Jamaica, Mexico To Unite For Economic, Cultural Development

Kingston, Jamaica, ... In a joint communique released following the official state visit to Jamaica by Mexican President Luis Echevarria Alvarez, Prime Minister Michael Manley and President Echevarria announced their governments will establish a multinational aluminum corporation. Initially, they will explore the possibility of expanding the production of alumina, aluminum metal and fabricated aluminum products in Jamaica and Mexico. As a first step in implementing the project, a task force of technical specialists drawn from both countries will immediately be appointed to work out details of the project's first phase, discuss participation and arrange for necessary feasibility studies. The two leaders also expressed their willingness to include other Caribbean nations, mainland or island, in the project.

In a separate agreement, Mexican Secretary for External Relations Licenciado Emilio Rabasa and Mr. William Demas, Secretary General of the Caribbean Community, signed an accord creating a joint commission to promote cooperation in the fields of economy, science, culture and technology.

During three days of wide-ranging discussions, President Echevarria and Prime Minister Manley agreed to adopt a "charter of economic rights and obligations between nations and establish the sovereignty of each state over its natural resources." They expressed the hope the charter will receive the approval of the United Nations at the 29th session of the General Assembly.

Among other results of the talks, Jamaican geologists will visit Mexico to meet with officials of PEMEX, the Mexican Government's petroleum organization, and study oil exploration. Jamaican officials will also study Mexican petroleum legislation.

Prime Minister Manley and President Echevarria also agreed to increase commercial ties between their countries, and a Mexican trade mission is expected to arrive in Kingston in August to improve cooperation between Jamaica's National Export Corporation and the Mexican Institute of Foreign Trade.

Technical and cultural exchange programs to develop arts and crafts will also be initiated, and joint tourism programs will be promoted with language training, exchanges of personnel and information, and the planning of package and cruise ship operations. Marine biology, low-cost housing and nutrition are other fields in which the two countries hope to cooperate.

A youth exchange program was also inaugurated, and a group of Jamaican students is expected to make a one-month visit to Mexico before the end of the year.

Mr. Manley and President Echevarria indicated they fully supported Venezuelan President Carlos Andres Perez's proposal that an early meeting of the heads of Caribbean states be convened.

At the conclusion of the state visit, both leaders agreed their talks had "strengthened the ties of friendship and cooperation between the two countries and

Parents Granted Right To Inspect School Records

Congress quietly passed a bill recently extending to parents the right to inspect, challenge and protect their children's school records.

Under the new law, all schools receiving federal funds will be required to allow parents access to records kept by the school on students.

Parents may challenge information contained in the records, and may be granted a hearing to correct or remove any items found to be inaccurate, misleading, or incorrect.

Further, no information contained in the records may be released by the school if the identity of the parent or child is recognizable except for certain educational purposes.

The bill is applicable at all levels of the education system.

Sixth Pan-African Congress Report

Editor's Note: Many thousands of miles have been traveled and many thousands of dollars have been spent as so-called representatives to the Sixth Pan African Congress return to the shores of North America. A report issued to member papers by the National Newspaper Publishers Association was entitled (in the Milwaukee Courier), 600 attend African Confab. The word confab is short for confabulation or to confabulate: to talk together informally and intimately, or to chat.

After reading the accounts as related by the NNPA, the reference to the term chat would have sufficed. Needless to say, emotionalism takes up where common sense leaves off. The report is as follows:

DAR ES SALAAM, Tanzania (NNPA)— Although the 600 delegates from all over the world who attended the eight-day Sixth Pan African Congress here were in general agreement as to the most urgent needs of the African people, little progress was made in establishing mechanisms to implement policies of Pan Africanism.

As the Congress closed and this country began the celebration of its independence week — Saba Sava (the seventh day of the seventh month in Swahili), no provisions had been made for the establishment of a permanent Pan African Secretariat to continue to promote Pan Africanism under the auspices of Organization of African States as proposed by President Julius Nyerere.

Neither was approval given for setting up a Pan African Science and Technology Center to aid in the development of Africa as recommended by Dr. Neville Perker of Howard University.

And the Congress also failed to establish a Pan African Information and Communications Center to help promote the interest of Africans and people of African descent in Pan Africanism.

Further, the Congress did not set a date for its next meeting, or agree to meet in either Guyana or Jamaica which extended invitations. The previous Congress met in 1945 in Manchester, England.

The U.S. delegation included few well known supporters of Pan Africanism such as C.L.R. James, historian of Trinidad; and activist Stokeley Carmichael who failed to attend because they disagreed with the delegate selection process.

And no American delegate was a government official. This put the group at a decided disadvantage in dealing with African Ambassadors, United Nations spokesmen, and heads of state.

ROY WILKINS

Roy Wilkins, Executive Director of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People (NAACP), will receive an honorary Doctor of Humane Letters degree from Drake University at its summer commencement.

The ceremony will be at 3 p.m. Friday, August 16, in Veterans Auditorium. Dr. Wilbur C. Miller, Drake's President, will deliver a charge to the graduates and award more than 350 diplomas.

Wilkins is recognized as a pioneer in bringing equal opportunity to racial minorities in all areas of American life.

He has worked in various capacities for the NAACP since the early 1920s. He was the editor of Crisis, its official periodical, from 1934 to 1949. Since 1955, he has been its Executive Director.

The NAACP has 500,000 members of all races in 1,700 branches and youth groups throughout the United States.

Wilkins has served the U.S. government in various capacities. In 1945, he was a consultant to the State Department during the organization of the United Nations.

In 1965, he lectured on behalf of the State Department in Berlin, London, and Paris. He served on the President's National Advisory Commission on Civil Disorders in 1967-68.

In April, 1968, Wilkins was Chairman of the U.S. delegation to the International Conference on Human Rights in Tehran, Iran.

Wilkins has received more than a dozen prestigious awards for public service, including the Russwurm Award from the National Newspaper Publishers Association, the American's Democratic Legacy Award from the Anti-Defamation League, and the Medal of Freedom, the United States' highest civil honor.

National News Briefs

Washington D.C.—A report issued by the U.S. Dept. of Commerce shows Black median income for the year of 1973 to be $7,270, while white families in the same year earned $12,600. That's a gap of $5,330, enough to make a great deal of difference in one's standard of living.

Salt Lake City—Because a Black person cannot hold the priesthood in the Mormon Church, a young Black Boy Scout in Utah will not be allowed to hold the position of patrol leader in his troop. To become a patrol leader in the state, a boy must "be a deacon quorum president in the LDS church". The questionable policy has been approved by the Boy Scouts of America.

Washington, D.C.—The National Institute for Occupational Safety has released a study pointing out the following: industrial and agricultural accidents kill 43 percent more Black workers than white; and, Black and Chicano agricultural workers, exposed to heavy amounts of pesticides have a life expectancy of 49 years.

Des Moines—According to statistics in the 1974 Information Please Almanac, (compiled by the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co.), deaths due to motor vehicle accidents are higher in Iowa than in forty other states in the country. And despite the fact that 10% of all cars in America are in California, Iowa has 6.1% more fatal traffic accidents than does California.

Too Many Organizations

In 1926 at the call of the late George H. Woodson, an outstanding attorney in Buxton, Iowa, a group of Negro lawyers from several states met in Des Moines and formed the National Bar Association. At the time, Negro lawyers were not admitted to local bar associations in many states nor were they freely admitted to the American Bar Association.

Membership in the National Bar Association is open to any lawyer of good standing in his state or district. At this time the membership consists of 3000 lawyers located in practically every state in the union including the Virgin Islands and District of Columbia.

These exclusion rules have been lifted in most states and Negro lawyers are admitted to the American Bar Association freely. However, the NBA membership feels that there is a niche in the field of law which justifies the continued existence of the organization. In fact every Negro appointee to federal posts is being cleared through the National Bar Association just as the American Association does for all law appointments.

Subsequent to the formation of the NBA, a group has formed another organization of lawyers called Black Lawyers' Association. This is unfortunate in that since their objectives are about the same, formation of two groups weakens the effectiveness of either. Efforts are being made to consolidate the groups and we hope that this is done.

It Has Come To This

I always believe in reserving judgement against a person until all the evidence has been presented. I have taken this position with regard to President Nixon in the impeachment investigations that have been going on for several months.

I have been critical of Senators who announced in advance that the President was guilty since they will be called upon to determine the guilt or innocence of the President. I feel that they are in the same position of a juror in a criminal case who states in advance that he believes the defendant guilty.

Many of the charges leveled at the President are simply practices that have been going on in both the Democrat and Republican administrations over the years. But they have been emphasized because of the Watergate situation. However, my decision is now different in that the President has actually entered a plea of guilty and now stands in the position of a person who is plea bargaining.

At this stage, I feel that the President should spare the country the agony of a full impeachment process which is bound to keep the country in a turmoil and prevent Congress from going ahead with pressing programs that need action in order to deal with such problems as inflation and unemployment.

The President campaigned on a platform of law and order but it seems that it was meant for others and not for himself. I hope he resigns and lets the country move forward and dig out of the hole it is in today.

Letters To The Editor

Dear Mr. Ray,

On Thursday, August 1, 1974, I had the pleasure of attending a talent contest at East High School, sponsored by the Youth Employment Service.

I was amazed by some of the very talented performers, but was more surprised by the actions of some members of the audience. Rude, uncontrollable heckling and disrespect for most of the performers was exhibited. In conversation with the director, Ms Peggy Spates, it was revealed that the procuring of any talent was in itself, a feat.

My hat goes off to those courageous artists who performed so well and received so little appreciation from the audience. Respect is not granted, but is earned; yet everyone expects respect. As in this instance, those who expect the most give the least.

It is too bad that those persons guilty of the insidious chiding and heckling will not be affected by this letter, as they are the uni-dimensional personalities who never read your publication or any other publication.

Sincerely,
Lt(jg) Wendell Hisle

There is a strong probability that over half of the Black students in Drake Law School's entering class of 1973 will not be allowed to continue their studies this year because of a failure to meet general academic standards. Is it discrimination? Is it racism? Maybe, maybe not. However, percentages like that do make one wonder just how far we have come since Brown v. Board of Education. Do we really have an equal opportunity to obtain a legal education? Or are we still pawns in the white man's game? This writer is expressing his frustration in this manner in the hopes that it will cause at least some of you to realize that the struggle must continue as we have many more barriers to overcome. Perhaps Drake will realize that equal opportunity today still requires providing equalizing factors to balance the scales. At any rate, you as a community would be well-advised to keep an eye on what happens at Drake because what affects even one Black law student, affects all of us.

The Iowa Civil Rights Commission would like to take this opportunity to extend an invitation to the citizens of Iowa and all interested parties to attend the Commission meeting which will be held on August 14, 1974 and August 15, 1974.

SAVES FIRM FOR BLACKS— Ownership of the Keystone Life Insurance Company of Louisiana remains in black hands as a result of its purchase by the Atlant Life Insurance Company last week. Atlanta Life Helps To Hold Black Business Gains

NEW ORLEANS (NNPA) — To help halt eroding business gains of Black America, the Atlanta Life Insurance Company has purchased Keystone Life of this city.

Announcement of the purchase was made this week by Jesse Hill, Jr., president and chief executive officer of the 69-year-old Atlanta Life which has assets totaling more than $81 million.

Sale of Keystone to the Atlanta firm marks the 11th merger or purchase of a Louisiana black insurance company since 1930 when there were 16 such firms in the state. Three of the larger of these were acquired by whites.

Hill has appointed L. J. Gunn, Atlanta Life senior vice president for agency and marketing, as officer in charge of Keystone. This expands the company's operations to 12 states.

"The Keystone acquisition", said Hill, "is an important part of Atlanta Life's five-year market expansion and growth plan which includes acquisitions along with a more aggressive sales program".

Atlanta Life has acquired 85 percent of Keystone or 21,250 of the company's 25,000 outstanding shares. It is a small company, Hill said, with premium income for 1973 of less than $1,000,000. But it is significant, I think, that blacks hold on to it at this period in our business development, he explained.

New Chairpersons For Rights Commission

On Thursday, July 12, 1974, the Iowa Civil Rights Commission elected Commissioner Frances Lowder as Chairperson of the Iowa Civil Rights Commission and Commissioner Gary Koerselman as Vice-chairperson of the Commission. Both commissioners were elected unanimously by the other members of the Commission.

It is felt that both Chairperson Lowder and Vice-chairperson Koerselman would contribute greatly to the continued growth and development of the Commission which was initiated through the effective leadership of Chairperson George F. Garcia. The Commission is indeed fortunate to have active members such as Mrs. Lowder and Dr. Koerselman from which to select.

Black Press of America

Credo of the Black Press

The Black Press believes that America can best lead the world away from racial and national antagonisms when it accords to every man regardless of race, color or creed, his human and legal rights.

Hating no man, fearing no man, the Black Press strives to help every man in the firm belief that all are hurt as long as anyone is held back.

Save Mrs. Lewis — Organize Against Crime

Mrs. Lewis is 75 years old, frail, and afraid to walk down neighborhood streets, even in broad daylight. She's not afraid of monsters, ghosts, or stray dogs; she's afraid of her sons.

What hangs Mrs. Lewis up is the fact that her slow, struggling steps towards home may be interrupted at any time by young men who find her a prime target for robbery. Everybody knows that the Mrs. Lewises of the world make that tiring journey down city streets for a single purpose: to get to the bank and cash that measly social security or pension check. And as Mrs. Lewis trudges towards home, she prays she won't be robbed, or if robbed, at least not beaten. She can't understand why a young man would want to beat an old woman, especially since he could just snatch her purse and run.

Mrs. Lewis leads one hell of a lonely life. She barely makes ends meet with that monthly check, and the last thing in the world she needs is to be robbed or beaten. She has no income other than the check, and she could never afford proper medical treatment should she need to be hospitalized.

What are you doing to make Mrs. Lewis' life easier and less painful? Have you taught your sons the basics? Do they respect the rights and lives of people like Mrs. Lewis? If you feel your children would never do a thing like rob and beat an old woman, are you doing something to see that other parents' children don't inflict that kind of pain? One certain solution to the problem Mrs. Lewis faces is you. Volunteer to transport her to and from the bank; it would take about half an hour of your time, and you might save her life. Better yet, organize a community patrol organization. A 24 hour service such as this could prevent innumerable crimes and practically guarantee that residents of all ages could travel safely through the neighborhood, day or night.

The community patrol idea is hardly new. White, middle-class neighborhoods that cannot afford to hire a private patrol service have been curising their own areas for years, vigilantly watching for suspicious-looking characters. Recently, Black communities in major urban areas have begun organizing to prevent crime. Black folks are tired of being victimized by their own people.

Mrs. Lewis would not be the only beneficiary of this kind of activity. Perhaps the potential assailants would benefit from your responsible behavior too. Something needs to be done in Iowa's Black communities to see that crimes against people do not reach the epidemic proportions they've reached in other areas.

Community Focus

This week's question was: "If you could appoint a Black person to any office in State or local government, what office would you choose?"

Amos Holt (civic worker): "I would appoint a Black person to the city council. How are we ever going to have a voice in city affairs if we continue to have all whites and no one representing our interest group?"

Elder Reed (Minister, Calvary Church of God): "I believe a

The Black Community Must Assume Its Responsibility

WE MUST PREVENT OUR OWN CHILDREN FROM TURNING INTO JUNKIES, INTO THIEVES AND PROSTITUTES AND CONFIDENCE ARTISTS, WHOSE PREY IS THEIR OWN PEOPLE. WE CAN PREVENT THAT.

Black Specialist Named To NEA Post

WASHINGTON, D.C. — F. J. Johnson, former coordinator of the minority involvement programs of the National Education Association, has been promoted to a management position in NEA's Teacher Rights Office, according to an announcement by NEA Teacher Rights Director Samuel B. Ertridge.

Johnson, a former Seattle educator, will manage programs designed to help education associations throughout the nation with desegregation and minority involvement training, will manage comprehensive teacher rights and human relations programs in selected target states, and will be staff contact for the NEA Human Relations Council. He will also take over some duties formerly carried out by George W. Jones, who has been promoted to field associate director in charge of North Carolina, South Carolina, Tennessee, Virginia, West Virginia, Maryland, and the District of Columbia.

Known to NEA members as "F. J.," Johnson is widely regarded as an authority in program design and training. "We are fortunate to get a person with such extensive experience in systems analysis, race relations, conflict intervention, and organizational development in his professional life, and in his teaching, association, and community work," said Ertridge.

Black man can handle any position. That is to say, I believe a Black man is capable of doing a good job in whatever he is confronted with. Though I have nothing personal against the present Mayor, I would like very much to see a Black Mayor of Des Moines."

Charles Richardson (Director, Martin Luther King Center): "I would like to appoint someone as police chief, or if it were a larger city, as police commissioner. My reason for this choice is that I think young Black people might acquire a feeling of hope when they happen to come into contact with police authority, rather than a foreboding of injustice."

Patricia Francis (secretary-bookkeeper): "I think that in a city like Des Moines the city council would be the position to appoint a Black person to. They (council members) appear to be the only political force in the city. Therefore I would certainly appoint a Black man or woman to that position."

would, through the initiation of concrete projects and programs, develop the human and natural resources of Jamaica and Mexico."

President Echevarria then extended an invitation to Prime Minister Manley to visit Mexico in the very near future, and Mr. Manley accepted, saying he would plan to make the trip at an early date.

Americans were their lack of sophistication and expertise in dealing with international forums, language barriers which reduced the effectiveness of their lobbying, and the emotional rhetoric by such speakers as Owusu Sadaukai and Imamu Baraka rather than documented position papers on African conditions.

Congressman Charles C. Diggs, Chairman of the House Subcommittee on Africa, and the House District Committee, was scheduled to attend, but sent regrets. Other American elected officials reportedly avoided the Congress allegedly because of the anti-U.S. position of many of the delegates.

Even Beverly Carter, Black U.S. Ambassador to Tanzania, said he was not invited and did not participate in any other sessions or social affairs after the opening ceremony.

Conflict existed in other North American delegations as non-government representatives competed with government officials, especially in the West Indies, for Congress seats with the government delegation usually winning.

While there were differences in delegation effectiveness and in ideology regarding class and color, with class rather than race prevailing, there was general agreement regarding the most urgent needs of the African people.

These were: (1) To end foreign domination in Africa, (2) to rid the continent of neo-colonialist regimes in independent Africa, (3) to liquidate foreign military bases, (4) to consolidate and unify the peoples of Africa, those of African descent, and all peoples on the continent, (5) to solicit political and material aid for the liberation movements in Africa and other areas.

(6) To define revolutionary Pan Africanism as a basic strategy of anti-imperialism, anti-colonialism, anti-neo-colonialism, and anti-racism in the struggle to promote equality, democracy, and a socialist society, and (7) to exclude all racial, tribal, ethnic and religious considerations in the development of a Pan Africanism which will enhance the cause of all oppressed peoples of the world.

Black National Landmarks

Site of the Battle of Rhode Island, Portsmouth, Rhode Island. The Battle of Rhode Island was the only engagement of the Revolutionary War in which black Americans participated as a distinct racial group. The unit was the First Rhode Island Regiment, an all black unit raised and trained in Rhode Island early in 1778. With less than three months training, the black soldiers joined Major General John Sullivan's army in Providence in an effort to capture the British garrison of 6,000 in Newport. The Battle of Rhode Island on August 29, 1778, ended with General Sullivan leading his forces in retreat despite the defense by the 138 black soldiers of a key redoubt. In following years the regiment was in action in the Yorktown and Fort Oswego campaign before being disbanded in June 1783.

The Battle of Rhode Island was fought in Portsmouth, Rhode Island, in a valley between three hills, Lehigh Hill to the north and Turkey and Almy Hills to the south. These hills define the battlefield and together with Butts Hill Fort, located one-half mile northeast of this area, are the major features of the Historic District. Privately owned; access restricted.

Robert Smalls House, 511 Prince Street, Beaufort, South Carolina. Robert Smalls dedicated his life to securing for his people, not special privileges, but "an equal chance in the battle of life." Born a slave, Robert Smalls distinguished himself during the Civil War, first with the capture of the Confederate boat, the Planter, and then as a guide for the Union ships attacking the Sea Island area. Following the war, he served in the Constitutional Convention for South Carolina in 1868. He was later elected to the State legislature to buttress the rights recently gained by the freedmen. Elected to the Congress of the United States in 1874, Smalls continued his fight for black rights and succeeded in getting many of his proposals accepted by the Congress. Smalls remained in the public eye well into the declining years of his life as the customs collector for Beaufort.

Robert Smalls occupied his house on Prince Street first as a slave and later as the master and owner of the property. Built in 1843, the house is a large frame house with a two-story portico. Private residence; access restricted.

Stono River Slave Rebellion Site, Rantowles Vicinity, South Carolina. One of the most serious slave insurrections which occurred during the colonial period took place September 9-10, 1739. Approximately 51 slaves under the leadership of a man named Jemmy attacked the warehouse of a Mr. Hutchinson, killed the guards, and seized the weapons within. The group was joined by about 30 more slaves. They burned plantations and murdered whites encountered along the way, as they marched towards St. Augustine and the Spaniards in Florida. The local militia was alerted, however, before the slaves could escape. During the encounter with the militia, 14 blacks were killed; within 10 days, about 20 more were killed. The Stono Rebellion exacerbated the fears of the white population and resulted in South Carolina's adoption of the most comprehensive slave code adopted in the English Colonies. There are no physical remains at the site of the Hutchinson Warehouse. The land is privately owned and accessible to the public.

Fort Pillow, State Highway 87, Fort Pillow, Tennessee: During the Civil War, most Southerners regarded blacks in military uniform not as soldiers but as rebellious slaves who should be treated as such if captured in battle. Captured black soldiers were generally returned to slavery and treated harshly for their rebelliousness. A conspicuous example of even harsher treatment took place during the capture of Fort Pillow. Confederate forces under the command of General Nathan Bedford Forrest captured the Fort garrisoned by units of black and white Union soldiers. Heavy and disproportionate casualties were suffered by the black troopers. A Congressional committee investigated the battle and concluded that Confederate soldiers had committed atrocities against black soldiers. Fort Pillow became the "Alamo" for many black soldiers who reported it hardened their resolve to avenge the death of their brothers and see the former masters vanquished.

THE EXPLORING COOK

by MURIEL JANSEN

THIS PRINCESS RULES OVER A KITCHEN

When we entered her cozy candlelit restaurant, the Princess showed us to The Pearl Bailey Room. Surprise! There in the corner stood a Christmas tree. "To make up for all those I missed in my childhood," she explained. "Now I have one the year around." This is typical of Princess Pamela (no one knows her by any other name). She's the merry, lovable proprietress of The Little Kitchen on 10th Street in New York City (reservations only) and the author of "Princess Pamela's Soul Food Cookbook" (New American Library, paperback, 95¢).

The Princess has cooked since she was ten. As she puts it "in a lotta small towns, big cities, little lunchettes and magnificent dining rooms." In New York it is soul food that has made her famous. We asked the Princess about the words of wisdom, notes and sentiments interspersed with the recipes in her book. She laughed, "They're all mine," the same as the Peanut Butter Biscuits, Oatmeal Bread, Turnip Greens 'n Corn Dumplings and Peanut Pie, the recipe for which is given here. To borrow a line from the Princess, cook it "with lovin' kindness."

Peanut Pie

4 eggs
1 cup dark corn syrup
1/2 cup sugar
2 tablespoons melted shortening
3 tablespoons sifted flour
1 cup salted peanuts
1 unbaked 9-inch pie shell
In large bowl, beat eggs well. Stir in corn syrup, sugar, shortening and flour. Fold in nuts. Turn into pie shell. Bake in 350°F oven 30 to 40 minutes or until crust is golden and filling looks puffy and browned.

Muriel Jansen is a home economist with Best Foods, a Division of CPC International Inc. She used Karo corn syrup and Nucoa margarine in preparing the Pie.

Hancock Back In Studio

Herbie Hancock

Composer / pianist Herbie Hancock assured the listener that he was definitely up to "nothing different".

Hancock, you see, is back in the studio working on his next album after coming off of the most successful album of his career. So one wondered just what the man who heads up the most sought after jazz combo in the country was up to next.

"Well, 'Headhunters', my last album, even surprised me," he said. "I mean, it really took off, so I must have been doing something right. So I don't think I will change up."

Hancock has a point. Because, in fact, his last album "Headhunters" outsold any heretofore released album by a jazz musician, earning him his first gold record.

"We tried to incorporate more of the elements that people can relate to in that album," he explained. "For example, it was more funky."

In addition to having a best selling album, Hancock also had two hit singles off the album, including a hit with his now classic composition "Watermelon Man".

"What can I say?" he added modestly. "People are digging on what I am doing. And what more can an artist hope for? No, I won't be doing anything different this time."

For individuals and institutions who emphasize reference books in their collection, the Joint Center for Political Studies has a volume you'll want to own.

The National Roster of Black Elected Officials is the most up-to-date, complete source of information on Blacks who hold public office. A 271-page paperback, the Roster sells for $6.00 a copy; libraries receive a special rate of $5.40.

The 1974 Roster is the fourth annual listing issued by the Joint Center. It is well-indexed, and contains six tables, breaking the information down into geographics, population by state and urban and rural area, number of Black elected officials compared to population, and more.

Libraries and Black social, political, or civic groups should have at least one copy of this volume on hand.

To order, write: Publications, Joint Center For Political Studies, 1426 H. Street, N.W., Suite 926, Washington, D.C. 20005.

Blues & Gospel Jubilee Planned

CLIFFTOP, W. Va.—Be it swaying to rhythmic African drum beats or taking in the Black folktales and children's stories workshop, the Second Annual John Henry Memorial Authentic Blues and Gospel Jubilee is offering a Labor Day Weekend's serving of Black Appalachian cultural experiences as rich and satisfying as its soul food concessions.

The Washington-Carver Camp on routes W. Va. 41 and U.S. 19, between U.S. 60 and Babcock State Park, is the jubilee site August 31 and September 1. This camp, built by Black Civilian Conservation Corps workers in the 1930's, is now operated by West Virginia State College.

If the variety offered by over 30 musicians doesn't appeal, then there are 17 workshops passing Black Appalachian life, a scheduled 20 artists and craftsmen, Sunday gospel singing, the Black theater presentation "The Night John Henry Was Born: A Black Folk Saga," by Eugene Redmond, poetry reading and the contests—ranging from cornrow hair braiding to hand-clapping, thigh smacking hamboning.

The musicians, however, form the largest facet.

Scheduled are native African groups, jazz artists, blues, regtime and gospel musicians. Many specialize in variations on these basic musical modes. And there will be dancers.

A performer sampling includes the likes of Taj Mahal, musician of "Sunder" movie fame, Emperor Dele Ojo and His African Internationals from Nigeria, Mtume and Jizzum from New York, Malombo, a Pretoria, South Africa group, Consoladated Energy, a rhythm and blues group from Pittsburgh plus the Bai Konte performers from Gambia, West Africa.

A free jubilee brochure may be obtained by writing the J.H. Memorial Committee, P.O. Box 5354, Charleston, W.Va., 25311, or by telephoning 304/344-9689 or 304/768-1732 (no collect calls, please).

Stax Chairman Al Bell Winner Of Black Award

Al Bell, Chairman of the Board of Stax Records of Memphis, was one of five award winners at Reve Gipson's Fourteenth Annual "Youth on Parade." He was presented with the first Grant Harris Award, named for the founder of the Good Shepherd Baptist Church in Los Angeles, where the event took place on Sunday, July 28.

In all there were five award winners, chosen by poll of the black youth of Los Angeles as public figures they best believe personify those who have overcome racial problems, poverty and economic barriers to become nationally recognized leaders in their field. The four other winners were: Anthony and the Imperials, Johnny Mathis, Bobby Womack and Billy Paul, making Mr. Bell the only non-performer so designated in the popularity poll.

"Tomorrow The World," by Richard Hunt, has been selected by the Steel Service Center Institute (SSCI) as the art theme for its 1974 Annual Meeting. Institute president Robert G. Welch says, "To me, this particular work of art symbolizes both the state-of-being of our industry today and our relationship to the challenges of the future. Freedom, strength, beauty, change, movement, the wonder of things to come and the constancy of traditional development are all reflected in its form." Crafted of one-eighth inch thick steel, the sculpture stands 53 inches tall, and weighs approximately 80 pounds. SSCI has been selecting a work of art to serve as a focal point of its annual meetings for over a decade.

The professional prize was given to the Evangelical Missionary Church in Christ Choir.

Each participant was given a monetary gift for their participation, time, effort, and diligence.

Peggy Spates, director of this extraordinary occasion, commented "The performers did a very good job. I was proud of them. I thought the audience needed lessons in manners and courtesy. I hope more young people will participate in the show next year."

Miss Spates received a beautiful bouquet of roses for the love and direction she shared with her constituents.

Many skills were displayed by YES counselors. Miss Gail Bowman, exciting and articulate, acted as the mistress of ceremonies.

Horizons Youth

Aid Senior Citizens, Handicapped

Handicapped persons and Senior Citizens in the Community Development Pioneer-Columbus Prime Service Area have been receiving fresh garden vegetables from a garden cared for by Service Area Coordinator Charles Harvey and young people enrolled in the New Horizons Project.

Under the direction of Pioneer-Columbus Board Chairman, Archie Brooks, the garden was planted in early May at 1516 Pioneer Road. Since then, several harvests have been made and the vegetables have been distributed to persons in the area who are unable to have their own gardens.

Harvey said that the weather has hampered the growth of many of the vegetables in the garden but he thought the present break in the heat would start things rolling at normal level again.

Lettuce, zucchini, cabbage, potatoes, tomatoes, squash, sweet and hot peppers, corn, cucumbers, basil and pumpkins are all being grown.

Some of the YES counselors worked as light and sound crewmen, while others acted as stage managers, stage hands, photographers, and wardrobe assistants.

The East High auditorium was packed with anxious onlookers who displayed their animosity and their pleasure with equal exuberant fervor.

Mr. Ronald Sallade is the Youth Employment Service Coordinator.

New Horizons

Six hundred and fifty Polk County youth, ages 14-18, are currently working in summer jobs and earning high school credit as a result of the New Horizons Summer Youth Employment Program which primarily serves young people from low and moderate income families. The program began June 10th and is comprised of three components: the Neighborhood Rehabilitation Corps, the Youth Conservation Corps and the City-wide Employment Service. It will continue through August 9th.

The Neighborhood Rehabilitation Corps is aimed at making home improvements in the six Community Development Prime Service Areas (the areas are: Logan, Four-Mile, Pioneer-Columbus, Woodland-Willkie, Model City and Southeast). Such improvements include: painting homes and fences, moving lawns, cleaning basements and home repairs. Prime Service Area residents who are either disabled or over 60 years of age and in need of services will be given first priority. Of the total component budget of $12,574, the City of Des Moines, through its Community Development Program, contributes $55,140. There are 108 youths employed in the Neighborhood Rehabilitation Component, 18 in each Prime Service Area; divided into three teams of six. Each team is assigned a supervisor, who is responsible for assuring the jobs are done.

Three Counselors, one for every two Prime Service Areas, rank the jobs on a priority basis.

The Youth Conservation Corps Component employs 58 young people from all socio-economic backgrounds and is designed to be a learning experience as well as one of employment. This is a county-wide project for youth ages 15-18, which is funded in a large part by the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

The largest component of the New Horizons Summer Employment Program is the City-wide Employment Service. Almost 500 young people are benefitting from the program. There are three unit leaders located at Tech, East and North High Schools. Each unit leader is assigned 6 to 8 counselors, who supervise around thirty students each. The young people perform a wide variety of jobs throughout the city from office work to yard clean-up to building maintenance. Primary responsibility for job development rests with the Iowa State Employment Service with other agencies, including the City of Des Moines, giving assistance.

Students participating in the program are paid $2.00 per hour for four eight hour work days, or 32 hours per week. The fifth day is "Enrichment Day", where the enrollees can attend various cultural and recreational events such as: ballgames, museums or movies. Group sessions can also be held on enrichment day.

One-half unit of high school credit will be given to those students who successfully complete the summer program with satisfactory job supervisor ratings and who participate in enrichment activities.

Paying A Debt To Mexican Heritage

by Congressman Augustus F. Hawkins

In this country's historical past, Indians, Blacks, the foreign born and other minority people, often found themselves in seriously deprived circumstances, because of the illegal, immoral and unethical maneuverings of some greedy Americans.

A specific example of how early American profiteers immorally used the legal machinery of this Nation to gain economic riches for themselves is the case of the land grant

"The Mind Is A Terrible Thing To Waste"

By Diane Banks

A project carried out by Urban Campus students in Auxiliary Training class, instructed by Lois Vincent, was the designing of a bulletin board bearing a theme on education.

This bulletin board was chosen as being the most expressive in reminding the public and students of the importance of getting an education.

The bulletin board was created by Laura Carson, Mary Lee Banks, Wilma Galbreath, and Mike Williams, COP (Career Opportunity Program) students. The four are majoring in Education.

Four year grants are available to those wishing to continue their post-graduate training. To obtain more information contact the Urban Campus, 9th & Washington.

TO INCREASE ONE'S KNOWLEDGE IS THE KEY AWARENESS FACTOR TO OPPORTUNITIES FOR THE PROGRESSION OF THE MIND.

Mexican communities that existed in the great Southwest prior to 1848. The Southwest territories belonged to Mexico, before the Treaty of Guadalupe-Hidalgo of 1848, which ended the war between the United States and Mexico, and gave the Southwest region to the United States. This rich territory included Texas, New Mexico, Arizona, California, Utah, Nevada and parts of Oklahoma.

During the years before the Treaty, the owners of these lands were the Mexican people, who held the land jointly in the form of communal titles. In effect, the land was owned by the entire community established through a system of community land grants. There were over 2,000 such communities in 1848, occupying approximately 100 million acres of land.

When the United States gained access to the ownership of these lands in 1848, the United States pledged to honor the system of community land grants, and pledged that the Mexican-American communal system would remain legal and intact.

Unfortunately the United States government did not keep its promise to protect the lands of the former citizens of Mexico; instead, it employed various methods which caused the confiscation of these lands by very unscrupulous Americans.

On July 15, 1974, I introduced a new bill in the House of Representatives called "The Mexican-American Rural Community Anti-Poverty Act of 1975." This bill is primarily concerned with Mexican-American rural and village life in Texas, New Mexico, Wyoming, Colorado and California. It would be amended to the Economic Opportunity Act of 1964, and would have as its main focus the fighting of poverty among the nation's rural Mexican-American communities, utilizing a bilingual, bicultural approach to promote community bilingualism and to assist in the reviving of rural Mexican-American culture.

Black Press Told Future Of Middle East Depends Upon Oil For Economic Development

By Charles E. Belle
Los Angeles Sentinel
and San Francisco
Sun Reporter

Editor's note: This is the 3rd in a series of four articles by representatives of the Black Press who visited the Middle East on a study tour during the recent easing of the Arab-Israeli crisis. In the group were Mrs. Marjorie B. Parham, Cincinnati Herald; Robert A. Sengstacke, Chicago Defender; Howard B. Woods St. Louis Sentinel; and the writer.

CAIRO, Egypt (NNPA)—Here in Egypt, we were told by officials that the future of the Middle East depends on the use of funds from oil for agricultural and industrial development.

Dr. Ahmed Lel Morshidy, Egypt's First Under Secretary of State for Planning, informed us that he estimates that the Arab members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries will soon have a surplus of up to $50 billion a year for investment.

Egypt, he said, intends to be one of the places for these investment funds. If we get loans we will use them to further develop agricultural production along the Nile River through irrigation, the increased use of commercial fertilizer, and an expansion in the size of farms from five-acre plots in some instance to 200-acre co-op plantations assigned to two or three families, he asserted.

Our nation must feed its 40 million people, Dr. Morshidy added, and we now have only six-million acres that can be farmed. These form a three-mile wide strip along both sides of the Nile. The rest of the land is now barren desert. But water and fertilizer can help make a wider strip arable and also increase crop yields, he explained.

This can be done over a projected seven-year period, he thinks, if funds can be obtained from Egypt's oil-rich neighbors to build petrochemical and fertilizer plants, extend irrigation canals, as well as drill deep wells.

Other Egyptians pointed out to us that their economy has suffered from the ups and downs of wars. After the 1956 war, the government curtailed money for the military and turned its attention to internal development such as the Aswan High Dam.

This is the reason, some say, that their country was unprepared for the six-day war in 1967. Since then, more of the funds have gone to military, and their victory, as they see it, in the October war of 1973 assures further military expenditures.

aid. In addition, the country has its own population of two million. From among the Palestinians, come the commandos.

Jordanians say their country could once again be the bread basket of the Middle East, if more of the water of the Jordan River could reach them. Israel has diverted to its Negev Desert most of the water that would flow into the river from the Sea of Galilee.

Efforts to improve the water supply are being made by Dr. Michael I. Marto, director of the economic research department of the Royal Scientific Society (RSS) which is headed by Crown Prince Hassan.

Dr. Marto told our group that plans are underway for the completion of a dam on the Jordan and extension of sections of a canal. Cost is estimated at $240 million. (Next week: Economic development in Lebanon, Syria, and Kuwait will be discussed).

Jordan Attacks Wallace Bid At NUL Convention

(SAN FRANCISCO-CNS) - Republican and Democratic government leaders were blasted for lack of moral leadership before 5,000 delegates to the National Urban League convention here as Vice President Gerald Ford personally appeared to plead for Black support and pledge his commitment to new full employment goals "for all people, including Blacks and women."

Attacking political leaders ranging from President Nixon to Senator Kennedy, Black NUL President, Vernon Jordan, startled delegates by declaring, "instead of fulfilling its historic role of reform, the Democratic party appears to live in fear of a stricken administration and it replaces sound policy initiatives with...fawning upon the symbol of segregation, George Wallace..."

"There can be no greater indication of the terrible state to which our nation has fallen: no greater indication of the failure of moral nerve that inflects our political leadership groups, than the creeping respectability lately granted to Mr. Wallace," Jordan added.

"I have as much sympathy as the next man for the pain and suffering Governor Wallace has gone through," Jordan continued. "And I can try to understand— but without much success— why some black officeholders feel it expedient to endorse one who has power and benefits to distribute...But a segregationist in a wheelchair is just as bad as a segregationist standing in front of the schoolhouse door."

In an apparent reference to Mississippi NAACP leader Charles Evers, Jordan told Urban League delegates, "It is a betrayal of our past for black people to endorse, or to vote for the man whose words 'segregation today, segregation tomorrow, segregation forever,' still ring loud and clear."

"And," Jordan continued, obviously referring to Senator Kennedy, "for national political leaders to make pilgrimages to Alabama, to lend their prestige to his cause, and to publicly mention him as an acceptable candidate for national office, is something that verges on the obscene."

The Urban League delegates also heard other key speakers, including Mayors Tom Bradley of Los Angeles and Maynard Jackson of Atlanta; Sen. John Tunney (D-Calif.) and Col. Patrick Murphy, president of the Police Foundation, all of whom supported full employment goals.

The Rev. Jesse Jackson, president of People United to Save Humanity (PUSH), was the scheduled closing speaker. The Rev. Jackson, who was scheduled to speak following the PUSH convention in Memphis last week, also urged the convening of Black leaders to "push" for new civil rights and human rights goals and urged all civil rights leaders to revitalize moral leadership in the nation.

Fashion Forecasts

For too long, the American Woman has had to condition herself to sometimes accepting shoddy workmanship for the sake of fashion. But what determines a quality garment? What do you look for when you shop for a dress, a pantsuit, a blouse or a coat? To beat the high cost of living, and get the most value for her dollar, every woman should be aware of how to examine a garment for quality workmanship.

Jackie Krygar shops for hundreds of thousands of women, nationwide, as one of the Women's Wear Buyers for Family Fashions by Avon, a mail order operation. "I have always believed that an educated consumer will become a steady customer, and knowing what to look for is not a trade secret," said Jackie. "Any woman can examine apparel for some of these major points:

1. Turn the garment inside out—it should have a clean, puckered free look—no loose threads, spots or stains. Thread color should match the fabric.

2. Seam allowances should be 3/8" to 1/2" and pressed open.

3. Though safety stitched or overlocked seams offer greater strength—alterations are difficult. (This construction is primarily found in sportswear).

4. The stitches per inch should be sufficiently close together to prevent obvious "seam grinning" or "gapping."

5. Hem allowances on dresses, coats, pants, skirts, etc. should be 1-1/2" to 2" to allow for alterations or emergency repairs.

6. Plaid garments should match at the front and back. On slacks and skirts, the side should also match.

7. Interfacings should be used in the fronts, collars and pocket flaps to give the garment a crisp, tailored look. (This feature will also add to the garment's durability through continued wearing).

8. Zippers, buttons should be reinforced for added strength (such as being bar-tacked).

9. The zippers themselves should be a reputable brand-name, easily recognizable by the consumer (i.e., Talon®, Scovil®, YKK®, are a few).

10. Buttons should be securely sewn. A good tug on them should not result in having them come off in your hand.

Jackie scrutinizes fabrics, first, and when satisfied that it is top quality, her eagle eye (developed through years of training with Alexanders and Sears), then decides if the finished product meets the high standards set by the company.

"A fabric determines the beauty and ease of a finished garment," said Jackie, "and should be the latest color, print or design to adapt to market trends. Slip ups can be disastrous! A shrinking fabric may turn that maxi into a mini if caught in a sudden shower."

Ladies—take heart! A multitude of sins can be blamed on inferior merchandise. Very often the splitting seam is not always a sign of middle-age spread—there are times when you can blame it on insufficient stitching in the seam. Fraying buttonholes? Missing buttons? You're not necessarily the sloppy half of the "odd couple" — poor quality merchandise often is the culprit.

I have always argued that our Hilltop club travels first class and doesn't do anything halfway. So, true to tradition, we had to be the first tournament to get rained out on the first day in Iowa all summer until then. Then, it was the first time in our twenty-six year history that we got rain on opening day. And we had to have it on two of our opening days. We were in the middle of our opening day junior events and were hustling to get them done by Thursday night so the gang could go to Waterloo. We might have made it and maybe not, but if we had held things over and mixed them with our adult program, that rain Saturday would have really loused things up. So we cut off our entire junior program and worked on the adult program, and were able to finish that on schedule Sunday. Otherwise, we might not have finished anything. One of the surprises I got was the number of Blacks who entered in the meet. A total of sixteen out of close to three hundred entrants while, not a big percentage, was the biggest list we have had in years. We had some casualties. Esther Snype, who probably thought she owned the women's singles crown, was dropped in her opening match by a woman from New Zealand who was the eventual runnerup. A good tennis player who recently moved to Cedar Rapids, Willie Alma Jones turned out to have a really good flat service and good ground strokes. She came a cropper in her semifinal match against the girl, Susan Patterson from Atlantic who won the thing. Then she and Esther teamed up and got to the semifinals in women's doubles. Miss Jones and Cecil Brewton had nothing to be ashamed of in their mixed doubles match which they dropped.

Then there was a fellow from St. Paul, Duke Greene, who had Erling Jensen, the number one senior player in the nation, talking to himself before he got Greene licked in the finals of the fifty five year singles. Royal Madison came in from Chicago and, as usual, went home with two runnerup trophies. He never did get going against Jack Silverman in the finals of the men's forty five division. Then he teamed up with Harold McCullom to finish second in the vet's doubles. Madison never has a dull moment when he comes to town, but he seems to really enjoy the meet and a chance to meet people he sees only once a year.

In my book, the player who really deserves the most credit for playing would have to be Kizzie Strothers. Kizzie isn't in perfect health, but she refuses to even act like she isn't and gets out there against anybody who will play against her, and doesn't ask any special favors or treatment. She teamed up with John Taylor in the mixed doubles, and they carried their opponents three sets before they went down. Everett Mays, who used to be a permanent fixture in the meet, got into the fifty five year singles, and huffed and puffed, but that was all. In the men's singles, Phil Hayman showed some good ground strokes, but his service played him tricks, mainly because he kept swatting the thing like he was mad at it. A couple of more fellows got into this division, but they had problems, too. Reggie Morrow and a fellow named Huston were kicked out in the junior keys matches before the rains came, but Sandra Hayman was a winner, and if she ever gets to finish her matches will have a good chance to make a strong showing in her bracket.

Another fellow I didn't know played tennis, Burnell Johnson got into the mens forty five, but ran into the eventual winner, Jack Silverman in his opening match. Mark Morrow didn't play in this one, but we had a fine final match between a fellow from Bettendorf, Jim Stevenson, and Arden Stokstad with Stevenson winning. Then he teamed with Randy Kretei to win the doubles crown from Tom McCullom and Ed Palmer. In the women's doubles, a pair who won last year defended their crown. Laura Williams and Kay Anderson dusted a pair of youngsters, proving that doubles is a matter of how long you have been together. Of course playing some tennis helps.

So now instead of being all through, we have to battle the juniors this Thursday and Friday until we get them off. Could be worse, and may furnish a story for next week.

Q. Make hay while the sun shines—that's what I say. But not my husband. But I'm sure you'll approve of what he wants to make: plans about death. In a world that's filled with beautiful places to visit, and though it won't be many years before we're both over 35, he sinks every spare nickel into savings and insurance. When is enough enough?

A. One of the most beautiful places in the world, many a widow finds, is her own home. Some recently widowed women get to keep their homes. Others have to move out. They lose their homes and often get the perils of a city apartment in return. Insurance makes the difference.

Your insurance program is adequate if it provides enough funds so that you can: (1) keep your home; (2) raise the children through school without extreme deprivation; (3) have funds to pay last-illness expenses, death taxes, charge accounts and the like; (4) have some income coming in for you after the children are grown; and (5) do whatever you want your insurance program to do (if anything) about providing retirement funds.

An insurance program isn't a plan about death; it's a plan about how to survive if someone does die—and often how to retire if one doesn't prematurely die. The amount of money required can be considerable. That ain't hay.

UGA Open To Benefit Black Students

The 48th Annual United Golfers Association Open Championship will be played at the Braintree Municipal Golf Club in Braintree, Massachusetts, August 19-23, 1974.

Proceeds will go toward UGA scholarship funds for deserving area black students.

The Open Championship, sponsored this year by The Greyhound Corp., American Airlines, Gulf Oil Corporation, Falstaff Brewing Corp., and WNAC-TV, Channel 7, Boston, is open to professionals, amateurs, seniors, juniors, men and women.

For the first time for the first time this year, the open championship will feature a celebrity pro-am on Tuesday, August 20. Among the professionals playing this day in the pro-am will be Lee Elder, former member of the UGA and now a touring professional with the PGA.

His foursome will also include

Jim Coppersmith, Vice President and General Manager of WNAC-TV, Channel 7, Boston; and William Henry, Executive Vice President of the Gulf Oil Corporation.

The United Golfers Association was born from the first National Golf Tournament for Negroes held in Stowe, Mass., in 1926. Less than 100 golfers participated in the event.

Realizing the need for unifying the many attempts to stabilize and co-ordinate the activities of Clubs interested in golf and the importance of a national authority to uphold the ethics of golf, a national body was organized. A meeting was held and the UGA (United Golfers Association) collectively pledged its efforts and support to a strong and effective organization that would be accepted throughout the United States.

Mr. James Morrow, Hollis, New York, is this year's president of the UGA.

Mr. Timothy Thomas, 1601 Trinidad Avenue, N.E., Washington, D.C., is directing this year's tournament. His phone is 202-399-6229.

World Golf Hall Of Fame To Open In Pinehurst This Fall

Who are the world's all-time greatest golfers? Which shots have been the most memorable? What clubs deserve to be preserved for everyone to see?

The answers to these questions and many others will be recorded for posterity in mid-September when the World Golf Hall of Fame opens in Pinehurst, N.C. The $2.5 million structure will be the largest hall of fame erected for any sport and will serve as a living monument to the players, contributors, equipment and memories that have made golf one of the world's most popular pastimes.

The criterion for induction into the Hall of Fame was set recently by the Golf Writers Association of America. Eligibility for consideration will be based on one ingredient — achievement. The names of the first nominees were announced recently and names of those to be inducted will be released following voting by the Golf Writers Association of America.

The opening of the World Golf Hall of Fame and induction ceremonies will coincide with the $300,000 World Open, pro golf's richest event, played on Pinehurst Country Club's famed No. 2 and No. 4 courses.

The concept for the World Golf Hall of Fame was born in 1971 when William H. Maurer, president of the Diamondhead Corp., contacted professional golfer and resort executive Donald C. Collett and asked him to make a feasibility study for such a project. Collett, under Maurer's guidance, completed the study and recommended that the shrine be a tribute to not just America's golfers but the champions from all over the world who built golf into the great sport it is. In 1973, construction was started on the multi-million dollar shrine set among the pine trees overlooking Pinehurst Country Club's famed No. 2 course. Construction is on schedule and officials are hailing the structure as "the most unique sports shrine anywhere in the world."

The building features Romanesque columns and reflecting pools, and a number of galleries and rooms to highlight the various elements of the game and its great players.

In tribute to the opening of the World Golf Hall of Fame and the playing of the World Open, North Carolina Gov. James E. Holshouser, Jr. proclaimed September 9-15 "The Grand Week of Golf."
