Liberation For Black Africans

11,000 Blacks In Lib March

By Paul H. Wycke, Jr.

Black Caucus To Meet In Sioux City

There will be a Black initial meeting held on May 19, 1972 at Mt. Zion Baptist Church. This meeting is intended to give a better understanding of what the Black Caucus is about and the areas of involvement (Resolutions). An open forum of discussion with questions being answered by the state delegates and a follow up meeting of the representatives.

NAACP Will Aid So. African Blacks

RICHMOND, Calif.— (NBNS)— NAACP Director Roy Wilkins believes American blacks should work to free South African blacks by peaceful means—and he says his organization will assist too.

"We're going to do something to help our black brothers and sisters in Africa," he said at a dinner honoring his 41 years with the NAACP.

Wilkins visited South Africa for a month and said at the time, he hoped American corporations would remain in the country since they were assisting African blacks. His suggestion came under sharp attack from a number of blacks, who have advocated a hard-line approach against the South African nation.

Start Pro-Busing Plan

WASHINGTON— (NBNS)— The nation's largest civil rights coalition, the Leadership Conference on Civil Rights, has launched an all-out campaign to defeat the Higher Education bill, containing anti-busing legislation, when it comes to a vote on the Floor of the House.

The Senate has already approved the measure.

The Leadership Conference, made up of 127 June 1, 1972

"You don't know how far along you are—even if you aren't where you intend to be—till you look at South Africa where 14 million blacks and 3 million other nonwhites are under the heels of 3½ million whites," Wilkins said.

As a result of his recommendation, a group of black leaders refused to invite participation of the NAACP in African Liberation Day demonstrations in the nation's capital last weekend.

During the dinner, Wilkins told the group: "This is a very serious business, this freedom business."

He said the NAACP would provide assistance to blacks suffering under apartheid segregation in the African nation.

civil rights groups, said it would begin immediately to marshal forces against the proposed anti-busing legislation and the "hysteria over school busing that is sweeping the nation."

NAACP Director Roy Wilkins, who is chairman of the Leadership Conference, said the bill passed by the Senate last week and other pending anti-busing proposals are "the greatest threat to this

WASHINGTON — (NBNS) — More than 11,000 American and African blacks participated in a march and rally for black unity in what was the largest demonstration for a black cause in recent years, climaxing activities of African Liberation Day.

A rally, held on the grounds of the Washington Monument, renamed Lumumba Square for the day, followed a three-hour winding march through the Washington black community. The marchers also passed nearby embassies of several white-controlled southern African governments.

Leaders from a broad spectrum of black political and cultural groups—ranging from the Congressional Black Caucus to the Black Panther Party—urged support of the armed struggle of Africans in the colonial states to effect their liberation.

D.C. Del. Walter Fauntroy, who was in charge of the program at Lumumba Square, said the rally was a "homecoming."

"We have decided to answer the call of our ancestors and our brothers in Africa," he told the cheering crowd.

Demonstrators from the Midwest, South and Northeast said the day represented a "new awareness" among America's black community about the problems faced by their African brethren. They said it would be the start of a new involvement in this country with African problems.

Rep. Charles Diggs, D-Mich., chairman of the House Subcommittee on country's pursuit of equality that has arisen since the end of the Reconstruction period.

Wilkins told reporters the group's main concern was that enactment of any form of suppression of busing would set "unfortunate" precedents that might lead to "erosion" of other provisions guaranteed by the 14th Amendment to the Constitution.

Africa, told the crowd it is "time for people in America and the Caribbean to see that our African past is connected to the African future."

Draped in a purple dashiki and speaking from in front of a black nationalist flag with the image of black nationalist Marcus Garvey shaped to form the continent of Africa, Diggs continued:

"Resistance in the unliberated areas invites violence and all the necessary elements to win freedom. We are sounding a warning that no longer will the movement for justice stop at the water's edge," he told them.

Criticizing the U.S. government's involvement in with white-controlled minority governments in Africa, Diggs cited violations of the arms embargoes on South Africa and Rhodesia and also said the federal government had given more aid to Portugal, "the poorest nation in Europe," than to all black African nations.

Comedian Dick Gregory, who shared the podium at the rally with Diggs, black poet Imamu Baraka (Leroi Jones) and others, called the march "the greatest moment for liberation in the history of black folk in America."

He said it was far more significant than any previous civil rights marches because "the information for those was disseminated through the white press. If we had to depend upon the white press to find out about this today, there wouldn't be nobody here."

Former head of the Student Nonviolent Coordinating Committee, now living in Guinea, Stokely Carmichael was unable to attend, but he did send a message to the marchers.

"This is not a civil rights

The Congressional Black Caucus of 13 black members of the U.S. House of Representatives also called for defeat of the anti-busing proposals.

The Caucus said approval of such measures would turn the clock "back to pre-1954 days" before the historic Supreme Court decision which has led to the desegregation process.

march," he said. "It is a Pan-Africanist demonstration. This must advocate revolutionary posture."

In his wire, Carmichael demanded the defeat of U.S. forces in Vietnam and suggested the formation of an independent black political party in America.

He also criticized the Israeli government and recommended "the dismantling of Israel" and "total liberation and unification (of America) under scientific socialism."

The march differed from recent demonstrations here not only in its all-black composition, but also in its strong black nationalist tone.

Red, green and black flags of black nationalism were evident throughout the march, and the demonstrators, many dressed in fatigues, African clothing and denims, shouted black nationalist slogans and chants along the route.

Many chanted, Power to the people. Black, black power to the African people, who will survive America very few niggers and no crackers at all."

Part of the marchers broke off for a while to hear speakers denounce colonialist governments in front of the Rhodesian information center, the South African and Portuguese Embassies and the State Department. They heard indictments of the governments as well.

Later, a jazz concert was held at Howard University, to aid the liberation fighters. At the rally, more than $2,000 was collected.

Paris Foodland Grand Opening

In visiting the staff at Paris Foodland I asked what do you think of the store as matters stand now. Here are some of the replies:

Audrey Smart observed that this is the first time that a black man has actually owned a super market.

Porter Dimery has a very serious point of view in that he and Williams are "in this together". They talked 18 months ago when Williams asked if he would be his meat cutter. He promised that he would. "We're together! Not in it just for profit but in it to change the image. We are out to prove to the other section that a black man is capable of being in business. We will do right by the people." Dimery was with Iowa Packing Company when it closed. He made up his mind that he would stay with meats. He feels he was instrumental in getting the Federal training offered through MDTA for meat cutters. He trained in the 26 week course, finishing June 6, 1968. He has cast his lot with Williams. They have a common goal.

Granville Williams, Jr. who serves as assistant manager at night states "It is beautiful! As far as I know everything is going fine! This is something Des Moines has needed. I believe we will make a go of it. We are helping ourselves while helping others"

The very young workers in the store like Chuck Greene, Maurice Bruce, Terence Butts and Mike Williams, son of the owner, are pleased to be working for the store and are at one in this respect. Are simply glad the store is there!

Visiting with customers and asking much the same question: "What do you think of the store," brought these replies:

Mrs. Margie Martin, 1205 Forest Avenue: "I think it is modernistic. So nice and cool. It is lovely." Mrs.

Mildred Grave, beautician, Mrs. Michelle Botts of 1509 E. 17th Street thought the store real nice!" Melvin Moore, 926 Oakridge, said, "I think it is a good store. Some of the prices are not as high as in other stores. I think it's about time we had a store."

Mrs. Emma Mae Greene, 926 Oakridge, thought the store very nice. She had watched it progress describing this in this way: "I knew the store before it was here! I hope that everybody appreciates it and will come and see it. I think it really makes a contribution to our lives." As Moore said, "it was about time that people of Oakridge had a store."

Mrs. Beverly Winfrey, 822 16th Street said she had worked for the store. Works fulltime at Broadlawns and had worked parttime at the store. She thinks it is real nice.

New Courses

Drake University has inaugurated a Master of Arts (M.A.) degree program in religious leadership, according to Dr. Hoke L. Smith, Vice-President, Academic Administration.

Commenting on the program, Dr. Miller said:

"The M.A. degree program in religious leadership is designed to provide students with a deep understanding of religion and the ability to use techniques effectively in planning and carrying out programs in religious institutions.

"The problems of the inner city, increasing the effectiveness of religious education both within and without our religious institutions, and dealing with the problems of our nation's youth and the aged are all areas in which this program will have an impact."

Dr. Miller said the program is designed so that clergymen, pre-seminary students, and lay people will have different types of study, each according to their particular needs. The stress will be on the relationship between traditional religion and the special needs of the church in our time.

Drake University today (Monday) announced the initiation of a new graduate program leading to a master's degree in public administration (M.P.A.).

The announcement was made by Dr. Hoke L. Smith, Vice-President, Academic Administration.

The multi-disciplinary degree program will be offered by Drake's School of Graduate Studies under the direction of the Department of Political Science in the College of Liberal Arts. The program is the first of its kind in the State of Iowa.

Commenting on the need for such a program, Dr. Smith said:

"The goal of the M.P.A. degree program is to meet the growing demand for skilled public administrators by providing professional education to persons who wish to prepare themselves for administrative careers in government service."

31,000 Black Teachers Have Lost Jobs

WASHINGTON (NBNS)—Southern and border states have eliminated more than 31,000 actual and projected black teaching jobs at a cost to the black community of some $240 million during the last 18 years since the historic Supreme Court decision on school desegregation.

In a report, based on a study of pupil and teacher statistics supplied to the federal government for 1954, 1968 and 1970, the National Education Association says black educators have suffered most under the desegregation process in the South.

Samuel B. Ethridge, director of teacher rights for the NEA, said discrimination in hiring practices in the 17 Southern and border states has cost the black schools and the discriminatory hiring practices contributed to the sharp drop in black teachers.

The NEA study used average pupil-teacher ratios and black student enrollment in each state to project the number of black teachers who would have been employed if school systems had continued to hire black teachers at a rate that reflected the number of black students in the system.

Based on those figures and the actual numbers of black teacher employed in 1970, Ethridge and his colleague Donald R. Shire found 31,584 black teachers displaced by discriminatory hirings and firings.

In the 17-state region, the black student population grew from 23 per cent in 1954 to 24 per cent in 1970. By contrast, the study shows, the black teaching population declined from 21 per cent of the total teaching force to 19 per cent.

Since the number of teachers who have been dismissed is estimated at about 6,000, it is apparent that the additional 25,584 displacement comes from failure to hire, or a slowdown in hiring black teachers, Ethridge said.

Many districts no longer employ black teachers in 1954 had no such teachers employed in 1970.

Earlier this month, the NEA reported that thousands of black students were being pushed out of school, suspended, harassed, arrested, and, in a few instances, killed or maimed.

Incomplete data from 238 districts in 11 Southern states indicated that 19,441 students have been involved in school walkouts. Another 11,146 have been suspended and sometimes expelled, and more than 2,000 arrested.

Among states, in the teacher portion of the survey, the NEA found Kentucky leading with a 47 per cent displacement rate. That means, nearly half of the projected black teachers for that state have been displaced.

Missouri follows with 37 per cent; Delaware, 30 per cent; Oklahoma, 29 per cent; Arkansas, 27 per cent; Texas, 26 per cent; and Virginia, 24 per cent.

Also North Carolina, 21 per cent; West Virginia, 21 per cent; Tennessee, 21 per cent; Mississippi, 19 per cent; South Carolina, 19 per cent; Florida, 18 per cent; Maryland, 17 per cent; Georgia, 16 per cent; Louisiana, 14 per cent and Alabama, 12 per cent.

Alabama's low displacement rate is undoubtedly caused by the careful scrutiny of 99 state school systems by the federal courts under the Lee V. Macon statewide desegregation ruling.

Calls For Embargo On Rhodesia

WASHINGTON, D.C.—(NBNS)—Smarting from international and domestic condemnations, the Department of State has come forth with "several compelling reason" for breaking off all trade this year with the white racist government of Rhodesia.

In a letter signed by Under-Secretary of State John S. Irwin II to Sen. Gale W. McGee, D-Wyo., who is rallying Senate forces in an effort to once again ban shipments of chrome to the United States, Irwin asked for the repeal of legislation passed last year.

"As we pointed out prior to passage, the measure adopted last year has put the United States in violation of its international legal obligations: a most serious step which the Administration then maintained and still believes was not warranted by circumstances."

"Repeal now would serve to make us less vulnerable to unfavorable international reaction," Irwin stated in reference to the (Sen. Harry F.) Byrd Amendment of last November which permitted trade in "strategic materials" with Rhodesia in violation of United Nations sanctions.

"As a result of the legislation now in force," penned Irwin, "our international interests have suffered in other respects."

"In Africa, where our position on Rhodesia has heretofore been seen as a test of our commitment to self-determination and racial equality, our credibility has suffered. The depth of African concern has been particularly strong in some nations where our interests far outweigh those in Rhodesia.

Joining in the growing chorus to ban trade again and carry out U.N. sanctions against the government of Rhodesia was Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., who wrote black Rhodesian Methodist Bishop Abel T. Muzorewa that continued trade "would be a clear indication that the United States officially ignores the just and sensitive demands of black citizens in American and Africa."

Senator Byrd, miffed by efforts to repeal the legislation, attempted once already to strike Section 503 out of the authorization bill but was blocked by parliamentary objections. A major attempt is not expected until the Senate completes debate on several "end-the-war" amendments under debate and the vote is expected to be very close.

Morrie Turner: Cartoonist

By Jim Scott

Integration came later to the fiercely competitive world of cartooning than it did to sports. But the progenitor, Morrie Turner, of Oakland, California, is making it just as big as Jackie Robinson did in baseball, proving anew to youngsters that it's talent, not color, that counts.

The genial Morrie, whose voice flows as soft as sorghum, is the creator of "Wee Pals," a daily comic strip that the Register and Tribune Syndicate, Des Moines, distributes to 75 papers, including two in Africa.

(One African girl wrote Morrie: "Is it possible to make a living selling lemonade in the street?")

"Cartooning has always been the big interest in my life," says Turner. "But newspapers have provided me with an extra bonus. It's prestige, prestige that opens many doors, principally, the door to childhood."

Close to children

Turner appears frequently before school children in Oakland and Berkeley for "chalk talks." He's particularly proud of the "Wee Pals Read-in," which he conducts during the summer in Berkeley public libraries. Sometimes children refuse to believe that this kindly gentleman is an artist but their doubts vanish rapidly as he sketches Nipper on the blackboard.

He draws about 30 letters a week, about half of them from youngsters. They even send him cartoon ideas—some usable.

Morrie gets no inspiration from his own family, for his and Letha's only child Morris, is grown, gone and working for the telephone company.

Charles Schulz, of "Peanuts" fame has been Turner's hero, and he admits patterning Wee Pals after "Peanuts." (Schulz' first strip was called "Little Folks")

Like Schulz, Turner now is big in books — author of four cartoon works, "Wee Pals," "Kid Power," "Right-On, Wee Pals," and "Wee Pals Getting Together." He's also produced two children's books, "Nipper" and "Nipper Power." Moreover, he and Letha turned out a "Black and White" coloring book.

Further, Morrie authored "Freedom Is," a cartoon compilation of opinions of sixth grade pupils in Berkeley schools. Another of his stripe, bowing shortly, is "God is Groovy," in which youngsters talk about God.

Turner also is following Schulz into television. ABC will give Nipper and his friends the full-hour treatment in the Fall.

Again like Schulz, Turner has gone into merchandising. An Oakland firm, Outta Print, is producing Wee Pals T-shirts, bearing such legends as "Rainbow Power," and "Peace Loves Peanut Butter and Jelly."

Nocturnal artist

A comparative little guy himself, at 5-9, 165, Turner has odd work habits. He prefers the still of the night.

He starts work at midnight and remains at the drawing board until around 4 a.m.

"I also watch television," "Rather, I listen to it. I watch the start of a movie for about five minutes to place the characters in my mind, then turn away from it to go to work. After that, I don't see the screen but simply hear the words."

He sleeps till around noon. Oatmeal is his favorite breakfast food.

The Turners occupy a two-bedroom unit in an Oakland apartment building, and one bedroom serves as his office. Plaques and trophies he has won decorate the walls.

Morrie finds plenty to do after breakfast. With Letha's help, he answers his mail. Besides his grade school visits, he teaches an adult cartoon class at night at Laney College, and also serves the Volunteer Bureau, a wing of the Community Chest. And several times monthly he planes to the East or Midwest for appearances before school and parent-teacher groups.

Turner didn't make an impressive start in cartooning. In fact, he flunked an art course at Berkeley High, where his only fame came as a quarter-miler on the track team. ("We were always drawing flowers," he said. "I prefer people.")

At this time, Morrie had already started sketching friends and neighbors.

After his graduation from high school, Morrie Turner joined the Army—and it was in camp papers that his cartoons first appeared.

In police clerk's job

At war's end, Morrie returned home in 1946 and married his high school sweetheart. He caught on as a police clerk in Oakland, remaining on the job 13 years.

In his spare time, Turner kept busy at the drawing board. He sold often to trade journals, then he began hitting Collier's, Look, and the Saturday Evening Post.

By 1960, Morrie was making enough on his cartoon to quit his job and go fulltime into his beloved avocation. He began turning out "Dinky Fellas," for free for the Berkeley Post, a black weekly. It included only three characters; today, 11 populate Wee pals.

Two Black Politicians Buck Media

WASHINGTON — (NBNS) — Two black politicians—rejecting the politicians' love of "exposure"—refused to appear on a nationally televised "Issues and Answers" program when the producer refused to include a black newsman among the questioners.

"When men in the types of positions we are in are on the show," Congressman Louis Stokes, D-Ohio, said, "there should be a black there. Had we appeared on the show we would have been a party to racism."

Congressman Stokes, chairman of the Congressional Black Caucus, and Mayor Richard Hatcher of Gary, Ind., co-chairman of the National Black Political Convention, were scheduled to appear on the ABC network television show.

They insisted that one of the two newsmen interviewing them be black. Peggy Whedon, produced of the show, refused on the grounds that they would not "be dictated to."

U.S. Appeals Court Rules Against Sioux City Bank

A three-judge Federal Appeals Court at St. Louis has ruled that the Security National Bank of Sioux City violated the Equal Pay Act 1963 by paying women tellers less than men for doing the same work. It reversed a decision of the U.S. District Court in Iowa, issued January 15, 1971, by Chief Judge Edward J. McManus.

The appellate court specifically disagreed with the lower court's decision that the bank had a bonafide management training program with a differential based on factors other than sex. It pointed out that no woman ever qualified as a management trainee.

The court said, "...the Bank's explanation for the absence of women in the ranks of its management trainees recites a preconceived and traditional notion that women, because of their principal roles as wives, and mother, must occupy an employment status second to men outside the home. This notion is outmoded as well as unfair."

The lower court was directed to enter an appropriate injunctive order against future violations, and to make appropriate back pay awards.

It also was ordered to explore the status of men employees, hired since 1967 at the same rate as female tellers. The Secretary of Labor contends that these male employees also are entitled to back-pay awards. The Statute prohibits an employer who is in violation of the sex discrimination provisions from obtaining compliance by reducing the rate of male employees.

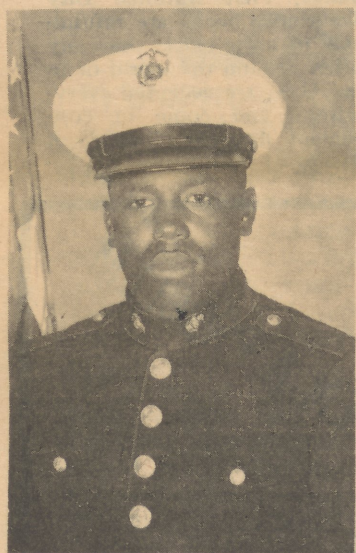

Court records list the names of 60 employees who were paid the lower rates prior to the filing of the suit in 1967. Subsequent employees would also be covered by the injunction.

The Soul Traveler

There isn't much time left if you are still thinking about attending the 1972 Olympic Games to be held this summer, August 26 to September 10, in Munich, West Germany.

Jesse Owens, former Olympic track star, will be there to cheer for the 366-member American team. Although the team roster has not been announced yet, it is for certain that several Black athletes will be among the group.

Mr. Owens will be a special visitor at the games. He is the only American among 10 persons from around the world selected by the German Olympic Committee as special guests at this year's event.

Recently, Jesse told an audience at the White House in Washington that the visit would be his sixth trip to Germany since 1936 when he won three individual gold medals that year in the Berlin games.

Jesse also recalled how he was snubbed on that occasion by Adolph Hitler, the German dictator. Hitler, astonished at the magnificent show by "America's Black Auxiliary," refused to shake hands with him and several other Black sports "super stars."

But to Jesse, that was yesterday. Today, he feels that "the climate of the times is different."

And I agree. Blacks traveling to Germany today are certain to receive a cordial welcome from the German people who, for the most part, don't seem to be uptight with racial hang-ups.

However, it may be a little hectic and crowded during the month of August. And if you are planning to attend the 1972 Olympics, time is running out.

Even though the dates are still several weeks away, the main consideration at this time is whether transportation, accommodations and event tickets are available.

It is reported that a total of 4.4 million tickets have been issued world-wide by the Olympics Committee for the 27 scheduled events which seem to range from Javelin throwing to tic-tac-toe.

Although nearly 120,000 tickets were allocated to the United States, individual tickets to the events are no longer available according to the American Automobile Association, the official U.S. sales outlet.

However, if you are a member of the Association, you may have one last chance.

Triple "A" is offering a group tour to the games. Departure will be from Washington, D.C., and is set for Wednesday, August 23 with a return date of Thursday, September 7.

The total price is roughly $1,000 plus your transportation to and from Washington.

Basically, the price includes round-trip air transportation, hotel accommodations, some meals and tickets to the opening ceremonies and five pre-selected events which are: gymnastics, basketball, wrestling, horseback riding and swimming.

Seven days of the trip will be spent on an escorted tour of modern and medieval Germany.

If interested, keep in mind that a passport and immunizations are required.

Your local AAA travel office should have additional information about the tour or write directly to: The Soul Traveler, Box 336, Washington, D.C., 20044.

Plot Strategy To Aid Africa

WASHINGTON — (NBNS) — Delegates to the first African-American National Conference on Africa have called for the United States to cease trade with Portugal and South Africa among its sweeping recommendations.

Concluding two days of workshops at Howard University, the delegates urged massive economic and political sanctions against supporters of white-controlled African nations.

The conference, sponsored by the 13-member Congressional Black Caucus, drew some 400 delegates and was designed to have the various workshops come up with strategies to assist black Africans in their fight for liberation.

Among the items approved by workshops was one calling for an end to all U.S. and North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO) support of Portugal, which aids Portugal-controlled Angola. The delegates also recommended private travel to South Africa, which practices racial apartheid.

The group suggested that the United States also open diplomatic relations with African liberation groups and called on Congress to require the termination of American investments in South Africa.

A workshop on the Caribbean called for black Caribbean countries in "family matters... (to) divorce themselves completely from the European-American position in the U.N. and other international forums."

Another workshop called for pressure on American unions to "take direct action to demonstrate their opposition to unjust racial practices in Africa."

One of the immediate effects of the conference, says its chairman, Rep. Charles Diggs, D-Mich., is to advance legislation that would repeal authorization for the United States to import Rhodesian chrome.

But of even more importance, the chairman of the House Subcommittee on Africa says, is that it represents the start of an "uphill battle" to have the problems of black Africans understood and dealt with. "A couple of years ago you wouldn't have had a conference like this that would have drawn flies," Diggs said.

"A lot of people in the State Department and people in the administration are looking at this to see if it represents more than just a lot of rhetoric," he continued.

And support by the U.S. and other nations for white-ruled countries in Africa came under sharp attack at the conference.

H.E. Abdulrahim Abby Farah the Somali Republic ambassador to the U.N., said the United States and other nations who aid the Republic of South Africa, the government of Rhodesia and Portugal, will be considered "enemies" of all African states.

Farah, the chairman of the U.N. Special Committee on Apartheid, predicted increased violence between rebel groups and the South African government where strict racial separation is enforced.

He said the situation in South Africa "creates a world danger and the question of peace (in Africa) hangs in the balance so long as white minority governments withhold basic freedoms from the black majority."

"The situation in southern Africa as a whole can be summed up as a confrontation between powerful, white, privileged defenders of the status quo and the politically powerless, exploited and under-privileged black majority," Farah said.

Rep. Louis Stokes, D-Ohio, chairman of the Black Caucus, told the conference delegates that the U.S. foreign policy relations in Africa is "shot through with an hypocrisy that cannot and should not be defended."

He was especially critical of the decision by Congress last year to buy chrome ore from Rhodesia and the Nixon administration's military agreement for use of a naval base in the Azores. Portugal controls the Azores and has continued to defend its colonies in Africa against armed nationalists.

Mary Louise Hopson tried out and was selected for a role in Kismet the recent Dramas Workshop Production directed by Freda Nahas, well-known director of many, many plays. She played the part of one of the ayahs (a lady in waiting) and a dancer. Mary Louise describes her new experience as a first and declares it thoroughly enjoyable, very demanding but that it was fun, a challenge and very rewarding. In Kismet she was known as Marya Hobson.

Mrs. Hopson is prominent in the business world. Her story is very unusual and I've asked permission to give it here. She came to Des Moines in the summer of 1952. She was a young Mississippi girl. She had a close friend who whenever she was about to leave a job, would ask Mary Louise if she would like the job. The answer was always yes. On this occasion the job was with a family of a pathologist, who headed Mercy Hospital's pathology department. The friend asked Mary Louise if she would like to work for them while they visited their family in Mississippi and so find out if she liked them. Mary Louise did so, liked their life style. Born in Mississippi and so find out if she liked them. Mary Louise did so, liked their life style. Born in Mississippi, she found life there depressing, very depressing, so decided to leave with them for here.

She came here in August and in November it began to snow. She hadn't seen such snow in all her life and so stayed indoors for eleven months! In the spring she went out and found Des Moines to be lovely culturally, and presented so many opportunities. She went home for a vacation and upon her return found another job. On the second job she attended The American Institute of Business taking a secretarial course. Also studied voice under a Miss Houser in a private studio. She remained on the second job for two years.

She next accepted a position with Julia Lenobel, Inc. Miss Lenobel was owner of a women's APPAREL SHOP. It was high fashion, a very exclusive shop. Mary Louise was her secretary, assistant manager; bought, sold — she was everything. She was involved in public relations. She was Miss Lenobel's assistant for fourteen years.

In between times, May 20, 1962, to be exact, Mary Louise Hopson became Mrs. L.W. Hopson. Hopson was a Des Moines business man. This marriage ended with his death in 1968.

After working for Miss Lenobel, Mrs. Vaughn left her employe. In 1968 and 1969 she was a model at The Enchantress, another high fashion dress shop.

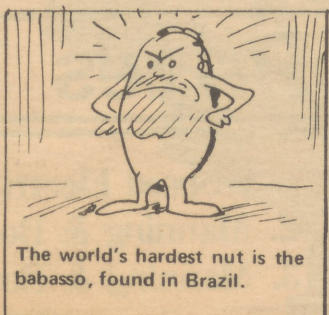

Mrs. Vaughn accepted a position with Northwestern Bell Telephone Company where she is presently employed as telephone sales representative.

Exactly at this point in our visit, Mary Louise smilingly commented "And I can shoe a horse!" It left me speechless. I finally asked "Why can you shoe a horse?" A rather lame question but I felt rather lame brained, really! She stated that her father is a blacksmith! He shoes an average of 12 horses daily. When a small child, her father taught her to shoe horses. With no boys in the family, she took the place of a son. She helped him build wagons, wagon wheels, too! Helped put rims on wheels. Did lots of things!

Building a wheel—First, you have the axel, then the spikes, then the rim. The steel rim has to be heated, brought with steel tongs to the frame. While her father would pound the steel rim, she would apply pressure to the rim with the crowbar. Then the two would reverse positions: she pounded and he pressured until the rim was on!

So here we have beautiful Mary Louise Vaughn: business woman, model, actress and a blacksmith's assistant! How very, very lovely she is!

Jess Whiteside and her gals and guys give promise of a fabulous show on June 9! The practice session was backed by a band. Jess put everyone through their paces. Personally, I find she goes through some on her own—she really shows the kids what they must really put across. She maintains a marvelous sense of good humor throughout. The show has to be good and I am wondering who will win the three prizes. Great big prizes. Good luck, Jess and your crew!

With Allen Ashby

I got off on this tennis thing and a fellow asked me if there was a time before Arthur Ash when black tennis players could have made it big in the game, except Althea Gibson, of course. As one thinks about the players who have come along, and I haven't seen nearly as many as a couple of other fellows have, there have to be some who were capable of playing with anybody. But they didn't have the competition they needed. The first black tennis player I saw who had all the shots was Dick Hudlin, who was captain of the University of Chicago tennis team. Well, after Dick got out of college, he wasn't able to play with the leading white players, and had to play where he could. So his game deteriorated just a shade below what it was in college. But, even at 50 he was a smooth player, and was tough to beat. But do you know that he wasn't a bit popular with the rest of the black players around the places where I saw him. In Chicago or Kansas City, everyone seemed to be glad when Dick got beat. And everybody played his very best game against the guy. Never did figure out why that was so. Then there were a couple of players named Jimmy McDaniels and Schoolboy Mitchell. Both of those players from the west coast had given the then national singles champ, Bobby Riggs, all he wanted when they were in high school. But, Riggs got on the big time circuit, and the two blacks had to go back to playing each other. There were some others who were good, but they could not have made it. One guy, Charley Graham, was really tough hitting both forehand and backhand with top spin, and covered lots of court. But I don't think Graham could have done much with the top twenty players because his game just wasn't well rounded enough. I saw a fellow from Denver, Richard Cohen, who later won the playground singles title. Cohen went on the Xavier of New Orleans and was one of the ranking players around for a while until foot trouble took him out.

There were several others who needed only a shot at the circuit to make it in tennis as white people played it then, the Jackson brothers of Tuskegee, and the Campbells of Prairie View, to name a couple. But, I don't think we ever thought about the thing on a national scale until Althea Gibson came along, because our national meet was such a big fine thing, and the people who ran the ATA had so much power that they never thought about challenging the USLTA. We had everything they had, and were doing all right. I could be wrong about this bit, but that is the way I see it now from the vantage point of looking back over the years.

I remember the questions I raised when Ash was being recognized as one of the top tennis players in the country. Should he play in the ATA meet? What if he didn't win, how could writers call him the best black player in America? And what about the ATA champ? Where would he fit in? Maybe a match between the two. Well, I don't think anybody paid any attention to my question, so they never got the light of publicity.

And now who might have had a shot at better tennis around here? Of course, everyone thinks of Chet Williamson, who had perhaps the finest, most accurate backhand around of any player. Paul Williams got more competition than Chet did, and he had a good chance to make it. Joe Howard could have been a tough tennis player if he had wanted to. But Joe could do so many things that he never put his heart in the game, except for a match or two that he really wanted to win. Don't know about brother Bill. He became a student of the game, and maybe if someone had gotten to him, he might have been tough. He did have the first big game as it is played now, but he didn't get to use it often enough.

But, if tennis were as open as it is now, most of us playing back then would have been much better players, so you can guess what we might have done on a national scale.

The ATA meet was a good deal like the Prairie Tennis meet in Chicago. For years they couldn't play in meets around that city, so the Prairie Tennis club grew into one of the richest and finest tennis clubs of any race in Illinois. Today their meet is probably the oldest meet in the state of Illinois, and is listed as a predominately black meet. But, if they hadn't been shoved aside this club might never have come along. Here, our Hilltop Club was a similar outgrowth, and if we hadn't been forced to, we probably wouldn't have had this club. As it is, our meet is certainly one of the oldest, if not the oldest in Iowa. The thing has been going on since 1929, and our present setup is in its twenty-fifth year, and may be one of the most unique meets around. And all because a few of us wanted to play tennis.

Nixon Signs

WASHINGTON, D.C. — (NBNS) — President Nixon signed legislation launching a $115 million attack over the next three years to find a cure for sickle cell anemia, the disease which afflicts an estimated 1,000 black infants each year.

The programs authorized by the bill or already under way makes it possible to "look forward to the day when sickle cell anemia will be conquered as a debilitating menace to many Americans," Nixon said of the hereditary blood disorder afflicting an estimated 25,000 to 50,000 American blacks.

Blacks To Build City

Floyd B. McKissick, developer of Soul City and President of the Warren Regional Planning Corporation (WRPC) announced today that the U.S. Department of Commerce had awarded a $190,000 contract to the Soul City project. The WRPC is the research and development arm of Soul City. The Office of Minority Business Enterprises, headed by Mr. John L. Jenkins issued the contract to WRPC for industrial planning and development in the new town. Soul City is located in Warren County, North Carolina on U.S. 1 near I-85, a 45 minute drive from the Research Triangle cities of Raleigh, Durham and Chapel Hill.

The U. S. Department of Housing and Urban Development along with the State of North Carolina just last week issued a contract to Soul City for $128,000 for completion of planning. Mr. McKissick said that the announcement of two federal awards within the past two weeks is indicative of broad Federal and State support.

Under the new contract from the Commerce Department, the Warren

Regional Planning Corporation is to develop an industrial development plan which can serve as a model for other communities in North Carolina and for rural free-standing new communities anywhere in the nation.

Other federal agencies involved in the new town development are the U. S. Department of Agriculture, Office of Economic Opportunity and the U.S. Department of Transportation.

Soul City is the only free-standing (non-metropolitan) new town in the process of development and seeks to build an employment level of 24,000 jobs within the next two or three decades. It is projected that the new community will eventually have 8000 manufacturing jobs alone.

McKissick said, "There is a large reservoir of people within the immediate region of Soul City who must be employed, trained and put to work. The utilization and upgrading of this labor force is a basic premise. This does not mean that additional employees should not be brought into the area, particularly at the skilled and professional levels."

IN MEMORY OF
MRS. MARICE
SINGLETON
WE'RE GOING TO MISS HER

The lonely tides of life have rendered us speechless as to words.

We know it has to happen as the moving of mystic herds.

We never quite prepare ourselves, for the deeds of unknown fate.

We'd rather think of pleasant rath, and not bare the total weight.

Marice is gone, her life, now done.

No more strife, or pain, her race tis run.

The memories of her sweet, angelic smile. Her laugh, her cry, her talk, her style.

Her times of joy, her times of tears have molded her being through the years.

It brings us sadness to know she is gone. Never to see her again for so long.

But she was loved, she was blessed, her life is over, she had to depart. For us we're going to miss her, Marice Estelle Townes Singleton, we will remember in our hearts.

MAIL TALE

In August of 1872, a man named Lewis W. Smith became the first person in history to have a mail order filled by Montgomery Ward. Which seems only appropriate, because Mr. Smith was a postmaster!

the fine print

Well, it seems to me that the television coverage of assassinations are becoming like football games.

You have virtually FBI personal histories of both sides; including academic records, what the kindergarten teacher thought of Mr. assassin.

Then the prey of the assassin has a political analysis of his campaign, up to the day, how the man on the street thought about Politicians X; and the report isn't complete without a Norman Rockwell-like picture of the family in their plight.

To the actual act: this is where television has learned its lesson well with football. First, you have the filmed action of the act — so far that is straight news reporting, the public sees just what happens. Second, the commercialization—

"And now folks we'll see that in slow motion," says the news commentator. Then they run it in slow-motion.

A second before Politician X is hit the commentator tells you where the shot is going to come from, then who did it.

"In just a moment you'll see Mr. Assassin in the third row ... that's in the lower right on your screen ... there it is." This is all shown in stop-action motion.

Then in a grave voice the newsman will give the condition of Politician X and what the law is doing to Mr. Assassin.

The sad part about it is — there's an act of violence, then television makes it all unreal.

I'm surprised that game makers haven't come out with — a new game Politicians and Assassins. It would be similar to monopoly as they ole cynic would say, "they'll make it in '76".

Black Woman Headed For Congress From Watts

LOS ANGELES — (NBNS)— Black Californian Assemblywoman Yvonne Braithwaite watched the rioting in Watts seven years ago and decided to run for public office to change the system. She's been running ever since—and winning.

Now, Ms. Braithwaite is seeking a seat in Congress this month to represent the newly-carved out 37th Congressional District and she's favored to become the third black woman in Congress in recent years.

Rep. Shirley Chisholm, D-N.Y., is already in Congress and Texas State Sen. Barbara Jordan is expected to defeat her Republican opponent in Houston next November.

She has a deep-rooted commitment to the cause of all disenfranchised people including women, the poor, blacks, and other minorities, and she thinks they can be helped through the system of politics.

Black Caucus

WASHINGTON — (NBNS)— The latest effort to increase the influence of Black Americans in the political arena this year is already facing a do-or-die situation, most observers agree.

The National Black Political Assembly began in March in Gary, Ind., when thousands of blacks from across the country met in a national black political convention.

It was the first time a group of blacks, representing such varied ideological points of view as the pro-integrationist NAACP and the separatist Congress of Racial Equality, had come to gether to make up a "Black Agenda" of national priorities.

But most at the Gary convention, including the NAACP which several weeks ago pulled out of the formal Assembly organization because of "serious ideological" conflicts, came to the convention in an effort to unite the uncommitted or committed black men and black women in one common struggle—and one means of achieving that struggle to acquire equal rights and opportunity and without uniting with uniformity.

The Assembly, through its steering committee, must now come up with some concrete ways to solve some of the problems they so clearly highlighted in their 55-page "Black Agenda." If the Assembly is unable to come up with some of those solutions, it will probably see its role diminish considerably within the nation's black community.

The challenge is coming from three other black groups—the long-time civil rights-oriented NAACP, the 13-member Congressional Black Caucus of the U.S. House of Representatives, and black elected officials.

The Assembly has to keep at least two of these groups within its ranks if it expects to create any credibility in the black community—but it has already lost the NAACP, who criticized it for passing resolutions and endorsing concepts which were "separatist in nature."

NAACP Director Roy Wilkins, whose organization objected strenuously to the agenda's stand against busing for desegregation purposes and its criticism of the state of Israel for its "expansionist policy," said the agenda appears to call for black separatism—a separate black nation and "black politics."

The dilemma of the Black Caucus embracing the Black Assembly is a little different. Most members agree they won't be taking a stand as a body endorsing the precepts of the Black Agenda, and many have been highly critical of the Israeli and busing resolutions.

If the steering committee of the assembly cannot show some break-throughs, a short, abbreviated life for the nation's first national black political organization may be ahead.

Open Letter

Dear Brothers & Sisters:

We are attempting to develop a black united front (in the Des Moines area).

We have been attempting to do this since November 1971.

There is obviously a need for a Black United Front in the Des Moines area...if not throughout the entire country..

Whether - One's direction comes from the Honorable Elijah Muhammed, Jesse Jackson, Imamu Amiri Baraka, Sokely Carmichael, H. Rap Brown, Eldridge Cleaver, Huey P. Newton, Rev. Charles Koen, Martin Luther King, George Jackson or Malcolm X, one recognizes that the unification of our people is a necessity for our independence and liberation!"

The purpose of the Black United Front is for operational unity among the existing black organizations. "Our community wants to see our organizations — if they are serious about bringing liberation and freedom to Black people — to at least try to bring about some type of real-principled unity!"

Some of the stated goals are immediate as well as long range, however, some goals and objectives are still being formulated and developed.

The program must be multifaceted and diverse. "all we have to do is mention Jonathan Jackson, Angela Davis, The Soldedad Brothers, H. Rap Brown, Brother Wheeler, Brother Jackson (15 year old who was shot by the Des Moines Fascist Police Department—for disrupting property relations), George Jackson, Attica, Cairo, Wilmington, N.C., Marianna, Ark., Fort Madison, Anamosa, Rockwell City, Polk County Jail and everyone realizes that there is much that can be done in dealing with this genocidal situation...there is not only much that can be done there is much that must be done!"

In the Des Moines area we must deal with specific problems.

...The oppressive system of WELFARE

...The abominable conditions of reservation HOUSING

...The death producing DRUGS that infest our community

...The CONTROL of the POLICE and all POLITICAL PRISONERS

...The SNITCH-PATROL (Sellout Negroes) — who are Hitler's helpers — Chief Wendall Nichols & The Racist City Council. These Snitches must be firmly dealt with and run out of the community — they are no better than Hitler himself.

...The immorality of the HEALTH conditions in our community

...The sudden infusion of ELECTORIAL POLITICS upon our people.

...The colonialism of our E C O N O M I C DEVELOPMENT.

...The miseducation of our children by the racist school system.

...The racial discrimination & violent repression we face on all levels.

...The Racist crimes committed against Brothers and through the oppressive legal system — which fails our Brothers and Sisters daily illegally.

We will be scheduling meetings soon. For those who are interested you are requested to write Black United Front c/o Black Theology 1016 Forest Avenue or telephone: 284-1660 for further information.

One may say that we are a working committee for a Black United Front based on operational & principled unity.

This is a written call to all those organizations & persons who truly want to relate seriously to the struggle of our people and to all those activist organizations that are taking care of righteous business in the black community and who are dealing with the liberation of black and oppressed people.

We will never turn back. All power to the people. The organizing committee for a Black United Front.

Editorial New Welfare Rules In Effect July 1

Suffer the Little Children

To some extent, to some degree it penalizes the children."

These words spoken by Malcolm Lovell, Jr., Assistant Secretary of Labor for Manpower, in explaining the tough, new welfare regulations due to take effect this July 1.

Under rule changes passed last year by Congress, approximately 1.5 million welfare recipients will be required to register for work and to take jobs assigned to them—whether or not they want the job or believe the salary to be adequate for the work expended.

In the form of servitude these regulation portend, to refuse the job offered will mean to be taken off welfare assistance reducing the total amount that is currently provided for families with children.

These new "reform" rules have an all-too-familiar ring to them. They are fashioned by those great American myth-makers who find "welfare chiselers in every household" and "lazy loafers on every street corner" regardless of the facts which have refuted such characterizations time and time again.

No matter what the truth is that the vast majority of assistance payments are made to single heads of households with dependent children.

No matter what the truth is that there are simply not enough jobs to go around and that there are 5 million or more Americans looking for jobs that do not exist.

What the Congress, what the White House, what the new regulations are really saying is that the government after all these years has failed to understand why people turn to welfare when all else fails and that despite all the rosy talk and forecasts, the country's economic policies are in crisis.

And now we have come so far as to pass on the Country's failings to our children.

WASHINGTON, D.C. — (NBNS)— On July 1 new welfare regulations will take effect requiring 1.5 million recipients to register for work and to take jobs assigned to them or face the prospect of being removed from federal and state assistance rolls.

Drafted by conservatives in Congress caught up in the rhetoric to "crack down on welfare chiselers," the new regulations— if fully implemented— could cost the government millions more than it now expends and give its authors nightmares.

On the surface, the new regulations appear to groups such as the National Welfare Rights Organization (NWRO) and assorted civil rights groups as the most repressive series of rules to come out of Congress in quite some time.

It requires, for example, that all "able-bodied" welfare recipients— most of whom are single heads of households with dependent children— to mandatorily sign a declaration to seek and accept what program administrators decide is a job to match his or her skills.

If the recipient refuses to sign the declaration or says "thanks but no thanks" to the job that is offered, he or she stands to be taken off the assistance roll.

This would mean that in a family of four— one head of household and three children— the amount of welfare assistance could be cut as much as 25% or one-quarter of the total sum.

What may not have been totally perceived by authors of the so-called Talmadge Amendments— named after the Southern conservative Sen. Herman Talmadge of Georgia— is that only about 100,000 of the 1.5 million expected to be effected by the regulations are "able-bodied" males. The vast majority are women heads of households who are raising children six years old and older.

Of the 1.5 million who by the end of 1972 will be required to sign up for work, many of whom will then be officially added to a nationally unemployment rate of nearly 6 per cent, the following services or combination of services will have to be extended by federal and state agencies before exhausting all avenues for finding them jobs:

Adequate child care services, including transportation cost will have to be borne by the government.

Medical examinations will have to be provided free to those who claim physical disabilities which preclude them from holding a job.

Free legal services must be provided those challenging the decisions of the local agency requiring a recipient to take a job.

Manpower training or retraining services will have to be expanded.

At Least 4,000 new placement officers must be hired nationwide to explore the job market and find job openings.

Legal services designed to ensure that employers who advertise for work positions do not discriminate against minority.

Tax credits will be given to businessmen who hire bona fide welfare recipients.

Additional funds to check welfare rolls to ensure that all "able-bodied" individuals sign up for the work requirement provisions.

Eventual funds to establish computer centers to keep track of available jobs and individuals with skills to match the work an employer is seeking to obtain.

All of these new or expanded procedures will carry a price-tag, possibly one far greater than a simple assistance check for subsistence income under the welfare regulations currently in effect.

Urban South: Re-Segregation?

WASHINGTON — (NBNS)— Six civil rights groups completing a study on the forgotten urban school systems of the South concluded that the desegregation effort still has a long way to go.

Authored by the Alabama Council on Human Relations, the American Friends Service Committee, the Delta Ministry of the National Council of Churches, the NAACP Legal Defense and Educational Fund, Inc., the Southern Regional Council and the Washington Research Project, the report is entitled "Its Not Over in the South." It covers 54 city school systems in 11 Southern states. Of the 2,727 schools involved, 350 were found to be all white or all black and 700 so predominately one race or the other that they were considered nearly segregated.

Urban Southern schools still are not giving black students an equal education. "There is an illusion of progress," the report contends.

There is a disturbing pattern of re-segregation. The study concluded that the power structure in most Southern cities surveyed has conspired to maintain black neighborhoods with one-race schools. "The FHA, local planning commissions and housing authorities, urban renewal school boards, highway departments, realtors and even transit companies have consciously contributed to racial impaction.

singled out several school systems for praise, but most for condemnation. For Example:

TAMPA, FLORIDA

Hillsborough County School District has achieved a racially balanced school system using extensive busing without much public outcry.

Under court order, the Tampa school system had to devise a desegregation plan for its 102,000 students have a racial composition of 81 per cent white, 19 per cent black. The plan created an approximate 80-20 racial balance in every school in the county and received local news media and Parent Teachers Association support.

Tampa schools go out of their way to recruit black teachers. Federal money has been used to provide students with an after school activity bus.

KNOXVILLE, TENNESSE

Knoxville's desegregation plan, currently under appeal, has not achieved racial balance.

Of the 66 schools in the Knoxville system, one is black, 17 are 100 percent white. Seven are 95 to 99.9 percent black; 25 are 96 to 99.8 percent white. Four are 64 to 85 percent black; two are 90 to 92 percent white.

Black students are gaining representation on student councils, but there are no black majorettes in desegregated schools because black candidates can not get white votes. Black student activities are not reported in the school newspaper and many don't read the paper because it cost 15 cents. Leadership clubs are closed to blacks.

Faculty desegregation has hurt the black community as the best black teachers have been sent to white schools.

Blacks in the inner-city of Knoxville can not get out. They are virtually trapped and their children forced by colusion of state and federal agencies at the housing end to attend one-race schools, the report shows.

BAPTISTS DESTROY INTEGRATIONIST MATERIAL

Nashville, Tenn. -NLI- A picture of a black youth with two white girls and other "racial material" was too much for the Southern Baptist Convention Sunday School Board to take. They ordered 140,000 copies of a booklet containing the pictures destroyed. The board felt that the material, intended for 14- and 15-year-old Sunday School students, was "potentially inflammatory."

A Southern Baptist official said his church body didn't want to give people the idea that it was pushing integration of churches. According to Southern Baptist policy, each congregation has to decide for itself what it is going to do about integrating.

Remember Malcolm

Part 111 The Man

From the brief biography sketch above, you are able to see that Malcolm was not of divine birth or anointed with God's blessing but ascended to his stature through sheer struggle.

Probably the most significant thing about this is he never once divorced himself from the masses. Like so many leaders in the past who sold us out, Malcolm stood fast to his convictions. This is one of the things that peeved the white man because they couldn't buy him off.

Agent: "... but sometimes money brings out the information. I don't intend to insult you here."

Malcolm: "According to the Secretary of the Treasury, this Government's money is in trouble. According to Government economists, the dollar itself is in so much trouble, a person would be a fool to sell his soul for one of these decreasing dollars." (Malcolm X; The Man & His Times — A Visit From the FBI, Page 191)

Sometimes Malcom's dedication to serving the masses stood in contradiction of giving his family more attention, still Betty, his wife, had nothing but praise.

"He use to do tender, little things that I suppose every woman looks for in her husband." (Ibid — 135)

"Malcolm was the greatest thing in my life and he taught me what every female ought to learn: to live and to love as a woman, to be true to myself and my responsibilities as a mother. And to use my spiritual, material, and intellectual capacities to help build a better human society." (Ibid - 143)

We see an entirely different man when sister Shabazz speaks of her late husband. Aman who was sensitive to the needs of people who might have been considered small. No one was too little for him not to have time to converse.

His actions, conducted by Allah, were positive emotional traits such as uncompromising sincerity and love for the masses. A complete "servant of the people."

Combined with these spiritual qualities he had intelligence, a quick analytical mind. He matched wits with America's best educators and sociologists. They were never able to defend America's policies when debating with Malcolm. He refuted their best theories with an intellect well versed in history, economics, politics, and the Holy Koran.

His quest for the truth never confined him to any particular political philosophy. He sought the best possible solution to the black man's problem in America and Africa. He trod many dark paths from rebellious slave to Black Muslim, to black nationalist revolutionary.

Angela's Trial Draws To An End

SAN JOSE, Calif. — (NBNS) — The decision of her attorneys to present only a brief defense moved the Angela Davis trial toward an early decision.

Attorneys for the 28-year-old former U.C.L.A. instructor rested their case after only three days. They called 11 witnesses but did not put Angela herself on the stand in connection with the murder-kidnap-conspiracy charges against her.

In contrast, the prosecution has presented 95 witnesses during seven weeks of testimony before the all-white jury of seven women and five men.

Miss Davis' attorneys reportedly were divided between those who wanted to call no defense witnesses and those who favored an extended defense effort.

The compromise three-day presentation included testimony from Miss Davis' former roommate who testified that three guns used in the aborted Marin County kidnapping were taken from their apartment without Miss Davis' knowledge.

Valerie Mitchell, who is also known as Tamu which means "sweetness" in Swahili, testified that Jonathan Jackson apparently took the three guns from their Los Angeles apartment after she left him alone there on August 1, 1970.

Mitchell said the apartment was used as the headquarters for the Che-Lumumba Club, an all-black Communist collective to which she and Miss Davis belonged.

She said the 17-year-old younger brother of Soledad Brother George Jackson was in the apartment to use the mimeograph machine. She said the guns were kept on a rack in the closet and were not found to be missing until after the fatal kidnapping attempt on August 7, 1970.

Miss Mitchell said Miss Davis and a companion came to the apartment on August 8 and asked to see the guns. They found two carbines, a pistol and some ammunition missing.

"Oh, no!" Miss Davis exclaimed, the witness testified. She said she told the two she did not know what had happened to the guns and that she had not checked them since Jonathan Jackson had been in the apartment a week before.

Chief Prosecutor Albert W. Harris, Jr., had been expected to contend that Miss Davis became involved because of her belief that the three Soledad Brothers were being framed because of their militant views and activities.

Instead, Harris claimed that Miss Davis acted out of love for George Jackson and that "her basic motive was not to free political prisoners, but to free the one prisoner that she loved."

Judge Richard E. Arnason resisted, however, prosecution efforts to enter lengthy communications between Miss Davis and George Jackson in the court record. He admitted three letters but forced the prosecution to edit an 18-page "diary" found in Jackson's cell to two-and-a-half pages. Most of the "diary" was devoted to Miss Davis' philosophical discussion with Jackson of the problems black men and women face in a racist society.

Soledad Brother Fleeta Drumgo was one of the 11 witnesses called by Defense Attorney Leo Banton, Jr., in Miss Davis' behalf. He testified that, although he had a cell adjoining James D. McClain, the defendant in the Marin County trial, he had no knowledge of the attempt to free McClain and take hostages to exchange for the Soledad Brothers.

The remaining Soledad Brother, John Clutchette, was in the courtroom when the defense rested its case, but did not testify. George Jackson was killed at San Quentin Prison in an alleged escape attempt.

Defense witness Ellen Broms, a Los Angeles social worker, testified that Miss Davis was at her home on the evening of August 7, when she learned of the events at the Marin County Civic Center. She said Miss Davis cried with grief and shock when she learned that Jonathan Jackson had been slain. Not until the next day, when she read the newspaper accounts, did Miss Davis suspect that her guns — including the new shotgun — had been used.

"She said: 'My God, there's something in here about a shotgun. And I just bought a shotgun in San Francisco for the defense of the Soledad House. And I gave it to Jonathan. I wonder if it could be the same one.'"

Soledad House was the San Francisco headquarters which served as headquarters of the defense committee seeking to free the Soledad Brothers.

Another defense witness, Robert H. Buckhout, associate professor of psychology at California State College in Hayward, testified that there were circumstances which could have caused prosecution witnesses to err in identifying Miss Davis as having been present near the Marin County Civic Center and at San Quentin Prison with Jonathan Jackson on the day before the kidnap effort.

Marvin Stender, a San Francisco attorney, and Carl Bloice, editor of "People's World," a Communist newspaper published in San Francisco, testified that they were with Miss Davis elsewhere when the prosecution contended she and Jonathan were reportedly seen in a yellow van used the next day in Marin County.

The case was expected to go to the jury after the prosecution had had a chance to cross-examine the defense witnesses.
