Nixon Woos Black Voters

In The Hot Box

Here Are The Facts

All is well, the dealer has decided to fix the automobile we mentioned last week. Send your problems or comments to the New Iowa Bystander, 1016 Forest, Des Moines, Iowa 50314.

WASHINGTON, D. C. — (NBNS) — The Nixon Administration has launched an obvious campaign to garner much of the black vote this November from the Democrats, who traditionally win the bulk of it.

Last week, a group of black businessmen, clergy and civic leaders supporting President Nixon's re-election predicted that its efforts "will surprise a lot of people, especially Democrats who have been taking the black vote for granted."

More than 100 blacks from across the country met here under the auspices of the Committee for the Re-election of the President.

"We're tired of being in the bag, taken for granted," said Paul Jones, a former Peace Corps administrator and executive director of the Nixon committee's Black Vote Division.

One surprise was the participation Floyd McKissick, former director of the Congress of Racial Equality, and now director of Soul City, N.C.

"Blacks are looking for a place to go," said McKissick. "And while I must say the Democratic Party outspeaks the Republican Party, I don't think it has delivered on its promises."

The Nixon Administration, he added, has offered blacks the opportunity to participate in government, "not just the rhetoric."

come to the conclusion that perhaps with me there is much more hope."

Chrome

WASHINGTON, D.C. — (NBNS) — The stage has been set in U.S. District Court here for an historic confrontation between United Nations sanctions and United States policy over the importation of Rhodesian chrome.

District Judge Spottswood Robinson, a veteran civil rights lawyer, will hear arguments tomorrow designed to stop American firms from trading with the white-ruled, black African country of Rhodesia.

The group handed out a fact sheet which said the Nixon Administration provided a greater number and a higher percentage of federal jobs than any administration in history; appointed three times as many blacks to sub-cabinet posts as the Johnson Administration; named 62 blacks to "prominent federal positions" compared to 49 under Johnson; named nine (versus one) flag ranks in the military and budgeted $602 million for civil rights enforcement as against $75 million in the previous administration.

The pro-Nixon blacks said the meaning of law and order has changed. It is no longer interpreted by some as code words for anti-black sentiment, they said.

"Law and order," said Joe Kirven, a Dallas businessman, "no longer means repression for blacks, but that there will be more justice for blacks. We have more to gain from law and order than anyone."

As for busing, Jones explained: "You've got to take a close look at what the President said in his busing message. He came down very hard in terms of quality education for everyone, black and white. A lot of blacks are against busing for the sake of busing, just for integration."

Some of the blacks said they thought Mr. Nixon was doing a great job, but they obviously are in the minority among the nation's blacks.

The Call For Black Action

The Black Theology Swimming Pool Committee has been organized to gain neighborhood support for the repair work of the Julia B. Mayer Swimming Pool.

Readers are requested to donate one dollar to The Black Theology Swimming Pool Committee, 1016 Forest Avenue. Money raised will be used to replace the galvanized pipes.

After the replacement, the swimming programs will begin. The categories are instructional, recreational and therapeutic.

In addition, to the programs that the pool provides for neighborhood residents, it will provide employment on a fulltime and parttime basis.

The deadline is May 17, 1972.

Chisholm Moves

DETROIT, Mich. — (NBNS) — Congresswoman Shirley Chisholm's drive for delegate votes in the May 16 Michigan Presidential Primary received twin boosts as she picked up the support of U.S. Rep. John Conyers (D-Mich.) and the national Black Panther Party.

Chisholm's new support came at the same time that the reverberations were being felt from the withdrawal of the one-time frontrunner Sen. Edmund Muskie from active campaigning in the Democratic sweepstakes.

Reporting on the turmoil caused when Muskie released his 127½ delegates and bowed out of the race, Mrs. Chisholm said that "hell's been breaking out all over."

She also belittled the Maine Senator's cry that a shortage of funds caused him to quit the race. "I started out with no money and am continuing with no money," she said, adding that she was a "new breed of politician who is not interested in wheeling and dealing from morning to night."

From California came the word that the entire Black Panther Party would work in behalf of the New York Congresswoman's campaign for the Presidency.

Party Defense Minister Huey Newton pledged manpower for her primary campaigns, particularly in California and New York, two key states on the road to the Democratic nomination.

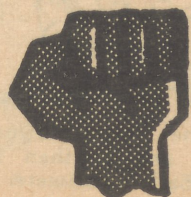

Newton called for "every black, poor and progressive human being" to rally to Mrs. Chisholm's banner.

"The social trend of power by the people," said Panther Chairman Bobby Seale, "is for more control of the economic, political and social institutions."

Said Mrs. Chisholm: "People should not misinterpret this endorsement. After all, the Black Panthers are citizens of the United States of America and have a right to endorse whomever they decide. What has happened to them as an oppressed group in America, and being used to the meaningless platforms and empty promises, has led them to

Black Career Day

As part of its program for teens, the Julia B. Mayer Center is sponsoring a Black Career Day, May 10, 1972.

The purpose of this program "is to expose black students to black individuals who are in supervisory capacities in a variety of vocations ... not just those who are in entry-level positions. By exposing the black student to the black supervisor, we hope to motivate the black student so that he will begin to set his vocational goals higher because of this exposure to a higher situation."

The Agenda for the Black Career Day is as follows:

1. A black supervisor will pick up the youth at his home on his way to work.
2. He will take the youth to work with him.

3. The black supervisor will also be responsible for the cost of two meals, lunch and dinner.

4. The youth will spend the entire day with the black supervisor.

5. The black supervisor will give the youth an explanation of his responsibilities, problems he encounters in his work and how he handles these problems.

6. The black supervisor will return the youth to his home after a short meeting and dinner.

Everyone, (between the ages of 15 and 19) are encouraged to participate in this program. If you haven't been contacted please feel free to call or stop in at the Julia B. Mayer center and sign up for this program. Julia B. Mayer Center.

Apprenticeship is a training system based upon a written agreement between the apprentice and his employer, by which a worker learns a skilled craft or trade. Painter apprentices, as members of the skilled building trades, come under this system.

John E. Johnson Jr. is a

painter apprentice, and a member of Painters Local No. 246. Now going into his third year of apprenticeship, John is employed by Keller Construction Company, and until just recently, was working on the new Fine Arts Building at Drake University.

John was first introduced to the apprenticeship program by the Apprenticeship Information Center. After he became a painter apprentice, he soon discovered the many intricacies inherent to this particular trade. A painter, because of the very nature of his work, must be able to mix paints, match colors, and have a thorough working knowledge of paint composition and color harmony. A painter must be skilled in handling brushes and other painting tools in order to apply paint thoroughly, uniformly, and rapidly to any type of surface. He must also know the characteristics of common types of paints and finishes from the standpoints of durability, suitability for different purposes, and ease of handling and application.

Apprenticeship, along with its many rewards, can be a very demanding career to follow, and a painter's apprenticeship is no exception. Painters are often required to stand for long periods of time, to climb, and to bend at their work. A painter must have strong arms because much of the work is done with arms raised overhead. They may also risk falls from ladders or scaffolds when working at heights.

As with any other apprenticeship program, there are certain plus and minus features for the painter apprentice.

Black Caucus Demands Dowdy Expulsion

WASHINGTON, D. C. — (N B N S) — The Congressional Black Caucus has demanded the expulsion of Rep. John Dowdy (D-Texas), who has been convicted of taking a $25,000 bribe, of perjury and of conspiracy.

The Caucus called the recommendation of the House Ethics Committee "hypocritical". The committee has approved a resolution that any member convicted of certain felonies withdraw from House Committee work and not vote on the floor.

But the Caucus, comparing the Dowdy case with that of the late Rep. Adam Clayton Powell of New York said:

"The recent resolution introduced by the committee concerning Congressman Dowdy raises the serious issue of a double standard in the House and ethics," the statement said.

In Contrast to Powell

The Texas lawmaker was convicted of accepting a $25,000 bribe. He was sentenced to 18 months imprisonment and fined $25,000 but he has appealed the decision.

"The resolution concerning Congressman Dowdy," the 13-member caucus continued, "is hypocritical in contrast to the action taken by the House concerning Powell."

The committee recommends the most minimal punishments for one of the more major convictions of a member of the U.S. House in recent history.

"Such a minor penalty for such a serious conviction is the first part of what we call hypocrisy," the caucus charged.

"Two Part Hypocrisy"

"The second part of the hypocrisy is the contradiction between this case and the action taken by the House concerning Powell. Congressman Powell was excluded from the House," the caucus pointed out.

The flamboyant Powell was accused in 1966 of misusing Congressional funds. He also for a time defied a court judgement for a Harlem woman whom he had called a "bag woman" for police.

The House prevented Powell from taking his seat in 1967, although there was no charge that his election was improper. The Supreme Court later ruled that the House action was illegal and Powell was re-elected in 1968.

Cites Nepotism

"Exclusion, along with expulsion, is the most severe action the House can constitutionally impose. Although Rep. Powell was never convicted of a major crime, the House unwisely in our view nevertheless saw fit to take this extreme action against him," the caucus continued.

But upon re-election in 1968, Powell was stripped of his seniority, and "in an unprecedented action, fined $25,000."

The black congressmen said Dowdy's "alleged abuse of the franking privilege and the issue of nepotism raise further doubts as to his fitness for service and the type of penalties the House should consider."

The Black Caucus added, "If we pass the resolution offered us, we will have taken a step backward from the goal of reform and credibility which we (the House) as a body should seek."

The resolution has been referred back to the Ethics Committee for a ratification vote. It would then have to go to the Rules Committee before going to the House floor for a final vote.

Jim Bowman: On The Case

Jim Bowman

By Leslie A. Johnson
"To improve achievement levels of children in low - income areas" is one goal set by James Bowman, director of elementary education for the Des Moines Public Schools.

The black educator would particularly like to see improvement in reading skills, and he indicated that he is not as concerned with minority - majority percentages in individual Des Moines schools as he is with improving the quality of education.

One problem with the educational system, Bowman said is "there have been too many attempts made to change black children to be like people in other communities, and the black child has not been given an opportunity to develop his own potential."

Bowman added, "There are many who are of the opinion black children are incapable of excellent performance; and, before we get perfection we need to believe in the capabilities of the children."

Bowman, an advocate of the community school, explained this to be a concept supporting early childhood education and includes programs oriented toward involvement of parents and adults in the educational process.

He strongly supports the charrette program, a program which involved community planning in two new elementary schools to be constructed in low - income areas. Bowman said these schools will be staffed with individuals who have been carefully selected and are sensitive toward the needs of children.

Community involvement will not end with construction of the Bird - Grant, Nash - Kirkwood complexes, Bowman emphasized. The schools will have parent advisory councils giving parents an opportunity to air their complaints.

The director, who has been with the Des Moines district for 16 years, would like to see schools become more career oriented so youngsters can find relevance to careers and everyday living in their elementary curriculum.

Bowman, A Drake University graduate, taught at Wiley College in Marshall, Texas; Nathan Weeks Jr. High; North High; and Was coordinator of Federal Projects for the school system before assuming his current position.

Following in her father's footsteps, Bowman's daughter, Mrs. Linda Lane, is a teacher in the Iowa City school system. Another daughter, Gail, is a student at the University of Iowa.

Although Bowman's commitment to providing the best education possible for every elementary school child in Des Moines leaves few spare moments, he does find time to spend with his wife, Gloria, and try his hand at a few rounds of golf.

Millions Won't Have Summer Jobs

WASHINGTON — (NBNS) — More than 2 million black youths, most of them from the nation's central cities will be unable to find a job this year because of President Nixon's economic policies which are aimed at helping big business, not the poor.

The Nixon Administration is asking Congress for an appropriation of only $270.7 million this year to give 609,000 youngsters a nine-week jobs during the summer in the Neighborhood Youth Corps program. Each would receive a minimum of $1.60 per hour for their work.

But the problem is that unemployment in the nation's poverty areas was running above 34.7 per cent for 16 to 19 - year - old black youths during the last quarter of 1971. Unfortunately, many more youths from urban school systems which are poor will be closing early this year, putting far more youngsters into the already hopeless job market.

Congressman John Conyers, D-Mich., sharply criticized the President's job program as "typical of the kind of ill - conceived economic policy he has which ignores totally the problem of the inner cities."

Months ago, Conyers and a number of other congressmen advised the President of their concern over the lack of funding for the summer jobs program and asked that the requested appropriation be increased substantially.

He also told the Black News Service that claims by the administration that the private sector, led by the National Alliance of Businessmen, would take up much of the slack in providing jobs for the summer was "ridiculous."

"Traditionally, the NAB has never been able to supply the number of jobs they aim for, much less the number of jobs that are actually needed. It is a completely false notion to think that private enterprise will do the job for the federal government," Conyers added. "The federal government should be the employer of first resort and needs to take a leadership in this."

British-Rhodesian Pact Hopes Dim

NEW YORK — (NBNS) — The proposed British pact with the Rhodesian government of Prime Minister Ian Smith, which calls for an end to sanctions against the white - ruled nation, will never be accepted by Africans in its present form, a spokesman for the dissident Rhodesian National Council said this week.

Bishop Abel Muzorewa, who heads the National Council of blacks in Rhodesia, said he regarded the pact a "sellout" and predicted it would not be "accepted by Africans at any time in its present form." Muzorewa is currently in the U.S. making a series of speeches on the plight of the Rhodesian Africans.

"We don't know what the Pearce Commission will report to the British government yet, but they have been in our country talking to Africans about the agreement," Muzorewa said.

Big Cities Excluded Dorsey Promoted

By Michael D. Petit
National Black
News Service

WASHINGTON, D.C. — (NBNS) — Philadelphia, New York, Los Angeles and other urban areas have been excluded from the list of target cities chosen in the Nixon Administration's announced crackdown on street crime.

Critics of the Administration's anti - crime efforts charge that the omissions were not accidental.

According to a special Democratic study group which prepared a statement on crime for the party's 1972 Platform Committee, the nation's largest urban areas were excluded because the Administration is unable to cope with crime in the big cities.

Crime in America has continued to increase despite the "highly - polished and well - published jawboning of the President," especially in the major cities, charges U.S. Rep. Claude Pepper, Vice - Chairman of the Democratic study group and Chairman of the House Select Committee on Crime.

Not so, answers the administrator of the Law Enforcement Assistance Administration, Jerris Leonard, the man responsible for channeling federal funds to state and local communities.

Leonard claims that smaller cities were picked for programs designed to treat narcotics addicts and reduce the rate of robberies on the basis of funding limitations and geographic distribution.

Leonard and other Administration spokesmen promise to include other cities — including the larger urban areas — in the expansion of so - called "high - impact" anti - crime programs.

As evidence they point to a recent announced plan to include Philadelphia along with 10 medium - sized cities in an experiment to treat narcotics addicts arrested for crimes like burglary and robbery.

Unlike the high - impact program which will expend $160 million in three years, the drug treatment program will involve a considerably smaller expenditure of funds.

"It is possible that at least half of all street crime in this nation is drug related," commented Dr. Jerome H. Jaffe, Director of the White House Special Action Office for Drug Abuse Prevention, in announcing the program.

Which, Democrats answer, makes the exclusion of New York, Chicago and Los Angeles all the more conspicuous from the list.

Poitier Changes Belafonte Image

"READY TO SHOOT!" Sidney Poitier fires a starter's gun on location in Durango, Mexico, signalling not only the start of a scene for Columbia Pictures' "Buck and the Preacher," but also his debut as a motion picture director. Poitier is starred in the film with long-time friend, Harry Belafonte.

"DO IT MY WAY" Sidney Poitier emphatically tells Harry Belafonte in Columbia Pictures' "Buck and the Preacher", in a scene which points up Poitier's dual role on the film, as co-star and as director. Poitier plays Buck, a former Union cavalryman guiding wagon trains of blacks to homesteads on the new frontier; Belafonte plays "the Preacher," a con man fast with his gun.

Sidney Poitier, winner of an Academy Award for his performance in "Lilies of the Field" and star of such other hit films as "Guess Who's Coming to Dinner", "To Sir With Love" and "In the Heat of the Night," has worked with some 30 film directors in the course of his long and successful screen career. To make "Buck and the Preacher," in which he stars with longtime friend, Harry Belafonte, Poitier had to work with still another director — himself. It wasn't easy.

Poitier did not consider himself a complete tyro in the art of film directing. For one thing, he had directed a number of successful stage productions, but also, in the screen medium, he felt he had learned a great deal from the directors with whom he had worked.

"I've seen, I've watched,

I've listened and I have paraphrased some of the good things I've learned from them. Paraphrased, meaning I have converted them to what I think are my needs, in anticipation of the day when I would direct. It was not as if I was indeed a novice in toto; I was a man who had been on the periphery of directing for a good many years. And some of the craftsmanship of very gifted guys had rubbed off on me."

Complicating Poitier's life was the need to direct himself. "That required about a prayer a day, and a lot of guesswork. I think it's very difficult to direct oneself. I do not think it's impossible. It's been done before, and I think I did it successfully in this film. The person involved has to be somewhat of a schizophrenic, especially in his creative area. He has to have two distinct gifts, you see, and they must operate simultaneously.

Belafonte Helped

When he is in front of the camera, he is functioning as an actor but he is being monitored by the other consciousness, that of the director. When he's behind the camera, it seems to me that he has to be able to function exclusively as a director, rehearsing the sequence, mapping it, choreographing it; then he must switch into his other schizophrenic part and perform as an actor."

Belafonte helped. "There were moments when Sidney had great concern about how he would come off in some scenes and the kind of rhythm that was looked for within the scene and he'd say, B, although this isn't your scene, I'd love for you to stay on the set today. Keep an eye out and give me an evaluation.

Sometimes there was nothing to disapprove of and, in other instances, I said I would recommend so and so and so. Shoot it again and then you can look at both as the director and see which is your choice. So he covered himself that way. He would play the scene sometimes in two styles and, therefore had the selection as the editor and the director and put it together."

Directing "Buck and the Preacher" gave Poitier "something of a very heady feeling. Of course, commensurately, if you fail at it, if you don't know what you're doing, it can give you a terrifying feeling of panic. All these people depending on you for direction."

Belafonte Matinee Idol

Involved, in addition to the awesome financial aspects of today's film-making, were the reputations and performances of such other important players as Ruby Dee and Cameron Mitchell, the supporting players and technicians. There even were 150 horses. And there was, too, another aspect of importance: the story itself, which is based on a little-known facet of American history.

"Buck and the Preacher" is set in the turbulent days after the Civil War with Poitier playing Buck, a former Union cavalryman, who becomes a guide for freed slaves planning to settle in the West for a new start. Belafonte is "the Preacher", his unwanted but wily sidekick, a hustler and con-artist, who is fast with a gun. "He is what is known in film jargon as a 'heroic villain' and B plays the part with such finesse that a large part of the success of the film is due to that portrayal and the way he handles it."

"Belafonte," Poitier says, "is not what he appears to be. He appears to be a matinee type of actor because he is so handsome, because he is tall and he has an image of sexuality and masculinity and all that. They cast him in matinee idol, pretty boy parts. But the man's gift is essentially a character actor. In 'Buck and the Preacher', Belafonte looks like a middle-aged hustling, scuffling rascal preacher. As a result, the man's power really comes to the fore. Now, what he will do, he will look for parts that he can play that are quite a way removed from the matinee idol imagery of Harry Belafonte."

ARZANIA (ZOOK) WILLIAMS, NOW DIRECTOR OF GATEWAY OPPORTUNITY CENTER has held this position for approximately three weeks only! However, he is completely aware of what constitutes first things first on his agenda. A forceful personality coupled with a keen sense of communication, he puts across his message in capsule form, but it is total! Brought to you are two of his firsts:

VANDALS DESTROYED THE BOY SCOUT TROOP PROGRAM at Gateway Opportunity Center! This was some time ago but the telling of it needs to be repeated! The destruction was accomplished by breaking windows and stealing their supplies and equipment. Ken Page, then Boy Scout Master, tried repeatedly to weather the situation even to bedding his troop down in the Center's basement preparatory to the next day's trip. Again thieves broke windows, entered and stole the scouts' belongings!

DEFENSELESS AND STRIPPED OF ALL HOPE, Scoutmaster Poage found a setting for his boys (Troop No. 184) at the Salvation Army Temple. There Gateway Center's Boy Scout Troop found a new home, protection and support, new recruits, and went on to become what Williams states is considered 'the best Scout Troop in Iowa'; Salvation Army Temple's Troop No. 184!

AMONG DES MOINES MEN SERVING AS BOY SCOUT MASTERS ARE: Monroe Colston, Everett Newcomb, Lonnie Woods, Art Black, Leroy Owens and Bill Robinson.

GATEWAY OFFERS SCOUTMASTER TRAINING to any volunteers! Boys in its area need this program and a community center must offer this opportunity. Cub Scouts are led by Mrs. Lorene Robinson den mother assisted by Tommy Webb-Bey.

GATEWAY SEEKS a girl scout leader: Training is readily available to those wishing to serve. It is a crowning experience for one's mother role and offers citywide associations with other mothers in a choice of four levels: brownies, juniors, cadettes and seniors!

BARBARA BROWN, A BROWNIE LEADER FROM NYC presently handles the Brownies. When these youngsters complete the requirements of this troop, they are looking forward expectantly to becoming Girl Scouts.

THESE WOMEN ARE AMONG DES MOINES GIRL SCOUT LEADERS: Mrs. W. J. Riley, Mrs. James McDaniel, Mrs. Manuel Jackson, Mrs. Margie Florence and Mrs. Fred Narcisse. Miss Maude White is a board member of the Girl Scout Program.

Protect Your Child From Molesters

Ann Kastler

All parents worry about the possibility of their child being molested by a stranger. However, it is a sad fact that most attacks on children are made by people they know.

The only real weapon is to arm your youngster with knowledge. Too many children have the idea that no one would ever want to hurt them. Therefore, they are too trustful. We must not frighten them so that they would be afraid to leave the house but we must teach them to be alert and take care for their own safety.

Following are some good rules that you as a responsible parent should teach your child to help him ward off the Child Molester.

- Never get into a car with anyone who is not a good friend.
- If someone in a car stops to talk or ask for directions, never get too close where he might be able to grab you.
- Don't take shortcuts through lonely alleys, dark streets, or wooded areas. Never play in empty, abandoned buildings or around new construction.
- Don't play near public restrooms. Go in quickly with friends or an adult and leave right away.

- Don't ever accept any treats from a stranger. If alone, never talk to strangers when playing in the park or shopping.
- If in a theater and a teen-ager or adult sits down next to you and tries to talk or touch you, get right up and tell the usher or manager.
- Don't hitchhike! Who knows what kind of person will pick you up.
- If you are going around your neighborhood for a school or church project, always take a friend with you. Never go into a stranger's house, refuse politely.

- Never let anyone into the house if you are home alone or babysitting.
- Make sure that your parents know where you are and what time you expect to be home. If you are too late the police can be alerted.
- Don't let a stranger stroke your hair, straighten your clothes, or touch any part of your body. If an attempt is made, run away as fast as possible.
- If someone frightens you or starts to chase you, run fast, scream as loudly as possible and head for the nearest house where there is someone that can help you. If possible, find a policeman to help you.

- If someone does approach you, try to keep your head. The police will have a good chance of catching him if you can remember what he looks like, and if he is driving a car, what color it is and the license number. However, remember that the most important thing is your safety and get away as quickly as possible.

the fine print

By Mike Morrow

Well, the bulldog of American democracy is dead. And Dicky Nixon saved his face so that he wouldn't have to fire J. Edgar Hoover, head of the F.B.I. Now what will the domestic super-snooping organization do now without a man driven to extremes on the subject of Communism.

Not that I'm absolutely for Communism but this man felt that that kind of political system was the plague out to take the world over in its iron clasp.

Dead also is the relentless oppressor of radical black politicians: You know the kind: the grass-root, black pride men and women — or in other words those 'bad niggers'.

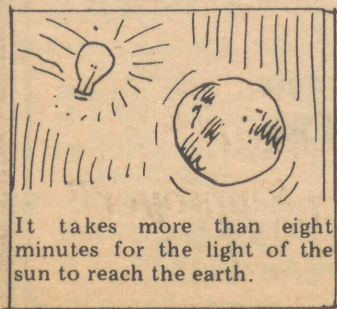

The one thing that he said that upset me the most, was saying that the late Martin Luther King was a Communist. Any person with an ounce of intelligence knew otherwise.

I hope that whoever is appointed as director of the F.B.I. will be one that has a level, contemporary head.

It looks as if Wallace may win two out of three primaries and do fairly well in the third. California is going to be a circus: with McGovern on the left wing; Wallace on the right wing; with Humphery in center ring.

Woodfork Returns

Mamie Woodfork, 1209 McCormick has returned to the city from Florida. The highlight of the trip was deepsea fishing and beach parties. Mrs. Mamie Pinkey and other relatives and friends showed courtesy during her stay. She was the house guest of Mr. and Mrs. Ernie Smith.

Gateway Head

Gateways Opportunity is reorganizing its programs and is now under the direction of Arzania (Zook) Williams.

One of its undertakings is a beginners bowling class for youngsters and adults. They've made arrangements for three talents shows and plays. The latter is under the direction of Justine (Jessie) Whiteside. It is hope that this will develop into a black drama group.

A group composed of ten youngsters, 14 to 17 years of age is being instructed on how to get into business.

Two baseball teams, a girls and boys team are now playing. The boys are in the City Commercial softball League and the girls are in the City Recreation League.

Williams expressed a desperate need for a Girl Scout leader. Brownies are organized, cannot graduate to Girl Scouts in our area because of the lack of leadership. The Cub Scouts now under the leadership of Mrs. Lorene Robinson, assisted by Tommie Webby, should graduate to Boy Scouts in this area. Again, as with the Girls Scouts program, this is an impossibility without an area leader.

Program monies are available, interested leaders are not.

Sports Then

With Allen Ashby

Never had to do this before, but when a fellow gets his facts wrong, there is only one thing to do. I peeked into the 1972 Drake Relays program, and discovered that I was as wrong as two left feet. Willis Ward won the high jump not the high hurdles. The long jump of Mack Robinson was well over 26 feet.

Having discovered just how wrong one man can be, I contacted a fellow I know who has the relays programs from about 1925. Seems that Ward did place in the high hurdles and long jump as well as the 100. Then the guy told us that it was possible that we had talked to the wrong fellow in 1933 about black officials. Said he knew Pitch Johnson well, and while he didn't know about his racial feelings, he knew that Pitch wasn't the sort of man who would make a promise to anybody of any race that he didn't intend to keep.

So there it is. That red glow you saw Monday AM wasn't the sun or a stop light. It was my face after I read what I wrote last week.

Alcorn, Southern Win
Now to the races this year. It really showed just how much the white southern schools have cut into the athletes of the black schools. In the short relays just about every winner with one or two exceptions had a quota of black runners. Louisiana State, Texas A&M, and just about all of the northern schools had black runners.

In the college section runners from schools like Southern, Texas Southern, Prairie View, and Lincoln had their work cut out for them. But Southern managed to come up with wins in the half mile and sprint medley relays, and a dropped baton cut them out of a shot at the 440 - yard relay. Alcorn won A&M, that one. I sat and watched Dallas Baptist put three black runners in the mile relay race, and all were well up in the race.

Their anchor man turned out to be white and I almost demanded a recount.

SIU Wins Pair

In the university section, just about every team that won a sprint relay had at least two brethren. Southern Illinois had a whole black team, and they won two races finishing second in another. Michigan State, Illinois, Colorado, and just about anyone else had 'em. The 100 was a complete blackout as it has been for some time. A couple of fellows from Texas kept the hurdle race from going the same way.

The brothers didn't do so well in the special events, but they took places in the high and broad jumps and were there in the Iowa college races, too, especially in the short relays. A guy in the steeple chase didn't do badly. I can't recall seeing another one in that race before, but there might have been.

There hasn't been a large number of brothers in the high school section for some time, but a big guy from East Waterloo, Ken Jackson, ran off and left the field in the high hurdles, and Larry Jones anchored Washington High of Cedar Rapids to a win in the half mile relay, and ran third in the 440 relay, that is, the third leg, and they won that one, too. In the girls races, the Milwaukee track club, here last year vowed to come back and win this time but failed. Texas won the big relay race.

Yes, I would have to say it was quite an afternoon at the races.

Jackson St. Signs Nine

JACKSON, MISS. — Head Basketball Coach Paul Covington announced the signing today of nine basketball players to scholarships at J-State. According to Coach Covington, "all nine are blue chip players who will see a lot of action here."

Leading the list of signees is Thomas Norwood a 6-6, 205 lb. forward from Florence High School who finished this past season with a 32.5 point game average, and a rebound average of 18 a game.

Other signees include Lee Edward Dixon, a 6-6 guard from Brookhaven, Mississippi; Keith Benson, a 6-8 forward from Lexington Attendance, Miss., Center; Leonard Smith, a 6-7 forward from Gilbert High School, Wisner, Louisiana; John McDonald a 6-6½ forward from West Jones Laurel High School; Bernard Campbell, a 6-4 guard from San Antonio, Texas; Willie Collings, a 6-8 forward from Miami, Florida; Thomas Cooper, a 6-9 forward from Miami, Florida and Wardell Milton, a 6-4½ guard from Greenville, Mississippi.

For Paul Covington, the 1971-72 season saw the Tigers drop 11 games out of 26 and with that on your mind add the loss of six players in "Marvelous" Marvin Brown to the Baltimore Bullets, "Superstar" Russell Golden to the Phoenix Suns and graduation catching Ben Watkins, Theodore Jenkins, Thomas Anderson and the important number six man Louis Rowe, you'll find Paul Covington with the No. 1 problem facing the 1972-73 edition of the big blue cats is rebuilding. "When you lose top players you're always faced with the problem of rebuilding and that's what the game is all about. I feel I've found some top players even though we haven't signed everyone we want, we'll be ready."

With the past season staring him in the eye, Paul Covington moves forward to find the answer to the big question for J-State's hopes, and that is to retain their lofty heights in both the Southwestern Athletic Conference and the NAIA.

First Black Teacher Of Year Favors Bussing

James M. Rogers, Jr.
Teacher of the Year

WASHINGTON, D. C. — (NBNS) — The first black National Teacher of the Year believes teachers "should have the guts to say what they're for and against," and school busing "is definitely good at this time in history."

James Rogers Jr., a 31-year-old history teacher at Durham, N.C. High School, was selected as Teacher of the Year by the Council of Chief School Officers, Encyclopedia Britannica and Ladies Home Journal, who sponsor the contest. He is the first black in the 21-year history of the prize.

"The simple fact is," said Rogers who has been teaching for only two years, "blacks were bused to maintain segregation and so were whites, so what's wrong with busing for desegregation purposes. As long as there is a good education awaiting the child at the end of the bus ride."

Integration Erases Myths

"The primary goal of busing, obviously should be to provide an equal education for everybody," he said. "Separate but equal never worked, and have found at my school that many of the myths that blacks had about whites and whites had about blacks have been erased because of desegregation."

Durham schools have been desegregating the last two years and a third of the students in his black studies course at Durham High are white.

"Busing is definitely a good thing. Otherwise, we won't be able to understand each other. If we don't have a chance to talk or mingle with members of other races. It is necessary at this time," Rogers said.

Likes People

Selection of Rogers was announced in ceremonies at the White House by Julie Nixon Eisenhower, but the subject of busing didn't come up. It certainly would have been a sore point at the White House since Mrs. Eisenhower's father is President Nixon, who obviously doesn't agree with Rogers on the subject of busing.

Rogers remembered he had one thing going for him as a new teacher. "I had not been in a classroom before, so I could not compare it with an all-black or all-white class. One day I wrote on the blackboard, "I don't like niggers or crackers; I like people," he said.

When his students came to class and saw it they were "stunned," but "from then on we began communicating."

Teachers Must Learn Too

Communicating with students is essential, if a teacher wants to have any chance of "getting something done," Rogers said.

Admitting public school classrooms are not what they used to be, Rogers noted the student today is far above his counterpart of ten years ago.

"Students are older — not in years, but they have television, they've seen space walks, they have mobility. They see the world as we never saw it, and to come into a classroom with rigid, narrow attitudes dooms the teacher to failure immediately."

The "communications gap" that people talk about so much is merely an "unwillingness to listen," Rogers said. "Teachers should learn as much as they teach in the classroom. If they don't, there's something wrong in that classroom."

YPC Gives Kids A Chance

By Leslie A. Johnson

"Give the kids a chance," said Mrs. Jacqueline Taylor, coordinator for Model City Young People's Council. After overcoming numerous organizational hurdles, she feels the youth are again facing a dilemma.

With the aid of four young persons, Mrs. Taylor organized the Council in 1970; and she believes that the new Community Development Program, a city-wide expansion of Model Cities, may jeopardize the future of the Council.

Bruce Taylor, Mrs. Taylor's son and Council chairman, added that in a proposal being developed to appropriate Community Development funds, the Council is not designated under "Priorities," but will be allotted under "Activities for Leisure Time." He feels this indicates lack of interest in the youth.

When the Council was originally organized, Taylor said, they were given the run - a - round and forced to submit their budget and proposals to the City Council several times before approval.

Mrs. Taylor added that a proposal to make the Youth Council city wide and appointing the School Board as the Active Agency could be damaging.

Currently the Active Agency is St. Paul AME Church, 13th and Day Streets. It serves as advisor, project coordinator, and monitor of the young people's activities.

If the Council should expand, Mrs. Taylor explained, it could result in outside domination and decreasing effectiveness in the Model City community it now serves.

Young Taylor said the Council was organized to "give the youth a chance to express themselves." In so doing they have given dances, a style show, a dinner, and music festival with all benefits going to the Sickle Cell Foundation of Des Moines.

They have also contributed over 50 fruit baskets to senior citizens, given a children's Christmas Party, and donated turkeys to needy families.

The youth frequently take college tours; participate in a leadership training project, in which outstanding professionals are invited to lecture; hold drug seminars; and have a bowling league.

Future plans call for establishing a Black Art Culture Center.

Additional Council officers are Barbara Dennis, vice chairman; and Torri Berry, secretary.

Adult staff includes the Rev. Lewis Grady, director and Barbara Mann, secretary.

There are approximately 80 members; membership is open to anyone 13-20 years old, Taylor said.

Meetings are held each Tuesday at 7 p.m. at Washington Irving Jr. High.

Operation Breakthrough

Operation BREAKTHROUGH is the national demonstration program launched by HUD in mid-1969 to modernize the American housing industry and to remove barriers to volume-produced housing. A total of 22 housing system producers were selected to demonstrate their units on nine sites in various parts of the United States.

"Unlike most other programs, Operation BREAKTHROUGH issued its own guidelines for hiring, entrepreneurship opportunities and fair housing," Mr. Newburg pointed out. "These guidelines went beyond the basic statutes and executive orders by suggesting positive means of carrying them out."

BREAKTHROUGH has given consistent direction to its contractors and has assisted them in following through on their equal opportunity responsibilities, according to Mr. Newburg. Bids for work were issued in a flexible manner to assure minority representation, and bonding problems were dealt with head-on at all of the nine BREAKTHROUGH sites.

The St. Louis, Mo., site was mentioned as a notable example of success. "The BREAKTHROUGH Regional Director and the Managing Engineer for the site, the two key field executives representing the government, are both black," Mr. Newburg said, "and minorities make up 40 percent of the site construction management firm staff."

The site development work performed by local contractors on the St. Louis BREAKTHROUGH site has resulted in an impressive string of minority contracts. Nearly three-fourths of all work on utilities installation is being handled by minorities as is 30 percent of the total development work.

"We regret that circumstances today require that we get involved in a numbers game — a quota system for blacks and whites," Mr. Newburg said. "We particularly regret that it is still a noteworthy achievement to quote positive percentage figures. As the industry opens itself more to minority firms and workers at all levels of skill, we can dispense with this artificial numbers system and turn to the major task of building homes. That is what BREAKTHROUGH is all about."

Polk Court Services Explained

The Polk County Department County Services consists of four main functions. They are as follows: Pre-Trial Release Program, Community Corrections, County Probation, and the Fort Des Moines Facility.

The Pre-Trial Release Program is located at the Municipal Court building. Persons released by Pre-Trial are those who have stable ties in Polk County, such as a job, family, etc. Points are assigned on the basis of these ties and persons who earn five points are released without posting bond.

The Community Corrections Program is located at 1546-6th Avenue. Clients released to the Community Corrections Program are those who are in need of some type of supervision, such as aid in finding employment, housing, and personal counseling. These clients are also released without posting cash bond, but are under the supervision of the Community Corrections Program until their cases are ended by some type of court action.

The County Probation Program is located at 1546½-6th Avenue. Persons who receive probation at District Court are then placed under the supervision of a probation officer, and they are assisted in much the same manner as those clients in the Community Corrections Program until their probation period is ended.

The Fort Des Moines Facility is located in Bldg. 65 on the Fort Des Moines Army Post on S.W. 9th Street at Army Post Road. This facility is a county jail, and persons may be sentenced there up to one year. Men sentenced to the Fort Des Moines Facility are able to attend school or work under the work release program. This facility is an honor type county jail and has no form of cells or bars to detain the clients. The length of time spent at the Fort Des Moines Facility is determined by the persons participation in the program which he sets up for himself in cooperation with his counselor. A person is eligible for parole from there at any time.

The Polk County Department County Services has aided over 1,000 residents of the Polk County Area since the Department began operation on January 1, 1971.

HEW Says Free Health Care

WASHINGTON, D.C. — (NBNS) — More than 6,300 health care facilities, including half of the nation's hospitals, have been ordered to provide a minimum level of free services to the poor.

HEW Secretary Elliot L. Richardson, who made the announcement last week, said failure of the institutions to comply with the regulations could mean loss of their federal aid or even their operating licenses. Richardson's action came in light of a series of lawsuits in Colorado, Florida, Louisiana, West Virginia and the District of Columbia which are seeking to compel the admission of needy patients to hospitals in those states.

The order, which appeared in the Federal Register, may be changed before it is finally implemented, however. But a little-used section of the Hill-Burton Act allows the secretary to take the action legally. However, a fight from the American Hospital Association is expected.

The Hill-Burton guidelines would require nonprofit hospitals and nursing homes receiving federal money, now or in the past, under the program to provide free services to the poor at a level not less than 5 percent of their operating costs or 25 percent of their net income.

The section reads: There will be made available in each such hospital or addition to a hospital a reasonable volume of hospital services to persons unable to pay therefore, but an exception shall be made if such a requirement is not feasible from a financial standpoint."

The Health Services and Mental Health Administration, which is a branch of HEW and administers the Hill-Burton funds, said data on file indicated compliance with the regulation ranging from a high of 8 percent to less than one-hundredth of 1 percent.

Angela's Love Letters Read, Diary Barred

SAN JOSE, Calif. — (NBNS) — The intimate love letters of Angela Davis, clearly depicting her philosophical viewpoints and a deep "love" for the late George Jackson was admitted as state evidence at her murder - kidnap - conspiracy trial here, but a lengthy 18-page diary was excluded.

The letters, which were written two months before the Marin County shootings of 1970 for which Miss Davis is charged with the three major crimes, were found in her apartment following the abortive escape attempt.

Superior Court Judge Richard E. Arnason allowed the three love letters to be read to the jury, but he barred, without prejudice, an 18-page communication or diary found in Jackson's San Quentin prison cell after he was killed last August in an alleged escape attempt. The judge also refused to admit testimony from a guard about a meeting between Miss Davis and Jackson in July, 1971.

The guard, prosecutor Albert Harris told the judge, would testify on seeing a "passionate and physical" meeting between Miss Davis and Jackson in a prison cell. The judge said the testimony could not be heard. The prosecution received the judge's rulings in grim silence, while the defense broke into smiles.

Wanted Soledads Freed

In a lengthy letter dated June 2, 1970, Miss Davis wrote Jackson, "I have come to love you very deeply. I used those words seldom in my 26 years ... It happened abruptly and spontaneously ... My love, your love, reinforces my fighting instincts."

In the rambling letters, Miss Davis said all her "life efforts" were aimed at freeing Jackson and the other Soledad Brothers. She called him "a beautiful, black warrior."

"If I am serious about my love for you, about my black people, I should be ready to go all the way. I am," she wrote.

"For the black female, the solution is not to become less aggressive, not to lay down the gun, but to learn how to set the sights correctly, aim correctly, squeeze rather than jerk and not to be overcome by the damage. We have to learn how to rejoice when pigs' blood is spilled."

Dreamt of Fighting

The letter continued, "I am regretting that I lying on the only warm spot of this double bed. It is 2:30 a.m. I dreamt we were together fighting pigs — winning."

In ruling on the 18-page diary being admitted into evidence, the judge said that the document — composed a full year after the Marin incident — contains "much that is totally irrelevant to the issues before the court and jury."

"It would appear to be a Herculean task," he said, "to excise the inadmissible and irrelevant material."

"The court is equally satisfied that, if the entire document were allowed to be received in evidence, it would entail undue consumption of time and create substantial danger of undue prejudice and possibly mislead the jury."

Blow to Prosecution

Taken as a whole, the three letters Miss Davis wrote are a rambling, highly philosophical chronicle of her devotion to both an individual and a cause. Although the defense opposed their entry for the record, they made full texts of the letters available to the press.

The defense and prosecution had argued before Judge Arnason, with the jury absent, for three days over the letters.

After reading the letters into the record, the prosecution called to testify four employees of Western Surplus Stores in Los Angeles, who said that Miss Davis purchased ammunition in the store on three occasions in the month before the shooting at the courthouse.

The judge took under advisement a motion to strike all the testimony of one clerk, Mrs. Duana Lawson, on grounds that store records did not support her testimony.

The store's ammunition book contained no notation of the sale about which she testified. Mrs. Lawson said her memory was refreshed by a sales slip, although the slip did not bear any name.

The rejections by the judge this week were a major blow to the case the prosecution was building to establish a motive for Miss Davis to allegedly commit murder, kidnapping and conspiracy.

Late Wednesday night, Judge Arnason sent the jury home for the rest of the week and scheduled an all-day session Thursday on the prosecutor's attempt to introduce the 18 - page diary of Jackson.
