Announcing his candidacy for the two-year at large seat on the City Council is Fred Williams Jr., age 33, of 1535 McCormick Street, Des Moines. He graduated from East High School and served three years in the Armed Forces, he was honorably discharged in 1962. Mr. Williams is married and the father of two children ages 6 and 8.

This summer Fred graduated from the Des Moines Area Community College and he will be continuing his education this fall at Drake University with a major in Political Science. Plan New Family Health Center

Plans are underway for opening ceremonies for the new Family Health Center at Broadlawn Polk County Hospital in Des Moines, according to Charles C. Ingersoll, administrator. They are set for 2 p.m. Sunday, September 23, with a public open house following, from 3 to 4 p.m.

The Family Health Center will serve as headquarters and focal point of the family practice medical training program at Broadlawn, under the directorship of Dr. Loran F. Parker.

The Center is set up as a model family practice clinic with four separate suites of physician's office and five examining rooms, plus laboratory, X-ray room, minor surgery unit, waiting room, clerical offices, conference room and director's office.

Fred Williams, Jr.

Organizer

(2) Youth Counselor for YMCA

(3) Member of YMCA Intercom Committee

(4) Member of YMCA 5 Year Comprehensive Planning Committee

(5) Board of Directors of the Model Neighborhood Credit Union

(6) Vice Chairman of the Logan Prime Service Area Priority Board and Alternate to the Community Development Central Advisory Board.

The City Council over the past years has generally demonstrated a lack of sensitivity and commitment to ensure the development of the city and particularly in the area of a progressive attitude toward the problems facing the citizenry of Des Moines. Such problems as sewage disposal and water hookups, adequate mass transit especially for the poor and elderly, adequate recreational facilities for youth, housing rehabilitation and a more responsive and representative City Government.

A significant tool to be used for redirecting the resources and energies of this city are the federal revenue sharing funds. Elected officials must become totally aware of the appropriations at the state and local levels, looking not only at the specific use of revenue sharing proceeds but at the resulting changes in the use of other funds as well. The effect of lowering property taxes with revenue sharing funds may well be to benefit of the property owners but careful study and evaluation should be undertaken by the representative of the citizens to assure that this is the proper step that should be made and that at a later date this does not become a burden rather than a relief to his constituents.

The City's redevelopment of downtown Des Moines is essentially a necessary item, however the part dealing with the Botanical gardens and the Theatre in view of the cost factor needs to be reconsidered as to whether these sums could be put to better use.

The present City Council needs a man who is in tune with the times and yet not so far removed from the majority as to not be in tune from a people aspect of government. physical accomplishments are a necessary part of our overall city structure but our most important asset is people. I ask your support in becoming that needed man and your representative on the Des Moines City Council.

Homemaker Services

The Iowa Council for Homemaker Home Health Aide Services, of which Des Moines - Polk County Homemaker Health Aide Service is a member, has recently incorporated. The Council had its beginning in 1967 but now has grown to a group of 62 agencies, each working as a Homemaker Home Health Aide Service in an Iowa community.

Mrs. Frances Shambaugh, Director of the Home Care - Homemaker Service of Des Moines - Polk County, has been elected President of the Iowa Council for Homemaker Home Health Aide Services. Vice President is Ms. Jane Faust, Eldora, Director of the Hardin County Homemaker Health Aide Service, and Secretary is Ms. Mavis Kelley, Des Moines, Consultant in Career Education for the Iowa State Department of Public Instruction.

The first Homemaker Service began in 1962. By 1967 a cluster of groups formed a council, and now in 1973 the newly-incorporated Iowa Council for Homemaker Home Health Aide Services has 62 Agency members. All are community-wide, non-profit groups which place trained, responsible workers in homes when illness or crisis threatens normal family living. The Homemaker-Health Aide assists with personal care of the ill or handicapped, simple household chores shopping, meal preparation, and child supervision.

Member of the Iowa Council for Homemaker Home Health Aide Services from your county is Mrs. Frances Shambaugh, Director.

1973 Public School Registration Set

New student registration for school-age youngsters in the Des Moines Public School District will be on Thursday and Friday, August 23 and 24, from 9:00 a.m. to 4:00 p.m. at each school.

This two-day registration period is for students who have recently moved to the Des Moines School District and for those students who have moved from one school attendance area to another within the District during the summer.

For kindergarten enrollment a child must be five years of age on or before September 15.

Children who were eligible for kindergarten and were registered last spring do not need to register again.

Orientation for all 7th and 10th grade pupils and other pupils new to the school system will be held in each junior and senior high school on August 31.

Progressive attitudes attracted her to city

The "progressive attitudes" of Burlington's city administration attracted Charlene Jenkins to her new position as administrative intern.

Ms. Jenkins, 33, 2036 Osborn, is toiling with budget details and the workings of the administration on her first full week in city hall.

Her position is a permanent one, created for a person who will be involved in the working of all city departments. Following employment for the last three years in the Burlington Head Start program, Ms. Jenkins answered the city's want ad because she thought this would be the "ideal job" for the type career she is interested in.

A Keokuk native, she lived in Burlington for a short time after high school before moving to Chicago and becoming an executive secretary for a newspaper publisher. She returned here three years ago and became involved in the Head Start program.

She was instrumental in forming a state-wide workshop to train social services workers from the 19 Head Start agencies in Iowa. She was also part of a trio which wrote a "human resources curriculum" for Southeastern Community College. The curriculum is presently under study by the Iowa Dept. of Public Instruction; after adoption

Dubuque Human Rights Report

Race and sex discrimination in employment is a "widespread practice in the city of Dubuque," a Dubuque Human Rights Commission report has charged.

"Business and industry," the staff report says, "as a segment of our community have little desire and virtually no self initiative to eradicate the problem of discrimination."

The Human Rights Commission, the agency of city government charged with the enforcement of city anti-discrimination codes, approved and issued the three-page report at its monthly meeting last night.

The names of Dubuque area businesses allegedly practicing discrimination were not listed, but Commission Chairman, Jim Collins said the commission won't hesitate to call offending companies into a public investigation if employment practices are not improved.

The report puts it this way:

"As an enforcement body, we fully intend to use the powers invested in us to their fullest extent to insure compliance of local, state and federal statutes by SCC it would create a two-year Associate of Arts degree program at the local college preparing students for a career in human resources work.

But for the time to come, Ms. Jenkins is involved in what she describes as an "innovative" city government.

"They want people to become very involved in government and I like that kind of administration," she said. Her salary is $8,808.

regarding discriminatory practices in employment."

Collins said of the report, "We decided to make public what we had known for a long time."

The indictment of Dubuque's business community resulted from study of discrimination charges filed with the commission, from local research and from "interaction...with individual citizens, groups and representatives of business, industry and labor," the report indicated.

It points specifically to commission figures indicating that half its total 58 discrimination charges have come during the last 5½ months — although the commission has existed since 1970.

Of the 29 charges filed this year, the report said, 26 are in the area of employment.

The report called on "all segments of leadership in the community" — businesses, industries, labor organizations, churches and the Dubuque City Council — to "acquire and initiate the impetus that will bring about change."

NAVY FLOATS CRAFT AT RIVERVIEW

The Navy was on hand advertising its agency on Thursday at Riverview Park's Speed Boat Concession. It had launched a handsome gray miniature of the Battleship Massachusetts.

Manning the boat was Petty Officer 2nd Class Gene Kellar. He later made room for his partner, Petty Officer 2nd Class Buddy Overle, to share his space in the boat. The two cruised about firing their six guns, loving every minute of it. Wishful boys and girls crowded about envying the boat.

In the crowd gathered for rides in the motored boat, were three attractive children: Fred Farley 13, and his sister, Dee Dee Farley 11, of 1317 McCormick Street and their friend Tracey Mash 1573 College Avenue.

VITAMIN E AGAINST AIR POLLUTANTS

A Duke University Medical Center researcher claims he has evidence that vitamin E may eventually serve as a protection against air pollution.

Reporting at a recent symposium for pharmacists and pharmacologists at Ohio State University, Dr. Daniel B. Menzel said that a diet rich in vitamin E can help protect the lungs from the effects of air contaminants. This could be a step toward prevention of emphysema and other chronic lung diseases associated with air pollution, he asserted.

"AN EQUAL OPPORTUNITY EMPLOYER"

Fannie Jackson Coppin Educator 1836-1913

Fannie Jackson Coppin was born a slave around 1836 in Washington, D.C. A devoted aunt, who earned only six dollars a month, saved $125 and bought Fannie's freedom.

She lived with relatives in New England so that she could attend school. When she was 14 she went to work for a family who had no children.

The wife took an interest in her and helped her with her studies and taught her to sew. Fannie saved her money so that she could attend Rhode Island State Normal School.

She decided to become a teacher and with the help of her aunt and a $9 a year scholarship, Fannie entered Oberlin College in 1860.

Young women were not expected to take courses in mathematics and Greek, but Fannie took these subjects, and also French, which was not considered a part of the regular curriculum at that time. She felt the honor of her race on her shoulders, and therefore always tried to do her best.

Many freedmen from the South poured into Ohio during that period and settled in Oberlin. Moved by their need, Mrs. Coppin formed a class to teach them to read and spell.

This was a rewarding experience because it gave her the opportunity to enter her chosen field of work and the opportunity to help her own people. Then, during her senior year, she taught two classes at the Oberlin preparatory school.

A request was sent to Oberlin from a Friends' school in Philadelphia for a young black woman to teach the classics and mathematics. Mrs. Coppin was selected, and in September 1865, she began teaching at the Institute for Colored Youth, now known as Cheyney State College. After only four years, she became principal of the school.

She was keenly aware of the social and economic problems faced by her people in Philadelphia, and recognized the need for not only training in the classics, but also in trades and industrial skills. The Institute had originally been established to offer industrial training, but had somehow changed its emphasis. She was greatly influenced by the exhibits from foreign trade schools at the Centennial Exposition in 1876.

It disturbed her that black boys in Philadelphia could only learn such trades in the House of Refuge or the penitentiary. She vowed to make it possible for her people to have the opportunities to learn skills which would enable them to compete for jobs in various other trades.

Mrs. Coppin's first task was to enlighten people about the advantages of industrial education.

In order to gain support for the kind of program she wanted to develop, she spoke before any gathering that would hear her, not only in Philadelphia, but elsewhere. Her efforts resulted in the interest and financial support she needed, and thus it became possible to expand the curriculum.

The new courses offered were: bricklaying, plastering, carpentry, shoemaking, printing, and tailoring for boys; dressmaking and millinery for girls; and for both boys and girls, stenography, typing, and cooking.

Mrs. Coppin gained a wide reputation as a result of her outstanding work at the Institute. In 1888 she represented the A.M.E. Church at the Missionary Congress in England. She delivered an eloquent speech which won her a special commendation.

At a political meeting in Philadelphia the mayor was so deeply moved by her intelligence and speaking ability, that he appointed her to the Board of Examiners for Clerical Workers.

In 1900 after thirty-five years at the Institute, Mrs. Coppin left to join her husband who had become a bishop in his church and had been assigned to South Africa. There she became actively involved in missionary work among the women.

Her autobiography, Reminiscences of School Life, and Hints on Teaching, which appeared in 1913, was dedicated to the aunt who bought her freedom.

Coppin State College in Baltimore is named for Fannie Jackson Coppin.

William Coil

William Coil is Painters Apprentice

William Coil Jr. was accepted this year as a painters apprentice by the Painter's Joint Apprenticeship Committee of local 246 here in Des Moines.

As a painters apprentice, William will undergo an intensive training period designed to bring him to the maximum skill level of a journeyman painter. The apprenticeship for painters usually lasts for 3 years (6,000 hours) of on-the-job training, in addition to 144 hours a year of related classroom instruction. This related instruction is in such diverse subjects as color harmony, paint chemistry, estimating costs, and making, mixing, and matching paints. He also learns the relationship between painting and the work performed by the other building trades craftsmen.

The employment outlook for painters through the 1970's looks good. A rise is anticipated in construction activity and this is expected to create a demand for painters. Moreover, recently developed paints, such as polyester and vinyl coatings and epoxys, that are heat, abrasion, and corrosion resisting have resulted in new uses for paints and additional job opportunities for painters. Furthermore, a growing number of painters are expected to be needed in the maintenance departments of large industrial and commercial firms.

Information on this trade and other apprenticeship programs is available at the Greater Des Moines Outreach Program and through the facilities of the Apprenticeship Information Center, Iowa State Employment Service.

Blacks Win In Virginia City

For the first time this century blacks have won political control of a Virginia city. Voters in Petersburg, a predominantly white community of 46,000 residents, elected blacks to fill four of seven seats on the city council, and the council in turn elected Hernandez Fauntleroy Jr., a black Petersburg businessman, to serve as mayor.

Fauntleroy was one of only two incumbents who survived the elections in June, which also saw Mayor Arlie G. Andrews and Vice Mayor Dr. Fletcher G. Wright beaten in the city's first ward election in 50 years.

Although it was a sweeping victory for black voters it was also a hollow victory. The council elected in June and the mayor elected in July will serve only one year, due to court litigation against the city's former election procedures.

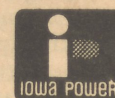

Petersburg had been a predominantly black city for several decades, until city officials in 1971 annexed 7,200 persons, most of them white, from the counties of Dinwiddie and Prince George. When the council, which was elected on an at large basis and had only one black (Fauntleroy) of five council members, approved the annexation, black voters filed suit against the city charging that the annexation and maintenance of the at-large election system would dilute their voter power. A three-judge panel in Washington upheld their contention (RRR Vol. IV, No. 6), and ordered Petersburg to go to a ward system or risk losing the annexed area, which city officials claimed was needed to increase tax rolls.

Part of the plan for resolving the difficulties included a provision that an interim council be elected with the primary responsibility of drawing up a permanent election system based on ward voting. The old city council approved the plan by a vote of four to one, Fauntleroy dissenting.

Round the City

By Ken Warren

The time has come to write an article that gives me one of the greatest satisfactions of my short journalistic career. At least two members of our black community have decided to join in the race for the city council seats available. To the readers I wish to stress the importance of this decision on the part of these gentlemen. It is extremely important that there be representation for the disadvantaged, unsophisticated and poor people in our community who now are left out of the scheme of the political manipulations. I hope that the whites who fit the above description do not make the same mistake they made with some of the government programs they should have taken part in. That mistake was that they did not want to be identified with black people or a supposedly black program. Poor people are allies whether they want to be or not because the denial or lack of opportunities does not recognize color lines. I am quite sure the gentlemen who will be trying to secure the council seats know they cannot afford the luxury of alienating any segment of the community and they surely will understand the problems of the poor because they have been in that position most of their lives. One more point to seriously consider is the art known as splitting the vote for the purpose of minimizing the effectiveness of the candidates involved in an election. You saw how effective this can be in the past election. The councilman who used racial slurs as part of his campaign won handily because two of the contestants who might have won or at least changed the course of the contest failed to recognize what was happening. I cannot say this situation was intentional but it did accomplish the desired effective planned results. I would not advise either of these gentlemen to withdraw but to remember they need all the breaks they can get and then some because this will be one of the toughest battles they will ever be involved in probably in their whole lifetime. The present power structure will no doubt resist this tremendous change with all of its strength and many tricks available to them also remember they have the mechanisms to work from. This administration or most of the city population is not receptive to a minority being on the city council, they may have to mingle socially with that person and also he may not be capable of understanding their concepts of compromising the principals of the people they supposedly represent because he will be different or at least that is their belief. In order to further pursue the efforts and platforms of the candidates I plan to interview the gentlemen in question and bring you the viewpoints they represent. Remember the important issue is the placing of someone who will actively work for and represent the have not segments of our community. All other issues such as personalities, racial differences, geographical areas and other irrelevant subjects are not worth consideration. This is a NOW WORLD so let us try to get together and be NOW PEOPLE, forget the past and strive for a greater future.

National Urban League

The second phase of the National Urban League's Voter Education Project was announced today by Vernon E. Jordan, Jr., Executive Director of the League, as he also named the nine cities in which the project will operate.

In its first phase last fall, the project was operative in ten cities, registering over 50,000 voters, thereby increasing black registration by an average of 13 percent in each of the cities.

The new project cities are Albany, N.Y.; Syracuse, N.Y.; Springfield, Mass.; Lexington, Ky.; Louisville, Ky.; Seattle, Wash.; Tacoma, Wash.; and Portland, Oregon. The ninth city is Indianapolis, Ind., which was also included in the original ten.

The National Urban League moved into voter education last year after a study by its Research Department disclosed that in some northern and midwestern cities black voter registration ran as low

UNICEF Speeds Aid To West African Children

In an emergency program to help combat the disastrous effects of the prolonged drought upon the health of millions of West African children, the United Nations Children's Fund has rushed tons of high-protein food supplements and medicines to the six stricken countries, according to Poul Larsen, UNICEF Emergency Operations Coordinator.

The shipments are part of UNICEF's emergency relief program for the children and pregnant mothers of Mauritania, Mali, Niger, Chad, Senegal and Upper Volta, to which the

The cities selected for the project were Stamford, Conn.; Flint, Mich.; Battle Creek, Mich.; Fort Wayne, Ind.; Springfield, Ill.; Sacramento, Calif.; New Brunswick, N.J.; Dayton, Ohio; Columbus, Ohio and Indianapolis, Ind.

Not only were voter rolls increased appreciably, the actual black turnout on election day in the ten cities averaged 68 percent as compared to a nation-wide total of 54.5 percent.

Lessons learned from the ten cities will be utilized in the second phase of the project Mr. Jordan said. He also added that the project, which has received the endorsement of both the Democratic and Republican national parties will continue to be non-partisan.

By September, it is anticipated that 72,000 pre-school children and pregnant or nursing mothers will be receiving daily allotments of CSM, a mixture of corn, soya and milk that supplies sufficient protein to meet the body needs. Profile-

Melba Moore

Most people remember first noticing Melba Moore when she overwhelmed Broadway in the play "Purlie". Melba remembers her first Broadway experience differently. Her first appearance on the "big" stage was actually as a member of the cast of Hair, the freaky play that alternately delighted and repulsed audiences in 1968. She was one of the three ladies wearing that size sixty sequined gown in the act that satirized the glamour of the Supremes.

Show business is nothing new to Melba. She's been singing since the age of four, and "not in church either" as she puts it. She was raised a Catholic and "Catholics don't produce soul singers". Rather, her parents were show business people, her mother a singer and her father a jazz saxophonist. Because she had been urged to take up a "respectable career, Melba taught music at a Newark, New Jersey elementary school for a year. Her heart wasn't in it, so she left that learned profession for singing appearances in cocktail lounges and background singing in recording studios. It was during one of the recording sessions that she met the composer of the music for Hair, and at his suggestion auditioned for a part in the play.

Her performance as Lutie Belle in Purlie brought her the Antoinette Perry award for best supporting musical actress. It also brought her a salary of $1,000.00 a week, quite a jump from the $130.00 she earned for her part in Hair. After a year in Purlie she began to perform in top-notch night and supper clubs. On her opening night at the Empire Room in New York, 200 people were turned away. Such a success might make many entertainers forget everyone but themselves, not so with Melba Moore. She performs regularly in prisons around the country because, as she put it, "Too many Black people are in jail". Melba does for her people what she does best - her music is her personal gift to those otherwise forgotten. She considers staying in contact with Black folks an important part of her life. She's right and alright.

A BOOK FOR YOUNG PEOPLE

By Habiba

Granville T. Woods and Lewis Temple are important Black people. But present either of these names to your school-age children and they will probably be unable to identify the reason for their importance. Both of these men were inventors whose ideas have contributed towards the United States' technological progress. Your children can learn of these men in a book, Eight Black American Inventors.

Because our present school system tends to overlook the fact that Black scientists existed beyond George Washington Carver, this book is a necessity. Black Inventors will introduce your children to eight "unknown" men who come alive in the book not only as scientists but as people with a background including childhood. There are photographs of the men as well as simplified drawings of their inventions and the principles upon which they work. Equally important is the book's reference to the problems each inventor encountered because he was Black, and the determination and courage exhibited in the face of such problems. Parallels are drawn between the invention as it was originally and its adopted use in life today.

This is a totally readable book for adults as well as children. Granville T. Woods and Lewis Temple await your family's discovery!

Little Stevie Wonder, boy genius, musical child prodigy has grown up. Stevie Wonder is part of the Motown heritage.

Today, with thirteen gold records to his credit, Wonder defines musical universality; creating a sound of relevance that is as appealing to middle-aged housewives as it is to Panther Party members.

Stevie was born in Saginaw, Michigan, his family moved to Detroit in his early years.

"When we talk about blindness," he continued, "the thing I talk about is doing things that would make things easier for not only sighted people but for the blind. Things that could help a man become self sufficient."

Singing in the Whitestone Baptist Church of Detroit, Stevie was a junior deacon. He once had plans of becoming a minister but jokingly admits he "decided to be a sinner instead!"

Stevie saw it all: "You have to learn to get to know yourself, always know where you are as a person, what your likes are. I had to learn this at a very young age, and fast."

retrospect

by Allen Ashby

One bit of news that I was glad to get was the news that my friend Chet Brewer had been elected to the Mexican baseball Hall of Fame. Chet was the only Des Moines player that I know of who made it big in the old Negro league. In his day, Chet was right up there with the very best, including the great Satchel Paige. Given the same amount of ink that Paige got, I believe that he would have been equally as famous as that one. Chet's handicap to recognition in this country lays in the fact that when the Negro league was starting its downhill drop, some of the players such as Paige went out on their own, and contracted to play with various teams, and so Paige got in I don't really know how many games and owed loyalty to no team. While this was going on, Chet was pitching in such places as Cuba, Central America and Mexico, rather than this country. He was maybe at his best in that old winter league that was out on the Pacific coast, and included such big league names as the Di Maggio brothers, Jimmy Fox, and others that I can't think of now. This was a league made up of cities such as Los Angeles, Frisco, Seattle, and such, and included lots of major league players looking for an easy buck. Well, the black team was called the Elite Giants, and Brewer pitched for them. I can't recall his won and lost record, but the Giants won the pennant by such a margin that major leaguers were barred from playing in the league the following year, because it was said that they were demeaning themselves by playing sand lot ball. But some of the fellows told Chet they were glad they didn't have to face pitching like the Giants had in the majors. Some sandlot ball. But I was glad to hear that he had finally been given some recognition, and I think that eventually he will make into the hall in this country.

One of his jobs today is scouting baseball talent for the Pittsburgh Pirates, and I think he managed one of their clubs a while back. Was hoping for a picture, but somehow we missed connections, and I didn't get it.

If you want to see what might be a pretty good basketball game, go to the Vet's Auditorium August 28. You recall that great Drake team that nearly beat UCLA in the national meet a few years back? Well they keep getting together to play a team of current AAU players for Charity, and besides seeing a ball game, you will help the cause of the charity these players are doing this for. I can't name them all, but two of them stand out in my mind. Willie McCarver, and Dolph Pulliam McCarver because he came down the floor as if somebody was chasing him, and he was tough on defense. Dolph Pulliam, I remember because he was the best faller since Phil Scott used to come over from Britain to box, and get himself kayoed. Well, Dolph wasn't knocked out, but whenever he could get an opponent to make any sort of contact with him, he would hit the floor, and look up at the official. Sometimes he would get his foul. But Dolph's strength was defense, and maybe he can do it yet. They aren't too old. Come see for yourself. And your money will go for a good cause.

How about this?

Remember last week when I argued for a different setup in tennis officiating and officials? I thought I was being original. Well, I picked up my latest copy of World Tennis, and there was an article by Arthur Ash. The thing was mine word for word. It looked as if one of us wrote the other's article. And I don't think we saw each other before we wrote our stuff. But one of us should do something about it. Always did say that nobody had a corner on ideas, and this proves it.

Football, Anyone?

With our high school grid season about to get under way, a fellow asked me if I thought the other high schools would catch up to Dowling. Well, of course, nobody wins forever. Maybe this might be the year, and if it isn't surely next year. Taking a look into the season, I look for Tech to come up with a good year, and North to do much better than people expect. East may have more trouble trying to field a winning combination. Roosevelt and Hoover will probably be rough and Lincoln may have trouble replacing Phil Hayman. Now see how I hit it.

Ali Knocks Out Lovelady..... More or Less.....

On September 14th, the Feilen Boxing Club of Des Moines was all set to put on a Pro-Am Card at Vet's Auditorium featuring Des Moines middleweight Lamont Lovelady against Al Quinney of Buffalo, New York. The 8-bout card would have featured 4 pro fights and 4 amateur. Lovely would have made his debut in a main event...10 rounds. But he's been knocked out of the picture by the Muhammed Ali-Ken Norton re-match set for September 10th from San Diego. That fight will be seen in Des Moines at Vet's Auditorium via closed circuit and contracted for by the Feilen Boxing Club. Harvey Feilen, president of the club, feels that the people of Des Moines can always see Lovelady at a later date; but it's a rare treat indeed to watch Muhammed Ali...especially against the man who broke his jaw in their last encounter. The closed circuit showing will start at 8:30, Iowa time, with a prelim to be shown first. It's all live and direct from Inglewood, Cal. tickets will be 8 dollars apiece. In the meantime tiger Lamont Lovelady will have to wait to make his debut in a main event...so Ali knocks out Lovelady...more or less.

Netolicky In Red Cross Game

Bob Netolicky of the Dallas Chapperalls, formerly of the Indiana Pacers and a former center for Drake University, has agreed to play in this year's Red Cross benefit basketball game at Vet's Auditorium on August 28th. The 6'9" 225 pound center originally from Cedar Rapids, will play center for the Blue Cross Blue Shield AAU Team.

TENNIS TOE

Tennis elbow is a well known recreational hazard of tennis players. Now a New York physician reports in a recent issue of Archives of Dermatology that some tennis players complain of pain in one or more of their toes.

According to Richard C. Gibbs, MD, the pain of "tennis toe" is associated with the appearance of hemorrhage beneath their toenails.

VETERANS ADMINISTRATION QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Q - I am a female veteran planning to go to college fulltime under the GI Bill. Can I claim my husband as a dependent for increased allowances?

A - Yes. A law enacted in October 1972 provides that for Veterans Administration benefit purposes, a "wife" shall include the husband of a female veteran and the term "widow" shall include the widower of a female veteran.

Q - I received an honorable discharge recently after serving three years in the military service. Am I eligible for a Veterans Administration business loan?

A - No. Eligibility for this type of loan must be based on active military service before January 31, 1955. The Veterans Administration suggests you try the Small Business Administration.

Q - As a disabled veteran, I received a $2,800 grant from the Veterans Administration toward the purchase of an automobile which now requires engine repair. Can the VA help out on this?

A - No payment may be authorized for the repair, maintenance, or replacement of the automobile, itself. However, the VA does pay for these services on adaptive equipment needed to operate the cars.

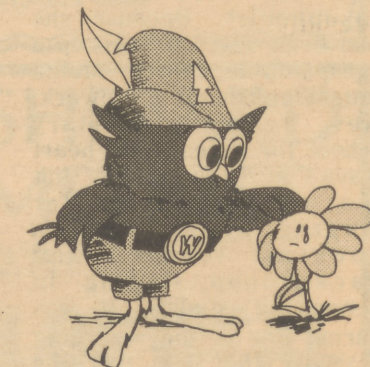

THE 'PROTECTIVE EFFECT' OF DRUGS FOR HIGH BLOOD PRESSURE

Treatment of high blood pressure with modern drugs, if given early enough, may have a "protective effect" against changes that lead to arteriosclerotic vascular disease, according to William Hollander, MD, Professor of Medicine, Boston University School of Medicine.

High blood pressure causes changes in arterial blood vessels, and these changes in turn bring on strokes and heart attacks, Dr. Hollander said at a symposium on hypertension sponsored by the State University of New York at Stony Brook and CIBA Pharmaceutical Company as part of its Medical Horizons Postgraduate Education Series.

"The antihypertensive drugs currently in use appear to prevent these changes," he explained.

Berkeley vs. D'Army Bailey

D'Army Bailey

D'Army Bailey is Black, handsome, and 29 years old. He is also a city councilman in Berkeley, California, a city known for its contemporary political attitude. When D'Army announced his intention to run for a council seat, he met with virtually no opposition. That was in 1971, and today, just two years later, D'Army is the subject of a massive recall campaign. He has the dubious distinction of being the only Black city official in the history of the U.S. to be recalled. And to take this matter one serious step further he is being recalled because, as one opponent put it, "He is a son-of-a-bitch." Not because he has done anything unethical or illegal, but because he has "introduced and made public the spectacle of personal hatred." An interesting man is D'Army Bailey, with an interesting past.

He came to Berkeley from San Francisco just two months before the election for city council seats was scheduled. He approached the Berkeley Black Caucus and told them that he wanted them to support his candidacy as well as that of his friend, Ira Simmons. D'Army told the Caucus that if they did not support him he would run his own campaign using his personal funds. (D'Army's source of income has come to be known as his "mystery money" because a thorough investigation has failed to uncover the source of the money, seemingly unlimited.) The Caucus did support him, and the voters elected him, knowing nothing more about him except that he was an articulate, intelligent Black man with a style all his own.

Bailey grew up poor in Memphis. He learned the survival game early in life, and takes pleasure in having been heartily disliked by most of the school administrators he encountered throughout his elementary and high school years. He was expelled from Southern University for leading demonstrations against the school's administration. He then attended Clark University, where he proceeded to lead a demonstration against Clark's largest contributor. When he left there, the campus newspaper was quoted as saying, "We certainly don't want another one like Bailey." Despite all of this, he was admitted to Yale Law School and graduated with a law degree. His next hassle was with the San Francisco Legal Assistance Foundation, an organization similar to the Legal Aid Society. He is said to have created so much internal strife that he was fired to keep the organization itself from going under. Members of the Foundation felt that "Bailey had no qualms about destroying the organization to save his job."

One of D'Army's greatest sins, according to those attempting to unseat him, is his determination to "play the dozens" with the pillars of Berkeley's community. He is accused of reducing city council meetings to fiascos with his speculations on the sexual lives of other council members. He is also criticized for his racist attitudes. Said one councilman, "It's just that he calls anyone a racist who doesn't agree with his particular way of coping with racism."

Selfish, nasty D'Army Bailey has another side that needs to be presented to off-set the unfavorable comments made about him. In his two years as a councilman, D'Army has done much for Berkeley's Black citizens. He has introduced legislation that requires the city to consider the minority hiring practices of companies before awarding contracts. He is responsible for getting one of the strongest affirmative action programs in the nation operating in the city. He totally supports child care and health centers in the Black community and has managed to awaken the conservative and often apathetic middle-class Blacks of Berkeley.

D'Army's words are as interesting as his actions; of his opponents he has this to say, "People are so glad to see a nigger with a law degree that they don't bother to find out who I am." "I'm not doing anything I didn't say I'd do during the campaign." And of himself he says, "I've never made an agreement to give up my independence." "I guess that's what they mean when they say I'm being recalled for my personality."

The recall vote was held on Tuesday, August 21st. D'Army Bailey lost the battle, but it's hard to believe that he won't win the war.

FOREST AVE. COGIC CHURCH NEWS

This is the Year of Jubilee for the Forest Ave. Gospel Temple. Showers of blessings are descending from heaven as God continues to bless us. Only two weeks ago the most outstanding, encouraging and uplifting miracle that could ever happen to any charitable institution was bestowed on the Forest Ave. Mission Center, as God gave the Mission a duplex, located at 1321-12th St. in Des Moines. God blessed Bishop Carter's Mission Ministry because of his endeavor to continue to feed the hungry children, to clothe the naked and to give aid to the poor in what ever way possible.

Already over $600.00 (six hundred dollars) have been raised to begin the New Fund Raising Campaign, which is designed to rebuild the Forest Ave. Church. Our new goal is set at twenty thousand dollars, before Thanksgiving Day.

We are very grateful for the safe return trip of Bishop and Mrs. A. B. Carter, Sr. from Moberly, Missouri, where they attended the funeral of a relative.

A new family was added to our church. We are happy to announce that Elder R. E. Lowe, his wife and three children and Bro. James Damon are now members of the Forest Ave. Church.

The Holy Convocation of Iowa is convening this week at the 17th and University COGIC Church, Bishop J. O. Patterson, International (presiding) Bishop and Bishop L. H. Ford, Second International Assisting Bishop, will be presiding.

It would be most fitting for us to express the joy we felt on receiving so many of our members relatives from far and near, who came in great numbers to visit with us during the vacationing period. We dare not try to name them all for fear of omitting someone. So we will say thank you for your visit and come back again real soon.

KENYA FOLLOWS UGANDAN LEAD, OUSTING BRITISH

Nairobi — (NBNS) — The Kenyan government has banned more than 1,000 businessmen, most of them British citizens of Asian descent, from trading in this country.

Announcing the government's decision, which had been reported by the National Black News Service more than six months ago, was Commerce and Industry Minister Julius Kiano. He pointed out that highly specialized businesses had been exempted and said care had been taken to avoid confusing Asians who are citizens of Kenya and non-citizen Asians.

The merchants have until August 15 to appeal the decision and until December 31 to close up their businesses, according to the announcement.

The move by the Kenyan government, which follows that of the Ugandan government months ago, was made in an effort to Kenyanize the economy, a policy which has been consistently referred to by President Jomo Kenyatta.

According to the government, a total of 1,100 businesses are affected, 466 in the capital, and others spread throughout the country.

Last January, 400 non-Kenyan Asians had their business licenses withdrawn by the government.

Election Proposal

Something must be done to free our political leaders from the threat of economic catastrophe resulting from campaign expenditures, and to reduce the growing influence of large campaign contributions at election time. Strong reins must be devised to curb the spiraling costs of political campaigns. With television time for political advertisement in some instances costing more than $1,000 per minute, many an able statesman and leader falls by the wayside, not for lack of ability, but for lack of funds. The following is a proposal designed to provide the electorate with an opportunity to vote, not for the most economically solvent candidate, but for the man or woman most unequivocally predisposed to give the voters true representation.

It is proposed that both primary and general elections be held by every unit of government — city, county, state and federal. In nonpartisan elections, the two highest candidates for a particular office would face a run-off in the final election. These primary elections as at present, would be financed by the candidate and his supporters. After the primaries, however, all expenses for the final, or general, elections would be financed by that unit of government involved. A fixed scale of monies would be provided to each final candidate for all offices from the public treasury. For example, the following amounts might be designated:

Assemblyman, $10,000;
State Senator, $20,000;
Congressman, $50,000;
Governor $500,000; President of the U.S., $10-15,000,000.

Sums might vary according to population of the governmental unit — for example, an Assemblyman seat in New York or California might require more money than in Arizona or Alabama.

Vouchers for each election campaign would be sent by the candidate's finance committee to the treasurer of the governmental unit for payment. No other funds could be spent for any candidate in the general election. The legislature should direct private communications media, i.e. radio and television, which use the public air waves to make time available at a nominal fee rather than to charge exorbitant political rates.

This election reform proposal would enable young men to seek public office without the threat of economic disaster, even when a winning candidate. Moreover, the hidden role of wealth and economic power would be removed as an influence on the action of individual legislators who unconsciously try to protect their economic base as a means of returning to public office.

If we do not stop increasing costs of political campaigns which weight the elections in favor of the candidate with the largest advertising and communications budget, persons without substantial financial means or wealthy backers will not be able to seek public office, and our democratic government will soon be supplanted by an economic oligarchy.

N.A.A.C.P. Chairman Blasts Council

Luther Trent, N.A.A.C.P. Housing Chairman, openly charged the City Council of Cedar Rapids with making false promises.

The City Council of Cedar Rapids held a public Hearing to determine what should be done with 51 houses considered to be neglected, or abandoned, and beyond repair. A special committee appointed by the council to investigate the condition of the houses showed slides, and pointed out the need for the demolition of the existing structures. Any person concerned about a particular house was given an opportunity to voice his objection or approval to any proposed action.

This action is looked upon by the citizens of the southeast side of town as the result of many years of unremitting pressures, and pleas to bring to the southeast side of town some decent housing. Marli Boedecker, Evelyn Jackson, Ernie Merriweather, Magnolia Waller, Bob Long, Luther Trent, Leo Griggs, and many others have been involved for years in the often frustrating attempts to get the City's overseers to beautify the whole city.

In this council session letters were written, and charges made that the City, and the Neighborhood Development Program, were in a large way responsible for contributing to the deterioration of the dwellings.

Vern Hess, charged the police dept. with failing to provide the necessary neighborhood protection.

Frankie Cutchlow, and a Mr. Brownell, and Mr. Jim Burrell accused the city of helping in the destruction, and deterioration of some of the property by making false promises to the tenants and encouraging them to move, even going so far as to make false statements saying that the houses have been bought, and will be soon torn down.

We sought the D.P.I. Director for comment, but he was unavailable at that time.

Jim Burrell one of the home owners said, "If the City ask me to assume my responsibility, it must also assume its responsibility." He said later, that if the city continues to refuse to upgrade the condition of the southside, and refuses to provide it with the necessary help that any citizen has a right to expect. How does it expect to have anything but a ghetto down there.

Luther Trent N.A.A.C.P. Housing Chairman said, "My only concern is to see these dilapidated houses come down. They are rat nests, and dangerous to our children, and hangouts for hippies. As long as these houses stand they hinder the development of better houses."

There was some talk of the city, and investment corporations profiting from the destruction of the houses, but its needless to say, you can't please everybody. Tear them down boys, but please, let's not have any more parks. It's cold outside.

Ain't necessarily so.

Education is the sum total of a vast experience. Its not just something you learn in books but is a life of experience, lived and understood. Education doesn't come from degrees. It comes with understanding. The degree merely says that you have an education. But this is not necessarily so.

Hey S.T.I.R.

Do you remember a few years ago when the rats used to walk across the streets of Cedar Rapids on the South East side of town in broad open daylight? (I guess I said that right) And why shouldn't they? It didn't look no better on top of the ground than it did in the sewer. Didn't smell no better either.

The streets, (Muddy water), and the houses, (falling down) made the rats feel right at home.

So a group of citizens got together, and said, "these rats, and cockroaches, and other crawling things have got to go. The ramshackled houses and garbage filled lots are nothing but mansions for mice.

So they petitioned the Linn County Health Dept., for help and didn't get none. (They didn't believe in integration, or minority group isolation, or desegregation in those days.)

So one enterprising young lad decided that we, (the poor blacks) should share what we have (rats and cockroaches) with them. (rich whites) If we wanted them to share what they have (money, opportunities, and technology) with us. So they collected a bag full of rats, and cockroaches, and delivered them to the offices of the Linn County Health Dept., spilling them out of the bags on the Secretarys desk well, you can guess the rest.

Now those few people got action right away, but thats what love can do. Always be willing to share what you have with others.

So you know the Law

Did you know that Federal Law prohibits discrimination against non-union members in hiring hall referrals.

The National Labor Relations Board found that a Bay, Area local of the Plumbers Union had discriminated in referral against a non-union plumber because of the latters lack of membership. The union refused to refer the non-member for a job, although no competent union plumbers were available, and it forced the employer of the non-union plumber to fire him. Federal Law prohibits this type of discriminations also.

Don't forget to register. Your vote could make the difference. You have 5 weeks left to enter your candidacy in the City elections. The Deadline for filing is Sept. 27, 1973. So far there are 4 nominations for Mayor, and 1 for Safety Commissioner.

Doves yes, Bats No

Last Sunday St. Pauls United Methodist Church was visited by a bat. In the days of Jesus the Holy Spirit descended upon him in the form of a dove. But the Minister reminded his congregation, as the bat gracefully spiralled back and forth over the audience. If the bat lands on you that is not the Holy Ghost.
