Child Care in Deep Trouble

'Suffer the Little Children'

An Interpretative Report

by Carl Williams
Publisher

The weight of President Nixons massive reordering of government responsibilities were felt again in Des Moines as Day Care services came under the threat of oblivion this week. About 250 people of Polk county turned out to a public meeting Wednesday night of this week to learn of new guidelines proposed by HEW that would make it impossible for existing Child care programs to continue. Tiny Tots is one of the principal programs that will be affected.

It is not so much the question of whether Black or White children will be affected that concerns so many residents of Des Moines but the issue of an indifferent attitude in this country that puts the economics of wheat for Russia and Cotton for China ahead of the lives of children.

In a meeting of Chamber of Commerce members on Tuesday Feb. 20 David Banowitz of the Great Des Moines United Way told of the impending crisis and deep amazement was registered by some of the most prominent citizens in Des Moines.

Evelyn Davis, Director of Tiny Tot Child Care Inc. says, "We thought about putting on a rally but the time and other things wouldn't allow so we are holding a mass letter writing campaign. Everyone who can should come out to the Black Theology Center at 11th and Forest this evening (Thursday) at 7:30." She also stated that other people who want to write letters should address them to Senator Hughes and Congressman Neal Smith in Washington and Representative Earl Willits in the Iowa legislature. Or you may address your letters to whatever officials you care to and send them to us at: The New Iowa Bystander, 1016 Forest Ave. DM 50314 and we will forward them.

This is a subject of interest to all residents of the City. We are all directly or indirectly by the flow of Federal funds into the city and state. As we approach the summer of 1973 the jobs of thousands of Black Americans especially hang in the balance.

Picture the massive loss of funds projected by the Polk County Department of Social Services. Director Quenten Emory says that if the current HEW guidelines are actualized the loss of funds for the state would be about $5.6 million dollars.

RACIAL POLICIES CHALLENGED AT S. AFRICAN AIRWAYS

South African Airways has filed an application to the Civil Aeronautics Board for a regular flight route from Johannesburg to New York via the Cape Verde Islands. Several groups opposed to this country's race discrimination policies are challenging the application. The hearing marked the first time that racial discrimination has been raised in a board hearing, which are usually routine examination of landing rights.

The CAB bureau counsel, Jerome B. Blum, filed a statement that the application should be considered in light of whether the airline complies with the 1964 Civil Rights Act which outlaws discrimination in employment and public accommodations.

Arguments against the acceptance of the Airlines landing rights comes from the Congressional Black Caucus and other organizations interested in Africa. Appearing at the hearing was Rep. Charles Diggs.

LIGHT BULBS ARE COIN OPERATED

If you left a 60 watt bulb burning for a year, you'd cost the earth approximately 600 pounds of coal, and spend about $15. Here are some money saving ideas:

- Dusting light bulbs pays... if you have never dusted a bulb or fixture, you'll be getting a third less light than you paid for.
- Make the light fit the task. It makes sense to use lower wattages where bright light isn't vital, but don't skimp when sewing or studying.
- When good bulbs get old and dark, retire them to cellar, attic and garage fixtures where they'll give useful service in their declining days. Replace them with bright young bulbs where you need light.

Iowa Power isn't worried about running out of energy... but we can't see any sense in wasting it either.

Paris Foodland Seeking New Life

Paris Foodland has enlisted the support of the community in its attempt to overcome its crisis. An Advisory Board which will number about 27 has been formed. That board will meet Thursday, March 1st., to determine short and long range plans to save the store.

It was reported that the Advisory unit had located funds and lines of credit to insure the continuation of the store. However, Al Parish, spokesman for the Board, was not ready to make official comment at this time.

Parish, who many say is rapidly becoming the most effective young Black in Des Moines, is a legal aid attorney.

Paris Williams is optimistic about the possible outcome of the situation and is heartened by the show of support from Drake University students, other Black businessmen, churches and lay people from the community.

Efforts are being made to approach the City Council about building a walk-way over Keo Way so that residents of the new apartment complex near 12th. and Keo can have access to Parish Foodland. A move is also contemplated to get the island on Keo broken in front of the store.

National Assembly Meeting

By Charlie Cobb

National Black News Service The National Black Assembly and its continuing structure, the National Political Council, meets this weekend, March 2-4 at Wayne State University, in Detroit.

The meeting will form "National committees" on economic empowerment, political empowerment, communications, ways and means, permanent site, permanent charter, international policy, human development, armed forces, environment protection, self-determination for D.C., and the sub-committee on law, justice and repression.

Also finalized at this meeting will be the question of "what constitutes a national organization in the National Black Assembly", according to the national office of the assembly.

"The main importance of this meeting will be to talk about the direction that the assembly is going in," commented Owusu Sadaukai, "Mwalimu" (president) of the Malcolm X Liberation University in North Carolina and one of the representatives on the National Political Council.

Among the organizations involved in the assembly are the Congress of African People (CAP), Congress of Racial Equality (CORE), Inter-Religious Foundation for Community Organization (IFCO), Republic of New Afrika (RNA), Youth Organization for Black Unity (YOB), and the Committee for Racial Justice of the United Church of Christ.

"We need to consolidate our activities and move decisively in an active way to meet the agenda of the assembly and establish priorities at the local level," Sadaukai elaborated on some of the concerns of the meeting.

The assembly is "sworn" to "preserve, protect, and defend the black community."

Black Named to a Top D.C. Police Post

Washington — (NBNS) — Less than a week ago, Tilmon B. O'Bryant was appointed Assistant Chief of Police for the Metropolitan Police Department in the nation's capital and became the highest ranking Black officer in the 100-year history of the Department.

Interviewed in his office after the appointment he was relaxed, cordial and "being himself" as he put it.

I'm realist and believe in seeing things just like they are. He reminisced back to early 1960 when he was a private in the force and saw Blacks in the police department in a vacuum.

"One day in 1959 I decided to set up a class of eleven Blacks including myself and we trained for the examination which was to come up the following year. Ten out of the eleven were promoted.

It worked so well that in 1961, I trained ten more guys - nine of them got promoted.

"It was the greatest feeling I have had in my 26 years on the force" said the newly-appointed Chief.

The new Assistant Police Chief agreed that the city had not made as much progress as it should have in the area of crime prevention but the slim, trim cop who came up through the ranks and looks half of his 52 years is bound to leave his mark.

What is his secret "youth formula"? I get up every morning at 5 a.m. and run five miles."

Radio Stations Cooperate in New Health Series

Three radio stations are working together with the Des Moines-Polk County Health Department to make information on health available to Iowans.

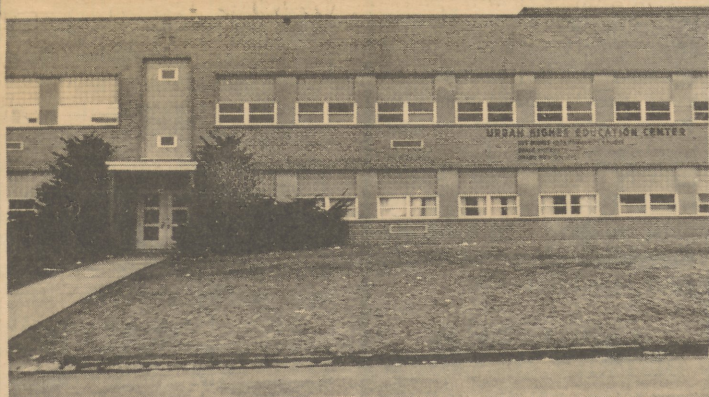

Jerry Slegh of KDMI-FM (shown interviewing Dr. Julius S. Conner, Director of the Health Department) produces the tapes and records copies of the programs which the Health Department's Section of Health Education then makes available to other stations. WOI-AM and WKY-AM have both set aside time to broadcast these programs. The topics discussed will be such health problems as carbon monoxide poisoning, sickle cell anemia, rabies control, V.D., lead based paint poisoning, environmental sanitation, food sanitation, and many others.

The programs may be heard on KDMI-FM at 12:15 Saturday afternoons and again on KDMI-FM Wednesday nights at 10:45. WOI-AM broadcasts the series at 10:30 Monday nights. The health series is carried by all three stations as a public service.

First on stage was Diane Forney, who read a poem, a second poem was read by Lafe Fowler, Jr. The play was enacted. The cast included Angela Johnson, Junelda Robinson, Dana Hunter, Lisa Canady, Gwen Chancellor, Annette Harcey, Rebecca Lock, Denise Burrell, Ressie Black and Sharon Holmes.

Next was the style show. The models performed well, displaying their training. Ressie Black was mistress of ceremonies. Modeling were Karen Freeman, Angela Johnson, Wanda Quinn, James Simmons, Brenda Jenkins, Cynthia Gaines, Dana Hunter, Rebecca Locke, Sharon Holmes, LaVern Buffington, Diane Forney, Redonna Allen, Donna Avant, Tony Richards, Lydia David, Tonya Narcisse, and John Freeman.

Flying with the Navy was a special treat on Wednesday morning. The Navy's invitation to Editor Carl Williams was shared with me, when he found he could not accept it. The Navy generously invited Register and Tribune newsmen and others for an orientation ride aboard its newest and most sophisticated anti submarine warfare aircraft, the Lockheed Electra, P-3C Orion.

I was impressed that the Navy cared enough about the public to expend what amounts to quite a sum of money: the staff time, a plane ride, which anyone knows is money; letting us "in" on what is happening in the Navy. It was a beautiful gesture.

We were to go to the C-Concourse of the D.M. Municipal Airport. We did and a receptionist awaited us, ready to do her hijacking check. Leaving our bags with her, we crossed under the arch, then returned for our bags thoroughly checked.

We entered the anti-submarine aircraft which had pulled alongside its civilian counterpart parked there. The reconstructed plane was minus the many windows—except for about six windows. Entering from the midsection of the plane, one found oneself in a gray mental colored interior filled with equipment and supplies. To our right was the back half of the plane, the living area: two bunks, a cooking and food preparation area from which we were later served coffee.

We were free to walk anywhere. I elected to walk to the cockpit, stopping at its threshold. Why? Except for two pilots' seats, the entire interior (excepting the ceiling) is covered with instruments: Speaking to the pilot on duty. I observed "There's no time to look outside." Lifting his head to glance in my direction, he responded: "Now many times that is true".

I met Robert Villegas, an Accoustics Operator and Henry DeBerry and NFO Keith Barnhart. Each was wondrously informed. NFO Barnhart is newly turned NFO—previously, he was referred to as a "TACO" meaning an analyzer who coordinates between sensor operators, with radar operators and with the pilot.

Suddenly instructions concerning donning a parachute were being given. I concentrated: Fully mentally retarded at this point, as my motivation got hung up on "instant rejection" or having to wear a parachute. Betcha I could use it and make that jump: Betcha I could!

Then, as suggested, I selected a seat. At this point, someone reached across me, picking up a Mae West, observing that I wouldn't be needing it, since we would not be flying over water: Mental retardation set in and remained—since I would not need the vest-like, inflatable apparatus. Next a voice asked if I needed help with my safety belt? Safety belt? Where is it, I asked—as always when riding with my family. To which my daughter-in-law patiently responds, "You're sitting on it." Which was what the young man said:

This crew had just completed its 14th yearly practice tour. It had been to Puerto Rico.

Learning of South American tours for exercises in joint operations, evoked my increasing admiration of the Navy. We use their equipment while they use ours: thus strengthening our friendship ties with these neighbors.

A Navy career is all there is: It is everything. One learns the field of his choice and enjoys exposure and a chance to learn others. For example, the men aboard this plane could interchange positions, thus making for complete understanding and working harmony. A career in the Navy, to me is all there is: It awaits anyone for the asking. Why not ask? Why prefer shooting pool, etc.?

A look at sports in retrospect

With Allen Ashby

I watched the wrestling matches last Saturday night and couldn't help but compare them with the matches we used to have. Then, instead of three periods, we used to have to wrestle from ten to fifteen minutes with no break. There were two judges and a referee, but we got no time break until the end of the match. A lot of the holds we used were barred. For instance we used to get a headlock on a guy, and hang on until we either squeezed his brains out or he gave up. Then you could use a headlock as a means of tossing a fellow to the mat. Leg holds? We grabbed a leg and tried to break it off and hit the guy over the head with it. Squeeze his toes until, if he had any sign of foot trouble, it would come out. Twist his leg as much as we could. Sometimes when you got a headlock on an opponent, you could throw him so hard that he would hit the mat just about half out, so a fall was just a formality. A fellow could get behind his opponent, and if he could stay there very long, he had the match just about won. That was the method used when you wrestled in a higher weight division. One guy used to wrestle in two or three weight classes. For instance, he weighted one hundred and forty, and he would get into the one hundred fifty eight and the one sixty five classes. He was fairly strong for his size, and pretty quick, and he would simply stay behind the bigger fellows for ten minutes, winning the match. From what I saw Saturday, a guy could get called for stalling if he did that now. But, as I have so often pointed out, the rules for both professional and amateur wrestling were identical, so a man could compete in both classes and a lot of times did. Then, I didn't see anybody try to escape from his man by scooting across the mat. That was popular with us. I suppose now you have to let your opponent behind you get hold of you before you can move. That might have made a difference even then, but that sudden scoot was usually always a surprise move, and nearly always worked.

Had a visit the other day from a fellow who was one of the most promising young athletes of his day. As you watch him walk along now, you would never believe that at one time he was one of the fastest men in the state. When he was sixteen he won third place in the long jump with a leap of close to twenty one feet when that distance was winning a lot of college meets. There were several fellows around town who were noted as fast runners, including at least one fellow who went to Drake and was on their track team as a sprinter. Well, our man ran off and left the pack at a special race, winning by plenty to spare. Don't know what the prize was but he carried it home. In baseball he was one of the few really younger fellows to play with the vast number of semi-pro teams that were around the city. He could hit a baseball a country mile, and was a good second baseman. Played varsity football at North before he was sixteen, and might have been a big star if he hadn't injured his knee. Today they would have probably worked on that knee and it would have been as good as new. But in those days not too much was known about knee surgery, and few people cared to risk it. So, fifty years or more later, the guy can't bend his knee, and he played a lot of baseball and football with that stiff leg. I can see him as he came around on an end sweep at Winterset, running with that game leg like Long John Silver, but he was really making tracks. Even with it, he was no slouch as a runner. Few guys could catch him after he got under way. Where is he now? Well, he has retired from the city and is living the life, I think. I thought this would be a good time to tell about my nearly lifetime friend and Buddy, Ronzo Hayes.

Legal Services for Poor on Way Out

The National Legal Aid and Defence Association has made available to the press copies of internal working papers of the Office of Economic Opportunity, the antipoverty agency now being phased out by the Nixon Administration, which describe the "game plan" for undermining the agency's Legal Services Program.

The Association, an independent group of lawyers employed in the program, produced documents authored by Marshall Boarman, a long-time advisor to acting OEO Director Howard J. Phillips who now serves as acting director of the evaluation division of the program.

The documents emphasized the Administration's hostility to the efforts of legal aid attorneys to help low income persons collectively through administrative and

The old mamma in the neighborhood was talking to ole sister Sadie...

"Honey, you hear where that old white man in Washington tellin' us to stop eating meat one day a week."

"Yeah," sister Sadie said, "and if ya eatin' hamburger ya got to go a switchin' to cheeze"

"Lord have mercy."

One meatless day a week to deflate the price of meat: that's what it is.

That sure is funny when you think about it. Remember the days when they would say a "chicken in every pot". Now we're going to be left with the pot (a big black one, of course)

It really is ironic, when McGovern said we'd be out of Vietnam within a short period of time everyone (almost) thought he was a crackpot but when the King says no meat on the table the country says: "Sure 'nough, boss". Don't they know that meat on the table is an American tradition...that is if you could afford the price of meat.

Then again most black folks were ahead of their time and didn't know with this meatless day (scandal?). But those days sometimes went into weeks—even at that it was meat the no one else knew about until a couple of years ago.

It makes me wonder (an occasional luxury) if Nixon's economic policy includes a "mock depression". And he's just kind enough (smile) to let us warm up for the big event.

Just one question King Nixon the First: will you join America in your decree?

Story 2A

In south Africa where blacks are the majority of the population but are politically stagnate: just jolted their politically superior counterparts with a strike.

If you're black in that apartheid you don't strike a match in the wrong place let alone walking out on your job. But it ain't what you're suppose to do but what you do.

The Africans struck for the most universal thing going (or at least in the United States)—money. Only thing is that wanted about $2 more-to something in the tune of $10 a week.

It was justified though, because the factories that they worked for had a profit of 70 per cent.

Maybe the next time they will be able to set up an emergency strike fund.

Story 2B

With the present condition of job opportunities in the U.S. Uganda's invitation may be a tempting one for black Americans.

What did Uganda do? That east African country has an open invitation for blacks in this country to come and grow with that country.

Just think of the things you'll miss though. No more red-necks to stretch your neck or burn your home and your job; no more "boy"; no more lousy rat-infest tenements.

Uganda may have shattered a myth held by some black folks that Africa would just as soon forget about its stolen sons and daughters. Even the United States has held out an invitation like this African nation has — and we've been here for years.

This would be a golden opportunity to go home.

Bumperstickers are usually funny one way or the other. No matter what they say you can get a chuckle from them. You are what it says on your bumper.

Well, the other day I was driving around and I saw a sticker that said—Welcome home POW's. That made me sad and disturbed. Why? That old Dick in the White House and the Vietnamese have messed it up to the point that the rest of the POW's return to their homes has become bleak.

Someone must have turned the light back on at the end of the tunnel.

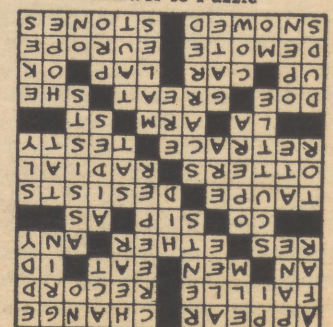

My bumpersticker: Turn out that light!

COOKING... American Style

by Lois Tibbets

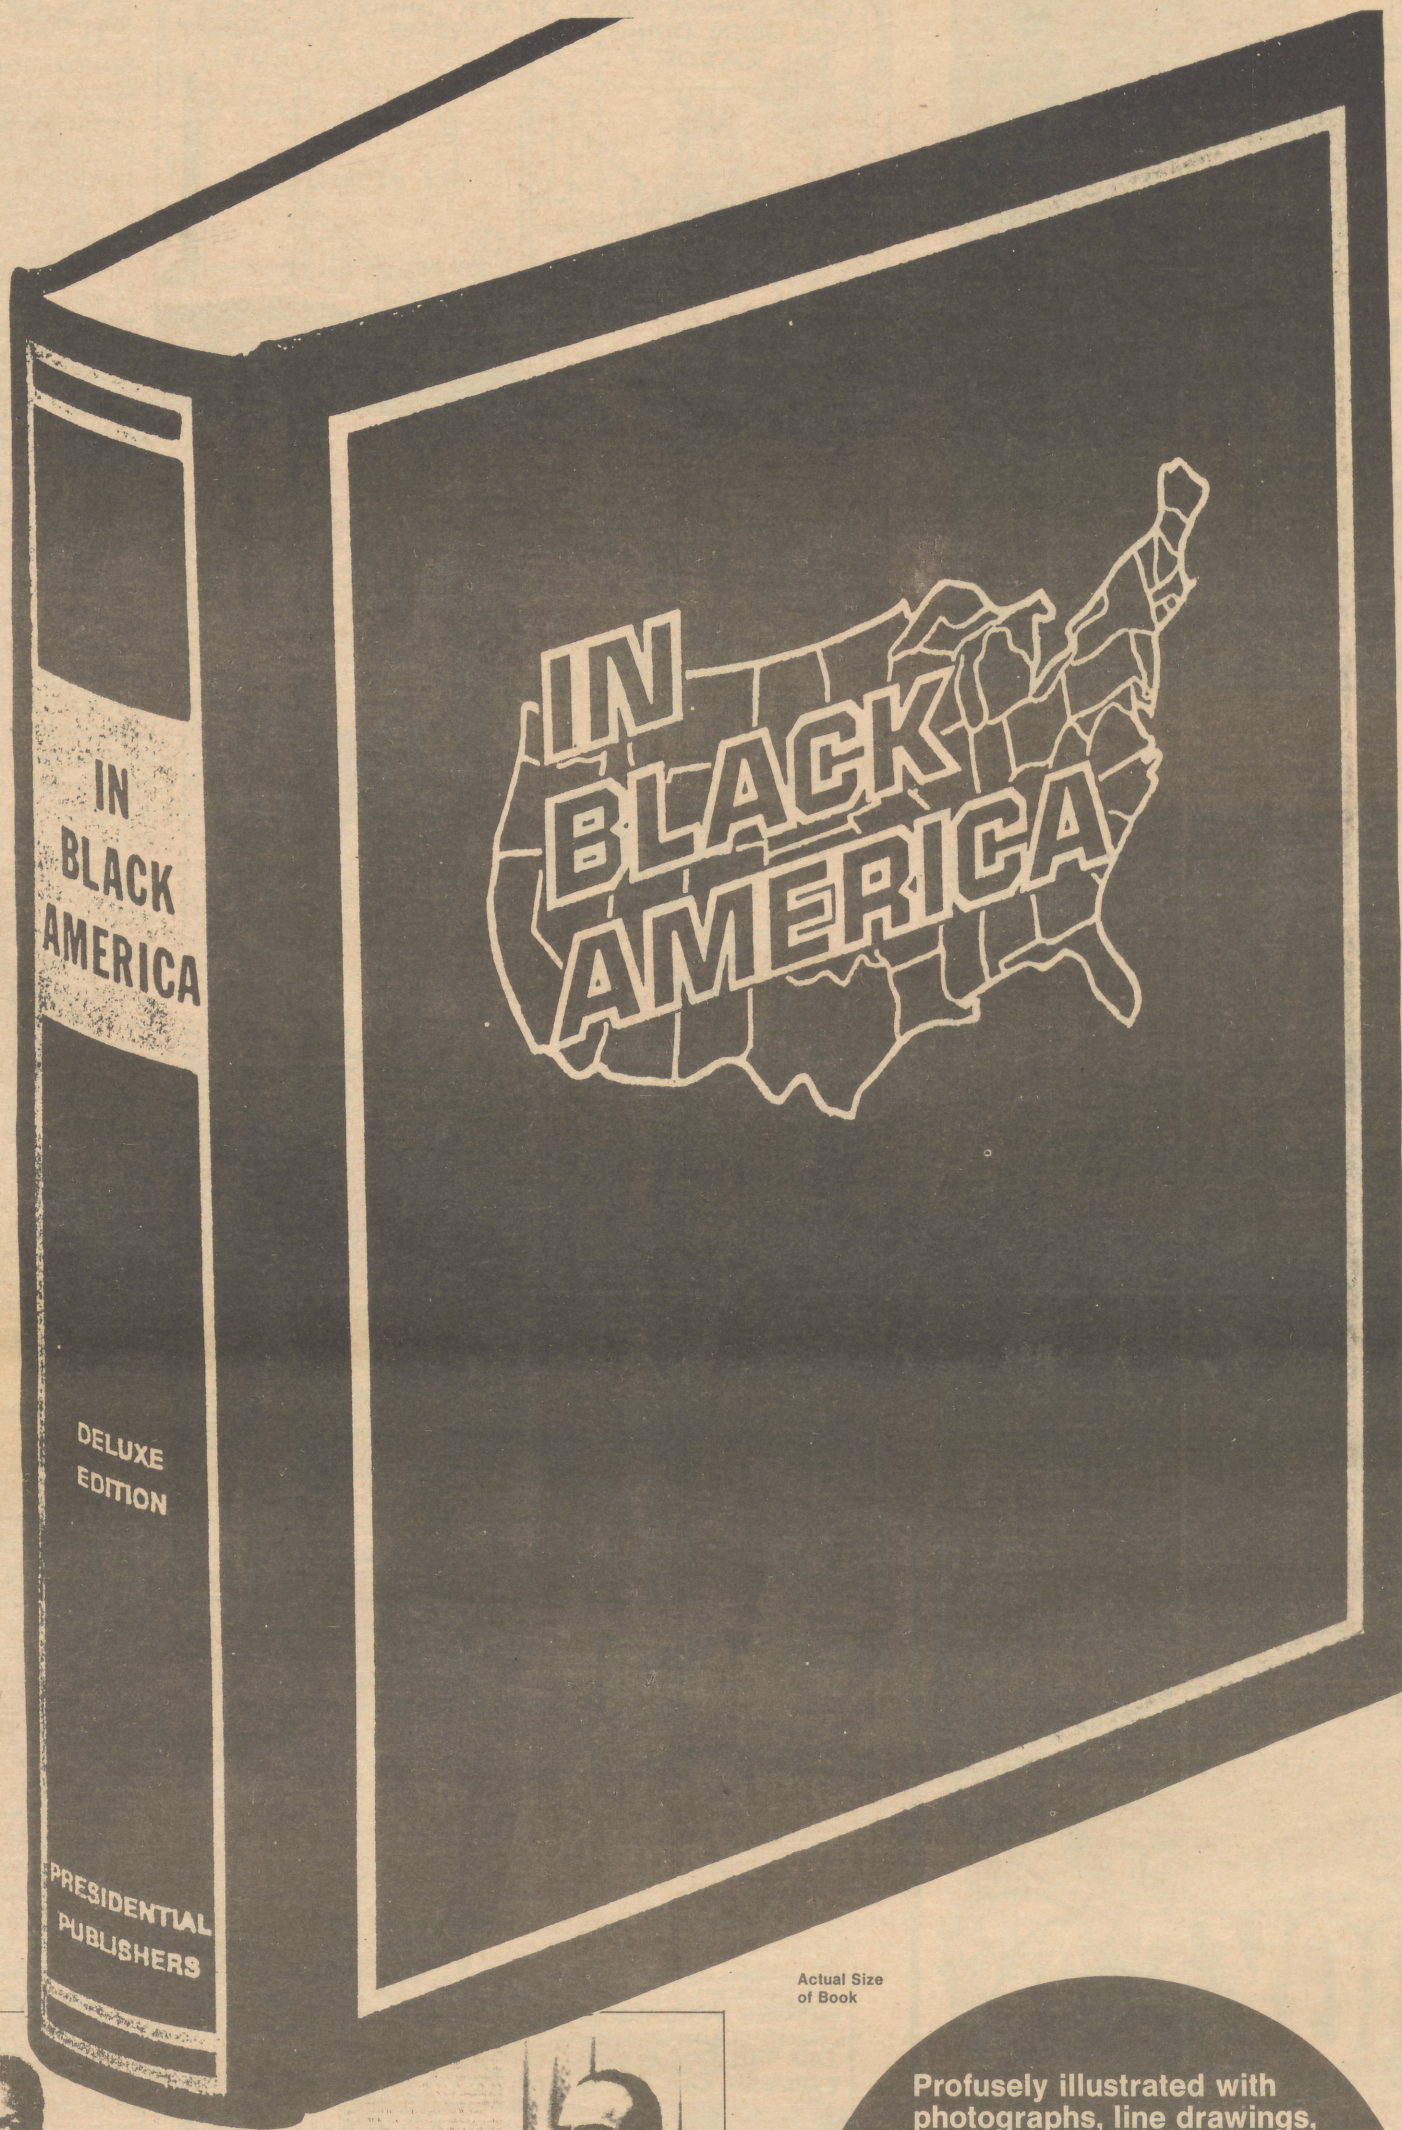

It never ceases to amaze me that the term Gourmet is used to describe French or Italian or even Greek or Chinese food, but is never applied to traditional American cooking.

This is particularly frustrating when you realize that what we call American cookery today, is a direct descendent of the French, the English, the African, the Asian and other national cooking styles brought to this country by our ancestors.

As a matter of fact, the food served by the average American housewife is far closer to real Gourmet food than that served in the homes of almost any other country in the world.

So why do food editors, restaurants and cookbooks persist in calling anything and everything but American food Gourmet? Probably because they never took the time or trouble to discover what real American Gourmet is.

Civil Rights: Blacks Taking Steps Backward

Last week, when the U.S. Commission on Civil Rights issued its third report in years, "The Federal Civil Rights Enforcement Effort, a Reassessment," there appeared to be a rather distinct reverberation in the background. Perhaps, because as the Commission itself concluded, its findings were "dismayingly similar" to those of earlier reports.

In effect, we have been steadily wending our way on an ever-rotating treadmill with no recognizable gains, but innumerable steps backward.

As in the past, the Commission found Federal enforcement in the civil rights area to be "highly inadequate," lacking high priority and commitment from governmental officials — from the president down through the ranks — and basically "ineffective."

Hoping against hope, the Commission — as part of its manifold tasks — released its findings in a detailed report some 425 pages long — thinking, perhaps, that it would come to the attention of "the President, his agency heads, the Congress, and the American people and that strong remedial action will be promptly undertaken."

We are certain, though, that few if any, Commission reports, hearings, or actions escape the attention of President Nixon. (Witness the speedy acceptance of the forced resignation of the Rev. Theodore Hesburgh, the outspoken former chairman of the Commission who knocked Mr. Nixon's commitment to equality once too often.)

Thus, it is difficult for us to imagine that President Nixon is not already cognizant of the poor track record of his Administration in the area of civil rights. What is difficult for us to imagine is when, if ever, is he going to do something constructive?

According to the rights commission, there has been little or no progress and its findings in the latest report clearly point out this standstill. Enforcement of civil rights mandates by the executive branch, it said, are so "inadequate as to render the laws practically meaningless."

In addition, the commission said some things that many of us already know but either utter in hushed voices or not at all. That is:

"Many agency officials genuinely believed they would incur the wrath of powerful Members of Congress or lobbyists — and thereby jeopardize their other programs — if they actively attended to civil rights concerns. Moreover, since non-enforcement was an accepted mode of behavior, any official who sought to enforce civil rights laws with the same zeal applied to other statutes ran the risk of being branded as an activist, a visionary, or a troublemaker. Regrettably, there were few countervailing pressures. Minorities still lacked the economic and political power to influence or motivate a reticent officialdom."

However, the commission and its members have been around for a while. And, to counteract this and other "inherent difficulties," the commission mapped out a strategy which puts the responsibility squarely where it belongs.

"...We knew that government employees respond to direct orders. We were convinced that if our Presidents and their agency head and sub-cabinet level appointees had persisted in making clear that the civil rights laws were to be strictly enforced, and had disciplined those who did not follow directives and praised those who did, racial and ethnic inequality would not have been as prevalent as it was in 1970.

"Leadership—presidential, political, and administrative—and the development of realistic management processes are the keystones to a vigorous and effective federal enforcement effort.

"Our study concluded that this leadership unfortunately was lacking. Despite certain halting steps forward and a few promising public pronouncements, Presidents and their appointees seldom assumed their potential role as directors of the governor's efforts to protect the rights of minority Americans."

In its most recent report, the commission found that civil rights efforts have been plagued with "inertia," extensive delays, and no effective coordination between agencies with similar responsibilities. Thus, we imagine that a government-wide plan for civil rights enforcement — which the Commission charged is now non-existent — would be like asking for pie in the sky.

The Commission in no uncertain terms, clearly places the initial and ultimate responsibility for obtaining equal opportunity on the President and appeals to his "good faith" to "live up to (the) commitments" of "our imperfect democratic society."

"Without the leadership of the President," the commission report states, "this job (of obtaining domestic tranquility between our diverse population) not only becomes infinitely more difficult, but a steady erosion of the progress toward equal rights, equal justice and equal protection under the Constitution will occur. History suggests that so long as one man is not free the freedom of all is in

The first requirement, according to the Commission, is that of "an unequivocal, forceful implementation of all the civil rights laws now on the books."

By now, the commission is, perhaps, renowned for its exhaustive studies, hard-hitting statements that the guilty parties believe are below the belt, and its recommendations — which are encompassed in the great American dream, but what is, after all, only a dream for blacks and other minorities who lack the political clout to cause a do-nothing President to metamorphose.

The report was submitted to the White House Office of Management and Budget last September, but was held up for release until after the November election. The forcefulness of its language, its allegations, and its implications could, possibly, explain why Father Ted is no longer head of the Commission.

OEO Cutoff Disastrous

for Poor, Poverty Aide Says

By Florence Tate
National Black News Service

Washington — Typical of the attitude displayed towards the Nixon edict calling for the elimination of federally funded poverty programs, was that of 24-year old Ed Wiggins of Bridgeport, Connecticut in town to participate in last week's National Mobilization for Domestic Unity Day.

"Fund cut-off for OEO will be disastrous for minority persons, particularly for Blacks," said the young Black outreach worker for the Action for Bridgeport Community Development (ABCD), the community action program in that New England town of 156,000 people, approximately 25-30 percent Black.

"The fund cut-off would be direct genocide for Blacks," Wiggins attested. "For the illegal war in Vietnam, the government allotted so much money. Now they want to stop the legitimate War on Poverty that at least is attempting to be waged here," said Wiggins.

"How can the government talk about building overseas

'Round City Hall

By K. Warren

"To be or not to be. That is the question," is one of the famous passages from the great writer, William Shakespeare. In our times the passage could be modified to read "To have or not to have, is the question." There are only two types of people in our world, the haves and the have nots and this has no bearing on your religion, color, or any other superficial factor. As Minorities, we must first grasp this idea as a real fact and also grapple with one other fact: that is the system is designed to be sure that we remain have nots. In our particular community a prime example of this fact is that an elevator in City Hall is more important than a meaningful job for an ADC mother, welfare father or just a poor, unemployed person. Or at least that is what the City Council in my opinion is saying when they

Thursday, March 1, 1973
abolish the staff of Community Development, then vote to put the above mentioned item in City Hall so the other employees who probably need the exercise because of their lack of performance can now ride from their desk to their coffee break. I wonder how many jobs could be funded with the $60,000 the elevator will cost. Also the $15,000 for remodeling the City Council chambers where certain citizens are not welcome and are insulted by the gentlemen who claim to represent all the people in Des Moines. It is time that the have nots realized where the action is. One more fact to contend with is our present administration is not receptive to giving anything to a certain segment of this community and unless you "demand", not ask, for whatever you want or need, you won't get anything. Remember these gentlemen are not Gods to be feared or revered just men whom you have elected to be your voice in the system which is programmed to ignore you from the start. Start being concerned is the first step toward becoming a "have" instead of a "have not" and that concern must be for your fellowman as well as yourself.

when if that $5 billion was poured into this country to clear up some of its problems, this country would really be something!" The slum-born poverty worker allowed himself to dream for a moment.

Wiggins said mass meetings and letter-writing to Congress campaigns were organized in each of Bridgeport's "target" areas.

"We've gotten a beautiful response. Support has come from the League of Women Voters, the NAACP, the United Fund, and a lot of other organizations," he reported.

He said people are now talking about demonstrating and writing to the mayor about revenue-sharing, "to get a commitment from him." Bridgeport CAP has programs for drug addiction, economic development, mental health and employment and youth services that would be directly affected by the death of anti-poverty programs, said Wiggins.

The clean-cut youth has lived in the city of his birth for all of his 24 years.

"I grew up in the West End and I can definitely see the difference between what it was like when I grew up there and what has happened since ABCD came into being," said Wiggins. He spoke of transportation being provided to help poor people get to the doctor, as well as job referrals being made for the unemployed.

"It's time for middle America to wake up," he continued. "The Black man has already taken too much here. Four hundred years of exploitation and denial are enough."

"The Black man, the Puerto Rican, the Indian—all minorities have decided they have taken too much, and they aren't going to be stepped on any more," he declared.

Wiggins said he believes two things are sure to happen if program funding for community action programs and services to the poor are cut off: "there will be rioting; and more dope will be pumped into the ghetto."

"The dope will be used because there will be nothing else to do—it's bad enough in the ghetto now," he said sadly, but angrily.

Jesse Jackson, Abernathy Call for Mass Demonstrations

WASHINGTON — (NBNS) — The Rev. Jesse Jackson of PUSH and Rev. Ralph Abernathy of SCLC have announced plans for mass demonstrations, expressing outrage at Nixon's plans for ending OEO programs. The balk leaders vowed to lead an insistent struggle in behalf of the continuation of these programs.

"It's beginning of a spring offensive and there will be direct action as opposed to direct talking throughout the summer. It will be a long hot summer," Jackson declared. Abernathy called for demonstrations at the state, county, and federal level.

At a press conference they spoke of the thousands of people who had come to Washington to lobby in behalf of the continuation of OEO programs. The main activity consisted of delegations attempting to get specific commitments from their congressmen to fight for the maintenance of OEO programs and funding.

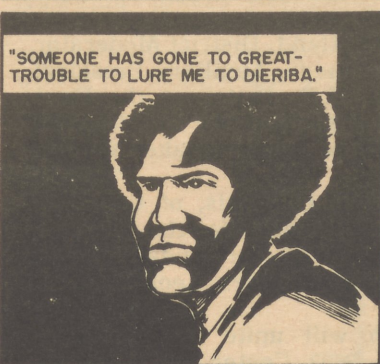

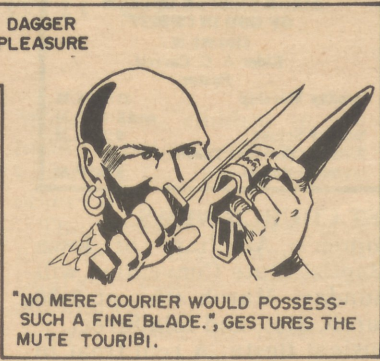

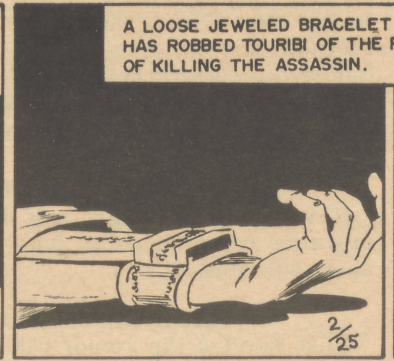

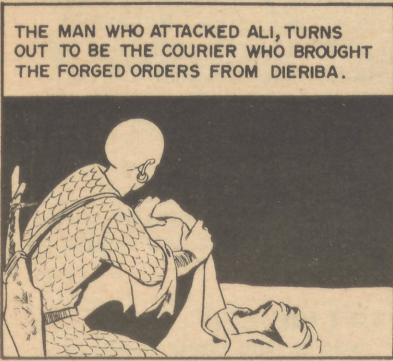

Dr. Delton J. Brooks, Jr., President of the National Association for Community Development pointed out that the lobbying mobilization was "not a black affair, white affair, green affair or blue affair, but an American affair."

He stressed that it is "a peaceful rally not a confrontation." Stating his belief that Congress would be sympathetic he defined the lobby effort as "peaceful testimony, that poverty programs are still valid and viable."

Jim Couch, Chairman of the National Mobilization for Domestic Unity said that the basic initial theme in the effort was that "only the federal government has the necessary resources to wage a true fiscal war on poverty."

ROAST LEG OF LAMB

Leg of lamb, well trimmed and cleaned (about 6 to 7 pounds)
2 large onions, chopped very fine
2 carrots, chopped very fine
2 tsp. powdered or leaf rosemary
1 tsp. celery seed
2 cups dry white wine (Vermouth is excellent with lamb)
4 slices bacon, cut into 2 pieces each
2 cloves garlic

Wipe off lamb with damp cloth. If butcher has not sliced joint, do so. Make a long slit next to leg bone and insert garlic cloves cut into thin slivers. Place lamb, fatty side up, on rack in roasting pan at least two inches wider and longer than lamb. Arrange half slices of bacon so that entire top of lamb is covered.

In frying pan, melt 2 tablespoons butter or margerine and cook chopped onions, carrots and celery seed until vegetables are tender, not brown (about five minutes).

Arrange vegetables over and around lamb in roasting pan. Pour over wine (if more liquid is needed, add a cup of water). Place in pre-heated 375 degree oven. Cook 18 minutes per pound weight of lamb, plus 25 minutes. Baste regularly, adding more wine or water to keep small amount of liquid in pan at all times.

When meat is done, remove to heated platter. Skim fat off pan juices. If desired, thicken with one tablespoon flour moistened in water. Bring rapidly to boil on top of stove, scraping hardened pan juices into mixture.

Serve separately.

Whites Continue Harassment of Kawaida Project

Urged on by picketing, racist whites police continued harassment of the Blacks struggling to build the Kawaida towers housing facility in Newark, N.J.

The hostile white crowd was joined by police in spitting, shoving, taunting, hitting, and kicking Blacks at the construction site.

As Cheo Mfuosi, chairman of the temple of Kawaida was leaving the site with other workers they were confronted by several policemen, "verbally abused", kicked and clubbed, and had four persons arrested.

"The police spearheaded the violence" Mfuosi said.

Mfuosi was clubbed in the head. Another person was kicked in the face and three others hit.

The arrested persons have not been arraigned yet. Charges against them are not known.

The effort to construct Kawaida towers has been marked by police violence and general mob violence by whites for months now.

Voices in Society

People don't want to talk about the social ills that affect society today. Yet, the drunk driver caused 27,000 highway deaths last year. Should we ignore the problem? Venereal disease has reached epidemic proportions in all segments of society. If we don't make people realize it's not a crime—we can't reduce the epidemic. Three million people look at the world through drug distorted eyes. Shouldn't we find out why? Through its "Voices in Society" Program The Travelers Insurance Company is starting a dialogue about these devastating social problems. Won't you help them continue the dialogue in your community? Z

There are lots of great things about this new Flynn plastic gallon jug.

Actually our new plastic gallon jug is the next best thing to the cow herself for keeping Flynn Milk fresh. The re-sealable screw on cap insures complete freshness. The built-in handle makes it easy to carry and easy to pour from. The plastic is translucent so you can always see how much milk is left. Of course, we wouldn't be so excited about the container if we weren't so sure about what we put inside it. It costs no more than milk in waxed cartons. And you pay no deposit. Available now at your store. For home delivery call 243-6211.

Iowa Power to Increase Electric Sale

Continuing growth in both electric and gas sales was forecast today by Dwight H.
Swanson, Chairman and President of Iowa Power and Light Company, Des Moines.
Swanson and other company executives met in New York with security analysts, financial executives and members of the financial press.

Swanson said he expects the company's electric sales to increase at an average rate of 7.4 percent for each of the next five years, growing from 3.1 billion kilowatt hours at the end of 1972 to 4.5 billion by 1977.

The chief executive said,
"We are undertaking a construction budget in 1973 of $38.5 million, by far the largest in our history. This compares to $19.9 million spent in 1972. Construction requirements for the years 1973 through 1977 will total some $250 million, with most of the money being spent in the area of power supply. We will begin receiving energy from the Cooper Nuclear Station in late 1973. This plant is being built by Nebraska Public Power
District, and Iowa Power has a thirty year contract to purchase one-half the output, or 400,000 kilowatts."

In 1972 the Iowa State Commerce Commission approved 64 percent, or $3.3 million, of a total $5.2 million electric rate increase request which the company initially made in early 1971.
Late last year Iowa Power also filed for a $3 million (9.6 percent) annual gas rate increase and for another electric rate increase in the amount of $4.9 million (7.6 percent). These new rates were put into effect under bond and subject to refund on January 2, 1973. Hearings of these requests will begin in late spring of this year.

A rummage sale and food
sale will be held Saturday, March 3, from 10 a.m.
until, at the Elks' Home,
East 14th and Walker Streets. For rummage,
to the West middle door.
It is sponsored by the Charity Club of Rose
Temple No. 33.
