

"Game of Health"

(Des Moines, Iowa, May 16, 1975) Des Moines businessmen and educators involved in the Greater Des Moines Chamber of Commerce Business-Education Alliance will be playing an unusual game for the first time with students at Logan Elementary School, Thursday, May 22 at 1:30 p.m.

Fifth and sixth grade students playing "The Game of Health" will assume the roles of Burp Drinking Fountain workers, Lumpy Gravy employees, a physician, nurses, an airline pilot, a TV star, and Blue Cross and Blue Shield employees.

In the past, the Business-Education Alliance has concentrated on programs designed to familiarize high school students with career opportunities and the part Des Moines business firms play in community affairs. The "Game of Health" was created by Blue Cross and Blue Shield of Iowa as a pilot educational experiment to acquaint pre-high school students with the real world of health care economics; a subject still not well understood by many adults. The patented game involves role playing, instant health care and recovery, decision making, an element of chance, and health care expenditures.

"We feel learning can be an entertaining experience for students of every age", said

Alliance Chairman Sig Jaastad. "If this Blue Cross and Blue Shield educational experiment is successful, other firms in the Business-Education Alliance will be encouraged to acquaint elementary school students with various facets of the business world before they are faced with choosing career paths in high school", he said.

A number of public and private elementary school educators have expressed an interest in scheduling the "Game of Health" in their schools this fall.

RIGHTS COMMISSION VOTES

Blast at Mayor's Statement

Tone Appears Like He Was Speaking For All Des Moines Citizens

Iowa Governor Robert D. Ray looks up after signing a proclamation making May Exceptional Children's Month in the state. With him are Matthew Newhiggin, 10, and Monique McMickle, 6, both of Des Moines. The two children represent the 60,000 exceptional children in Iowa from kindergarten through seniors in high school who are in need of special services in their schools as a result of being gifted, talented, mentally retarded, physically handicapped, emotionally disturbed, or learning disabled.

Convinced that the mayor of the city of Des Moines overstepped his bounds in his statement concerning the desegregation proposals made by superintendent of Des Moines Schools, Davis, the Des Moines Commission approved a letter on May 13th condemning the action charging that it gives the impression that he is speaking for all the citizens of Des Moines.

In order for the public to read the full contents of the letter we reprint it in full.

"The Des Moines Human Rights Commission read with regret the statement attributed to you by the Des Moines Tribune concerning the school integration proposal. If you were quoted accurately it can be concluded that you did not consider the full ramifications of your statement. You are, of course, entitled to your own personal opinion in all matters, but your position as a public official and city leader should involve other considerations. The thrust of the article suggested that you were speaking in an official capacity for your constituency and were speaking for the majority of the electorate. This position is morally untenable.

"Your statement could not have come at a worse time as far as the issues are concerned—the timing was such that it will serve to further polarize and aggravate an already confused and divided city. As a public official you have an obligation to uphold the rule of law, and to promote a tranquil and orderly acceptance of just laws and court decisions by the populous. Unfortunately, your statement will increase the fears of concerned parents and complicate the deliberations of the School Board and School Administration.

"Your statement on housing was commendable. A program to integrate the housing patterns of the city is a meritorious, long-range proposal. This was pointed out by the Des Moines Human Rights Commission in its statement of April 22. In the short range, however, busing remains as the most immediate effective, if not the only, tool for desegregation of the schools.

"Your position on busing is doubly regrettable when one considers the likelihood that the responsible State and Federal agencies will likely find the minimal proposals suggested by the School Administration to be unacceptable. In that case, one

Mother and Son Graduate

Saturday was an unusually exciting day for Mrs. Willa Mae Parker and her son Robert. They both graduated from Drake University! "Obtaining my education and getting a degree goes back a long way" says Willa Mae.

In 1951 Willa Mae began her college career at the Art Institute of Chicago with intentions of obtaining a degree in Art. When she began attending Drake as a parttime student in 1969 her hours were transferred and she continued taking classes. In 1970 through a Model Cities program OUP she began working at Drake as an occupational upgrading psychometrist which is giving various test to students. After working in that department for a year she was appointed as a clinical assistant in the Reading and Study Skills Clinic at Drake under the direction of Dr. Joseph A. Fisher.

"Working in the clinic under Dr. Fisher is when I changed my major from Art to Elementary education," says Willa Mae. Saturday she completed the change by getting a Bachelor of Arts in Elementary Education.

"There were times when I didn't think I'd ever get through, but the last semester I felt that I was going to make it. I plan to teach if given a contract," she says. Presently she is working in the Reading & Study Skills clinic.

Mrs. Parker loves to write poetry and plans to write and illustrate a book of children's literature. When she has time she also does portraits. Willa Mae also attended AIB and Cummings School of Art here in Des Moines.

Throughout her educational years Willa Mae's husband Jack has been a lot of help by preparing meals, cleaning and keeping up with the children. Mr. Parker is retired with a heart condition.

Robert started Drake in 1971 and received his B.A. degree in Music Ed. with a piano major and a string bass minor. He would like to teach music, which he will be doing a little of this summer. Presently he is having a good time and plays four nights a week at Ernie's Lounge.

Willa Mae and her husband Jack reside at 1229 15th with their five children. The other four are Cynthia who is a junior at Drake majoring in Recreation, Debra, 17, the other family artist is a senior at North, Darla, 15, Washington-Irving and Jack, 14, Washington-Irving. All of the children play several musical instruments. Congratulations, Willa Mae and Robert!

How Some Negroes Think About Refugees

Few Negroes have said anything about the refugees that have been brought to this country. Rev. Jesse Jackson, the dashing head of People United to Save Humanity (PUSH) of Chicago sounded off last week demanding that our unemployed be taken care of first.

Speaking to a Negro physician in Des Moines last week, he suggested that the refugees constituted just another layer between Negroes and white people. To illustrate his point another party reminded that when he was in college Asiatics stayed in dormitories while Negroes were excluded and that the situation was not corrected without strong protest by Negroes and other groups prior to and during WW II and the commotion on campuses in the 1960's. Another suggested that even in the hospitals in Des Moines Asiatics have more and better jobs than Negroes.

Speaking to a veteran who had served in Viet Nam when the situation was extremely tough, he said the Vietnamese people were not kindly to Negro soldiers, some of which can be attributed to the attitude of American soldiers. He also noted, and I have seen this on television, that babies sired by black soldiers were discriminated against in child care centers in Viet Nam.

So as far as my observations have gone most Negroes feel sorry for the unfortunate people but they know by experience that proportionately they lose more jobs from the new comers.

I Agree With This

President Ford got a pat on the back by most of the people when he lost no time exercising his right as Commander in Chief of Armed forces and gave the go ahead to rescue the cargo ship Mayaguez.

Of course, nothing one does pleases everyone and this action is no exception to the rule. Some claim the action was too soon which is the view of Senator Clark of Iowa. The action of Cambodia was purely a violation of international law and appears to have been a dare to participate trouble. America has done enough to help these people. Now many are turning their backs maybe because they think we have not done enough which is always the expression of ungrateful people.

While our sympathy goes out to the families of those who lost their lives, were wounded or are lost, it is one of the incidents of being part of our defense organization.

More Encroachment

Reports are circulating in Washington that the Administration backs the right of Federal Officers to break into the homes of citizens without a warrant in search of foreign espionage and in intelligence cases.

As much money as is being spent by the CIA and other agencies to gather intelligence, surely there should be agents smart enough to track down and catch law violators without breaking into private homes.

In recent years, law officers have complained that citizens were unwilling to help discover crime in Des Moines which it must be admitted seems to be getting out of hand. Recently, I notice that they have been tracking down crime here more than ever before and in places which they themselves knew about all these years. It proves that it can be done if they try and this applies to Federal agents as well.

I am suspicious of any law that permits officers to break into private houses without a warrant for any reason. Since the proposal by the administration requires that express consent of the Attorney General or the President must be had before such action there is no reason why they could not go to a judge or magistrate in the first place and accomplish the same thing.

Des Moines Rights Commission Displays Some Courage

The Des Moines Human Rights Commission has criticized Mayor Olson for placing himself, the mayor, squarely against the desegregation proposal made by the school superintendent. The action was unanimous and was bold enough to criticize the person who has authority to appoint the commission.

They are to be congratulated for position for too long the city itself has been the leading violators of equal opportunity; too long have many of its officers acted as if they were not subject to or required to conform to the ordinance creating the rights commission or the state and national commissions. Heretofore, the commission has been reluctant to stand up against the appointing authorities even though they knew that they did not take a favorable position on the job assigned. I am glad to see some bold action in this operation.

Even though all Negroes, as in other groups, can never agree on any one thing all the time, at least they can refrain from attacking each other by bringing personalities and stations in life on the desegregation proposals that are being considered in Des Moines. It is just the old story that to divide is a real weapon to conquer. Surely we cannot do this.

Voting Rites Act Coming Up in US House of Representatives

Sometime during the week of June 2, the House is expected to take up H.R. 6219, the bill to extend the vital protections of the Voting Rights Act of 1965. The House Rules Committee has allotted three hours debate on the measure, to be equally divided between those for and against it. The Committee granted an "open rule", which makes it in order for members to offer amendments to the bill. Amendments Are The Threat Amendments pose real threats to the measure. All the ones we

Bias Suit to U.S. Court

Chicago, Ill., General Motors, the nation's largest car builder, will stand trial in federal court in Chicago later this month, charged with racial discrimination against some 130 black workers at the company's parts division headquarters in suburban Broadview.

The class action suit was filed almost two years ago, but out-of-court negotiations have proven fruitless, said Thomas Meites, attorney for the five named plaintiffs. A trial date of May 27 has been set before U.S. District Judge Bernard Decker.

Last year, a special citizens' committee, which includes former Ald. A. A. Sammy Rayner and the Rev. Ed Riddick, of Operation PUSH, attempted to intervene in the case. "The GM people were very polite," said Rayner, "but they didn't really want to talk about the issues."

The issues center on promotion at the huge plant at 2600 S. 25th, which employs about 500 persons. It is one of the few GM facilities in the country which is not unionized.

The suite alleges that blacks who comprise about one third of the work force are systematically excluded from the better jobs, especially at the management level. Allegedly, 28 of the 29 clerk positions are held by whites, as are 95 of the 98 management positions; also white are 19 of 20 foremen.

know about are aimed at weakening H.R. 6219.

The bill still contains the basic provisions we called for in our last two MEMOs (No. 5-75 and No. 6-75). It would extend the key provisions of the Act for another 10 years beyond the scheduled expiration date of August 6, 1975. It would permanently suspend literacy tests and similar devices. It would extend the protections of the Act to four "language minorities": persons of Spanish heritage, the largest group; Asian Americans, American Indians and Alaskan natives.

Here are the kind of amendments we anticipate:

* Attempts to strike the new protections for language minorities from the bill;

* A move to cutback the extension period from 10 years, possibly to 7;

* Attempts to substitute the Administration bill for H.R. 6219— that would extend the key provisions for only 5 years and suspend literacy tests for only five.

My Two Cents Worth

John Solomon II

In the early morning hours of Friday, May 9, State Rep. M. Peter Middleton (Dem. Waterloo) drove his secretary home after a small celebration in honor of her receiving her Master's degree.

After stopping in front of her apartment building to let her out, Rep. Middleton was approached by a Clive policeman, asking what Middleton was doing in the neighborhood. According to Middleton, the policeman made some "racial comments."

On May 12, Middleton called the Mayor's office in Clive to complain about the "harassment" he received.

This reminded me of an incident I was involved in eight years ago while I was still in high school. I had taken a girl friend home to Urbandale and had just let her out of my car when an Urbandale police car pulled up behind me with its light flashing.

The officer got out of his car and walked up to the window. "Yes, officer?" I asked. "What is the problem?"

The officer replied "What are you doing out here, boy?" "I just let off a friend of mine at her house," I said a little scared.

"So I see. What is her name?" said the officer. I told him her name, he asked me for my drivers license, which I promptly gave him. The officer returned to his car to radio in to check me out.

I waited a few minutes then looked at my watch. It said 1:15 a.m. The officer returned to my car and handed me my license. "Thanks," I muttered. "Just checking. We've had a few robberies in this area," the officer said and walked away.

I was 17 years old at the time and worried about being thrown in a suburban jail. This incident and what happened to Middleton when stopped by suburban police have several common factors.

First, both Middleton and myself had a white female friend with us. Second, both Middleton and myself are black. Several other male friends I have known who are black have told me of similar incidents that have happened to them in the suburban areas with law officials.

To me, it seems that if you are black and are accompanied by a white person, be they male or female, you will face the possibility of harassment by suburban police. Perhaps now, after Middleton's incident and complaints, police in the suburbs will cease this "harassment" of black people.

The Mayor of Clive promised an investigation of the incident. It will be interesting to hear the outcome of it, since the charge of harassment is delicate and difficult to prove.

Children can learn to enjoy responsibility, especially if it results in some extra income of their own. Let your youngster try these ideas for the independent feeling that money can buy.

ON MONDAY, MAY 12, THE GOVERNOR SIGNED INTO LAW A BILL (S.F. 193) WHICH CHANGES the term "adult foster home" to "adult foster family home". The act also increases from two to five the maximum allowable number of foster adults who can reside in a single licensed home.

The name change was made primarily to avoid problems which such homes have sometimes encountered in the past in meeting city zoning and housing regulations or fire marshal standards in those cases where local authorities have interpreted adult foster homes as being institutions rather than family dwellings.

The increase in the number of persons was made to permit existing homes to take in more residents in order to make the service available to more people.

TITLE XX ... (137 DAYS AND COUNTING)

Now that the initial period of public input and comment has passed and the actual process of assembling the state's draft plan is beginning, we might briefly consider some of the elements which are required to be a part of that plan. Both the original Title XX legislation and HEW's proposed implementing regulations list ten elements which must be included in each state's plan. The plan must include: 1) program objectives which are related to the five Title XX goals and which are expressed in measurable terms so that an assessment can eventually be made of the extent to which they are achieved; 2) a list of both the mandatory and optional services which will be provided under the states plan, a definition of each of them, and a description of how each relates to the plan's goals and objectives; 3) a listing of the categories of individuals who will be eligible to receive the services, the income levels involved, and the fee schedules which the state may elect to establish; 4) a listing of the geographical service areas which the state may designate together with the kinds and numbers of services which will be provided in each of them under the state plan; 5) a description of the planning, evaluation and reporting activities which the state has accomplished or will be carrying out under its plan; 6) an itemization of the sources of funds with which the state plans to utilize in financing its program; 7) a detailed description of the organizational structure through which the program will be administered, and the extent to which public and private agencies and volunteers will be used in the provision of services; 8) a visualization of how Title XX services will be coordinated with the public assistance programs

Drifting Off

I was trying to think of something to write for this issue, and was quite dissatisfied with both of my ideas.

So instead of writing about something straight, I decided to just drift off.

There I was, sitting in my kitchen talking with my mom and staring at the black board, which hangs above the cabinet, by the telephone.

So I informed my mother how helpful that board really was to our family. There were times when someone would phone, and that board was the only means of taking down the number and message if any.

Another use for it is to write down where or when an event will take place. That way if something should happen, it will be known by all in the household exactly where one might be.

When I suggested "the board" as subject matter, my mom felt it was suitable if that was what I wanted to say.

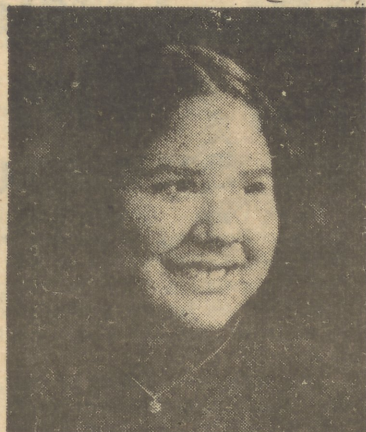

This is as good a time as any, to discuss my total output of articles which began in the latter week of October.

When the ad appeared, searching for high school reporters from the different schools, I was reluctant as to whether I could handle the position or not.

But overall, I feel I haven't done bad. It hasn't been terribly easy writing for six months straight, only missing one week in all.

There were articles that appeared, which I realize could have been more interesting and readable.

Next year, I hope more students will write from all of the schools in Des Moines. For, how will any one know what's happening at these schools, if stories are not written.

Dowling High

by Cathy Campbell

For the past couple weeks Dowling has really been moving. There are so many things to tell about. For one thing the Underclassmen gave a $4.00 dance and only made $60.00 to cover it. Student Council is steadily working on a student center for the upcoming years.

Mark Critelli, senior, won a $250.00 scholarship from Jr. Achievement. This coming Sunday the sophomore class will be heading for St. Louis for a science field trip. Mrs. Hurley's sewing class ended the year with a fantastic style show called "75 Fashion Award Winners".

Beth Bartels, Mary Dempsy and Kevin Sloan have used their artistic ability in creating a 10 ft. by 5 ft. mural of an early steam locomotive on a wall in the West Des Moines Community Center.

Whew! I'm running out of breath and words, so I'll close up and see you next week.

Edmunds School from 9:30 to 4:00 P.M.)

The weekly cost is $1.00 for the first child in a family, 50 cents for the next child and 25 cents for each additional child in the same family.

All children must be enrolled by their parents, and bring a sack lunch daily.

If you work and are wondering how your school age children are going to spend their vacation time, enroll them now in Day Camp at Willkie House.

Registration is limited to the first 80 who apply.

NBC-TV signs Knight, Pips for Summer Series

New York—Gladys Knight and the Pips will be starring in their own weekly series on NBC this summer in what is being described as testing ground for a regular weekly show next year.

The series, consisting of four, one-hour variety-type shows, will premiere July 10 at 8 p.m., according to Lawrence R. White, v-p of programs for NBC-TV network.

Gloria Bell, spokesman for Knight's personal management company, said the group hopes the program will be picked up as a regular TV series next January.

Producing the summer shows will be Bob Henry, best known for his work with the Flip Wilson and Mac Davis Shows. Tony Charmoli will direct.

The group, winners of two Grammy Awards, four American Music Awards and the AGVA award for Vocal Group of the Year, have just closed at the Las Vegas Hilton Hotel and will begin work on their series in June.

The series will mark their second television special—they hosted "Midnight Train To Georgia" last year on NBC.

Paul Robeson — memorable concert singer, Shakespearian actor, linguist, attorney, athlete, political activist — is profiled for the first time on national television Tuesday, June 3, 1975, at 9:00 p.m. on Channel 11. Robeson's half-century career is the subject of a special one-hour INTERFACE documentary.

1. If you see a way to improve a procedure where you work, but you fear that those higher up might be reluctant to institute change, do you (a) make a few verbal suggestions, (b) put your ideas into writing and submit them to your superior in a clear and persuasive form, making sure to inquire later on about reactions to the ideas, (c) keep quiet, figuring nobody would listen anyway.

ANSWERS

1. (b) Often, persuasiveness is a matter of knowing how best to present your ideas and make them heard and heeded. Nothing is so effective as a strong style, a good format, knowing what channels to take, and following up on your suggestions—as long as it takes to bring them to the right person's attention!

We went through the preliminary rounds of the Younker's Kodak tennis meet last week end. This is a thing made up of mixed doubles teams and limited to adults. There had to be sixteen tournaments with the winner of each meet qualifying to play in the meet to be held in a downtown parking lot next week end. Now, I don't know what Kodak is, but since I was asked to put on a meet that would cost nobody anything except some time, I went on with it. For about ten days I had couples in halves. For instance, the day before the entries were closed out, I had seven and a half couples. And there had to be at least eight couples to make it an official meet. Well, we finally made the grade and staged the meet last Saturday and Sunday at Good Park. A funny thing happened during our semi finals. As they were being played off, the person who is in charge of all of the meets came along and saw how good the playing surfaces of the courts were. She said that she had arranged for television coverage for all of the finals to be played at Birdland, but since these courts were so much better than those at Birdland, she would switch the TV show to the park. So all of the finalists came to Good Park on Sunday and we had three of them going at once. But, no TV crew showed up. The lady was a bit put out, but I told her that maybe the crew couldn't find the place. She didn't accept that, and neither did I. But my first thought which I didn't express, was that if there had been some trouble at the park, there would have been more than enough TV coverage. I hope I was wrong, and there was a real reason for the disappointment to the players and Nancy Amend. At our show, the winners in my meet were Kay Anderson and Bob Born. They beat the team of Janet and John Milton. Janet just got out of school last year and just got under the wire. On the other courts there were the Richards, Sue and Bill playing Randy Duncan and Mrs. Duncan with the Richards winning. Then there was Tom Meullon, playing with his sister, Laura Williams against Robin Stockstad and Ed Palmer, and Tom and Laura won. The whole thing was a lot of fun, and there was a surprisingly large crowd to watch the finals. Then it was a good chance to get ready for our Hilltop later on. With no Hawkeye, we should have a big draw, maybe bigger than we want.

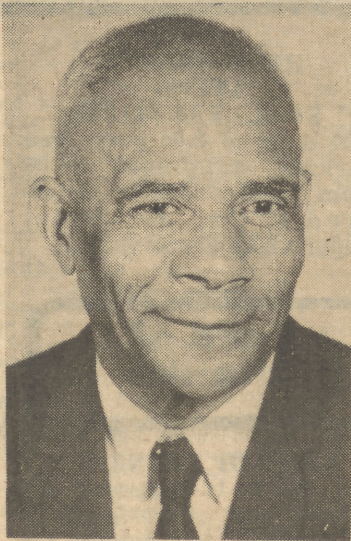

Why?

We are well into the baseball season, and still the manager of the Cleveland Indians can't be described as just that; manager of the Indians. There hasn't been a story about the man that doesn't include the words "baseball's first black manager". This reminds me of the way writers used to describe black athletes up until about fifteen years ago. Then just about every black athlete was always designated as black, colored, dusky, or some such adjective. This went on until there were so many blacks in sports that in order to conserve space, writers stopped using descriptive notes so you couldn't and can't tell now who is of any color from the story, which is as I think it should be. Now, if they will just describe Frank Robinson as Frank Robinson, manager of the Cleveland Indians, and forget the rest of it.

The Fight

I hope you saw the fight last week. Muhammad Ali, in my judgment could have ended that thing just about any time he wanted to. Lyle tried to fight a smart battle, but he was against the master of tricks, and was in trouble from the start. Some fellow asked me if I thought that Ali knows he can't fight too many rounds and tries to stall a while before really putting it on. Maybe. But what I look to happen is for some young eager guy to walk out there and hang one on the Ali whiskers and when he recovers from that, that will be all of it. A fellow is almost as fast as he was earlier when he is in his early thirties, and never loses his punch, but he loses the ability to take head punches as he did even five years before. So, some night, before the champ is really warmed up, he could be caught by a good right, and there will be an upset. One can condition his body to take an awful beating, but you can't condition your jaw. People still want to know if I think Joe Louis could have beaten Ali with both men in their prime. I don't know. Boxers who were fast on their feet always gave Joe trouble, but sooner or later he got to them and punched them out. Maybe he would have trailed Ali for several rounds, and then caught him with one of those lightning bolt rights, and ended it.

Apprentice Electrician

FRED LEON.

Fred Leon was accepted by the Electrician Joint Apprenticeship and Training Committee in 1973. He has been employed by Baker Electric, Inc. of 615 Center Street for two years. At the present time he is working on the Ruan Center. In addition to working 40 hours per week on the job he also attends related training classes on Saturdays from 8 A.M. to 2 P.M. The combination of on the job training and related class room training will insure that Fred will be a competent journeyman electrician when he completes his four year apprenticeship.

Fred graduated from Valley High School in West Des Moines in 1969. He also attended Area XI College for one year before entering the Army for two years. Fred said he was glad he got into the electrical trade because he feels that when he finishes his apprenticeship that he can earn a very good living would hope to find our public officials cooperating with these agencies rather than figuratively barring the doors to the schools or blocking the busses. You have placed your self in a position that will make it difficult for you to exert the positive leadership that will inevitably be needed in the months to come.

"The Des Moines Human Rights Commission, in its statement released on April 22 on school integration, called on the leaders of the schools and the city to create an integration plan which would be a "model for the entire country", in both spirit and implementation. In accord with that declaration, we ask you to reconsider your statement and adopt a more flexible official position which will allow you to help pull the city together at this critical point in its history."

The vote approving the letter was unanimous and was signed by Marvin H. Waldinger, chairperson, Des Moines Human Rights Commission.

AT THE AFFIRMATIVE ACTION WORKSHOP HELD LAST WEEK IN DES MOINES, DISTRICT ADMINISTRATORS, Superintendents, and Affirmative Action Chairpersons heard Commissioner Burns re-emphasize the Department's commitment to its written Equal Employment Opportunity Policy. Burns urged every appointing authority and every employee to support the policy by helping to fulfill action goals in hiring and promoting. Burns also encouraged appointing authorities to use the flexibility built into the Merit Employment Rule of Five for hiring members of the "protected classes".

Workshop discussions included protected class recruitment, educational leave options, working more effectively with Merit Employment, and using personnel policies to achieve equality. A representative from Merit announced that eight new "access centers" will open soon across the state to provide additional testing and counseling sites for prospective employees. Reports from districts and institutions indicated that the Department's busy Affirmative Action committees were helping to implement our Equal Employment Opportunity Policy — but they're not done, so meet with your local committee and give them a hand. We're only limited by what we want to do.
