"The Civil Rights Knights"

Who Can I Turn To?

Generally, news articles concerning the Iowa Civil Rights Commission are related to individual complaints concerning discrimination in employment, housing, public accommodations or credit because of age, sex, race, religion, national origin or physical/mental disability. While this is certainly a very important function of the Commission, it is by no means the only one carried on by the staff.

Joseph Tate

Role of the Executive Director

As with any other state agency executive, Joe Tate's work covers the whole spectrum of managerial tasks: budgeting, staffing, development of legislative proposals, planning and programming, establishment of liaisons with other chief executives at all levels of government and with private industry and organizations, public and community relations, traveling, and participating in the everyday activities for the purpose of expediting and facilitating the heavy workload engaged in by all members of his staff.

Less than six months in office, Mr. Tate has already laid the ground-work in Iowa for the implementation of his goals and objectives designed to effect equal opportunities for members of the protected classes indicated above.

Role of the Affirmative Action Program Director

Maude Esther White has been with the state of Iowa for more than seven years, and with the Civil Rights Commission for a little more than one year. In this position, she has designed the model for affirmative action programs for state agencies in Iowa. With some modification, this model is adaptable to other agencies or organizations. Her work includes establishing liaison with state officials and working directly with personnel officers for the purpose of assisting them in assessing staffing patterns, agencies' hiring policies and procedures, and rendering technical assistance in the development and implementation of affirmative action plans and programs. In this respect, she designs and conducts workshops, conferences and seminars; works with public and private organizations; and has assisted the executive director in the formation of a Task Force

Role of the Compliance Director

Mr. Mike Bailey, the Iowa Civil Rights Compliance Director supervises the investigators in the agency. His work includes making determinations of probable cause, the assignment of case loads, effecting conciliations, and assisting the Attorney General's office in the preparation of cases for public hearing. In addition, his staff is responsible for the final disposition of cases which includes the notification of complainants and respondents of the status of their case. His work includes working with both the Affirmative Action and Education Directors in areas where his assistance is required.

consisting of persons who are actively participating in areas which have either a direct or indirect influence upon the problems of minority-ethnic groups, women, and other protected classes set forth in Chapter 601A of the Iowa Code (1973); and reviewing applications for federal funds.

Mike Bailey

Felicia Mullins

Role of the Education Director

Ms. Felicia Mullin has been assigned the duties of the Education Director for the Agency. Her duties include the development of programs designed for training the investigatory staff in the agency; and providing information and training sponsored by the Iowa Civil Rights Commission for local commissions', business and industries, labor organizations, and other jurisdictions. This training includes the judicial interpretation of Chapter 601A of the Iowa Code, Title VII of the Equal Employment Opportunity Act, and other legal requirements.

"A Decade Of Change" In U.S. Civil Rights

One night in June, 1963 an obscure NAACP field secretary Medgar Evers -- was murdered outside his home in Mississippi. Ten years later his brother Charles, now mayor of a bi-racial Mississippi town, summed up his impressions of the changes in the civil rights picture since his brother's death, on a one-hour PBS special, "A Decade of Change."

Produced by public television station WSJK, Knoxville, "A Decade of Change" will be broadcast locally Tuesday, June 11 at 8 p.m. on Channel 11 - 12.

The program, which concludes with the Charles Evers interview, traces the civil rights movement through the turmoil of the 1963-73 decade. Newsreel films of crowds beaten back by fire hoses... Martin Luther King's march on Washington... a Ku Klux Klan rally... Malcolm X... the Black Panthers... chronicle the progression from passive resistance toward militant black power.

The program records a memorial concert for Medgar Evers held in Jackson, Mississippi, on the tenth anniversary of his death. Stars such as Dick Gregory, James Earl Jones, Cleotis Robinson and B.B. King took part in the day-long tribute.

"A Decade of Change" concludes with interviews of citizens of Fayette, where Charles Evers became the first black mayor of a bi-racial Mississippi town since Reconstruction.

Townpeople discuss their assessment of the changes in Fayette since Charles Evers became mayor. One, an alderwoman, charges that the town is being run as a dictatorship.

But Evers discounts his critics as "malcontents." "We run a strict law and order town," he says. "We don't care whether you're white, black, blue or polka-dot."

"A Decade of Change" was made possible by a grant from the Corporation for Public Broadcasting. Producer: Pamela E. Ice. Director: Jim Tindell. Transmitted nationally by the Public Broadcasting Service.

Negro Grad On Simpson Board

Simpson College has named a Negro member, Bernard Franklin to its board of directors. He graduated in the spring class and was recommended by the student body for the post. Franklin was the leader of the Black Student Organization at Simpson which made a series of demands on the school, occupied one of its building and only left after the president proposed satisfactory answers to them.

It is particularly gratifying that Franklin was chosen by his fellow students which shows they are in favor of extending some of the outstanding privileges enjoyed by the student body generally to the Negro group.

Vote In The Primaries

Iowa voters will go to the polls June 4th to nominate candidates of their respective parties for U.S. Senators, U.S. Representatives, Governor, Lt. Governor, State offices and legislature, county and township offices.

Too often, the voters complain in the general election that they have very little choice between candidates because they are all just alike. Much of this is true in that it often happens that incompetent candidates manage to slip in through the primaries.

Voters would do well to turn out in the primaries for it is here the process of general elections take on a prime beginning and for this reason that it denotes good citizens.

Another Great Passes

Duke Ellington has passed on. He had a long life, a long career in the field he loved-music-which was appreciated at home and abroad.

His band entertained millions from coast to coast; he appeared before kings and queens; he served as an ambassador of good will to other countries as representative of the United States.

Like many Negro athletes, he trailed the path from bottom to the top. His career was great as a musician and unblemished.

He was a good citizen and was appreciated for his services as a musician and as a man.

Vote

by Adin Nyemi

Much of the Black revolution in America is occurring at the polls. Nationally, Blacks are using the ballot to overthrow their oppressor. Politics have, since the Reconstruction period, been a proven arena for changing the institutions which affect our daily lives.

Our present national political problems will only be changed when those persons in office who silently consent to the moral decay of this country are replaced.

Before I go any further, let me state that most of the people who read this article if registered, will not vote in the coming primary elections. Primaries are more important than general elections. The decision is made by a small percentage of the total percentage of registered voters. In a recent election held in Des Moines, one candidate lost by a mere 40 votes. Not really a lot of votes, but enough to have made a real difference in who now makes decisions in the name of the people of the city.

Iowa now has nine Black elected officials. Des Moines has two. Nationally, Blacks have been creating political alliances capable of getting Black and white candidates elected to offices which help control their lives.

Des Moines Blacks wake up, the time is now for you to begin to use some sense of cooperation, to create a strong Black vote to put into office candidates who can serve your interests.

Before I lose you in rhetoric, this town is cut up by precinct so as to eliminate much of the Black voting strength. An alternative which will net the desired result is one of forming alliances with those persons who have the same concerns. Remember many whites and other ethnic groups suffer the same ills of poverty and deprivation. These persons can be used to create a strong voice in the development of local organization needed to change this system. To talk about isolation in a 90% white community is foolish, and I am not about foolishness.

ARE YOUR WASHER & DRYER TAKING YOU TO THE CLEANERS?

Here are a few helpful tips that will save you time and money in the laundry room.

- Wash full loads. It saves time, hot water, and electricity. If you must wash a partial load, select the water level to fit the amount of clothes you are washing.
- Avoid over-washing clothes. It's just a waste. Use cold water detergents whenever they can do an adequate job.
- Clean the lint filter in your dryer after each load. A clogged filter will reduce the dryer's efficiency.
- Don't over-dry clothes. This wastes energy and wrinkles clothes.

Broadside Press presents another volume of poetry for reality readers, this time from behind the walls of Attica. Betcha Ain't is edited by Celes Tisdale, a brother who taught a poetry workshop at the prison. The poems he chose to include in this small volume reflect the violence of life inside the walls of Attica. They also represent a strong movement on the part of the inmates towards the teachings of the Honorable Elijah Muhammad, towards Islam as it is interpreted by him.

Jamail (Robert Sims), has seven poems in Betcha Ain't. My favorite is "Quit Dreaming".

Quit dreaming—
original Asiatic blackman.
White boy ain't gonna

Think about it.
Can't stop no tank
with a bean pie.
There's humor, too, laughter
in Harold Packwood's
"Red-neck Coke Machine." And poems to beautiful Black women are present, elegant and funky.

Betcha Ain't includes short biographies about each poet, and an "Attica Journal" by the editor. Betcha won't be sorry you spent $2.50 on this book!

James Earl Jones Not Intimidated By Athletes-Turned Actors

James Earl Jones

by Walter Burell

Many actors have expressed growing concern over the influx during the past few years of Black athletes into the motion picture and television arena. Some insist it's unfair competition spurred on by profit-motivated producers. Others say the ill-prepared athletes demean the noble art of acting. But James Earl Jones is one actor who isn't at all bothered by the invasion of the athletes.

"I don't get upset seeing all those athletes becoming actors," says Jones, currently starring with Diahann Carroll in the 20th Century-Fox release, "Claudine."

"The Athletes are fulfilling a logical function," Jones continues. "The producers who hire those young, good-looking, strong, active athletes can get those guys to do things we actors would never do. Like stunt work. A lot of them do their own, you know. That's often part of the overall exploitation."

"But if they got actors like Raymond St. Jacques or Roscoe Lee Browne or James Earl Jones, they'd have to deal with our knowledge of theatre and acting and they're usually not ready for that. It's all part of a new form — well, I won't call it racism. I don't really know what to call it. It has something to do with professional hierarchy."

"I'm not like those images. I'm a farm boy. And I say boy not to degrade myself, but because I like the gentleness I harbored as a boy. I don't like to be aggressive or hostile or militant and I don't come on like a super stud."

"So when it comes to the Black athletes entering films, I don't feel any envy at all. In fact, I'm glad they're there to do those roles. Who else would do them?"

Even though Jones has an open mind when it comes to athletes in the movie industry, he's less tolerant toward civil rights groups which have recently attempted to bring pressure on filmmakers.

"Civil rights organizations should not impose restrictions on Black audiences in any way," says Jones. "And I'm not talking about freedom from censorship. I'm talking about who is best suited to make the choices. And it's not the Black intellectuals who comprise the bulk of the membership in these organizations."

"When LeRoi Jones took a political position on a particular issue, it was clear what he was after. But is not clear what these civil rights groups are after. If what they want was political, that would be one thing, but as it stands now all we know is what they're against. And that's a result of confusion."

"I think they're happy to pass their efforts off as political just to honor the phrase and their own activities, but what they're actually doing is not honorable because they haven't said what they want."

One thing, however, is certain. Long after the athletes have been turned out to pasture and the civil rights groups drift away from movies and back to politics, James Earl Jones will still be an actor. So it's no wonder he doesn't feel inhibited by either of them. He'll simply outlast them.

Black Unionists Key To Social Change

CLEVELAND—The nation's three million black trade unionists were urged to take a leadership role in building a mass movement committed to social change at the National Conference of the A. Philip Randolph Institute, held here May 17-19.

The first step in asserting this leadership, according to Bayard Rustin, the Institute's Executive Director and keynote speaker at the conference, is for black unionists "to totally commit themselves to electing a 'veto-proof' Congress this November."

Delegates cheered as Rustin denounced President Nixon as "one of the worst criminals of the Twentieth Century." Rustin, who was named on the famous White House 'enemies' list, said that Nixon was responsible for a degree of corruption "which has shaken the faith of many Americans in the democratic process."

"We must redouble our efforts to restore that faith," he added.

Over 800 delegates representing 10,000 Institute members attended the conference. They represented Institute chapters located in 120 communities spread throughout 35 states and were members of 53 national and international unions.

They heard Rustin, speaking on the day of the 20th Anniversary of the Brown decision, which outlawed dual school systems, declare that 1974 could be a watershed year for black Americans, just as 1954 had been.

"If we elect a Congress dominated by those who are committed to social reform, we might very well see the fulfillment of the agenda first spelled out by the civil rights movement," Rustin said.

Rustin cautioned that the priorities of black Americans in the 1970s differed significantly from black objectives of the 1960's.

"Race and class are converging. We are now seeking things which both black people and most whites need — things like better housing, improved schools, and more jobs."

Rustin warned that unless blacks developed political strategies to meet these new priorities, the goal of an equal society would continue to elude them. He added that the most important strategy in the current situation was the formation of political alliances with other forces sharing common interests.

The most important of these forces, Rustin said, is the labor movement.

Norman Hill, the Institute's Associate Director, told conference delegates that black unionists should "take the lead in filling the vacuum left by the decline of urban machines."

"Black people and the labor movement will form the nucleus of the liberal coalition that will emerge after Watergate," Hill said.

Hill said that the experience of the past few years demonstrated that reform groups were "woefully inadequate replacements" for the old-line machines.

"Only a movement based in the solid working class has the strength of numbers, the organizational vehicle and a commitment to social change."

Another speaker, Congressman Louis Stokes, D-Ohio, said that the Randolph Institute "represents a new dimension for forging social change in America." Stokes praised the labor movement for its efforts to persuade Congress to override presidential vetoes of important social legislation. The conference also received messages of greeting from Mayor Thomas Bradley of Los Angeles and Mayor Maynard Jackson of Atlanta.

The major focus of the conference was a series of workshops dealing with political organization. One centered on the relationship of black trade unionists and elected officials; a second concentrated on current political issues; while a third examined the role of the black unionist within the internal structures of political parties.

Conference delegates also pledged their support to the campaign to help drought-stricken nations in Africa, as well as the grape and lettuce boycott campaigns of the United Farmworkers Union and the boycott of the Aladdin Company in Tennessee.

Master Your Fear 3 Ways

Lack of self-confidence, psychologists say, is usually based on insecurity or fear. The insecure person is afraid not only of others, but also of himself. Plagued by feelings of doubt and distrust, the insecure individual is often hesitant to make even minor decisions because of his fears.

Here are three simple rules for mastering fear which may work for you:

1. Illuminate your fears with facts. Determine what you're afraid of; then find out why you're afraid of it. Probably most insecure people fear they will not be able to live up to the commonly accepted "norms" of society. What norm or standard are you afraid of? What do you do—or what don't you do—that makes you feel you can't live up to that standard? Get the facts.

2. Provide yourself with competent allies. Now that you know what the problem is, turn to somebody who is qualified to help you. Once you've taken someone into your confidence and asked for help, the problem is half solved.

3. Wage a winning war. Make up your mind to do something about the fear you're fighting. You've thought about it; you've found an ally; now you need action. Make a list of three things you can do today which will help you overcome that insecurity—then set out to do them.

For a booklet, "The Meaning of Life," which can help still your fears to the point where you can live peacefully with them, send 25 cents to Room 2007, Booklet Distributors of America, 220 West 42nd Street, New York, N.Y. 10036.

revenues of Tanaganyika. Moreover, the public works which provided what is generally known as the infrastructure of a country - transport, power and basic facilities - were distributed peripherally, favouring the settlers and colonialists. For instance, there were few tarred roads outside the towns and in the urban areas. Electricity, water and paved roads were concentrated in the rich "European quarters", neglecting the African areas. Although there was no formal colour bar, the system discriminated in favour of the privileged whites with the result that the ten million Africans who were the overwhelming majority felt disinherited.

Change was clearly inevitable but decision-making and the power to initiate and control the necessary changes was still largely in the hands of white officials. The first policy after independence was the Africanisation of the public services, though President Nyerere comments with a note of sadness that this measure was in itself discriminatory. However, it was essential to rectify the balance and for two years - until January 1964 - Africans were appointed and rapidly promoted in preference to anybody else. Most of those who benefited from this rapid advancement showed themselves equal to the task and from January 1964 on, Tanzania was able to adhere to its constitutional principle of equal consideration for all citizens, regardless of race.

Before independence, the World Bank, prepared a survey of Tanganyika's economy, and the first three-year development plan was based on this. It stressed the development of agriculture and the livestock industry, the improvement and development of communications and the development of secondary and technical education. But the aims of the plan were not high enough and it was rapidly outdated. There was widespread dissatisfaction about the proposed rate of economic growth and from 1962 on, self-help schemes started to spring up all over the country with the building of village schools, health facilities, roads and similar projects. This was done by local communities on their own initiative but the work was necessarily uncoordinated and ran into planning difficulties.

Looking at Tanzania now, one cannot help being struck by the enormous differences since independence. The most noticeable of all is the spirit of self-reliance and pride and confidence. The most noticeable of all is the spirit of self-reliance and pride and confidence that hard work must lead to achievement. A lot of this is due to the Arusha declaration, which is not only a political and economic guideline for the country but is, a statement "about the way in which we shall make a reality of human equality in this country, and how our citizens will achieve full control over their own affairs."

"We must adjust our nation of the past to the realities of today and to the hopes for tomorrow."

United Republic Of Tanzania

by Kitoto-K. Kalombo

When Tanzania achieved independence twelve years ago, President Nyerere predicted that in the coming decade the country would achieve greater development than it had done in the previous forty years under colonial rule. To what extent has this prediction been fulfilled, and what progress has been made in dealing with the poverty, ignorance and disease referred to in 1961 by the Tanzanian leader? At independence, Tanganyika, as it then was, produced very little more than subsistence for its people at a low level. Any surpluses were exported by foreign companies or plantation owners to their home countries. The largest single export was unprocessed sisal followed by raw cotton and coffee. The combined value of these three crops amounted to 54% of the total domestic product. The sisal was produced by foreign owned estates, but most of the coffee and cotton were grown by peasants. On the whole, most agriculture consisted of subsistence farming based on shifting cultivation with small units whose owners sold only small surpluses to meet taxation.

The industrial sector hardly existed in 1961. There were a few factories such as breweries and cigarette manufacturing plants. Social services throughout the country were minimal and often provided by voluntary agencies - missions or charities which received subventions from the tax

Not long ago I had the pleasure of hearing from my good friend Senator Ed Brooke of Massachusetts. He shared with me some comments which he had made before the Contractors Association of Boston on March 2, 1974.

In the words of his colleague, Sen. Jacob Javits (R-N.Y.), who read that speech into the U.S. Congressional Record on May 8th, Ed Brooke's analysis and recommendations underscore the challenge and opportunities of American business and labor to insure that all Americans get a piece of the economic action.

I believe that while this nation remains in the firm grip of division and turmoil, it is extremely critical that we as leaders come together at points of agreement. We must achieve that objective for the sake of unity — for the sake of coalition — and in the interest of the future of our people.

When that point of agreement is the economic well-being of minorities and security for their efforts in enterprise, the attention and interest of the National Business League and our Constituencies must be quick to follow.

The remarks of Ed Brooke on minority enterprise and its need for bold initiatives and staunch allies were made before a select audience but merit the attention of us all.

Adding the word "economics" to recent comments of Atlanta Mayor Maynard Jackson Ed said, "Politics and economics are the civil rights movements of the seventies!" Most assuredly, politics is power. Without question, economics is power.

The American free enterprise system is based on the premise that the right to work and profit is a right to be shared by all Americans. The Senator made it very clear that he believes that that right must be shared equally.

Those of us who are closely involved in these issues recognize the fact that without the acquisition of the power of economics and politics, we will continue to remain a minority with no means to speak out. It is true that this is a society whose strength is founded on economic and political power.

Before the Contractor's Association, Sen. Brooke cited the increased involvement of Blacks in the political process as evidenced by the number of Black elected officials. That figure has more than doubled in the past four years. The leap from 1,185 to 2,894 represents a 144 per cent increase.

Unfortunately we cannot show that same track record for economic development and security for Black communities. The jump of the Black gross national product from $20 billion in 1963 to $50 billion in 1973 is deceiving. The fact of the matter is that little or none of this money benefits us directly. It goes out of the Black economy and does not return.

The Senator made an excellent point when he said, "Keeping dollars in the Black community creates new jobs, makes services more accessible to the poor and the elderly, and contributes to a sense of community pride."

National focus and priority must be given to broadening the American economic system to give opportunities to all segments of our society. Consider the fact that while 17 per cent of Americans are minorities, we hold only one per cent of the nation's business assets.

No better point can be made than Ed's call for greater diversification of the range and focus of Black-owned business. Certainly just as critical is the need to increase the size and effectiveness of Black-owned firms in this era of "big business."

While he went on to discuss the Office of Minority Business Enterprise and the Small Business Administration, there are no doubt as many views on their effectiveness as there are people who have opinions. At present, however, we must admit that for Black business enterprise, those programs are the only game in town.

Without question, every champion for the cause of minority business enterprise in the halls of Congress is an invaluable ally.

The problem is that there are not enough that get down to business.

Ipers "Buy Back" Ends June 30

The "buy back" provision of the Iowa Public Employees' Retirement System (IPERS) ends June 30, 1974, IPERS Director Ed R. Longnecker announced today. He said the provision, contained in the IPERS bill passed by the 65th General Assembly, sets a time limit of one year — July 1, 1973 to June 30, 1974 — during which public employees with service prior to 1953 can take advantage of the "buy back" privilege.

"The 'buy back' enables a public employee to claim benefits based on all periods of public service employment before July 4, 1953 in addition to public employment since that time," Longnecker explained. He said the increase in retirement benefits can mean as much as $15 to $40 or more a month, depending on how much prior service an employee has.

In 1953, the Iowa Old Age and Survivors Insurance (IOASI) retirement plan for public employees was discontinued and replaced by the present actuarially sound IPERS program. Persons then employed who had contributed to the IOASI plan were given the option of transferring their contributions to the new IPERS plan or taking a refund of contributions.

Longnecker said an employee with prior service must meet certain qualifications to be eligible for the buy back privilege. The employee must be an active, vested or retired member of IPERS as of July 1, 1973; must not have taken a refund of any IPERS contributions based on service after July 4, 1953 when IPERS became effective; and must have been in IPERS covered employment on July 4, 1953 or under contract as a teacher at the end of the 1952-53 school year. He must also have contributed to IOASI during some portion of the time IOASI was in effect between January 1, 1946 and June 30, 1953.

Current public employment retirees are eligible if they had service prior to July 4, 1953. Special arrangements have been made for those public employees who had retired before July 1, 1973 to buy back in monthly installments while still receiving increased monthly retirement benefit payments.

According to Longnecker, a qualified employee who wants to buy back must repay his refund of IOASI contributions with interest and file a written election within the one-year period. He said interested employees should request a Prior Service Election Form Number 608 from the IPERS Administrative Office at 1000 East Grand, Des Moines, Iowa 50319.

The Iowa Public Employees Retirement System is administered by the Iowa Employment Security Commission.

Black Economic Illusory

WASHINGTON, D.C. — A spokesman for the National Urban League said today that apparent economic progress for blacks has often been illusory and disproportionate. Ronald H. Brown, Director of the League's Washington Bureau told a Lexington, Ky. audience that in many instances black gains were near meaningless when measured against the progress of the remainder of the population.

Speaking on "Black Progress; Myth or Reality" at the Fifth Annual Dinner of the Urban League of Lexington-Fayette County (Ky.), Brown traced the social and economic progress of American minorities from 1944 to the present. Calling Gunnar Myrdal's book, An American Dilemma the single most important influence on America's feeble efforts to grant true equality to all its citizens, he depicted the plight of blacks 30 years ago, and then compared that era with 1954, 1964, and 1974.

The period from 1954 to 1964, he said, was one of the most significant ten-year periods in America's racial history. "The nation's largest and most visible ethnic group was clearly on the move — physically, economically and socially," he recalled. "Blacks had migrated out of the rural south into the cities of the north and west. They moved from unskilled low-paid jobs into white collar and skilled occupations. Many began to settle in suburban areas."

He noted, however, that the majority of blacks were left behind in the rural south and the teeming urban centers. "For them," he said, "the statistical progress was illusory."

Examining today's status of blacks, Brown said that progress for minorities had been a matter of perspective. "From a statistical perspective there has certainly been some progress in education, housing, health care, jobs, and better pay," he said. The question which must be asked, he added, is "How much farther along the economic path which leads to the mainstream of American life have blacks advanced?"

"For the most part, he continued, "new housing opportunities have been offset by increased rents and higher mortgages; higher medical costs have virtually made a spell of sickness tantamount to a catastrophe; and increased salaries have been all but wiped out by the higher costs of clothing, food, and the other necessities of life."

Saying that economic progress has been little more than a treadmill for blacks, the speaker concluded that the dream of equality remains a dream. "America," he said, "is still a divided society where minorities bear the brunt of pervasive and debilitating racism."

Seeks Polk Supervisor Post

D. Lorraine Stamus, a write-in candidate for the Republican nomination for supervisor from Polk County's Third District, is running because "the common person has been ignored long enough."

Ms. Stamus, a pharmacist and a registered lobbyist for mental health code revision, juvenile justice and judicial reform, said her bid for office "is a grass-roots campaign. I'm backed by just people in every walk of life, and that is what the Board of Supervisors needs."

"You demoralize people," she said "the time has come when government officials had better recognize the virtue of the common man ... and that they are responsible to the people who elect them."

In 1960 it cost 70¢ to make a 3-minute evening call between these two Iowa cities. Today you can make that same call for only 55¢ after 5 p.m. or on the weekend if you dial direct without operator assistance.* A little money still goes a long way on the telephone.

*Dial-it-yourself rates apply on calls (excluding Hawaii and Alaska) completed from a residence or business phone without operator assistance and on station calls placed with an operator where direct dialing facilities are not available. Dial-direct rates do not apply to person-to-person, coin, hotel-guest, credit card, or collect calls or to calls charged to another number, because an operator must assist on such calls.

Schaben Seeks Black Vote

(DES MOINES, IOWA) — Senator Jim Schaben, now seeking the Democratic gubernatorial nomination in the June 4th primary election, is actively working to gain the Black vote, in Iowa.

Schaben, Democratic leader of the Iowa Senate and an eight year legislative veteran, has told Polk County Black leaders that he will appoint a special committee, directly responsible to the governor's office, to make recommendations on the appointment of minorities to office. He will also ask the committee to act as talent scouts to seek out black appointees for the Highway Patrol, Bureau of Adult Corrections and other social service agencies.

At an informal reception, held Tuesday evening at the home of former Representative A. June Franklin, Schaben announced that he would be willing to appoint ADC recipients to advise on matters affecting welfare programs.

The Dunlap, Iowa, Senator also told the group that he would be willing to appoint ex-inmates to responsible positions in the area of corrections, including the Board of Parole.

"I haven't made any political bargains about appointments," Schaben declared, "and I'm not going to start now. I want the best people for the job."

Schaben also repeated his pledge to be tough on drug pushers. During the campaign, he has called for a crackdown on the narcotics traffic, in urban and rural areas. He has promised to double the number of special agents in the Department of Public Safety who advise authorities on problems of drug law enforcement.

"I have no sympathy for the pusher," said Schaben. "These people destroy our children's lives. We must do more to stop them."

Schaben is also a strong opponent of abortion and capital punishment. "We don't have the right to take human life in any way," he has said repeatedly, during the primary campaign.

Senator Schaben, 48, and his wife Ruth, live on a farm, near Dunlap, in western Iowa, where the Senator runs the Dunlap Livestock Auction. They are the parents of seven children, ranging in age from 8 to 21 years.

A Marine Corps veteran, Schaben has called for the creation of a Department of Veterans Affairs, in Iowa, to advise returning servicemen and women of job opportunities and benefits available.

During the primary campaign, Schaben has made a point of hiring Black people and women for his campaign staff. "Why would anyone believe me, if I promised to do that, later, and refused to do it now?" he asks audiences.

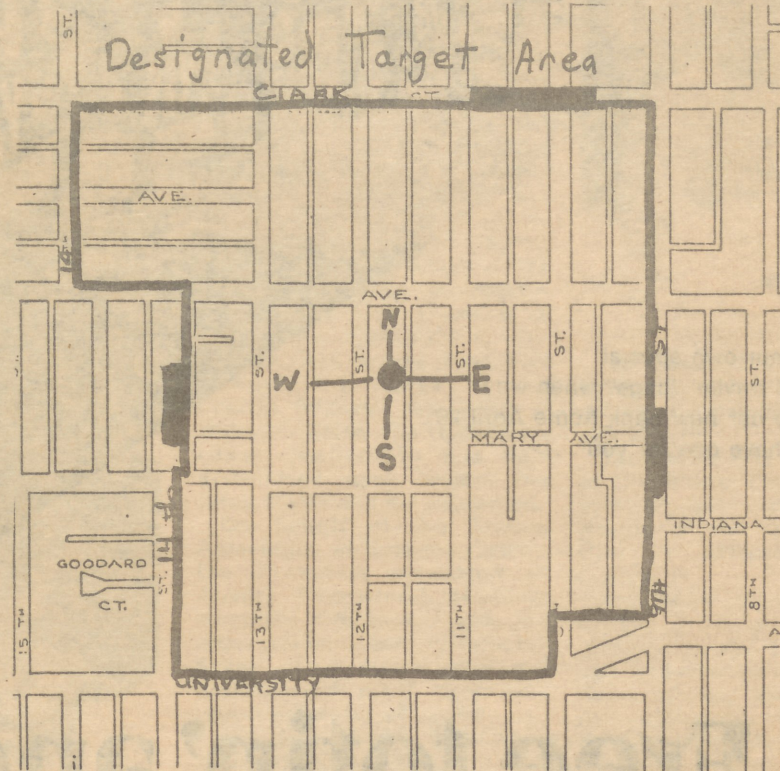

Schaben has also called on Black political leaders to advise him in his quest for the governorship. Representative William Hargrave of Johnson County, the only Black now serving in the Iowa legislature, has described himself as one of the Dunlap Democrat's earliest supporters. Hargrave appears with Schaben in a campaign tv commercial.

Robert Davis, former head of the Des Moines branch of the NAACP, is a member of the Senator's staff, in charge of social issues research and liaison with members of Black communities, outside Des Moines.

The Black community of Waterloo is organizing for Schaben, under the direction of James Porter.

BOARDED AN 8:00 o'clock bus for Delphi. Along the highway we saw many, many backyards. We saw fields of wild poppies. Greece was inhabited in 7000 B.C. We saw many cherry trees. Saw many inhabitants working with their hands, without machinery. The older women are dressed in black, with black scarves. This is because they are to mourn their dead until they remarry. Jackie noticed that black worn by very young women in Athens and discovered this was mourning and to be worn until they remarried.

WE MADE A STOP AT THE BYZANTINE MONASTERY. That was built in the 4th Century A.D. The highlights were the mosaic work and mosaic paintings.

WE ARRIVED AT DELPHI, CONSIDERED TO BE THE CENTER OF THE EARTH. The sanctuary of the God, Apollo. Delphi is famous because people came for three reasons: The festival of the Feast. They also erected temples in honor of the different Gods. They worshipped Apollo. In one temple we were shown the place where they would consult the oracle.

AT DELPHI WE SAW WALLS WITH CEMENT SLABS IN THEM — 2500 years old. Each slab had an inscription. These inscriptions were put in by slaves and accounted for their Kings.

AFTER LEAVING THE TEMPLES, WE VISITED A MUSEUM, which contained many ancient things. We then returned to Athens. The next day Jim went to the American Embassy and located the American teachers there. We located them and visited with them. So while he was doing that, the two Mrs. HARRISES spent the morning shopping and the afternoon took a bus tour of Athens. We saw the formal Olympic Stadium and the amphitheatre where Miss Universe was crowned last year. It has been restored and in summer plays are shown there.

THAT EVENING WE HAD DINNER WITH THE AMERICAN TEACHERS. They took us to a Greek restaurant where we enjoyed real native food. Jackie offers the following "Dry Yogurt Recipe":

Grated cucumber
Onion Juice

Crushed dill, garlic and parsley and a little olive oil
THURSDAY, MAY 9, WE LEFT ATHENS FOR ROME. We altered travel plans to exclude Naples and to instead spend that time in Rome. That evening we looked up a Japanese restaurant and had dinner.

WE STARTED OUT FRIDAY WITH A WALK AND GOT LINED UP FOR AN AFTERNOON TOUR TO St. Peter's Basilica in the Vatican. One of the pleasures we enjoyed enroute to the Vatican, was visiting a stadium containing 64 large statues. Each one depicted a different type of sport.

WE STOPPED AT ANOTHER CHURCH CALLED THE PARTHEON, BUILT AND DEDICATED to all Gods, 1900 years ago; there were no windows and the walls 36 ft. thick. It was a round building, with a hole built in the center of its roof; when it rains, rain falls in the church. The walls contain tombs of dead kings.

AT THE VATICAN THE ST. PETERS BASILICA IS BUILT over the tomb of St. Peter. Inside the Basilica there are 400 statues, only one by the famed Michael DeAngelo, the Pieta, which is now under glass and has an alarm system built in. In the Basilica are many popes' bodies buried there. Citizens willing to pay the proper sum are also buried there. Down in the catacombs, the latest being Pope John. He was so beloved, that his area is packed with flowers — fresh, beautiful flowers. Visitors were so crowded, we could not get too close to the tomb.

WE RETURNED TO OUR HOTEL AND WENT TO DINNER AT AN ITALIAN RESTAURANT NAMED Alfredos. We had Fegatini, (a macaroni pasta dish.)

THIS WEEK WE WELCOME HOME FROM GREECE AND OTHER EUROPEAN TRAVELS Mrs. Gertrude Harris and Rev. and Mrs. James Harris:

LET'S FIRST OF ALL ACCOUNT FOR THE TWO HARRIS SONS, James, Jr. and Jerry. James is on his own and travels with a music group called The Festival Rock Group. He called home on Thursday and said they are headed for Vancouver, B.C. Jerry is in school at the University of Northern Colorado, Greeley, Colorado where he is completing his freshman year in accounting.

THE HARRISES LEFT DES MOINES ON MAY 2 via United Air Lines on a TWA 747. Jackie had to leave early because she and Jim had to attend a congressional reception at the Rayburn Building in Washington. Mr. Harris resides in Washington. He is on two years' leave from the Des Moines School System, while he serves a one year term as Vice President and will take over as president in July in the office of the National Education Association a body composed of 1.6 million teachers.

Here's their story:

ON FRIDAY NIGHT WE HAD ANOTHER NEA FUNCTION which took us on a boat cruise on the Potomac River. (On Sunday we left from Dulles Airport.) While we attended the NEA functions, Mrs. Gertrude Harris spent the time visiting her daughter, Mrs. Frank Robinson, Jr. who lives in Rockville, Md. We all met on Sunday, May 5, and departed from Dulles Airport at 2:30 p.m.

WE NEXT WENT TO J. F. KENNEDY AIRPORT in New York. We departed from Kennedy Airport at 7:45 p.m. headed for Athens, Greece. The flight took 7 or 8 hours. There is a 6 hour time difference and this flight arrived at 11:00 o'clock a.m. in Athens, Greece.

WE NEXT HAD TO CLEAR OUR PASSPORTS, then taxied to our hotel. After checking in at our hotel, we rested a couple of hours then got up and walked around downtown and were amazed at the size of the place. We later learned that 2½ million people make up Athens. Greece has 10 million, so ¼ of the population lives right there in the City of Athens. Of course, we were remembering that Athens is very old.

AFTER EATING DINNER, we went to bed.

WE AWAKENED MAY 7, HAD BREAKFAST AND

East High School-Victim of Distortion

by Diane Banks

There has been much talk about the incident which occurred near East High School last Thursday. The event, disgusting within itself, was more upsetting after the facts had been distorted for the simple sake of excitement, gossip, and emotionalism. The simple truths and realities of what actually happened were suppressed.

Various reports of last Thursday's happenings labeled it a "riot". It was also called a "rumble." There is a problem with abstract adjectives; it is hard to actually define them. Defining such words can result in dramatizing and over-emphasizing an event to the point of distortion. Such phrases as "terribly violent", can create many undesirable attitudes and stereotypes against the school's administration, faculty, and student body. These phrases and words are left at the mercy of the public's creativity and imagination, without any substance to build on other than the flamboyance of such adjectives.

Part of the responsibility for over-blown reporting of events lies with the media; in this case television and radio. Within the realm of both discrepancies appeared. Stations who reported statistics said 300 students were involved, while others said there were 100 students who could be considered participants in the disturbance.

For a moment, let us assume that the figures were accurate. With an enrollment of 1800, this is hardly a fair representation of the student body, much less a majority of East High students. Nevertheless, it was implied that the majority of the students who attend East High were involved.

In contrast, many times the television and radio media have been requested to give coverage to other events at East High. For example, student activities-concerts, trips and fund raising benefits for various causes, but little praise has been given by the radio or television for these worthwhile projects. By reporting the good as well as the bad, but most important by being accurate and factual, the press, both Black and white, are to be commended for their objectivity.

Many students feel strongly about presenting to the public the respect and understanding they have for one another. The Human Relations Committee, students working with students to promote brotherhood from within the school's structure, has done a superb job in the ethnic relations area. In a recent East high student election, a Black female, Veronica Clark, was voted president of the Student Government.

A majority of the students, Black and white are disappointed that an incident of this nature occurred around the school. It is ill-timed that a few well-meaning students could not refrain from becoming a part of the incident. But like other schools, East High has some ethnic communication problems. We feel it is fortunate to have a student body, faculty, and administration who will stand together, keep working together until they overcome the evils of their biases.

It is a fact that a large number of Blacks and whites struggled with themselves to overcome racial prejudice and have succeeded, but very little recognition is given them. Yet, isn't this what men have fought for centuries—the right to be acknowledged in their achievements?

EAST HIGH SCHOOL

It was announced this morning that those students who were suspended because of disturbances within the school will be re-admitted in order that they might complete their exams for the 1974 term.

Drake Minority Law Students Need Housing

Drake University Law School has recently set up a special project to assist minority law students in finding housing. Leala Perkins, Linda Hardnett, and Bennie Gates, Drake Law School sophomore minority students will be working directly with the minority students that have been admitted to Drake Law School. Hopefully, this will help to eliminate some of the problems encountered by entering students last fall. The goal of the project is to find housing to fit the needs of each minority group (Black, Mexican-American, Indian, etc.) student that is admitted and decides to attend Drake Law School. In addition, this project will eliminate at least one of the pressures which detracts from the academic performance of law students at Drake. Presently, a list of apartments is being compiled which will be made available to minority law students. Any assistance or information which members of the Des Moines community could provide will be appreciated. Call 271-2859 or 271-3711.

Attention High School Grads & Parents!

Pictures of graduating seniors and a short biography must be received by the Bystander by June 6th (Tuesday) at 4:00 pm for inclusion in the special graduate issue. For further information, call the office at 277-8736.

Bicycling safety pamphlet available

More and more Iowans along with other Americans, are enjoying bicycling as a sport and mode of warm of weather transportation. But with this increase in popularity has come an increase in deaths and crippling due to bike collisions, which occur mostly during spring and summer.

To help bikers prevent crippling accidents, the National Easter Seal Society has published a colorful new pamphlet, "Once Upon A Bicycle". This pamphlet tells cyclists how to choose, maintain and safely drive a bike. Bikers are drivers, not merely riders on toys, it emphasizes.

"Once upon a Bicycle" also describes the major locations for bicycle accidents. "The majority of deaths and injuries from bike collisions involve youngsters from five to 14 years of age ... the largest number of collision-type accidents — and most severe injuries — occur at intersections."

To obtain this free bike safety pamphlet send a self-addressed, stamped, long envelope to the Easter Seal Society of Iowa, Camp Sunnyside, P.O. Box 4002, Des Moines, Iowa 50333.

All About Foundations & Grants

A regional collection from the Foundation Center in New York City is a new acquisition of the Reference Department of the Public Library in Des Moines. The Foundation Center is an independent, nonprofit educational organization chartered by the Board of Regents of the University of the State of New York.

The collection is made up of current source materials on foundations and their grant-making activities and includes reference books such as the Foundation Directory, copies on microfiche film of annual reports from about two hundred and fifty large national foundations and aperture card copies of IRS Information Returns Forms 990 and 990 AR on foundations within the state of Iowa. A microfiche reader is available for the use of these reports and forms in the Reference Department at the Main Library, 100 Locust. The library anticipates that these materials will be useful to the fund-seeking public, attorneys, writers, scholars and government officials.

The Information & Referral Center tells the troubled where to turn. It links people in need of service with appropriate health, welfare and education programs in Polk County. The number to call is 244-8646. People of all ages and income levels can utilize this free, confidential service.

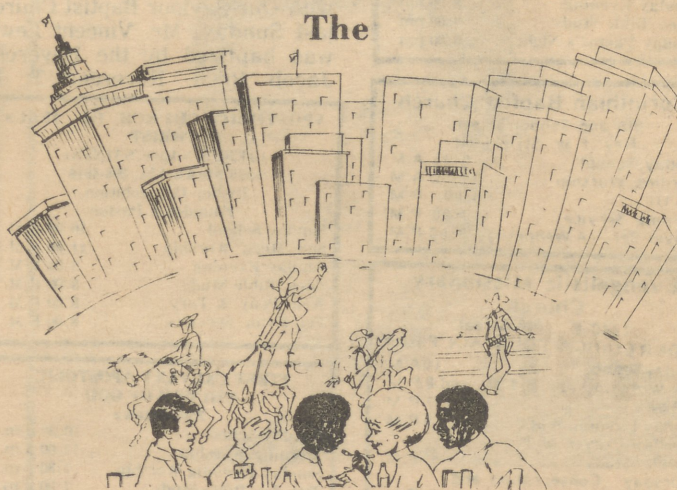

United Way of Greater Des Moines will expand the services of its Information & Referral Center to a 24 hour, 7 day a week basis. The expansion will become effective June 1.

The I & R Center began operation in May, 1967, and will continue to maintain week day office hours at the Hawley Welfare Building, 700 Sixth Avenue. The demonstration project will increase the central staff at the I & R Center and the after-hours telephone service will be coordinated in cooperation with Community Telephone Counseling, Inc.

The study completed by Community Survey, Inc., had recommended that priority be placed on improving the accessibility of I & R services.

"Payment In Full"

Suppose somebody owes you money. According to your figures, the amount is $300. But the debtor insists that the amount is only $200. One day you receive a check from him for $200. On the back he has written the words: "PAYMENT IN FULL."

Should you cash the check and take a chance on collecting the extra $100 later on? It is tempting to do just that.

The trouble is that if you cash the check as is, the law will probably consider the whole debt wiped out. The debtor has made you a legal offer to settle up for a total of $200. By cashing the check you are accepting his offer and agreeing to a final settlement at that figure.

True, with the $200 check in your hands, you might be reluctant indeed to let it go. One man in this predicament tried to steer a middle course. He erased the word "FULL" and substituted the word "PART," then cashed the check.

However, his strategy did not work. A court held later that he had no claim to any more money. The court said he had no authority, on his own, to alter the terms of the defendant's offer.

Another man tried something else. He too cashed a PAYMENT IN FULL check, but at the same time wrote the debtor that he simply was not accepting it as a full settlement.

But again, a court ruled that the entire debt was wiped out. The court said the man's actions in cashing the check spoke louder than his words of disavowal.

Even if you don't cash the check but merely hang onto it, you might be held to have accepted the debtor's offer. Silence can mean consent.

However, that wouldn't happen right away. In one case, a creditor kept such a check for six weeks before mailing it back to the debtor. The latter thereupon insisted that the delay had cancelled the entire debt.

But a court decided the debt was still due and payable. The court thought six weeks was not an unreasonable time, under the circumstances, for the creditor to weigh his next move.

A Better Way

TO SAVE YOU TIME AND MONEY

COOL NEWS

You can keep your cool during the energy crisis, without having to cast away too much cold cash — if you're careful. Home economists at Whirlpool Corporation warmly recommend these dos and don'ts that may make air conditioning your home a breeze.

DO buy the right size air conditioner. One that's too large will pull the room temperature down too quickly and turn itself off, causing the room to feel clammy and uncomfortable. In addition, it's a needless expense. One that's too small won't cool the room adequately.

DON'T overlook the electrical requirements of your home when purchasing an air conditioner. Some units operate on ordinary household current (115 volts); others require special wiring (230 volts).

DO shop for your air conditioner before the hottest summer day. Between January and May air conditioners are not exactly selling like hot cakes, so you can shop coolly and calmly, the stores won't be as crowded, and the salesman will have more time to spend with you. The price may be lower when the temperature is lower, the installation can be done at any time, and you'll be able to cold shoulder the summer heat before it hits you too hard.

DON'T block the unit's air flow with drapes or furniture. Also, clean the air filter periodically.

DO turn your air conditioner on in the morning when the weather is very hot. Units operate less efficiently when started in the heat of the day.

DON'T raise the room humidity level by cooking, laundering, dishwashing or showering when it's very hot outside. Wait for the coolest part of a warm day, if possible.

DO hot-foot it to draw your drapes or shut your shutters on the sunny side of the house.

DON'T open windows and doors when the air conditioner's on. Also, check that fireplace flues are closed.

DO give these hot ideas a warm reception, and you may be able to keep the heat off your home!

I watched Mark Morrow win the state high school boy's singles tennis crown last week. The match was a good one to watch, plenty of hard hitting, spectacular returns and shots, and a couple of boys who didn't want to lose. That third set was a cliff hanger, with each fellow winning his serve, and we began to wonder who was going to break. Then in the tenth game the thing went down to the last point, and Morrow blasted one past the fellow from Sioux City that he barely got his racket on and that was that was that. Everybody was properly happy, and the North high kids really yelled. Mark's dad lit out for the court side and got in his congratulations, as did a few of us. I had quite a discussion with a fellow on the way out of the Racket Club. He wanted to know if I was happy. I told him that I was happy Mark won because I liked the kid. Then he brought up the subject that always makes me angry. What did I think of Mark being the first black to do that. So I asked him if there had been any records kept on the first Irishman or Swede, or Italian boy. Well he didn't quite understand my line of talk. So I informed him that I had quit classifying tennis players according to race and such the year we staged our first Hilltop Open tennis meet. From that day on everybody was and is just a tennis player to me. I didn't think the fellow won the title for any reason other than the fact that he was the best player on this particular week-end. Without taking a thing away from Mark, he was the first black player to get a shot at the state crown, and I am glad that he made the most of it. Then the fellow asked me what about Arthur Ashe. I replied that Ashe was one of the first twenty tennis players in the world, and that wasn't because he was black. I don't think he ever did get around to my way of thinking, but he left wondering what the hell I was talking about.

If I had to criticize the winner, I would have to say that he hasn't had enough competition to make him try to figure out what to do about the fellow he is playing, and it nearly did him in Saturday. But he did realize that he might have to play three sets, and I thought he used the final games of the second set to get his shots ready for the big one, and they were ready. Probably when he gets to college, his coach will get him to use the strategy which he must have learned, but hasn't had to use all year against the players he has met so far. He will have to use it if he is to play up to his potential in college. He has great potential, and could conceivably wind up as the number one player of the Hawkeyes. And if he gets into enough tough meets this summer he may have to be thinking to try to stave off defeat, and that will be good. Anyhow, nice going, Mark.

Listed as interesting reading the article about blacks in major league baseball not getting really a fair shake. I have been arguing that all along. That is the main reason why so many black players are among the top stars. They have to be instant stars when they walk onto the field. Coaches and managers will carry a mediocre white player because he has potential, but the black player doesn't get that chance. Only the very best make it and they don't get too much preparation. They have to have it now. The article talked about the differences in salary and the chances of getting extra income during their playing days. We know that blacks don't get very much of the extra dough in endorsements or commercial television. They get some, but who gets it, Hank Aaron, and such, and I am not begrudging Hank, for he deserves a shot at all the dough he can get. Speaking of black managers, how can people blacks around when there are There are a few in the minors and some doing all right in winter league ball, but they can't get a shot at the real stuff. What do you suppose would happen if some guy like Frank Robinson or Maury Wills would get to manage a major league club, and that club won even a division pennant? Do you think the league would come apart at the seams, or some club owner have a heart attack? Would rush out and begin hiring black managers like mad, forgetting that the qualities of managers are not limited to one race or color, and the guy didn't win because he was black but because he had players and knew how to handle them. Today seems to be my soap box day. Maybe I will do better next week.

WOMEN on Wheels

HELPFUL SAFETY HINTS

DON'T BE A SLOUCH

In a driving emergency, every fraction of a second counts.

If you lean on the door, slump over the wheel or slouch in the seat, you are not in the best position to control your car. You will undoubtedly respond to the emergency by straightening up and taking a firmer grip on the steering wheel with both hands.

That takes time. Meanwhile, your car continues its forward progress.

The proper position is with the seat regulated so that you can easily reach brake and accelerator with your feet. The steering wheel should be nearly at full arm's length.

Imagine that the steering wheel is the face of a clock. Your hands should be at the "10 and 2 o'clock" positions for ultimate control.

The key to good posture is to be neither uncomfortable nor rigid at the wheel. Be relaxed, but attentive.

Habitual use of the seat belts can help correct improper seating habits, in addition to keeping you in your seat in case of a collision.
