SUPERIOR COURT JUDGE SAYS

Charges Dropped in Seale Case

N.Y. NAACP Demands Job Equality

Seeks Promotion and Back Pay Wages

For Fourteenth Amendment Violation

NEW YORK — The New York City Transit Authority and Local 100 of the Transport Workers Union of America are accused of "conspiratorial" racial discrimination in a suit filed, May 21, in the United States District Court for the southern district of New York by the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People on behalf of black and Puerto Rican employees of the authority.

Filing of the suit was announced at a news conference at NAACP headquarters by Roy Wilkins, executive director; Nathaniel R. Jones, general counsel; and Joseph Samuel Carnegie, chairman of the Rank and File Committee for a Democratic Union. The committee is composed primarily, but not exclusively, of Negro and Puerto Rican members of Local 100.

Defendants Named
Named as defendants are the NYCTA, the Metropolitan Transit Authority and William T. Ronan, chairman of both authorities; Local 100 of the TWU and its president, Daniel Gilmartin.

Plaintiffs in the suit are Edward Winn, Alfonso Tinsley, Frank Sass, Edward Perez, Esau Moore, Joe Martin, Fred Lee, Donald Humes, Andrew Huger, Anthony Figueroa, Leroy B. Carson and Alvin Atkins.

According to Carnegie, 75 per cent of the authority's operating personnel is Negro and Puerto Rican. Nevertheless, he charged, the overwhelming majority of the employees in the higher-paying machine shop jobs is white as the result of collusion between the authority and the union.

After 21 years and six months as a transit employee,

Carnegie retired last year and took over active leadership of the Rank and File Committee. For 18 years during his employment he was a member of the TWU.

The suit, regarded as one of the first major legal attacks charging job discrimination by a governmental agency, seeks a declaration of illegality, as a violation of the 14th Amendment, and injunctive relief against racial discrimination in employment as practiced by the transit authority and the union.

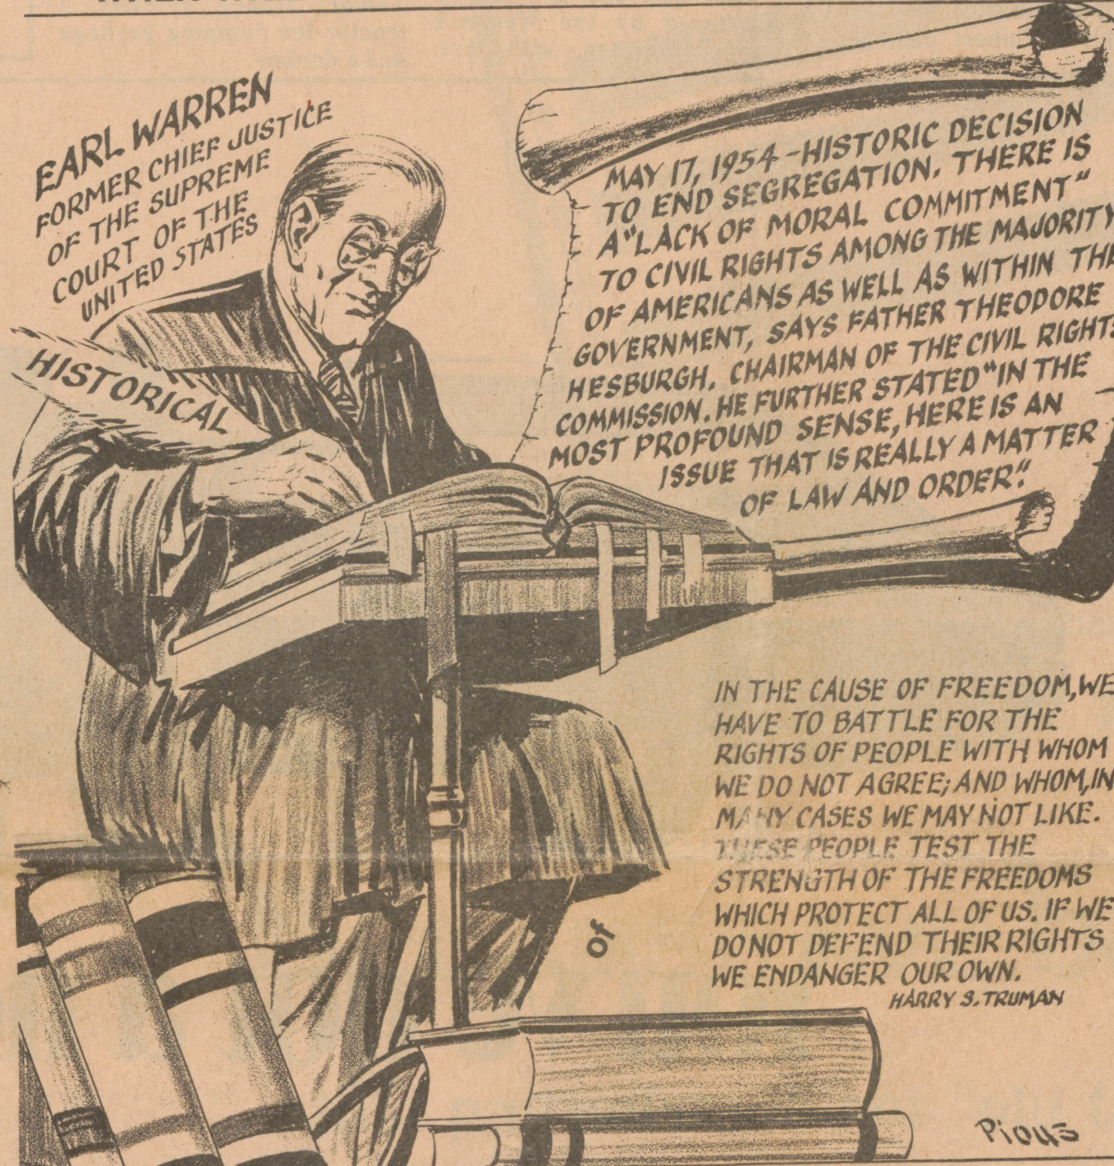

In addition, the complaint asks immediate promotion of the plaintiffs and "all others similarly situated," and back pay for wages lost because of "discriminatory hiring, assignment and promotional practices."

Practices Are Cited

A series of nine discriminatory practices is cited in the complaint. They include employment of white persons in positions without taking examinations required of Negroes and Puerto Ricans; classifying qualified Negroes and Spanish-surnamed applicants for the position of car maintainers as trainees while classifying less or equally qualified whites as car maintainers; paying white persons greater wages than Negroes or Puerto Ricans for identical work; and "the use of tests not professionally developed or validated to discriminate against Negro and Spanish-surnamed persons."

The complaint further charges that the NYCTA and Local 100 have conspired to establish and maintain a "walk-in" program whereby white maintenance men are hired directly in jobs for which non-white workers are never eligible.

Panthers to Church To Regain Black Favor

Black Panther members are moving back to the church, says cofounder Huey Newton in an effort to regain favor in the Black community.

Newton noted that the party was "wrong to think that it could change the police forces in the way we tried to do it. All we got was a war and a lot of bloodshed."

He remarked that "... we were going the wrong way, but I couldn't influence the central committee of the party."

Since there has been a change in the makeup and thinking of the party, Newton said, "We're going to the church and get involved in the church and the Black community."

Judge Is Humane Man With A Heart Says Defense Attorney Garry

Charges were dismissed Tuesday against Black Panther Chairman Bobby G. Seale and Ericka Huggins after a Superior Court judge concluded that massive publicity made it impossible to select another jury that would be impartial.

"The state has put its best foot forward in presenting its case against these defendants," said Judge Harold M. Mulvey.

"They have failed," he added, "to convince a jury of their guilt."

"With the massive publicity attendant upon the trial just completed, I find it impossible to believe that an unbiased jury could be selected without superhuman efforts which the court, the state and these defendants should not be called upon either to make or to endure."

Mulvey denied the request of the state's attorney to appeal the judge's decision to a higher state court.

Later the prosecutor said that neither Seale nor Mrs. Huggins could be reindicted.

Seale and Mrs. Huggins, a local Panther leader, were charged with capital crimes in the 1969 slaying of another Panther.

Mulvey's ruling brought cheers from some courtroom spectators.

Mrs. Huggins was freed immediately, and she was mobbed by Panther sympathizers as she left the courthouse.

Still in Custody
But Seale, who co-founded the Black Panther Party with Huey P. Newton in 1966, remains in custody, still facing a four-year contempt of court sentence stemming from the Chicago 8 conspiracy trial.

Seale's lawyers have appealed and have asked that bond be set.

James Thompson, assistant U.S. attorney in Chicago, said the government has until noon Thursday to file another brief if it objects to a motion that Seale be released on bond pending his appeal.

The government, in a brief filed last week, said it opposed Seale's appeal bond on the grounds that he was being tried on a capital charge in New Haven.

Thompson said he will confer with the Justice Department before answering the defense bond motion.

The trial that ended with a hung jury Monday had taken more than six months. Jury selection alone consumed four of those months.

Noting that 1,035 prospective jurors had been questioned before the panel of 12 finally was selected, the judge said the entire county jury list had been exhausted and that a new list of prospective jurors would not be chosen until September.

Mulvey also noted that Mrs. Huggins had been imprisoned for more than two years awaiting trial and Seale had been held in Connecticut for more than one year.

"Beautiful Sky!"

As Mrs. Huggins — widow of a slain California Panther leader — stepped out of the courtroom, tears streamed down her cheeks, and Panther sympathizers ran through the three-story building, crying, laughing and yelling.

"Oh, look at that beautiful sky!" she exclaimed as she reached the New Haven Green across the street.

Seale looked happy at the ruling. Later, he gave a clenched fist salute — as he has almost daily during the six-month trial — to some 200 supporters waiting outside the court building as state police escorted him to the car that took him to a state prison.

Seale and Mrs. Huggins were two of 14 blacks charged in connection with the May, 1969, slaying of Black Panther Alex Rackley. The state charged that Seale had ordered Rackley's execution because Rackley was a suspected police informer. Seale denied any complicity in the killing.

The Panther chairman and Mrs. Huggins were charged with kidnapping resulting in death, and aiding and abetting murder — both capital offenses — plus conspiracy to kidnap and to murder. In addition, Mrs. Huggins was charged with binding with criminal intent.

The defense attorneys moved Tuesday to dismiss the charges, arguing that to ask a prospective juror at a second trial to forget what he knew about the first trial would impose "an impossible burden" on the juror.

Cites Change

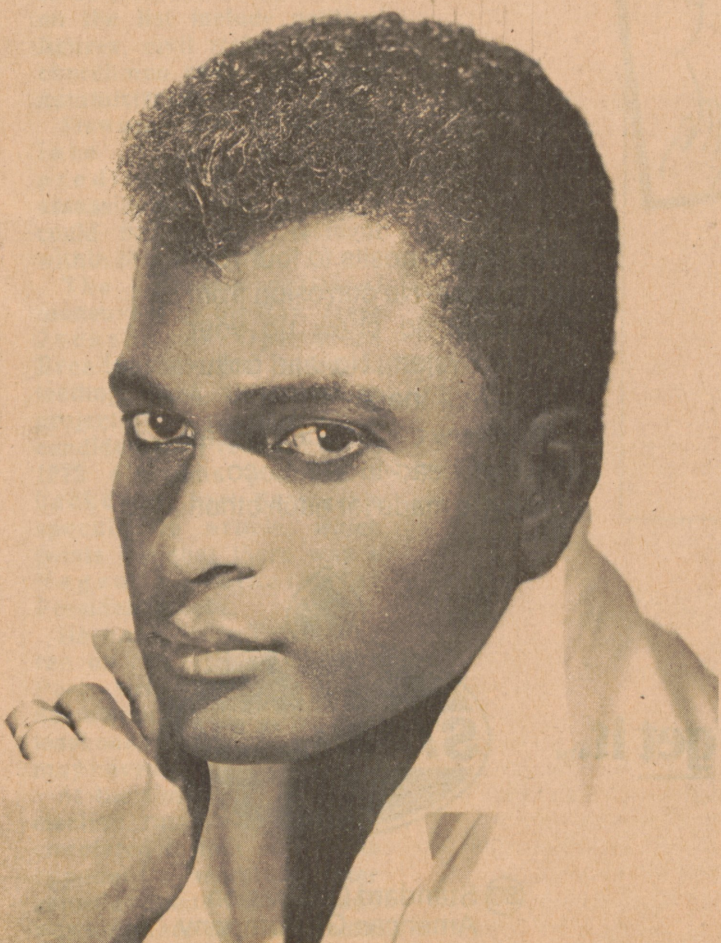

In his ruling, Judge Mulvey said, "I have observed a rather remarkable change in the attitude of these defendants during the time they have been before me, and I don't think it is feigned."

Seale's chief attorney, Charles R. Garry, praised the judge.

"I found Judge Mulvey to be humane and a man with a heart," Garry said.

"There were many times during the course of the trial when I agreed vehemently with his rulings, but... I find Judge Mulvey to be on a much higher level than most of the judges in the U.S., and I have respect for him and I have respect for his rulings. I say that without reservations."

Pride and Jackson 5 Here for State Fair

Charley Pride

Charley Pride, one of the top country music performers and the Jackson Five, one of Motown's top groups will appear this year at the Iowa State Fair.

Charley Pride has become one of RCA's biggest selling country artists through his many singles, which have been near or at the top of the C&W best-selling charts. Pride is a singer, a guitarist and a black performer. He is, in fact, the first Negro to be recognized as a major talent in the world of country music — and he remains one of the field's very few black performers.

The Jackson Five, led by 8-year-old Michael Jackson, turned professional about two years ago after they were introduced by Motown's Diana Ross.

Appearing with the Jackson Five and Charley Pride will be Glenn Campbell, Lucha Villa, The Ballet Azthar de Mexico, The Carpenters, Jody Miller, Lynn Anderson and Buck Owens and the musical stars of Hee Haw.

Sheriff Found Innocent In Macon Co. Beating

Negro Sheriff Lucius Amerson and his black chief deputy were acquitted by an all-white jury of the beating of a Negro prisoner after a jailhouse fight.

Amerson, 37, and Chief Deputy Richard Coleman, Jr., 27, were found innocent of violating the civil rights of prisoner Wilbert Dean Harris.

Harris complained of being beaten by the two officers after he surrendered following a shootout near the Macon County jail after being arrested on drunk driving charges.

Amerson, the first black sheriff in Alabama since Reconstruction Days, said after the trial that he felt the verdict from seven men and five women "indicated justice can prevail and did prevail."

Harris felt that there was no race involved in the trial and the absence of Negroes on the jury was an opportunity showing this.

Earlier, Amerson had blamed the indictment on what he called a "band of willful men who are obsessed with the idea that black people should not hold office in Macon County."

The two officers were indicted by a federal grand jury and the government contended they attacked the prisoner with the intent to inflict summary punishment.

However, as Harris was being booked, he pulled a gun and started firing at Amerson and his deputy. Defense attorneys argued that the two officers did nothing but defend themselves.

Dixie Schools More Integrated Than In North, Figures Show

The Supreme Court's decision that busing to end state-imposed segregation is constitutional has brought out the fact that government figures reveal southern schools to be "now more racially integrated than the North."

The information is contained in a special issue on education in the current (May 22) edition of the Saturday Review.

The Supreme Court decision of last April was seen by some as a rebuke to President Nixon, who had said only a month earlier that "busing beyond normal geographical school zones for the purpose of achieving racial balance will not be required."

While the Saturday Review article emphasizes that in parts of the South busing "has been widely used for the express purpose of maintaining segregation," it also points out that "39.6 per cent of Southern black children are in schools with a white majority, while only 27.8 per cent of Northern black pupils attend such schools."

The article suggests that Justice Burger's words on the subject apply as well to the North as to the South. Burger, as quoted by the magazine wrote of "a system that has been deliberately constructed and maintained to enforce racial segregation." The Justice also wrote, "All things being equal, with no history of discrimination, it might well be desirable to assign pupils to schools nearest their homes. But all things are not equal," in the integration of blacks with whites in schools.

The decision had at least one angry repercussion in the Senate, according to the article. On the Senate floor, Senator Abraham Ribicoff (D-Conn.), arguing for an amendment that would facilitate integration in the North, told one of his opponents, Sen. Jacob Javits (R-N.Y.), "I don't think you have the guts to face your liberal constituents who have moved to the suburbs to avoid sending their children to school with blacks."

First Black President--Who, When

Can a Negro be elected President of the United States?

In an article, "The First Black President of the U.S. — When and Who?" in the June issue of Sepia, writer Ted Stewart sizes up the prospects for a black American in the White House and lists 19 leading blacks who might be considered presidential timber.

Heading the list is Senator Edward W. Brooke, the independent Republican from Massachusetts and first black elected to the U.S. Senate since Reconstruction. Others on the list include political figures, civil rights leaders, churchmen and a university administrator.

Stewart points out that the late Robert Kennedy predicted before his assassination that a Negro could be elected President within 30 to 40 years.

The current political maneuvers by the Rev. Jesse Jackson of Operation Breadbasket and some 30 leading black politicians in projecting a possible black candidate for President in the 1972 elections provides a backdrop for Stewart's speculative article, which points out that there was a Negro candidate for President in 1904.

He was George Taylor who ran on the National Liberty Party ticket. Stewart in his Sepia article also notes that at least one President of the past may have had "Negro blood."

At the time he was up for election, rumors were widely circulated to that effect. His opponent's secretary later admitted openly that the issue was not made public because "What a terrible thing it would be for the country if it came out that we had a President alleged to be part Negro."

More than 99 per cent of the soot, ash and solid particulate matter emitted from Iowa Power and Light Company's generating plants in Des Moines and Council Bluffs will be eliminated by anti-pollution devices which will be installed over the next four years. Dwight H. Swanson, the Company's Chairman and President, announced today that Iowa Power had filed a plan with the Iowa Air Pollution Control Commission which calls for the installation of hot-gas, electrostatic-precipitators on the Company's major coal-burning generating units in Des Moines and Council Bluffs.

Costing some $7.3 million, the electrostatic-precipitators will replace mechanical precipitators on the major boilers and will be 99.3 per cent efficient in removing all particulates from emissions, Swanson said. The Company has asked for permission to continue present operating practices for other smaller units at the Des Moines plant. These are old units used primarily in the high-use summer period or in emergencies, and will continue to burn natural gas or oil for the most part. Swanson explained that gas and oil result in virtually no particulate emission.

Wilkins Speaks at School Decision Aniv.

PHOENIX, Ariz. — On the 17th anniversary of the Supreme Court's historic anti-segregation decision on May 17, 1954, Roy Wilkins, executive director of the NAACP, addressed 300 guests at the annual membership banquet of the local branch of the Association.
The civil rights leader condemned the inequities of the Phoenix system of appropriating school taxes whereby industries in predominantly Negro sections were exempted from taxation, thus causing the residents of the area to pay a larger share of the school tax.
In reviewing the long freedom fight waged by the NAACP, Mr. Wilkins recalled that the landmark decision in Brown vs. Board of Education was the culmination of years of work directed by Thurgood Marshall, then NAACP special counsel.

I never shall forget
What all you've done for me,
You were my Lily of the Valley
My calm on a stormy sea.
You were the shield in all my battles
My comfort when I was worn,
Then you were taken away from me
My loss I will always mourn.
But I never shall forget that you
Were put here on earth for me,
God meant you for my moth
And you shall always be.

To the people that he led
I have a dream, he said
A dream that every hill will be exalt
A dream that violence will be halt
A dream that mountains will be made low
A dream that block folk and white folk hand in hand will go
A dream that crooked places will be made straight
A dream that racial hatred we will eradicate

The very nature of his soul
To his people he would behold
Even though with conception, they would still insist
Please tell me, what manner of man is this

This gentle, kind and loving man
Who will be forever known throughout the land
Who was thrown in jail, often mistreated
Who was bombed and beaten, but never defeated
He was always innocent of their cruel deeds, but
He was always innocent of their cruel deeds, but
He kept on pressing, and continuing his pleas

With not just let my people go
But end these wars, he hated so
With not just, equality for the black of the land
But dignity and respect for every man

He was tired of violence
He was tired of shootings
He was tired of killings
He wanted peace
He wanted love
He wanted freedom fulfilling

The question came to say, as it left his way
How much should a human have to pay, before you call him a man
The answer bitterly said, not until you're dead
So Martin found his way to the Promise Land

Martin kept himself ready, by day and by night
Upholding his battle for freedom his fight

He would let nothing stand in his way
No man could make him stop
Until upon that blessed day
When he visited the mountaintop

Then, — Then he cried out world, I'm ready
If this is to pay the price for man
I am not afraid, I'm not worried about it
For I have seen the promised land

He tried to help somebody
He tried to feed the hungry
He tried to love somebody
He tried to serve humanity

Now the burden is on you
It really isn't necessarily hard
But be swift my countrymen, he said, act now
For mine eyes have seen the glory
Of the coming of the Lord

Oh Lord do let thy will be done
And if in my favor Lord
Let the old hymns be sung
My country tis of thee, of thee I sing
Oh thank God, let freedom ring
Free at last, Free at last
Thank God almighty we're Free at last.

Impact Of OEO Cited By Simms

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Harold R. Simms acting executive director of the National Urban League told a congressional committee last week that a failure to extend OEO legislation beyond the June 30th deadline would be an indication that the federal government has decided to default and "pull out of the war on poverty."

The statement was made in a testimony Wednesday, May 12, before the House Education and Labor Committee as he urged an extension of the Economic Opportunity Act, which is the sponsoring legislation for OEO programs, and which will expire on June 30th, unless Congress acts.

Declaring that OEO programs have had a tremendous and constructive impact on American life, especially poor Americans, Simms said the league is deeply concerned that unless the Economic Opportunity Act is extended beyond June 30th, the vital programs of OEO will cease to function.

"This must not happen," Simms said. "The results brought about by an abrupt end to OEO programs would be catastrophic for the government, the nation's poor, and the American citizenry in general," he added.

Mr. Simms said there continues to be a strong need for a separate, independent responsive and responsible anti-poverty agency whose sole responsibility is to deal with the problems of the poor.

Columbia Pictures Presents Film Preview to NNPA

Columbia Pictures will present a private preview of "The Anderson Tapes" for publishers and guests attending the 31st annual conference of the National Newspaper Publishers Association in Atlanta, June 16th.

"The Anderson Tapes" is a Robert M. Weisman production, based on the best-selling novel by Lawrence Sanders, which tells the dramatic story of the planning and execution of a million-dollar robbery of a luxury apartment on New York's fashionable upper East Side. Sidney Lumet directed the Columbia Pictures release on various locations in New York City.

Hosted In Previous Years
The National Newspaper Publishers Association (NNPA) has been hosted in previous years by Columbia Pictures at its meetings, as part of the entertainment of publishers, editors and their guests.

The NNPA is the trade association of the nation's black-oriented newspapers, and was founded in 1940 for the purpose of sharing ideas among publishers and to evaluate current trends and problems of the newspaper industry.

The motion picture selected to provide this year's entertainment is the story of a daring robbery by a team of robbers headed by Sean Connery who plays the role of Duke Anderson, the tough ex-con who masterminds and leads the team which includes actor Dick Williams.

Williams is a highly-regarded young stage director and actor who directed and played the title role in the play "Big Time Buck White."

Connery, who gained worldwide fame as James Bond, has beautiful actress Dyan Cannon as his mistress in this suspense drama. Academy Award-winner Martin Balsam plays a fragile interior decorator involved in the robbery, and humorist Alan King portrays a 1970-style Mafioso who finances and sanctions the caper.

Debut Film For Weisman
"The Anderson Tapes" marks the debut of Robert M. Weisman as an independent producer, having left his post as first vice-president in charge of Columbia Pictures studio production in order to enter independent production.

The screenplay by Frank Pierson was based on the book "The Anderson Tapes," which garnered critical acclaim and was a Book of the Month Club selection.

The music score is by Quincy Jones.

Here's a new wrinkle on how to look great when you get where you're going: Unpack the clothes you expect to wear first and hang them on the shower curtain rod over the bathtub. Then turn on the hot water and let the steam rise. Wrinkles will fall out after a half hour and natural fabrics will dry quickly and smoothly.

For traveling with a freer mind, the small premium for complete insurance on your luggage, clothes and personal possessions is a great investment.

'Black Frustrations Cost Millions'

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. — At the cost of millions of dollars in profits, most major corporations fail to create an atmosphere free of tension and insecurity for their black workers.

W. Victor Rouse, a Chicago business consultant, writing in the current issue of Indiana University's Business Horizons, says employees in white-owned and white-managed companies are producing at a level of quality and efficiency that is much lower than the level it is possible for them to achieve.

Operate Below Capacity
"In fact, black employees, from executives to those holding the most menial jobs, are operating an average of about 40 per cent of capacity," Rouse says.

A major reason for this situation Rouse believes, lies in the inability of white management to understand the often intense frustrations of their black employees, which makes it impossible for them to find satisfaction in their jobs.

This condition is not confined to blacks, however, he adds. Many white employees also are frustrated to a lesser degree. It has been estimated that both black and white employees, on the over-all average, operate at only 60 per cent of capacity.

"However, because the black's frustrations are more intense, his productivity is even lower than that of his white counterpart," Rouse says.

"The worker, probably on a subconscious basis, has recognized a basic truth about the psyche of the American business executive," he says.

Technology Over People

"It is this: Management is more interested in technology than it is in people. All one has to do is to look at the figures on the investment by management in computers, sophisticated machinery, and equipment, and, on the other hand, the absence of investment in people-related supervisory training."

What is needed, and soon, Rouse says, is a reassessment by white management of its position in relation to black workers.

"If the managers are honest, they will admit that the black employees of the company are not getting the same opportunities to advance and to improve their skills as whites performing the same tasks."

Black employees believe, with substantial justification, that they do not have real opportunities for growth, development, and, as a consequence, promotion, Rouse says. Many look upon their jobs as little more than day work.

"Their level of frustration is dangerously high," Rouse says. "In fact, firms and institutions that have policies — or lack of policies — which prevent black employees from advancing may expect some form of explosion unless some very real changes are made."

There are many good reasons today's modern family enjoys the benefits of an automatic dishwasher. If you're not convinced yet, you might be interested in a few facts:

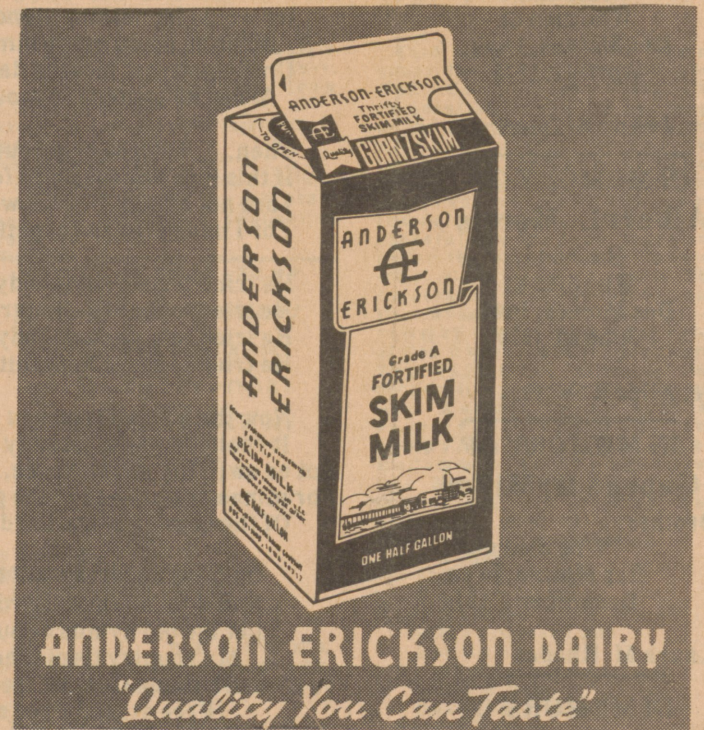

1. Automatic dishwashers save about an hour a day of Mom's time.
2. They get dishes cleaner. Dishwashers use water around 160 degrees — hotter than your hands could stand. They use extra-strong detergents, too.
3. Save on hot water by storing dishes in them after one meal and combining with another meal's dishes.
4. Cuts down on dish breakage.
5. Eliminates the dish towel. Dishwashers use sanitized hot air — helps stop the spread of germs.

Black Architect Designs $8.5 Million Va. Complex

In an important first for a black architect, Marion C. Thomas, A.I.A., has been commissioned to design an $8.5 million office-commercial complex in Rosslyn, Va., a suburb of Washington, D.C.

The complex, Rosslyn Metro Plaza, will be located at the proposed site of the first Virginia station in Washington's new subway system now under construction. Capital Investors Co. of Miami is sponsoring the project.

He has also worked with church and other community groups in an advisory capacity to plan urban renewal projects.

THE MONTH OF JUNE BRINGS TO MIND OUR GRADUATES! Each is urged to submit pictures and stories for publication in the edition displaying all of those having completed their educations in schools of all types. Those of you who have completed school in earlier months are included!

THE AMES INTERNATIONAL ORCHESTRA FESTIVAL held at the famed C.Y. Stephens Auditorium, Ames, Iowa, is the most exciting topic being discussed! Patterning after the New York Philharmonic Orchestra Festival of Concerts in which Eugene Ormandy and the Philadelphia Orchestra were presented, the Ames International Orchestra Festival Association was formed to bring to Iowa the Philadelphia Orchestra and other festivals made up of the world's most outstanding orchestras and conductors. Iowa State University and Columbia Artists Management, Inc. produced the festivals.

EUGENE ORMANDY, THE PHILADELPHIA ORCHESTRA'S music director heads the list of greats appearing at the C.Y. Stephens Auditorium.

VERONICA TYLER, SOPRANO, brought rave notices. The New York Times has said of her singing that she "lifted the night to a special height of enchantment. Singing of such taste and purity is rarely encountered in any opera house." Miss Tyler can be credited with having achieved the same for her Iowa audiences.

SETH MCCOY, TENOR, WON GREAT PRAISE. It is said that his soul is in his song. His listeners are made to feel his spirituality. McCoy made his Philadelphia Orchestra debut only last season in Handel's "Messiah" and was seen this year in Beethoven's "Fantasia", Haydn's "Lord Nelson Mass" and others. It is, therefore, an achievement for Iowa that we had the opportunity of hearing this fine artist.

SIMON ESTES, BASS - BARITONE, ranks among the highest internationally as well as nationally in the world of music. But of equal importance to Iowa listeners is that he is our very own artist, a native of Centerville. To those of Des Moines, he really belongs! His mother, Mrs. Ruth Estes, is a resident here. Estes attended the State University of Iowa, where he studied music, pre-med and sociology. For some of us, the Ames International Orchestra Festival was essentially "Simon Estes is being presented at the International Orchestra Festival!" (Forgiveable!)

JERRY WESTBY'S THOUGHTS ON HER TRIP TO SPAIN begin "Eight wonderful days in Spain followed a mere nine hours' flying time from the Des Moines Airport!" Looking back, she asks "How can one be disappointed with near perfection?" For example, she and her husband stood in their hotel lobby in a group of 250 people, as she nudged him saying, "Wait 'till you see what happens when they try to get us all to our rooms". Within five minutes we had the key to our suite and were following a lovely, long-legged senorita who guided us to our building". Being American, she was "not entirely convinced of this efficiency and so now worried about my luggage. After a handsome, suave Spanish gentleman admonished me to remain calm, our luggage arrived within half an hour after we did!" Jerry states the people are clean, honest and seemingly content with whatever life deals them. They are proud of their role in the discovery of the New World. I am actually humbled by these people — each of them a proud individual making the most of life — ruled by a dictator — well, perhaps, but I'm sure each person there follows the dictates of his own heart and mind!"

Modern Etiquette

By Roberta Lee

Q. I've been told that a bride is not supposed to take any active part in the rehearsal for her wedding. Is this true?

A. Not for reasons of propriety. It is only a custom of superstition that has always decreed that a bride sit on the sidelines observing, suggesting, or directing, while one of her good friends assumes the role of "bride" in the rehearsal.

Q. Certain people we know are always urging us to visit them "sometime" but never mention any specific date. How about this?

A. I know what you mean and feel as you probably do — that such invitations would appear more sincere if they were more definite.

Q. Does the mother of the bride remain in her pew after the party has gone up the aisle and wait for an usher to return and escort her out of the church?

A. Yes, this is the correct form.

Q. Is the napkin properly used at the dinner table before drinking from the water glass?

A. Yes. This is one of the napkin's important functions, the idea being that by wiping the lips you avoid the possibility of leaving an unsightly smudge on the edge of your drinking glass.

Q. What is the correct manner for me to introduce my stepfather to my friends, he of course having a different name from mine?

A. Introduce him as, "my stepfather, Mr. Jones."

Q. We are just in receipt of a wedding invitation with a metered stamp on the envelope. Am I right in thinking this in rather poor taste?

A. Yes...much too commercial looking for a wedding invitation.

Q. Just what is the proper way to remove a bone from the mouth at the table? Do you use the fork, the spoon, or the napkin?

A. None of your suggestions is correct. Use the thumb and forefinger, and lay the particle on your plate.

Q. When a boy phones me for a date, and I don't want to go out with him, should I soften my refusal by telling him I am already dated up for that evening?

A. If you don't really have a date for that evening, don't lie about it. Much better to say, "I'm very sorry, but I'll be busy" — which could mean anything from washing your hair to watching television.

Executive and Legislative Bodies Have Responsibilities

The Negro members of the house of representatives in Congress have been operating under a coalition. The movement is designed to use their vote and influence to secure for the Negro and the poor Americans a fair share of what the USA has to offer.

Recently, the group presented a series of demands to President Nixon asking for more welfare, better housing, more aid to Negro schools, a strong enforcement of the integration laws and many other changes.

The President has made a reply to their demands citing what his administration is already doing to correct some of the things about which they complain.

Senator Brooke (R) of Massachusetts does not appear in their literature. Their demands have been brash, demanding and certainly tinged with partisan politics charge that Mr. Nixon can correct all the evils of which they complain.

Three members appeared on the program "Meet the Press" Sunday. Diggs of Michigan, Hawkins of California and Clay of Missouri. Asked whether their demands had been made on the leadership of both parties in Congress, Diggs responded that they had. The Republican leadership he said had responded and fixed a date to reply and take up the demands. Mr. Diggs said "I'm sorry to report that neither Senator Mansfield (D) of Montana, the majority leader in the senate nor Rep. Boggs (D) of Louisiana, majority leader in the house had responded to our demands."

This, of course is not a partisan program and should be treated as such. These people are asking donations to carry on their work. They should not use the funds on a partisan basis.

On the other hand Congress both Republican and Democrat, needs prodding too and the leadership of the party in control to which members of the coalition belong, should be willing to hear and consider their demands. After all, Congress controls the purse string of the nation and should not hide behind weak leadership to duck their responsibility.

Foolish Attempt to Rule

There are 1,000 students at Simpson College in Indianola, Iowa, 28 of whom are Negroes. This small group has kept up a running battle with officials for months demanding more and more separate facilities.

The Campus Judiciary Council is composed of several members one of whom is a Negro and its chairman. Negro students seem to have no confidence that a Negro students can get a fair hearing before the council and are demanding that all complaints about any misconduct by Negroes be heard before an all Negro board. And this, in spite of the fact that these decisions are advisory only and in the final analysis the matter is decided by the president.

These students seem to have lost confidence in the administration of justice at Simpson and wish to take things in their own hands. And yet the school has gone a long way to satisfy their demands.

It seems that if the students have no confidence in the officials at Simpson, they should go to some other school. This attitude does no good. On the other hand, the school officials should continue to stand firm for a policy which makes all students subject to and abide by the same rules.

Have the Panthers Changed?

As a doctrine of their organization leaders of the Black Panther movement in America concluded that progress of the Negro in his civil and political rights had been too slow and that non-violent legalistic methods had failed to produce adequate, prompt results.

So, they chose the other route: shoot it out with the police, take by force what they wanted, shoot it out with the law.

Last week, Panther Huey P. Newton, defense minister, announced that the organization had changed its tactics. They concluded that confrontations with law officials, shooting it out, stealing and looting for what they wanted, murdering innocent people was not the way. These things frightened a lot of people and forced them into doing things in order to passify the mob. But that mob has only felt licensed to go further.

We hope Newton and his organization have changed. But time will tell whether their action square with spoken words of change today.

ON THE SPORTS SCENE

There is a rather interesting article in the current issue of Look Magazine entitled "Are Sports Harming Our Children?"

It should make good reading for about all parents who want to push their young athletes into various sports; such as little league baseball or football.

The article stresses the importance of winning which is placed on the games, often to the point of sacrificing the boy's well being or possible damage to him. Then, the fact that most of the coaches don't know much about the games they coach is brought out. These coaches want to be able to boast about their winning teams.

Why not Coach?

We once talked to a friend and asked him why, with all of his athletic know how, he wasn't coaching some little league teams in either baseball or football.

The fellow told us that he had always wanted to do just that, but he wanted to teach not so much the importance of winning, (although that was mighty important) but the fact that these games had lessons that would prepare the kids for life.

He got wound up on his subject, and said that one of the major causes of troubled youth as he saw it, was the fact that just about everything they did was supervised. They are told when to go to practice, when to stop, even when to take a break.

He said he couldn't remember when he had seen a bunch of kids get together and play a game of football or baseball spontaneously. He recalled how he and his teammates used to walk clear across town to play a game and walk back and it was an unforgivable sin not to show up for a game.

Uniforms? Nobody had any. You played in whatever you had in any game. Then he brought up how the kids used to play for hours with different fellows who came by replacing those who dropped out. Often as not, there were very few of the original starters in the game at the finish, because the thing had lasted all day.

Our friend thinks that the idea of Canadian football was adopted from some of their Sunday afternoon games. There was no limit to the number of players on a side. If a player got by the line of scrimmage, he was in trouble because it was open season on him.

Scarce Equipment

As for equipment, whatever you had in the way of football gear, you wore. Most of the fellows had no gear at all. If a fellow got hurt, he got out of the way to let somebody else in.

Comparing these days of pain killers in even little league (so it is said) we can recall our surprise when our first semi-pro coach told us not to be ashamed to let him know if we were hurt, because he would rather have a well substitute in there than a crippled star.

He said that it took more guts to admit that you were hurt than it did to stay in the game. Well, now I wonder in these days of high priced stars if that is so. People pay to see the star perform, and if he can stand up he will be in there.

But, then, getting back to the original reason for bringing all this up, there is the tendency to do away with fellows who say they are hurt. Everything is on winning, and there is no time for a fellow who doesn't want to give his all for the team.

That is fine for boys in high school or college, and surely is the thing for the pros, but should it apply to kids?

There are so many fine things that the lessons of sports can teach a fellow, that it seems a shame not to try to teach some of them, even at the expense of winning a game or two.

The Kid's Feelings

A father, seeing his son make the error that cost his team the game, is mortified. How in hell does he think the kid feels? He needs to be reminded that the best players in the world make simple mistakes.

The trick is not to make them too often. One lesson we tried to get over to tennis students was that any mistake a beginner makes on the court is made by the best in the game, but not as often. But, with all the pressure there is on kids to win and all the fuss some parents make when they don't, we would have to wonder if all the organized sports just shouldn't give way to some of the old spontaneously organized games we used to play.

Could people go back to those games now? We rather doubt it. Kids just couldn't play without all of the necessary equipment or without the officials, no matter how lousy parents may think they are.

Pick a fellow out of the crowd to officiate? Heaven forbid!! Or play without an official. Never. Although we often did, and we can't remember that there was ever a time when close decisions weren't decided, not always in our favor, but no games ever broke up because the players disagreed on an out. They reached agreement somehow. And isn't that teaching kids to accept the decisions of the majority or the ability to come to agreements on sticky problems?

VETERANS

Q — I will attend college this fall under the G.I. Bill. When can I expect my first check?

A — VA cannot state an exact date. When VA receives the enrollment certification from the school, it generally will require from four to six weeks to process it for payment.

Q — Can a veteran who has $10,000 NSLI and later becomes service - connected for disability also be eligible for RH insurance?

A — No. A veteran can carry only $10,000 worth of government life insurance. However, if a veteran is eligible for RH and wishes to surrender his present policy, he may replace it with RH. He must apply for RH within one year from the date of his service - connection rating.

JAKE'S WINNING TOUCH

Can you picture a Jake Gaither-coached team going Oh-for-the-season? The June issue of BLACK SPORTS Magazine tells of the legendary Florida A & M football mentor's inauspicious beginning in 1927 as coach of Henderson (N.C.) Institute's gridironers (he also coached baseball, basketball and track and conducted classes in math, algebra, geometry and civics). His first team not only lost all eight games, but didn't score a single touchdown. Jake got 'em going after the second year, however, leading his footballers through three straight undefeated seasons.
