Senate Passes Employment Measure

EEOC Authorized To Institute Court Action

WASHINGTON, D.C. — After 5 weeks of filibuster, the senate voted Tuesday to give the federal government power to fight job discrimination.

The vote was 73 to 21 in favor of ending the debate, after two previous attempts at ending it had failed.

Iowa Democratic senator Harold Hughes and Republican Jack Miller voted in favor of ending the debate. In the two previous votes however, Miller opposed ending the debate while Hughes voted for it.

Under the new compromise, the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission (EEOC) could bring civil court action against a discriminating employer and request that the case be heard immediately by a three judge federal panel. The original bill would have allowed legal action against the offending employer without going to court.

The bill covers 10.1 million state and local government employees and employers and unions with 15 or more workers rather than the present 25.

The House passed its own version of the bill and must now consider the senate changes or agree to a joint version in Senate-House negotiations.

Civil rights forces much prefer the senate version despite the fact that it does not empower the EEOC to issue cease and desist orders.

The EEOC is now limited to trying to effect voluntary compliance with the law, though the Justice Department may bring suits when it finds a pattern or practice of discrimination by employers or labor unions.

Rep. A June Franklin And James B. Morris, Jr. Co-Chr.; Meeting March 4th

At a press conference Tuesday, February 22, at the State House, Representative A. June Franklin and James B. Morris, Jr. announced the formation of the Iowa Black Caucus. The initial meeting will be held at the Savery Hotel in Des Moines, Saturday, March 4.

REP. FRANKLIN

JAMES B. MORRIS, JR.

The underlying concept of the Iowa Black Coalition is one of bi-partisanism. There will be representation from all areas where there exists a heavy Black population. The State meeting will discuss, plan and develop resolutions and platforms for the concerns and aspirations of the total life of neglected American citizens through the following:

- A. Local basis.
- B. Involvement of multi-organizations
- C. Working on common concerns

Resolutions to Follow
Following the initial details, the group will prepare a set of resolutions for presentation to the National Black Caucus at Gary, Indiana, March 10, 11 and 12. The local organization has been created pursuant to nationwide plans formulated by the conference of the Elected Black Officials and the Black Congressional Caucus. It is expected that the area of concern will include, but not be limited to welfare services, education, housing, employment and continuation of governmental programs as they relate to the black community.

Bi-Partisan
The co-chairmen are bi-partisan in that Rep. Franklin is a Democrat and Mr. Morris, Des Moines attorney, is a Republican.

These persons have been contacted and several have accepted: DeEdwin White, Burlington; Dr. Russell Collins, Cedar Rapids; Atty. Thomas Kelly, Jr., Davenport; Frank Dixon and Mrs. Anna Mae Weems, Waterloo; Orville Woods, Fort Madison; Mrs. Bessie Smith, Fort Dodge; Dr. Philip Hubbard, Iowa City; Robert Pearl, Keokuk; Willis Haddix, Mason City; Ralph Greenwood, Sioux City.

(Representative Franklin announced that she is a candidate for the Democratic National Committeewoman from Iowa.)

Angela Davis Trial Set for March 28

SAN JOSE, Calif. — A judge ended the pretrial proceedings in the Angela Davis case by brushing aside a series of final defense motions and setting trial date of Feb. 28.

Chief Defense Atty. Howard Moore Jr., said he would seek no further delay in the case and added Miss Davis wants the trial to get "under way."

"She wants her freedom," he said.

Superior Court Judge Richard E. Arnason denied defense requests for a second change of venue, refused to order the state to help pay Miss Davis' legal expenses, and turned down a motion to have the jury picked from the population at large.

The judge granted a request that any dossiers of prospective jurors that was compiled by the FBI or CIA be turned over to the defense. Many residents of Santa Clara County are employed in the aerospace industry which requires such dossiers for security reasons. "I was gratified he granted one of our motions," Moore said after the hearing.

Miss Davis, the former UCLA philosophy instructor, has been awaiting trial on murder, kidnap and conspiracy charges since the FBI arrested her in New York in October, 1970.

Miss Davis, 28, was extradited to Marin County, where she was charged with supplying the guns used in a shooting in which a judge and three others died. Her pretrial maneuvering began 13 months ago and is the longest such proceeding in California history.

(Miss Davis was released Wednesday on $102,500.00 bail. Judge Robert E. Aranson, who will preside at the trial beginning February 28, said that since the California Supreme Court had held the death penalty unconstitutional persons charged with murder were subject to be released on bail.)

Barry Goldwater, Senator (R-Ariz):

A Tribute

This tribute to Marine Harvey R. Wilson appeared in the Congressional Record of the 92nd Congress, Second Session and was inserted at the request of Senator John V. Tunney of California. Sgt. Wilson is a native of Des Moines and the son of Mr. and Mrs. Paul L. Wilson, 1164 14th Street, Des Moines. He is married to the former Gloria Bradford of San Diego and is the father of two sons, Harvey R. Wilson, Jr. and James E. Wilson.

HON. JOHN V. TUNNEY

OF CALIFORNIA
IN THE SENATE OF THE UNITED STATES
Thursday, February 3, 1972

Mr. TUNNEY. Mr. President, one of the great features of our society is the work that individuals in all walks of life, regardless of race, creed, or national origin, do in helping others lead more interesting and meaningful lives.

They find extra time and resources to contribute that something extra, that added ingredient which assures the success of programs, forges good ideas into organizational realities, assists ongoing projects toward better service.

Marine S. Sgt. Harvey R. Wilson is such a man.

He has returned to San Diego following a year's tour of duty in Vietnam, and has now resumed his work there as a community volunteer with his extraordinary commitment, energy, and diligence.

In 1970 the San Diego Junior Chamber of Commerce saw fit to designate him one of the 11 Outstanding Young Men of San Diego in recognition of achievement in his chosen profession and his dedicated service to the growth and progress of the community.

It is unusual for a military careerist to be cited for voluntary work in a local community by the Jaycees. He or she seldom has time, due to rotation in assignment, to establish roots in any one place. His efforts and contributions won such notice that we might tend to overlook the fact that Harvey Wilson is a black man.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the Extensions of Remarks an article printed in Chevron, the weekly publication of the Marine Corps Recruit Depot in San Diego, on Friday, March 6, 1970.

There being no objection, the article was ordered to be printed in the Record, as follows:

DEPT SERGEANT HONORED BY SAN DIEGO

A Marine Corps Recruit Depot Marine has been honored as one of San Diego's "Outstanding Young Men of the Year-1969" by the San Diego Junior Chamber of Commerce.

Sergeant Harvey R. Wilson was one of 11 young men honored at a banquet Thursday night at the Atlantis Restaurant. The announcement was made by Jaycee vice president Colin W. Wied to the 200 persons who attended the annual Outstanding Young Men banquet.

Robert W. Arnheim was the master of ceremonies for the event and Assemblyman Pete Wilson gave the keynote address.

Born in Chicago in 1936, Sergeant Wilson was raised in Des Moines, Iowa. He has served aboard Marine Corps Recruit Depot, San Diego, several times—his first tour as a recruit in February 1953.

Sergeant Wilson said he became involved in community projects in San Diego years ago. "At first I was just around making a few suggestions and giving a few ideas. Gradually I became more involved, first with one thing and then with another."

He estimates that he devotes about 40 hours a week to activities in San Diego besides his regular job as administration chief at the provost marshal's office aboard the depot. He is currently the South Bay District vice chairman of the Boy Scouts of America and has worked as a swimming instructor for children in a "less chance" area. He is a member of the San Diego Jaycees, Masonic Lodge Number 79, the Mayor's Council on Youth Opportunity, the Education and Economic Development Committee.

Explaining why he started "getting involved," Sergeant Wilson said, "I wanted to better prepare my kids, to make them better citizens."

"I have two boys," he continued, "and I wanted to involve them so they would have more than I had. One I started getting involved in saw things that could be done for other people, especially young people."

"If certain things are made available to young people now, those things will help prevent riots like those in Watts and in Detroit later," he explained. Expanding on the subject he said, "Hopefully, if we can influence all age groups in a project to fit their needs they will not have enough time to become involved in destructive actions."

The sergeant said that when working with people in a less chance area it is important to make the programs and projects relevant to the community. He said that a program's success depends on getting a positive response from people, getting them involved in programs in which they can help themselves.

Sergeant Wilson conceived the idea of a Professional Sports Explorer program for the city's high school age youth. He said that this year he hoped to have programs for youth involving them with San Diego's professional athletic teams, the Rockets, Padres and Chargers.

"Ninety per cent of my time" Sergeant Wilson said, "is spent with the Boy Scouts." He first started working with the Scouts in San Diego in 1967.

His work with the Boy Scouts concerns the Southeast San Diego area. This area is about 58 per cent black and 22 per cent brown. It's a less chance area where the scouting program involves ways below the city average of one out of four boys.

"We're recruiting manpower right now to get the program moving. But our biggest job," he said, "is making scouting relevant to boys in the area with programs on a level with the rest of the community."

Sergeant Wilson explained that most families in Southeast San Diego could not afford to send a boy to a Boy Scout camp during the summer. "We're developing a program for this summer where every boy will be able to go to camp with barracks and hot food."

"To make scouting relevant to these boys, we're going to give them the essentials for survival in the outdoors. It's not going to be a luxurious vacation. They're going to be sleeping under the stars. There may be fresh milk and fresh fruit," he said.

At last year's Boy Scout Jamboree at Farragut State Park in Idaho, Sergeant Wilson was an aide to Archie Moore, one-time light-heavyweight boxing champion, who is a community relations specialist for the national council of the Boy Scouts of America.

For his work at the Jamboree Sergeant Wilson was commended by the national council. Sergeant Wilson has attended Virginia State College, San Diego City College and Southwestern College. He hopes to pursue a liberal arts degree with a concentration in human relations and psychology when he leaves the Marine Corps.

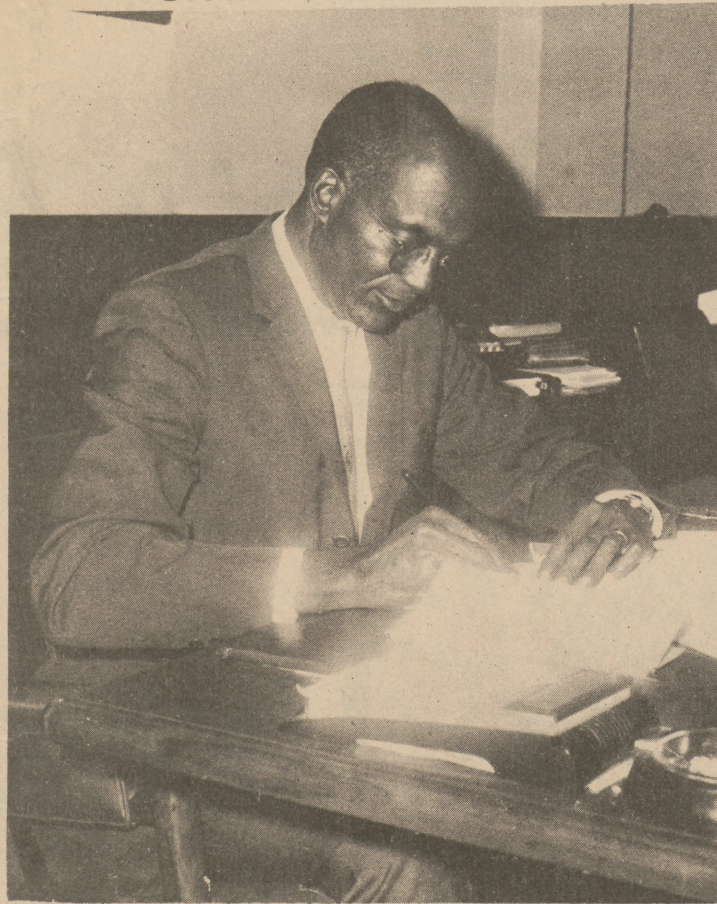

During his 17 years enlistment in the Corps, Sergeant Wilson has toured the Far East, Japan and Okinawa, served with the Fleet Marine Force Pacific Drum and Bugle Corps.

He attended the Defense Language Institute in Washington, D.C. and graduated from SOUFA school at Subic Bay in the Philippines in 1966. He spent a year in Vietnam with Headquarters Company, 4th Marine Regiment and the 3rd Reconnaissance Battalion before returning to the United States in December 1966.

Sergeant Wilson is a recipient of the Good Conduct Medal, National Defense Service Medal, Vietnam Campaign Medal, Presidential Unit Citation, Certificate of Commendation, Pistol Expert Badge, International Shooting Fund Medal, Southeastern Regional Marksmanship and Combat Action Ribbon.

Mr. TUNNEY. Mr. President, California, San Diego, and the Marine Corps are proud of its men like Harvey R. Wilson.

Discrimination In Long Island RR Told

NEW YORK, N.Y. — NAACP Legal Defense attorneys were notified Feb. 14, that the State Division of Human Rights has found the Long Island Railroad, a New York State Public Agency, responsible for practicing discrimination on the basis of race.

The case of Marshall M. Jackson against the Long Island Railroad was filed in July of 1970 after Jackson, a black man had been denied a job as fireman that June.

Jackson was supposedly denied the job on the basis that he had failed the eye test. It was discovered that in weeks prior to June, 1970, four white men who had also failed the eye test, had been hired. It was established that all four white men were related to Long Island Railroad employees.

The State Division of Human Rights has ordered that the Long Island Railroad offer Jackson a job as fireman with the full seniority rights and back pay that would have been his had he been employed initially. The Division has also ordered the Long Island Railroad to stop discrimination.

Anti Poverty Program Folds Chess Can Turn

An anti-poverty program designed to develop businesses and provide job training for low income persons has collapsed.

The program was given $187,500 in tax funds over two years according to a Des Moines Tribune report.

The Quad-County Development Corp. (QCDC), a special organization set up to manage the program may reportedly owe money and is being investigated by a federal grand jury, the Tribune story said.

Metal Firm Folded
The corporation made two attempts to develop and job train through Des Moines Metal Fabricating and another firm called Futura. However, Des Moines Metal Fabricating, manufacturers of custom truck bodies recently folded while the Futura firm never got started, according to the Tribune.

Mrs. Jeanette Jennings, director of Greater Opportunities Inc. (GO) the anti-poverty agency which helped obtain federal money for the group said she thinks the program is dead.

QCDC formed in May 1970, received $125,000 for the fiscal year ending July 30, 1970 and $62,500 for the year ended July 30, 1971.

Remainder To QCDC
The Tribune quoted Ivars Grandberg, former accountant for Des Moines Metal Fabricating as saying that anti-poverty officials took $77,000 turned it over to the Assembly of Groups to be served (a GO advisory group) to buy stock in QCDC.

The remainder of the $187,500 federal money with the exception of $5,000 which was later "frozen" by federal officials went directly to QCDC.

Frank Bailey, who managed Des Moines Metal Fabricating said low-income persons were to be trained for jobs but the training never started, the Tribune quoted him as saying.

Lack of Funds Blamed
Some blame the federal fund cutoff last April for the failure of the program. They say it left them with insufficient funds to operate and stay competitive.

Other reasons according to what the Tribune quoted Grandberg as saying was that Bailey tried but failed to get technical assistance and that although Bailey was doing the best he could, he was no accountant.

Grandberg took over as accountant in August and also advised on business management.

LDF Argues Press Freedom In Supreme Court

NAACP Legal Defense Fund affiliate attorney, and Stanford law professor, Anthony Amsterdam, argued Tuesday freedom of the press issues in the U.S. Supreme Court, in the United States v. Earl Caldwell Case. The argument challenged the absolute right of federal grand juries to subpoena newsmen to testify during their investigations.

LDF attorneys contend that such unbridled grand jury subpoena power can and does directly impinge upon freedom of the press. They asked the high court to uphold the decision of the U.S. Court of Appeals which ruled that freedom of the press is in jeopardy if reporters have no recourse but to testify in secret grand jury hearings about their sources of news.

Legacy of A Black Child

What can I leave to you, my child? My beautiful black child, you are so bright, so full of hope, yet so stubborn and determined. I worry about you at night, while you are curled up in your bed, what your life will bring. Now I can protect you from the dangers of life. But time is passing swiftly and soon, too soon, you will have to face a cold, hard world. I can remember when you were just learning to walk and you would fall, I would come and pick you up and whisper words of comfort, those little fat arms would wrap around my neck and I would wipe those big tears from your cheeks and tell you not to cry. But soon, my child, my beautiful black child, when the complexities of life become too much for you to bear, I may not be there to brush the tears from your eyes and tell you not to cry, so my dear child, my beautiful black child, you must learn to be strong. You are not aware of the long struggle that is ahead, but I, I have been there. I have been hurt and abused. Debased and scored. My heart has been made to bleed, and many nights I have lain crying myself to sleep. I have been lonely, not able to talk to my friends. I have bore the pains of child-birth alone, all alone, I have worked till my hands are wrinkled and knarled. But I kept pushing, crying and praying.

What can I give you but a word of advice hoping life will be easier on you. So I say to you my child, be strong, don't let nobody make you think you are not what you know you are. Stand high and tall and always keep your goal in mind and be determined to be what you want to be. If life becomes unbearable to you and you feel you cannot survive, your spirit they may have crushed, but just remember that you can survive if you try just one more time.

Respect yourself above everything else. Don't sell you ideas or values. Be proud, be proud that you are black and if racial barriers block your way, fight for the rights that you know your black ancestors have died for. Have love in your heart for humanity don't let hatred flood your soul. Be kind to others and lend a helping hand. Be honest with yourself and others. Trust in others and always seek the good and not the bad in those around you.

I have written this to you, my child and I hope that it will help you through life.

I left the most important words of advice to the end and that is have faith in God, for in Him you will find consolation and comfort that none other can give. I have made it this far only because I was able to trust in him and when the way is bleak and dim and you see no one to turn to fall on your knees and He will lead you in the path of righteousness.

Your Mother

the Project's intent and philosophy, and they are asked to make a commitment to them.

Don't Expect Instant Success

"It is easy to criticize tutorial programs," Sims said. "But realistically speaking, who can relate to a student better than another student? Volume upon volume of psychological study and speculation has been accumulated about the significant influence of peer group."

"We do not expect to see instant improvement in academic performance as a result of the tutorial experience, and we don't want to assess the validity of the tutorial program on that basis. We want to provide maximum exposure to a learning experience and availability of learning techniques.

"No one knows if there is a single, best method through which learning takes place. But we do know the tutorial relationship offers us another dimension for developing a sounder program for academic growth."

Each tutor is asked to attend bi-monthly meetings with a member of the CHES staff to discuss subjectively his evaluation of his student's progress. Likewise, the student is asked for his evaluation of the tutorial experience in his sessions with his counselor.

One advantage of the consortium is the sharing of institutional resources. Both Drake and the Des Moines Area Community College have reading and study skills facilities, learning laboratories, and programmed instruction. Grand View students can take advantage of the first two types of facilities at either of the other campuses.

The CHES staff makes their students fully aware of career opportunities as long as they are in school and tries to assist students in their choice of courses along the lines of whatever careers they may have in mind.

Working with career placement centers at each school, CHES arranges interviews for students with prospective employers and representatives of graduate schools. It also helps the students find jobs to help them meet the financial responsibilities of their education.

CHES provides a wide range of services for physically handicapped students: readers for blind students, taped textbook materials and class notes, conveniently placed classes for the physically handicapped, note takers, clerical assistance in class, etc.

CHES is a cornucopia of stories of human interest and success. For example, a poor youth from rural Polk County, who could barely read when he started at the Des Moines Area Community College, is now in his second year there. A quadriplegic is taking a part-time load of courses at Grand View. CHES' first totally deaf and dumb student has enrolled at Drake.

Presidents Trip To China
Promises Some Results

President Nixon's trip to China has been a disappointment to some of his critics who would rather see it fail than produce better relationships between the two countries.

Landing in that far off country where there had been no official communication between the two countries for more than 25 years, the official welcome was rather small but appeared cordial. This first meeting between Mr. Nixon and Chou En-Lai characterized by an extended handshake.

An unscheduled meeting with Mao Tse-Tung and President Nixon further set the stage of an apparent willingness to produce tangible results toward peaceful coexistence and further trade relations between the two countries.

The trip was further enhanced by the almost complete news coverage of the official activities of the heads of state and the visit of Mrs. Nixon in the stores and other places where she had an opportunity to meet with the masses of the people.

The original announcement of the trip was spectacular. It has led to spectacular contacts which we hope will produce further chances of peace and will justify all the efforts made in carrying out this historical meeting.

Court Reform Stumbles Over JP'S

Every recent meeting of the Iowa Legislature has witnessed efforts for a judicial reform measure. There has been considerable sentiment for reform but these sponsors, bent on abolishing Justice of the peace courts, has stymied their own efforts to pass such a measure.

The Bystander has never favored abolishing justice of the peace courts even though they have short comings in that some justices have permitted their courts to be manipulated by law enforcement officers. Much criticism has been directed toward their ignorance of the law but those who make the charges forget that cases presided over by district judges have been overruled by the Supreme Court and federal appellet courts overruled by United State Supreme Courts.

They forget that no effort has been made to upgrade the Justices. Justices of the peace, like country doctors, do much for the public which is commendable. Most of them are available day and night and render a convenient service to the public which would not be available in the type of courts suggested in the judicial reform bill.

We hope the measure will be amended so as to retain the Justice of the Peace System and that a provision for training be provided.

Lack Of Jobs Tied To Lack of Training

The Bystander has always insisted that racial differences could be much improved if minorities were integrated in all of our activities; that to do so would enhance the income of minority employees and enable them to participate in and enjoy everything available to the public generally.

According to most surveys, unemployment among minorities is higher than that of the average. But in spite of this, we are seeing them in places where they never worked before; in types of employment that were not available only a few years ago.

In the daily press we are seeing more advertizing for help carrying the phrase "An Equal Opportunity Employer". The Bystander is carrying advertising for employment in positions requiring training and experience. These ads have not brought the number of calls desired much because prepared individuals are not available.

Jobs requiring skill are filled by skilled people many of whom began at the bottom, with a basic education, and moved up the ladder as attrition made better jobs available. Minorities will continue to move up the ladder as they prepare themselves to meet the challenge as more opportunities to move up are made available all of which will serve to better racial understanding and provide the things that every family needs to pay for the better things in life.

WARDING OFF MEASLES AND MUMPS
Measles and mumps are on the rise.

According to the Center for Disease Control in Atlanta, the number of measles cases for 1971 may top 80,000 — twice as many as the year before.

An article in an October issue of the Journal of the American Medical Association, however, announced that there is now a new measles and mumps combination vaccine that is safe, simple, and effective. The measles vaccine contains the live measles virus.

Other vaccines for measles and mumps have been available for years. But there have been complications. Sometimes pulmonary complications.

In some of the earlier vaccines, the measles virus was killed and then injected into patients. The technique was used in some areas of Canada and the United States starting in 1963. Recent evidence, however, shows that some children vaccinated with killed measles vaccine developed skin and lung trouble years later when infected with the real thing. And they had little immunity to the measles virus itself.

When epidemics of measles mushroomed, the children who had been immunized developed a syndrome called "atypical measles." According to Dr. A.J.P. Turner of the Hospital for Sick Children in Toronto, Canada, these children had little resistance to the virus and also broke out in skin rashes and had severe breathing difficulties. He believes the vaccine injected years earlier produces a hypersensitive state when the child is subjected the real measles virus.

The new vaccine avoids this complication.

Breathing complications can develop from the strangest causes. Like killed measles vaccine. Find out more about causes of breathing problems. Check with your local tuberculosis and respiratory disease association.

ON THE SPORTS SCENE

What would you do about Iowa's three major schools and their basketball teams? They got shut out over the week end.

Neither Drake nor Iowa State helped themselves by suspending players who were their biggest scorers. This is not to say that players should be allowed to do as they please, but it is to say that you can't cut 15 or 16 points off your offense and keep rolling. Maybe the two teams would have had rough sailing even if the fellows in question had stayed on. We will never know.

Iowa U doesn't have that problem. The Hawks just can't seem to put two good games together, and they have yet to win a game on the other fellow's floor. They staged one of the upsets of the year in Chicago by beating third rated South Carolina, but that was on a neutral floor. Maybe next year may be the one for them.

Color Issue?

Don't know what the other two schools will do. Maury John of Iowa State has been able to come up with some junior college transfers, and getting the players already around to go all out for him, but he has had disciplinary problems with the guy who was the mainstay of the club last year, and that surely didn't do him or his system any good.

We thought that there was too much stress on the color issue, how many blacks and whites were on the team at Drake. Maybe that has hurt Stacey, especially since he had to drop his high scorer who just happened to be black. But we guess writers have to find something to come up with.

With Allen Ashby

Pros Drain
College Talent

And while we are on the subject of college basketball, we wish they would forget the Minnesota - Ohio State thing. No matter how innocent all of the parties try to sound, and this includes members of both teams, we still maintain that those fights don't start out of a clear sky. They build up during the game, and then break out.

And then it looks as if there won't be too many good college teams around come NCAA tournament time, if the pros keep on signing them. Can't really blame a kid for taking the dough. He can always go back to finish school if that is what he wants, and can probably do a lot better in the classroom with no pressure on to keep up his grades.

Here at home, we flipped off the radio and swore in good old American English. Tech had done it again, lost by two points in the last three seconds. But for three points, the Engineers would now be city champs. We thought they had lost last week's game by being too impatient to crack Hoover's zone defense. It takes patience and good fast ball handling to crack a zone.

Tech Too Impatient

Tech has the ball handling ability, but last week, they just didn't have the patience to wait to set up the good shot. As we listened, they seemed to take all bad shots especially in the third quarter.

Now comes North, and those guys have finally gotten rid of whatever bugged them for a while, and may show it.

In all fairness to both Tech and North, Roosevelt, Lincoln, and Hoover got some help during the last half of the season, and North got none, while Tech lost a very valuable man.

And do you know that several of the fellows who were stars in the local high schools have been doing all right in college. Bob Florence, Leonard Peavey, and Mike Noble of North, along with Toby Huston of Roosevelt are some of the names we think of as we write this, and there are others that you will hear about as we get the news.
