A Rap With Alvin Hayes

"What" about Iowa's Civil Rights Commission?

Interview with Alvin Hayes

I have accepted the position as executive secretary of the commission for the state of Washington. I will be leaving the Iowa Civil Rights Commission and my last effective working day will be September 28. I will be reporting to the state of Washington on October 1, 1973.

It is with a great deal of regret that I assume this new position. I am a native of Iowa. I was born here and raised here. Every job I ever had has been in the state of Iowa. But it is also with a great deal of enthusiasm I look forward to going there and working with the people in the state.

In 1969 at that time the criticism against the Civil Rights Commission was that it was not effective, functioning, and meaningful organization. It had on file at that time 106 cases. It had 92 cases backlogged not investigated. I cleaned up that back log. That backlog didn't amount to a hill of beans.

The problem with the commission at that point was there was no decisions being made. In the four years that I have been here I have attempted to build into the Commission those interpretations and understandings of the law, as I felt that they should be. To base those interpretations and understandings of the law upon cases we could find in the area that were uncontested and undisputed cases describing and identifying cases. And we use federal cases to add meaning or interpret Iowa Civil Rights Act.

We had one case here in the state of Iowa that I got involved in two weeks after I came to the commission that has gone on to the Iowa Supreme Court. It has helped to clarify in some ways the Civil Rights Laws. That is the Iron Workers' Case involving Mr. Roe.

So, what we have been doing over the four years is to improve our interpretation on techniques and understanding on what

Alvin Hayes

Civil Right Law is about and to ask our legislation to give us more money. To give us a chance to deal with the problems we have not been able to reach.

This has nothing to do with my selection to leave. I have been looking for a job since June of last year. I have had two interviews in that time and got turned down. After applying for those two jobs, they were aware of my desire to leave. They were unaware of this one.

They got my letter, it was delivered to them at Monday night at 7:30. That is when they got my official notification that I was resigning. The governor got his official notification Tuesday afternoon.

I didn't hear any sighs of relief and I didn't expect to from those two particular areas. The Commission itself has supported me very well. They have flopped around. They had their heads buried in the sand. They didn't want to see any rocks or anything coming at them. They never chastised me for doing what I did in any one particular area or for any of the statements I have made. I have never been chastised by the Commission for making any kind of statements. The ultimate result would have to be if I didn't make it, they would have to. I took the flack. I took the flack before, I am tired of taking it!

(In answer to the question If out of a staff of 12 that you are missing five and those five were of the investigating capacity?)

Out of my present staff I am short one investigator. I am short a number of people, but I am only short one investigator.

There are no Blacks on the staff at the present time. There are two new applicants that I am aware of who applied for the compliance officers positions. They are good candidates. We have conducted some interviews with those people.

No one as far as I know has applied for my job.

The concept of housing in this agency is practically nil. We did something in the Estes Park, Colo.: Tuesday, August 7, was John's birthday. I kept thinking of him all day.

Since my partner had a blister on the back of one foot, we could not go mountain climbing. It was too cold and dark to go to the lake, so we went to Hidden Valley in the National Park, the beautiful ski lodge. One drives right to the lodge. Practicing economy, we went in without our purses. We soon had to return because we had set aside some gifts. Added to my purchase was a sandwich and coffee though we had our daily lunch with us. Remember we are dieting. We are having a good time and losing weight. I am now 122 lbs -- want to reach 115 lbs. Maybe? Only maybe!

We returned via the rock museum. My friend had a pair of amethyst earrings made. Were beautiful. She found it frustrating to select matching stones. Though we reminded her to allow for a nose in between the stones. (Makes matching stones easier, you know!) Inexpensive event: $1.29 including tax; the matching stones only 20 cents apiece.

We drove toward the Rocky Mountain National Park, where my friend received a golden age pass. As the clerk completed the transaction, she gasped that the woman just before my friend had been Mrs. Alf Landon, of Topeka, Kansas, widow of the presidential candidate, Alf Landon, who ran against Franklin Delano Roosevelt in 1941 on the Republican ticket. Both women regretted not having noticed the great lady! Next as we drove along, we saw a coyote cross the road before us. He looked very much like a young German Shepherd dog. This marked the second time we had seen a coyote. The first time was two years ago. So we felt very lucky to see yet another!

Finally we pulled in home, back to our cottage. As usual, I threw back my bedspread and climbed into bed with my book on Dr. Tom Dooley, "Before I Sleep". My friend announced excitedly, that "here was a car with an Iowa 77 license. Then said "It's Marita and Jack Mastrofski." With that she was out the door with me behind her!

These were long-awaited guests. With them was their daughter, Robin, and her two year old daughter, Danielle Rebecca. We were so happy. The six of us had a glorious reunion. My friend asked them to dinner. The six of us went to the Sun Deck, a beautiful place by the highway. The party drank German brown beer except Marita who preferred Jack Daniels' Black Label. The favorite menu was trout, boned. Dieting forgotten, we so had dessert. Mine was cherry pie!

The next morning our friends returned for us to take us to their cabin near Allenspark. This is where Charlie Eagle Plume's Indian Jewelry shop is and where there are bears. Real, live bears.

The cabin is located in back, rough country, far removed from electric and telephone lines. The drinking water they buy and the other water they bring from the brook. They use gas for lighting and it makes for brilliant white lighting.

The kitchen is complete with shower. The water is supplied from a large pail situated overhead. The special shower hose with nozzle extends from the pail.

The cabin is extremely primitive and very beautiful. It is owned by a couple in the foreign service, who have been detailed in the Middle East and in Africa. At present they are in Tanzania. They have been vacationing in an area which is a game preserve.

They had to learn to treat the servants as did the well-to-do natives. Otherwise, these people would never be able to find jobs again. They would be truly unemployable. It was explained that this is why the peace corps met with difficulties; in the minds of the natives, someone working in the peace corps should not live as the natives but live in very high class and be tyrannical. One was stupid to live as the natives and deal with them on their level. Idealism apparently is unknown in underdeveloped countries. Materialism and bossism is important to them.

My friend and the Mastrofski's went for a climb of Meadow Mountain. Robin and the baby and I remained behind and enjoyed relaxing on the two chaise lounges on the long front porch. We were entertained by watching the humming birds feed at two feeders located on the porch bannisters. I learned that the male was the more beautiful. He had a blue green back, a hot pink band on the front of his throat, his head and under body was a gold tan. They were all very lovely and so many came and went.

I declined mountain climbing because of the bear scare. It seems they are seldom seen.

Dinner was prepared by Robin. The main dish was from a recipe invented by the Bishop of Denver, who did not care for fish on Friday. The dish consisted of mushrooms, fresh tomatoes, wild rice and black olives, and of course seasoning. It was accompanied by another hot dish called broccoli salad. She served very large, dark rye rolls. We concluded with a fresh fruit salad.

Manala Hendred, daughter of Mrs. Maehenri Ewing, 1133 Burlington Terrace, left Des Moines Sunday, August 12 for Augsburg, Germany. She will be employed by the U.S. Government, teaching elementary students on a military base. Her contract is for 1 year, and open for renewal at the end of that time.

Miss Hendred is a former graduate of Iowa State University, Ames, Iowa. For the past two years, she has been employed by the Urbandale School System, teaching at Blackhurst Elementary School.

Round the City

By Ken Warren

The latest in a series of the comedy tradies perpetrated by Community Development funded agencies came to my attention recently. It seems one of the administrators of a program under the public health umbrella is using paid informers to whip members of his agency into line. In this case it is not definitely known by this reporter if this person was hired for this particular purpose or if it was a occurrence that came into existence by chance, this is something you will have to determine after viewing the facts. The first point I wish to bring out is that the right or wrong of the individuals is not the question but rather the method used smacks of conspiracy. The persons employed by this agency by the nature and complexities of their work must use city cars for transporation. The allegations made were (1) that they were using the cars improperly (2) they were taking longer breaks and lunch hours than authorized. These charges are serious I must admit but having worked for the city myself and being familiar with many city officials this is a very abused privilege by many of the city staff, not that I am condoning the above abuses because they are very wrong. The real tragedy in this situation is that one of the members of the staff in question participated in most of the infractions that occurred then suddenly got religion and went to the Father Confessor (the director of this project) and said Father I have sinned and wish to tell all. Lo and behold the great Father Confessor said "My daughter because you have come forth and told the truth I forgive you, go on your way and sin no more." He then ran a impromptu investigation of the persons involved, called these persons into his office and proceeded to threaten and harrass them with dismissal and other little jewels such as "sit down and shut up." Not only does he adopt the posture of Father Confessor to informers but also the Father of all the children (of all ages) who work for him. I wonder what educational facility he received this type of administrative training? He then proceeded to inform his employees that he was sending a letter to be included in their personnel file or should I say all but the person who he had given absolution of all sins. A incidental fact that possibly should be included is that the persons receiving the letters were all black and the forgiven and accusers were all white not that I am saying this incident has racial overtones as it could be politically motivated. Looking at it from a political aspect, in my opinion many blacks have been removed from their jobs to keep them from gaining a power base from the standpoint of the number contained within the city government structure. So it is difficult to differentiate between racial and political assassination of blacks under the present administration. I know it will be said by those who oppose my particular views that we have blacks employed in all areas of the city structure, this is true but most of them are in menial employment capacities. The higher echelon employees are either handcuffed if they tend to be productive or are the oreo computerized picture window variety. It is too bad that this director doesn't know that the best method of control of employees is by instilling confidence and trust in the accomplishments of the agency and the ability of the director to be fair and impartial in his dealings with his employees. The best administrators I have worked for or have been involved with didn't need devious methods to control their employees. To the person who informed on the others remember "What Goes Up Must Come Down."

Vice Principal in Waterloo School System

Larry Harris

Des Moines' loss will be Waterloo's gain this school year as Larry Harris, formerly employed by the Des Moines Independent Public School System as a Home-School worker, will be leaving to assume a new post with the Waterloo School System.

In most instances I have known informers are not particularly liked or respected because if they inform on one person it makes you wonder who is next. Before I close this article I want to say to the people who have been censured, we who know what your daily chores are and the adversities that confront you that mere money cannot compensate for, know that you have been and are doing one HELL OF A GOOD JOB so don't be discouraged just continue some of us are on your side and appreciate your efforts.

Harris will begin work as Vice-Principal of Central High School, a relatively new high school in Waterloo with an enrollment of approximately 1200, on August 20. His duties will be in the areas of curriculum, discipline, teacher evaluation, inventory, and various extra-curricular activities.

Harris, who received his undergraduate Bachelors Science education and secondary school administration Master's degrees in education from Drake University, had been employed by the Des Moines Public School System since 1969. Prior to that, he was employed by the Department of Social Services as a Family Counselor, a position that involved working with juvenile delinquent youth and foster home supervision. He also worked with disadvantaged youth when he was employed as a Youth Opportunity Worker with the Iowa State Employment Service.

A resident of Des Moines for 19 years, Harris and his wife, Barbara, are the parents of four children. They presently reside at 1347 Chautauqua Pkwy.

Iron Worker Apprentice

David E. Talton

David E. Talton was accepted this year as a pre-trial Iron Worker Apprentice by the Joint Apprenticeship Committee of Iron Workers Local No. 67 here in Des Moines.

A 1966 graduate of Monroe City High School in Monroe City, Missouri, David hadn't been in Des Moines too long before visiting the Apprenticeship Information Center at Iowa State Employment Service. Here he was informed about the various possibilities of entering an apprenticeable trade, and after serious consideration, chose the craft of structural steel worker (Iron Worker) as the occupational choice he most wanted to follow.

As an Iron Worker Apprentice, David will be taught how to erect, assemble, and install fabricated metal products mainly in the construction of industrial, commercial and

VETERANS ADMINISTRATION

Q - I am receiving a 60 per cent service-connected disability compensation. I have a wife and two children. My 17-year-old child was married in January. When will my compensation payments be reduced?

A - At the end of the calendar year in which the child was married or on earlier attainment of age 18.

Q - Are Veterans Administration doctors up to date on new medical knowledge? I see the doctors generally have to take continuing medical education courses.

A - Yes. All of the VA hospitals are affiliated with medical schools, colleges or universities, or other educational institutions, and most VA doctors are on the medical school staffs. This give VA a great advantage in continuing medical education.

large residential buildings. He will also be taught how to do alteration work such as installing steel stairs and window guards to existing structures. Iron Worker Apprentices are also required to attend related classroom training during their apprenticeship at least a minimum of 144 hours a year. This classroom training is an integral part of any well rounded apprenticeship program. It is there that the apprentice is taught the theoretical aspects of his particular trade. In the case of an Iron Worker Apprentice, this will include classes in blueprint reading, drafting, and mathematics applicable to layout work.

Employment in this particular trade is expected to increase rapidly through the 1970's. New jobs will be created by employment growth and by the need to replace experienced Iron Workers who transfer to other occupations, retire, or die. Retirements and deaths alone are expected to result in several hundred job openings annually.

Information on this trade as well as others in the building and construction industry can be obtained at the Apprenticeship Information Center, Iowa State Employment Service, and through the Des Moines Area Outreach Program the housing area, except issue an order to cease and descent. My experience with an order to cease and descent is they don't cease and descent. They continue more rapidly.

So we have not had the power to breakdown barriers. As a result we had to turn to federal agencies in area of housing to get the support we need.

The Civil Rights Commission is not a mirage. It has some positive aspects. It is there. It can be used to build on and to improve on. It can be developed in the area of law development - case law. It can also be used to develop interpretations, to strengthen and to influence by rules and regulations promulgate by Civil Rights Commission.

These things can be done, but they can not be done if political influence is asserted on the Civil Rights Commission to prevent it from doing so. To prevent it from things that needs its attention that we can reasonably identify as problem areas. The Commission's strength lies in its ability to function fairly and unequivocally against anybody, regardless of who it is. Regardless of political influence, how much money they give in a political campaign, how many employees they employ, who their friends are, or anything of this sort. This is the bases of Civil Rights Commission is conceived. If the Commission can't address itself in that way, then it can not succeed.

When an organization like John Deere comes to the Iowa legislation and says we want to introduce a bill to wipe out the right of the Civil Rights Commission to initiate patterns and practices against charges of discrimination and very nearly gets it passed through the legislature. That is asserting in my opinion political influence. And that is what happened to the Civil Rights Commission in the last legislature session.

I am urging the Commission to go outside the state of Iowa. If you recruit in the state of Iowa a white person is going to get the job. There are no Blacks in the state who can handle this kind of position. So I'm urging them to go outside of the state. There are no Chicanos in this state who can handle this position, except possibly one, who is chairman of this Commission. I don't know if he would even want this job. If they are going to do an affirmative positive action thing, I urge them to go outside the state.

Certainly in the executive position, as the executive secretaries in various agencies. Commission on Aged & Commission Employment of Handicapped, they have women in executive positions. They have no minorities in this state; Indians, Chicanos, or Blacks are not directors of anything with authority to do anything. If this agency is going to be affirmative action, this agency should at least have people from those groups as part of the consideration for this job. And it should be such a way that it is competitive and that they have a chance at the job. I can't think of no one I know in the state of Iowa for the job.

It is a frustrating position, because you are at odds no matter what you do, you get it from Blacks, Mexican Americans, Indians, women, governor, mayors, chief of police, fire departments. You get it from everybody if you do your job. It can be a very noncontroversial position if you don't do anything. I'm looking to see how long the next director is going to last, because in my opinion the lifespan for a director of this agency should be no longer than three years, if he does his job.

I know the problems of Iowa, as I see the problem, if he does his job, they will get rid of him in three years. I had no anticipation of lasting more than three years. I consider myself very fortunate that I lasted four years. I feel my effectiveness here is no longer in existence. I could not continue here and be an effective director. Also I have considered the positive aspects. I turned down a job a year after I got here, with the city of Omaha. I turned down a job as the director of the Commission for the state of Kansas. A man can not continue no matter what his principles and ambitions and refuse those kind of job offers if he is going to consider the obligations that he has to his family. This one came along with a very good listing. I took it. The horizons are beautiful out there in terms of what a person can do and goals of achievements. The lifespan maybe longer, too, in terms of how a director might function out there.

Profile-

ISAAC HAYES —

Black Moses has a "thing" for luxury, as he will tell you should you ask. Luxury is fairly new to him, and it is a long, long way from picking cotton to help support an impoverished family. Growing up Isaac Hayes meant even attending school regularly was a dream. His family's constant need kept him from attending school yearly, but he managed to graduate from high school and with the diploma came seven scholarship offers, none of which he was able to accept because of his family responsibilities. Having once considered studying medicine, he could not fulfill that desire and instead put his musical talents to practical use. Known several years ago in the Memphis, Tennessee area as "Sir Isaac" of Sir Isaac and the Doo-Dads, Black Moses was not really making it. One evening he was asked by a Stax Records bandleader to fill in as a piano player at a local night club. He was eventually hired by Stax as a backup musician, and from there began to write songs. In 1964, with his partner David Porter, Isaac Hayes began to succeed in the music world. While his first album, Presenting Isaac Hayes, was not an immediate hit, his second, Hot Buttered Soul, sold more than 3½ million copies by the end of 1971. After such a fantastic success, one would expect Isaac to have acquired an abundance of self-confidence. Not so; when asked to write the music for Shaft, he had doubts as to his ability to do so. So much for self-doubt, the score from Shaft has earned a total of seven awards, two of these being the highest possible in the worlds of music and motion pictures. He was awarded a Grammy in 1972 for having produced the best original score for a motion picture or television special, and the coveted Oscar for the best original song from a film. At the ripe old age of almost 31, Isaac Hayes has beaten the odds and emerged as Black Moses, a title well-earned and not to be disputed in the field of innovative music. Billy Eckstine has paid him a supreme compliment by signing with Stax records so that Isaac might be his producer. And we have been paid an equally beautiful compliment — we know that Isaac Hayes knows he is producing Shafts and Hot Buttered Souls for our pleasure.

GLOWCHILD

Ruby Dee has selected a number of poems by young Black poets and produced Glowchild. Humor and hurt are present here, anger and outrage as well. As a reader, you won't like all of the poems, and Glowchild does not come with a written guarantee. It does come with a promise; it promises that you will react and relate. "Isn't Life Peculiar?" has an unknown author who writes, "Isn't Life Peculiar?", said Jeremy "Compared to what?" replied the spicer. The author may be unknown to you, but his sentiments certainly aren't.

My favorite poet in this book has got to be Alfred Duckett. He uses few words, but those that he does use speak eloquently enough. Two of his many poems follow:

QUERY

All this moon jive may have its worth
But when we gonna get down to earth?
(and)

CAN I GET A AMEN

"Love it or leave it"
Signs on cars and trucks say,
Imo make my own sign
"Change it or lose it some day."

He's a realist who has a way of "truthin'" that lends wry humor to thoughts usually tedious because of their unrelenting serious nature. Glowchild is worth having if only to read Alfred Duckett.

One final poem to convince you of your desire to own this book,

ANXIETY (Norman Jordan)
I am not afraid of gray hair, or wrinkled hands
But of an old mind.

Give yourself a gift of Glowchild. It is a book of hope, it is a kind of assurance of a positive future because it represents the wisdom and strength of young Black people. It is a pleasure to read again and again, and it is a total Black effort. The poets, the editor, and the publisher are Black. That's a whole lot of positive for $4.95. Buy it, read it, share it.

Mr. America USA

Jim Morris

"Mr. America." "Mr. USA." Both of these 1973 Amateur Athletic Union titles are held by a soft-spoken colossus from Los Angeles named Jim Morris. And if "Black is Beautiful" can be realized in one man, the male black beauty stateside has to be 6'1", 215-pound Jim. But Jim represents all America, not just the black community.

These titles represent the top of the bodybuilding pyramid in this country. Thousands of men compete yearly in AAU contests and, until this year, no one had taken both titles in the same year. Further, at age 37, Jim is the oldest to hold either title or both. He also took the "Mr. America" title by the largest victory margin ever.

To appreciate the significance of Jim's accomplishments, consider that the United States according to the 1970 Census, has 98,912,192 men. AAU officials have guessed that over 50 million of them have sets of "iron" (weights) laying about in garages or attics, in closets or under beds. Why? Simply, because we male chauvinists want to look better, to better show off our masculine plumage.

Jim acknowledges that he is the second black to win these AAU championships, which date back to 1946. "Chris Dickerson, from New York City, won 'Mr. USA' in 1969; next year he took the 'Mr. America' title. This year Willie Johnson of Ohio and Nathan Le Blanc, San Francisco, both black, were finalists."

No one can doubt Jim looks good ... but how strong is he: Well, his lifting records, set at a body weight of 181 pounds, are: clean & jerk, 370 pounds; snatch, 285 pounds; press, 325 pounds; for a total of 980 pounds. He set them when he was New York State Champion.

How do bodybuilders differ from weight men? "Bodybuilding is more creative than weight lifting," states Jim. "In weight lifting, you concentrate on getting a weight overhead; that's the ultimate whether you're using a snatch, press, or jerk. On the other hand, body-building is aesthetic -- almost creative. Whereas an artist works with oils or sculpture to realize himself, the bodybuilder realizes himself through his own body. The bodybuilder concentrates on weight training and on nutrition."

sports retrospect

by Allen Ashby

Most of the year I have been reading and listening to people who argue that there ought to be paid line callers at tennis matches. Now, that usually involves at least eleven people, and that would take some dough. But there is a good argument for having paid callers. They might not mind the abuse that they have to take from some guy who finds himself losing a match and wants to have something to blame it on. Last winter, during the professional matches here, I got real mad at one of the players. The lineman was calling the side line, and the ball lit just over that line, but landed on the baseline. Naturally the lineman called out, and really got a going over from the player. I thought that if I had been in that fellow's place, I might have just got up and left the line. There isn't anything in the rule that says that a player may have an official removed. He can protest to the umpire or the tournament referee or manager, and it is up to those people as to what to do. But, so far, nobody that I have seen has had the guts to stand up to a protesting player and refuse to remove a lineman. I don't know why. I think that a large part of the protesting by the pro's is showmanship, and some of it is done to intimidate a lineman so that if he gets a close call, he will rule in favor of the protester. Now, if the fellow has been having trouble with his calls as I did once in our Hilltop doubles finals, he should take himself off the line, and I did that, too.

This acting by the pro's is having its effect on the younger players. It is hard to stress sportsmanship to them when they see what are supposed to be the best players in the world raise hell and get away with it. Now we have kids barely in to their teens trying to make each other mad so they can win. We had two calls for an umpire for the juniors in our meet. We were able to persuade them to continue play without officials, once by preaching sportsmanship to a couple of little girls, and by telling four older fellows that they had to take each other's calls or all four come off the court. That should not have been necessary. But when players are playing for a lot of money, sportsmanship has to take a back seat, for the idea is anything goes to win.

Then I would stress to the teachers who are handling the kids that they include court manners and acceptance of the other fellow's decisions as part of their training. Certainly behavior on the court should be a part of any tennis course, no matter how cheap the lessons come.

I wonder how it would be if there were not so many line callers. For instance, the umpire in his high seat could call just about anything on his side of the court, including the sidelines and the center service line on his side. If the server were serving from the other side into the opposite court, the umpire could call the center line for that serve. Then you could have another high seat on the other side of the court, and that fellow could see all the things on his side that the umpire sees on his side. You would need two base linemen, who should also be high, and they wouldn't miss anything. Now in the really big meets they have a net cord judge, but we wouldn't need that. Do you know, four people could do a fine job of calling a match from the places I have mentioned, and in the case of the pros, they wouldn't be so handy for a player to take out his anger on when he got what he thought was a bad call, as if he could play a close ball and call it too.

Wonder what will happen to the boxing program at Gateway if the fellows have to move. You just can't go out and get enough space to train boxers like you buy a candy bar. I have been looking the old Katz drug store on 19th and Keo, and I often wonder why that building couldn't be used for some sort of recreation program. Personally I would like to see indoor tennis courts there, but that would involve raising the roof, and that along with the cost of the courts would cost someone a helluva lot of dough, and I don't know how it could be gotten back. So, maybe they could set up a boxing program there, not only boxing, but wrestling, judo, karate, or what have you. There is enough room there, and one could build showers and locker rooms. Do you think the thing would be supported? That would depend on who headed up the program. He would have to really hustle to get it going, but I think it would make it. Turn back the calendar about ten years, and I might try it myself.

Car Removal Project

A joint effort to rid Polk County of junked and abandoned motor vehicles is now in operation. The City of Des Moines and Polk County have agreed to combine efforts to remove 2,200 such vehicles within the next 11 months. The service is offered through the Junked and Abandoned Car Removal Project and is free to any resident of Polk County.

The project is financed with over $54,000 in Des Moines Community Development Program funds and $23,000 from Polk County.

Clean & Fix Up In Prime Service Areas

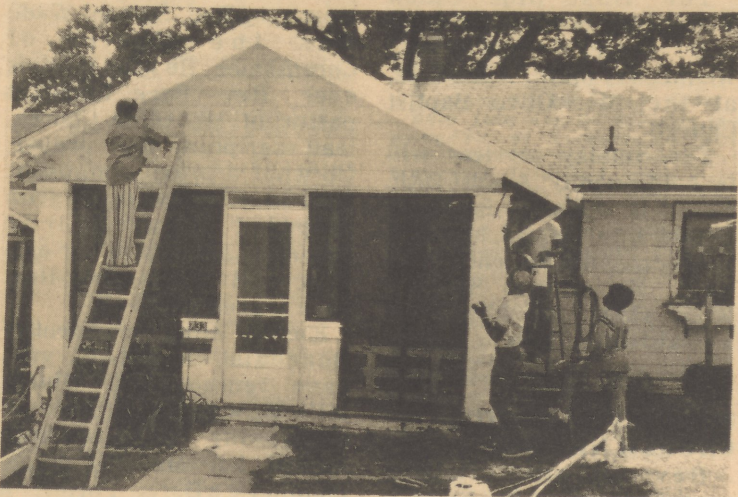

A total of 108 youths, ages 14-18, have been working this summer to clean and fix up the six Community Development Prime Service Areas. The youths are employed by the New Horizons Neighborhood Rehabilitation Project, which is aimed at providing services for residents of the six Prime Service Areas who ordinarily would be unable to do the work themselves.

The program is financed primarily by the Des Moines Community Development Program which contributes $93,566. Other funds come from the Governor's Youth Opportunity Program and the Neighborhood Youth Corps.

There are three teams of six young people within each Prime Service Area and a supervisor assigned to each team. The youths are recruited from the Prime Service Area in which they work, and their families must meet certain income guidelines. There are three certified counselors who supervise two Prime Service Areas each. The counselors are also responsible for arranging the jobs to be done. The jobs include painting, mowing lawns, and other general handyman work. The youths are paid $1.60 hour for 32 hours of work Monday through Thursday.

Left to Right — Robin Brooks, 1531 12th St., Age 17; Harry Bolden, 1812 7th Ave., Age 15; Counselor Frank Fair, 3000 Grand Ave.; George Davis, 1332 Washington St., Age 17; and Tony Vaughn, 1505 Mondamin St., Age 16, paint a house at 1132 14th St. Place, the home of Jenevieve Lucas 93 as part of the New Horizons Neighborhood Rehabilitation Project.

Friday is "Enrichment Day." The groups spend the mornings planning next week's activities, having "rap" sessions or guidance sessions. During the second half of Enrichment Day, the youths choose from a variety of cultural and recreational activities, including bowling, trips, hearing speakers, watching movies, etc. Any costs incurred in Enrichment Day are paid for by the youths.

The Neighborhood Rehabilitation Project is part of the Des Moines School District's New Horizons Summer Work Program, which provides over 750 summer jobs for young people, and is one of over forty projects funded by the Des Moines Community Development Program.

Skyway Toll to Increase to 50 Cents

The Chicago Skyway toll for passenger cars will be increased to 50 cents Tuesday.

The increase from 35 cents was approved last May 24 but could not be implemented until the end of the price freeze.

The increase had been ordered by Federal Judge Richard L. McLaren in a suit by bondholders.

Death Stalks (OEO)

Washington, D.C. (NMS) — (C) — Alvin J. Arnett recently made a visit to Capitol Hill to obtain Senate approval as the new head of the Office of Economic Opportunity, but the trip proved to be wasteful. Because of Judge Thomas A. Flannery, there may be no OEO for Mr. Arnett to head.

Flannery, a 1971 Nixon appointee to the federal court, ordered the transfer of 11 antipoverty programs of OEO to other government agencies. Some of the transfers included: Job Corps to the Labor Department; Operation Headstart to Health, Education and Welfare; and Migrant Assistance to Housing and Urban Development.

In ruling contrary to prior court decisions on the fate of OEO, Flannery maintained that the transfers were consistent with previous policy. OEO had transferred about 12 programs to other agencies before the administration decided that the war on poverty had "brought peace with honor."

When Arnett appeared before Congress he seemed unsure of his position on OEO. By trying to seduce the Senate Labor and Public Welfare Committee while also remaining faithful to the President, he gave the impression of double-talking.

In one breath he said that he thinks that OEO should be abolished as the President requested, but when asked by Sen. Walter F. Mondale (D-Minn), "Is it fair to say you would like Congress to prevail (on keeping OEO alive)?" he replied, "Yes".

Arnett tried hard to distinguish between his official opinion and his personal views. He wasn't too successful, but did promise that he would urge the President not to veto any legislation that would continue OEO.

But if Flannery's decision stands, Nixon will not need a veto. Arnett will have only three programs to oversee, and probably not for too long.

Mis-used words

Last week we discussed the words integration, segregation, and desegregation. We understand now that the black schools have always sought integration, and never fostered segregation. You cannot desegregate a school that has never been segregated. Therefore the words segregated, and desegregated are out of place when used in reference to a black school. Segregation is the results of some people who thinking themselves to be superior, put up barriers to separate themselves from others. This is not true of the black society.

Our word for today is isolation.

The pet phrase used by the various school boards is, "Minority Group Isolation." The word, and the phrase is deliberately misused to confuse, and mislead the general public.

Today, black people are called isolated by the school board when they have their own community, their own business, their own schools etc. (Isn't it strange they weren't called isolated when they lacked the meagre necessities of life, that others have had for years.)

No man is regarded as isolated when he is in his own home, or at his own school, or his own community, and among his relatives and friends, and every avenue of his life is open, to friend and foe alike. Some people may call it isolation, but I call it living real good.

Isolation means to be set apart. It implies with force, other than of itself. Most elements have a natural tendency to come together. They are dependent upon one another. Atoms are dependent upon one another. (The human body is a large mass of atoms).

Therefore isolation utilizes the action and the act of separation, and is an unnatural condition. Thorndikes dictionary says, "people with contagious diseases should be isolated". People don't isolate themselves. They are isolated. People may withdraw, or separate themselves. But isolation implies an outside force, and not normal. You, isolate a germ, or germs. (one by one). You, isolate people with infectious or contagious diseases. You, isolate incidents, but not a group of incidents. Isolate (oneness) (implies singularity).

My children are not isolated when they are among relatives, and family and friends. They are isolated when the school boards take them (forcefully) and transports them in little groups into hostile unfriendly territory away from family and friends.

That gentlemen is Minority Group Isolation. Now the question is Why?, have these educated men gone to such lengths to alter the true meaning of these words.

I wonder if the Government will stop bombing Cambodia long enough to drop some food, and water on the starving Africans.

The latest word I heard was, that you can't buy imported hamburger with food stamps, and you can't trade off your food stamps for money. Dear Lord, will you please give the rich man back his steaks, so that he will leave our hamburger alone. Thank you.
