3rd year of racial strife

cairo, illinois struggle continues

BY GLENN T. McKINNEY

The Black Theology Staff was invited to Cairo, Illinois on Saturday, April 8, 1972 to honor the 3rd anniversary of the boycott and solidarity of the black community against the racist administration, business merchants, and white citizens of that small tense city located at the southern tip of that state.

Joanna Cheatom, Jim Oday, and myself accepted the invitation to go to Cairo, to offer our moral and financial support, and to lend our analysis to an explosive situation that could someday prevail in the Greater Des Moines Community, if existing conditions are not eradicated by the elected officials and businessmen of our community.

Cairo, Illinois has been the fuse that will possibly ignite the powder keg of race war in America. In recent months Wilmington, North Carolina and Mariana, Arkansas have followed in the wake of racial upheaval perpetrated by white racist, business merchants (small and corporate) and supported or ignored by government officials.

Since the beginning of the boycott in the Spring of 1969, the black/white population of Cairo has dwindled from 18,000 to the present population of 6,000, the two races divided about fifty-fifty.

The poverty of Cairo can best be understood by the number of welfare recipients. Fifty percent of the black people and forty percent of the white people are on welfare. The remaining black population has been used as cheap or reserve labor force. In 1966 blacks were forced off welfare to pick cotton, while whites from outstate and neighboring counties were allowed to come in and work in the businesses owned by white racists.

Segregation, discrimination and racism is the policy of radical vigilantes, who now run the city government and most of the main business specially equipped vans and trained dogs were also used against the black community.

Numerous attacks have been made against the black community. vigilantes have solidarity and militant stance in regards to their survival.

The 3rd anniversary of the boycott that we attended was the 150th rally held in St. Columbia Church during the past three years.

The program consisted of spirituals sang by the choir who were clad in Republic of New Africa Colors and backed by Uaura Ensemble, a young band from St. Louis. A recognition of supportive groups from all over the country that was present was announced, Black Theology being one of those.

Guest speakers were: Dr. Blount, Chairman Advisory Board St. Louis; Edna Williams, a hardworking sister who is the United Front Coordinator in Chicago; James Chair, Chief of Staff National United Front and Relatives of Political prisoners.

The list of speakers was headed by Rev. Charles Loen who spoke last. One has to be impressed with the dedication and conviction of this man who believes that God is on the side of the poor and oppressed and offers the Light and Way in Black people's just struggle. He repeatedly cited examples establishments. These vigilantes are known as the "white hats" because their organization is symbolized by the white construction hats they wear. They are reported to number about 600 and have been armed and sanctioned by the city government. The strength of these vigilantes is epitomized by an armoured vehicle equipped with automatic weapons, food, a communications network, and capable of housing about 12 men. In past years fired indiscriminately upon the projects (more like slave cabins) and St. Columbia Church where bullet holes the size of silver dollars have peppered the church walls and broken windows where tear gas canisters have been used. Some of these attacks were made from the roof of the police station a few hundred yards away.

Two instances of outright murder have been cited, the cases involving a 73 year old black man clubbed to death for allegedly raping a 31 black community however have not undermined the efforts to be treated with respect and received justice, and to live as descent human beings.

In the spring of 1969, led by Rev. Charles Koen and the United Front Organization, the black community launched a boycott that has lasted 1096 days. Their is no end in sight until fair and equal justice is received. Most of the attacks upon the black community are because of their in the Bible of biblical heroes who were freed from the throes of oppression when offering their souls and spirits to God. However, he did not negate the fact that God helps those who help themselves, and the black people of Cairo have exhibited this will and struggle to the point of defending themselves when attacked unjustly.

Rev. Koen's own enlightenment came during a 51 day fast when he was incarcerated and confined for his activities in Cairo. The authorities finally had him released when they thought he was "mad" and was going to starve to death. Rev. Koen's reply to this was "You can kill the body but you can't destroy the Soul."

After the rally, we went on a march through the black community and the downtown section of Cairo. I was able to see the hostile atmosphere in Cairo. On our march, every type of bigot, policeman, and radical racist could be seen. They were in cars, in alleys, and standing on street corners, some openly taking pictures.

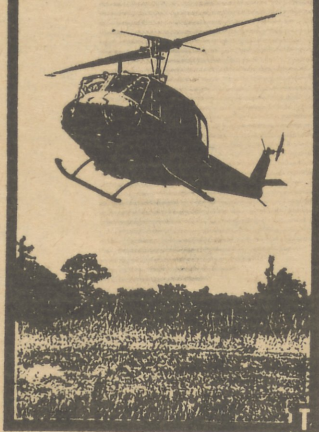

There was little fear among the marchers who were sprinkled with young white supporters and sympathizers who attended the rally. Chants of "solidarity" were shouted by the marchers. I had to feel nervous myself for fear some warped - minded racist would have his sights on us from a rooftop, there was no hustle though.

We were unable to stay for the Communal Meal and Afro Dance that marked the closing of the day's activities in celebration of their boycott anniversary.

The greatest ignorance among people today is the belief that the struggle in Cairo is a race war. We must not allow ourselves to be blinded by a small, egotistical minority of men driven by greed and racism to divide the people of America to serve their own warped interest. An old black woman summed up this blindness. After her home and community was attacked. Armed with a shotgun she was quoted as saying, "White folks if we can't get along, lets get it on."

Stroke Can Be Reduced

Stroke, the nation's third largest cause of death, appears to spring out from nowhere and attack its victims without warning.

But new evidence reveals certain characteristics of the stroke-prone person, says Iowa Heart Association. It adds that often there are symptoms to warn that a stroke is on the way.

They take the form of "little strokes." Because they may last for only a few seconds, or at most a few days, they are often ignored by the victim. These symptoms are:

1. Sudden loss of vision in one eye, or sometimes double vision, with complete recovery in several minutes.
2. Sudden weakness, prickling sensation or numbness of arm or leg with recovery after several minutes or up to 24 hours.
3. Intermittent difficulty in speech or written communication.
4. Intermittent lack of iowa black caucus begins

Representatives of The Iowa Black Caucus met in Cedar Rapids Saturday, April 8, 1972 at the Jane Boyd Community House. Those present were:

Arthur Higgins Ora McQueen, Hugh Gibson, Wes Chapman, Magnolia Waller, Patricia Greer, Carl L. Williams, Margaret Kirby and Bruce Taylor.

Charlene Smith Mary Smith, Era Douglas, Bob Smith, Robert Wright, Jr., Michael Bannon, Mr. and Mrs. George Reed, Jr., Mary Robinson and Clarence Jackson.

Four major cities in Iowa were represented. The group heard a report from Bob Smith who attended the National Steering Committee meeting in Washington, D.C.

Officers for the Iowa State Caucus Steering Committee were elected, they were:

Wes Chapman - Chairman; Clarence Jackson - Vice - Chairman; Ora McQueen - Recording Secretary and Monroe Colston - Publicity Chairman.

A motion was made that the caucus be incorporated and was passed. The State Steering Committee decided to meet in Des Moines, Saturday and Sunday April 15th and 16th at the Black Theology Center. The committee also adopted its statement of purpose which reads as follows:

Whereas our Black Communities are crime haunted, dying grounds. Huge sectors of our youth and countless others face permanent unemployment. Those of us who work find muscular coordination.

Iowa Heart Association also lists six risk factors of stroke and warns that the higher number of risk factors for any individual, the greater the chance of stroke. These risk factors include:

1. High blood pressure.
2. A history of brief, short-lived "small strokes."
3. A variety of heart abnormalities which can be detected by medical examination and x-ray.
4. Evidence of hardening of the arteries in parts of the body such as the heart, neck and legs.
5. Diabetes.
6. Increased levels of blood cholesterol and other fats.

Although these are the major risk factors associated with stroke, other factors to be considered are cigarette smoking, high levels of red blood cells and the presence of gout.

Stroke claims 211,000 lives annually and is outranked only by heart attacks (670,000) and cancer (318,000) in the number of deaths caused each year. The risk factors of stroke are similar to those of heart attack; both are caused, for the most part, by a blockage of blood flow, preventing the delivery of oxygen to parts of the body beyond the clogged artery.

When this blockage occurs in a blood vessel supplying the heart itself, a heart attack may occur. When a blood vessel to the brain is our paychecks are able to purchase less and less. Neither the courts nor the prisons contribute to anything resembling justice or reformation. The schools are unable or unwilling to educate our children for the real world of our struggles. Meanwhile, the officially approved epidemic of drugs threatens to wipe out the minds and strength of our best young warriors.

Economic, cultural, and spiritual depression stalk Black America and the price for survival often appears to be more than we are able to pay. On every side, in every area of our lives, the American institutions in which we have placed our trust are unable to cope with the crises they have created by their single-minded dedication to profits for some and white supremacy above all.

The Iowa Black Caucus is addressed primarily to Black people in Iowa. It is our attempt to define some of the essential changes which must take place in this state as we and our children move to self-determination and true independence. It assumes that no truly basic change for our benefit takes place in Black or White America unless we Black people, regardless of political or organizational affiliation, organize to initiate that change. It assumes that we must have some essential agreement on overall goals, even though we may differ on many specific strategies.

Therefore, this is our initial statement of goals and directions, our first definition of some crucial issues around which Black people must organize and move in 1972 and beyond. Anyone who claims to be serious about the survival and liberation of Black People MUST be serious about this implementation.

blocked or when a vessel in the brain ruptures, a stroke may occur.

Because specific areas of the brain control body, arms, hands, legs, face, speech, reading and sight, the effects of a stroke depend on which control center is deprived of blood and for how long.

The effects of a stroke may be slight or severe, temporary or permanent, all depending on the extent of cell damage and how effectively the body can repair the injured area of the brain or restore blood supply to it.

But stroke may be prevented, says Iowa Heart Association, by regular medical checkups and by taking the advice of your doctor. For more information on stroke and other heart and blood vessel diseases, call the Iowa Heart Association.

hud programs have failed

Samuel Jackson
Asst. HUD Secretary

WASH. — Eradicating the nation's urban slums and ills has consistently failed, according to Samuel Jackson, General Secretary of the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development, because the men who did the planning "didn't have to live in the city and, therefore, didn't give a damn about them."

"We just haven't been able to make as substantial a dent in the housing problem in America as we could have because the people that were planning and designing the 'new cities' didn't have to live in the city they designed," said Jackson, who doubles as General Manager of the New Community Development Corporations.

One solution to the problem as Jackson sees it, is a large cadre of black planners, designers, city managers, and engineers. "Previously, we've been concentrating on electing officials that were black, but running a city and improving it entails far more than that."

"What we've got to do is start training some blacks for these other positions and make sure they live in the inner city. I think we'll see men who have a real desire in seeing that the best improvements are made for the benefit for that city," Jackson said.

Must Live In City

"These people must be prepared to live in the city though," Jackson emphasized. "They can't flee to the suburbs as other planners have done. We have got to develop a cadre of qualified blacks who can do the job. Then we'll start seeing some real progress in our cities."

But Jackson believes HUD, under the Nixon Administration, has begun to make some progress in helping blacks become qualified for these posts.

There were 400 blacks in a work-study program in offices last summer learning urban planning and city management. And in HUD's Urban Fellowship Program, there are an additional 100 persons — mostly blacks, who are given full tuition and a stipend to learn urban planning and management.

"When these programs began," Jackson laments, "there were only nine blacks with Master's degrees in the field. That's improved substantially."

Some Success In Housing

"Our cities had been planned for and by whites, although blacks often were the majority race in the city, especially in the inner city. Now we are beginning to get some blacks interested in the urban planning field, but it hasn't been easy."

"We (blacks) just weren't interested in it before since we had been excluded as a result of racism in the past. But we've been able to convince many of our black brothers that the problems of the inner city won't be solved until more of us become involved on all levels," Jackson said.

Although HUD is having a problem in totally developing the inner city, the agency is having some success and is making a dent in the field of housing.

"We've made a dent in the area of housing," Jackson says. "Since 1969 the nation has built more than 1 million units and most of these have been public housing."

More Quality Housing In '72

"In low and moderate income housing, we built 350,000 units in 1969, 400,000 in 1970 and 500,000 last year. Naturally, we expect to build a lot more this year as well," Jackson claims.

"This administration has built more housing in the last three years than anybody else and we're still not satisfied because a great need continues to exist for housing, especially public housing."

Jackson, however, believes HUD needs to do more to ensure quality housing is being built. "We've demonstrated quantity-wise that it can be done, but now we have to prove that the quality does not suffer when the quantity goes up."

Program Closer to People

"Ninety to ninety-five per cent of our housing is a fairly good quality, but that remaining five to ten per cent leaves us dissatisfied. But it will get better," Jackson says.

In recent months HUD has been undergoing a decentralization of its program operations, in an attempt to bring the program closer to the people, Jackson says.

There are now ten regional offices as compared with only six under the Johnson Administration and offices in all 50 states, instead of only 39 for the same period.

"The decentralization will bring an improvement in the HUD program and I believe the administration will be that much better when we get all of the problems worked out," he added.

HUD will also be working to insure a greater economic mix in its housing projects from now on, Jackson said. "We've just got to make sure that happens."

Need State Cooperation

The agency has also started a counseling program for low and moderate income families who are planning to become homeowners under a special HUD program.

The program would assist residents in learning proper care of their home and surroundings.

"We can't do anything," he said, "until we have the cooperation of the state governments, because it is they who enact laws governing the municipalities and counties. If they neglect the cities, then there is very little we can do about it now."

"It's certainly regrettable that this is true in some instances, but it is. Without complete cooperation by the state, we can do little to assist the local governments in meeting their pressing urban problems. Most of the states realize the predicament the cities are in, but some just won't provide any assistance."

gop "yes & no" on busing

WASH. — The nation's only Southern Republican Governor and the Nixon Administration's chief civil rights enforcer are split on busing as an instrument for achieving quality education.

J. Stanley Pottinger, director of the U.S. Office for Civil Rights, claimed President Nixon's proposed anti-busing legislation "will greatly aid the forward momentum of equal educational opportunity" because the measures will lend clarity and consensus to desegregation efforts.

But Virginia's Republican Governor Linwood Holton, who had endorsed an anti-busing amendment to the U.S. Constitution last year, reversed himself and defended busing as a "last tool" to achieve educational equality.

An anti-busing amendment, Holton concluded, "would be tragic, and would take this nation back from a position it has finally reached of recognizing that black people are citizens of this country and are entitled, without having to fight for their rights, to all of their rights."

A style show was given Friday, March 31st, at the YWCA by the Young People's Council Organization on behalf of "Sickle Cell Anemia." The purpose of the Y.P.C.'s is to attempt to coordinate activities of all neighborhood agencies with youth involvement of the Model City and Planned Variation projects. Among other activities of the Council, such as, that of leadership, employment, functions in education, culture, and recreation — their chief priority was a fund raising project for "sickle cell anemia", a genetic abnormality found mainly among the black race; in general, a blood disease that cripples and sometimes causes death. Since research must continue for a cure to be found, the Y.P.C.'s have promoted various projects for the benefit of the Sickle Cell Anemia Foundation. Youth involvement, youth interest, and youth concern help make the Youth Council a viable organization.

"Camera Three" will present Miss Nelson singing the songs she favors, an intriguing combination of blues material, standards, show tunes, and the simple songs of poet Rod McKuen. One of these songs, "Mean World," has had a particular influence on her whole career, as she will relate.

HARLEM'S HANDSOMEST Godfrey wades through Jonelle Allen are the ro life, making friends, telling Charleston Blue," the ne jokes, having a love affair production for Warner Bros. with the police departments Cambridge and Rymond St. of the world, and being Warren. It is a sequel to "Cott warm and sympathetic to Allen, who played a secretary anyone within reach of his won stage fame in the bearhug. Gentlemen of Verona," for wl nomination.

While they have some big things in common, like talent and color, the two actors are not exactly a matched pair, either in appearance or temperament. Godfrey is round and energetic, talkative and funny; Raymond is tall and angular, precise and stand-offish.

Different Off-Screen

In their respective roles, they operate more or less alike. They are tough, dedicated and unafraid, and any mistakes they make are righteous ones. Off-screen, however, it is something else again.

Raymond maintains a granite profile. His stylish approach to life is just as honest as the time and money he has given to help underprivileged children. He is cooler than Godfrey, more disciplined and less welcoming. While Godfrey may be out filming a dope documentary for the police department, Raymond is teaching a bunch of delinquents how to fence with epees instead of broken coke bottles.

Both See

Black Problems

Both men are equally concerned with black problems, and try to ease them in their own way. Whereas Godfrey might make a joke about it, Raymond would more likely make a case of it.

When they get together on the screen, under the direction of Mark Warren, it's a symphony in theatrical side-by-side. Cheek by jowl and gun by gun, they plough through the murder and venality and deceptions of backstreet Harlem, making the busts as they come and never falling out of step with one another.

Raymond doesn't always laugh at Godfrey's rolling eyes and chunky jokes, but neither does Godfrey always quite understand Raymond's resolute dignity. Nevertheless, they respect each other. And what really holds them together so strongly and completely is their full understanding of the characters they are playing on the screen and their ever-functioning professionalism.

THE ROOSEVELT CLUB'S SPRING FORMAL held Saturday night at the elegant Downtown Holiday Inn's Frontier Room was again a memorable occasion. The Club organized in 1919 is headed by Ted Martin, president; Sam Bradley, vice president; John Jackson, secretary; Bonnie Herndon, treasurer, and has a membership of 41 persons.

AMONG THE MANY OUT OF TOWN GUESTS WERE Mr. and Mrs. Henry Rhodes; Mr. and Mrs. Jim Woolfolk; Mr. and Mrs. Leroy Hester; Mr. Joe Lewis and guest, and Mr. and Mrs. T. J. Williams; Mr. and Mrs. Reed Mottley and Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Marshall; Dr. and Mrs. Arnott Machett and Mr. and Mrs. Willie Nesbitt; Mr. and Mrs. Cleo Winston; Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Mattox; Mr. and Mrs. James Campbell; Miss Jennifer Campbell and Mr. Keith LaMar; Dr. Fred Graham; Mr. and Mrs. Harvey E. Wilbekin.

ANNA MAE CARTER (MRS. OVAL) tells me that the club entertains four times yearly: A game dinner occurs in February, the formal takes place in April, continuing the original plan that it follow East Sunday; a picnic takes place July 4; a dinner dance for club members and their wives is held in October.

OLDEST CLUB MEMBERS ARE SAID TO BE J. B. Morris and Oval Carter, active; A. P. Trotter and E. P. Jackson, inactive. These men are not charter members, however. J. B. Morris was in France in 1919 the year of the club's organization. Among charter members recalled by Mr. Morris were Dr. W. S. Lowery, dentist and organizer; Herbert Wright, Director of Willkie House then known as War Camp Community Service; E. Tracy Blackburn, Chief Clerk of the City Engineer; Branham Hyde, postman and father of Robert Hyde; J. G. Browne, Captain of the Hotel Fort Des Moines waiters; Harry S. Burnham, Railway Brakeman; A. J. Booker, M.D.; A. A. Alexander, Engineer; Jim Woods, porter and later messenger to Gov. Dan Turner, Harry Seymour; Buckner, Custodian; John McClain, janitor; and John S. Coleman, railway mail clerk, A. P. Trotter, restaurateur.

GEORGINE MORRIS (MRS. J.B.) when asked about the beautiful women at the ball, observed "There wasn't a short dress there. There were several evening slacks suits worn ... they were very lovely." She was especially pleased to see Mr. and Mrs. Harvey E. Wilbekin. She is the former Cleota Proctor daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Proctor. Mrs. Morris was looking back to Cleota's wedding gown which she made. "It was of white Chantilli Lace; those worn by the bridesmaids were aqua marquette and lace. The wedding was very elaborate and still spoken of as one of the most beautiful weddings among our group in Des Moines. The wedding party included nine bridesmaids, a flower girl and ring bearer.

MR. AND MRS. WILBEKIN AND MR. AND MRS. CARL WILLIAMS, owners of the New Iowa Bystander found much to discuss. Wilbekin is a native of St. Thomas of the Virgin Islands, and Mrs. Williams' home is St. Croix, the second of the three islands making up the Virgin Islands.

IN 1919, WITH THE MEN IN FRANCE, the young wives felt that their husbands would return speaking French! Wanting to be prepared, they entered Drake summer school! Mrs. Morris took French and Public Speaking; the late Mrs. C. P. Howard took French and Education; Mrs. Cleveland Abbott, (whose husband, now deceased, was athletic director at Tuskegee Institute) took French and English. (Mrs. Morris says this was the hottest summer you ever saw!!)

smart food shopping

by Ann Kastler

You can cut your food bill practically in half — despite those rising prices. How? By taking the time to acquire a few good buying habits and some simple food know-how.

First of all, make it a habit to check the newspapers for weekly food specials. Usually, the stores like to run their advertisements featuring food-buy savings every Wednesday in the newspapers and the local shoppers. Also, check when your favorite store likes to run unadvertised specials and cut out those coupons — from newspapers and magazines both. It's amazing how much you can save over a year by taking advantage of those coupon discounts.

When shopping, buy your foods at the cost-per-ounce or fluid ounce or per-pound basis. You'll soon discover that it isn't always the best policy to buy the largest of something. For example, a 16-oz. can of the same juice might be marked at 60 cents whereas a 14 oz. can of the same juice might be marked at 40 cents. Obviously, the smaller can would be a smarter buy. Try not to buy large sizes of perishable dairy products, or milk by the gallon — even though it's cheaper — unless you use these foods in about a week's time. Spoilage of food can be costly.

Make a list of what you need and stick to it. Do your own shopping and take plenty of time and know the prices of the items you buy. Dad is notorious for buying unneeded items and the kids can be great distractors. Usually the best time to shop is early in the morning or late at night during the weekdays. The stores are generally not quite as busy during these times and you avoid the weekend shoppers.

Some other things to watch for are the various food labels. There may be quite a difference between that brand name and the store brand while no difference in quality or quantity. Figure your meat costs on price-per-cooked-serving rather than price-per-pound. Divide the cost of the meat purchased by the number of cooked portions you'll get from the piece. That pot roast at 59-cents-per-pound with all the fat and bone may be a poorer buy than the boneless top round at $1.19-per-pound.

It's also a good idea to buy fresh foods in season. Fruits and vegetables are generally lower in price when they are at the peak of their season. Frozen vegetables may be a good buy between season; however, always compare them with the canned.

Consider the quality you buy in relation to the way it is to be used. If food will be served at the table, where appearance and taste count, you may want a better quality cut or serving. But in a recipe, where shape or subtle shading of flavor is lost in combination with other foods, less fancy quality will do just as well.

When preparing a dish that requires long cooking, like stuffed cabbage, stew or even soups, consider cooking for two or more meals.

Snack foods are costly, so change your children's snack habits. Cut out those cookies and other sweets, and offer them a piece of fruit or cheese and crackers instead.

Finally, save on simple services. Buy a large piece of meat and cut it yourself for stews, goulashes and meat pies. Do the same with poultry. Combine your own beans and franks; slice and grate your cheese. The packaging and pre-slicing of luncheon meats and cold cuts almost doubles their price.

It's a good idea to purchase one of those little hand calculators or adding machines to keep track of your purchases. A wrong ring-up on the cash register when you are checking out can be costly.

Armed with your own common sense and a little knowledge about what you are buying can help you cut your food bills and keep them cut.

the fine print

By Mike Morrow

Ran into my old friend, Hank Pepper, the other day. At first I didn't recognize him, maybe it was the sunglasses.

"Hey, is that you, Hank?" I queried.

"Yeah, it's me," he said, "What's happening."

"Same old stuff, you know," I answered. "What is the stuff on you?" Then I motioned to all the paraphenalia on him.

"Oh, this?" "Yeah, what are you doing?"

"I'm starting my own film company..."

"A what, H.P.? You got to be kidding."

"Man, don't you know that black films are the thing now?"

Right now Hollywood is looking under brick, woodsheds, anywhere. And I'm going to be there with the vanguard." He was beaming now.

I shot back, "Last year you couldn't even shoot a Polaroid picture without the camera in one hand and the instructions in the other."

"Dig, that was last year. Anyway, dig on this equipment: a 16 mm sound on film camera that includes batteries, 500 watt lights, telescopic, wide angle, and fish-eye lenses; and assorted light filters."

"I should ask how you got it all but I won't."

"Don't you want to know what the name of the flick is?"

"Might as well, you're going to tell me anyhow."

"Swiss Licorice and Nutmeg", it's going to show the spicy life on the Block."

After hearing that I had to go. If Hollywood distributes it I'm going to join the John Wayne Fan Club.

southern u. gridders open drills

Baton Rouge, La. — New Head Coach Charlie Bates opened spring football drills at Southern University last Thursday, with over 100 hopefuls in uniform and several dependable on the sidelines.

Injuries and spring sports kept some of the young men Bates will depend on away from the first day of work, but for those who were on hand, it was a day to remember.

Bates, who took over from former Head Coach Alva Tabor after last season, told his Jaguars before their first pushup, "I want you to remember that we're never going to be out of a ball game. As long as the clock is still running, it's just a matter of time before we win."

In addition to Bates, the spring football coaching staff will consist of assistants Dick "Nighttrain" Lane, James Shaw and Gerald Kimble. Former Southern greats Harold Carmichael (Philadelphia Eagles), Allen Dunbar (San Francisco 49ers), James Osborne (Chicago Bears), Willie McKelton (Minnesota Vikings), Henry Brandon (Atlanta Falcons), Laverne Dickerson (New York Giants), and All-Pro Richard Jackson (Denver Broncos) were among those giving the Jags a few tips.

The squad will begin contact work Monday, April 10, and practice 20 days. The 1971 team, which finished 3-7, lost 18 seniors, six drafted by the National Football League, and was hit hard at several positions: fullback, outside linebacker, quarterback, wide receiver, defensive safety and cornerback. Bates also must find a new punter to replace graduated Mitchell Queen.

Among those out for the opening day, however, were two-time All-Southwestern Athletic Conference offensive guard James Wright, All-SWAC safety Charlie Johnson, and several other returning starters. Most notable among those missing from action were quarterback Lawrence "Dillon" Haynes and middle linebacker Godwin Turk, both juniors for the 1972 season.

Turk who broke Isiah Robertson's school record last year with 123 unassisted tackles watched the action from the sidelines. He is recovering from an arm injury. Haynes, who completed 61 of 116 passes as a sophomore for 862 yards, is also a member of the Jaguar baseball team. He was the second most accurate passer in the SWAC last season — his first at Southern since 1966, before he entered the army.

Baton Rouge, La. — The Southern University Tennis Team, coached by Clifton Johnson, won both the singles and doubles competition to claim the championship of the Prairie View College Relays March 30-31 at Prairie View, Tex.

Sophomore Anthony Thomas, from Ft. Lauderdale, Fla., won the singles championship by defeating Prairie View's Charles Milton 3-6, 6-4 and 12-10. The Jaguar team of Adrian Lanier and James Baker won the doubles title by defeating Prairie View's Glenn Moolchan and Milton 6-4, 6-4. Grambling College also participated in the two-day event.

The tournament was Southern's third this season. The Jaguars also have participated in the Rice Relays, the Texas Southern Relays and have played TSU in Baton Rouge.

Southern's next competition will come in New Orleans Saturday, April 15, against the Capitol Tennis Club. The Jaguars also will play and host the Pelican State Relays in Baton Rouge April 21-22.

Coach Johnson's team will close the season at Grambling in both a match against the GC Tigers and in the Southwestern Athletic Conference Championship May 12-13. In addition to Thomas, Lanier and Baker, other team members are Ray Bridges, Glenn Brown, Charles Randolph and Antonie Rene.

according to my friend, who doesn't joke. He said that Johnson could be talking to someone outside the ring about something that happened the night before while his opponent would be trying to land that ten-buck punch. But my teller says Jack never did have to pay off.

Maybe Rocky Marciano or Jack Dempsey were the greatest according to some writers now, but the fellow who used to rate the boxers because he saw them all said the greatest he ever saw was little John Arthur Johnson.

Better quit now. Don't know how to get out of this time well I just dug.

With Allen Ashby

I sometimes wonder if people who write today think nothing happened worth mentioning before they were born. What brought this on was the story in Sunday's daily paper about a guy I know well, Babe Bisignano.

The writer stated that the Babe got his ring name after Primo Carnera, a big name in boxing. Why, the man was world's heavyweight champion for a year, losing to Max Baer. Fame is really fleeting.

Now I would like to know how come the name of Paul Robeson has never come up whenever great athletes are mentioned. Maybe it has, and I just never heard of it. But Robeson was an All-American end from Rutgers in 1914 when only 11 men were selected for that team. That year there were two blacks, the other Fritz Pollard from Brown University.

Son Schooled In Russia
Fritz had quite a spread in sports then

Ebony a while back, but we haven't heard of Paul yet. I know the man offended white America by sending his son to Russia to be educated to escape as he put it, our American race prejudice. He never apologized for any of his actions or statements concerning America.

I don't care one whoop about the guy's politics, national or international. I am interested in the fellow as an athlete, and he was one of the greatest of his day. He starred in basketball and baseball at Rutgers as well as football.

It was said that he could have made it big in the majors as a pitcher, given a chance. So you see Paul Robeson, besides being one of the top singers of his time was some athlete. Funny you never hear it mentioned.

Jack Johnson Greatest

Does the name Howard P. Drew mean anything to you? No? Well the man would be crowding 80 or past if he were alive. He was the second man in history to run 100 yards in 9:6. I first saw him when he was around thirty years old, but even then he was fast enough to win the Big Ten 100 and 220 yard dashes. He went to Drake at that time to get in college time.

The state schools used to have a track meet for Iowa colleges and universities.

Well, Drew won the 100, 220, the low hurdles, and finished second in the broad or long jump. He anchored the half-mile relay team to a win, not bad for a 30 year-old vet. Besides being the athlete he was, Drew was one of the finest gentlemen I ever knew, and was an inspiration to most of us kids who thought athletes were supposed to be tough acting.

It took a stage play, a book and a movie to bring out the story of Jack Johnson. He really offended white America. But, in spite of what he might have done, Johnson was rated by the fellow who saw most of the best ones as the greatest heavyweight of all times.

Still Tough At 50

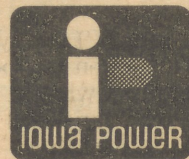

A friend told me that he saw the master when he was past 50, and he was running a little gym in Chicago. He had a standing offer of ten dollars to anyone who could hit him in the face in three minutes of sparring, Needless to say she is delighted and displays great motivation for this undertaking. She has been employed for this firm since high school graduation seventeen months ago.

Dangers Of Sickle Cell

Articles published recently in medical journals suggest that women who have Sickle Cell Anemia or the Sickle Cell trait may be likely to develop blood clots if they are taking birth control pills.

Despite this danger, birth control and family planning clinics do not give Black women the test for SCA before they prescribe birth control pills. Nor do they warn women who have the trait that the combination of the pill and the trait makes them much more susceptible to strokes and heart attacks as well as to blood clotting.

It is of extreme importance that all Black women who are presently taking the pill and those who may be considering taking it, have the test for Sickle Cell Anemia. Information as to where the test is given can be obtained by calling the Sickle Cell Anemia Foundation at 1 - 515 - 282 - 6733, Des Moines, Iowa.

Further information regarding Sickle Cell Anemia and the Birth Control Pill can be found in Ramparts Magazine, January 1972.

Cold Facts About The Common Cold

When an ancient Roman sneezed, his friends cried "Deus te sacret!" If your Latin is rusty, that translates into the modern "God bless you!"

Apparently, the time-honored ritual was as ineffective then as it is now in terms of warding off the common cold. Roman emperors commanded legions of botanists to scour the empire for curative herbs. Two thousand years later medical scientists are still looking for that elusive cure.

The full impact of the common cold on American business and society can't be calculated, but various authorities have provided these interesting guesstimates:

- Colds account for 40 to 50 per cent of all industrial absenteeism; every worker loses nearly four days a year due to colds. Cost of this lost time could be as high as $5 billion annually.

- Each American child stays home with the sniffles about six days a year. Nationally, this means 50 million days lost from school.

If your family is average, you can count — based on past experience — on dealing with four or five colds a year. What to do about it?

As preventive measures, some general rules are in order:

1. Stay away from anyone who has a cold.
2. Eat a well-balanced diet, with plenty of liquids.
3. Get plenty of sleep and exercise.
4. Avoid rooms that are cold and drafty or stuffy and dry.
5. In inclement weather, bundle up well.

And if you do catch cold — as you probably will — there are things you can do to make the annoying symptoms more bearable.

Aspirin, of course, has long been a stand-by for relief of symptoms due to colds. Today it's available in many forms — alone and in combination with buffering agents and other drugs.

Many other medically approved non-prescription drugs, available for years, have been modified and improved to fit modern needs.

For example, concern over widespread narcotic drug abuse prompted The Upjohn Company to up-date the familiar cherry-flavored cough syrup, Cheracol, introduced 45 years ago, by developing a non-narcotic formula called Cheracol D. The original Cheracol, containing codeine, is still available on prescription.

When you catch cold, rest in bed is recommended for the first few days. This gives the body a chance to mobilize its defenses and lessens the risk of passing the infection along to others.

Take courage. If yours is an average cold, it will run its course in five to ten days. A cold that hangs on is a different matter.

Immediate medical attention should be sought if the symptoms are severe. Danger signs include chills and fever, a rapid increase in temperature, difficult breathing, pains in the chest or side.

A good rule of thumb is: Treat the common cold with respect. You can't cure it, but chances are you will wear it out by exercising persistence and common sense.

baraka calls wilkins irresponsible

NEW YORK (NBNS) — NAACP Director Roy Wilkins is embattled in a fight with the nation's liberationists for his comments last week while visiting South Africa that black workers there would suffer economic hardship if American businesses pulled out.

Many black leaders, including Rev. Leon Sullivan, founder of the Opportunities Industrialization Centers (OIC) across the country, have asked American business to pull out of the country which practices apartheid. Sullivan, a member of the board of General Motors, urged GM to lead other companies out of South Africa.

And in a slashing attack on Wilkins, Imamu Baraka, formerly known as Leroy Jones, used phrases like "puppet head of the NAACP," "criminally irresponsible," and "catatonic" when referring to the longtime civil rights leader.

Wilkins Surprised

Wilkins, whose name is absent from a list of black leaders supporting the African Liberation Day activities in Washington, D.C. on May 25, said in South Africa he was surprised at what he termed the growth of feeling among whites that changes must come in racial attitudes.

He said whites, especially young whites, "sensed something was wrong with the whole South African context."

"What I was not prepared for was the growth of the feeling among whites, even among Afrikaners, that change must come," he said.

Wilkins said the spirit among non-whites was good and determination to improve their lot far outweighed the discouragement they felt at the obstacles in their path.

His only suggestion after his one-week visit was in the field of education. He said he felt that in order to build a better South Africa, black, white and Cape colored (mixed) should have a chance to get a good education on equal terms.

Should Inaugurate Own Methods

He also said American firms should provide equal pay for equal work and ought not to be bound by past patterns. "They should break loose and inaugurate their own methods of handling and improving wages and working conditions," he said.

Intended to build unity among American blacks and to influence foreign policy, African Liberation Day controversy demonstrates the lack of unity even among the relatively small percentage of blacks in America who have evidenced any active interest in African liberation struggles.

The deletion of Wilkins name from the list of impressive civil rights leaders, politicians, church leaders and others by Baraka and members of his group in New York, will make the job of unity building that more difficult to accomplish.

u.s. businesses exploiting africans, says diggs

WASH., D.C. — Returning from a South African visit, U.S. Rep. Charles C. Diggs, Jr. (D-Mich.) has called on the Congress to end the blatant practice of permitting exploitation of Africans by American businesses.

American investment in South Africa has become a "bulwark for apartheid," Diggs charged in introducing legislation to ban U.S. government contracts for American businesses operating in South Africa unless they provide equal treatment for non-white employees.

"Racist practices of United States firms with respect to facilities for their employees must be ended," said Diggs, chairman of the House Foreign Affairs Subcommittee on Africa and a member of the Congressional Black Caucus.

He cited the need for improved wages, fringe benefits and job training which he said were denied black workers for American firms operating in South Africa.

His legislation, pending before the House Judiciary Committee, would create new criteria for U.S. government contracts.

"There is no question in my mind that a radical improvement can be made," he said. Until then, Diggs added, he will seek to halt new American investment in South Africa and prevent expansion of investment already there.

U.S. investment in South Africa is currently estimated at $860 million. Last year Diggs sent questionnaires to more than 250 American firms with interests in South Africa, seeking to ascertain details of their employment practices toward blacks.

"I received no reply at all to the questionnaire from more than half the corporations," Diggs said.

poets corner the duiji plague

Heroin, it goes by many names ... Skag, horse, junk, and duiji. Round the clock for every hour of the day and night, somewhere in this town a man or a woman, most probably between the age of sixteen and forty, is either injecting a solution of adulterated heroin, diluted with water, into his or her bloodstream, or sniffing a powder compound of adulterated heroin into his or her nose, and slipping off

cassady parents and teachers

EDITORIAL

The meeting at Casady School this past Tuesday night between parents and teachers was a clear illustration of the cultural confrontation that occurs daily in schools throughout the United States. These confrontations are not always as overt as this one. However, we can be sure that they will become increasingly more visible as black people make their age old mistrust of white institutions more vocal. This editor's heart was warmed anew to hear the sisters and brothers penetrating to the heart of America's value system with remarks like: "Teachers are afraid of the administration ..." and (to teachers) "You've gone to school and learned a little book psychology ... what's happening is that these kids are using it on you."

Until white America learns to recognize and appreciate the fact that black people are a highly intelligent race, their efforts to "dominate" and "rule" the black race will keep them on that same neurotic treadmill. In 1972, it is utterly impossible for a white teacher to teach a black child anything if he doesn't truly love that child. It is actually funny to compare the white man to the black man as the two encounter a phenomenon such as love. The process may and usually does take the white a long time but finally, rest assured he will "discover" it. Now the black man (one who really is black) in most cases has a highly evolved sense of love.

Having spent 3 years teaching before the 'system' got under my skin I can only say one thing to white teachers and "colored" teachers who find the ghetto too tough in so called ghetto schools, do the world a favor and GET OUT.

into a temporary reverie which gives total and absolute cessation from all the pains and problems of living.

It is an escape from the here and now to a nebulous there and beyond, called euphoria. Some say it is a living death, a form of suicide.

For the individual who is unhappy, frustrated, bitter ... for what ever reason, in physical pain or mental distress, heroin is a great temptation. Marijuana and cocaine provide a mere "high" and LSD takes you on a "trip" which may or may not be pleasurable. But heroin gives you complete relief, although temporary, from whatever ails you. The price one pays however, is not merely seven dollars a capsule. Heroin demands the user's whole living life.

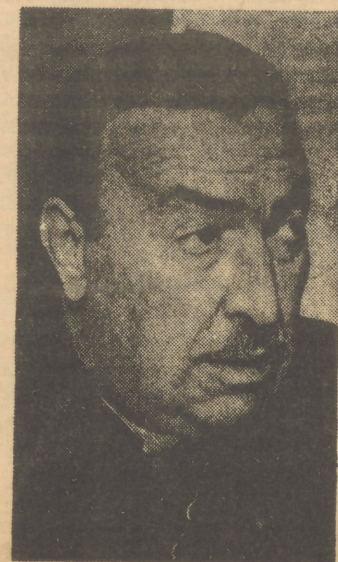

It changes his body chemistry so that he must continue to take more and powell 'kept the faith'

WASHINGTON - (NBNS) - In death, Adam Clayton Powell continues to serve. He reminds us, because he was such an important part of the steps we have taken along the road to freedom.

He was a flamboyant and controversial figure. But he was also, for nearly three decades, the embodiment of the black political presence in America.

Thus, it was very appropriate that he should have been chosen, even in his retirement, as honorary chairman of the first National Black Political Convention.

Adam Clayton Powell

Powell broke the Uncle Tom mold for blacks in public office. He won elections in spite of his refusal to "behave himself," and was sustained by popular appreciation which was beyond the comprehension of white America.

Was Brilliant and Knew It

In his life style, Adam Powell made people realize that black could be beautiful. In the process of course, he blew the minds of the whites who had said: why don't you black people have any pride in your race.

Adam Powell had pride. And ultimately he paid a high price for demanding that white America acknowledge the legitimacy more and more to get the original degree of euphoria. It makes an addict out of the user, regardless of race, social status, education, or level of intelligence.

For this town, heroin addiction is becoming a social plague affecting the rich and the poor, the black and the white, the doctor as well as his patient, the college educated and the high school drop-out; and most recently, the plague has spread from the ghetto of the city to the youth and the communities of the middle class suburbanites. It is highly contagious. Addicts induce others to become addicts because, as with liquor, man is a social animal and he does not like to imbibe alone.

He was brilliant and knew it. He was raised to a position of power and relative affluence, and refused to pretend to the false modesty that a democratic society is supposed to require.

He insisted upon enjoying openly the opportunities that would have been his without question, if he had been white.

For a black man, after 400 years of 'Yes Suh,' this pretence of modesty is difficult. For Adam Clayton Powell it was impossible.

And because he could not deny his talents and his right to a full share of life, he set pathways for black Americans at every level.

He was the fourth black man to win election to the Congress in this century, and his Harlem constituency was built not upon machine politics, but upon his role as an activist in behalf of a better life for black Americans.

His picket campaigns were directed at producing better hospital care, lower rents and at creating more jobs for blacks in Harlem. His pioneer public demonstrations in the 1930s opened opportunities for blacks at the 1939 New York World's Fair and later in the armed services in World War II.

26 Years In Congress

After winning a seat on the New York City Council in 1941 with the third largest vote among the six winning candidates, he became in 1945, the first black Congressman from the nation's largest city. He continued there for 26 years.

The inexorable workings of the congressional seniority system brought him to the chairmanship of the House of Representatives' Education and Labor Committee. The shock of a nonestablishment black man achieving the chairmanship of a major legislative committee was too much for even such liberal newspapers as the New York Times and the Washington Post. The Post declared editorially; "Mr. Powell has nothing whatever to recommend him for the chairmanship except seniority."

Fortunately however, the congressional establishment gave greater consideration to seniority than to Washington Post editorials. As a result, Adam Powell assumed the Education and Labor Committee chairmanship from conservative leadership in 1961, and led it through its most progressive period.

Significant advances in minimum wage legislation, the war on poverty and federal aid to education were made in this period.

Pushed Progressive Bills

President Lyndon B. Johnson personally commended Powell for his leadership in helping to pass 50 major bills of the New Frontier program of President Kennedy and of Johnson's Great Society.

That's the question posed to delegates to the National Policy Conference on Education for Blacks, sponsored by the 13-member Congressional Black Caucus. The conference failed to resolve the problem.

Delegates heard speakers like Dr. Kenneth Clark charging President Nixon's busing moratorium would take America back to the days of "separate but equal." But others like Roy Innis, national director of the Congress of Racial Equality, want school districts drawn where blacks will be in the majority and will have decision making power. More than 600 participants in the conference heard Dr. Clark sharply criticize the Nixon Administration's proposals to desegregate the nation's schools.

Attacks Nixon

"The Nixon Administration is government by tyranny of whim and passion rather than government of law. The President's statement is a slick diversion when he says

You are further notified to appear before said Court at Des Moines, in Polk County, Iowa, on or before May 11, 1972. Unless you do so appear, your default will be entered and judgment or decree rendered against you for the relief demanded in the Petition.

some blacks were in favor of antibusing legislation."

He also warned a new alliance is emerging between segregationist and black militant separatists.

"This new and unexpected alliance, this strange spectacle of interracial bedfellows and educational miscegenation," Clark says, threatens to block and even to roll back desegregation.

Constitutional rights cannot be given away, even by "the alleged desires of the victims," Clark told an applauding crowd.

But CORE Director Innis, who earlier had accused the policy conference of "educational fraud and bankruptcy," told the delegates community control of schools is an alternative to both integration and segregation.

Stokes Criticizes Dems

He urged that fighting between the adherents of the two opinions stop. "There is no reason why those of us who talk about community control should be at war with those who talk about integration."

Former Cleveland Mayor Carl Stokes, who recently accepted a job as a television news co-anchor, was sharply critical of Democratic presidential candidates for their stands on busing in the Florida primary last month.

All the candidates except U.S. Rep. Shirley Chisholm (D-N.Y.), Mayor John Lindsay of New York, and Sen. George McGovern (D-S.D.) were "trying to out-Wallace Wallace," he said.

"You can't out-bigot a natural-born bigot," Stokes told the cheering crowd.

Goals Agreed On

The candidates have decided to appeal to the 90 percent of the population that is white, Stokes said. "Do you know what that means for those of us in the 10 percent?" he asked. "A position of neglect and rejection."

"Antiblack racism is the fundamental issue," in all the opposition to busing, Stokes said.

John A. Brown

ex gi finds vocation

One-fifth of the workers employed by electric light and power systems are in transmission and distribution jobs maintaining the flow of electric power to the users. The principal workers in transmission and distribution are those who control the flow of electricity, load dispatchers and substation operators, along with and the men who construct and maintain powerlines, linemen, cable splicers, troublemen, groundmen, and helpers.

Linemen make up the largest single occupation in the industry. John A. Brown is an apprentice lineman, a craft he was first introduced to while in the U.S. Army, and which he chose to follow in civilian life.

Shortly after attaining the rank of Specialist Fifth Class, John completed his service obligation and was honorably discharged. Feeling in need of a rest after three years active duty, John decided to loaf for awhile. Soon, however, growing tired of having time on his hands, he started looking around for a job.

Suggested Apprenticeship

One day, while at the Iowa State Employment Service, he dropped in the Apprenticeship Information Center. There, his military background was explored, and upon discovering that he had been a lineman in the Army, it was suggested he investigate the possibilities a lineman apprenticeship had to offer. After giving it some thought, he decided he had actually enjoyed this type of work in the Army, and wanted to pursue it further.

After being tested and meeting the other qualifications for the Lineman's Apprenticeship Program, he was taken to the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers to make formal application for their apprenticeship program. As things turned out, John was the type of young man they were looking for, and was soon put to work as an apprentice lineman, a status he stills holds today.

As an apprentice lineman, John has grown accustomed to traveling. In the construction and maintenance of the network of powerlines which carry electricity from generating plants to consumers, linemen may be on call to anywhere in the county.

In Sioux City Now

When wires, cables, or poles break, it means an emergency call for a line crew. Linemen splice or replace broken wires and cables and replace broken insulators or other damaged equipment. They are usually limited to certain geographical areas throughout the state however. John is currently working out of Sioux City, but may soon be headquartered in Des Moines.

In talking about John with Richard Simmons, the assistant business agent for the I.B.E.W. Local No. 55, I heard nothing but praise, with Mr. Simmons describing John as, "a very reliable worker."

One additional pleasant financial twist for John, is that as a veteran pursuing a full-time approved apprenticeship program, he can also draw a monthly training assistance allowance from the Veterans Administration regardless of the wages paid by his employer.

the soul traveler

Customarily, the spring and summer months are considered by many people as ideal seasons for vacations and other leisure activities.

No one knows exactly how many Americans will travel leisurely this year. However, it is certain that a significant number of Black families will be included in the total tally for 1972.

During the past several years, a phenomenal rise has been noted in the Black American travel market. In 1968, Negroes spent more than $541 million for vacation travel. A year later, statistics showed that Black Americans spent approximately $575 million on travel.

A Black research firm reported that during 1970 alone, the amount spent for travel by Afro-Americans jumped to $650 million, representing an approximate 17 per cent increase when compared with figures from 1968.

The report also noted that some 800,000 Negroes traveled to at least one distant meeting — professional, religious, fraternal, etc. As a whole, this group spent approximately $240 million in hotel, transportation and other travel-oriented expenses.

Additionally, the 1970 figures revealed that Blacks spent approximately 26 per cent — $170 million — of the total in foreign travel.

With the possible exception of major air lines, the latter notation reflects the fact that the U. S. travel industry in general has not adequately addressed itself to the enormous potential of the Black travel market in America.

A few years ago, the Caribbean and Mexico ranked high among places located outside of the continental USA where Blacks frequently traveled.

Today, this is no longer true.

African nations, thousands of miles away from the mainland, are attracting more and more Black travelers in search of missing links in the chain which binds African and American cultures into one.

On the other hand, the quest for a true Black American identity is encouraging a large number of Negroes to explore to a greater extent the Black man's heritage within the continental USA.

Added to this is the wide-spread of long overdue integrated public facilities throughout the country which previously made traveling more difficult for Blacks on the move.

However when looking ahead, a considerable increase in both domestic and international travel by Black Americans is expected when the overall travel figures for 1971 are finally tallied.

The same is predicted for 1972.

Meanwhile, regardless of the destination selected by the Black traveler this year, this weekly column will offer worthwhile travel tips in general and provide up-to-date information on facilities, services and products designed to make travel more appealing and enjoyable for "The Soul Traveler".

committee chairmen, Powell refused to assume personal credit for committee legislation. He assigned major legislative programs to young Congressmen in his committee to encourage them to support progressive legislation.

He, nevertheless, continued to use his power to pressure the Congress into taking more significant civil rights action. The terror of earlier legislation, "the Powell amendment," now had the force of a committee chairmanship.

This confrontation with members of Congress who felt their "progressive" legislation was more important than Powell's insistence that its benefits be extended to black Americans contributed very significantly to his ultimate political fall. But also very significant to his ultimate ouster in 1967, was the loss of some 30 liberal congressmen in the 1966 elections.

Lynched Congressional Style

Thus the beginning of 1967 was the end of Adam Clayton Powell, as it did the end of domestic legislation under President Johnson's Great Society program.

In the end, Adam Powell was "lynched" congressional style. He was denied his seat despite an eventual U.S. Supreme Court decision that the House of Representatives had acted improperly in excluding him. He was re-elected by his loyal Harlem constituency, and again denied his seat.

Narrowly defeated, he was forced into retirement in 1970.

The man who defeated him at the polls, Congressman Charles B. Rangel (D-N.Y.), described Powell as "one of the giants of Capitol Hill and one of the most dynamic leaders black America ever had."

"Before Martin Luther King and Malcolm X," he said, "there was Adam Clayton Powell."

A NEW SOCIETY

At Encyclopaedia Britannica, where knowledge is foremost, customers are now sharing the spotlight with scholarship through a new membership society. It is called the Encyclopaedia Britannica Society, which is open to all new purchasers of Britannica.

The three-fold purpose of the Society is to provide self-enrichment for all members, to bring families closer together in mutual interests, and stimulate the never-ending quest for knowledge. "In this day of services, people look to companies for ideas," said Charles E. Swanson, President of Encyclopaedia Britannica, Inc.

"What we are attempting through this new medium is to encourage subscribers to make greater use of their Encyclopaedia and get the young reader more interested."

He said the Society resulted from a long-held desire by the Board of Editors to better serve the needs of Britannica families and to communicate with them long after their purchase has been completed.

Foremost among the items which go with Society membership is a subscription to the "Britannica Roundtable", a handsome four-color magazine. It contains features, information on subjects of interest to the entire family, helpful hints, plus articles about Society activities, families and services.
