Young women were hired to work.

The Iowa Civil Rights Commission had a tip from one of these young women that they had been instructed to refrain from selling chances to Negroes. The manager denied that such instruction had been given. But no doubt he gave them hoping no Negro would win a trip to a place which he had planned to operate as a so-called de facto housing program.

These young women had no reason to have misquoted their instructions. On the other hand, they believed he was violating the law and were willing to help see that it was stopped. Which brings us to the often repeated statements that Negroes have a lot of friends in this world who believe in fair play.

GLORIFYING CRIMINALS
DOESN'T HELP THEM

It seems to be the style these days to criticize everything we have done in the past as wrong, inhuman, dirty, undesirable. The Polk County jail has fallen under this category for many months providing a chance to make a big to-do about alleged inhuman and unsanitary conditions.

The curtain falls in the pattern of a lot of people who guess that jails should be parlors providing daily baths, daily maid services, trained cooks and waiters to prepare and serve their food. Jails are just not that way. Neither are the occupants.

The Bystander editor writes this editorial from personal experience over the years. He has known the sheriffs and jailers personally, both Republican and Democrat. They have tried to do the best job possible and were appreciated by most of the men many of whom these officers have helped not only while in jail but also as they left in their effort to go straight.

Some investigators saw roaches, some saw dirty cells, some saw food served which they claimed unfit for human consumption.

Bug killing manufacturers do a big business among all classes of people. And we have seen bugs in a lot of places dubbed finer than jails. We have seen all classes of men in jail; some not emitting good odor, some disheveled from times some untidy, some of their rooms untidy.

But as a whole, the jail is not dirty, the food, while not of the strait type, the inmates get food which is wholesome and plentiful. After all, the jail is not a country club but a place to keep those who violate the law.

Then, too, the Bystander is disappointed that the Des Moines Human Rights Commission would go off on a tangent far out of its field and get in a hassle about the operation of a jail where there is much they can do toward helping to eliminate discrimination, to assure opportunities for minorities and help them get prepared to take advantage of the opportunities that are being offered.

The whole commotion simply helps the criminal feel that they are heroes and the public whom they have wronged is the culprit in society.

Expression's Origin

The expression, "two bits," comes from the days when the Spanish dollar was often used as currency in American colonies. When small change was needed, the dollar was cut, the coin could be divided into eight pieces, bits.

Revive 'Buck White'
With Touring Co.

Chicago— Mohammed Ali (better known to you as Cassius Clay) will star again in "Big Time Buck White", the Oscar Brown, Jr. musical version of the play which was the famous Off-Broadway success. Mr. Ali had appeared for a limited run in the play at the George Abbott Theatre on Broadway.

A national touring group will be seen in the play starting on the East Coast October 1st. It will also be seen in major colleges all over the country. The play will be produced by C. B. Atkins, well-known impresario, former husband of Sarah Vaughan and Mr. Ali's manager. C. B. Atkins is also negotiating for picture rights of other black plays and producing two other black plays in this city. "Big Time Buck White" will be booked through the office of Willard Alexander at 660 Madison Avenue in New York.

Featured in the cast will be Ted Lanza, Kirk Kirey, and Bodini who will play the role of Jive in the production. Bodini is a Muslim who collaborated with Mr. Ali in writing a series of poems and was specifically requested by Ali to be in the production.

Meanwhile, Mohammed Ali is slated to fight an exhibition in Atlanta on September 2nd, and has, in fact, intimated that he may be in some other fights during the course of his theatrical touring. "But that won't make any difference," Mr. Ali said. "Right after every fight I'll just catch a plane and fly back to my theatrical job."

SOCIAL SECURITY

QUESTION: I am presently receiving social security disability benefits. What should I do when I return to work and what will happen to my benefits?

ANSWER: You are required by law to inform the Social Security Administration if your condition improves or if you return to work. You may do this either by sending in the post-card form which will be given you for this purpose, by writing a letter, or by visiting your social security office. If at any time medical evidence shows that your condition has improved so much that you are no longer disabled, you will still receive benefits for a 3-month period of adjustment. This period includes the month in which your condition improves and 2 additional months. Benefits will then be stopped. If you return to work in spite of a severe condition, your benefits may continue to be paid during a trial work period of up to 9 months (not necessarily consecutive months). This will give you a chance to test your ability to work. If after 9 months it is decided that you are able to do substantial gainful work, your benefits will be paid for an adjustment period of 3 additional months.

FOOTBALL

As this gridiron season gets under way, a fellow asked us how much trouble were the black football players going to give their coaches. We told him we had no idea. Some of the demands by the blacks seem rather far fetched. Others seem reasonable. We don't know about the demand for a black assistant coach. If there is an opening, then we would guess the players have to press for a black coach, or at least they feel they do. But we aren't at all sure we would fire an assistant coach just to hire a black, if we were head coach.

LATEST FLAREUP

This latest flareup at Syracuse was handled by the head coach, and right or wrong, he made the decision as to who would or would not play for him. A fellow who has spent a lot of time around college campuses told us that black athletes are often subject to intense pressure ranging from arguments to threats by black militants to boycott or strike and come up with a list of demands. The argument that black players are being exploited could also apply to white players. Then, in the case of a star player such as Lew Alcindor, or Jim Brown we wonder who is exploiting whom. At the end of the term of college athletics there is a fat pro contract and a college education. Not bad for being exploited.

SAME PROBLEMS

Now we know that black athletes have just about the same problems that they have always had. For instance, not being accepted as one of the bunch in most cases, along with several others. But that, to our way of thinking, is part of the price one has to pay for what comes after. But there aren't very many problems that a hundred thousand dollar contract won't help a little. So we don't know, but if we were a star black athlete in college today, we wonder if we would put our future ahead of other considerations in college. Maybe the kids feel they are right, and are willing to make any sacrifice to prove it.

JIM KIRBY

And speaking of college athletics, we learned that Jim Kirby, who was some footballer and track man at North High, is expected to provide the punch that California State has been looking for. It seems that the Cal State boys are having rebuilding program going, and are expecting great things from Jim. If we get any report on how the kid does, we shall let you know.

CITY HIGH SCHOOLS

Here at home, we seem to have quite a scramble shaping up in our city high school football race. Some of the experts want to hand the city crown to Dowling again, but from what we hear, there could be a sleeper in the form of Tech. Those fellows are getting a lot of help and could surprise a lot of people. At North, they have hired a

Activities of the Iowa
Civil Rights Commission

The vigor with which discrimination exists and flourishes continues to overwhelm the Iowa Civil Rights Commission. Complaints continue to grow at an ever increasing rate. The average day brings at least five new complaints to the Commission. They are complaints in which individual persons have formally signed and filed with the Commission.

Yet time consuming acts of discrimination occur and continue within the organizations of state and local governments. One shining example of the most blatant, and yet subtle act of discrimination to occur recently occurred at the State Fair.

Often outside groups come into Iowa and circumvent Iowa law, much to the dismay of the Civil Rights Commission. Even more frustrating than the act itself is the fact that the Civil Rights Commission too often finds itself powerless to do anything about the discriminatory practices it finds.

The above was the position of the Civil Rights Commission in the case in point at the State Fair. Signed statements from employees conclusively established a discriminatory practice. Admissions by State Fair officials clearly eliminated all doubt. And yet the Commission fought helplessly to close this booth, but it was unable to obtain an injunction, issue one on its own, or get prompt service on the responsible people. The Commission, therefore, had to resort to appeals to state officials. The result was that information on the actions of the Commission became public. Officials of the state found themselves powerless. Apparently only one person had enough authority to order the act stopped or the booth closed. This same person had earlier ordered certain groups who wished to display peace literature to show only limited items. We do not question the need for regulations and enforcement of the regulations. We make no determination of the intent of the peace groups or the validity of what they chose to support. However, we do question the precautions taken by people in responsible positions who refuse to let the advocates of certain philosophies take part in State Fairs. The reason given for this action is that they violate State laws and represent threats to the government or that they advocate subversion of the government. Yet by that same authority fair officials permit a group from Hackensack, Minnesota to discriminate against the residents of this state in violation of state law, and on state property.

We acknowledge that state fair officials may not have been aware of the practice. But when informed they didn't kick anybody off of the fair grounds or close any booth.

We ask why not? We must, however, commend state fair employees who reported this discriminatory practice to the Civil Rights Commission. We also commend those who served as employees at the booth and refused to participate in the discriminatory policy established. It takes courage to support what you honestly believe is right even if it means losing your job or being subjected to ridicule. These employees deserve the support and applause of every Iowa citizen. We pledge more power to the people.

national championship. Now, we hear, they plan to branch out into other sports. Good luck and nice going, fellows. Do you know, we never thought of this bunch until one day we received a phone call from Jim Taylor who told us about his track team. We invited him to write a story about his team and we would be glad to run it. The offer still stands, even if it comes in at Thanksgiving or Christmas. Working, their babies. New findings about how the amazing organs of the human body function and develop are revolutionizing our lives. Your local tuberculosis and respiratory disease association does not have all the latest brain research on hand. But they do have important information about another remarkable organ, the lungs, and how they function. Get the facts from them.

Health for All

Mice exposed to enriched environments in early life develop bigger-than-usual brains. The same may be true for human infants.

At the University of California, Dr. David Krech tested the theory with two groups of rats. One was given "the best and most expensive supervised higher education available to any young rat." This group got plenty of attention and new learning experiences. A second group was more isolated.

After two months, both groups were sacrificed. The first group had brains with a heavier and thicker cortex, a better blood supply, larger cells, and more active enzymes.

Another pair of California researchers have found that infant mice have a greater supply of synapses—bridges connecting nerve impulses—if they are handled a great deal and exposed to all sorts of stimuli such as flashing lights and noises. The effects of early stimulation exert a strong influence on the rate of future learning and the so-called higher mental activities, including memory.

Experiments with human babies also show that they learn much faster if given early stimulation and experiences. Pretty soon all parents may be able to help shape better brains for
