Tuskegee Report Of Black "Guinea Pigs"

New African Official Reported Beaten, Maced In Mississippi Prison

Jackson, Miss.—Hakima Ana, vice president of the Republic of New Africa, has been brutally beaten and tortured with mace in Parchman Prison, according to the attorney appealing his murder conviction to the Mississippi Supreme Court.

Returning from a visit to his client, attorney John C. Brittain said Hakima Ana was beaten by six prison trustees, acting under the instructions of prison officials, and sprayed in the face with mace while five of the trustees held him down.

Wife of Hakima Ana

The attack reportedly resulted from Hakima's participation in a demonstration against prison food.

Brittain said his client's face showed definite signs of the macing. He said scars resembling those left by third degree burns are still apparent on his face.

Hakima, in his third month at Parchman, has already lost considerable weight, Brittain said, because he has been unable to adjust to the poor prison food. He is now locked in solitary confinement and denied access to the prison canteen.

Mrs. Olivia McClure, Hakima's mother, reports that she has been sending money and food to her son from her home in Durham, N.C. Visitors and inmates claim that, to the best of their knowledge, prison officials have not forwarded the food to Hakima.

Panthers Fired No Shots, Survivor Insists

Chicago—Black Panther members fired no shots at invading State's Attorney police, when they broke into the apartment of leaders Fred Hampton and Mark Clark, said a survivor of the December, 1969, raid.

Deborah Johnson, 21, testified she was sleeping beside Hampton when another Panther ran into the room saying, "Chairman, chairman, wake up, the pigs are back."

But before Hampton could get up, Ms. Johnson said she could feel the mattress vibrate as the bullets struck it. Although carrying Hampton's eight-month-old child, Ms. Johnson rolled on top of the Panther leader to shield him from the police bullets.

Officers then led her away, she said, leaving Hampton lying face down in the bed. There appeared to be no blood on Hampton as she left the room.

But after leaving the room, she heard two shots and then heard a policeman say, "He's barely alive, or he'll barely make it."

Then she heard two more shots and heard another Panther scream from the living room. One of the officers then said, "He's good and dead now." As she was being taken from the house, Ms. Johnson said she saw Clark lying in a pool of blood on the living room floor.

Testifying that two shotguns were in the other bedroom and two were in the living room of the apartment, Ms. Johnson insisted that Hampton did not have a gun in her bedroom nor did she see any other occupant of the apartment return the officers' fire.

A Federal Grand Jury several years ago said more than 90 shots had been fired into rooms of the apartment, but that only one bullet, a shotgun pellet, had been fired outward from the apartment.

Although there were seven Panther survivors of the raid, Ms. Johnson is the only one to testify about the pre-dawn raid.

State Attorney Edward Hanrahan and 13 other defendants are being tried in the case for conspiring to protect the raiding police officers.

Hanrahan is also accused by the prosecution of presenting evidence he should have known was false to secure the indictment of the seven survivors on charges of attempted murder.

Hanrahan later dropped those charges conceding that he did not have sufficient evidence needed to bring the seven persons to trial.

Add these to your list of violence, Mr. President...

ART HARDING

Although he is under indictment, Hanrahan fought off two challenges to the Democratic nomination as Cook County's State Attorney several months ago.

Before Ms. Johnson would take the stand, she asked Criminal Court Judge Philip Romiti, former dean of the De Paul University Law School, to order the defendants to remove their pistols from the courtroom.

Her attorney said Ms. Johnson was "scared out of her mind" because the accused men were wearing guns in court. The weapons were ordered removed by the judge.

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y.
(NBNS)

Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim informed the Security Council that South Africa has agreed to the appointment of a special United Nations representative to work for Namibia's self-determination and independence.

South Africa's old League of Nations mandate over what was formerly known as South West Africa was declared void by the U.N. General Assembly in 1966. However, subsequent U.N. efforts to achieve independence for the territory have not been successful.

Waldheim said he would name a special U.N. representative for Namibian independence and that South Africa had agreed to let the representative visit Namibia, as well as South Africa, and to meet with all sections of Namibian population.

He stressed that freedom for the Namibians must apply to the territory as a whole.

U. S. Ambassador Dies in Liberia

MONROVIA, Liberia — (NBNS) — U.S. Ambassador Samuel Z. Westerfield, Jr., died at his home here after suffering a heart attack.

An economist and former high-ranking U. S. State Department official, the 52-year-old black Ambassador was named to his diplomatic post here by President Nixon in September 1969.

Ambassador Westerfield was a native of Chicago. He was an assistant professor of economics at Lincoln University and then dean of the school of business administration at Atlanta University. In 1961 he entered the Federal service as an associate director of debt analysis in the Treasury Department. He later became deputy director of Treasury's office of international affairs, concentrating on the economics of underdeveloped areas, particularly in Africa and Latin America. He joined the State Department in 1963 and specialized in African affairs.

Sudan Resumes U. S. Relations

KHARTOUM — (NBNS) — The Arab government of Sudan, faced with the need for millions of dollars of foreign assistance in the resettlement of its black African refugees, has resumed the relations with the United States which it broke off during the 1967 Middle East war.

Sudan faces the enormous task of resettling some 800,000 refugees from the bitter civil war which ranged in its southern provinces for more than a decade and a half. The black Africans in the southern part of the country resisted the domination of the Arabs in the north and eventually won a large measure of self government from the Khartoum regime.

The U. S. refugee office in Geneva has been seeking international assistance for the resettlement task involving some 300,000 Sudanese forced to flee to neighboring countries and 500,000 who fled into the countryside to escape the bombing of their villages. The United States is expected to assume a major share of the resettlement burden.

WASHINGTON— (NBNS)— One of the most incredible experiments in this country, known as the Tuskegee study, has come to light suddenly after being in operation for 40 years.

In the study, 600 black men from Tuskegee, Alabama, — 400 of whom had syphilis — were selected for an experiment in 1932 which was to determine the effect of syphilis on the human body. Two hundred of these men were never treated, even after a cure was discovered, which made the treatment a routine and simple process.

Of the original 200 men, only 74 are alive. Seven men in the study died as a direct result of the syphilis, and another 154 men died because of heart failure. Doctors are uncertain if the heart failure was linked to the syphilis or not.

In the wake of the discovery, much has been written about the Tuskegee study, yet the most basic questions remain to be answered. How was it that all the men were black? Why was the study allowed to continue as long as it did, especially after the discovery of penicillin? How was this kept so quiet for so long?

Thus a probe into the past, to the time of the initiation of this study, is beginning. Dr. J.D. Millar, head of the venereal disease branch of the Public Health Service in Atlanta, and in charge of what remains of the study, was able to give a few more answers.

According to Dr. Millar, the study began in 1932 as a joint project between the Public Health Service in the area, Tuskegee Institute, and the Macon County Health Department. That area was picked because it had a high syphilis rate. Dr. Millar could offer no reason as to why all the men were black except to say that Tuskegee was approximately 80 per cent black, which could be another reason why that area was picked for the study.

The study never was a secret, Dr. Millar says. There were fourteen scientific papers published about this study, which were also presented at medical conventions.

These papers claimed that the men in the program were informed that they had syphilis, and were told that they could have treatment any time they wished. However, he also admitted that whether this was actually done was questionable, and that most of the men never realized that they might die in the experiment.

There was also little danger of further infection because all of the men in the study had passed into the acute stage and the disease was no longer infectious. However, this was not true of women, who could have passed the disease on to a child if they had borne a child — the reason no women were used.

Dr. Millar tried to explain how the program could have been initiated in the first place, and suggested that the practices of the physicians at that time were obviously different from today's. He also said that the treatment at that time — arsenic plus mercury, was risky, and one out of every 100 men died soon after the treatment had begun.

He also claimed that the program had served its usefulness by the early 1960's when the higher mortality rate of those with syphilis (but not treated) had been clearly proven.

This is just the beginning of the probe. Dr. Millar's answers helped, but still did not tell the whole story. Nor do they answer where else this sort of experiment has happened.

Dr. Millar's answers may help clear up some of the controversy surrounding this highly questionable experiment, but many of the questions Black America is posing have yet to be answered by top Administration officials.

Next week, in the second of a series of articles, NBNS will take a look at the Tuskegee study and some of the participants involved in the survey. These should provide an additional insight into the "Tuskegee study".

Port Authority New Singing Sensation

Something new has been added to the U.S. Navy growing list of opportunity. It's a soul-rock band complete down to a full schedule of personal appearances around the nation and the world. They're called the Port Authority and they are the only soul-rock band in any of the services. Members of the group are: Jim Allen- Chief Petty Officer musician who is also the leader of the group, Don Letbetter, Emmett Wright, Ed Walters, Mike Vacaro, Phil Vitali, Pierre Portee, Rose Lewis, Sound Technician- John Caporale.

The Port Authority represents a new look in the Navy. We learned for instance that the group is not required to perform in uniform. The Authority has recently completed a two week European and Mediterranean tour. They played mostly dances for Black servicemen.

Make no mistake the 7 piece 8 member Port Authority is a top notch highly professional band. All of the band members sing and play giving them a tremendous range of styling variations. With such an outstanding brass section it's no wonder they like to play "sly" tunes. In addition to a full schedule of concerts and a music workshop, the Port Authority will be at the Black Theology Center, 1016 Forest, for a free concert Friday afternoon at 1:00.

Africans in Mississippi

Hakima Ana's murder conviction arises in the aftermath of the August 18, 1971, assault by police and FBI agents on the government center of the Republic of New Africa. Hakim Ana and his wife, Tamu Ana, were among the seven New Africans in the center at the time of the attack, which they believe was an attempt to massacre the leaders of the black nationalist group.

All seven new Africans, escaped from the center, but one of the Jackson policemen was killed and two others in the assault force were wounded. The seven and four other New Africans at an address several blocks away on Lynch Street were arrested and charged with the shooting death of the policeman. They also were charged with assault and treason against the state of Mississippi.

The youngest of the group, 16-year-old Karim Njabamudi, is currently on trial here with Brittain as his attorney.

Brittain opened a legal offensive against trial of the young New African in Jackson County Circuit Court. In the first of the three defense motions he asked for a bill of particulars explaining why Karim was being prosecuted for slaying of the policeman.

In his second pretrial action Brittain will move to have Karim's case transferred to youth court, and the third motion will be for a change of venue. The attorneys said it will be impossible for the young New African to receive a fair trial in the same jurisdiction which saw 150 potential jurors dismissed for cause when they indicated they thought Hakima Ana should be convicted even before the evidence was presented in his trial.

Commenting on the beating of Hakima, the minister of justice of the Republic of New Africa, Chokwe Lumumba, said:

"This brutal beating reflects on the part of the perpetrators a demented state of mind which is unfamiliar with civilized practice and behavior. Such behavior has long ago reached epidemic proportions among the American oppressors. Therefore, it is imperative that the struggle for land be re-energized with every vile and demented act of repression.

"There is nothing, absolutely nothing, that will stop us from winning the struggle for land," he said.

Black Boycott Successful In Marianna, Arkansas

Marianna, Arkansas—A 13-month boycott which wrecked many white businesses in downtown Marianna has ended. Now, say the leaders of the strike, the answers for the future may lie in the past.

"If you want some type of insight as to where we are," said Rabon Cheeks, "read the 1st Chapter of the Book of Isaiah in the Old Testament."

"Come Now," reads the passage, "Let Us Reason Together."

For Cheeks and the other members of the Concerned Citizens of Lee County this appears to be gospel as the struggle to end discrimination and share in the economic wealth enters a different phase.

What began as a boycott on June 11 and eventually shut down thirty percent of Marianna's downtown businesses, ended just as suddenly with an announcement July 25:

"On the evening of July 24, 1972, the Concerned Citizens of Lee County by resolution determined to lift the selective sanctions against the downtown Marianna stores."

"Of many things that went into the decision to reverse its year-long position, the organization recognized:

1. That there has been some progress for blacks in this community.

2. That there has been a definite change in attitude on the part of whites as related to blacks.

3. That the strength of black people in Lee County should be obvious to all.

4. That it should be unnecessary to crush our city.

5. That black people shall participate in the economic rebuilding of our fair city as owners and operators of businesses.

The end of the boycott was accepted with relief in the white community. Marianna Mayor John Oxner declared that talks are underway between blacks and whites to "enhance Marianna business and promote better economic conditions here."

"Thirty percent of our downtown businesses were forced to close. We just want to get along now," said Mayor Oxner.

Thirty percent of the businesses in Marianna, a small Delta town of 6,500, meant that 11 stores boarded up their doors.

Now, however, the emphasis is on reconciliation. Spearheading the change of attitude will be a "campaign '72" aimed to bring the community together and a drive to encourage black shoppers to resume making purchases at white stores.

strong anti-busing laws coming?

Washington—The corrosive busing issue is about to boil over again in the House of Representatives and no one knows how much of the social progress of the past two decades it finally will eat away.

Clarence Mitchell, chief lobbyist for the NAACP, told the House Education and Labor Committee, on the eve of its action on a new antibusing bill, that the Congress has come close to the brink of inciting racial hatred on the busing issue.

"As a person who was present at a lynching in 1933," he said, "I see no difference between the mood of the mob that lynched that Negro and the mood of Congress on this bill."

Mitchell urged the committee to move slowly and to conduct more hearings on such an emotional issue.

"I don't think matters like this should be approached with a torch and an explosive device. In this case, the torch is being applied to the Constitution of the United States, and the explosive device is the bomb that is about to go off in the country."

Rep. Augustus Hawkins, who represents the Watts area in Los Angeles, told his colleagues on the committee:

"It's a dangerous bill. I've labeled it the antibusing bill, but it's also an anticourt bill. It should be called the Segregation Act of 1972."

The bill, called the "Equal Educational Opportunities Act of 1972," was defended by Rep. Albert H. Quie of Minnesota, the ranking Republican on the committee.

Quie said it would eliminate the "emotionalism" of the busing issue by prohibiting long distance cross-town and cross-district busing of children.

A similar claim, that it would "defuse" the busing issue, was made for the antibusing provisions added to the Higher Education Amendments Act earlier in the year.

The fact that the busing issue is anything but "defused" in the House of Representatives was evident from the bitter struggle in the Education and Labor Committee over new antibusing legislation requested by the Nixon Administration to ban busing of younger school children, limit it for junior and senior high school students, and permit the reopening of busing case all across the country.

It was also evident in the effort of the chairman of the powerful House Rules Committee to take the proposed anti-busing constitutional amendment away from the House Judiciary Committee and send it directly to the House floor for a vote.

The Judiciary Committee has been conducting hearings on the proposed amendment but has not moved to bring it to a floor vote. The Rules Committee has the power to withdraw a measure from a legislative committee but very rarely uses that power.

Rules Committee Chairman William M. Colmer said his committee should force the constitutional amendment to the floor because the Congress may adjourn in October for the 1972 elections.

"If the prayers of the parents and the children of this country for relief from this intolerable situation now existing are to be answered, action must be taken now."

NAACP leader Mitchell said he would prefer House action on a constitutional amendment to approval of the anti-busing bill in the Education and Labor Committee. "You might get it (the amendment) through the House but you will never get it through the Senate," he said.

A constitutional amendment requires a two-thirds vote in each house of Congress and ratification by three-fourths of the states.

The Senate, although less anti-busing than the House, has been beset by recurring efforts to enact further legislation to limit the power of the courts to order busing where necessary to assure equal educational opportunity.

Sen. David Gambrell (D-Ga.) sought to add a proposed busing moratorium to pending legislation to raise the minimum wage. The effort was defeated 53 to 38 when Sen. John Pastore (D-R.I.) told the Senate that, while the busing issue had "merit on both sides" the minimum wage debate was not "the time or the place" to resolve the controversy.

Meanwhile the controversy continues to rage in the courts.

The integration plan ordered by U.S. District Court Judge Stephen Roth for Detroit and 52 suburban school districts was subjected to the nationwide moratorium on court-ordered busing included in the Higher Education Amendments Act. In a supplemental order to attorneys in the case the U.S. 6th Circuit Court of Appeals asked for a discussion of the new law in the briefs being prepared by both sides in an appeal of the Detroit case.

The appeals court also ordered a temporary delay of the purchase of 295 school buses to transport students from Detroit's predominately black schools to schools in the predominately white suburban districts. The court scheduled oral arguments for Aug. 24 on Judge Roth's order for the purchase of the buses.

MRS. VIRGINIA MOORE, of Iowa Children's Society, alerted me to the presence of James E. Tanner at the National Conference of the Blind in process at Hotel Fort Des Moines. Her husband had at one time been Mr. Tanner's counsellor.

TANNER LED THE SINGING of the conference. He is soloist for the First Congregational Church in Waterloo, and a member of Payne Memorial A.M.E. Church. Music is his great love. His first schooling was at Vinton. From there he went to Fisk University, Nashville, Tennessee where he received a B.A. Degree. He has been employed at Rath Packing Company for the past 28 years. He resides with his mother, Mrs. Adelaide Tanner, in their home at 2809 LaFayette Street, Waterloo, Iowa.

TANNER WAS VERY ENTHUSIASTIC about the conference. He described it as a gathering of non-sectarian persons, just a gathering of blind people and their sighted friends for Christian fellowship. There is Bible study for an hour daily. It is to encourage people to be active in church, to have fellowship with one another. One thought is that blind persons are productive members and need opportunities to prove their productivity. There were 1666 registered. Leadership is sought among the membership and if none is to be found there, then someone is brought into lead and to instruct. This year there had been a priest in the group. He was very talented, beautifully informed and a skilled leader.

MEETING JAMES E. TANNER was a pleasure. He directed us to the City Room for our conference. He is informed as to the total organization and is most persuasive. I left him feeling that I should be involved! His involvement is catching! His work with the First Congregational Church is most rewarding! He described the opportunity it affords him to live with the kind of music he enjoys. He is one to keep abreast of all that is new, if he is to be a music leader, then he is going to be in the front lines! He has something to offer!

THE ELMORE ELDERS HAVE JUST CONCLUDED a big vacation! They first visited in Griffin, Georgia, on July 2. Returned home and then went to the funeral of Mrs. Ruby McClanahan, a sister of Mrs. Elder's who resides in Bonna Springs, Kansas. They then went to Kansas City, Kansas where they visited Mr. Edward Morgan and Mr. and Mrs. Allen Holmes. They next went to St. Louis, Missouri, where they visited three sisters of Mrs. Elder: Mrs. Beulah Champion, Mr. and Mrs. Leroy Hamilton, Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Nash and their daughter, Edie. The Elders returned home and then motored to Nashua, Iowa, where they visited The Little Brown Church. From there they went on a fishing trip to Clear Lake, Lake Okoboji and to Spirit Lake and a return trip home. They covered many miles and saw many relatives. It has been a big year for the Elders. A vacation period well spent!

ON MONDAY NIGHT, Friendship City was in the news again. It is good that money will be forthcoming for this worthy enterprise. It makes one tend to believe in the City fathers.

JUST RECEIVED A PHONE CALL FROM MRS. SUSIE PARKER, at one time a resident of Mason City, Iowa, but now of Gary, Indiana. She is in the city for a few days visiting in the home of Miss Della Chapman, 3005 Third Street. It was good to hear from Susie! We lost her sister, Mrs. Josephine Rhodes in April in Gary!

Bowlers To Meet

There will be a meeting at the BFW Club on Crocker St. Monday, August 7, at 7:30 to reorganize the 40 and 1 Bowling League.

RENTS. Before a landlord may raise a residential rent, he must calculate the "base rent," which is the approximate market level rent for the unit prior to the freeze. He may then only increase the base rent by up to 2.5 percent a year to cover increased costs. However, he may add on the tenant's share of increases in real estate taxes, municipal charges and capital improvements, if any. In case of doubt, tenants or landlords should consult their local IRS office.

Charles Jazz concert held at the Summer Fest.

Millers had activities and parties every night for the golfers and their wives. They met many interesting and congenial people from all walks of life.

One of the Jones' pleasures was meeting The Honorable Judge Val Phillips, the first black woman judge in Milwaukee. She was the first black woman to graduate from Milwaukee's Law School. Her husband is an attorney also. She presented the trophies and awards at the dinner dance held the last night of the tournament.

Blacks Profit From Superfly

"Super Fly" fulfills the standard Hollywood legend about the movie that is pulled through against impossible odds and becomes a big success. The film was made in circumstances that would have, and have in fact, defeated many other productions, and upon completion was grabbed up by Warner Bros. for immediate release.

The money for "Super Fly" came from 18 black people who had never invested in a film, but did so this time because they liked what the script had to say. Among the 18 were dentists, financiers, businessmen in the black community but also pimps, madams and drug dealers. Even so, there was not enough money and "Super Fly" had to suspend shooting a couple of times because there was no raw film stock to work with.

The producer, Sig Shore, had made hundreds of television programs but not a feature length movie; "Super Fly" was his first. The director, Gordon Parks, Jr., had never directed a film. The author, Phillip Fenty, never written a screenplay. The female lead, Sheila Frazier, had never given a paid performance either in a play or a film. Most of the technical crew were trainees from a Harlem project which is developing skills among young blacks.

The film was shot at the height of winter in locations which were 50 per cent outdoor. The company had to contend not only with shortage of money, good weather and inexperience on the part of numerous members, but the crowds that always collect at a movie in the making. The worst of these were mobs of kids who got in the way of the camera, tripped over the cables, interfered with acting and directing. When objection was made, they would reply that it was their block, and before long adults would step into the confusion to defend the kids. Power for lights and camera was simply taken from the nearest light-pole. Often the company had no permit from the city authorities to shoot, but shot anyway. Indoor locations were usually provided by friends of friends, which meant long treks to various parts of the city. Filming outdoors was done in lip-synch, which meant that random sounds got onto the track and had to be contended with later. Movie companies who might be able to furnish money for completion insisted on seeing what had already been filmed, but the producer refused to show his footage. The actors had to wait for their money.

Somehow, "Super Fly" was finished and edited. A noted black tunesmith composed a score. The film was shown to Warner Bros. That company took "Super Fly" on the spot, now is interested in backing more movies by the rugged group which pulled together "Super Fly."

Freeman On Guard

Charles E. Freeman

Charles E. Freeman, son of Mr. Eugene Freeman and Mrs. Janet Eden, both of Los Angeles, Calif., has enlisted in the Iowa National Guard as a Military Policeman. Chuck is a 1970 graduate of Des Moines North and has completed two years at Marshalltown Junior College.

He leaves for his basic training on the 14th of August to Fort Jackson, South Carolina for two months and then goes to camp Gordon which is in Georgia for A.I.T. (Advanced Individual Training). Chuck says that he would like to continue his education after basic training at the University of California in Fullerton to be close to Mom and Dad again. But if he doesn't, he thinks he'd like to join the Iowa Highway Patrol considering the training he would receive.

Army Orders Probe in Racial Fights In Germany

Stuttgart, West Germany—the U.S. Army has ordered a full investigation of the racial clashes which injured 24 soldiers at Ludwigsburg's 600-man Krabbenlock Barracks.

The incidents occurred while NAACP executive director Roy Wilkins was touring the Army's VII Corps command to assess its race relations.

Fighting began when rumors spread among a group of white soldiers that "blacks were taking control of the post," according to an Army statement.

A group of 20 white GIs gathered and a 20-minute fight followed at an enlisted men's club. Later that Saturday night fighting erupted in a barracks.

On Sunday a group of black GIs barred entry of white to a dining facility and then moved to the main gate of the post where they intermittently interrupted traffic for about six hours.

The black soldiers dispersed after Lt. Gen. F. K. Mearns, commander of the VII Corps, and his staff met to hear their complaints.

Both black and white soldiers complained of "inadequate administration, discrimination in promotions, poor medical care, inexperienced leadership and lack of discipline."

Rap Brown Seeking Contempt Citations Against Three Officials

New York—The attempt by militant H. Rap Brown to get contempt of court citations against three law enforcement officials has been delayed until later this week.

Brown had sought to get them charged since he said he had been transferred from New York to Louisiana in violation of a federal court agreement.

His attorney, William Kunstler, asked for the citations against New York City Commissioner of Corrections, Benjamin Malcolm, U.S. Marshal Benjamin Butler, and Assistant U.S. Attorney

Edward Boyd.

Federal Judge Edward Neaher signed a cause order requiring the three to appear last Wednesday and state why they should not be held in contempt, but the hearing was delayed until next week.

Federal court records show that Neaher turned down Brown's application last May to block his transfer to Louisiana where Brown was to face sentencing on a gun charge.

However, the judge did enter an agreement with Boyd that Brown would be kept in the New York court's jurisdiction until late the night of the 30th so that Kunstler could seek a state Supreme Court order.

Brown says that New York Supreme Court Justice Harold Birns did sign an order requiring that he be in a New York court the next day, but meanwhile, the defendant had been hurried to New Orleans in a private government plane where he was sentenced to five years in prison and fined $2,000 on the gun charge.

Awaiting trial on charges involving an Oct. 16 hold-up of a tavern in which two policemen were wounded, Brown is currently in New York jail.

French slavery ring

Washington—A recent incident in Paris, France has led to an investigation by international police (INTERPOL) into an operation smuggling poor West Africans into France. The group, which transports Africans from Mali, Senegal, Ivory Coast, Tunisia and other countries is believed to have been making a profit of more than 1200 per man.

What began the probing was the disclosure of 59 Malians sealed inside a truck trying to cross the French border last week. Police are now looking for a 24-year old Sardinian named Aldo Pusceddu who allegedly is responsible for the incident. The 59 West Africans were promptly deported from France and are now in an Italian refugee camp, it was learned here.

Pusceddu was arrested by Italian police of charges of "extortion and slave trading" less than a month ago when 68 other West Indians were found living in a house of his in Rome. However, he was soon released for lack of sufficient evidence. But the 59 Malians identified him from photographs shown to them and told officials that he was known to them as "Monsieur Bruxelles."

the company said. And Richard Nathan, the assistant secretary who is charged with implementing the new welfare guidelines, confirmed that the government had discussed the possible use of credit agencies to prevent fraud. But he said HEW hadn't "made a final decision about this possible approach."

"The question is could they do it for the federal government?" said Sumner G. Whittier, who is in charge of HEW's welfare planning for the aged, blind and disabled.

"The danger and risk of that is confidentiality of records, and if they had information on welfare cases would it get used in their system?" He noted that credit agencies "are set up to do investigations."

This proposal is the latest in a series of "get tough" policies initiated by HEW on July 1. Among the other proposals was a regulation requiring that 1.5 million recipients register for work and take jobs assigned to them or face the prospect of being removed from both federal and state assistance rolls.

The regulations are, in the view of a number of civil rights groups, the most repressive series of rules to come out of Congress and HEW in quite some time.

It requires, as an example, that all "able-bodied" welfare recipients, most of whom are women with dependent children, sign a declaration to seek and accept what program administrators decide is a job to match his or her skills.

If the recipient refuses to sign the declaration or declines the job he is offered, he stands to be taken off the assistance roll. In a family of four, this would mean a cut of as much as 25 per cent of the total welfare assistance a family of four receives.

The "workfare" proposal has already been tried in New York City, but has been dubbed a dismal failure by officials there.

health facility threatened

Mound Bayou, Miss.—Some blacks will die, others will get seriously ill because of the political squabbling the governor's office is involved in which threatens the existence of a federally-sponsored health program for the poor in the all-black Delta town of only 2,200 persons.

Hundreds of patients are treated daily at the hospital and an out-patient clinic here, but Gov. William Waller, vetoed a $5.5 million grant to the center last month claiming the project had failed to meet some state standards.

have met with the Retail Credit Company, a national private credit firm, in Albany, N.Y. and Atlanta, recently to discuss ways they and other credit agencies can cooperate in improving the investigations of welfare fathers.

Apparently, at the meeting held at the request of HEW, the firm pointed out it could provide training for federal welfare investigators and information about an individual's finances, which federal investigators have been unable to get, for the most part. "Discussions to date have been exploratory," Millenaries of darkness had blinded humanity. Oppressive domination. Racism exploitation With contempt stifled Men that were enslaved.

Revolution! With revolution Came the light. Came the hope. Wake up, men. Wake up, women. Wake up creators of wealth. Let us all stand up And all together March on, arms in hand To destroy the horizons Of helplessness that are Walls of imperialism. Let us multiply the victories on the way of history That demands of us To continue our struggle Against what remains of colonialism.

African compatriots, Let us waste no more time To wait any longer for Those who stifle us To help us, Those who wound us To heal us, Those who kill us To shed tears for us. Let us stand up. Let us act now. Let us cut off the criminal hand Of the hideous Apartheid. The African people long enslaved Must be liberated. So must our land frustrated And ruthlessly exploited. Let us sweep clean our borders And foil the foreign invaders. To form a front of anti-imperialist unity. In the true Africanity.

And you suffering Palestinians, Go on, go on. Respond to the call of revolution To build up A democratic and progressive Palestine. And to Annihilate Zionism. Agent of imperialism. For the triumph of the Cause of Palestine.

And you, Afro-Americans, You are more American. Than those slave-merchants. Those ravenous vultures. Killers of peoples. Plunderers of treasures. Arise, arise. American working people. Builders of the New World. And carry on the struggle Against racial discrimination. Enslavement and oppression.

Revolution! Revolution! Let us be masters of our existence In the image of China. Or of Indo-China. Let us dry our tears And take up arms To live in combat Or to die in the struggle. Revolutionaries. Let us overpower imperialists and reactionaries. Do away with military bases. And drive out foreign mercenaries. Let us eliminate colonial domination And accelerate the people's Liberation.

Fighting brothers. Victories proved ineffective Before the sabotage of the oligarchs. And the barbarity of the aristocrats. To oppose their menace. Let us resort to violence. So firm is our will. That we are invincible. Let us march on. March on. Singing from morning till sundown In fervor and in chorus. This is the awakening. The people's awakening.

34 Doctors for 5 Million People

SALS BURY, Rhodesia — (NBNS) — Rhodesia's five million blacks have only 34 black physicians to serve them, according to the Medical Council of Rhodesia. The country is ruled by a tiny white minority which has resisted international pressures to enfranchise its black majority.

With Allen Ashby

This was to be the week that I was to bring up some of the Iowa Oaks baseball team for my weekly bit, but I got off to the state tennis meet in Cedar Rapids, and this week we have our own Hilltop Open. So it looks as if baseball will have to wait at least a week. I was glad to see Mark Morrow get plenty of ink, and wish he could have taken the boys 18 singles title. But I have thought about a lot of players of both races who had potentialities, and wondered what happened to them. Paul Williams was probably the first black player to really have a chance at getting into the best tennis circles, but Paul wanted to study to be a doctor, and he let nothing stand in his way to achieve his goal. Then there was another guy Byron Wiley. Byron was a protégé of Bill Ashby. Bill nursed him and hovered over him like a mother hen over a chick. Byron went on to play at Dowling High, and later became captain of the Creighton University team. Don't know what he is doing now, but maybe somebody will let me know. And do you know, Chet and I were never sure that Byron really had it in him to be a good tennis player because we didn't think he was enough of a killer. But Bill kept after him and finally instilled enough of that spirit in the fellow, though sometimes Bill would shake his head and mutter "Whatin' hell am I gonna do with the guy?" But his perseverance paid off, and I guess nobody was any prouder of the fellow than Bill.

But the first black tennis player to make one of the high school teams here was Stanley Proctor. Stan didn't win many matches, but he held down the number three spot on the North High team. Oh, I played at East, but only because they didn't have enough boys to make up a team, so that would hardly count. I don't think there was anybody in town that I could beat.

And I think Stanley's daughter, Cleota, was the first black girl to play on a high school team, and that North High team was pretty good. I believe they won nearly all of their matches. I think one of the girls on that team is still playing in our Hilltop meet. She and her partner haven't missed a single meet since the thing started. At that time their names were Bobbie Capps and Betty Schimmelpfening. I think that is how you spell it. And with the passing of time her name got only slightly easier. Now it is Betty Gerberech, while Capps has changed to Lavine. And they ain't kids any more, having won the women's thirty-five years doubles last month at Ames, so you know they weren't in high school yesterday.

Then along came Ted Martin's daughter, Colleen. She was a better than average player, and might have gone quite a way if she had kept playing. And while we are talking about girl players, one of the Morrow girls, Eloise, had just about the finest potential of any of the girls of her time. There were a few girls who liked to play the game, and Chet, Bill and I were kept busy trying to keep them playing. Eloise had all the shots, and with a little more competition might have been heard from.

There were some other players who could have done all right if they had stuck to the game. Esther Myers brought a bunch of kids to the state meet in Cedar Rapids, and they all made good showings, although they didn't win any titles. But after they came back to Des Moines, most of them went back to other games, softball, basketball and such. A couple of them stayed around awhile. Mike Knox and his brother, but they didn't get the necessary competition to improve their game, and only got so good. Jerry Simmons was another fine prospect, but again it was the lack of good competition, plus maybe a waning interest that kept him from developing his potential. We have had a few, and if they had the chances the kids have today, some of the people I mentioned might have made their mark in the game. See you at the Hilltop this weekend.

NOTES ON THE BLACK EXPERIENCE

The Black Experience is having the price of collard greens, pig feet, and chitterlings go sky-high simply because you decided to call them "soul food," thereby creating a gourmet market.

The Black Experience is listening to the Osmond Brothers and feeling that they robbed the Jackson Five.

The Black Experience is being called a thief and a con man when your white counterpart is referred to as an embezzler. It is being called militant when your counterpart is called liberal. It is being called a numbers racketeer when the white counterpart is called a Wall Street broker.

The Black Experience is being called a welfare recipient while the white counterpart is being called a Lockheed executive.

Credit bureaus may be used to "track down" deserting fathers

Washington—The Department of Health, Education and Welfare has quietly suggested to states that they use local credit bureaus to help find welfare cheaters, especially runaway fathers.

"The feasibility of the utilization of credit bureaus as a source of information regarding savings or income should be explored," HEW said in the guidelines which they issued last week in its latest effort to catch deserting fathers who leave their children and families behind.
