black caucus "together"

By Leslie A. Johnson

"Anyone deserving the black vote must deal with issues in the National Black Caucus platform," said Rep. A. June Franklin, D-Des Moines, at the Iowa Black Caucus last Saturday.

In an opening address to approximately 150 black Iowans at Hotel Savery in Des Moines, Mrs. Franklin further stated that the national platform, developed through resolutions presented by state delegations at the National Black Caucus in Gary, Ind., March 10-12, will be submitted to bi-partisan nominees before the 1972 elections as an "appeal to the nominees that black people in America feel their time has come."

An Iowa platform was set dealing with education, economic development, social services, housing and urban development, along with organizational development and coordination. Seven delegates and alternates were chosen in addition to 11 black elected officials to represent Iowa at the national caucus.

Health, Day Care Suggested

The Iowans called for transportation of black and white children as necessary to place all children in the best available schools. Also, free health and care along with mental clinics were suggested to aid in adequate educational development.

More black counselors and stronger career development in the schools, along with more supporting services for college students from educationally different or non-standard backgrounds will be sought.

It was suggested that monies be set aside by each state to relieve financial disparities in the schools.

Says SBA Prejudiced

Economic resolutions included raising federal low-income guidelines to $6,500 a year for a family of four, and formulation of a nation-wide economic development council providing technical assistance and funds to black businesses in Iowa and other states.

It was stated that prejudice is displayed in the allocation of Small Business Association (SBA) loans due to the fact that many black people through the injustice of the judicial systems and racism have been burdened with criminal records.

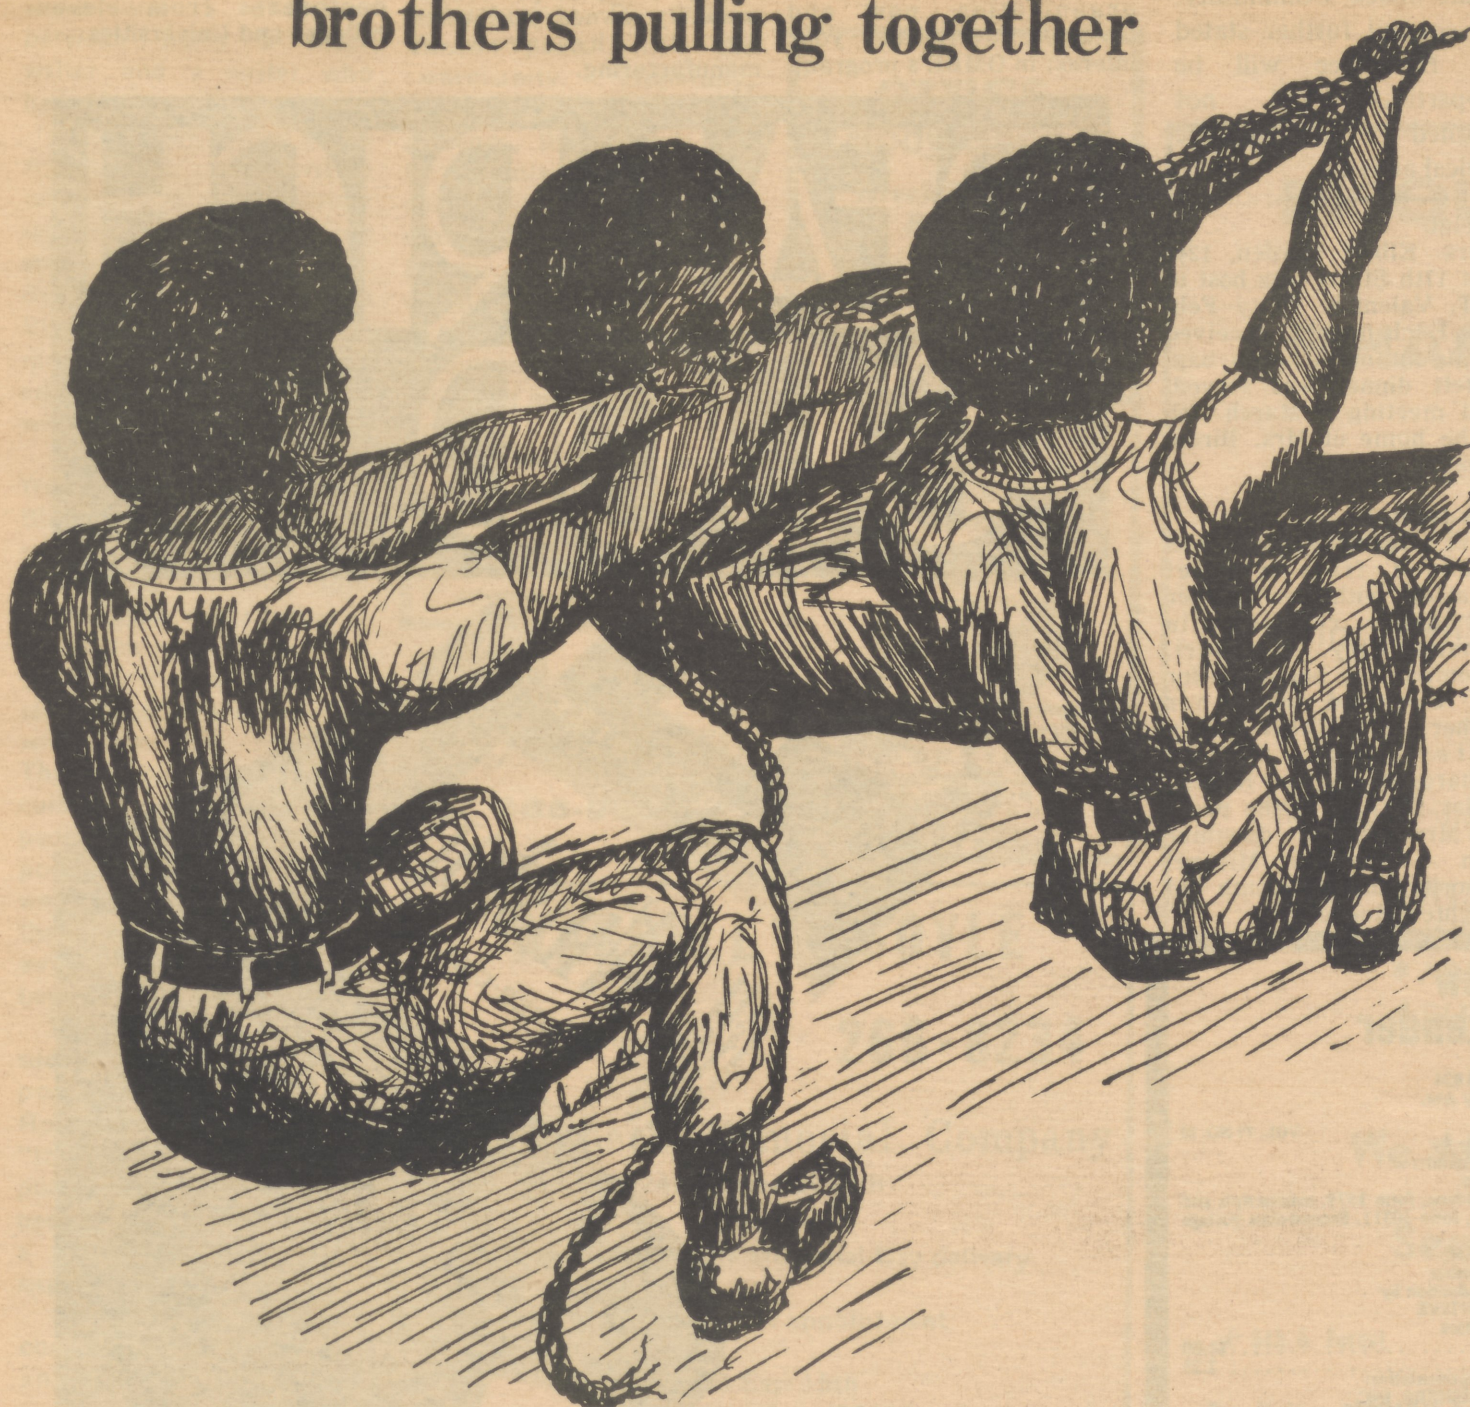

A recommendation was made that criminal records not be entered into the disbursement of SBA loans and that all potential businesses should be judged on their merit alone.

The social services plank recommended an income for senior citizens which recognizes their recreational, social, medical, and cultural needs. Re-evaluation of penal institutions as they pertain to black inmates was also recommended.

Housing and urban development suggested a black staffed and operated referral and information agency to provide information for housing problems and programs.

Youth Reorganizes Arts

The organizational development plank advocated a state-wide linkage with black student organizations and the development of a Sickle Cell Anemia foundation.

A way black people can become sensitized to the various elements of their culture, was urged by the youth. They recommended a state cultural information center providing information relating to black cultural activities and the establishment of a state black arts school, plus the recognition of a black cultural holiday.

Elected officials chosen to attend the national caucus are: Dr. Robert Harvey, Waterloo school board; George Boykin, Sioux City school board; Dr. Edwin White, Burlington city councilman; Powell Owens, Davenport city councilman; Lafayette Twyner of the Davenport School board; Nolden Gentry of the Des Moines School Board, State Rep. A. June Franklin, D-Des Moines; Judge Luther Glanton, Des Moines Municipal Court; Russell Pounds, Ames city councilman; Si Roberts, Davenport Park Board; and Robert Pearl of the Keokuk School Board.

Delegates Apportioned

Two delegate votes were apportioned to Des Moines, one each to Waterloo, Davenport, Cedar Rapids, Sioux City, and the Iowa youth. However, Sioux City was not represented at the caucus and its vote was forfeited to one at-large delegate.

Delegates elected to attend are the Rev. Lewis Grady and Robert Davis of Des Moines; Mary Robinson, Waterloo; Clarence Jackson, Davenport; Mrs. Magnolia Walley, Cedar Rapids; Jerry Stevens, Iowa City - at large; and Bruce Taylor, Des Moines - youth.

Alternates include Hughes Gibson, Cedar Rapids; Robert Smith, Davenport; Palmer Byrd, Waterloo; Art Higgins, Des Moines; and Charlene Smith, Des Moines - youth.

CORRECTION: The information furnished the Iowa Bystander and published in its February 17, 1972 issue, stated that Mrs. Pauline Humphrey is vice president of the National Beauty Culturists League. She is instead a member of its Board of Directors.

The highly successful Iowa Black Causus held Saturday at the Savery Hotel shattered the oldest myth Black people hold of themselves. The Caucus proved unquestionably the Blacks can "pull together."

Another major concert of Black Organizational talents is in the works for this spring. The Black Cultural Heritage Council is planning, "Harambee '72".

Designed to give Black people in Iowa a "Gut" exposure to the aesthetic beauty of Blackness, acting chairman of the council, Robert Davis, stated, "it is imperative that the Brothers and Sisters dis-program themselves, and learn to relate to the beautiful reality of Blackness."

Co-chairman, David Finney, said, "we are proud to say that there is no generation gap within the membership. All Black Iowans are being included in our planning regardless of age."

Tentative plans for Harambee include historic displays, contemporary plays, food, and big name entertainment. The council opens its doors to suggestions and active participation to all members of the Black Community. The council further stated that Harambee will be non-partisan and not designed for specific political activity.

Mrs. Elbert Durden, 1241 East 17th Street was host to L. T. Valentine Party Feb. 16th. Each member received a gift out of the grab bag. Buffett dinner was served. Next meeting is March 15th at the home of Mrs. Birdie Hogan.

back from trip

Mrs. Donald Johnson has returned from a brief vacation with her mother and other relatives in Kansas City, Missouri. Accompanying her home for the weekend were her mother, Mrs. Ethel Smith, sister, Mrs. Leone Richardson and son, Rodney Sayles 13. Also in the party was Mrs. Johnson's daughter-in-law Mrs. Michael Signorile and 11 month old daughter, Rochelle.

Dr. Michael DeBakey, internationally renowned heart surgeon and pioneer in artificial hearts and transplants, will speak at Drake University at 8 p.m. Wednesday, March 15, at the University Auditorium.

The public is invited without charge. Dr. DeBakey will speak on "Scientific Advances in Heart Disease."

His appearance at Drake is sponsored by Drake's National - International Awareness Committee, a campus student group that invites renowned public figures to campus to speak on issues of the day.

Dr. DeBakey is president of Baylor College of Medicine at Houston, Tex.

He is also clinical professor of surgery at the University of Texas dental branch in Houston.

To initiate the application procedure write a letter stating: nature of organization, past and planned activities, your interest in OMBE's program.

Address letter to: Director of Field Operations, Office of Minority Business Enterprise, Department of Commerce, Washington, D.C. Applications are now being accepted. You should contact OMBE as soon as possible.

CRITIQUE

1) Without funds for most of its existence, OMBE has had minimal leverage on the programs it has attempted to coordinate.

2) $100 million is far short of the funds needed to significantly increase the percentage of minority businesses. The President's Advisory Council recommended a total federal commitment of at least $930 million in the next three years. This sum would be divided to increase the funds going directly to minority businesses and give a higher priority to management and technical assistance than has been the case in the past.

3) Management and training programs are needed to provide basic skills.

4) Administrative confusion has resulted in the past from overlapping and duplicating areas of authority within various government agencies. Problems have also arisen concerning intergovernmental cooperation.

5) Sufficient date and information is not available on such factors as the impact of existing minority businesses, the potential for future businesses, reasons for business failures and related matters.

6) Minority businesses need diversification. For example, only 1.2 per cent of minority owned businesses are in the area of manufacturing.

GWENDOLYN BROOKS VISITS QUAD CITIES

Cecile Cooper

Upon her recent appearance at Augustana College, Miss Gwendolyn Brooks, winner of the Pulitzer Prize in poetry, charmed the audience with several of her original compositions in poetry.

Miss Brooks, who succeeded Carl Sandburg as poet laureate of Illinois, defined poetry as a "distillation of life". Her selections ranged from the problems of the common people, to protests about abortions and discrimination, as well as tender thoughts about children.

After the reading, a reception was held for Miss Brooks at the College's House of The Hill.

Miss Brooks, mother of two, is the author of several books, including "A Street in Bronzeville", "Annie Allen", (for which she won a Pulitzer Prize in 1950), the novel "Maud Martha", "Bronzeville Boys and Girls", (a collection of children's verse), "The Bean Eater", and the book-length poem, "In The Mecca".

Other honors won by Miss Brooks include two Guggenheim Fellowship, Illinois Sesquicentennial Literary Award, American Academy of Arts and Letters Award, and Poetry magazine's Eunice Tiejens Memorial Award.

Currently leading a creative writing class at City College of New York, Miss Brooks holds honorary doctorates from eleven colleges and Universities.

black poets part II

Because the daily struggles of Black people in American society are concerted dedications to living and to the living, to feel out the universe and to voice our thoughts through words, music and action, perhaps all Black people are poets.

For some Black Des Moines writers, "It's hard for me to think of myself as a poet," said Zack Hamlett. "I'm just a dude who writes stuff down. The role of the poet, of any artist, is to be a mirror of what's happening in the world," he said. "So I write what I perceive."

"It seems that Black people feel that because they are Black, they should write a certain way," continued DyAnne Webster, a Black playwright, singer and poet. "But I feel you should write the way you feel and what you see."

Black poetry, Sister Webster explained, "speaks for itself. Every Black poet I've met has something different to say, so we all can get something from each one."

Henderson Davis, Jr., also a playwright, explained that there was a difference between being a Black writer and a writer who happens to be Black:

"The Black writer seems to convey the written expression of a deliberately Black-based and Black approached type of thing. But the other sounds like Blackness is a happenstance more than anything else, and doesn't necessarily deal with the Black expression."

Both he and Sister Webster believe that the Black theater and Black poetry are very definitely connective, and that both have a place and a future in the Black movement. "If it (theater) is done right," he said, "you can really deal with the life situation. Theater supposedly is a cultural mirror, so Black people can use theater (and poetry) to mirror what we're moving toward, or that which we are, or to evaluate and move beyond."

When asked if there was such a thing as "Black poetry," poet Wikki Robinson replied that "there is such a thing as poetry written by Black people. I write as a man, as a person, from the Black experience."

As to a general theme, he continued, "my poetry is all encompassing."

And in that process, for Blacks, whites, Chicanos,

Indians to live in America, "We'll have to be one unit," and not become two warring factions," he said.

James (Santiago) Sanders, 35, considers himself an author more so than a poet, though much of his work is considered by some to be poetry.

And he explained that he is "a writer," rather than a Black writer or a writer who is black. "I try to get away from writing in color as much as I can."

He said he currently was working on a book that is based on his observations of life "for other Black people to follow."

This writer, who has traveled widely throughout America, said the best way for him as a Black man to offer leadership to younger Black men "is through writing. It's my job to set a trend or pattern for the younger generation to follow so they won't have to fall into the same pitfalls as far as their maleness is concerned."

This two-part article on the Des Moines Black poets is far from complete, of course, for there are certainly more Des Moines Black poets in the community. Hopefully, through realization of their presence, their talents will be recognized by the Black community as the Black movement moves into the future, into the Black world.

And the Black poets undoubtedly will be there, capturing and recording and writing.

accompanied with the church's new grand piano and a Hammond organ. Pastor F. W. Strickland presented the former Pastor Norman R. Olphin, from New Jersey to deliver the message of "faith in God that allowed us to reach our goal." The afternoon dedication began with an organ prelude. The master of Ceremonies was Attorney W. Laurence Oliver. The minister and people responded.

Prayer was offered by Rev. Dean A. Olson, Pastor of First Baptist Church. Greetings were sent by Governor Robert D. Ray and extended from several names. Music was furnished by The First Baptist Church Choir, The Sons of Liberty from Echo Calvary Church, Westminster Presbyterian Choir, and the Corinthian Dedication Choir.

The dedication sermon was delivered by Doctor Edward A. Freeman, President of the National Sunday School and Baptist Training Congress.

Bishop Thomas

by Mike Johnson

On Sunday evening, March 5, a group of city residents headed by the Bishop James Thomas of the United Methodist Church traveled to Mt. Ayr, Iowa to take part in a "Consultation on Religion and Racism" sponsored by the Creston district of the United Methodist Church.

This is one of many conferences being held across the nation by the church to awaken and equip their members to implement changes which will work to lessen and eliminate racism in the church and the larger community.

As an introduction to the program's topic, Bishop Thomas talked of the racism which he had encountered and illustrated with incidents from his own life. Following this, two films were shown to the audience of 200 whites and seven blacks, these were: "Our Father," and "Black History — Lost, Strayed, or Stolen." After viewing the films, the entire group was asked to break up into discussion groups, each moderated by a black delegate from Des Moines and consider the various aspects of the film which upset them and what kind of action could be taken to correct these things. When the group discussion was completed, a delegate from each group reported to the entire audience. At this time, the Rev. Clayton Hammond, who is the Associate Secretary of the Commission on Religion and Race of the United Methodist Church answered questions from the participants and commented on the findings of the various groups.

Following the discussion, Bishop Thomas again spoke. His remarks involved what the church could do about religion and racism. He cited how deeply involved the church actually is in this question and the various handles they have to come to grips with the situation.

The general consensus of the delegation from Des Moines was that the entire conference was a success and that some actual communication channels had been opened. It was also their opinion that some constructive action would be enacted by the participants. Each person awarded a good deal of the credit for the success to Bishop Thomas and his apt guidance and remarks.

Those attending from Des Moines besides Bishop Thomas and Rev. Hammond were: Joe Anna Cheatom, Rev. Richard Pfaltzgraff, Anna Scott, James O'Day, and Rev. Lewis Grady.

vets get ready

The Veterans Administration will conduct free classes to help veterans prepare for job interviews as part of its Jobs - For - Veterans Program. The next class in Des Moines will be from 9:00 to 11:00 a.m. Wednesday, in Room 975 of the new Federal Building.

Classes will also be held in other Iowa cities. Interviewing techniques will be discussed by employment specialists and will be demonstrated by films and mock interviews. Any veteran who would like help in preparing for an interview with a prospective employer or in completing qualification resumes or job applications is welcome to attend.

Reservations in the class may be made by calling the VA at 284-4370. Veterans living outside Des Moines may receive information by calling toll free on 1-800-362-2222.

His message topic was "Why I stay with the Church." This Sunday, a talent program will be sponsored by the Youth Department of Corinthian Baptist Church at 7:00 in the evening.

role of oic cited woodard d. m. rights director

WASHINGTON — The Opportunities Industrial Centers (OIC) are a good example of how people working together can help both individual citizens and the nation as a whole, Secretary of Labor J. D. Hodgson recently stated.

Addressing the annual meeting of the OIC here, Hodgson commended the organization for "helping people to realize the best that is in them by encouraging them to develop their own talents as far as they will go."

OIC founded in 1964 under the leadership of the Rev. Leon H. Sullivan, provides skill training and job placement to disadvantaged persons through a nationwide network of centers.

Funds Increasing

Through its focus on the individual, Hodgson observed, the OIC "is helping our nation to realize the best that is in it by giving real meaning to such words as 'equality' and 'opportunity'."

He pointed out that most of the real progress that our nation had made in the past, and all of the real progress to be made in the future will come from working together. In this regard, he continued, "There is no finer example on the American scene than the teamwork generated by OIC with government, industry and labor working together to help people help themselves."

He called attention the fact that in the last two years the Nixon Administration has supported the OIC with three times as much money as it had received in the preceding five years. The Department of Labor has provided a total of approximately $70 million to the program since its inception. OIC's current contract with Labor is for $32,224,689.

Job Training Top Priority

The Rev. Leon Sullivan, in his speech before the convention, challenged major American corporations to open up 400,000 jobs for minority Americans. He also called for upgrading of minority employees. He cited job training as the nation's number one priority.

Because of Rev. Sullivan's own success in establishing job training programs, General Motors named him as the first black member of its governing board over a year ago.

In emphasizing the need for job training, Rev. Sullivan warned that "if members of minority groups are not placed in productive positions by (the year) 2,000, one in four Americans will be on welfare and one of every two blacks will be receiving assistance."

oes honors mrs. garrett

Princess Oziel No. 9, Princess Zorah No. 10, and Olive Branch No. 32 honored Mrs. Lessie M. Garrett, Grand Worthy Matron of Electa Grand Chapter, O.E.S. Feb. 26, at Doric Masonic Lodge.

Dinner was served on decorated tables.

Mrs. Garrett was given a colored corsage on behalf of the three chapters by Mrs. Barbara Palmer. Mr. Edgar L. Palmer, Sr. who is Senior Warden of Prince Hall Grand Lodge presented Mrs. Garrett with a bouquet of yellow and white carnations.

The meeting was opened with the Grand Worthy Matron's address entitled "Working Together in the O.E.S." in which she stressed the value of cooperation for the good of the order. Following the address, Mrs. Emma Williamson presented her with a gift on behalf of the three chapters. Mrs. Ruby Wilson, Worthy Matron of Princess Oziel No. 9 of which Mrs. Garrett is also a member presented her with a gift.

announces candidacy

Jack L. Woodard, a former detective in the Polk County Sheriff's Department, announced his candidacy for the Republican nomination for Sheriff of Polk County today. Woodard, who has been a Deputy Sheriff for six years, resigned recently and changed his party affiliation from Democrat to Republican, in order to seek this nomination.

In announcing his candidacy at a press conference in his Urbandale home, Thursday, Woodard said, "My major campaign theme will be to professionalize the Polk County Sheriff's Department and keep it free from Politics, Favoritism and Nepotism."

"The time when any person could put on a badge and gun and enforce the law is over. Law Enforcement has become a profession, requiring skilled men and women, with high morals, training and dedication to the law," he added.

Woodard, who has experience in most departments of the Sheriff's office, was in charge of the Bombs and Explosives Department, the Juvenile Department and of Scuba Diving Activities at the time of his resignation.

Michael Carver recently appointed campaign chairman by Jack L. Woodard announced the formation of a steering committee to work for the election of Woodard. Carver said Woodard promised the people of Polk County a vigorous campaign. The members are:

well as in nutrition.

"Miss Lessie" as the children call her, has twenty five years of experience in food service, including 21 years with the Des Moines Women's Club where she served as both a cook and a catering manager.

Mr. Al Correll, Des Moines Human Rights commission director, attended a training seminar of the International Association of Official Human Rights Agencies held in Newark, New Jersey Feb. 27 through Mar. 2. The event was co-sponsored by the Equal Employment Opportunities Commission (EEOC) and was composed of Human Rights agencies throughout the United States and Canada.

The seminar dealt primarily with training and assistance staffed in obtaining the necessary expertise in eliminating through legal channels the discriminatory practices of employers. Correll, secretary-treasurer of the international association participated in leading the sessions.

Correll feels that training of this type will help to improve the avenues that will assist in legal information for all governmental civil rights bodies.

Two additional training seminars are scheduled for Atlanta, Georgia, Mar. 12 through 16; and in Denver, Colorado May 21 through 25. The Denver session will include all Civil and Human Rights agencies in the State of Iowa.

Also attending the Newark conference was Miss Cecilia Thompson, field representative of the Des Moines Human Rights organization.

TIPS ON CAR CARE

Wash That Rust Right Out'a Your Car

The Saturday bath for car and self is as much a part of American tradition as apple pie and motherhood.

But come the dead days of winter and the American motorist tends to leave his car out in the cold when he "heads for the showers," to borrow a phrase from the national pastime.

Questioning him about this winter weather neglect usually elicits a response that goes: "Why bother, it'll just get dirty again tomorrow."

What our mythical car owner doesn't realize is his indifference hastens the deterioration of his car's finish, leads to rusting and costs him cold, hard cash at trade-in time.

While today's cars are less likely to rust than vehicles a few years back — thanks to rust-inhibiting primer and better plating of metals used in car construction — even the most modern advances in finish and body protection can be offset by neglect.

Winter is particularly hard on cars even if it amounts to nothing more than cold, rainy weather instead of ice and snow. Sloppy roads hasten the buildup of dirt deposits under fenderwells, creating potential rust problems.

These deposits are easily removed by a trip to the local car wash or, in cold weather, by using a garden hose hooked up to a hot water outlet to blast them away.

North or South, preventive maintenance is the best way to minimize weather damage to your car in all seasons. B.F. Goodrich car care specialists recommend keeping a good coat of hard finish wax on the car. This can be done even in winter in a garage. Surprisingly, garaged cars require more attention than those left outside because low temperatures inhibit corrosion.

Using the touchup paint supplied by most dealers with new cars is also a great aid to stopping rust. It is especially useful in repairing the damage done to finishes by parking lot door "mashers."

HOUSTON — Four breads, two sweet and two savory, each won $1,000 runner-up prizes in this year's Pillsbury Bake-Off here.

Debra Lynn Hilburn, 15 of Piedmont, Alabama was the winner this year's competition. She and her mother were among the 100 finalists competing Feb. 28, for the $65,000 in prize money.

Debra's recipe was for Butterscotch Biscuit Pinwheels, butterscotch sweet roll. They are made with refrigerated biscuits rolled into strips and coated with melted butterscotch pieces mixed with graham cracker crumbs, nuts and sugar.

Laura Quigley, a medical technologist from New York City, won $1,000 for her recipe, Easy Cheesy Crescent Sandwich.

This recipe begins with refrigerated crescent roll dough. Shredded cheddar sparked with dry mustard and cayenne make the filling and topping and sprinkled with poppy seeds for the finishing touch.

In the create-a-cake category, $1,000 went to Mrs. Laura Hynek of Lincoln, Nebraska, for her Easy Streusel Coffee Cake.

Mrs. Rama Hester, a medical - legal transcriber from Long Beach, California who also does volunteer work with alcoholic women won the $1,000 runner-up prize in the flour category. Her recipe, Peppy Cheese Quick Bread, is made with pepperoni, cheese, Italian dressing and dry mustard.

sewing hints

If you cannot find a particular length of zipper for a garment, you may cut a longer one off to fit your needs.

All placket zippers may be altered in this manner. First pin your zipper into opening with excess extending beyond bottom of the opening. Whip stitch approximately 1/4" below the opening over the zipper teeth. Just above your stitches sew a straight eye. This will be your new zipper stop. Cut excess about 1/2" below your stop.

safety in the kitchen

by Ann Kastler

The next time you walk into your kitchen look at it from a different viewpoint — a safety one.

The kitchen is a relatively safe place for adults but for children there can be many dangers.

There is a range with burners that gets hot when turned on and if electric will remain hot after being turned off. There are great hiding places such as ovens, refrigerators, dishwashers or freezers which were not designed to be opened from the inside.

Appliances Not Toys

There is also danger in the small, everyday things that you use in the kitchen — for example knives which do not look sharp, but are. Store knives where curious hands can't get to them easily. A good idea is to show a child how sharp the blade is so he understands the danger involved. And of course, matches must be kept away from an experimenting child who might unknowingly start a fire.

Make sure a child understands that kitchen appliances are not toys. While it may be fun to push a knife or fork into a toaster to see what will happen, a serious shock may occur. Also, the running of that garbage disposal may sound so fascinating that curious little fingers might want to find out how it works and would be lost in the process.

Cooking Pots Pose Hazard

If there are any toddlers in the house, make sure all of your cleaning equipment is stored in places that are out of reach of the little ones.

Detergents, cleaning fluids and the like can be very dangerous to a child who unwittingly swallows them.

Many people don't realize that whiskey, wines and other alcoholic products, when swallowed in sufficient amounts, can be quite fatal to a young child. So, if you keep spirits in your kitchen, put them up out of reach of those inquisitive hands.

When cooking and the kids are underfoot make sure those pot handles are turned facing the back of the stove. There are many reports of children severely burned by curious hands reaching up and turning over cooking pots.

Grease Fires Dangerous

The kitchen also contains dangers for you. For example, if you smell gas, never strike a match or plug in an appliance. A simple spark could set off an explosion. Also when cooking with grease make sure the pan is covered. This will help prevent unnecessary spattering and burns. If a fire should start never try to put out a grease fire with water instead, smother it either with a cover of some sort or pour baking soda over it.

Don't disconnect an appliance by pulling on the cord but grasp it by the plug. And finally, if you're having trouble with an appliance, unplug it before you try to fix it.

The kitchen of modern woman is a marvelous thing with the many time saving conveniences but there are also many dangers for which she must be on the alert for her children and herself.

no physical difference between black, white athletes says black sociologist

There is no proof whatever for the widely held belief that black sports superstars are physically superior to white players because of their race, a noted black sociologist and athlete asserts.

The reason black athletes have proved so successful in the American sports arena, writes Dr. Harry Edwards, is that a disproportionate number of blacks enter athletics because their paths in other fields often is blocked.

In an article appearing in the current issue of the magazine "Intellectual Digest," titled "The Myth of the Racially Superior Athlete," Dr. Edwards attacks an article in the Jan. 18, 1971, issue of "Sports Illustrated" by Martin Kane, a senior editor, who claimed black stars achieved superiority for racial reasons.

"By asserting that blacks are physically superior, whites at best reinforce some old stereotypes long held about Afro-Americans, that they are little removed from the apes in their evolutionary development," Edwards asserted. "The major implication of Kane's argument for the black population at large is that it opens the door for at least an informal acceptance of the idea that whites are intellectually superior to blacks."

Terms Thesis Invalid

In his article, Kane claims that black athletes had proportionately longer leg lengths, narrower hips, wider calf bones and greater arm circumference than white athletes; that they had a greater ratio of tendon to muscle; and that they had a basically elongated body structure, enabling them to function as more efficient heat dissipaters relative to whites.

Commenting upon this observation, Edwards said that the "Sports Illustrated" editor had erred because, "In no case was the evidence presented gathered from a random sample of subjects selected from the black population at large in America."

By supporting his thesis with "evidence" taken from a small group of black athletes of already proven excellence, among others, and assuming their case reflected that of all blacks, Kane committed a serious scientific error, Edwards declared. He termed Kane's interpretation of his findings "a scientific blunder of the highest magnitude" which "invalidates the would-be scientific foundations of this component of the author's argument."

Not There From Neck Up?

Edwards said that Kane's theory of inherent black racial superiority among athletes led Kane to assert that blacks dominate the sports requiring speed and strength while whites, due to racially linked physical traits, are predestined to prevail in those sporting events requiring endurance.

"When confronted with the fact that black Kenyans won distance races and defeated highly touted and capable whites in the 1968 Olympic Games, the author (Kane) makes the ridiculous assertion that (the Kenyans) Keino and Bikila have black skin but a number of white features."

Edwards, who teaches sociology at the University of California at Berkeley, said that praise for the black's 'natural' speed or power is the white way of implying that he is not there from the neck up. In fact, Kane asserted that blacks have been regarded by some coaches as having a special ability to relax under stress.

"Kane and his resource persons, mostly coaches, recreate a portrait of the black athlete as the 'happy-go-lucky, casual, 'What — me worry?' Negro male so familiar to Americans through history books, Stepin Fetchit movies and other societal outlets," sociologist Edwards asserts.

Blacks Actually Less Relaxed

The fact is, Edwards claims, black athletes are less relaxed than whites because, having fewer vocational options, their need to succeed in sports is greater than the need of white athletes.

Edwards, who led black athletes in the 1968 Olympic boycott, said "There can be little argument with the obvious fact that black performances in sports have been and continue to be superior, on the whole, to those of whites." But, he countered, "There is room for considerable debate over the identity and character of the factors that have determined that superiority and contributed to its perpetuation."

"Since the talents of 25-million Afro-Americans have a disproportionately higher concentration in sports, the number of highly gifted whites in sports is proportionately less, he added." "Under such circumstances, black athletes who do participate in sports operate at a psychological disadvantage because they believe blacks to be inherently superior as athletes."

"Thus, the white man has become the chief victim of his own lie."

Football star, Bill Florence, signed a letter of intent to the University of Louisville in Louisville, Kentucky. Florence is presently at Ellsworth Junior College in Iowa Falls, and will graduate in June. He will major in art at Louisville. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. William Florence, 3800 East Sheridan.

north's girl's track problem

The girls track team coaches at Des Moines North High School are mystified. They want to know why there aren't more Black girls out for their track team.

"Both Coach (Dick) Camp, assistant coach, and I have tried to get them out. But they give us any reason, not reason excuse, for not coming out," said head coach Miss Marilyn Quinn. "They tell us they've got to work or they don't have time for it."

The girls track program was started last year at North and was the first in the city. Hoover has started a track team this year.

In their first year of girls track the coaches had a team of 18 girls of which four of those girls were Black. This year they have 31 girls out of which five are Black.

"I don't know what it is," said Miss Quinn, "I don't think they (Black girls) want to work."

However the girls on the team do work hard.

"My reason for getting on the track team was competition against other girls," said Robin Rollen, one of the Blacks on the team.

"That's the only way I know to prove to other people that I'm just as good or better than any one here at North."

"You know everyone looks up to an athlete, whether it's a man or a woman and besides track is fun," said Stacy Taylor.

"Last year we went to a track meet and they were getting ready to start the race and everything was real quiet and they were going 'get on your mark, get set,' and then we heard this 'They got Black girls on their team.' We were dying, and laughing on the inside, that's when we jumped the gun."

The girls say they get along fine with the other girls and the other teams they compete against.

"There's no hassle, they usually ask how fast we can run, but that's it," said Miss Taylor.

They said the reason a lot of Black girls don't come out for track is that they are interested in boys, or they're scared to come out or they don't want to be called a "Tom". And also a lot of them go out for cheerleading," said Miss Rollen.

"Most of them want to try hard and do things," said Miss Taylor "but when they try hard and their efforts aren't rewarded they give up, and in track you just have to keep trying."

"And what they don't want to do is look bad in front of anybody because of pride, Black pride, women's pride."

However both girls feel it's worth it.

"There's something about being on a track team and being Black that makes you want to try harder, because you don't want anybody to put you down for being slow," said Miss Taylor.

HOME

Buying a new home is one of the best hedges against future inflation, but don't settle for just that.

Here-and-now inflated costs of credit can be fought by choosing a new home that has extras, such as appliances and even carpeting, built in.

These items, when included in a new home, can usually be financed at the relatively low mortgage rate of interest, instead of at the higher rate associated with installment purchases.

A home that comes with extras built in has a built-in promise of economy, experts at the National Association of Home Builders point out.

Today's builder can offer brand-name quality extras at lowest prices because he buys directly from the manufacturer, and installation can be made by the work force already on the job at the appropriate time.

police community aides what's happening?

There is much talk and discussion about the silence of the Advisory Board of the Police Community Service Aide Program while the seven month old experiment in the Model Cities area is receiving only unfavorable publicity. There are two important reasons; this program is new and may safely be used as an open field for personal and political advantage against Chief Nichols and the City Manager Chenoweth. We must pay close attention to whether the Chief of Police intends to backtrack or defend this particular program in police community relations. Neither members of the board nor the community they represent are asleep. Our first duty is to be sure all of Des Moines understands the reason for the existence of the Police Community Service Aide Program, how it works, and some of the difficulties that must be overcome.

The Model Cities Area, like all other neighborhoods in the city experts, service and protection. The reason for federal approval and funding of the Community Service Aide Program is to find out if a citizen's community police patrol contains a key to changing racist attitudes within the Police Department. There will be little common ground for understanding between police and community without this change. Those who are constantly sounding alarm and danger in Police Community Service Aide Program are afraid the experiment just might succeed. Our concern is that group within the police department which Chief Nichols admits is opposed to the very concept of citizen's patrol. Their spokesman is within the City Council and loudly proclaims special dangers to life and limb in the Black community. The members of the advisory board to the Service Aide Program came forward in support of the aide program. These ten or twelve members meet every Thursday night for as much as three hours to interpret the needs of the community and what it expects from the police department. The advisory board interprets to Chief Nichols the aide's need for dignity, status, and respect from police officers as well as the community.

The Community Service Aide Program, at full strength includes 12 aides, their coordinator, and a secretary on the payroll. There is a citizen advisory board of 10-12 actively participating members, a liaison police officer representing the Police Department. Chief Wendell E. Nichols is head of this federally funded experiment.

We appreciate the continuing support of the regular readers of the Bystander in addition to welcoming the new readers. We are also extremely grateful to the Churches for their continued cooperation. As the new editor of the Bystander, I would also like to thank our friends throughout the state for their continued support. But let us not forget that the Bystander will reach out for the entire Black Community. We love all of our people but when the Brothers or Sisters young or old start getting too white in their disdain for their Blackness in the name of love we will slap them! I do not exempt myself. When we get too complacent here at the Bystander write us! Don't be afraid because we're not the one who is trying to rip you off. In our struggle to stand up to the challenges of raising our families in violent America we must be ready. Ready with a moral resolve to make blackness our creed. A creed of equal justice, equal opportunity and an equal chance for every black man and woman and child to be their God-given beautiful black selves.

Lynwood W. Parker

by Mikel Johnson

William House, the founder and president of Graphic Incentive and the GATI Corporation, has announced that he will be turning over the administrative reins of his business to well-known business organizer Lynwood W. Parker of E. St. Louis, Illinois, within the next few weeks.

Mr. House founded the Graphic Incentive firm after moving to Des Moines in the Fall of 1969. The business serves as a professional advertising and commercial arts agency which specializes in the design and production of advertising and promotional material. With the success of this enterprise, House formed the Graphic Arts Training Institute to train, retrain, or upgrade individuals seeking careers in the graphic arts profession. House explains, "Training people in the graphic arts is one of my loves. And there have never been enough people instructing in the graphic arts field. I want to train people to be proficient in the work — to be craftsmen — to be multifaceted."

The GATI Corporation has been instrumental in training

26 students in the graphic arts by having them work on projects patterned after actual work the Graphic Incentive agency performs. This program was designed to give the student a close relationship to professionals.

Along with these two programs, House has formed a third entity which will handle the marketing of supplies and is known as the Art House.

In the next few months, the training portion of the corporation will be phased out and the GATI Corporation will operate as a production agency and graphic consulting firm producing all types of brochures, programs, reports, newsletters and all other general advertising materials.

In turning over the administrative end of his business to Mr. Parker, House hopes to be able to devote his energies to the actual production of his art work and to making himself an asset to the community.

S T A T E REPRESENTATIVE A JUNE FRANKLIN said of the Black Caucus, "I had to go to Omaha and was not there for the entire meeting. I thought it was a historical occasion and certainly something that has been needed for a long time and the fact that a cross section of the black community of Iowa could sit down and come together and draw some conclusions of what is needed in Iowa and the nation as pertains to black people."

And she felt that it was important that two young leaders were at the head of the planning. These men were Michael O'Bannon and Wesley Chapman.

JAMES B. MORRIS, JR. observed of the Black Caucus: "I was very thrilled with the caucus and that was why I stayed with it all day. I felt that the delegation, most of whom I would say were younger people were genuinely concerned with the potential that existed for a recognized expression from the black community."

Only once did I hear any reference to partisanship made and it was after the afternoon plenary session.

It was also refreshing to know that we have 11 elected black officials in Iowa, when you realize that they were for the most part elected by white voters. Several of the elected black officials were on hand and their experience and thinking was quite valuable. I think that the platform that the Iowa delegation will take to Gary next week is a realistic, thoughtful, and achievable idea."

LISTEN CLOSELY TO THE RUMBLINGS ON THE POLITICAL SCENE! They are very, very interesting. The tempo will increase unless spring fever takes over.

DENNIS CRAIG CLARK sent the John E. Johnsons (Mr. and me) a card from the U.S. Naval Training Center, San Diego, California. With Chief Warrant Officer George LeBlanc so very much on the scene and young Clark reaching out to us from San Diego's Naval Center. I'm doing a crazy mixture, "going the New Bystander" and "going Navy too." (You see CWO LeBlanc has even got a grandma going Navy!)

MODEL CITIES SENIOR CITIZENS INC. is one of the smoothest running agencies of agencies! And it is one of the most smoothly run agencies, Mrs. Morris! The first observation is our orchid to people like Mr. Farrell, who answered the phone call, volunteering the information I needed even though I had dialed the wrong number. The second of course, is a compliment to Director Edna Morris, a top executive, whose delegation of responsibilities allots each person a "share" in the Center's functions.

old conception of what jazz music is supposed to be (and there are these old critics and the old audience who really don't know what the hell is going on) so that their reaction immediately was, "Well we don't understand it, so we don't like it and it's no good."

It seems to me that basically, these are young musicians playing new exciting jazz and the audience that's reacting is a young audience and even the critics who dig the new music are young critics. The old critics, who don't want anything to change, who want the status quo to stay, are the people who really cause all the trouble.

Pharaoh: I feel that if a person wants to play music, you know, he just takes what he has and comes out to play. You know, I always feel that if you have something to say, then play no matter what. If you've got that kind of energy, you should play — it's like I say to you, come on out and play.

J&P: Some of the sounds today actually bother old line critics. The sounds of the different players are new and irritating to many of the old time listeners.

Pharaoh: It didn't really matter to me because I wanted to play, and wherever I could play, I would try to go and play. But I feel like I am still trying to bring out the best of myself, and I haven't even found the right mouthpiece yet. I don't know what it is, but there is something that keeps me wanting to change the sound and keep going on to new and different sounds and forms of music.

J&P: Do you feel that you are getting to more people now?

Pharaoh: Well, I see more people coming out, you know, coming out to the clubs.

J&P: Well, doesn't that make you feel good?

Pharaoh: Let me put it this way, you know — because I play and work more than ever. I always wanted to be a musician, and play for more people — that's what I really wanted to do. So I seem to be accomplishing this.

J&P: Are you going to be doing any traveling? Will you be getting out into other parts of the country? Are people going to see you in person?

Pharaoh: Yes, we will travel more than ever. We are going to Boston, Texas, Los Angeles and to Europe. It will be good to see the people.

J&P: Well, with the success of Tauhid and now Karma, you have a wave of followers all over the world. It's too bad John isn't here to enjoy all of this interest in black music. Also, I might add, to enjoy the chagrin of those old bald headed and grey haired critics.

Pharaoh: Oh wow! Right. Thanks.

Billy Davis, McCann-Erickson's music director, confers with the Franklin sisters: Erma, Caroline and Aretha during a recording session for a new series of radio commercials.

davis main man

Billy Davis, producer, singer, composer, lyricist and arranger, has been the main man in developing the contagious, catchy sound of the Miller High Life beer commercials.

Davis, who is vice president and music director of McCann-Erickson advertising agency, came out of the popular music business, and the slender, quiet-spoken man still finds time to write hit songs.

Davis has produced every piece of Miller music including tavern pianist Johnny Mack's rendition of "If You've Got The Time," as well as The Troggs and Brook Benton versions of that same theme. More recently he worked on music for Miller Malt Liquor commercials.

As a producer, he negotiates contracts with talent, works out the most effective arrangements for them, and is responsible for all facets of the actual recording session.

Since he joined the agency in 1968, Davis has helped produce a number of award-winning commercials, such as Ray Charles' "In Between The Heartaches" for a leading soft drink firm.

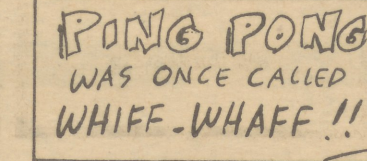

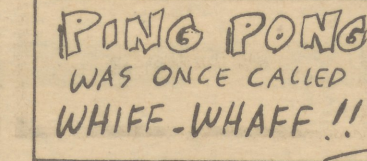

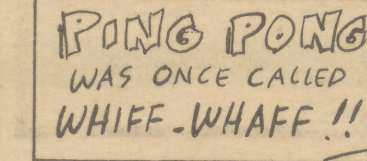

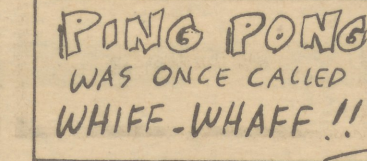

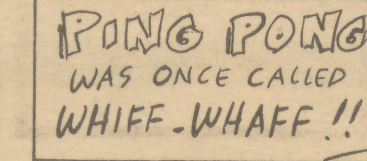

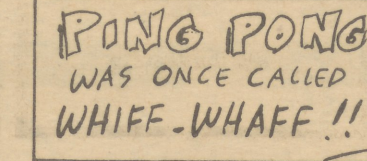

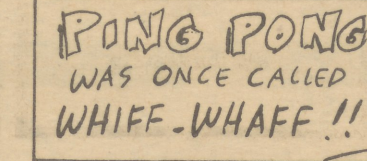

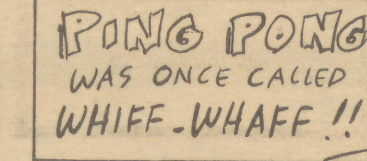

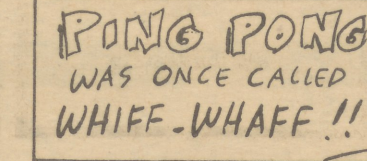

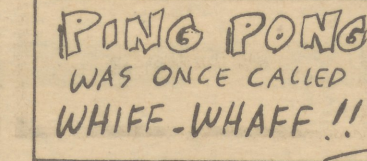

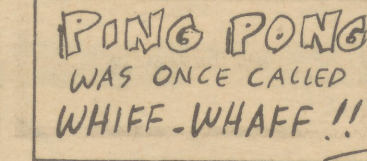

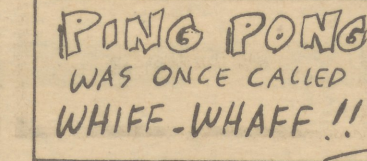

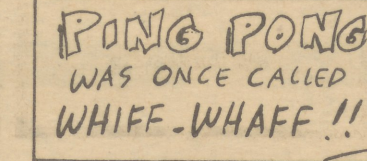

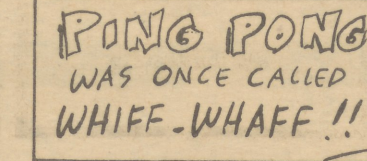

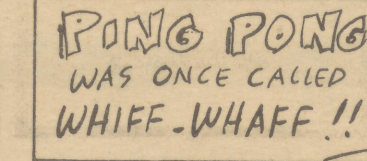

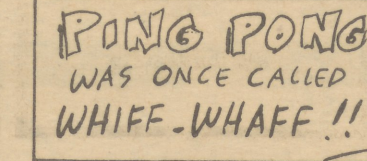

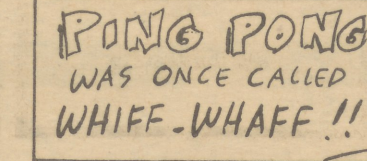

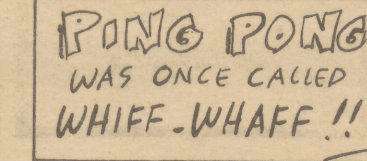

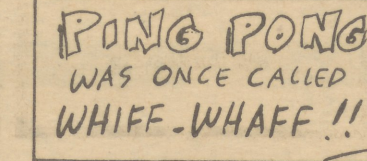

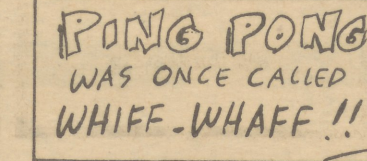

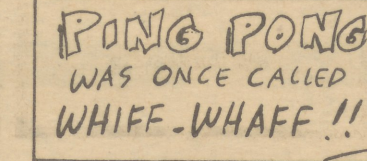

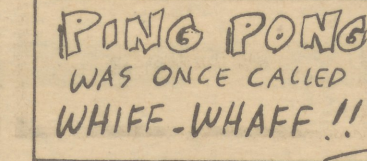

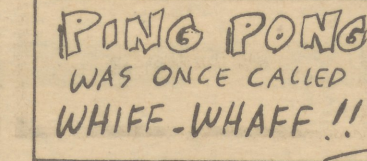

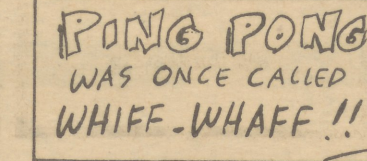

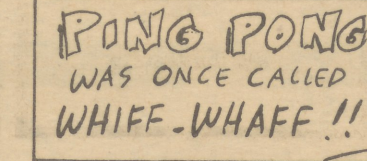

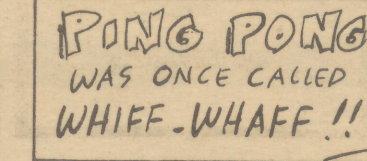

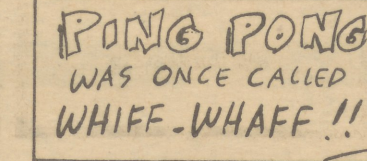

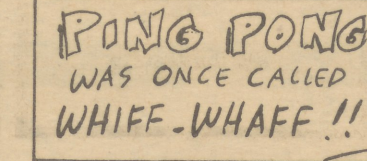

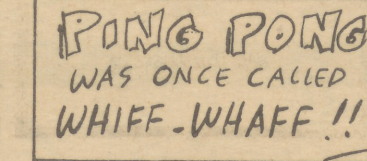

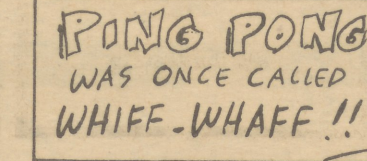

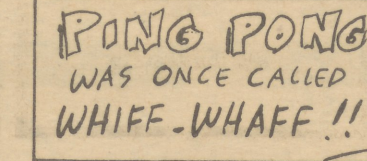

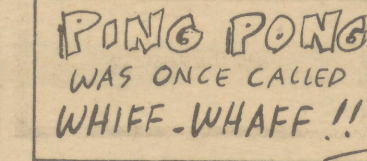

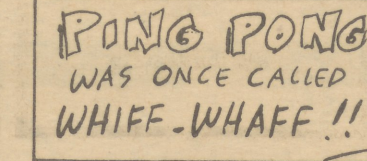

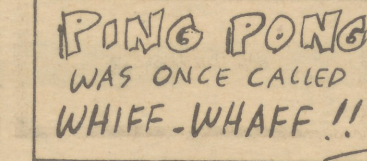

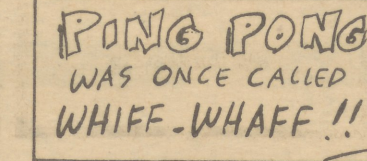

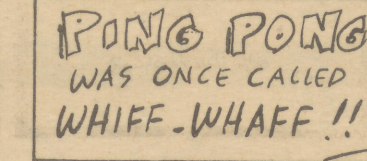

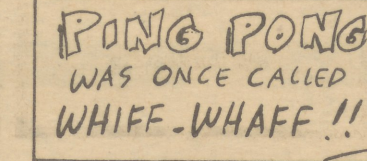

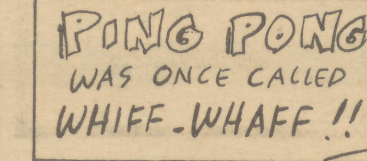

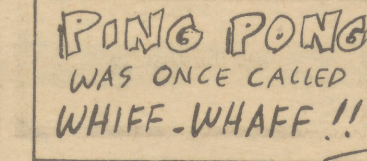

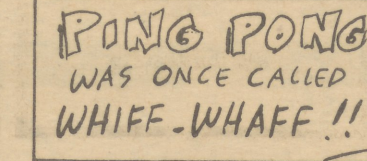

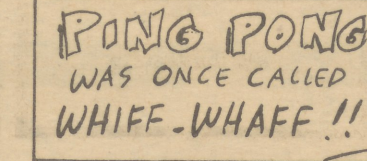

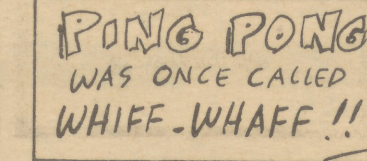

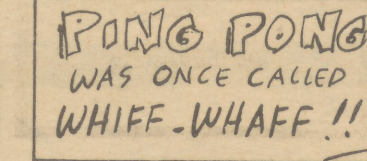

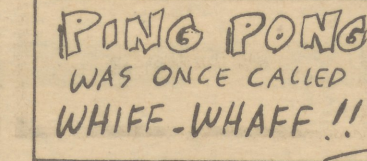

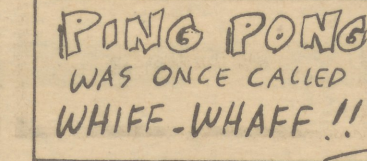

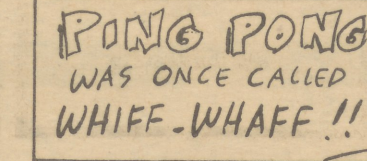

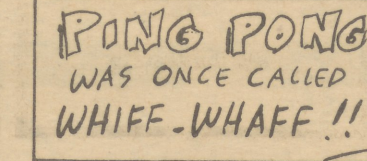

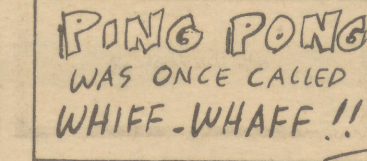

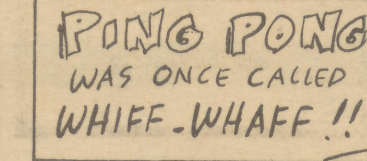

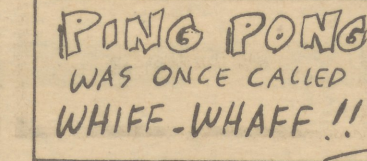

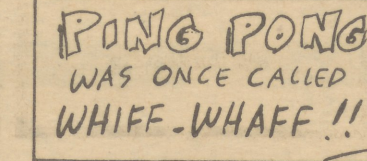

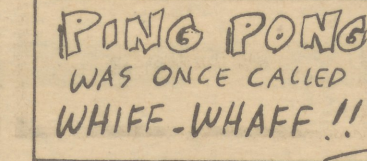

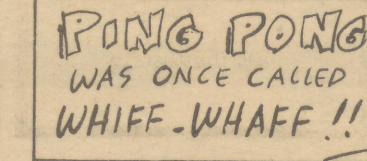

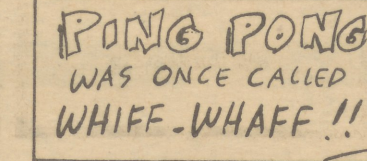

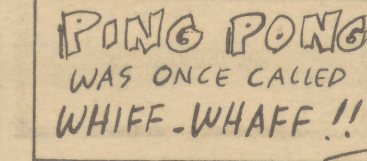

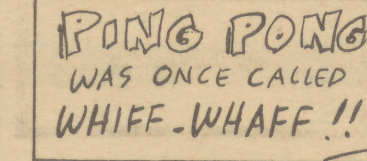

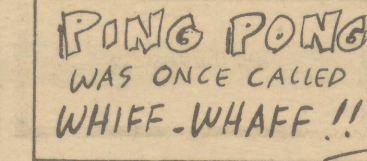

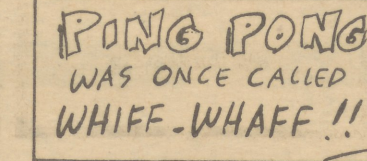

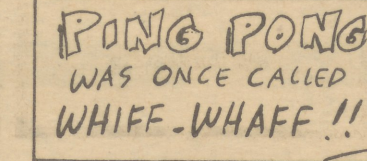

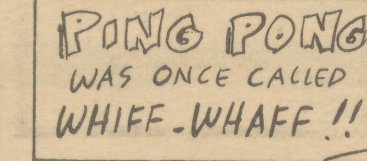

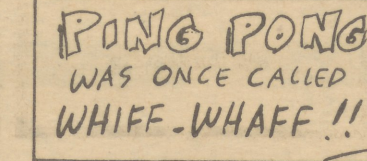

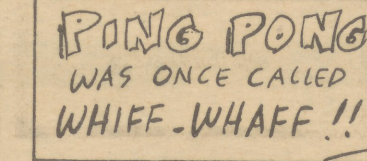

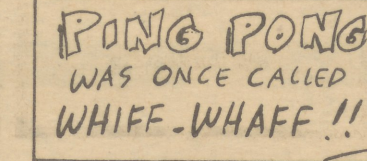

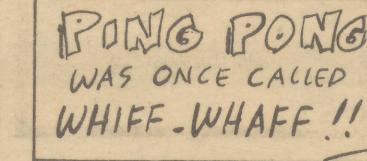

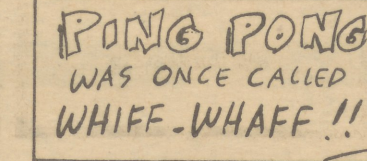

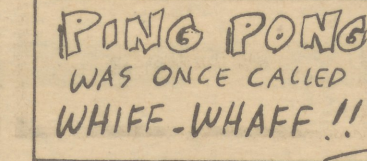

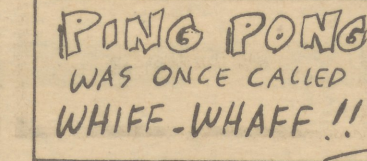

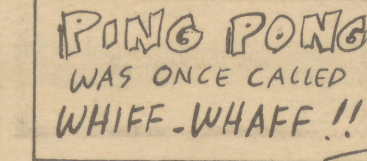

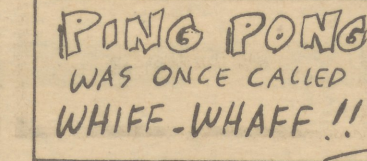

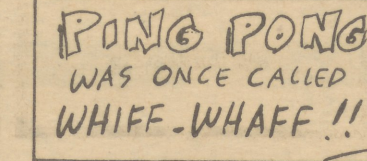

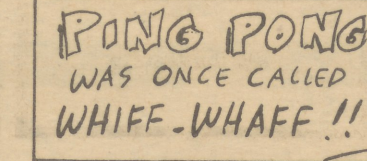

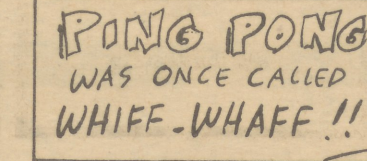

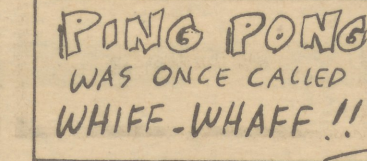

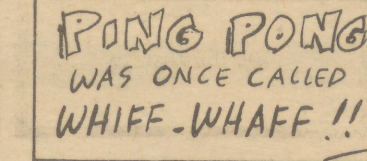

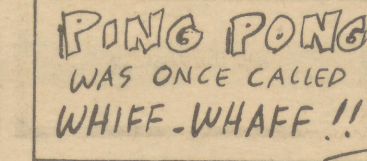

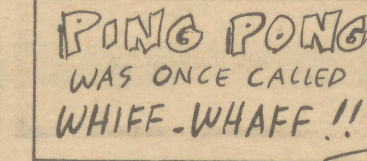

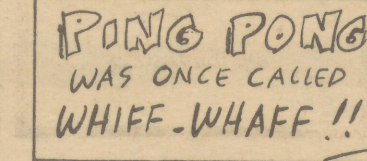

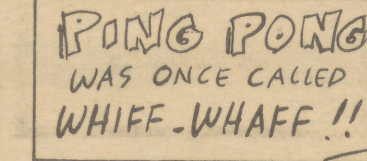

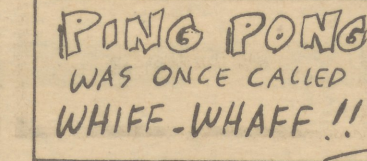

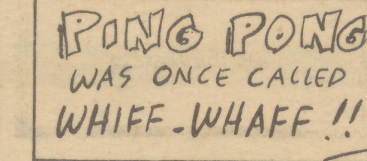

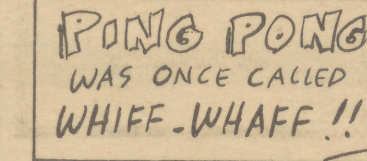

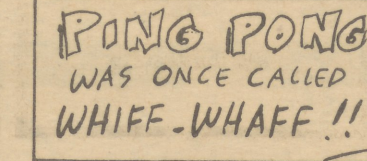

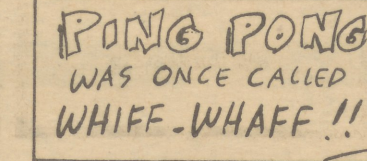

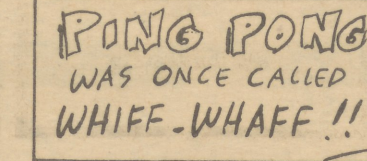

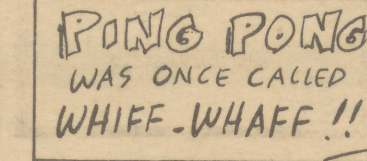

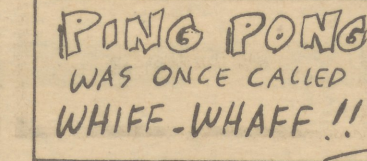

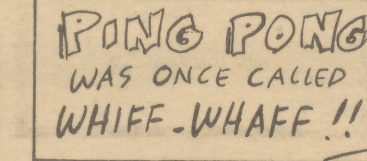

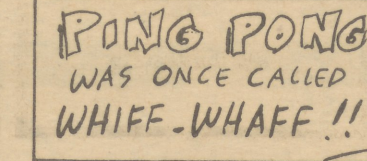

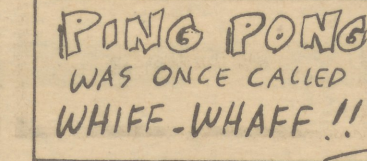

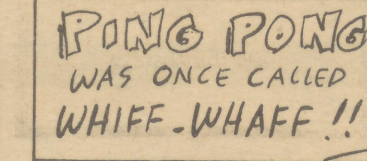

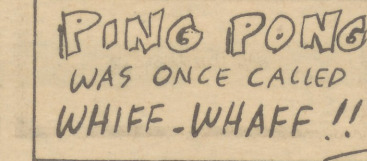

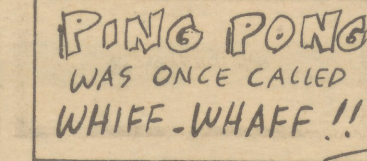

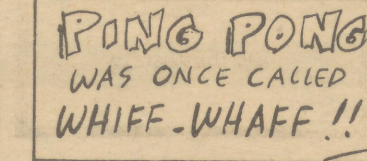

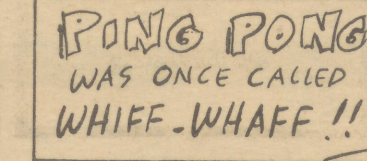

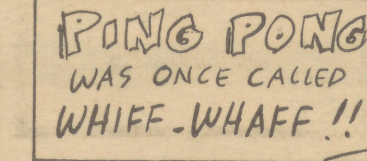

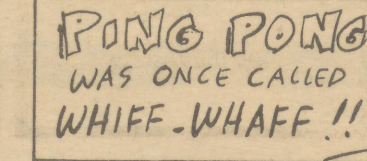

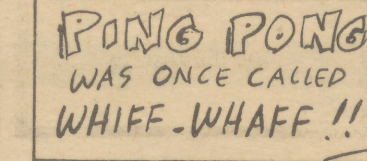

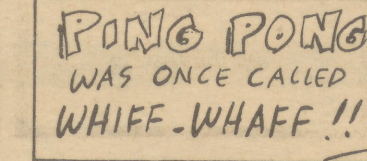

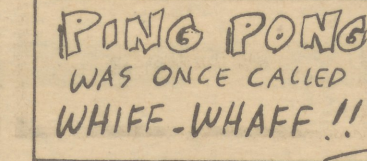

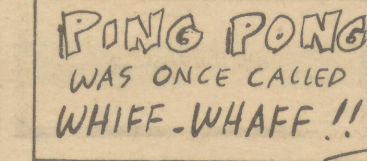

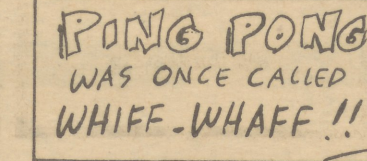

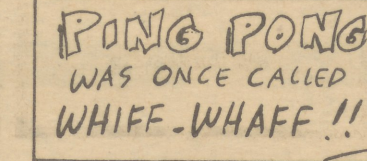

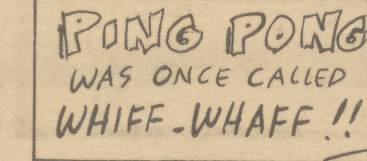

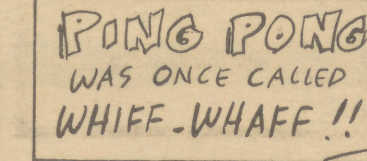

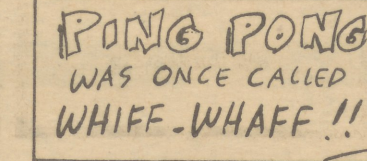

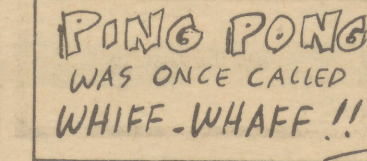

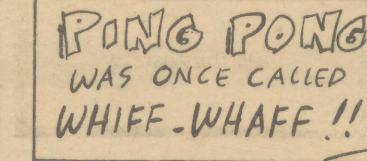

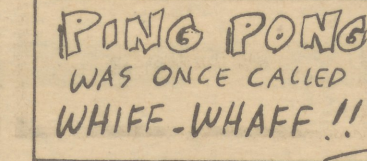

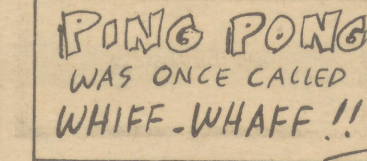

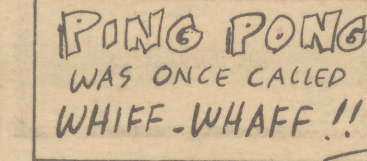

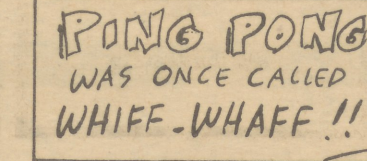

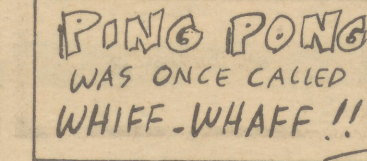

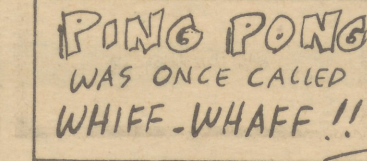

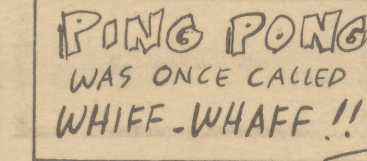

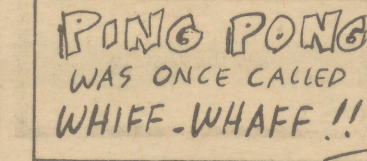

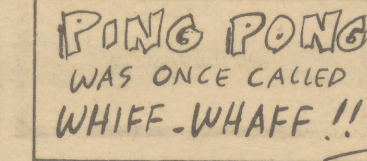

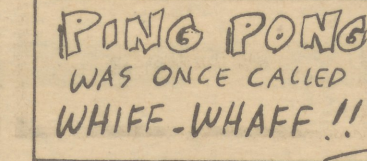

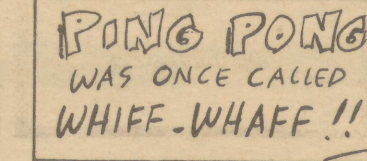

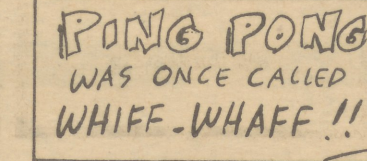

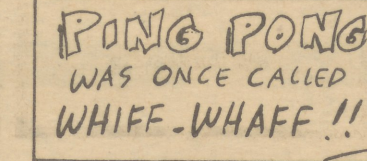

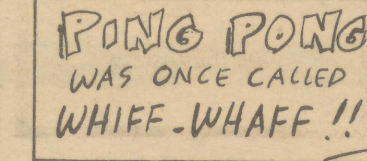

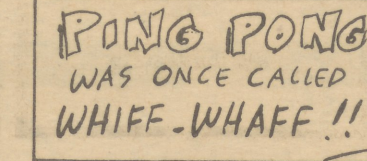

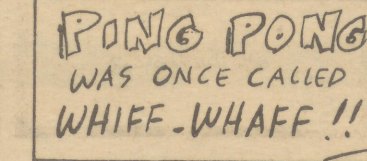

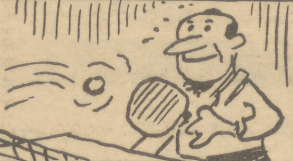

Davis helped Bill Backer write the lyrics and tune of the top record entitled "I'd Like to Teach the Word to Sing (In Perfect Harmony)" recorded by The New Seekers and The Hillside Singers.

Motown's Temptations are now represented by the Edward Windsor Wright Corporation for publicity and public relations. Don Foster, personal manager for the "Temps," representing Motown's management arm, Multi-Media Management, made the announcement today.

EWV President Ed Wright said that he was proud that his organization had been chosen to represent "the world's leading male vocal group for the past decade."
