North Of Freedom

by I. Sojourner

Tim Hatrack jumped out of his warm bed. Woke up when his bare feet hit the cold floor. "The damned telephone. Now, who in Hell is calling this time of night?", he growled on his way downstairs. Tim picked up the receiver. "Yeah?"

"Tim, it's me, Stoney. Put your clothes on. I'm on my way 'round there right now." "Man, do you know what time it is?", Tim yelled at his friend. "Yeah, I know what time it is. Don't argue, just get dressed", Stoney hung up the receiver. Tim finally put his receiver back on the hook. When the doorbell rang, he put on his hat and went to the door in his drawers. "Man," Stoney exploded, "I thought I told you to get dressed. You can't go out with no pants!"

Tim, still half asleep, went upstairs and came back with pants in his hand. Stoney gave up trying to get Tim dressed before breaking the news. "Man, you know I wouldn't be wakin' you up for no foolishness at this time of night. First, I want you to look in your daughter's room".

Tim jumped up and went to Debra Ann's room — came back eyes full of suspicion of his best friend. "Look here," Stoney explained, "your daughter is in the O-Be-Joyful tavern."

Before Tim had recovered from shock, Stoney ordered him into his pants and laid out a plan of action. "I ain't burning up my gas to drive you down there to act a plum' fool. Come on man, get in this car". On the way Stoney listened in silence to seven choruses of how his best friend worked hard, how he would kill any cat that got between Debra Ann and her high school diploma, and her mother shouldn't be working nights. As they pulled up in front of the O-Be-Joyful tavern, Stoney laid out Tim's marching orders. "Use your head, man. Walk in like a father meeting his daughter for lunch. Shut up and listen! I'll tell the cat to excuse himself a minute. You sit down in his place. If a drink or two is making Debbie feel she's Miss Black America, go along with the program. Offer your arm. Escort Debbie down the aisle to my car. By that time, I'll be through explainin' membership in the 44 Club to my black brother. 44 years, with or without consent!"

Hang loose, Stoney. Be tryin' to be grown up. — you gentle, your daughter is o.k? Let's go.

"Yes, there is definitely discrimination in the building trades." "The Brothers can make it through the apprenticeship thing ... but sometimes it's Hell." "I dig the work basically but racist attitudes on the part of white workers blows my mind sometimes." "All apprentices feel at one time or another that they're being used."

These are some of the comments made by Black apprentices in the Building trades in Des Moines. For many years, the Black man was hermetically sealed out of the lucrative Journeyman's status in the Building trades. One of the hardest fighting men in Des Moines is Vernon Hill, Director of the Des Moines Area Outreach Program. Hill, a Black man who knows the ropes by virtue of his Journeyman status says, "There are many hurdles for the Brothers in the trades to overcome, but we have to remember what we're shooting for, expertise."

The expertise Mr. Hill refers to is the kind that brings good pay and fringe benefits. Example, Journeyman wiremen earns $8.15 an hour plus fringe benefits. The first year electrical apprentice receives 55 percent of the Journeyman's wage rate.

We asked Hill what type of problems he encounters in trying to get more Black participation in the Building Trades Apprenticeship Programs. He said, "Because of past inequities in the trades we run into some resistance from the Brothers, who now hesitate to make application. If a man can meet the basic qualifications we can go to bat for him."

One of the reasons that the future looks somewhat brighter for Black people in the Building trades is the work of organizations like Des Moines Area Outreach. They provide on - going counseling for the minority apprentice from day one through his 4 or 5 year apprenticeship. The counseling covers the on - the - job portion and the classroom portion of the training period.

EX-KING AID RAPS NIXON

HOUSTON, Tex. — (NBNS) — Bayard Rustin, who helped Dr. Martin Luther King organize the 1963 Civil Rights March on Washington, said there will be no social progress as long as President Richard Nixon is in the White House.

Rustin, Executive Director of the A. Philip Randolph Institute which has initiated voter registration and voter education campaigns, called for the election in November of any announced Presidential candidate other than Nixon or Alabama Gov. George Wallace.

"Nixon's economic policies produce scarcity, and as long as there is scarcity, people will fight each other for jobs, housing and medical care," Rustin said.

Human Rights Luncheon

April is the fourth anniversary of the signing of the United States Fair Housing Law. The Des Moines Human Rights Commission, in cooperation with the Department of Housing and Urban Development, is planning a luncheon in observance of this anniversary.

The luncheon will be in the Terrace Room of the Savery Hotel at 12:00 Noon on Tuesday, April 25, 1972.

ENTERTAINMENT

Richard Roundtree and Kathy Imrie, stars of MGM's "Shaft" sequel, "Shaft's Big Score," listen as Isaac Hayes plays part of his score for the sequel. Hayes has received an Academy Award for his soundtrack to the original "Shaft."

Of all the current rash of Black - oriented movies, MGM's "Shaft" has had the indisputably biggest impact, and its impression has been two - fold: it has made the most money (a fact which has spurred MGM to rush out a sequel, "Shaft's Big Score") and has emerged as the biggest influence on the young Black movie-going public.

With the second "Shaft" film now completed and the possibility of others to be made in the future, it is this second aspect of the film's influence to which its young star, Richard Roundtree, addressed his attention recently. He is concerned about how young Blacks react both to him and to the image projected by the character John Shaft.

"The thing I've noticed most," says Roundtree, "is the fact that many of the kids, especially those between the ages of about eight and 13, are like little Shafts, man. They really emulate that character. And many parents of kids in this age range tell me their youngsters really identify strongly with Shaft, which I think is beautiful. It's a positive thing.

Too Much John Wayne

"Now, whether the values in the 'Shaft' films are positive, negative or indifferent is debatable, but the main thing is that these kids see someone on screen they can relate to; someone they can identify with from their own background up there on that screen for a change.

"I don't think all the things John Shaft does up there are admirable and I wouldn't teach all of what he does to my own son if I had one. But the fact of Shaft's presence is enough to redeem whatever negative aspects he may possess. I mean, let's face it. Our kids have had an overly prolonged diet of John Wayne and Doris Day."

And what does Roundtree think of the overall image of Blacks on television and in movie houses?

"Basically," he reflects, "I think it's all positive. There's something good to be found in all of it. A lot of people put down 'Sweet Sweetback', for example. Well, whether or not they dug the flick, the least that can be said for it is that it was another Black picture out there on the open market to which Blacks could relate. And that's got to be positive. Also, 'Sweetback' is the only one of these Black - oriented movies putting most of its profits back into a Black man's (Melvin Van Peebles) pockets. The rest of them are putting money into the hands of the big studios.

Sees New Film Era

"Of course, as more and more Black films come out, we're going to get a more diversified look at Black life. Now, I wouldn't suggest for one minute that 'Shaft' or 'Sweetback' are true depictions of Black life in this country by any means. But neither are the vast majority of films depicting the life style of white America. It's all entertaining.

"But the whites have always had, along with the exaggerations, images they could relate to in a real sense. We haven't had that. That's why at this point I feel that everything Black on film deserves examination.

"But in another three or four years I think we'll be seeing everything from Black sexploitation films to love stories and historical films.

It's all part of a very natural ethnic movie revolution.

"This is a very exciting period we're undergoing in films, which reflects the change going on in other aspects of our culture, and we have to try to view each phase in its proper perspective."

James B. Morris spoke to the Journalism School at the University of Iowa on the Iowa Bystander and the history of the Black press.

NIXON AIDES PUSH PLAN

WASHINGTON, D. C. — (NBNS) — President Nixon's key domestic aides have mounted an effort to get the Administration's proposed Family Assistance Plan through Congress, which has failed to receive enthusiastic support from liberals or conservatives.

The program, which would provide a minimum guaranteed income of $2,400 a year to a family of four, has been attacked as grossly insufficient from the National Welfare Rights Organization (NWRO) and as a government "handout" by conservative Republicans and Democrats.

MARJORIE E. W. SMITH HAS BEEN NEWS from the year I met her! Time doesn't change her a bit. A week in her life: Thursday, April 13, at Unity Circle meeting at Unitarian Church's Pace (Prescribed Activity Center) where one teacher is provided for each child: Friday, April 14, Peace Celebration at Drake's Point; Saturday, April 15, at United Nation's Demonstration, Johnny and Kay's Hyatt House. Leaving there went to Unitarian Church's Unity Circle card party; Sunday, April 16, did not go to church but listened to churches of the air; Monday, April 17, went to IDC (Iowa Democratic Council): Tuesday, April 18, Westside Library to WILPF (Women's International League for Peace); later to NAACP regular meeting; Wednesday, April 19, to a WILPF meeting; Thursday, April 20, an a.m. beauty appointment where hair will be dipped in 'White Mink', piled high with double French roll in the back: next to a Tiny Tot Membership Tea at PEO Hdqtrs.; next take bus to Osceola, Iowa, where she will board the Amtrack for Denver, Colorado, and NAACP Region IV Conference.

THE RAYMOND RUMLEYS BOOTH, "Bert's Trash and Treasures" at Walt Johnson's Fourth Collectors' Extravaganza held at Veterans Auditorium the three day weekend was overflowing with antiques and collectibles! The Rumleys live in Pershing, Iowa, but can be found at whatever is happening among antique dealers. Another dealer told me that the Rumleys had put up their booth in Las Vegas and made a pile, but Mrs. Rumley enjoyed a big laugh saying that was not about to be true! (Makes a good story though!)

MRS. LOLA REEVES AND BERT OF 'BERT'S TRASH AND TREASURES' have known each other a while! She is his former school teacher!

ANTIQUING ANNUALLY AT VETERANS AUDITORIUM SHOWS are Mrs. Mary (Rozening) Hardaway and Mrs. Reeves, employees! This year Mrs. Hardaway selected a necklace and earring set from the Persian Booth; Mrs. Reeves selected a gold thimble to replace her brass one which has been missing for some time. Yours truly and Mickle, (Mrs. John E., Jr.) selected stones for jewelry making and some ready made earrings of turquoise, obsidian, and jade. We love making our own!

LENA L. SMITH AND HER HUSBAND M. L. SMITH (Mag Lou was the real name for two aunts) always expressed an interest in and love of children! Among these were Franklin Delano Moore, youngest of the Wm. Moore's children, and an older brother, Frank Moore. Others among their young friends were Elizabeth Winslow and Marri Brooks. Elder Smith passed away in April 1937. Mrs. Smith expired last week and was buried from Estes and Son Funeral Home on Monday, April 17. Her family members were Elder and Mrs. John E. Johnson. She is the former Marri Brooks. Pall bearers coming forward from among the bereaved were Frank Moore, Franklin Delano Moore, of the Wm. Moore family; and David Calister, husband of Mrs. Elizabeth Calister, the former Elizabeth Winslow. (Sometimes 'life is what you make it'. Sometimes 'you select your relatives')

SEEING EVELYN RITCHIE, CEP'S receptionist at its Twelfth Street Office was like "finding" the dame! It has been many years! Saw her a few days later, Easter Sunday, with son, Donald (Shirley, mother, was not there — preparing dinner, betcha!) and his brood: Jeffrey 13, twins, Donna and David, 11; Debbie 10 and Lisa Joan 6. Being a grandmother is one of the greatest roles a woman can achieve! Or inherit!

AS I DRESSED TO LEAVE HOME TUESDAY MORNING, I suddenly heard gunshots! The sounds came from my backyard area adjoining Woodrow Wilson Junior High School grounds. Immediately envisioning someone firing at 'Pretty', my pup, I frantically got myself together. Dashing out the door as still another shot was fired, I reached the yard just in time to see a relay team sprint for the goal line! Coach Roger Weaver stood eyeing their form!

Des Moines Science Center

by Ann Kastler

Have you ever dreamed of taking a trip to Mars? To learn about the geographical beginnings of Iowa? Or discover how electricity is produced? You can do all these things without leaving Des Moines. Simply pay a visit to the Des Moines Center of Science and Industry located in the

the fine print

By Mike Morrow

Sometimes we get so hung up in our own struggles that we don't know who else is struggling. The ongoing effort of THE FINE PRINT is not to make people aware of what is going on inside the community but the goings on outside it.

South Africa (and the surrounding countries) is where the majority of the black African people are repressed by the minority, white colonizers.

I know Wallace wouldn't like that...

Recently in Rhodesia (Zimbabwe), the British government tried to get a settlement that would favor the white settlers there.

The plan provided for a gradual increase in the political participation of the Africans, economic aids and minute social reforms - that was the British plan.

To the surprise of the white settlers and the London Commission, the Africans voted down the proposal. The feelings of the African population in Zimbabwe was that if the proposal didn't favor them, why should they accept it?

To the surprise of the nation Ricky (our leader) Nixon pulled another rabbit out of the hat.

That is the bombing of Hanoi and Haiphong Harbor.

First, it's about ten years too late, and second, what kind of foolhardy act is it when the U.S. is allegedly "winding down the war"?

I think Nixon has seen "Patton" just once too often.

The only excuse Nixon could use would be if he can't make the country come together, maybe he can make the conservatives come together.

Election '72 should prove to be an ad-man's delight.

A FINAL NOTE. One interesting development in South Africa is the rock group The Beach Boys. There are two blacks in the group and hence, while in South Africa, they will have to be separated according to the law.

To counter that the Beach Boys have two conditions. If they play there the two blacks in their group won't be separated; and that the sale of tickets and seating will not be segregated.

Although they don't play soul, every bit helps in the third world struggle.

Greenwood - Ashworth Park off of Grand Avenue.

Free to the public, it is open daily, Monday through Saturday from 11:00 a.m. to 5:00 p.m. and on Tuesday and Friday evenings 7:00 p.m. to 9:30 p.m. and Sundays 1:00 p.m. to 5:00 p.m.

Mr. Robert L. Bridgum, Director of the Science Center, feels that the "...purpose of the Science Center is to inform people, young and old, of the world around them, to sharpen their senses to a better awareness of the excitement of their world, whether in nature, geology, physical sciences or astronomy."

Basically, the program of the Science Center falls into three areas - 1) planetarium, 2) exhibits and 3) education.

One of the few in the country, the planetarium is a theater in the round, where all the universe is the actor and you are the audience. It shows you in breath-taking sequences the sun, moon, all the planets, and the 3,000 twinkling naked stars as seen from the earth or out in space. The planetarium shows are changed throughout the year and feature various aspects of our universe and beyond. They are given Saturday 1:30 and 3:00; Sunday 2:30 and 4:00; Tuesday, and Friday evenings at 8:00 p.m. The charge is $1.00 for adults and 50c for children. The show this month is "We Are Not Alone," exploring the possibility of life in space.

As you soon discover, exhibits at the Science Center are varied and ever changing. However, there are several important permanent ones. As you enter the Center, the impressive Foucault Pendulum greets you. This is a favorite among kids of all ages and the Pendulum demonstrates daily the rotation of the earth. On the lower level the story of Energy exhibit is on display as well as other exhibits.

Various classes are offered to both children and adults. These include courses in astronomy, geology, environmental sciences, paleontology and other specialized areas of interest. Generally speaking, these classes are conducted as small groups sessions, laboratory experiments and field trips for on-site observation. Besides these classes are the Saturday Adventure Series, Frontiers of Science series, the Adventure in Aviation programs and the Science Craft workshops. Again, these are open to both parents and children.

And the classes don't stop there. For pre-schoolers, there is also an excellent program set up for the younger members of your family. As you can see education is an important part of the Science Center and if you or members of your family have any interest in some aspect of science, be sure to check out the courses offered at the Center.

Before leaving the Center, be sure to stop by the Explorer Shop that's located on the main floor. Here you can find a variety of books, games, models, collector's items and scientific equipment which can be bought that may not be available anywhere else in the city.

Mr. Bridgum expresses his hope that those people who haven't had a chance to visit the Science Center will do so in the near future. It's one place where you are sure to return again and again.

Inner City Nation's Most Polluted Area

WASHINGTON — (NBNS) — The most polluted area of the nation's environment is the inner city.

Yet most of the second-generation conservationists who are today's most active environmentalists have paid relatively little attention to the actual urban environment in which three-quarters of the American people live.

The Administrator of the national Environmental Protection Agency, (EPA), William D. Ruckelshaus, cannot be classified, however, as one of those who cannot see the people for the trees.

Ruckelshaus testified earlier this month before the Senate Commerce Subcommittee on Environment, on his agency's concern for the inner-city environment.

Involves more than Pollution
His testimony was based upon a special task force study he initiated last July "to assess inner-city environmental problems, to review Environmental Protection Agency programs related to those problems, and to make recommendations."

The findings confirmed for him what black leaders have been contending in the face of environmental charges that they are "soft" on the pollution problem.

"Improvement of inner-city environment involves far more than an attack on environmental pollution," he said.

"It must involve a concern for other urban environmental ills such as neighborhood decay, impact of highway intrusions upon neighborhoods, need for adequate recreation and open space, and upgrading of environmental health services.

Other Problems Too

"Further, urban environmental problems cannot be sharply differentiated from other inner city problems, such as poverty, education, employment and crime."

A the same time, Ruckelshaus believes anti-pollution efforts can be tailored to deal with some of the real problems of city people.

He points out that air pollution generally impacts the inner city more heavily than the urban area as a whole, and far more heavily than most suburban and rural areas. "Therefore," he said "efforts to implement the Clean Air Act of 1970 are especially important to the inner city."

The EPA's most notable effort to deal with general air pollution was its success recently in obtaining a Federal court order to shut down 23 industrial plants in Birmingham, Ala., when local authorities failed to obtain voluntary curtailment of air pollution emissions threatening the health of the community.

Lead, Exhaust Dangerous

Inner-city air pollution by lead from automobile exhaust is an especially significant threat in the cities.

EPA's proposed regulations call for a 60 to 65 percent reduction in the use of leaded fuel additives in gasoline during the 1974-77 period.

However, a coalition of 20 labor, environmental and urban groups has charged that these regulations will result in ghetto children being needlessly poisoned by airborne lead until at least 1984. The coalition insists that there is "no excuse" for permitting leaded gas production beyond 1977.

Of greater danger to a more limited number of children in the inner city is the lead in flaking and peeling paint in old housing.

Lead constitutes a grave danger of mental retardation and even death to children who eat foreign material.

Fund Yet Unspent

The Nixon Administration emphasizes pollution control yet is failing to spend $7.5 million appropriated by Congress for a national program to educate parents and provide early detection of lead-based paint poisoning.

If caught in time, the deadly lead can be flushed from the body before it does permanent damage. But medical authorities estimate that six of each 1,000 children exposed to lead-based paint mental retardation and 13 of each 1,000 suffer some form of brain damage.

The yet unspent funds for combatting this acute environmental ill were appropriated by Congress last summer.

The EPA, which disclaims responsibility for the lead-paint problem, acknowledges that garbage is pollution and that EPA should try to do something about it.

Noise Also Perilous

In his Senate testimony, Ruckelshaus said "some indications" that "inner city residents consider solid wastes and the associated pest control problems their most distressing environmental problems."

He said the EPA will give technical assistance to local communities in developing better ways of dealing with garbage, refuse and the rats they feed and breed.

"Noise pollution," Ruckelshaus said, "is a significant environmental problem in inner city areas." His deputy, Thomas E. Carroll, told the same Senate subcommittee that noise pollution in the cities is "fast reaching dangerous levels" and that the mounting noise is making millions of Americans deaf, jittery and even physically and mentally sick.

The agency also cited the problem of household pesticides which endanger children, especially, and the problem of deteriorating water supplies for urban residents.

Its testimony raised hope that the environmental concern of the Federal Government will not be limited to wildlife and wide open spaces; that it also will be concerned with the environmental problems of people where they really live.

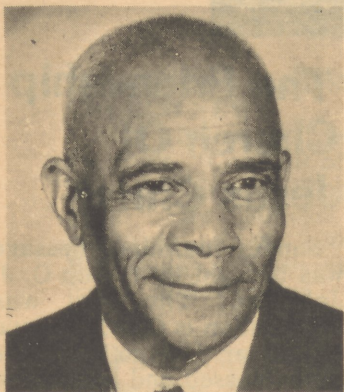

If you plan on driving a car in Europe, you might need more than your U. S. drivers license. Some countries require you to use an International Driving Permit and, in West Germany, your U. S. license must be translated into the native language.

One great way to meet people in a strange city is to get lost in it. Local citizens are often more than obliging when it comes to giving directions and helping you find the un-touristy fun places where they, themselves, go.

Women-on-the-go should be sure to take along Carefree brand tampons for personal protection. These are not only comfortable and effective, but take up very little room in a travel bag.

Sports Then

With Allen Ashby

Next week is the week of the Drake Relays. I guess I have seen almost fifty of them, and even one is as exciting as the rest.

In the days before the black schools began to dominate the college races, Brother Bill and I had our work cut out for us when we attempted to syndicate our relay story. Then, a black athlete was news if he just showed up.

In fact, you could write a whole column on the doings of black athletes in just about any game, no matter how badly his team got beat. One of our favorite stunts was to get a picture of a whole race, cut out the black runner, no matter if he was 51 and then caption it "So and So trying to help his team win" in whatever relay it was. No mention that his team finished so far behind they thought he was first in the next race.

Too Cold?

Never forget the first school from Mississippi. It was bitter cold that day, and the boys ran dead last. People around me made polite excuses about the cold and they may have been right to a degree. But the fact remained that the lads were simply traveling in too fast of company. For a number of years we would be glad when the races were over when the black schools competed.

The first runner to set people to wondering where that school was was Mozelle Ellerbee of Tuskegee who simply ran off and left the field in the 100 yard dash. Many people had never heard of Tuskegee, and they went scurrying to the library.

There is another story about that picture Bill got of the race that is worth telling. We were selling our shots at what we thought were reasonable prices. But one fellow from one of our leading black papers told us that he would rather deal with the white man because he knew he would get what he wanted.

It turned out that the man he was talking about told him that we had the best pictures of anybody's. He came back with a lot of profanity and asked us how much of a cut we would give him, because he represented one of the country's biggest papers of its kind.

I told him that the price had just doubled, and he flipped his lid. That night there was a party at the home of the late Charley Howard. This guy got Charley to talk for him, because he didn't want to leave without that picture. Since he wouldn't come to us, I tripled the price. The guy let out cussing, and we told him that the price would increase a dollar a cuss word.

We got him up to $70.00, and it took a lot more pleading and more cussing by Howard to get Bill and I to give the guy a break. He finally got his picture for our doubled rate, and the man never spoke to Bill or me from then on.

Another amusing incident took place in my high school days. I was writing sports for my school paper, and thought it would be a good stunt to interview a famous Iowa University sprinter. Approached the fellow. "I am Allen Ashby from East Des Moines High and—" The sprinter cut in. "Oh, yes, I saw you run. You ran a really fine race. Keep it up, and you'll be all right." And the only running I have ever done at the Drake Relays was to the hot dog stand, or trying to outrun a guard after I had sneaked in. To this day I wonder who he thought I was.

Not to Run Last

When I was at Arkansas AM & N the fellows down there couldn't believe the times that were made up here, even when they heard them on the radio. They had four pretty fair sprinters, and they wanted to come up here.

But Coach Evans said he'd be damned if he'd haul a team that fat to run last, thinking that was what they would do.

When you have seen as many of these things as I have, you are so full of stories that you don't know where to stop or to start another one. So next week you'll probably get some more about how we used to interview the athletes on Saturday morning of the meet. Maybe a few other stunts.

We're looking for men to promote.

Promotions are coming faster than ever now in the Reserve.

The Army Reserve.
It pays to go to meetings.

We are glad to hear the reports from our Bishop A. B. Congratulations to our presiding Bishop J. O. Patterson and former State Overseer Bishop L. H. Ford for their spiritual guidance in the reception of this blessing.

Our Bishop said last Sunday, in morning worship that certain particular terminology used by persons who call themselves Christians such as; "they have good religion" simply means a duty, but the same word used by a saint means that he has a responsibility.

The Forest Avenue Gospel Choir, the Forest Avenue Youth Choir and the United Soul Echos sang at the service. These choirs will give a concert at the Simpson College Theater in Indianola, Iowa at 3 p.m. Sunday.

Our Sunday night topic for discussion chaired by Deacon Leslie Carter was "How Can We Fill Our Pews"; Elder R. Warren officiated. Our next topic will be "Does Black Power Have A Place In The Church of God in Christ?"

Good Psychology
by
Dr. Oswald Hoffmann
THE PSYCHOLOGY OF GROWING UP

It's said that teen-agers are at the awkward age—yet some teenagers, in manner and bearing, are clearly adults while others are still children. What makes the difference? Leading psychologists say—you do!

One of the ways a child will develop self-esteem is to be treated by his parents with respect and consideration. As Marguerite and Willard Beecher have noted in their lively book, Parents On The Run: "The manner in which we live with children is what teaches them, not what we tell them." In addition to approaching the adolescent child in a way that imparts these feelings of self-respect to him, parents should be interested in, and sensitive to, the problems which are special to him.

As he moves from childhood, it becomes very important for the teen-ager to feel independent and to be "one of the gang." This need for the group, which most teenagers have, may be both puzzling and annoying to parents. Why? Because parents often see the demands of the group becoming more important than their control and influence over their child. The solution is: don't fight 'em—join 'em—as an interested, helpful advisor.

For further insights into the problems of rearing children and parents' responsibilities, please write for a pamphlet of one of my sermons of "The Lutheran Hour" to: Room 220, Lutheran Laymen's League, 2185 Hampton Avenue, St. Louis, Mo. 63139.

Ghetto Health Problems Viewed

WASHINGTON — (NBNS) — Two years of planning have brought 700 persons to a two-day conference at Howard University on the "Special Problems of Child Health in the Ghetto."

Dr. Roland B. Scott, chairman of the Howard department of pediatrics and conference leader, said the purpose of the sessions was to approach, "on a multidisciplinary basis, the crisis affecting our greatest resource, our children, who are going to pot."

Two women physicians symbolized the differences in emphasis among the conference participants, assembled by the university college of medicine, the American Academy of Pediatrics, and the pediatrics section of the National Medical Association.

Dr. Frances C. Welsing, assistant professor of pediatrics at Howard, led a workshop on ghetto youth and their response to violence in their environment. She emphasized the impact of racism on child health, attacking "the systematic white suppression of all nonwhites within the social structure which destroys human functioning and turns children into inferior functioning beings."

Dr. Grace M. James,

Louisville, Ky., pediatrician and chairman of the Committee on Community Pediatrics of the N.M.A., concentrated her fire on inadequate health education in the public schools. The schools are failing, she said, both to teach good health habits and to teach ghetto families how to use public health services.

Dr. James urged a major reform of present public health services, envisaging neighborhood health clinics in which both "middle-class private patients and government-sponsored poor people would be served in one facility, by private professionals, without discrimination."

'Must Recognize Afro Past' Diggs Says

One of the consequences of the failure of Blacks to organize themselves politically has been our powerlessness to stop American participation in the rape of Africa by Europeans.

Americans sat at the table in 1885 when Africa was quartered like a piece of beef. They signed treaties which made certain they would benefit from the colonial exploitation of Africa. Moreover two American Presidents after two world wars made it clear that the reconstruction of the international system would not include freedom or justice for African peoples. In short, America has had a fundamental role in making African peoples of the world into the footstool of white Western Civilization.

It is time now to set the record straight. To say that black people in America understand that our African past is intimately bound up with our African future, and that the revolution which we seek in the nature of our relationship to Americans is ultimately reflected in the struggle between African and European peoples in the world.

It is also time now to sound the warning: that no longer will the movement for justice and change in America stop at the water's edge. Since the lives of African peoples around the world and our quest for survival are interdependent, no longer will we tolerate the oppression of our peoples anywhere in the world.

This means we recognize no difference between the political powerlessness in the Bantustans of South Africa and the Bantustans of America. There is no difference between low pay and economic exploitation in Durban or in Detroit, and there is no difference in the need for independence under uncompromising African leadership in Africa and the same imperative in New York, Chicago, or Los Angeles.

Perhaps there is one difference, and that is the realization of the fact that because we are more materially comfortable in our style of enslavement that we have a greater obligation to combat oppression in America for the benefit of all black peoples.

We will not accept the timid rationalizations of American policy any longer. We understand that U.S. policy is designed to confuse us by its verbal strategy of cooperation and restraint, and by deeds which attempt naked economic exploitation and political control.

Letters To The Editor

The second Miss Black Drake contest was held Friday evening in the Drake auditorium. Sister Felicia Guest, a freshman majoring in Biology, competed with eight other sisters to win the title.

Although the question of whether twirling the baton in comparison to singing "The Black National Anthem" or playing the piano, or reading a poem of your own creation was posed, some still asked: 'Does this represent the black woman on Drake's campus and in the Drake Black Community?' If Drake wanted to be a carbon copy of the Miss Black America pageant, or for that matter the Miss America Pageant, then they would have paraded around in bathing suits and would have been judged according to "white" beauty standards.

Miss Black Drake was set up at first to present some representation from the black students on campus in the Drake relays. However, after a careful reevaluation of the goals, attributes, and achievement of the black woman, her role became a symbol of the pride, dignity and beauty that are inherent in our black woman throughout the country.

Each contestant had to attend all meetings, write a paper on some aspect of Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr.'s life, assist in a library display on Dr. King, compile a scrapbook on Dr. King, collect periodicals and books about Dr. King and present an original gift to the DBAAS House. Each contestant fulfilled these requirements and became aware of the impact Dr. King's life had on Black people, both pro and con.

The first runner-up was Sister Peggy Spates a senior in the College of Education. Sister Spates enlightened the evening with piano selections from the musical "Porgy & Bess." Sister Justine Morton, a sophomore majoring in Psychology, read an excerpt from Bob Teague's "Letter to A Black Boy."

Other contestants were: Gerthleen Mapp and Lou Mapp from Wyoming; Jennifer Bethel, Des Moines; Dinky Veals, Chicago; Denise Oldham, Chicago; Myra Butts, South Bend, Indiana; Miss Guest, Chicago; Miss Spates and Morton, Des Moines.

I'm writing in response to the article "Poet Corner" featuring works of my Black Brother Travis J. Fowler, Jr. in the April 13, 1972 edition. It was a very interesting piece of work but I must say, with all due respect to my brother Travis, that I must elaborate a little bit further on the subject of the "Plague." What my dear brother failed to relate was the "purpose" for the euphoria state of this mean self-destructive "poison." I think maybe it should be stated and expressed that the main reason (although sometimes overlooked) for this "poison" to be in existence, is for the "white man's" protective shield against "our" awareness of his trickery and treacherous methods in maintaining and gaining the status he has acquired through this weakness we (Blacks) have for his "poison." In addition I would like to say that it is not important to "coin" this "Poison" but is important to destroy it before it destroys precious and important minds of our sisters and brothers.

I don't think it is vitally important to say what the "Plague" is doing in other communities other than Black communities due to the fact (whether or not we accept it) that it was set up to destroy the Black man's mind. For what ever it is worth, all I can say is, "Isn't it too bad that they got trapped also?" It ("Poison Plague") was and is designed to destroy the black thinking mind.

I could go on and on, on this subject of undesirable "euphoria" but I'll cut it short and say with "Black Pride" and honesty that I enjoy and will continue to read "Our Black Paper." Thank you.

MY WORLD
by Christ Nevels

You haven't been nowhere, till you been into my world. But the only way you can get in, is through me. Using me as a key.

My world is filled with emotions, that every black young man can have and then even more.

My world is filled with all the emotions bottled up inside of one single body, one single mind, one single heart.

That is my world.

My world is filled up with desires to do everything and still, the laziness to do nothing.

My world, my world is filled with black skins, white skins, redskins and yellow skins. Every kind of color of the rainbow, this is my world.

Full of dreams, full of every wicked, nasty and ugly thing on the earth.

But also it's filled with the most beautiful creatures of the earth.

But wait a minute! This is not what I want in my world. Get out! Out! Out of my world cause you don't belong.

Only the things that I want, things I need, things that are more beautiful than the eye can see.

My world - All my dreams that come true only in my world, only in my world, this is my world.

Using me as key, if you want in, use me, you can get through to my world.

My world! My world! I told you about my world. Now, now that the day is gone, now you tell me about yours, tell me about your world!

Black Caucus To Support March

WASHINGTON, D.C. — (N B N S) — The Congressional Black Caucus will probably support a demonstration planned for Washington this summer by Rev. Jesse Jackson to protest the rate of unemployment among blacks.

U. S. Rep. Louis Stokes, D-Ohio, said he thought the Caucus would support the march because it "is absolutely necessary to dramatize the callousness of the present administration" to black unemployment.

The idea of the march — advanced by Jackson, national director of People United to Save Humanity (PUSH) — would be his first significant, national demonstration since breaking with the Southern Christian Leadership Conference earlier this year. He had headed Operation Breadbasket, an economic program in Chicago.

500,000 Expected

"This is an area which the Caucus has been very much interested in because of soaring unemployment as it relates to blacks," Rep. Stokes said after learning of Jackson's plans.

"So I'm almost certain the Caucus will be in favor of joining the Rev. Jesse Jackson."

Jackson said as many as 500,000 unemployed persons may march on Washington to protest the high unemployment rate. He suggested Independence Day, July 4, as the date.

Busing Defended

Jackson's comments came during the last day of a two-day conference entitled "Apartheid: American style," which was held at Harvard University and sponsored by the Caucus, Harvard's Institute of Politics and five daily newspapers.

During closing day activities, the Caucus also defended its strong busing stand.

Rep. Augustus Hawkins, D-Calif., who is vice-chairman of the Caucus, strongly denounced any educational system for blacks only as an "ultimate goal." Such a position was recommended by the education panel at the conference.

Separatism Wasteful

But Hawkins, who spoke for the Black Caucus, made it clear such an approach would be rejected by the group. "It is the position of the Caucus that we support the Brown vs. Topeka decision of 1954 and we do not intend to retreat to the Dred Scott decision."

"We dread anything that breeds separatism. Separatism is wasteful," he continued. "Separatism is genocidal and it is not always discussed in a rational manner."

Hawkins also said recommendations made at the conference "should be thoroughly scrutinized before we take a dangerous course that can only lead to self destruction."

New Legislation Sought

Although his tough stance is not shared by all Caucus members, it certainly represents a consensus of position papers issued by the Caucus on the issue of busing and school integration.

The more than 100 recommendations made at the conference will be finalized in Washington and presented as part of a national black agenda which will be made public May 19th, Hawkins said this would form the basis for the members to seek new legislation.

The only other committee to formally adopt resolutions was the housing forum which called for enactment of an Urban Homestead Act.

The act, the resolution said, would be designed to aid blacks to develop underutilized land in the inner-city of urban areas and to make available to blacks and other minorities "the billions of dollars worth of land now owned by the federal, state and local governments."

Cosby Gets Two Educational Awards

Bill Cosby recently added two more awards to his already impressive list of citations for his educational involvement by receiving the National Golden Key Award and a plaque from the Los Angeles Association of Secondary School Administrators.

The Golden Key Award is presented by the National School Public Relations Association. It is made annually to a citizen who has contributed significantly to the national welfare and to a teacher named by that citizen as the person who had influenced him decisively at a formative stage in his life. The purpose of these awards is to dramatize the importance of the teacher in American life.

Cosby, who was present at the presentation in Atlantic City, selected Mary Forchic Nagle, his former fifth grade teacher in North Philadelphia and now a housewife as "that magnificent human being ... who laid it on us about pride."

Both received symbolic gold keys and Mrs. Nagle also received a check for $500, which Cosby predicted would end up as "lunch for 350 kids."

The Los Angeles citation was given to Cosby for continuing support of education and influence upon the welfare of students. He was one of ten community leaders selected to receive the award.
