

Seeks More Business For Minority Firms

WASHINGTON, D.C.—The U.S. Commission on Civil Rights today recommended that the Federal Government increase the dollar value of its contracts and subcontracts with minority- and female-owned firms until the annual amount is at least equal to the firms' representation in American business.

In a new report, "Minorities and Women As Government Contractors," the Commission recommended that the increase be accomplished within five years.

The 189-page report, based on a two-year study, found that companies owned by minorities and females receive far less than their proportionate share of Federal, State, and local government contracts.

Of a total of $57.5 billion worth of contracting by the Federal Government in 1972, minority-owned firms got $400 million or 0.7 percent, although these firms constituted 4 percent of the number of American businesses, the report said.

Recommendations

The Commission report advanced 60 specific recommendations to make Federal contracting programs more effective in assisting minorities and women. The recommendations urged Federal agencies to:

● Increase the dollar amount of contracts available to the programs in order to enlarge contracting opportunities for minorities and women.

● Provide cash advances to help minority and female contractors meet working capital needs.

● Advertise bidding information in minority- and female-oriented media.

● Employ more minority and female officials in the contracting programs, particularly at supervisory and policymaking levels.

● Enforce requirements that State and local governments receiving Federal grants implement affirmative action approaches in awarding contracts.

Defeats Several Crippling Amendments Sent To U. S. Senate For Final Action

Washington, D.C., In a stunning victory for civil rights, the House, on Wednesday, June 4, after three days debate, passed H.R. 6219, the Voting Rights Extension Act bill, by a vote of 341-to-70. All attempts to seriously weaken the bill were rejected by margins of two-to-one and sometimes three-to-one. The House approved the measure in virtually the form in which it came from committee.

Now the action shifts to the Senate where the Judiciary Subcommittee on Constitutional Rights, under Chairman John Tunney (D., Cal.), is scheduled to start marking up a comparable Voting Rights bill in the next day or so.

We want to thank all the organizations and individuals who wrote to House members urging them to stay with H.R. 6219 and vote against amendments.

Worst Amendments BEATEN

When we urged defeat of all amendments in our last MEMO, No. 7-75, we expressed some apprehension about beating one of them: the "bail-out" proposal of Rep. Caldwell Butler (R., Va.), which would have made it easier for states covered by the Act to exempt themselves from its requirements. Although that amendment was barely beaten in committee by a tie-vote of 17-to-17, it was rejected by the House, 134-to-169. Other damaging amendments went down by equally large margins. These votes are a tribute to the effectiveness of the Voting Rights Act of 1965. Many of them were votes cast by members acutely aware of the growing black vote in their districts and the growing importance of the votes of Spanish-speaking Americans and other minorities.

MAJOR Provisions of the Bill Intact

Here are some of the main features of the House-passed bill:

1. Literacy tests and similar devices, only temporarily suspended heretofore, would now be permanently banned.

2. The key provisions of the Act, scheduled to expire on August 6, would be extended another 10 years. These provisions are the ones that: (1) enable the Federal Government to intervene in Federal elections in states and political subdivisions where it has reason to believe minority voters are being discriminated against and (2) require states and subdivisions covered by the Act, to submit changes in voting laws and procedures to the U.S. Attorney General for pre-clearance.

3. The Act is broadened to extend its full protections to four language minorities—persons of Spanish heritage, the largest group; Asian Americans, American Indians and Alaskan natives.

4. As further protection for these four language minorities, state and local officials would have to provide bilingual election materials and information for a period of 10 years, wherever one of these language minorities comprises more than 5 per cent of the citizens of voting age and where the illiteracy rate of the group is higher than the national illiteracy rate for all persons of voting age. (Illiteracy is defined as the failure to complete the fifth primary grade.)

On To the Senate

In spite of the magnitude of the victory in the House, it is always a mistake to be overconfident. It is not too early to start writing Senators, now, urging them to support a Voting Rights Bill that contains the main features of the House measure—10 year extension of key provisions of the Voting Rights Act of 1965; permanent ban on literacy tests; full protections for the voting rights of the four language minorities.

VIEWS and REVIEWS

Help Keep The Youngster Busy

Schools are out for the summer. In addition to those who have completed their formal education that are looking for employment, there are thousands of undergraduates and elementary school pupils who are looking for jobs.

Unfortunately, the unemployment situation is high but I still believe that the youngster who wants to work can find a job. Everyone is not able to get office jobs; on the other hand it has not been easy to get some youngsters to do the rough work even though it pays pretty well in most instances.

It was reported last week that delinquent student loans are running high in some areas while the situation in Iowa is not too bad, just as the unemployment rate is lower than the average.

Some students don't secure loans because they are obligated to pay them back; they want grants with no obligations.

No doubt lending agencies, which have handled student loans, give special attention to those who have made an effort to help themselves. Responsibility means much in business transactions.

In past years, businessmen have gone far providing summer jobs for students. The situation is not as fluent this year. But I am certain youngsters who wish to work will find some type of job to earn extra money.

Rockefeller CIA Investigation Report

The Rockefeller commission appointed by President Ford to investigate the CIA has made its report. It cited numerous violations by the CIA, particularly since 1959, most of which have been talked about but valid evidence was presented in this report substantiating the charges.

The CIA is designed to gather evidence of illegal acts in the United States but has no authority to operate in foreign countries. Evidence of assassination of heads of states in other countries has been turned over to Congress. Its investigation is already in progress.

It is unfortunate that charges of assassination of foreign heads of states is being broadcast. In view of the sad experience America suffered in the eyes of small countries in its flight from Southeast Asia, this has shaken the confidence of many.

Some members of Congress insist that people have a right to know what our public officials are doing in order to judge the value of their work. As bad as the situation is and since the public knows generally through the news media that such conditions exist we might as well have solid evidence in the open.

Making Progress By Preparation

Iowa has its first Negro Highway Patrolman. He completed the course provided in the school conducted by the commission and has been assigned to an area.

When the highway patrol was activated some years ago and for many years thereafter, efforts were made by Negroes to get on the force but without success.

More recently efforts have been made to recruit minorities in the organization but for some reason nothing was accomplished. This new move comes after the school was set up to prepare applicants. However, in the instance of the Negro patrolman, he took a cut in pay in order to begin a career in statewide law enforcement.

For years, statewide organizations have complained that minorities were passed up in the selection of fireman and patrolman. Responding to the pressure, two fireman were added to the force a few years ago in spite of objections by president of the firemen's organization and who represented a district in the legislature which comprised a large segment of minority voters. Today one is in service and the other left for California. There have been no problems in the course of his service.

The police department has moved to add more minorities to the force but their success has not been as satisfactory as one would expect. It is another instance where opportunity has been opened but too few have taken advantage of it.

The whole climate in this field has changed in recent years. Youngsters looking for employment should investigate these opportunities which pay a living wage with additional benefits.

Refugee Camps

A committee named by Senator Kennedy of Mass. to investigate refugee camps has reported that miserable conditions prevail in them.

In a statement issued, he blames the poor system of processing the refugees and the slow down in the willingness of citizens to take the refugees as was done in the beginning.

It is understandable that smooth machinery would not be working at once because the problems were dropped in the officials' hands without preparation and time to organize. Then too the temper of aiding the unfortunate cools off as time passes on.

Health News

Final regulations for a new education and counseling program to help combat sudden infant death syndrome (SIDS) were issued June 6 by HEW Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger.

SIDS, also known as crib death, claims 8,000 children's lives each year in the United States. It is the sudden death of any infant which is unexpected and unexplained by medical history, and in which a thorough post mortem examination fails to demonstrate an adequate cause for death.

The new program, which will be administered by the Health Services Administration, will provide for community based SIDS family counseling projects and for development and distribution of public information and professional education materials.

Georgia Officers Charged With Assault

LUMBER CITY, Ga. — A white south Georgia police chief and his patrolman have been suspended after a terrifying incident reminiscent of the days of night-riding lynch parties and bottled moonshine protection operations.

The assault victim, dumped bloodied and half naked on the highway after being beaten and cut.

More than a month after he was attacked, the victim is fearful of returning home, despite FBI involvement in the case.

"No, no, no," said Fletcher King, Jr., 35, "You can forget that. No way. I ain't never going back there."

"Ray Cook told me if I ever came back I'd be killed. He would have someone do it or do it himself."

Ray Cook is the suspended police chief. Jimmy Creamer is the suspended patrolman.

They are free on $6,000 bond after being charged with aggravated assault in the beating and knife cutting of King on April 13, according to a spokesman at the Georgia Bureau of Investigation (GBI).

KDIN-TV plans summer daytime program changes

With regular in-school, daytime programming discontinued until the '75-'76 school year begins, the Iowa Educational Broadcasting Network, seen locally on KDIN-TV Channel 11, will continue to provide daytime programming but, with a schedule for the whole family.

For many years viewers have been asking that SESAME STREET and THE ELECTRIC COMPANY remain on the air during the summertime. It seemed a reasonable extension of this to program the morning for children and the afternoon for a wider audience. The IEBN daytime schedule will provide Iowans with an alternative to the other daytime viewing fare.

SESAME STREET will be telecast at 9 a.m., MISTER ROGERS' NEIGHBORHOOD at 10 a.m., VILLA ALEGRE at 10:30 a.m. ELECTRIC COMPANY at 11:30 a.m. The 11 a.m. time slot will be filled with special films and some new series.

MESSIAH TEMPLE CHURCH NEWS

Messiah Temple was blessed to have Sister Florence Waltz as our guest speaker last Sunday. Her message was one of encouragement, telling us how life as a true Christian is one of persecution but not necessarily one of despondancy.

When we are cast down by our cares and disappointments in this life, we are sinning against God. He said He would supply all our needs. One of those needs is a sense of peace only He can give when we are doing what we should as Christians. If you don't have God's peace in you, search your heart to see what evil lurks there separating you from God's gift. We also communed with God's Spirit in abundance.

We were blessed to have our Church picnic last Saturday. It is a pleasure to worship the Lord in the beauty of the outdoors.

Sunday school is at 10:30 a.m. with services at 11:30 a.m. The Life of Christ is taught every Sunday evening at 7. Prayer meeting is every Wednesday evening at 7:30. Come and join as the Spirit of God meets us as we lift our hearts to Him in praise and thanksgiving.

The Religious Climate In D.M.

Often in the past, the religious climate of a community was characterized by the negativism exerted by the church on certain activities. Some have labeled Iowa as the "Center of the Bible Belt" and have indicated that for this reason, one might expect the streets to be rolled up at 9 p.m. and entertainment activities limited to hymn singing and testimonials.

The activities of the Des Moines Area Religious Council, (DMARC) certainly present another picture of the religious climate of this city. The churches united are interested in positive programs for all kinds of people and one needs only read over the agenda of the concerns expressed to recognize that the religious climate of Des Moines shows concern for those in need of help.

The newest related organization of the DMARC is illustrative—the Door of Faith Mission. Under the able leadership of George Holloway, the Door of Faith Mission has been a beacon of hope to wayward men (mainly alcoholics) who are trying to find their way back into society.

Other projects of the Council are similarly directed: The American Indian Project Council; Homes of Oakridge; United Church Women with UNICEF; FISH; a Statement in Support of Public School Desegregation. All of these activities, and more, connote the awareness of the religious community of Des Moines that there are problems which need attention. Whereas a single congregation working alone is able to do only part of this work, the DMARC, representing 106 congregations, is able to do a great deal more.

What is the religious climate of Des Moines? It is healthy, thank you, and concerned about the "least of these." Perhaps this message will not penetrate the literary towers of the eastern seaboard, but at least we can make that report to our own constituency with the firm belief that it is happening in the activities of DMARC.

Attended Funeral

Mrs. M. Bagby recently returned from LaPlata, Maryland, where she attended the funeral of her son, Woodrow Smith. He was born at Enterprise, Iowa, and reared in Des Moines, Iowa, where he attended Public School; and Sunday School at the Shiloh Baptist Church. Accompanying her in flight to Newark, New Jersey was a niece Mrs. Blossom Deering. They were met by her oldest son, John Smith, and they motored on to LaPlata Maryland for the services.

Woodrow Smith is also the nephew of Mrs. Alberta Hunter of Des Moines, Iowa, and Mr. LeVester Cunningham of Tulsa, Oklahoma.

Volunteers needed at Living History Farm

Although many Des Moines and West Des Moines residents have already donated time to work at Living History Farms, more volunteers are needed, says Sue Ditzel, education director for the farms.

"We are looking for more concerned people willing to donate a portion of their time and skill to the farm," Ditzel said. "And we are making every effort to put them where their interest lies." New jobs that volunteers can fill immediately include positions as tour guides or workers in the quilt house, in the museum, on the pioneer farm and on the 1900 farm.

At the present time Ditzel is revamping the tour guide program to accommodate the 300 to 500 children that visit the farm everyday, and tour guides are desperately needed.

Anyone sincerely interested and willing to share a piece of the past with tourists is welcome to sign up for volunteer work. Ditzel, who started as a volunteer, said she likes to have volunteers work half days, but that they can work as much as they want.

Anyone interested in becoming a volunteer should contact Sue Ditzel at 278-5286 for further information.

First Folk Festival set for History Farms

Living History Farms announces that the first Bluegrass Music Festival for the year slated to take place at the Flynn Mansion on June 14-15 from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.

According to Steve Heselton, supervisor for the weekend festival and a worker at the farm, the purpose of the weekend is to establish a contact center for groups to trade tunes and to play. Although the groups

A World-wide Fight

Through an international exchange program, the American Cancer Society sponsors the ACS-Eleanor Roosevelt Cancer Fellowships. Continue this work by giving to the ACS during its April Crusade.

will not be paid to perform at the festival, Heselton said he is expecting several auditions.

"Both groups and individuals can perform here, and it's an excellent opportunity for them to get acquainted with each other," he said. "I'm still looking for people to play, so anyone interested should contact Living History Farms." Heselton has already scheduled such groups as the Iowa Old Fiddlers, Bluegrass Sunday and other bands with fiddlers and banjo players.

The main events will be held at the Flynn Mansion, and a small get-together for the players will be held at the pioneer farm. In addition to viewing the festival, visitors can also see the rest of the farm.

Even though this is the first time the farm has attempted a bluegrass festival, Heselton is optimistic about the weekend and said he expects a crowd of over 3,000 people. "The main idea is to get people motivated and to get a tradition going by pulling musicians together in one place at one time."

Day Care Center Dedicated To Bank Official

BROOKLYN, New York...A day care center for the infant children of unwed mothers was dedicated in Brooklyn to a bank executive who arranged the $1.1 million low-interest loan that made construction of the building possible.

"The center would not have been possible," said Olga DeFreitas, its director, "without the help of Harold Bishop who we are honoring today, and National Bank of North America with which he is associated. The bank gave us lower than usual interest rates and waived many of the requirements ordinarily applied to a loan of this size.

"We approached nearly every bank before National Bank of North America began helping us out," Mrs. De Freitas said.

In accepting the honor Mr. Bishop said, "We made the loan because we believe it is good business to help such a worthwhile project get started. This day care center is going to help mothers get off to a brand new start and we're proud to be participating."

Mrs. DeFreitas began in 1965 with a small grant from Bedford-Stuyvesant Youth in Action, the local anti-poverty agency, and supplemented it with a vigorous door-to-door fund raising effort right in the Bedford-Stuyvesant area. Later, the community program was given official shape and form under the name The Community Sponsors, Inc. This organization now has gained the support of the Department of Social Services which will finance operation of the day care center upon completion of its construction.

Mrs. DeFreitas' initial work—which began in the basement of a Salvation Army Building—concerned training, education, counseling and health service for young pregnant girls who were unable to attend regular schools and often had been turned out by their families. Her School for Unwed Mothers now offers 8th to 12th grade instruction to about 100 girls who attend for a 22-week period.

As the school progressed, Mrs. DeFreitas realized there was a need for day care service for the infants of mothers who wanted to return to work or regular school. As a result, she began the campaign which produced the loan from National Bank of North America.

The center will provide care for 150 children who range in age from eight weeks to six years for 12 hours each day. It also will offer after-school care to an additional 40 youngsters, which will bring the total enrollment to 190.

Willkie House Summer Day Camp

The Willkie House will be having a Summer Day Camp for children ages 6 through 12.

Special activities planned are arts and crafts, swimming instructions, dancing, music and songs, physical recreation, special trips, games and playground activities, according to Barbara Weisner, program coordinator.

All children must be enrolled by their parents or guardians and bring a sack lunch daily. The weekly cost is $1 for the first child in a family, fifty cents for the next child and a quarter for each additional child in the same family.

Hours are from 9:30 to 3:30, Monday-Thursday with Supervised Open Recreation at Edmunds School (across the street from Willkie House) on Fridays.

Registration is limited to the first 80 persons who apply.

Stop All That Jazz

It is the mark of a contemporary artist to remain contemporary, reflecting the environment of his times. For many, this contemporaneity lasts only for the minute they are in vogue, as they seek to revitalize whatever it was that made them contemporary in the first place.

Artists such as Ramsey Lewis, however, have learned to maintain a balance between what is going on within themselves and the world outside, without fearing to resurrect the genius of the past. At forty years of age, then, it's not surprising to find Ramsey touring with Earth, Wind & Fire (a group he helped spawn), playing to packed rock clubs and crammed college concerts, borrowing some ideas from Duke Ellington, and picking up his seventh gold record in the process, this time for his latest Columbia album, "Sun Goddess."

Although the current Ramsey Lewis resurgence exceeds even his popularity during his mid-sixties "In Crowd" successes, the pianist is quick to point out there has been no deliberate change of image. Indicating there are a lot of good piano players around, but few well-rounded entertainers today who also happen to play piano, Ramsey states, "I'm involved in other facets of music and life. I'm aware of other people, places and things. I'm always trying to enlarge upon my musical knowledge."

Just as so many other musicians who use their instruments as a voice, Ramsey is "fighting labels and categories, which is what the cultural revolution of the Sixties was all about." Particularly frustrating to him are those who classify him, or any modern instrumentalist, as a jazz artist.

YWCA plans "Youth Days"

The Greater Des Moines YWCA will hold a summer program for boys and girls ages 4 through 12 beginning June 16 for 8 weeks. Activities are scheduled Monday through Friday from 8:30 - 4:30. Cost per week is $20.00 for first child in family and $17.50 for each additional child.

This multicultural program will include arts, crafts, dance and games as well as tours, outdoor play, gym and swimming or wading. Each of the eight one week sessions will be developed around a central theme and will involve no repetition.

At the age of 40, Ramsey Lewis remains a contemporary artist. The pianist has maintained balance between the "In Crowd" era and the present music world to continue to pack rock clubs and concerts.

Enrollments may be made by the week or for the duration.

I attended the fiftieth anniversary of our high school graduation day last week. I looked at the fellow sitting beside me and my mind went back fifty years when he was tall, straight, lean and hard. A good football tackle, a mile runner in track, and the state heavyweight professional boxing champ. Well, he didn't stand quite as tall as he once did, blaming arthritic knees, and he was just a little heavier than I remembered him. I was surprised at the little pouch around his mid-section, for in his day he thought that was the worst thing a fellow could have. But, I guess time makes changes in all of us. But he still talked slowly as he did, and was as direct as he ever was, and I half expected him to come up with the moves he used to have.

But now, as I recall things, I don't think George Bourland ever did realize his full potential as a boxer. He had the speed of foot and hand, and could punch. But in the years when he should have been developing, he was going to school. His sparring partners were not big men, so he never got a chance to work against heavyweights until his ring habits had been established. His chief workout partners were one little fellow who weighed around one-forty, a middleweight at about one-sixty and whoever else he could get in the ring with him. So he never learned, or had any instructions on handling big men except in actual competition.

Now I believe that given the opportunities kids have today, George might have made it to the top, for nobody ever worked or trained harder than he did. In any career there is the period during one's early years when the training he gets is the key to success or failure. Had he gotten that key training, George might not have been one of the great ones, but he would have been a contender, I believe.

As we talked, I kept thinking about the fights he had while he was still in high school. He won the state heavyweight title from a fellow who thought he owned the thing while he was a junior. Most of his defeats, I thought were largely the result of not having worked with people his size, and one has to have that in order to be able to stand the roughhouse stuff the big fellows would pull on one. But there we sat, each of us just about in the same age bracket, and each of us glad to have made it this far. I don't think George has any complaints about the way life has treated him, he has had his ups and downs, and I am sure I don't.

I remember what Coach Cress Hoyt said about George when he first came out for football, "That guy has hands like elephant ears". Well, he still has 'em.

Chase em Home

This was to have been the section about the local high schools but something I saw in another paper started me to thinking. I read the seeming protests by some writers about the athletes from other countries who are competing on some of our college track teams and winning. As I gather it, one school that finished third in a meet raised the American flag to show that they were all Americans. Then there was talk about making some rules so athletes from other countries couldn't compete in such numbers here. These are fellows from several African countries and places like Canada, England, Ireland and Australia.

The thing that gets me is that I have to wonder why these fellows are running away from our best. Now these are strictly my personal opinions, and you have to take them for what you think they are worth. But, in track as well as the other sports, our Americans win a few times and go out for the money. In international competition, such as tennis, the other countries come with their very best, the top. The Americans pick out a bunch of guys named Joe while our very best are off chasing dollars, so the other guys win. In track, these visitors work hard at their event, and in the case of some of them, it is a result of the American way of life for them.

When you run, you are a big man on the campus, but when the meet is over, you go your way and we go ours. So all we have time to do is train, so we get in condition. Then the fellows usually aren't spoiled by being hauled around in cars most of the time. In their native countries they get around by walking. Here you better not ask a fellow to walk a mile to the practice ground. In some places people practice with whatever they have, while we have to have the best in equipment even to practice. Putting up rules against foreign athletes reminds me too much of the time when black athletes were not allowed to compete against white boys in some parts of the country. But the other folks insisted they were the best, for the marks made by those blacks didn't count. Will it come to that again?

National Jr.

Tennis League

One of the nation's largest junior tennis programs, the National Junior Tennis League (NJTL), has announced efforts to abolish its own national championships held at Forest Hills.

The decision, announced by James A. Young, newly-elected NJTL president, stemmed from the tennis organization's annual meeting last March in Atlanta.

Young said that NJTL competition on the national level was detrimental to the young competitors who range in age from 10-18.

"The youngsters who play in NJTL are novices with little or no tennis experience," said Young, a Cleveland, Ohio attorney, "and at this level, the desire to win at a site like Forest Hills places too much pressure on the kids."

Since its inception, NJTL has stressed a unique concept in sports called "Instant Competition." This philosophy allows a player, from the moment he steps on a tennis court, to participate on a team without emphasis on prior tennis experience. Moreover, NJTL strives to reach youths in areas where kids normally would not have a chance to play tennis, and make the sport socially relevant, so the participant may play throughout his or her life-time.

Organized in 1969, the tennis organization has grown from its original sites in three cities (Richmond, New York, and Philadelphia) to reach locations as large as Los Angeles and Detroit, to smaller towns like Stanford, Conn., and Middletown, Ohio.
