CARTER G. WOODSON

Black History Week

Founder

Carter G. Woodson was born in rural West Virginia in 1875, one of nine children of a very poor family. His parents had been slaves before the civil war. Carter had to work on the family farm, and was unable to attend school. He was 21 years old before he graduated from high school. Woodson studied at several colleges and earned a doctor's degree from Harvard University in 1912. In 1915 he and four other black men established the Association for the Study of Negro Life and History, the organization which annually sponsors Black History Week. Black History Week, observed this year Feb. 11-17, was first observed in 1926. It was launched to emphasize the history and contributions of Black Americans, so often ignored in American History textbooks.

East High News

By Debbi Woods

Visiting East High last week was Debbie Dodd, a student from Our Lady of Peace in St. Paul, Minn. while in Des Moines Debbie stayed with the Leroy Kaiser family.

Between first and second semesters there is an interim period at Debbie's school. During this time students chose a class to take or one subject to explore.

"I wanted to do something different so I came to East or a visit, it seemed like everyone was doing the same thing," Debbie said.

After seeing a variety of classes and meeting lots of people she had a positive outlook of East. "The student body as a whole was pretty nice, I meet some interesting people. Most of the people at East speak to you, that's one thing people don't do at home," she said.

Black History Bazaar Planned

The evening will also feature a show entitled "Celebrate Your Blackness," starring local musicians, poets and dancers in entertainment designed to expand Black awareness.

As a special feature for children, "Jomo's Magic History Machine," a puppet theatre presentation will be performed.

In discussing the event Johnson said the bazaar designed as "an evening of education, entertainment and fellowship for Blacks who are concerned with their heritage, their present and their future."

U.S. Upholds Rhodesian Embargo

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. — (NBNS) — The United States says it believes the sanctions imposed by the United Nations against Rhodesia "should be tightened and maintained" although it is the biggest violator of some of those same sanctions.

The United States has been importing chrome and nickel from Rhodesia for some time now, although the embargo has been in force since 1966. The U.N. Security Council has attempted to force the white minority regime in Rhodesia to give a greater amount of power to the nation's black majority citizens.

Christopher Phillips, speaking for the U.S., criticized Rhodesia for closing its 400-mile border with neighboring Zambia last month.

A spokesman for the President indicated that the U.S. would like to see more significant violations of the embargo stopped, and he said the President continued to favor the prohibition imposed by the Council. A 1971 Congressional act permits the U.S. to import Rhodesian chrome and nickel despite the sanctions.

Minority Businessmen Plan Seminar

By Alvin Whitney

The Minority Businessmen's Association of Des Moines and Drake University have announced a three-hour seminar on credit to be held Feb. 21, at the Center for the Study of Black Theology.

The seminar will be conducted by Dr. James Chastain, alumni professor of insurance at Drake's College of Business Administration. Officials of the two groups said the sessions will run from 7-10 p.m., and is open to all city residents without charge.

Chastain, who holds degrees from the University of Chicago and the University of Illinois, will present an intensive review of personal credit, including a discussion of criteria for judging credit ratings information types and sources, completing credit applications and the differences in credit requirements among lending institutions.

The Minority Businessmen's Association is also planning to begin a program of community awareness in economic areas, and a program of cooperative effort to build black businesses.

MBA president Carl Williams said the purpose of the organization is to "make the community aware of the tremendous need for increased participation in the economic life Des Moines."

Williams added that the group is especially concerned with education on business principles at the community level and the upgrading of the ability of individuals to manage their affairs in a businesslike manner.

FAMILY, FRIENDS TALK ABOUT ARCHIE SIMMONS

"My Brother Was Not Afraid"

By Sheryl Fitzgerald

DES MOINES—"A short time ago," a friend of Archie Simmons said, "We talked about how an ex-convict is paroled or released into the same kind of world he left to go to jail. Before or after, conditions are the same. We agreed that it's society that needs rehabilitation not the ex-cons."

Now Archie Simmons is dead at 21, branded a suicide in the aftermath of a running gun battle with police and the robbery of a local loan company.

In an interview, Des Moines Police Chief Wendell Nichols recounted the events that led to Simmons' death. According to Nichols a uniformed officer responding to the alarm at the Peoples Savings and Loan Co., confronted the suspects as they were leaving the robbery site.

Nichols said the suspects got into their automobile and drove off as officer Gail E. Dunn and detective Ronald Babb fired at the vehicle.

He said Dunn and Babb, with other officers pursued the suspects until they abandoned the vehicle near the Collins Co. Inc., warehouse on S.E. Seventh St.

Although the medical examiner's report and ballistics reports from the state crime laboratories have not yet been completed, Chief Nichols maintained that it has been possible to determine that Simmons was not shot with a bullet issued by the Police Department.

He said official issue ammunition for .30 caliber weapons can be recognized easily by its distinctive coppery coloring, adding that the bullet which inflicted Simmons' mortal wound was of the regular commercial type and similar to that found in the possession of another of the suspects.

Nichols also denied having told a local newspaper that "Simmons was not about to give up and be taken alive."

"I could not possibly have said that," Nichols maintained. "I did not know the man, and I did not know what was in his mind, but the evidence seems to support the conclusion that he took his life."

Was this a man who would be inclined to take his own life? The opinions of those who knew him are divided.

Lou Proctor, a former instructor at the Boys Training School at Eldora, worked with Simmons in a football program during the summer and fall of 1966.

Proctor described the younger Simmons as high-tempered but outgoing, not a person to take abuse. "He was his own man," Proctor said, "he didn't take anything unless he had to. He could function under pressure."

Proctor says he lost contact with Simmons after leaving Eldora, but remembers him from casual encounters as "changed."

"He was very mild mannered and studious," Proctor said. "He did a lot of reading on political and philosophical subjects. He seemed to be doing more in depth thinking."

When asked if he thought Simmons might commit suicide Proctor said, "I don't really know. As I said, he changed, or maybe the word is matured."

Another acquaintance, someone who spent a year with Simmons in the Men's Reformatory at Anamosa, described him as "anti-authority."

"I think," he said, "Archie was like a lot of black men the police have tried to portray as deranged. You know, the bombs, robbery, the shootout."

"In prison he was harrassed like a lot of brothers the authorities considered potentially dangerous. He was labeled hostile and leaned on. He was transferred to the State Penitentiary at Fort Madison for disciplinary reasons."

Would he kill himself? "No, I don't think so, Archie was too strong."

Simmons' older sister, Theresa, 24, described her brother as being, "like a rock."

"If I were gone, and Archie was here," she said "Archie would be the one my mother would lean on."

"He wanted to have influence in the community. He wanted to help. He loved his people. He wanted economic power, to be able to tell the system that if it would not help black people, they would do it for themselves," Theresa said.

"He was not afraid of the police, he was not afraid of the system," she continued. "He knew the system. he knew the government, he had studied them and he knew what they were doing. He was dealing within the system."

Theresa charged that Simmons was hated by the police and by the establishment in Des Moines because of his outspoken attitude toward the treatment of Black people.

"They tried to break his spirit," she said. Even at the time of his conviction in 1970 on charges of bombing the Des Moines police station, she said, the power structure in Des Moines seemed to be against him.

"He knew what was going to happen," she said "He knew."

"I remember the day he was found guilty. My mother started to cry in the courtroom, Archie told her not to let them see her crying. He was always like that. He might be ready to blow up inside but he would not let them make him lose control."

Theresa said that Simmons' harrassment continued even while he was imprisoned. She claimed that he was not permitted to receive letters, that his letters were not promptly mailed, and that prison authorities consistently tried to make her brother commit a violent act.

"He retreated into himself," Theresa said, "he would stay in his cell listening to the radio, writing things that he hid and reading, always reading."

Simmons was paroled in 1972 and worked at several jobs before becoming a community worker for the Des Moines Veneral Disease Treatment Center.

"He was going to Georgia to go to school. He always wanted to be a doctor, he wanted to work in medicine to help the people."

"About three months ago, in his last week of work before leaving for school they pulled the rug out from under him," Theresa said, "they fired him."

At the time of his death Simmons was employed at Massey-Ferguson as a welder. His sister says she thinks he was about to be terminated in that job too.

"I will never believe my brother killed himself," Theresa said. "He was not afraid, he knew what they were doing to him and he was not afraid. The police killed my brother, he did not commit suicide."

Who is right: Is the police evidence correct or the evaluations of people who knew him? What kind of man was Archie Simmons? Was he just a robber and a criminal or a man who loved his people? What was in his heart and his mind on the last day of his life? No one will ever know. Archie Simmons is dead. He cannot speak for himself.

HOW MUCH POWER

TO THE PEOPLE?

The new minority and disadvantaged citizens coalition and its goals leads on to ask, "How much power will this city government concede to the people? M.A.D.C.C. in its past press conference made it clear that it's members who represent the Mexican-Americans, the native American Indians, Black Americans and disadvantaged whites of Des Moines intend to fight city hall for the right to determine how federal funds should be spent.

Much of the furor is over the council's recent decisions to bail out the faltering Iowa Regional Transit System or the bus company, with Community Development money. Mayor Olsen says that the money can be legally used for mass transit the M.A.D.C.C. doesn't believe that it can. The council also believes that it is doing a favor for the disadvantaged in trying to maintain mass transit. M.A.D.C.C. doesn't disagree with that. They simply believe that Community Development Funds & Programs should not be sacrificed to subsidize the stockholders or the transit authority.

M.A.D.C.C. further contends that citizens views were not adequately represented in the council's decision. Al Parish legal counsel for the coalition stated, "there appears to be grounds for citizen's objections to the council's action."

I see a real battle shaping up. M.A.D.C.C. feels it has a case so much so that it is preparing to challenge the council's decision. "we feel we are right but instead of fighting with bricks and bottles and sticks we are utilizing administrative procedure and if necessary court action," said coalition member Al Garrison. Member Tony Zamorro reinforced Garrison's statement by adding, "the Mexican American Community is very upset by the treatment they have received from the (City) Council." The mayor feels that the council is right so much so that he laughed at the mention of some of the names of the coalition members.

Kitty Hawk Violence Blamed On Race Bias

SAN DIEGO, Calif. (NBNS) The executive officer of the aircraft carrier Kitty Hawk has said that racial violence aboard the carrier last October was the result of unequal enforcement of orders to break up groups of sailors.

Cmdr. Ben Cloud, said that instead of bilaterally carrying out the orders, the Marines allowed the assembly of whites, but dispersed groups of blacks.

In testimony on a pretrial defense motion charging the Navy with selectively prosecuting blacks, Cloud, who is half black and half American Indian, said fighting began in the ship's hangar deck after Marines were ordered to break up groups of three or more sailors to avoid damage to planes.

Cloud also testified he had been threatened by both blacks and whites, but was not actually attacked. He said he feared for his safety when he entered a meeting of more than 100 blacks who were armed with what he called "crude weapons."

Cloud's testimony was given in the case of Airman Apprentice Ronald Glover, 21 of Columbia, S.C. Glover is charged with five counts of assault and one of rioting. Seventeen other crewmen, including one white, are awaiting trial.

At Oberlin

WASHINGTON (NBNS) Officials of Oberlin College and the Congressional Black Caucus recently announced that 18 of 33 minority students who entered Oberlin in the past two years were recruited through the efforts of the Caucus.

In his review of the joint program to bring increased minority admissions to the college Rep. Louis Stokes, D-Ohio, said, "Oberlin has done a fine job in administering The Project and perhaps as important, we feel the success of this pilot project will induce other fine colleges and universities to enlarge their recruiting efforts as Oberlin has done."

Dr. Robert Fuller, president of Oberlin, said the quality of the students attracted through the program was high, and praised the Caucus for its cooperation.

Officials added that Oberlin has received 72 minority applications for the upcoming academic year. The school's total minority enrollment is 12.4 per cent.

Letters to the editor

It has long been an established fact that Blacks and other minorities in Des Moines receive unfair treatment in matters pertaining to employment. Despite all the new banners and flag waving by employers proclaiming "We are an Equal Opportunity Employer," most Blacks give more credence to the old adage of "Last hired and the first fired."

When it comes to seeking employment with any of this city's great white oriented institutions, most Blacks feel they aren't wanted anyway, and that the various steps they must submit to application, references, credit checks, police checks, work history, et. al. when seeking a job at these places, are just designed to screen them out of a job rather than help get them admitted into the system.

During the frustrating and ego deflating search for employment, many minorities decide to seek the services of the State Employment Service. As a state agency, supported with tax dollars, one should find no traces of discrimination here, but a closer look reveals just the opposite. Most white interviewers just reflect the same patterns of racism as their counterparts in private industry. Often they tell Blacks there is nothing available, or simply,

"You're not qualified," and then proceed to refer them to the most menial and low paying of jobs.

Recently two Black employees of this agency were fired for allegedly failing to report to school at the Des Moines Community College where they were receiving training supposedly related to their work at the Employment Service. No real attempt was made to determine why they weren't going, just the fact that they weren't was considered justification for dismissing them. Maybe they felt that instead of sitting in a classroom learning work theory, they preferred to work all day at the office and gain job experience in dealing with people, which is their bread and butter, and a much more worthwhile function. The question I present is this, "When you have such a small percentage of Blacks in the agency to begin with, and then proceed to fire two of them on such trivial grounds, how can you expect the average Black man coming into this agency off the street to believe he will be treated any differently by this organization when he has the same Black hue to his skin as the two employees who were fired?"

I MET HURL LEWIS SMITH while interviewing his brother and sister-in-law PO3 William Smith and Seaman Gloria Smith. Chatting with the young couple was so interesting. I asked if I might not interview young Hurl. The mother was present and of great assistance to me in getting information. She relayed my request to Hurl, who responded that I could get his complete story and pictures at the Younkers Rehabilitation Center.

I TALKED TO DR. WILLIAM DE GRAVELLE WHOSE opening remark was that Hurl should be interviewed. Dr. De Gravelle said I should get to know Hurl and that he possessed a beautiful personality, met people easily and related so very well. What he said was so highly complimentary that Dr. DeGravelle apologized adding, "It is all true. Hurl is exceptional. I must say these things because they are true." He had insisted that Hurl was cooperative in every way. They had known him for years. He always complied with their instructions, with their programs, and was wholehearted in all his undertakings. was always gracious with the staff and with other patients. He had attended school there and was an exceptional student. Hurl could be counted on in their experiments and could be called on to take a meaningful part in programs, to demonstrate, or speak to the public. He has demonstrated a brace being developed, participated for publicity pieces and appeared in pamphlets.

ON THE FOLLOWING MONDAY I telephoned the Smith residence and asked for an appointment with Hurl. He gave me one for Tuesday. I needed it for Monday and asked if I might see him that day. His reply was 2:00 or 2:30 that same day.

MRS. FRED REECE, HIS MOTHER, came out to meet me. Hurl was seated in the living room as I entered. He is a quadriplegic. He was injured at 15 in a racing diving accident at Goode Park. Since Hurl was an all round athlete, his injury did not require as many of the detailed treatments as usual.

THE ACCIDENT: Looking back, Hurl judges that his arms buckled as he struck the water. He didn't have them stiff as he should have. This caused his neck to snap in two places. The shallowness of the section of the pool where he dived had its bearing on the accident.

HURL WAS GOING INTO THE ninth grade and that fall attended Washington Irving Junior High School via intercom. His tenth year was spent at Younkers Rehabilitation Center school. He spent part of the 11th grade at Younkers Rehab and partly at Des Moines Technical High School, and to his great satisfaction he spent his 12th year, an uninterrupted year, at Des Moines Technical High School. Having seen an uncle in his cap and gown, he had carried this vision as a goal. He had a feeling of great accomplishment when he wore his cap and gown and received his diploma.

IT IS SIGNIFICANT that Hurl regrets having attended Washington Irving Junior High School instead of remaining at Amos Hiatt. He states that the Washington Irving Junior High instruction was inferior to what he was taught at Amos Junior High. His instruction in decimals and in higher math education was not completed. He was later able to make up this shortcoming at Younkers Rehab Center. When he completed other assignments, he would ask regarding decimals, fractions and algebra, and the teacher taught him these subjects.

THIS SHOW OF INITIATIVE IS EVIDENT IN THE WHOLE OF HURL'S LIFE. It is the key to his success. He likes to do things. He makes notes in class and transcribes them and has developed his own shorthand.

HURL'S GOAL IS TO BECOME A CORPORATE LAWYER. He is enrolled in Grandview College. He is not in school this semester due to the problem of arranging a ride. He has attended Grandview four semesters. Indicative of his independence, Hurl vacationed in California this past summer, traveling by jet. The rest of his travels were with friends by car. He didn't miss a thing. He spent time in San Jose, Redwood City, San Francisco, Santa Cruz and other bay area cities.

HE TAPES MUSIC, takes pictures with a polaroid and a 35 mm camera; plays chess, checkers and cards, writes, and loves to type. Hurl doesn't let too many things stop him. He feels that persons wanting to know why someone is in a wheel chair, should ask, and does not mind questions in the least. For example, he would rather someone ask than to look at him and decide that he has some disease. On his part, if he needs someone to do something, he does not mind asking.

HURL RACES SLOT CARS. He and his brother, Bill, designed one which was later copied by a dealer and put into production.

HURL IS HELPING in the development of a brace. He evaluates the brace, prepares a paper complete with criticisms, suggestions or recommendations.

GUINEA DENIES REPORT

Dakar, Senegal — (NBNS)
Radio Conakry (Guinea) has denied a report that Vitor Monteiro had been elected to succeed assassinated liberation army leader Amilcar Cabral.

The Portuguese news agency had cited Radio Conakry as the source of its information that Monteiro would take over leadership of PAIGC. Radio Conakry described the Portuguese report as a "tall story."

ZAMBIANS KILLED IN MINE EXPLOSION

Lusaka — (NBNS) — Three Zambians were killed and eight persons injured last week in a landmine explosion at the western end of Zambia's 400-mile border with Rhodesia. The Rhodesian government closed the frontier Jan. 9 charging that guerillas were launching raids against Rhodesia from bases in Zambia.

Also in Zambia, five Zambians have been jailed on charges of plotting to overthrow the government. The men were charged with being in communication with South African authorities for training in military operations in Namibia (South West Africa).

GUERILLAS ATTACK INSIDE RHODESIA

Salisbury — (NBNS) — Guerillas caused an explosion that wrecked a white couple's farm house in a tobacco-growing district near the border of Mozambique. A woman was killed and her husband was wounded in the attack, which was the latest in the month-old guerilla offensive against the white-minority ruled government.

PRIESTS FINED

The priests were convicted of charging Portuguese troops with atrocities against Africans, and with inciting the public in advocating the independence of Mozambique.

BLACKS STRIKE IN SOUTH AFRICA

Johannesburg — (NBNS) — A strike of more than 3,000 workers at a textile mill in Durban is the latest of a recent series of strikes by African workers. The strikes in Durban are one indication that blacks, who represent 80 per cent of the labor force in the country, recognize that they should be better paid and on par with white workers.

WASHINGTON — (NBNS) — A coalition of black groups and organizations and individuals is sponsoring an International Solidarity Day for African prisoners of war March 30-31. Organization spokesmen said the purpose is to focus worldwide attention on the existence and plight of black political prisoners in this country as well as in southern Africa, Guinea-Bissau and other parts of the world.

At a press conference here, Chokwe Lumumba, an official of the Republic of New Africa (RNA) and national chairman of the solidarity committee, said demonstrations will be held in Jackson, Mississippi.

"Mississippi was chosen as the site because of its symbolic meaning as far as the brutal oppression of black people is concerned," said Lumumba.

Lumumba spoke of the August, 1971, pre-dawn police attack on RNA headquarters in Jackson in which RNA members were wounded by police bullets.

Of the five RNA members arrested after the incident which resulted in the death of a white policeman, Lumumba said that four are in prison and Brother Imari Obadele (president of RNA) is in jail.

"All of these brothers are charged with the death of one policeman by one bullet," emphasized the young RNA officer.

Participating in the press conference with Lumumba were Irving Joyner, director of community organizations at the Commission for Racial Justice, and the Rev. Ben Chavis, who is free on a $50,000 bond on charges stemming from his political activities in Wilmington.

In response to questions Lumumba said he was not anticipating any kind of confrontation from Mississippi authorities during the Solidarity Day demonstrations.

"We have been in touch with Mississippi authorities and we expect to be treated with civility. This will be with reluctance, of course, not what the racist Mississippi government would like to do."

"But they know that the eyes of the world will be on them, and we fully expect that they will be cooperative," Lumumba said.

Joyner said one of the issues to be discussed at workshops during the Solidarity weekend will be whether or not all black people in prison are to be considered political prisoners.

"We know that there is some confusion and misunderstanding about the term as it is used by radical white groups," said Joyner.

"Some of them (radical white groups) say that white Ford Motor workers are political prisoners because they get bored with their jobs, when our brothers and sisters cannot even get jobs, so it's clear we are not talking about the same thing when we say 'political prisoners,'" Joyner emphasized.

Thirty-one state committees have been formed and will be responsible for coordinating local rallies, demonstrations, seminars, and other activities to inform local black communities about the importance and significance of Solidarity Day.

The Solidarity Day Support committee includes: U.S. Representatives Charles Diggs, Ron Dellums, and John Conyers; Imamu Baraka, Mayor Richard Hatcher, Owusu Sadaukai, Rev. Ben Chavis, the Rev. Charles Koen, Dick Gregory, Ossie Davis, and State Reps. Julian Bond of Georgia and Lloyd Barbee of Wisconsin.

Also Dorothy Taylor and Sam Wright, both state representatives and attorneys Howard Moore, Edward Ball and Haywood Burns.

National organizations endorsing the effort include the African Liberation Support Committee; Congress of African Peoples; Congress of Racial Equality; National Conference of Black Lawyers; Black Panther Party; Youth Organization for Black Unity and Cairo United Black Front.

The only other living Black Bishop, the Most Rev. Harold R. Perry, auxiliary bishop of the Archdiocese of New Orleans, was one of the co-consecrators at the ordination.

The ceremony centered on Howze's official motto, "Unity of God's People," and featured music directed by the Rev. Clarence Rivers, a Black priest, composer and liturgist, who composed most of the music for the ordination.

Mayor Charles Evers, of Fayette, Miss., called the event "a great day for us in Mississippi, but long overdue in the country." Evers said he hoped Howze's ordination would unite not only Catholics, but persons of all denominations.

Black Bishop Ordained

Jackson, Miss. (NBNS) — The Most Rev. Joseph Lawson Howze, 49, was ordained last Sunday as the Auxiliary Bishop of Mississippi's 90,000 Roman Catholics in a ceremony that blended traditional religious themes with a touch of soul.

Bishop Howze, who was born in Daphne, Ala., served as a parish priest in North Carolina for 12 years. He is the third Black bishop ever consecrated by the Roman Catholic Church in the United States.

WASHINGTON, D. C. — The president of the National Association of Broadcasters, said recently broadcasting is making rapid strides in eliminating discrimination and is "on its way to becoming an integrated industry second only in the nation to professional sports."

Urging the National Newspaper Publishers Association, an organization of black newspaper and magazine publishers, to support a license renewal bill for broadcasters, Vincent T. Wasilewski emphasized that "No other group has advanced the cause of civil rights more than broadcasting."

"By showing Selma and Bull Connor and the dogs, by showing conditions under which blacks live," he said, "broadcasting brought the problems out of the ghetto and into the living room. It made them not remote problems, not somebody else's problems, but everybody's problems."

Wasilewski cited statistics to show that black ownership of broadcasting stations has doubled in the past two years; that minority employment in television rose 17 per cent during 1972; that nearly two out of every three TV stations have minority employees in top-level management and professional jobs.

Wasilewski told publishers that meaningful license renewal legislation will enable broadcasters to maintain a viable industry and "continue to stand by your side as a part of the free press." What's more, he said, it "will not hurt the cause of equality."

He pointed out that, under the proposed legislation, a station would "run on its record" to qualify for license renewal.

"If it has been a well-operated station, responsive to the needs of all the community, including and especially the black community, then it has a real worry on its hands — and I think it should."

He said that in the proposed bill blacks and other minority groups will still have the right to petition to deny a station's license and the right to file a competing application against a station.

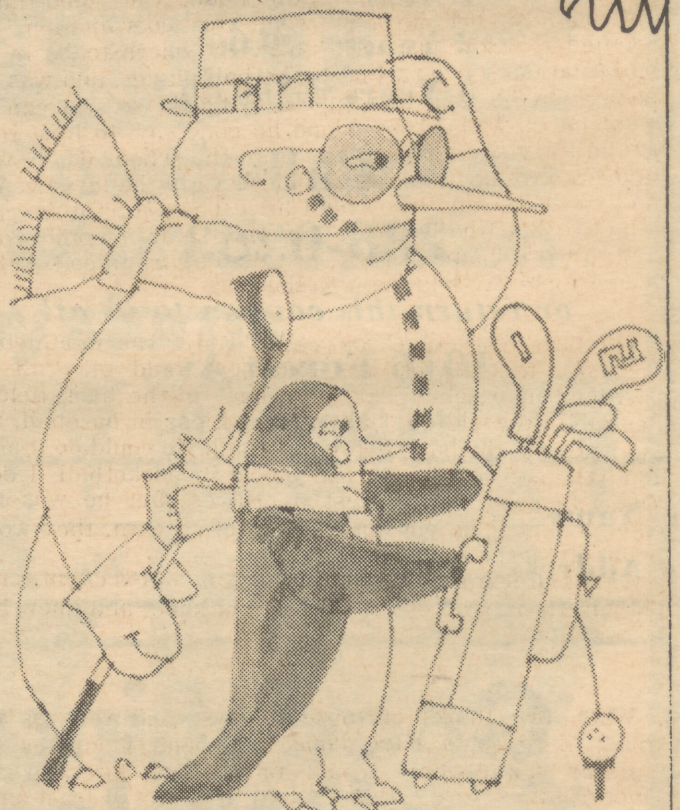

Wasilewski said NAB "would like to see much more black ownership" of stations and recalled that it recently sponsored a seminar on minority investment in broadcasting.

"We had a turnaway crowd that exceeded our fondest hopes," he said.

"It was a clear indication that blacks do want to get into broadcasting, do want to become a part of it and do want to own it."

A look at

retrospect

With Allen Ashby

I was walking down Grand Ave. the other day when a guy stopped his car, leaned out the window and said, "Mose Hayes told me to tell you hello. He is on the west coast, been there ever since World War II."

Then I got to thinking about the man. He didn't finish high school here, although he must have gotten his education in the service. But he should have gone to school here. If he had, he would have been one of the athletes whose name would be mentioned with some of the other greats of the early thirties and late twenties.

Mose was probably the best all around athlete we ever had in Des Moines. If I had to choose two of the best, he would rank as one of them. He could play any position on a baseball team, not only play the position, but star at whatever position he played. He was the same way in football. Hayes could play any position in the backfield, kick, pass, run, block and tackle. You name it, he could do it and do it well.

Of course, not going to school, Mose played with the semi-pro clubs in the days when black players played with black clubs only. He was good enough to get several offers to go with traveling clubs. Why he never went, I don't know, or if he did, I don't recall it.

I think he must have gotten some more schooling than he had, because after the war, he did a coaching stint at a school in Mississippi: Maybe it was Piney Woods, or some other, such school. He was there for at least a year, and then he must have gone to the West coast. I recall that he came back here on a visit, and we had a chance to say hello.

The guy was good natured. He needed to be because in those days athletes ribbed each other unmercifully. If you had a bad day, you never got a chance to forget it until you redeemed yourself.

He wasn't a really big fellow, about 5'10", and maybe 170 pounds, but he had wonderful coordination, and seemed to know just what to do or where to be in any situation. Mose was a fine basketball player, and was fast enough to be able to compete in track, so you can see what he might have been had he gone say, to East High, for he lived about two blocks from the school. There were quite a few good athletes around here in the late twenties and early thirties who could have been star high school athletes, but who would rather play semi-pro ball or else had to work. Some of them just didn't care to go to school because nobody sold them on the idea.

The late George Jackson, called Tody, was an athlete of the type that Hayes was. Jackson could play all the positions in baseball, and anywhere in the back field in football. He could do it all the positions in baseball, and anywhere in the back field in football. He could do it all in football, and he was a good guard in basketball. I don't think Jackson was as fast as Hayes, but he was fast enough that if he got out in front of a team, they would probably never catch him.

Although it was little known, he was an excellent tennis player. He had all of the moves and shots and knew how to use them.

When one thinks of those fellows, and realizes how much they could have done in school, it makes him wonder what they would have done later in life. Opportunities were rather limited then, but at least one of them might have broken through to go someplace. Of course you realize that all of this was before the days of organized sports among teen agers and out-of-school people that we have now.

Some of the fellows chose semi-pro ball because they could make a few bucks each game, the only way to make any money.

Some of them just didn't care about school, but they did like sports, so they joined the teams, as a means of doing what they liked. It seemed that athletes whether they were in school or not, got quite a bit of recognition. It was a chance to be in the sun, and I guess that was what most of them wanted. Maybe that is also what some of the guys want today, plus the bucks to be made.

IT MAKES YOU wonder these days what this country is coming to. I bet you're trying to figure out what I'm talking about. Well, back in the days when the west was young and black folks were about three-fifths of a person, whenever someone was down on their luck the neighbor would help that family out until they could get back on their feet (or at least to their knees) Now some one hundred years later and black people are a mathematical unreality — legally, five-fifths person but commonly treated like our forefathers — the black ones.

CASE-IN-FACT: Nixon (the king — better still king Nixon I) has cut programs for housing, education, legal aid; in fact any kind of social reforms—chop chop. It's as if he feels that if any of the programs blacks, the poor or others need won't do for today, but will make nice filler material for a history book 20 years from now.

AMERICA HAS FINALLY reached Alaska: there's drugs in them thar hills. You can't blame that on superfly! Of course, Alaska always did have a lot of snow.

IF SUPERFLY had been real and living in Iowa he would have to have a very good taxman. The IRS is using the law to get taxers from intermediate pushers. If you are a suspected pusher the IRS can come in and re-assess your income tax to accommodate the needs of Uncle Sammy...more on that next week.

Taj Mahal Uses Father's Experience To Make Music

When Taj Mahal was growing up out in the country, his father exposed him to the merits of jazz and blues. He found himself in constant contact with such notables as Albert Ammons, Illinois Jacquet and Leadbelly.

Today Taj uses this knowledge of music he gained as a child, and has developed something that has made him one of the foremost bluesmen in contemporary music.

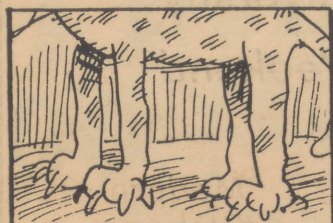

"I used to have this musical traffic over my head," he stated. "But when I first heard the blues, I dropped everything and the guitar was the only thing for me. My father's teachings in the blues got me an insight into the relationship of blues and Black Music to American music as a whole."

Taj Mahal has recorded numerous albums over the years, but each one has a different feeling and mood. They all maintain a blues base, but each explores different avenues of presentation.

"I never want to stagnate myself," he explained. "I want to be ever changing because, as a human being, I'm changing. And if I'm changing, then so must the music."

"Recycling the Blues (And Other Related Stuff)," one of Taj's recent albums, contains some of his old material done live, and new material recorded in he studio. Also available is the soundtrack recording to the movie, "Sounder," scored by Taj.

Taj made his screen debut in "Sounder," and was very pleased with the results.

YOUR TWO CHOICES

Can the human race carve out a creative future utilizing all the technological sources available? The question, posed in a recent publication, embraces survival, mankind, the quality of life, and other hot topics of today.

"To Love or to Perish: the Technological Crisis and the Churches" is the beginnings of an answer. The writers and editors of this valuable volume say that the reader may agree or not, but there's no other choice.

This important new book from Friendship Press is the result of two years of research and debate among a group of the most articulate minds in the United States. They joined together for the specific purposes of investigating the question of survival, charges that today's churches are not relevant to today's issues of poverty, war, environmental threats and the mounting crimes for the Third World, and finally, to propose answers.

The crisp, nontechnical, highly readable discussion is more like a vivid newscast than a report. And in many ways, the findings support the allegations that in many ways the churches do not relate well to the basic issues of today.

"To Love or to Perish," while it carries the names of four people as its editors—Margaret Mead, J. Edward Carothers, Daniel D. McCracken and Roger L. Shinn—actually represents the individual thinking and opinions of some 38 of the more competent thought-leaders alive today.

The volume, now available at local bookstores, is primarily being published in paperback form because it is thought to be an important enough message to be put into the hands of as many concerned Americans as quickly as possible.

WHERE IN THE WORLD?

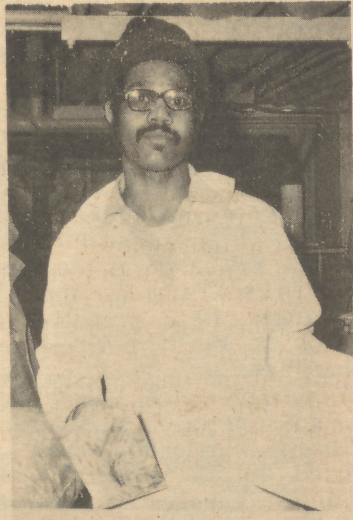

While snowflakes are falling in the United States and Canada, it's flower-budding time in Bermuda.

Poinsettias and purple morning glories are among the many varieties blooming in Bermuda during this period—rendevous time—when tourists find it difficult to tear themselves away from the island's mild 70-degree F. temperatures.

Contributing to the tourists' feeling of well-being are Bermuda's fashionable Princess Hotel in Hamilton and the palatial new Southampton Princess located at the beach.

Hotel rates this time of the year are low as are the air fares, and the Princesses offer a wide range of special features and entertainers. Guests at one Princess enjoy all the facilities of both.

Combined, the two hotels offer five tennis courts, nine restaurants, eight cocktail lounges, two night clubs, a swinging discotheque, four swimming pools and a private beach club with pink silky sands.

Frank Brown is a first year plasterer apprentice and a member of the Plasterers and Cement Masons Union here in Des Moines.

The apprenticeship program for plasterers lasts three years or between 6,000 and 8,000 hours of on-the-job training. During this time the apprentice plasterer works with a journeyman so that he may acquire a full knowledge of the craft and develop the necessary skills needed in this occupation.

Good physical condition and manual dexterity are important assets in this craft.

Frank was directed into this type of employment by members of the Des Moines Area Outreach Program.

NEWS

Accountability has become the watchword of education. In school districts around the country, the emphasis is now on results.

This trend began when the National "Right to Read" campaign was launched because one out of every four students in the nation had a significant reading deficiency.

School administrators, recognizing the need and wishing to cooperate with the "Right to Read" campaign, began looking for reading programs to solve the problems of their students.

Many of these programs have been in the schools for a year or more, and parents and others interested in education are now asking to see the results.

One of the reading programs, called "Project Read" operates presently in over 100 school districts across the country. It was developed by Behavioral Research Laboratories of Palo Alto, Calif. and uses the individualized programmed learning approach to reading. The noted linguist, Dr. M.W. Sullivan, developed the materials based on the premise that every child can learn to read.

The results of Project Read seem to bear out his premise, for children are learning to read with the BRL-Sullivan method.

In the Project Read schools in Inglewood, Calif., for example, over 80 per cent of the first and second grade students made impressive gains. One Inglewood teacher remarked, "Project Read reaches the students since its individualization allows them to work at their own pace. You can monitor it anytime, learning where the pupils are, what their needs are."

Philadelphia's District Four initiated Project Read in the fall of 1970 and subsequently its rank in reading achievement in the city greatly improved. The district's administrators noticed a change in student attitude, and a new awareness and interest in reading.

The Dallas, Texas school district last year embarked on an interesting study to find the best method for teaching reading to its students. They tested four different innovative reading programs during the 1971-72 school year.

These students and the nearly five million others who have participated in Project Read have shown encouraging progress. And concerned school boards are getting more such projects underway in Atlanta, Ga.; Inkster, Mich.; Jasper County, S.C.; San Jose, Calif.; Chicago, Ill.; Brooklyn, N.Y. and other communities.

The new techniques are not only increasing achievement and reducing failure, but also giving teachers more opportunity to teach. In the years ahead, it may be much less common for teachers in higher grades to be confronted with "problem students" who are problems because they never really learned to read.

French Chestnuts The Natural Way... Perfect For Cold Weather Menus

When nature puts a chill in the air, the enticing aroma of roasting chestnuts enhances the atmosphere of city streets and parks. But did you know there are other delicious ways to enjoy chestnuts, too? The versatile French know, and they have long prepared marrons (chestnuts) to grace every part of the menu.

Happily for us, delicious French marrons are now imported to the U.S. in all forms: whole natural, glazed and in sweetened and unsweetened purée. You can find them in tins or jars in delicacy shops and better food markets everywhere.

The natural purée is used to prepare the vegetable dish below, to beautifully complement ham or pork. We suggest braised pork chops, accompanied by delicate Meursault, a white wine from the Burgundy region of France. Vive les marrons!

PUREE DE MARRONS ARDECHOISE

(Makes about 6 servings)

- | | |
|-------------------------------|---|
| 6 pork chops, 1½ inches thick | 1 cup chopped celery |
| Salt and pepper | 1 cup French white wine |
| ¼ cup butter | 1 15½-oz. can purée de marrons (unsweetened chestnut purée) |
| 1 large onion, chopped | |

Sprinkle chops with salt and pepper. Melt butter and brown chops on both sides in a large skillet. Add onion, celery and white wine. Cover and simmer for 1 hour or until chops are tender. Remove chops to a platter and keep warm. Boil pan drippings until liquid is almost absorbed. Add chestnut purée and beat until well blended. Cook until hot. Serve chops with chestnut purée.

WINE CHIFFON PIE

- 1 teaspoon unflavored gelatin
- 1/3 cup sugar
- 4 egg yolks
- 2/3 cup Rhine wine
- 4 egg whites
- 1/4 teaspoon salt
- 1/3 cup sugar
- 1/2 cup heavy cream
- 1/4 teaspoon vanilla
- 1 baked 9-inch pastry shell

Mix gelatin with 1/3 cup sugar. In top of double boiler, beat egg yolks. Stir in wine and then gelatin mixture. Cook and stir over boiling water about 5 minutes, or until thickened. Remove from heat.

Beat egg whites with salt until fairly stiff; then gradually add 1/3 cup sugar, beating until stiff peaks form. With same beater, beat cream with vanilla until stiff. Fold wine mixture into beaten egg whites; then fold in whipped cream. Pour into pie shell. Chill until set. If desired, whip additional cream for garnish. This pie is best when served the same day it's made.

Chinese Shrimp Easy With Chef's Recipe

This recipe for Chinese Shrimp comes from 4-star chef T. T. Wang of the Shun Lee Palace restaurant in New York City.

Chinese Shrimp

- 18 large cleaned shrimp, dried
- 3 tablespoons flour
- 1/3 cup Karo dark corn syrup
- 2 tablespoons sugar
- 1 tablespoon corn starch
- 3 tablespoons vinegar
- 2 tablespoons water
- 1 tablespoon sherry
- 1 tablespoon soy sauce
- 1/4 teaspoon ground ginger
- 1/2 cup small tomato wedges
- 1/4 cup green pepper pieces
- 1-1/2 cups corn oil
- 1 clove garlic, minced

Cut shrimp lengthwise almost through and open flat. Coat with flour. Mix together corn syrup, corn starch, vinegar, water, sherry, soy sauce and ginger. In colander over large pan mix together vegetables. In wok, as shown in picture, or large deep skillet, heat corn oil over medium heat to 375°F. Carefully add shrimp a few at a time. Fry, stirring occasionally, about 1 minute or until golden. Pour shrimp and oil mixture over vegetables. Return pan to heat with 1 tablespoon of the corn oil. Saute garlic. Pour corn syrup mixture into skillet. Bring to boil, stirring constantly, and boil 1 minute. Add shrimp and vegetables from colander, stir until coated. Makes 3 servings.

One of the world's wettest places is Cherrapunji, north of the Bay of Bengal. There, 450 inches of rain fall every year.

TO THE ABOVE NAMED
DEFENDANTS:

You are hereby notified that the Petition of the Plaintiff in the above-entitled action is now on file in the Office of the Clerk of the District Court of Iowa in and for Polk County, claiming personal judgment against David C.
