Suit Filed On Behalf of Blacks After '72 Drug Raid

Roberts Lounge, 1025 University, subject of intense search. Agents reportedly only had warrant to inspect liquor. All patrons were frisked some hand guns found.

Ebony Lounge, 1101 University, also entered. Women's wigs were removed here. Some clients subjected to highly personal search. Note house at Rt. rear of Ebony. Two people were arrested there after being chased briefly by authorities.

On May 15th a Civil Class Action Suit was filed in United States District Court - Southern District of Iowa by Attorneys Alfredo Parrish and Naomi Mercer on behalf of Kathy Craddock, Mary A. Fowler, Rubben Jones, John Manuel, Diane Morrison, Tony Wilson, Plaintiffs, against Jerry Murphy, Director of Drug Abuse Law Enforcement, Allen Donielson, United States Attorney for the Southern District of Iowa, Richard Lamb, Lieutenant, Des Moines Police Department, Morris Moe, Et Al Drug Abuse Law Enforcement Agents, Peter Poe, Et Al, Agents of the United States Attorney for the Southern District of Iowa, Richard Roe Et Al, Police Officers of the Des Moines Police Department, John Doe, et al, Agents of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, Defendants.

The suits claim that the named plaintiffs represent a class of people who were subjected by the defendants to unlawful searches; excessive force and other unlawful, violent, malicious, and abusive actions, unlawful detention, and conspiracy.

That suit which was filed after some 6½ months of careful preparation was in response to a drug raid conducted on October 13th at the corner of 11th and university and involved three addresses. It charges that in addition to the specific plaintiffs other people of the same class (Black People) were indiscriminately mistreated. It is further charged that patrons of the establishments raided were deprived of their right to privacy by newsmen and summoned to the scene by the defendants. The Black press was not called.

The suit further states, 'Unless defendants, their agents and subordinates are temporarily and permanently restrained from carrying out, encouraging and permitting all actions and procedures described in...this complaint, plaintiffs and all others similarly situated will suffer immediate and irreparable injury....'

Attorney Parrish says that it could take as long as three years and possibly more to resolve the matter. Reaction from the Black Community was on the overall good. It was expressed by some that it was reassuring to see action carried through to something concrete.

No specific amount of damages were asked for in the suit, however it does request, "Injunctive relief and damages arising out of a series of incidents which occurred on or about October 13th 1972."

A Black Man's View From Wall Street

By

Travers Jerome Bell, Jr.
Executive Vice President
DANIELS & BELL, INC.
(Member New York Stock Exchange, Inc.)

For many months now, the small investor - frequently referred to as the "public" - has been conspicuous by his (or her) absence from the stock market.

Whatever the reasons, and most are obvious, Wall Street presently is making a large and concerted effort to bring back these investors. The industry is doing this not only because it makes good business sense but, equally important, it is felt such a move might restore to the market the stability it is so sorely lacking from a combination of individual and institutional investors.

In addition to massive advertising and promotion campaigns, the securities industry also has been seeking and developing new investment vehicles to attract, and hold, the public.

One such investment is the closed-end bond funds that have been coming to market at so prodigious a rate lately.

Closed-end bonds funds may be a suitable investment medium for investors who wish to participate in a more diversified portfolio of income-producing securities than might be able to purchase on an individual basis.

In many instances, such securities are readily available only in relatively large dollar amounts and may, in the case of securities obtained through direct placement, be available only to institutional investors. Direct placement securities, because they are not freely marketable, frequently offer higher yields than those available on comparable publicly traded debt securities.

What does closed-end mean?

As a closed-end investment, a company differs from an open-end situation in that shareholders will not have the right to have their shares redeemed by the company at net asset value or otherwise. Further, the company will not continuously offer its shares to the public.

After completion of a public offering, the market price at which the company's shares can be bought or sold may be more or less than the net asset value of the shares. Shares of closed-end investment companies frequently sell at a discount from their net asset value.

The primary objective of most closed-end bond funds is to provide a high rate of current income, with capital appreciation as a secondary objective.

Most of the new bond funds are fairly conservative vehicles, investing in high-grade bonds and seeking annual yields of 7 to 7½ percent.

For investors concerned about the rate of inflation, but worried about the risks in equity investing, the investment methods and objectives of the bond funds look pretty good, and certainly warrant some consideration in any family planning and investment program.

FROM INTERIOR DESIGNERS: INGENIOUS DECORATING IDEAS

No matter whether it's your new one-room apartment or last year's yacht, decisions about decorating are often some of the hardest you have to make. And with so much to choose from in today's "anything goes" approach to decorating, more than one person has become confused and discouraged about redoing his or her digs. America's professional A.I.D. interior designers, however, are ingeniously "putting it all together" for lots of these people. Here are just a few examples of what they've done:

The designer was able to give this room special architectural touches such as ceiling molding to alleviate the box-like appearance of a typical modern apartment. Wall units house books, hi-fi speakers and television. The refreshingly simple window treatment is a combination of shade under roll-up blind, a practical solution offering complete control of light.

On a modest budget, this screened porch has been transformed into a sophisticated extension of a home's main living and dining areas. For furniture, the designer combined inexpensive, canvas-backed director's chairs with white wicker pieces.

A subtle color scheme and an interesting background makes this bedroom light and airy. The silvery-pewter tones and patterned wallpaper are further enhanced by a mirror-paneled screen and cane armchair. The flooring is white vinyl tile.

The design ideas behind these beautiful and imaginative rooms (and many others) are colorfully pictured and explained in a new book called "The Best Of American Interior Design." Copies are available for $3.00 from The American Institute of Interior Designers, 730 Fifth Avenue, New York, N.Y. 10019.

The eight-hour loaf

Round City Hall

By Ken Warren

On Wednesday, the 9th of May 1973, I visited the City Police Station to interview Police Chief Wendell Nichols concerning his trip to Dayton, Ohio, and Boston, Massachutes. Mr. Nichols was accompanied by Mr. Richard Bates of the Community Development staff whom I also interviewed. Chief Nichols felt that in comparison with Dayton and Boston, Des Moines did not have the problems he observed while on his trip. He agreed, however, that we did have problems and felt that with both the police department and local citizens' participation they could be lessened. He, Mr. Nichols, related that there is no magic formula for solving crime in any city, but, if members of a particular community actively concur to work constructively, many problems could be eliminated. The first step in accomplishing this task is the mutual agreement to establish RESPECT on the part of the community and the police department. In order for them to TRUST one and other which is a requisite to mutual understanding of problems they both face, then they must RESPECT each other.

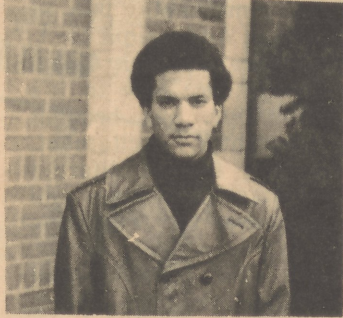

Chief Nichols feels that this can be accomplished if the BLACK community takes a positive attitude toward law enforcement. He would like to establish a black platoon of 12 to 14 people that primarily would work in the black community. He feels that the people in this community should suggest and recruit these people. He also wants to see a citizens' group formed in an advisory capacity for this purpose and to help formulate policy for this platoon. This plan has been successfully used in the cities he visited.

In talking with Mr. Bates, I found him to be in partial agreement with Chief Nichols. He has some reservations as to the use of this platoon, also whether the advisory committee would have any real power or be a rubber stamp group. He felt this group could be effective if the city and state administrations allowed the police department to be receptive and dedicated to change as at this stage of the game it is mired down in the traditional concepts that has made it unresponsive to the needs and will of the community as a whole. Mr. Bates also reflected that the cities visited had problems of such great magnitude and complexities that our police department would be unable to cope with them due to their lack of knowledge in the area of criminal behavior.

Now for a brief summary of the two interviews and the ideas expressed by both parties, some of the theories related to me have sound basis for a workable solution to the police and community relations. At least the effort made toward working together for an understanding is in my opinion a step in the right direction. I have mixed feelings on a black platoon per se as I do not agree with nor can I condone segregation in reverse. Since much was said which the space in my column will not allow completion in one article, I will conclude this one with this thought, progress is only made when there is an atmosphere that is congenial to the efforts and cooperation of all persons desiring this to happen.

More next week on this matter including my own personal opinions as to the possibilities and potential of this matter being successful.

Fine Print

By Michael Morrow

The people of the black community are usually complaining about the lack of activities in Des Moines. That is usually true, but last weekend there wasn't any excuse for complaints. What I'm talking about is the Gateway Dancer's program.

These young people spent three solid weeks working out, practicing, getting everything together. Then came the weekend, they put on a beautiful show but the thing that irked me the most was the lack of attendance.

Simply, there should have been more people there to see a good show done by gifted, black talent from our own community.

Watergate is still sprouting more leaks than a broken down sieve. I just can't understand how long the people can put up with all of stuff coming down.

For example, one of the King's aides says that a report issued by him was not even made. There are some things that goes beyond science fiction...that is the truth only thing that is wrong is that this is real life.

The Senate hearings being televised should be interesting, to say the least. At the rate Watergate is booming the Senate hearings could turn out to be another afternoon soap opera.

"Good afternoon, today's episode of the ever continuing story of the Watergate investigation.

Featuring, select members of the Senate Investigative Committee. But, now a word from our sponsors."

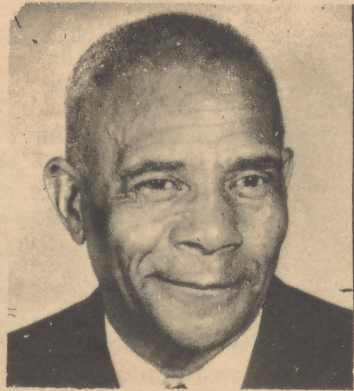

I wonder what kind of ratings it would get.

Nixon has announced that the term of office for presidents should be extended to six years. Yes, six whole years; true, it would be shorter than two four-year terms but there is always that chance the incumbent president would not win that second chance.

But could you see that now if Nixon had that already instituted—he could do almost anything without worrying about being impeached. Today, it would be almost inconceivable that a president would be impeached. The Congress right now is just too divided to impeach Nixon but if it was brought to a vote it would be very, very close.

With Allen Ashby

I saw a tall lanky guy pushing a cart through the supermarket the other day, and yelled at him. The guy turned around, and except for the gray whiskers and lines in his face didn't look any older than he did at least thirty years ago. At one time he was as good as any all around athlete in the city. He played baseball with the Des Moines Cubs, an all black team whose members nearly all lived on the south east side, or maybe all of them did. The Cubs played all over the state and just about everybody who would give them a game. I can still see the line in the Register's semipro column. Des Moines Cubs want games, write Carl Greer, I think Carl was his first name. They played every week, and I don't think they had much of a home field, as most of the black baseball teams didn't have one then. But this guy was their pitcher, or at least one of them. I would have to rate him as the star. He had a fast ball that people tell me was his best pitch, and he was pretty good with the bat. Then he played just about anyplace else they might need him when he wasn't pitching. In football that was in the time when several clubs in the city had football teams. There was a team called the Dashing Eagles, one of the best organized athletic clubs in the city that was made up of young fellows not over eighteen. Then here was a club of older guys called the Beaux Espirite, whatever that meant. So the fellows on the Southeast side got up their own team and challenged both of the other clubs. Our guy played fullback for the team, and later played with the Eagles against the other club. The first time he carried the ball for the Eagles, I felt sorry for him because he went into the line straight up and nearly got mobbed. I was calling signals for the Eagles and he wanted another crack at that line. He got it, and do you know, the rest of the afternoon it took from two to four men to bring him down, and he still ran straight up. He played guard in basketball in our Sunday School league for Kyles AME team. That team was the hardest team in the league to score on. They didn't win very many games, but nobody was happy about playing them because you knew you were in for a low scoring night. Later in his early forites, he took up tennis. Now, I don't know if he had ever played the game earlier before, but he caught on fast. He learned that you win by getting the ball back over the net, and he scrambled back a lot of balls. No ball was too far out of play for him to chase, and if you turned your back the ball would come floating back at you. Then, he just refused to accept defeat. As my late brother Bill put it, he wouldn't stay beaten. Playing in one of our Hilltop meets he teamed up with another ball scrambling fellow to defeat a team in doubles that was expected to be in at least the semifinals. But those two fellows simply scrambled back too many balls for their opponents. He really had fun out there on the tennis court, and made friends with a lot of the younger players who dubbed him "Chief". If he had been a bad sport, he would have maybe influenced a lot of the kids to do likewise, but he wasn't that sort of player. If you said you got it, you got it, and he called em as he saw them on his side. Nobody doubted his word, and that made some of the young fellows who thought he was the greatest do the same. That made my job easier in our meets, but nobody ever noticed it.

A look at sports in retrospect

When I talked to him, he was telling me how thankful he was to be around as long as he had, but do you know I bet Jesse Frazier will be walking around straight and tall when he is maybe ninety.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Dear Sir,

Through a friend I learned that on occasion you publish ads for correspondence for people who are confined in penal institutions. At the present time I am an inmate of the London Correctional Institution and I request of you to submit my letter in your paper.

I have been confined now for a long period of time and subsequently I have lost all communication with family and friends in the free world. With this being so I would like to make the balance of this time more bearable by making new friends through corresponding.

My interests are many, but some of the more dominant are music, sports, reading, writing, and people. I'm broadminded and understanding as for the many things that pertain to life, and I enjoy meeting people who are the same.

I will be greatly appreciative if you are able to aid me in my request.

'opportunity' to observe whites for almost 400 years in this country. Even after noting their strengths and very obvious weaknesses we have tended to accord almost superhuman power over the lives of others to them. Some of the comple tricks the white man is supposedly capable of pulling on us stretches the imagination. We are an extremely imaginative race anyway and sometimes we let it work to our detriment. Of course, it is still good sense to never underestimate your opponent but there is such a thing as being ridiculous.

For example: I played defensive end in high school at 6' 3" and 159 lbs. I avoided head on contact with 200 lb blocking backs for a while. But one day I realized that my speed could be used better for head on contact than ducking and dodging. And mentally we do too much ducking and dodging at times. Think about it! We can easily see how the White's stereotyping of us has handicapped them but are we really aware of what our stereotyping of them has done to us.

Fort Des Moines, may be sight for National Monument to Black History

Fort Des Moines made history when it became the site of the first black officers training camp in 1917. The Afro-American Bicentennial Corporation has authorized a study of Fort Des Moines as a historical place which involved Black Americans in U.S. history.

Quoting a news release from the Department of the Interior: "National Historic Landmarks are places determined by the Secretary of the Interior -- upon recommendation of the Advisory Board of National Parks, Historic Sites, Buildings and Monuments -- to possess national historical significance."

Here in Des Moines to do research for the Afro-American Bicentennial Corporation is Mrs. David Shaw of Seattle, Washington. Mrs. Shaw was most fortunate in having the assistance of the many faceted local luminary, Mrs. Elaine Estes, who in her role of librarian, directed Mrs. Shaw to a scarce copy of HISTORY AND VIEWS OF FORT DES MOINES OFFICERS TRAINING CAMP, published in August, 1917 by John L. Thompson, first editor of THE BYSTANDER.

Mrs. Estes is engaged in a history recording project of her own (with an uncooperative tape recorder) and as historical expert arranged for Mrs.

Shaw to interview James B. Morris and James W. Mitchell, two well known local men who were commissioned Second Lieutenants at Fort Des Moines. In attorney Morris' offices the two friends reminisced about military highlights, the racial climate in Iowa at that time and about the national dignitaries who visited the camp during the intensive three months training.

Leafing through the flaking yellowed pages of THE BYSTANDER editions for 1917 brought forth memories both amusing and grim of some of the twelve hundred men who were recruited from the black universities and colleges and from the non commissioned officers already in the military.

The officers commissioned October 15, 1917 were sent to seven widely distributed camps to train the conscripted men and were united as the 92nd. Division when they reached France. To quote from Emmett Jay Scott's 1919 OFFICIAL HISTORY OF THE AMERICAN NEGRO IN THE WORLD WAR: "The gallant Ninety-second Division, composed entirely of colored American troops, received a great number of citations and awards for meritorious and distinguished conduct on the battlefields of France...."

Mr. Morris told how he had been inspired and recruited by George H. Woodson, precedent setting black Iowa lawyer. Lieutenant Morris then served in the intelligence overseas. Mr. Mitchell heard a stirring address in his native Georgia which promised that victory overseas would eliminate designations as white Americans and colored Americans and produce AMERICANS period. James W. Mitchell bought that message wholeheartedly only to return to Georgia as Lieutenant Mitchell and have his mother beg him to leave his home before he was lynched for being "uppity" in his officer's uniform.

On a tour of Fort Des Moines, Mr. Mitchell noted that the row of barracks the officer trainees occupied still remain the southern border of the old parade grounds -- now lush green field dotted with golden dandelions. The old chapel is still in use as are some of the officers quarters. The large training arena for the cavalry's choice horses is a Marine recruiting station. The row of former stables, later converted into Women's Army Corps barracks, now may house the more mechanized equipment of the current U.S. Army Reserves who train at Fort Des Moines.

After the fascinating visit, Mrs. Shaw and Mrs. Estes appeared ready to erect a monument at the Fort's impressive old stone entrance to James B. Morris and James W. Mitchell if they were not so alert, alive and still enthusiastic U.S. history makers.

International Clown Variety Revue at North

Everyone loves a Clown, so all the kids from 1 to 100 can now get ready to have the time of their life. The International Clown Variety Revue is coming to Des Moines under the sponsorship of Des Moines Jaycees, for the benefit of Youth Program. Performances are scheduled at 2 & 7 p.m. on May 19th, at North High Auditorium.

The International Clown Variety Revue, now in its seventh tour, has brought fun, laughter, excitement, and thrills from California to the Mississippi River and well deserves the reputation they have earned.

From the International Showtime television series and direct from Hollywood comes the stars of this year's show --

The Houcs, the world's fastest jugglers. For many years they have been famous for their outstanding juggling of rings, clubs, and a variety of other items and their teetering plate spinning.

The Hartzells, one of the great family names in the spangled world. They astound audiences with their high flying trampoline and the amazing ostrich - Herman.

Sharing the spotlight this year are the Fisher's and their Canine Clowns. These clowns have won the hearts of all that have seen them perform.

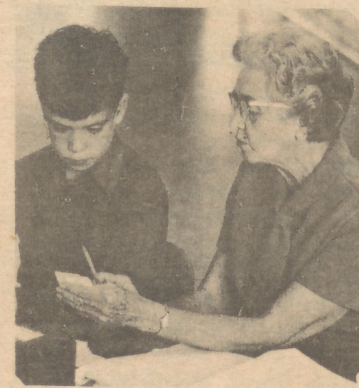

The Wendanys, acrobats supreme, specializing in hand balancing. Miss Heidi, a very clever 15 year-old with a one arm stand and her friend Bosco.

Also on the bill this year -- a pretty young clown who does difficult toe balancing - Miss Belinda.

Many, many more --

AND CLOWNS, CLOWNS, CLOWNS...

May Tour Open For Senior Citizens

May has been proclaimed Senior Citizen's month by the President as a time to recognize the contributions of Older Americans to their communities. More than three-hundred Senior Citizens have worked in 85 non-profit agencies in the City of Des Moines contributing their time and skills in a variety of volunteer jobs. More than 25,000 hours have been served through the Retired Senior Volunteer Program since the introduction of the program in July 1972.

R.S.V.P. will hold a Recognition Tea for volunteers on Saturday May 19, 2:30 to 4:30 in the Employer's Mutual Building at 8th and Mulberry. Special entertainment by the Roosevelt Mimes and Jenna Joyce, vocalist, has been arranged by Mrs. Loren Parker, Chairman of the Recognition Committee. The event will emphasize efforts of Des Moines Senior Citizens to contribute to their community through volunteer service.

The Retired Volunteer Program is designed to promote a meaningful life in retirement and was established to offer older adults the opportunity to share their experience and skills in volunteer community work. It is open to all persons 60 years of age or older regardless of financial status, educational background or experience, and is a service of the United Way of Greater Des Moines and the Volunteer Bureau.

Roosevelt includes Black Activities

By Venise Berry

Under the direction and ambition of sophomore, Donnie Michael, The Roosevelt Black Student Committee sponsored A Black Culture Assembly in the Roosevelt Auditorium on Thursday May 3, 1973.

The program began with the East High Scarlett Singers as they did 5 selections including: God Is Not Dead, Oh Lord Have Mercy, Marching Up Freedom's Highway, Ever Since and Walking With Jesus combined with God Is Love.

The Pianoists, Greg Williams and Calvin Calhoun each had the Piano literally screaming for mercy as the rest of the group was singing the spirituals as they had never sung before.

The members of the East High Choir include: Conzye Jackson, Ethel Newman, Julia Brown, Yana Jones, Sheryl Calhoun, Sandra Deering, Deryl Smith, Diane Banks, Debbie Murray, Linda Cason, Diane Brown, Monica Newman, Cissy Hicks, Debbie Johnson, Jeana Bolden, Margenele Meriwether, Herky Burgett, Toni Murray.

Also in the group: Lavita Woldron, Jean Volineer, K.K. Thomas, Yoland Cunningham, Sandra Stovall, Debbie Burkett, Cerena Grant, Jerri Wilkerson, Eric Carter, Jerry Clark, Valerie Scott, Kim Lee, Venda Smith, Diedra Thomas, Kathy Green, Karen Colton, Michelle Gordon, Patricia Lee and Dennis

Anderson.

"It was really together" commented Greg Williams director of the East High Choir. "The 92 percent White Audience acted pretty much as we expected."

Jan Archer presented a slide presentation entitled, For Black People, Of Black People and By Black People, which showed the struggle of Black People past to present.

Have you seen the skinny little boy who chases the white ghost at night

Face pugged up tracks in his arm and his mind blown his mama is somewhere drinking and talking about survival

Pop in jail or downtown at the Y

The little boy chases the white ghost with his friend

And they get high, and they get high, like cloud nine where everything is fine

Have you seen two little boys running past you with a ladies purse

They stole a black womens purse

The other day, yesterday, today, tomorrow

Face puffed up tracks in their arms, eyes popping out of their heads and their heads and their minds blown

And they het high and they get high

Talking about tripping talking about flying talking about getting high

Have you seen two little boys sitting in Sylvia's stuffing chicken and cornbread down their tasteless mouths and trying to revive a dying heart, shrinking lungs, and dying minds

Have you seen the sickness of our people

And all the while we parade around in robes of our ancestors and wisdom of the Universe

And all the while there are children dying chasing the white ghost

Whitey is dying and his ghost is killing us

Oh beautiful black hands reach out and snatch the death of our young out of our nation

Oh beautiful black minds create a world for children to play with life and not death

Oh Beautiful Black brothers and sisters come together and create life

Come together and create love

Come together and create, create

Come together and create, create

This poem entitled 'Two Little Boys' by the Last Poets was recited along with two original poems by sophomore Fae Brown. The other two poems called Greg Me and Disability and My Eulogy.

Ms. Romona Austin a student teacher at Roosevelt High School from Simpson College and her roommate Trisha Fry performed an interperative dance from Johnny Coltrains 'The Awakening'

The program closed from a very interesting remark from the Master of Ceremonies Donnie Michael who added "When we (Blacks) do something out of the ordinary don't question it as What We Do? When We DO: or Where We Do: but instead question it as Why We Do:

Sponsors for the program were: Ms. Jan McMayhill, Mrs. Art Hokum, Ms Joyce Fant, and Ms. Johan Mann.

"This is the only program of it's nature this year that has not resulted in violence" commented Mr. Robert Williams, The Black History teacher at Roosevelt "and I enjoyed the program very much."

SHRIMP COOL "FIRES" IN BORDER DIP

Meanwhile, back at the ranch, some genius has thought to put shrimp in the chili-flavored dip. A great idea. These chili-with-cheese combinations so typical of South Texas border country, can build a fire. Sweet-tasting, lean-meaty shrimp bites tend, by contrast, to "cool it" for everybody, even the regular clientele of spice-hot dips. Try them! This mixture, a subtle variation, glows but warmly from a cautious addition of canned green chilies which you will find in any store selling Mexican or South Texas foods. Proper dippers would be the large corn chips or your own "tostadas" made by cutting tortillas into wedges and frying crisp in shallow depths of oil.

TEXAS SHRIMP DIP

- 1 can (4 1/4 ounces) shrimp
- 2 cups chopped onion
- 1/4 cup fresh bacon drippings
- 1 can (14 1/4 ounces) stewed tomatoes
- 2 large canned green chilies, chopped
- 2 tablespoons heavy cream or evaporated milk
- 1/2 teaspoon salt
- 2 cups (about 1/2 pound) grated Longhorn cheddar cheese

Drain shrimp. In a large skillet saute onion in drippings 8 minutes or until soft. Add tomatoes (solid pieces chopped) and chilies. Simmer uncovered 15 minutes or until mixture is thick, stirring frequently. Add cream, salt, cheese; stir until cheese melts. Add shrimp. Remove dip to a chafing dish or place on a trivet or other element to keep warm during serving. Makes about 1 quart.

MUSEUM BUFFS WALK AS SOFTLY AS INDIANS

Recently, New York's 102-year-old American Museum of Natural History solved one of its biggest problems — Indian style.

Who would have thought, when the building was founded in 1869, that it would host more than 4 million visitors annually? Certainly not the people who installed the terrazzo floors, who — way back then — unwittingly contributed to the very "now" problem of noise pollution.

Though beautifully constructed to last forever, terrazzo flooring is extremely hard on the feet and — in the large, open halls of the museum — far too sound-resonant for aural comfort.

The latter is especially so because most museum visitors are children, whose young voices and clattering shoes are echoed and amplified by the bare floors, plaster walls and high museum ceilings. This cacophony of sound makes it tough for tour teachers and guides, whose descriptive remarks all too often go unheard.

This problem has been solved, however, in the popular Eastern Woodlands and Plains Indians section, one of the museum's 35 fascinating exhibit halls. A 900-square-yard expanse of blue-green contract carpeting, woven of Celanese Fortrel polyester by Bigelow Sanford, Inc., has just been laid over the hard, bare, resonant terrazzo floors.

Along with dampening the clacking of shoes against stone — and absorbing much of the racket from boisterous conversation and other sources — the soft, padded carpeting provides visitors welcome, comfortable relief from hard surfaces.

And now, museum buffs can walk as softly as Indians — as they view the artifacts of these first Americans.

HURDLER FIGHTS FOR OLYMPIC BERTH

Tom Hill, Arkansas State University high hurdler, shows the form which is likely to make him a member of the U.S. Olympic Team in the summer games at Munich, Germany.

"In adversity, remember to keep an open mind."
—Horace, the Roman poet

Tommy Hill, a hurdler on the Arkansas State University track team, is following Horace's advice not to panic. He's putting more than his mind into the effort, too. He's calling on his courage.

The 6' 1" Hill, a cadet captain in the campus Army ROTC unit, seemed like a cinch to make the American Olympic High Hurdles team for the games at Munich this summer. His best time for the 110-meter (120-yard) event was just two-tenths of a second off the world record of 13 seconds. And he was getting better all the time.

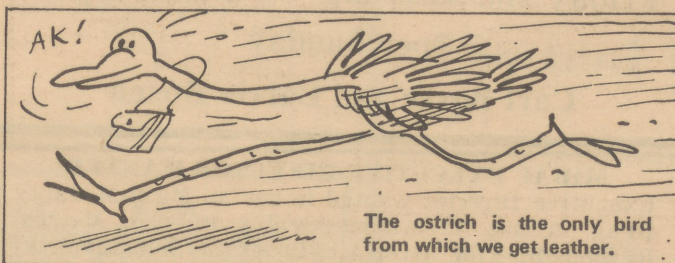

But in December, 1970, in an invitational meet at Monroe, La., the fellow in the next narrow lane accidentally brushed Tommy as both went up to clear hurdles. Tommy came down hard on his right "lead" knee — and tore a ligament in the process.

That put him out of commission — but not permanently. After strengthening the muscles around the knee in a series of weight-lifting exercises during Army ROTC Advanced Camp last summer, he began working out again.

Early this year, he was ready for a return to competition. And in a series of indoor meets he showed a return to the form — and the time — he had achieved before his accident.

The Army ROTC cadet will be heading for the Olympic trials at Eugene, Ore. this summer. If you're a betting man, you can make a wager that he'll win a spot on the U.S. team — and bring home a medal from the Munich games.

The ostrich is the only bird from which we get leather.

FUN WITH FIGURES

The mighty Pacific Ocean, bigger than all the continents combined, covers 63,801,600 square miles. It is over twice as vast as the Atlantic, the world's second-largest ocean, which measures 31,830,700 square miles!

Experiments carried out in 1943 showed that nerve messages travel at a maximum speed of 265 miles an hour and are slowed up by only 15% with advancing age.
