Martin Luther King, Jr. Center Eyes $500,000, A Mote For Some, A Beam For Others

June 13, 1973, a luncheon was held in the gymnasium of the Gateway Community Center. This luncheon was the beginning of what promises to be a successful drive for funds to purchase The Dowling Complex. Mr. Lee Furgerson, Chairman of The Martin Luther King, Jr. Center for Human Development opened the forum. The Lt. Governor, Arthur Neu and other men and women of stature attended. There were well wishers and a lot of applause.

Hands that are pressed together in a gesture of applause cannot give or receive. Well-wishing is sometimes akin to soothsaying. Now can be the time that the whole of the community can take advantage of a long-awaited opportunity: that is being able to put your money where your mouth is.

After the forum Dennis Ashby was questioned about his reaction to the response to step number one in their efforts to inform the business community of the program.

We are not planning on moving and we are sincere. We are not a fly-by-night, instant program, here today, gone tomorrow, heavily loaded administration and stuff like that. One of the questions afterward — they asked how many people do you have working on your staff? We are running this great big hunk of junk with three people: a janitor (a maintenance man), a secretary and myself. I think they were surprised to find that out. Because I think they thought we were heavily overstaffed. And once they found that there were only three paid employees — they kind of took a different look.

Mr. Jerry Thornton is kind of interested. He wants us to produce some thing. Question: Who is he associated with? Answer: Meredith Corporation. He wants us to do some things and get back to him: a financial page, assets and liabilities. Where if they step in and assist us — they are not putting their money out in terms of catch-up money. We don't want the Board or myself to be over a fund-raising drive. We want a separate group to do it from the community. We've got some contributions in the mail already. Like Dr. Kelley with a note saying "A small contribution for a very worthwhile project."

I think the community now has stood up and said we want the Center to make it. And now since the trial and error period is over, it is time for production to commence. Along with people like Raymon Ray to assist us in public relations and the business community as a whole, we're going to make it. I think that they were very surprised when the Indians stood up and said they would assist us in any way; and the Chicanos said they were with us. We are not four or five facets of minorities, but we are one front — in terms of asking for something.

I am kind of sorry that the Mayor and the City Council did not show up. We understand that businesses have their schedules and we can overlook it. But a 55 percent turn-out rate was not bad — when you are talking about getting businesses there. But we were very, very enlightened by what we saw this morning. I believe that we are going to make it with all the assistance that's going to be offered.

Question: What would you really like to say to the community-at-large.

Answer: "If they cannot help us financially, send a letter or a postal card saying they support us and are behind the idea of the facility. I think the business community at large wants to know what is the pulse of the community. If the community cannot send money, but will send their hopes and say we want to participate. If the community rises up and says we'll help, the rest of the community will help. I cannot say what the need is for the community to help us. We are crying out now!"

Model City's New Little Leaguers

On June 28, 1971, the Inner-City Little League began under the direction of Bob White and Wes Chapman, with support from the Metropolitan Kiwanis Club. A total of 85 youngsters were involved in the initial project. The facilities were one diamond on land provided through a lease agreement with the school district. The site was located at 15th and Carpenter (see photo of old diamond). 1971 was the first and last year for the Inner-City Little League.

During 1972 and 1973, an effort was organized to provide for adequate facilities for a continuous little league program. Wes Chapman, Chairman, Inner-City Little League, Inc., has received a grant from IBM for the construction of fencing for one diamond (see photo of new diamond). Plans are also being made for the construction of a second diamond. It is anticipated that the better facilities will encourage and allow for broader participation in organized recreational activities in the central city.

"A small number of kids are presently involved in the University Little League (5356 NW Beaver Dr.) and Raccoon Valley Little League SW 31st and Ash Avenue) but the distance creates a problem for a number of kids wanting to participate. We anticipate a larger number of participants once the league is organized and the diamonds are completed, ranging from 125 to 300."

"The priority of our committee is to obtain the facilities and make them available for a little league program. Hopefully, community interest will allow for the continued development of the little league concept. I see this as an opportunity to provide a recreational program for the youth of the central city that is immediately accessible to them," stated Wes Chapman.

A committee volunteered to continue the efforts of the original project in 1971. The committee members are:

Mr. John Kinning, IBM Corporation; Mr. Robert Usher, IBM Corporation; Mr. Hubert McCathen, IBM Corporation; Mr. Larry Hawkins, Northwestern Bell Telephone Co.; Mr. Al Collier, YMCA; Mr. Al Lang, Small Business Administration; Mr. Carl Cain, Equitable of New York; Mr. Udell Cason, Des Moines Public School System; Mr. John Haskins, Black Playboy Club; Mr. Monroe Colston, Urban Affairs Bureau; Mr. Mike Kulik, Des Moines lawyer; Mr. Wes Chapman, Des Moines Public School System.

Ex-Slave Dies, 122 Years Old

DALLAS. — (UPI)—David Peterson, 122-year-old former slave who saw the end of the Civil war and the beginning of manned space flight, was buried Saturday, June 2.

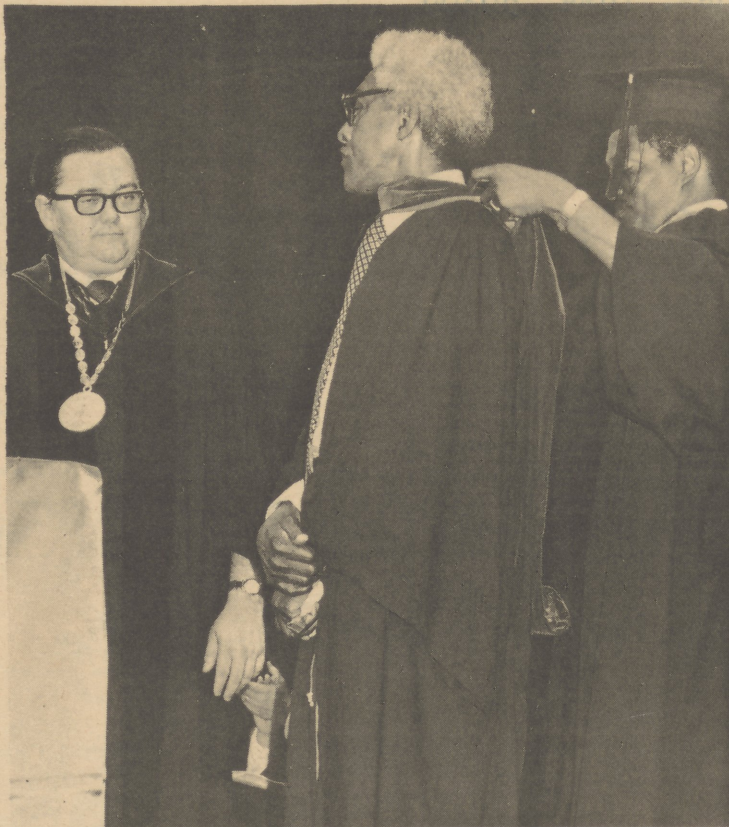

Peterson died after the amputation of both legs.

"The death, really, was quite unexpected," said a long-time friend. "He came through surgery well and it seemed he was on the way to recovery."

Peterson lived in obscurity in a ramshackle apartment which stood on stilts in a grove of trees, giving the appearance of a treehouse.

Parkland hospital officials discovered last March that Peterson was 122 years old when he went to the hospital for treatment of an infected toe.

He was unable to overcome the infection and gangrene developed. The federal government had previously supplied Parkland officials records

UNBOUGHT UNBOSSSED (NBNS)

Rep. Chisholm, whose first book, "Unbought and Unbossed" was an autobiographical account of her childhood and political career, also alleged that at the Democratic National Convention last summer, aides to South Dakota Sen. George McGovern, the party's nominee, intimidated delegates by telling them that if they did not vote for the candidate to whom they were pledged, they would be faced with jail sentences.

McGovern's aides have refuted the charge, noting the delegates were informed that they were legally bound to vote for candidates to whom they were pledged, but that they were never threatened with jail.

"It would be an argument I'd be afraid to use on a delegates it's so palpably absurd," said Rick Sterns, McGovern's deputy campaign manager, adding that New Mexico is the only state which provides criminal sanctions against delegates who fail to vote on the first ballot in accordance with the state presidential primary.

showing Peterson was born Nov. 22, 1850.

He said he was born in Lamateen, a rural Arkansas community that no longer exists. He had lived in Dallas since 1914 and in recent years existed on a small welfare check.

Peterson lived with his 14-year-old great grandson and is survived by a daughter, Lucille Peterson of Seattle, and several grandchildren and great-grandchildren.

When asked how it was when he was freed from slavery, Peterson said: "There was shoutin', jumpin' up and down and fun. Massah came down and told us, 'I command you to be free.' We knew we were glad of something but not too many were sure what."

"My mother, daddy, brothers, seven brothers and five sisters moved to Shreveport (La.). I saw things that we never dreamed of."

Thoughts

From The Living Bible

I will praise you, my God and King, and bless your name each day and forever. Great is Jehovah! Greatly praise him! His greatness is beyond discovery! Let each generation tell its children what glorious things he does. I will meditate about your glory, splendor, majesty and miracles. Your awe-inspiring deeds shall be on every tongue; I will proclaim your greatness. Everyone will tell about how good you are, and sing about your righteousness. Jehovah is kind and merciful, slow to get angry, full of love.

ANTI-BUSING MOVEMENT

WASHINGTON — (NBNS) — Former Texas State Sen. Wayne Connally, brother of former Treasury Secretary John Connally and chairman of the nationwide anti-busing group, charged last week that a recent move by the New York State Legislature has added momentum to a drive to by-pass Congress and amend the Constitution through action by the states.

Earlier, the State Senate passed, 40 - to - 16, a resolution calling for the establishment of a constitutional convention to approve a proposed amendment that would forbid assignment of students to schools to achieve a racial balance.

By doing so, New York became the 11th state to pass such a resolution. If two-thirds of the states - 34 - pass similar resolutions, Congress must convene the convention. However, if the convention should adopt the anti-busing resolution, it would only become a part of the Constitution after three-fourths of the states have ratified it.

Childrens Program During 60th Convention in Detroit

Registration is presently underway for the Children's Program, which will run concurrently with the 60th Annual Convention of the National Dental Association, Incorporated, to be held Saturday, July 28, through Thursday, August 2, 1973, in Detroit, Michigan.

Activities have been scheduled each day for children ranging in age from 3 to 18 years.

For the 3 to 6 year olds, a day school (summer camp) has been provided daily. There is an interesting, supervised, daily program planned with bus service to and from the hotel each day.

Highlights of the pre-teen and teenage program includes a boat ride, visit to Canada, a visit to historic Greenfield Village, Cranbrook Science Cultural Center, a careers workshop, Soul Train Expression parties with disc jockeys. There is also planned a beach party, an evening at the ethnic festival, an Afro-American party, and an evening at beautiful Pine Knob or Meadowbrook for a rock or jazz concert.

The fee for participation in this program is $35 per child and includes transportation for tours, admission fees, insurance, and supervision by trained personnel. Food is only included on trips where indicated.

The deadline for registration in this program is July 1, 1973. An early response will be appreciated in order that early registrations can be made for all facilities. Only a maximum of 25 applicants can be accepted for ages 3 through 6.

HEALTH & SCIENCE

OBESITY?

Psychological factors no doubt bring about obesity in some individuals, says Henry A. Jordan, MD, Assistant Professor of Psychiatry, University of Pennsylvania. However, in all studies done with obese individuals and in all batteries of tests performed, no characteristic personality or problem emerges that applies to fat people. In addition, the incidence of psychopathology is approximately the same in obese and normal weight individuals.

Writing in Obesity and Bariatric Medicine, Dr. Jordan concludes that to date a clear cut relationship between the emotions and obesity has not been adequately demonstrated.

Divide and Conquer

By National Black News Service

Addis Ababa— (NBNS)— Calling the situation "very tense and grave," Somalia "urged the highest organ of the OAU to intervene in the present crisis and urge Ethiopia to desist from her preparation for an aggressive war against Somalia and reduce tension by withdrawing her troops to their normal and original positions immediately."

The dispute has hung over the 10th anniversary celebrations of the OAU, but been avoided in an effort to minimize public disunity. Despite the lack of public mention, Somali delegates had been attempting in closed meetings to get the dispute placed on the agenda.

Somalia and Ethiopia are quarreling over an area in southern Ethiopia known as the Ogaden desert. The area is roughly one-third of Ethiopia and is peopled mostly by Somalis.

Somalia has claimed the area as a part of Somalia. Although Ethiopia agrees that the Somalis overlap into Ethiopia and that historically the area is part of the Somali land, it points out that all OAU members have agreed to respect colonial borders.

The problem of arbitrarily drawn boundaries since the advent of colonial rule in Africa is a continent-wide problem. Common ethnic groups find themselves divided into several countries with resulting conflicting loyalties.

Ethiopia denies that a territorial dispute exists, claiming that the problem is one of demarking a border. "We sent our foreign minister to Somalia to assure them that we were contemplating no attack," said Ethiopian Premier Akiklu Habte-Wold.

President Barre of Somalia participated in negotiations chaired by new OAU chairman Yakubu Gowon, leader of Nigeria, and the two sides have agreed to set up a "good offices" committee. The members of the committee are the heads of the state of Nigeria, Cameroon, Lesotho, Liberia, Mauretania, Senegal, Sudan, and Tanzania.

Somalia hopes that this will be "appropriate machinery for finding a just and lasting solution for the basic dispute between the two countries."

NAACP

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Clarence Mitchell, Jr., director of the NAACP Washington Bureau, was awarded an honorary Doctor of Laws degree by Georgetown University during commencement exercises on May 20. Mr. Mitchell, who has successfully fought for the passage of the current batch of Federal civil rights laws, graduated from the University of Maryland Law School in 1962.

Both countries, however, have been building up their armed forces in the last few years. Ethiopia has the larger army, numbering some 35,000 men who are supplied with arms from the United States.

Somalia has significant firepower though it has a smaller army which has gotten assistance from the Soviet Union.

Reports that natural gas and oil have been discovered in the disputed territory complicates the situation further.

Law and Order

Tensions are high this evening as demonstrations continue to mount in Edenton, North Carolina where SCLC Staffer, the Rev. James Orange was arrested leading a demonstration in protest of the dismissal of Mr. Richard L. Satterfield who has been in the Edenton, Chowan County, School System for eighteen years and serves as band director at the John Holmes High School.

Some of the fifty demonstrators were beaten by the North Carolina Highway Patrolmen. One Young Female Student was forced by a patrolman to walk on broken glass cutting an Artery in her foot requiring hospitalization. The demonstrators were tear gassed after they were arrested.

The Students have vowed that there will not be a Graduation Exercise on June 8 unless the students are released and all Graduating Seniors are allowed to participate in the Graduation Exercise.

Dr. Abernathy, President of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, is scheduled to arrive in Edenton on tomorrow.

FTC, Knox Gelatine Set Agreement on Nutrition Claims

Washington—The Federal Trade Commission tentatively adopted a consent order barring Knox Gelatine Inc. from making false nutritional claims for its Knox gelatin drinks.

The order also cites Thomas J. Lipton, Inc., Englewood Cliff, N.J., which acquired Knox after the challenged advertising claims were written, the FTC said. Lipton is a subsidiary of Unilever, the British Dutch food, detergent and industrial complex.

The agreed-to order would settle an FTC complaint charging Knox with falsely claiming in ads that the gelatin protein in its fruit-flavored gelatin drinks is a high-quality protein that provides nutritional benefit. To the contrary, the complaint alleged, gelatin protein is a low-quality protein of little nutritional benefit.

Five graduates of Des Moines-area high schools have been awarded college scholarships by the Edwin T. Meredith Foundation, Des Moines.

Two of the Meredith-sponsored awards were National Achievement Scholarships for Outstanding Negro Students. Those scholarships went to: Jerald Harris, son of Mrs. and Mrs. James Harris, 7215 Reite, Des Moines; and Dennis Shields, foster son of Mrs. and Mrs. Fredric Sheeks, Grimes.

Three scholarships went to daughters of present or former Meredith Corporation employees. They were: Andrea Dieter, daughter of Mrs. Terese Dieter and the late Berthold Dieter, 4315 N. W. Beaver Dr., Des Moines; Vanda Fickel, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Elvin Fickel, 7129 Douglas, Urbandale; and Doreen Johnson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Johnson, 3604 Thirty-Seventh St., Des Moines.

Winners of Meredith Foundation scholarships are selected by the National Merit Scholarship Corporation, Evanston, Ill., on the basis of scholastic achievement, leadership and good citizenship. Scholarships range up to $1,500 annually, depending upon need, while the student attends the college or university of his or her choice.

First Black Woman Named Woolworth Store Manager

San Diego, Calif.—Mrs. Alberta Wells recently became the first woman to manage a Woolworth store in this southern California city.

But this achievement carries still wider significance, for Mrs. Wells has also become the first black woman in the country to hold such a position with Woolworth, possibly the first with any major national retailing chain.

While the opportunity has long existed for women to hold store manager positions with Woolworth, Mrs. Wells points out that because of various factors many women shy away from such jobs.

She says, "The retail manager works long hours, from 9 to 11 hours a day, depending upon the season, and you often find yourself working on what are normally your days off. Then too, some women don't want the responsibility of the job which also requires exceptional tact with subordinates, often strenuous work and an ability to cope with a shoplifter from time to time."

As Mrs. Wells and nearly 100 other Woolworth women managers around the country realize, however, this is a company with a traditional policy of promoting from within. With proven ability a store manager can look forward to moving on to district and regional office responsibilities and one day perhaps a highly important position in Woolworth's New York executive office.

While such moves don't happen overnight, advancements are definitely possible, for even the chairman and president of Woolworth both started out on the route currently being followed by Mrs. Wells and all of the company's other store managers throughout the country.

To reach her current position Mrs. Wells, following a short period as a clerk, was accepted into Woolworth's management training program. She was able to complete what is normally a four-year course in three years and has received her "diploma" in the form of keys to the Woolworth store she now manages in the North Park area of San Diego.

Woolworth has made a concerted effort to attract more members of minority groups into its management training program, which now numbers some 5,000 enrollees. The company appointed its first black manager in 1929. Along with Mrs. Wells 19 other blacks recently finished the extensive course and have been promoted to store manager positions around the country. This ongoing on-the-job training course provides an "earn while you learn" experience for enrollees and assures Woolworth of a continuing bank of future retailing executives to fill positions of responsibility with the company.

Other blacks recently named managers of Woolworth stores include E. R. Roundtree, Compton, Calif., and O. AN EQUAL OPPORTUNITY EMPLOYER

Heavy Equipment Operator

Isaac S. James

Isaac S. James is about to complete his second week of training as an operating engineer trainee. (More commonly known as a heavy equipment operator.) Isaac, along with 14 other trainees, is undergoing a 6 week pre-apprenticeship program sponsored by the Operating Engineers Local Union No. 234 here in Des Moines.

During these first 6 weeks the trainees will receive both on-the-job training and related classroom instruction designed to improve the trainee's skills away from the job site. The on-the-job training phase of the program will include instruction in the care, maintenance, and handling of various pieces of heavy construction equipment. This equipment, declared surplus and owned by the U.S. Government, was loaned to the Operating Engineers Joint Apprenticeship Committee for use in the project. In addition, Star Equipment Company rented a Mustang End Loader to the project for a token fee of one dollar. The trainees are using the equipment to build several little league baseball fields just northeast of Hubbell Avenue.

After the 6 week pre-apprenticeship training project is over, those trainees who successfully complete the course will enter into a formal three year apprenticeship program. This is much more intensive training that usually consists of at least 6,000 hours of on-the-job training. In addition to the on-the-job training phase, the program includes a minimum of 144 hours a year of related classroom instruction in subjects such as reading, grade plans, elements of electricity, physics welding, and automotive maintenance. This thorough type of training will insure a well rounded journeyman that is completely versed in all aspects of his trade.

POLITICAL AND ECONOMIC POWER

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Stanley S. Scott, Special Assistant to the President, in a commencement speech at Alabama State University in Montgomery, challenged the 531 graduates to believe in themselves and "awaken a concern in all black people to abandon forever the politics of poverty and the philosophy of despair."

Addressing Alabama State's 212th commencement convocation on the "Relevance of Responsibility," Scott urged the graduates to pursue "the new civil rights of the 70's...political and economic power" where "the salvation of blacks in the American society truly lies."

He said: "Nothing matters more to the future of this nation than ensuring that our young men and women learn to believe in themselves and believe in their dreams and keep those dreams with you all of your life."

The dynamic Presidential assistant told the graduates and a capacity crowd that "the economic life of this nation is no longer a spectator sport for Black Americans." He added that "if black Americans are to win this mythical war we've been fighting, we've got to fight it on the real battlefield, and that's through political power and economics."

RARE CHILDHOOD HEART DISEASE

A heart researcher has reported being able to repair damaged cells taken from children with cystinosis, a rare disorder that often is fatal before the age of 10. The cause of the disease is not yet known.

The "test tube cure" achieved in laboratory experiments might lead to a better understanding and effective treatment of cystinosis, said Dr. Jerry A. Schneider, an Established Investigator of the American Heart Association and Associate Professor of Pediatrics at the University of California, San Diego.

He also reported that he is well on his way to developing a test that will reveal cystinosis before birth. Dr. Schneider said that children who inherit it appear normal at birth. Within six to eight months, however, they get into medical difficulty, including kidney malfunction, dehydration and rickets. Death is generally due to uremia, the result of progressive kidney failure.

The mysterious disease must be inherited from both parents, said Dr. Schneider. It causes an accumulation of cystine crystals in body cells. Cystine is an amino acid, one of the building blocks of protein needed for normal body processes.

Round City Hall

Ken Warren

Last week the Moka Region VII Minority Contractor Associations were guest in our fair city for the purpose of bringing about an awareness of the plight of the Minority Contractors in this city. The Regional Executive Director, Mr. Alex Harris, posed some serious question to the city administration's lack of concern. Lo and Behold it has come to my attention that the local gendarmes have been querying local citizens about this brash young man who had the nerve to want to champion the poor, disadvantaged minority contractors. They probably can't understand where he is coming from because he is not advocating Separatism, Black Power, Welfare or the Gimmies. But rather self-sustainment and the togetherness of Black, Brown, Red, and disadvantages white contractors who don't happen to be in the majority. These inquiries are not new to Mr. Harris since he has built an organizational structure that is so successful the Ford Foundation says it is the number one program of it's kind in the United States. No wonder the City Administration wants to know who is this uppity Nigger. I also noticed that even though an invitation was issued to the Honorable Richard Olson, he was conveniently absent. Didn't even send a representative to represent his office. In my opinion that was probably the best thing because it is difficult for a lamb to be in the same arena with a tiger. Those who had the opportunity to hear and talk with Mr. Harris, if they were perceptive at all, attest to the fact that he is a very unusual man; and those of you who didn't avail yourselves of this opportunity missed a real chance to meet one of our great blacks.

A few weeks back it became known that the computer used by the state (TRACIS) is being fed information on Iowa citizens; last week the discovery was that we have a secret police group and now it is rumored that a massive investigation is being launched to check out that subversive organization, the Minority Contractors

Association. Not that they advocate the overthrow of the government, the systems, white folks or any of those minor things they just ask to join the main stream for the purpose of securing MONEY. Heaven Forbid! What Gall!

DREAM TAPE RECORDER NOW A REALITY

Have you been dreaming of the ideal portable tape recorder? . . . One that doesn't snarl you in a microphone cord; one that lets you record with a minimum of fuss, knob-turning and attention; one that virtually guarantees perfect recording results. Dream no longer; such recorders are now a reality.

They are typical of a "new breed" that reflects the forward thinking of companies such as General Electric, and their concern with filling the needs of convenience-minded consumers. The new cassette portables were designed to offer a log of basic capability in a small, light-weight package, at a lot-for-the-money price. They are right-up-to-the minute, incorporating most-wanted features, plus the latest in technology.

For example, the new units feature built-in condenser microphones, among the most meaningful of recent equipment advances. These end the old bugaboo of dangling microphone cord that often brought on disaster - like equipment dashed to the floor because a hand or leg got tangled in the cord. Built-in microphones eliminate another problem, "mike-fright," that prevents people from being relaxed and spontaneous when being taped. The new condenser models also simplify recording; you no longer need worry about how and where to place a microphone for best results. Merely face the set's microphone grille in the general direction of the sound source, and push the "record" button. Because condenser microphones are more sensitive, they reach out farther, bringing in distant sounds clearly.

Since the new "super" models - such as GE's M-8455 - also feature ALC (automatic level control), you need not fiddle with a volume control when recording. ALC compensates for different sound levels. It increases the loudness of distant sounds, and decreases that of nearby sounds. Thus, if you record several people in a large room their voices will all be heard clearly in playback, at nearly the same volume level. In addition, it features the extra pluses of tone control and a carry case. If you record club meetings, business conferences, or use a recorder for classroom note-taking, the combination of built-in microphone and ALC is unbeatable; you get A-1 results every time.

But . . . if you insist on using an optional, external microphone for special purposes (such as recording bird calls and other sounds of nature) the new units permit you to do so.

Also featured in the new GE M-8455 and others in its price class ($50) is automatic end-of-tape shutoff, in recording and playback. If you're forgetful, you'll really appreciate this feature. It saves wear and tear on the machine and the cassette, and conserves battery power.

Speaking of power. . . The new "dream" models also run on house current, and with an adapter, through a car/boat cigarette lighter. Triple power prolongs battery life, gives you more operating flexibility.

To make recording on-the-go easier, the new models were designed with push-button mode controls. These are handy to your finger tips, even when the set is used in its shoulder-strap carrying case.

A suggestion: No matter what tape recorder (or other audio product) you buy, stick with a "big-name" brand, such as GE. Not only will you get a better dollar value, you'll have easier access to better service than that provided by lesser-known companies. The larger the firm, the larger its "customer care" organization. Should you need help, it's available at a handy authorized service station - perhaps just around the corner.

Mrs. Johnson Attends Son's Graduation

Mrs. Rena Johnson attended the graduation of her son, Captain Grady E. Taylor, who has spent more than 18 years, earned 200 units and used 1,320 gallons of gas earning his degree. Not to mention driving one car, 21,000 miles and attending eight different colleges.

Taylor's story is a very unusual one. He has combined a military career with his pursuit of a degree. Taylor, 37, is a business administration major and received his bachelor's degree May 19 during commencement at the University of Arizona. An officer with the U.S. Army Electronic Proving Ground, at Ft. Huachuca, some 80 miles from Tucson, Taylor has commuted from the Fort to Tucson for the past year and a half, completing a degree he started from 18 years and eight colleges ago.

Taylor enlisted at age 18, after trying three years earlier to be accepted during the Korean War. He says of this "the only thing they would let me into at that age was the Boy Scouts."

After six years, Taylor was sent to Officer Candidate School and commissioned. From that time on, he started working toward a degree skipping from college to college as he was reassigned.

Taylor figures that he lost more than 75 units because they wouldn't transfer them or I couldn't finish them up.

He attended Drake University, Iowa; the University of Maryland, Far East Division in Japan; Mary Hardin-Baylor College in Texas; the University of Hawaii; Chaminada College in Honolulu and Cochise College in Arizona, all in addition to more than three years with the University of Arizona and its Ft. Huachuca extension service.

At graduation, Taylor said he believes he has earned the pomp and circumstance. He went "the full gamut—cap and gown and everything."

He now plans working for a master's degree. Although he needs only 30 units for the degree at the university, he is not sure where he will wind up. But this really does not matter to him, he acknowledges. "That's one of the things I learned over the years. Patience, perseverance and adaptability. That, and maybe that I was just not supposed to be successful too soon."

Mrs. Johnson, is, of course, overwhelmingly proud of her son's perseverance and success. We are equally proud of him.

BERKELEY COUNCILMAN'S OUSTER PUSHED BY RACISTS

By Howard Everett

National Black News Service Berkeley Calif.—(NBNS)—In what appears to be a recall movement with strong racial overtones, a group of conservative whites have just about gotten enough signatures to put the question on the ballot.

The target of the action is a black City Councilman D'Army Bailey, who is a 30-year-old lawyer who graduated from Yale Law School and was one of three radicals elected to four-year terms on the Berkeley City Council two years ago.

Many blacks are comparing the effort to oust Bailey with the unseating of the late Adam Clayton Powell Jr. from Congress. Unlike Powell, Bailey has not been charged with anything illegal.

White conservatives have called him an obstructionist and charged that he wants to intensify racial conflicts in an attempt to bring the city government to a halt.

They have also said he is mounting a campaign to discredit public officials.

Bailey says the recall committee is "a small, ultra-conservative faction of the Berkeley community which has had a tradition of opposition to progressive and liberal changes."

Their purpose is to set him up "as an example to all other young, uncompromising and dedicated black people who put the struggles of our people ahead of other priorities," Bailey said.

The recall committee had sought the ouster of all three radicals but the coalition of local political groups decided to recall only Bailey.

More than 15,600 of the 18,871 signatures required for a special election have already been obtained, and they have more than a week left.

But Bailey has counted with a group against the recall, including some prominent national blacks.

The group includes Georgia State Legislator Julian Bond, the Rev. Jesse Jackson of Operation PUSH, and Persy Sutton Manhattan (N.Y.) borough president.

The local movement against recall is headed by the NAACP's Mrs. Mary Jane Johnson. She is also chairman of the Berkeley school board.

"We understand the national implications and significance of this campaign," Bailey said. "If the frightened forces that are behind the recall could succeed here in Berkeley, it would open up a Pandora's box of political assaults upon outspoken black leaders throughout the country."

Another member of the city council Mrs. Ying Kelley, who was elected last month as a radical, agreed that the recall effort was racist. "It is a serious instrument (recall) used against Bailey empty of specific charges except style," she said.

A look at sports in retrospect

With Allen Ashby

Seeing a couple of old baseball players started me thinking about all of the traveling black ball clubs that used to tour Iowa in the twenties and early thirties. The first one I heard of was a team called the Chicago Union Giants. Sometimes people confused them with the American Giants of the Negro National league. They were good enough, it was said to have played in that league. A fellow once said that the American Giants didn't play them because they had everything to lose and nothing to gain, and besides, the Union Giants just might win the game. They featured a pitcher named John Donaldson who was said to be as good as any black hurler one could name, including Satchel Paige. He used to walk into a cigar store, bar, or wherever local sports fans gathered. He would announce himself, and say he was going to pitch that day against the local ball club. Then, so I am told, he would lay ten ten dollar bills on the counter and say he would strike out twenty men for that dough. I hear that he collected lots more often than he paid off. Those guys were so good that when they lost it was news.

Another good traveling club was called Brown's Tennessee Rats. They were said to be a farm club for the Monarchs, and most of their players were supposed to have gone to that club as they developed. I do recall that a couple of local players went that route to the Monarchs, so the story could have some merit. Those fellows played the game like it was played in organized ball. They often amazed local fans with their baserunning, using the then famous fadeaway or fall away slide, in which you threw your body away from the baseman and hooked the corner of the base with your toe, giving the fielder not much to tag. Coming into home plate, a runner would leave a path where he dragged his toe over the plate. They set up double plays like any league club, and like it must have been done in the majors. And I have heard several fellows who played against them say that they were the biggest club that they ever played against. As one fellow put it, Where do they get all those giants? There was another club called the Black Barons, a name that one of our local clubs used later, and they were tough, too. But then, there were some clubs that just came through the state, and were not too good, but because they were black, they drew crowds. These traveling clubs found plenty of competition, because the local white clubs used to hire league players during the month of October, and especially pitchers so that month was always a very good month to come into the state, but you had better have a ball club.

There were also some pretty good black baseball clubs in this state. One of the best was the Algona Brownies. How they got up in that part of the state where there were not very many blacks if any, I don't know. I would guess that they were hired for the season. Several towns around the state would hire ball players from here and other cities around and pay them what was then good money and maybe give them jobs for the summer that didn't involve too much work, but their main job was playing baseball. So I would guess the Brownies were in that category. But they made some fine records up there, winning on the average nine out of ten games they played. I don't know who some of their players were, because this was in the days when I was not a real baseball follower. But the papers up there were full of accounts about them. We got them by going to the library where most of the small town papers were kept. Then there was a fellow who is in the Des Moines school system, if he hasn't retired, who says he knows his home town had a couple of black players, and thinks they may have had an all black club at one time. He has promised to get the papers of his era if he ever gets back to his home town, and find out who the players were.

Another well known club was the Buxton Wonders. Buxton was a coal mining town not far from Des Moines, and lots of people who later lived there moved to Des Moines when the mines closed down. This was said to have been one of the most sports minded black cities in the country. They had one of the first black YMCA clubs, and a good basketball team, as well as wrestling and boxing teams. But back to baseball. You might gather how well known the ball club was when I tell you that for years just about every black baseball player who wanted to impress his friends would say he used to play with the Buxton Wonders. In fact, if all the people who said they played with them really did, they would have had to have about a forty man squad, and maybe a couple of second teams. No way they could have had all the players who claimed them. I don't know how long that baseball team was together, but they didn't lose often enough to worry about. I guess some of their greatest rivalries were with the Des Moines clubs, the Capitol City Giants, the Invincibles, and such. There was a pretty fair club in Boone called the Boone Brownies, who won a lot more than they lost. They had a fellow who played outfield and first base who didn't have any fingers on his hands for catching or throwing. How he caught the ball or threw it was something to see, but he did it, and was a fair hitter, too. I would say that over the years we had some pretty fair black ball clubs in Iowa.

A New Day

Addis Ababa—(NBNS)— Although relations between Tanzania and Uganda remain strained, the 10th anniversary meeting of the Organization of African Unity (OAU) has resulted in a significant breakthrough that could lead to the complete resolution of the long and bitter hostility that has existed between the two countries since the overthrow of Milton Obote, the former President of Uganda.

A mediation committee, headed by Emperor Haile Selassie of Ethiopia has committed President Julius Nyerere of Tanzania and General Idi Amin of Uganda to a four point agreement:

-Uganda accepts the responsibility for the deaths of 24 Tanzanian nationals in Uganda, and will pay compensation.

-Each party will see to it that its territory is not used as a base for armed attacks against the other. Tanzania will see to it that former Uganda President Milton Obote will not interfere in Uganda's affairs.

-Ethiopia will function to see to it that both parties respect the agreement.

-Uganda will not demand the Obote be deported from Tanzania back to Uganda.

In a public statement, Tanzania said that the reconciliation does not signify recognition of Uganda. "It is only a step forward," the statement said.

to an eight nation "good offices committee" for the mediation attempt. Said Barre, president of Somalia, originally planned to stay away from the meeting, but arrived for the last two days after a special delegation composed of foreign ministers from three states went to Somalia to encourage him to come.

Libya attempted to propose that the OAU headquarters be moved from Addis Ababa because of Ethiopia's relationship with Israel in solidarity with Egypt. The proposals did not reach the floor however.

A resolution was passed on the Middle East, warning the Israel's attitude might lead OAU member states "to take at the African level, individually or collectively, political and economic measures against it."

Almost every speaker at the sessions emphasized that the achievement of economic independence would be the key issue for Africa in the future.

A declaration of economic independence was adopted, calling for a survey of Africa's resources, and for the creation of improved infrastructure and modernization of agriculture and industry throughout Africa.

"The ever deteriorating economic and social position of developing countries in relation to developed countries" must be counteracted, the declaration stated.

CHARLES EVERS RE-ELECTED MAYOR OF FAYETTE

Mayor Charles Evers was re-elected as the chief executive of Fayette, Miss., in the town's general election on June 5th. He faced no opposition either on June 5th or in the Democratic primary on May 8th.

Evers was elected the first black mayor of a biracial town in Mississippi in May, 1969.

Three of the five black Aldermen who were originally elected with Mayor Evers four years ago were also re-elected. The two Aldermen who were elected this week — a man and a woman — are also black.

Eleven candidates — including two whites — vied for the five Aldermanic seats in the Democratic primary.

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Representative Cardiff Collins took her oath Thursday as a member of the House from a district on Chicago's West Side, succeeding her late husband, George Collins. Latin America

Confronted with the joint struggle of the Latin American countries, the United States has found its states as overlord in the Inter-American system declining steadily. At the OAS and other Inter-American meetings held in recent years, delegates of the 22 Latin American countries often held discussions to the exclusion of the U.S. delegate and took a concerted stand on the defence of their national rights and interests and on other questions of common concern, and then put their draft resolution to a vote, thus leaving the United States in isolation. What merits particular attention is that at the recent Inter-American social and economic council meeting and the third session of the OAS General Assembly, representatives of many Latin American countries called for the reorganization of the Inter-American system and equal economic and political relationships between nations. This is a new major development in their struggle against foreign intervention and control. The Latin American nations have taken "remarkable steps toward economic unity and independence," said AFP.
