Williams Surrenders
MONROE, N.C. — Black activist Robert F. Williams surrendered to Union County authorities in Monroe, North Carolina, on a charge of kidnapping a white couple, ending a 14-year flight from justice that took him to Communist Cuba, China and North Vietnam.

He refused to pay a $20,000 bond, calling the charge "a frameup." However, the judge reduced the bond to $10,000 and two Monroe men put up some property as collateral and Williams was freed.

Rev. Davis's message reminds us of the true meaning of Christmas: "Certainly it is just not in the giving of gifts or in receiving materialistic things. But rather it should represent the celebration of the birth of Christ."

The message by Rev.

Davis is scheduled at these times:

Holds Off on Firing Action

DES MOINES — Faced with threats of legal action charging racial and sex discrimination, the Iowa Civil Rights Commission backed off on the issue of firing Joseph Tate, executive director of the commission.

The commissioners met last Wednesday and Thursday in Des Moines amid speculations to fire Tate. Tate stated that he would sue the commissioners if he were fired.

The National Association for the Advancement of Colored People demanded the resignation of Gary Koerselman of Sioux City, the commission's chairman, and James Gillman of Des Moines. Both commissioners said that they would not resign.

Several supporters of Tate stated they would bring legal actions against the commissioners.

Main complaints by the commissioners against Tate were his inability to communicate with the commissioners, failure to provide leadership and failure to reduce a backlog of cases.

Tate charged that when he was hired the backlog has been reduced by 169 cases, there was virtually no civil rights staff, the commission lacked legal power necessary to obtain various records, no compliance procedures for companies found guilty of discrimination and inadequate record keeping and budgeting procedures.

The six commissioners present at the monthly meeting of the commission voted unanimously to have an outside agency to evaluate the commission and its director. The vote to bring in the outside agency came after a motion had been made and seconded to fire Tate.

Present action gives way to a proposal that the Legislature change the law to reduce the commission to an advisory position and to have the governor appoint the agency's director.

All Nominees Do Not Fear Senate Investigators

President Ford has nominated George Bush to head the Central Intelligence Agency (CIA).

Bush, a former Republican congressman from Texas, has headed the U.S. delegation at the United Nations, served as chairman of the Republican National Committee where he refused to allow Watergate problems to get involved in the organization and at present is Minister to Peking, China.

Some members of the Senate committee, which is holding hearings on the nomination of Bush, have attempted to demand a pledge from him that he would not become the Republican nominee for vice president. Bush promptly replied that this was an unfair question to ask any American citizen to refrain from seeking public office and refused to answer.

With this, I fully agree.

It has been the practice of many senators in their investigation of Watergate and campaign violations to bully witnesses and intimidate them because of the questionable situation in which they had been involved. But Bush and Harold Rumsfeld during their confirmation hearings, have replied vigorously indicating that they have nothing to hide nor were they criminals.

President Blind to Tactics of His Campaign Manager

President Ford has stated that he has full confidence in his campaign manager, Howard (Bo) Callaway.

When the President found out that he was behind Ronald Reagan in a recent Gallup poll, I was sure the next move would be to shake up his campaign staff, but he has not. Every time Callaway opens his mouth he says something that antagonizes Republicans against the President.

We are all blind at times, but not all the time.

Christmas Shopping In Full Swing

Earlier this year politicians deplored unemployment and the high cost of living which would bring dire calamity to the whole country.

But an indication that people have money to spend is the high patronage in the night clubs, lounges and fancy restaurants. These expenditures are generally over and above what a fellow has to live on.

Now that Christmas shopping is in its height, shoppers are crowding the stores and shopping centers as never before. It looks encouraging that business is not as bad as some would have us believe.

Of course the credit cards and other means of credit account for the willingness of many to make purchases knowing that they will not be required to pay until after the first of the year.

Peace on Earth, Goodwill Toward Men Still Important

Since 1939, the New Iowa Bystander has printed three special editions each year beginning with a Brotherhood edition in February, an anniversary edition in June, and Christmas edition in December.

These editions have been a source of increased income for the newspaper and often include many advertisers that have used our media from the beginning, many periodically and some on a regular schedule. These advertisers also include clubs, lodges, churches, and individuals that greet their friends and members during the holiday season; merchants say Merry Christmas to their customers and friends.

Christmas is a great season which brings together families and friends who participate in the gay festivities that we all look forward to.

Christmas is a joyous period emphasizing peace on earth, good will toward men. Most people still cling to these principles which enable them to sustain themselves and those about them.

However, the constant rise in the crime rate, wars and threats of wars between nations and factions within nations seem to run contrary to what Christmas teaches.

There is a lot of giving by organizations at Christmas time, much of which serves a good purpose. However, thankful the recipients may be, they long for the day when they can buy their own clothes, food and toys rather than depend upon the kindness of someone else. Yes, peace on earth and goodwill toward men is what we need and should practice, not only at Christmas time but also throughout the year.

Nationwide Outpouring of Solidarity With NAACP

NEW YORK—The following statement was released by Peter Camejo and Willie Mae Reid, Socialist Workers party candidates for president and vice-president:

"On December 10, racist opponents of desegregation fire bombed the office of the NAACP in Boston. The home of a black minister was also fire bombed. The terrorists struck in retaliation against the decision by a federal judge to take South Boston High School out of the hands of the Boston School Committee, which has done everything in its power to block court-ordered desegregation.

"The night-riding terror squads of the antibusing movement have thus served notice once again that they will resort to any means—including murderous violence—to deny black students the right to attend desegregated schools in Boston.

"These outrageous attacks must be met with a nationwide outpouring of solidarity with the NAACP, which has been in the forefront of the fight for desegregated education. They must be met with demands that Boston Mayor Kevin White arrest and prosecute the perpetrators of these vile crimes.

"And they must be met with a renewed commitment by all supporters of equal rights for blacks to build a powerful movement that can stop the racists in their tracks and compel the government to enforce the law on desegregation."

Polk County GOPs Contribute to Party

DES MOINES — Polk County Republicans recently were commended for making a significant contribution to support of the state party organization during 1975.

Republican State Chairman Tom Stoner and State Finance Chairman W. H. Goodrich said that Polk County is one of 29 counties which exceeded the fund-raising quota established by the state organization before Dec. 1.

Stoner, who said that several additional counties are expected to achieve state quota before the end of the year, commended the local Republicans for "realizing the challenge of maintaining a strong party organization in non-election years, and meeting that challenge." He said the contributions from Polk County Republicans have enabled the party to continue current operations and eliminate nearly half of the debt incurred in the 1974 campaigns.

"Although we have received financial support from all 99 counties, the Republicans in Polk County deserve special recognition since they have made a significant contribution to the welfare of the Republican Party in Iowa during 1975," Stoner said. "Without their support, it is doubtful that we could have maintained a viable party program during 1975."

Stoner said the party's primary goal continues to be elimination of the debt before the end of the year. "If we are to regain control of the legislature and elect Republican congressmen, we must rely on continued support from dedicated Republicans in Polk County and throughout the state," he said.

He said that all Iowa Republicans should be "indebted to Polk County Republicans for their support of the state organization."

Reach Out-- Touch A Teen

DANVILLE, VA. — Pageants Unlimited, Inc., the non-profit, producing organization of the Miss Black Teenage World Pageant, announced recently that the organization is now accepting applications from teenagers 15 - 17 years old for its Fifth Annual World Pageant.

Nineteen hundred seventy-six will mark the sixth anniversary of the organization and the fifth year for its pageant production, which has been responsible for making available some $275,000 in college scholarships to participating teenagers from around the world.

Ronald Charity, president and producer, noted, "the Miss Black Teenage World Pageant is not a beauty pageant, in the traditional sense, for we give no points for looks, size, or shape of our contestants, we are concerned with the total development of black teenagers and so we emphasize talent, creativity, ability to articulate and leadership.

"We have noticed in the past couple of years a very small number of black participants in the traditional type pageants in America. Since there are so many talented and articulate teenagers that enter our pageant, we present our top 15 finalists with college scholarships."

The pageant is open to teenagers 15 to 17 years old from any part of the world, with competition in sportswear, talent, creative expression, eveningwear and personal projection. Tenita Jordan, 16, of Columbia, South Carolina, is the current Miss Black Teenage World.

Teenagers interested in entering the 1976 Pageant Program should write to Ronald Charity, Pageants Unlimited, Inc., P.O. Box 1139, Danville, Virginia 24541. Organizations or individuals interested in producing or sponsoring local or state pageants, should do the same.

Charity also said, "our Fifth Anniversary Program will be our biggest and best with the possibility of having contestants from Germany, France, and Africa for the first time. The entire PUI staff is excited about 1976 as we continue to live up to our theme that says, "Reach Out-Touch A Teen."

The Rape Care Center exists to aid victims of rape and sexual assaults. Our counselors are familiar with and can be with you during hospital, police and court procedures. CONFIDENTIAL help is available 24 hours every day to assist victims and their families with personal problems or procedures resulting from rape or sexual assaults.

One of Nation's Most Effective Social Programs

Recently the Federal Food Stamp Program has come under increasing attack from the Ford administration. Critics claim that the program is full of cheaters, that the program is spinning out of control, and that families with as much as $16,000 in income are receiving food stamps. These charges are outright lies and distortions designed to convince the unaware citizens that the program must be scrapped.

In fact the food stamp program, administered by the Department of Agriculture is one of the most effective social programs in the country. Currently 17.7 million people are using the food stamp program. The Census Bureau reported that in 1974 the number of U.S. residents who live below the poverty line was over 24 million Americans. If anything, the program is not broad enough to feed all those who are considered poor.

William Simon on Meet the Press, September 7, claimed the food stamp program has grown 4,700 per cent since 1962. There were only 8 countries participating in the original pilot program in 1962. While Simon's statement is technically correct, it is gravely misleading and appears to be part of the Ford administration's efforts to discredit the food stamp program.

One thousand-three hundred counties had no food program at all in 1962. By 1971 virtually all counties had food programs for the poor. From 1971 until 1974 the size of the program remained stable at 15 million persons, despite the 23 per cent rise in food prices in 1973 alone. For the first time in three years, the food program grew substantially this year, when the unemployment rate rose from 5.4 per cent last August to 9.2 per cent this spring. Unemployment grew by 70 per cent and the food programs by 30 per cent. As unemployment has begun to decline so did the number of program recipients. The growth in the program is due to the national economic situation and not a desire for more government handouts by those who don't need it.

The number of cheaters in the program has received widespread attention. Yet the USDA reported in May that the percentage of fraud in the food stamp program was eight hundredths of one percent (0.08%). Not many government programs can claim such a low rate of fraud (or even waste).

The USDA report shows that 92 per cent of all participants are in households with incomes under $7,000 a year. Nearly half, or 45 per cent live in households earning under $3,000. Virtually none have incomes over $10,000. This shows that the people in the program actually need the benefits and that high income families are not getting food stamps.

The Ford administration is using the food stamp program as a scapegoat for the massive bureaucracy and waste of the Washington jungle. If the federal programs are to be cut it should be those that do not contribute to the people's well-being such as the Defense Department, regulatory agencies, and domestic intelligence.

"McCloud" Floats Away

DES MOINES — Des Moines police are searching for new leads on the identity or whereabouts of a prisoner who escaped from Broadlawns Polk County Hospital Monday morning.

The patient was a suspected shoplifter who assaulted a policeman Saturday and was shot during the altercation. He escaped from a third-floor hospital room while under police guard.

Identified only as "Larry McCloud," the escapee was arrested Saturday at the Hinky Dinky grocery store at Nineteenth Street and Carpenter Avenue by an off-duty policeman, Merlin Tibben, Jr.

The officer said he saw the man and two companions taking food from the supermarket without paying for it. When the man allegedly resisted arrest on a shoplifting charge of food valued at about $50, an altercation ensued between

Labor Dept. Director Cites Worker Gains

Gains for American workers have been achieved during 1975 despite harsh economic conditions, the regional director of the U.S. Department of Labor said Monday in Kansas City.

"Although unemployment insurance is not a solution to the problem, the unemployed — and the economy — have benefited from the unprecedented support it has provided," Richard C. McAviney said. "This year, unemployment insurance compensation programs in Iowa, Kansas, Missouri and Nebraska pumped out about $665 million in state and federal funds to cushion the impact of the recession."

"Many workers at the low end of the pay scale got raises when the statutory minimum wage rose to $2.10 an hour last January," he said. "And they'll have another boost to $2.30 the first of the year."

McAviney cited the first efforts under the pension reform law — the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 — as another safeguard achieved for workers, who can now be more sure of retirement benefits they earn. He also noted increased research by the Occupational Safety and Health Administration (OSHA) aimed at identifying and regulating health hazards in the workplace.

"In the past, safety from visible hazards has been the emphasis," he said. "Now we're beginning to identify the invisible threats, too, which prey insidiously on workers, causing a variety of occupational diseases."

McAviney said that International Women's Year has helped focus attention on special problems of and lingering discrimination against women workers. He said he was pleased that the Department has changed the gender-oriented name of the Manpower Administration to Employment and Training Administration.

"The new title reflects more accurately our activities aimed at getting people into jobs or giving them the skills they need for jobs. More good jobs are the real cure for our ailing economy," he said.

U.S. Supreme Court Reviews Williams' Case

SUPREME COURT

The United States Supreme Court has agreed to remove the conviction of Robert Anthony Williams growing out of the death of a nine-year-old girl at the YMCA in December, 1968.

Williams was tried in the District Court of Iowa and was convicted of first-degree murder. He was sentenced to life imprisonment at Fort Madison.

Later, a group of lawyers brought an action in federal court, the southern district of Iowa, on the grounds that Williams' constitutional rights had been violated by the officer who returned him from Davenport to Des Moines relying on the Supreme Court case which held that a defendant is entitled to a lawyer at every stage of proceedings against him even in the process of investigation.

Judge Hanson upheld the petition and ordered that Williams be given a new trial within 30 days or Tibben and the suspect. The suspect was finally subdued by Tibben shooting him in the upper right arm.

The man being sought is described as about 23 years old, 5 feet 10 inches tall, having a stocky build and weighing 180 pounds.

Strikes Down Food Stamp Lawsuit In D.M.

A three-judge federal district court in Des Moines last month struck down USDA food stamp regulations under which commuting allowances provided to students in education or training programs are counted as food stamp income.

The court held that since the allowances are spent entirely to defray commuting expenses and are not available for the purchase of food, they should not be considered as income for food stamp purposes.

Under current USDA regulations, all scholarships or grants for education or training are counted as income, and deductions are then allowed only for those funds that go to mandatory tuition and fees. Any travel allowances provided are thus counted as income without any deduction being permitted.

USDA has already announced plans to appeal the decision (Hein v. Burns) to the U.S. Supreme Court, and the judges in Iowa have granted a "stay" preventing their ruling from taking effect until the Supreme Court can rule on the issue.

Black Females

Join Soph Squad

This year at Des Moines East High School, the Scarlets have two black females playing on the sophomore basketball team. Both of them I must say are pretty good.

Felicia Satterfield is a forward for the Scarlets. She has been playing basketball for three years. Felicia is a ninth grade graduate from Hoyt Junior High School.

The 16-year-old tenth grader at East hobbies are sports, basketball, track and softball.

Satterfield relayed her impressions of East. "At first, East was confusing compared to Hoyt. But now I really like the class system and everything else at East," she said.

Veany Cooper also plays forward for the sophomore Scarlets' basketball team. Cooper also graduated as a ninth grader from Amos Junior High and is 16 years old.

Veany's hobbies are playing basketball. When Cooper is not on a court playing basketball she has a cactus garden to look after.

What's New At ISU?

By Jean Hood

Tradition is the handing down of customs and beliefs that are held important to a family or culture.

A recent group of young parents talked about some of the memories they held about their childhood and some of the traditions practiced by their families at holiday time.

Frequently mentioned was going to church together, decorating the tree, eating oyster stew on a specific night, and going to grandparents' homes. Others remembered the rush of getting presents in the car, travelling all morning to get to a relative's home to eat a big dinner and then rush on to another home for more celebration with no time to play with new toys.

New families might want to seriously consider what kind of traditions they want to establish for their children. What kind of memories do they want to build? Hopefully the young couple will take time to talk about some of the memories of their own childhood—which traditions should be passed on to their children and what new ones might be established.

Wise grandparents will understand that families might want to spend the actual holiday in their own home—coming to visit grandparents before or after the holiday. Or grandparents might enjoy coming to share the holiday at their children's home.

Ashby Speaks at East

Ashby Speaks To

East High Afro Club

by Myra Green

Allen Ashby provided a wonderful listening time to members of the Des Moines East High School Afro Club last Thursday.

Ashby spoke to the students about things he experienced during his many years as sports writer for the New Iowa Bystander, Iowa's only black newspaper.

His topics ranged from baseball, track, football and basketball to a philosophy of life. According to a source, everyone enjoyed his speech, including young ladies who are not sports minded.

Ashby, a graduate of East High discussed some out only 15.8 per cent of teenagers are regular smokers. The percentage of girls who smoke has risen to nearly equal that for boys. Iowa percentages are comparable, but slightly changes at the school since his student days. He stated that back in his days "they only allowed two blacks on the football team. Just in case they went out of town, those two could room together."

"But now," he said, "it doesn't make any difference for times have changed."

The speaker left the students with something to think about. "Everybody is human," he said, "it doesn't make any difference what color your skin is, you are human. We all live in this world together so we might as well get along together."

What factors influenced those choosing not to smoke? For teenagers the most important concern is "control of my future." Most teenagers want to decide themselves what kind of a person to become and to shape their own lives.

The next most important factor is awareness of the effects of smoking on health. The third most significant factor, the survey showed, is a concern for non-smoker's rights. There is a growing feeling among teenagers as well as adults that people who do not smoke have the right to breathe clean air which is not polluted with cigarette smoke.

Other findings include:

—77 per cent think cigarette smoke is a form of air pollution; —87 percent feel smoking harms teenagers; —72 per cent disagree that low-tar and nicotine cigarettes are safe; and —56 per cent are bothered because many adults can't stop smoking.

It just seems as if all teenagers everywhere are smoking their heads off. They aren't.

More than 40 schools in Iowa now have active INS (I'll Never Smoke - I'm No Sucker) Projects sponsored through Christmas Seal donations to the American Lung Association of Iowa.

INS activities include high school and junior high school science lab experiments to demonstrate the harmful effects of smoking. Students learn by observation how tar and nicotine deposits can collect in the lungs and interfere with healthy breathing.

Younger elementary students watch the older peers with enthusiasm, according to Lung Association officials, as the INS leaders give presentations using slides, experiments, and films.

More information about Christmas Seal programs such as the INS Project or about smoking and health may be obtained from the Lung Association, 1321 Walnut St., Des Moines 50309.

Young Ladies Get Involved At Tech

Des Moines Technical High School has a girl's drill team — the Tech High Techniques — which marches at football and basketball games and in parades.

The Techniques march with spirit. Last year, Tonia Narcisse made up a routine for the Techniques to the Ohio Players' "Together."

Senior Denice Eubanks is the captain this year. Besides Eubanks there are thirteen other young ladies in the drill team. They are Mitze Brewer, Patty Butts, Kathy Carter, Lillian English, Lavenia Jefferson, Diane Johnson.

Annie Lewis, Lisa Lowery, Diane Robinson, Marlene Shade, Rochelle Smith, Cheryl Watkins and Daphene Wright. They help to make the Techniques "really together."

Tech also has a flag brigade team which marches with the Techniques. Last year there were no black students participating on the team and now there are two — Carol Hill and Doretha Horton.

Cheerleading Squad

Last year, Tech had more blacks on its cheerleading squad than any of the other Des Moines high schools. One cheerleader, Yvonne McGregor was named Miss Cheerleader at the camp where the Tech cheerleaders attended during the summer.

All but one of the six black students on the squad graduated in the class of '75. Pam Rimley was the survivor. Rimley is a co-captain for the present squad. Brenda Jenkins and Vera Butts are other black cheerleaders for the Engineers.

Sophomore cheerleaders Angie Johnson, co-captain, Lisa Slaughter, Kim Griggs and Donna Richie combine to make this year's squad have more blacks than those previous.

Diane Robinson is also a wrestling cheerleader. Last year, Rhonda May was the only black on the squad. So Tech also have the young ladies involved.

BEGIN WITH BREAKFAST

Breakfast is probably more of a habit than an eating experience, especially with today's life-styles. Time seems too short in the morning to make breakfast a grand experience. But it is one experience you shouldn't skip. Eat a well-balanced cereal breakfast and give yourself time to enjoy it. Try a nutritious breakfast of fruit or juice, a bowl of fortified oat flakes with milk, toast with butter or margarine, and milk to drink.

Detecting Hidden Diabetes Prolongs Life:

Diabetes! Is it a scare word for you? Conjuring up words like coma, early death or a lifetime regimen of shots and measuring your diet? Indeed diabetes can be a killer disease. But today the greatest fear should be as much from having it without knowing it as from the disease itself.

Medical advances have made it possible to control the disease so effectively that most people who have it need not be seriously impaired. Diabetics are found in the ranks of athletes, businessmen, housewives, factory workers, politicians, farmers, growing kids — all living worthwhile productive lives. Their lives are being prolonged dramatically, as long as they take the extra care necessary to keep diabetes from taking its rapid toll if unchecked.

Two Million People Unaware They Have Diabetes

But diabetes is unchecked in the estimated 2,000,000 people who don't know they have it. These are hidden diabetics whose symptoms are non-existent or so mild they don't realize it.

Government health specialists have tried to spotlight the importance of finding these hidden diabetics not only because of the cost in dollars for medical care, lost man-hours from absenteeism or early death, but also because of the suffering from blindness, kidney and heart trouble caused by diabetes.

What is diabetes? While doctors don't know what causes it or how to cure it, they do know a lot about it. They do know that the diabetic's pancreas produce either no insulin or not enough to utilize properly the sugars and starches he eats. This in turn interferes with the body's handling of fats and protein.

They do know the sugar build-up in the body will lead to serious consequences — poor circulation, heart disease, blindness, infection, kidney failure, high blood pressure, stroke. It's a sneaky disease when these problems can be accumulating without the victim's being aware of it.

One way to be sure is to have a blood or urine test from your doctor or health clinic. Some — usually those developing it later in life — have a mild form which can be controlled simply by diet along; they eat a well-balanced diet in which sugars and starches are restricted.

Others can take pills which will stimulate the body's production of insulin. Still others need to take regular insulin injections.

A portrait of the typical new case of diabetes found each year: a woman, over 40, diabetic relatives, few overt symptoms such as drowsiness, thirst, frequent urination, excessive appetite, weight loss.

Business in the Black

The poor prospects of finding a job may have dimmed the demand for higher education among blacks. Nevertheless, jobs can be found for the flexible person who is willing to make some concessions in where he works.

Releases "Sound Off" Results

DES MOINES — Results of a survey conducted by Iowa Republicans in several locations through the state during the past five months reveals a growing concern about increased taxes and big government.

Republican State Chairman Tom Stoner, who announced the results, said Iowans indicated dissatisfaction with the amount of local property taxes and federal income taxes they pay, a concern about increasing government control over their lives and the trend toward a professional full-time legislature.

In response to a question asking where Iowans place the greatest priorities for their tax dollars, Stoner said areas generating the greatest interest among participants were elementary and secondary education, aid to the elderly and police protection.

"The poll, although not a pure scientific sampling, reveals that Iowans are very opinionated about the concerns they have and priorities they have for their tax dollars," said Stoner, who added that the results are being forwarded to state elected officials, including Governor Robert D. Ray, and Republican legislators.

He said that the question which brought the strongest response was directed at increasing government control over people's lives. The survey indicated that 87.8 per cent believe government exercises undue control, while 8.8 per cent said they do not feel there is excessive control. Another 3.4 per cent gave no opinion.

In addition, he said that 69.2 per cent said they opposed a professional, full-time legislature.

In response to a question asking which taxes should be reduced, Stoner said respondents favored a reduction in local property and federal income taxes. He said 46.1 per cent favored a cutback in property taxes while 43.6 per cent want federal income taxes reduced.

Only 7.7 per cent, Stoner said, made a reduction in state income taxes their highest priority and 4.6 per cent favored reduction in state sales taxes.

Of seven major areas listed for survey participants to rank in terms of priority, he said 23.3 per cent made support of elementary and secondary education as their top priority. Aid to the elderly was second with 21.2 per cent, and police protection third at 16.6 per cent.

The results were taken from Republican "SOUND OFF" questionnaires which were distributed in conjunction with visits by the Republican Van to communities throughout Iowa, at the Iowa State Fair and at non-partisan events in several locations. More than 1,600 responses were received at Republican State Headquarters in Des Moines.

New! Central National Bank's TRANSACTION brings banking to

The poor prospects of finding a job may have dimmed the demand for higher education among blacks. Nevertheless, jobs can be found for the flexible person who is willing to make some concessions in where he works.

Engineers, particularly chemical and petroleum engineers, accountants and math majors with some training in computer science and agriculture graduates have jobs. People who take so called "tool courses" such as computer programming, statistics, and economics easily are employed in industry regardless of their academic background. Blacks must continue to concentrate on education for employment by exploring all potential occupations.

There are a growing number of jobs available to every prepared person in certain fields. The U.S. Department of Labor, Bureau of Labor Statistics, Occupational Outlook for the Mid-1980's points out the excellent employment prospects for those willing to work in any number of occupations.

By 1985 over half of the jobs in this country will be in what is classified as white collar positions. Changes in business operations, such as a shift to self-service in stores causes changes in the occupational structure of industries.

Often supply-demand conditions in one occupation will affect workers in another. Nursing, for example, has been restructured in some hospitals, and nurses aides have been used when registered nurses are in short supply.

The "Outlook" by the Labor Department points out the following major categories as the best: professional and technical workers (medical, management, accounting computer and electronics); clerical workers (business and typing); and then craft and kindred workers (construction and mechanical employment).

Service workers will also be needed in increasing numbers for such jobs as FBI agents, police and firemen, beauty operators and maintenance men. The business of America is to take the best of everything.

When the projected positions begin to blossom in the next few years, those educated will fill them. The business of getting a job is no different from a dozen other endeavors. The better educated, the easier it is to obtain a job in our every changing employment environment.

Wage-hour Law Includes More Retail Workers

A hike in the minimum wage is not the only change in the Federal Wage-Hour Law scheduled for Jan. 1, a Labor Department official said last week in Des Moines.

Some employees of chain stores who have been exempt may come under the minimum wage and overtime provisions of the statute, Paul A. Lynn said. He is Des Moines area director of the Employment Standards Administration, Wage-Hour Division.

"Individual retail establishments which are part of a larger enterprise ... such as chain stores ... have been exempt if their annual gross business was under $225,000. That exemption drops to $200,000 a year, effective Jan. 1, 1976," Lynn said.

Individually-owned retail stores remain exempt if their sales are under $250,000.

January first also brings a 20-cent hike in the minimum wage, Lynn pointed out. The basic minimum, which applies to most workers covered by the Fair Labor Standards Act, will go from $2.10 to $2.30 an hour, under amendments to the act adopted by Congress in 1974.

Workers whose jobs were not covered by the act before 1966, such as the employees of smaller retail establishments, will go from $2 to $2.20 an hour, with a further step to $2.30 set for Jan. 1, 1977.

The minimum wage for employees of large farms will rise from $1.80 to $2 an hour.

ALLEN ASHBY with a LOOK ON SPORTS

I don't know if the three major schools in the state are going to have good years or not. Drake seems to be getting better with each start, and may wind up with a fine club. Iowa State just can't seem to get on the win road, and I wonder how long it will be before they come up with a victory. If they don't get one by the time you read this, I would have to say that the coach will be looking back over his shoulder to see if the wolves are gaining on him.

I don't know much about it from this distance, but as I gather it, he seems to stress offense and lets the defense take care of itself. And so far the defense hasn't been doing that. Maybe that's why he has lost so many people who disagree with his style of coaching. If the players don't have much confidence in the coach, he can't get much out of them. Let's hope things change for the man.

Iowa U seems to have a chance to make one of its best records under the present coach. They have an unbeaten mark at this writing, but I suspect the schedule has something to do with that. Still, the Hawks had to rally to beat Bradley, and whenever you beat those guys in their home fieldhouse, you have to have something. The people who make the odds say they will finish fourth in the Big Ten, and with luck, maybe higher.

As it stands now, Indiana is still the team to beat, but if some ballclub can come up with a couple of hot outside shooters on a night, that team might upset the Hoosiers.

Something you ought to know

Our black schools don't get much ink in the daily papers, but several of them could play with the big boys in basketball. This has been possible for a number of years, but it wasn't generally known. Before the major conferences such as the Big Ten and Big Eight and such let down the bars, several black players who could have played in either league went south to schools where they could play basketball.

So the black schools had players who could make any team in the country, but they couldn't get on any of the major school schedules. Another by-product of this was that in intramural sports and especially basketball, the black fraternities won the cage titles in schools like Iowa and other major schools because they had players who were capable of playing varsity ball, and the other teams didn't, but it wasn't the way the black players wanted it.

The University of Chicago broke the Big Ten color bar because they were in their last years in the league, and without blacks couldn't field enough players to make up a team. So, once again necessity struck a blow for equal rights in basketball.

Back on the ranch

Here at home, they forgot to tell Lincoln that they are supposed to lose some games. They act as if they mean to take up where they left off, and have another unbeaten year, although I wouldn't bet on it. The Railsplitters clipped Dowling by a pretty good margin.

One thing I can't understand about Dowling is why Tim Lee has so much early foul trouble this year. As I get it, he sat out one game for most of the way because of foul trouble, and fouled out of the Lincoln game with about four points. Had he been able to come up with his usual fifteen or twenty points, the Maroons might have won that one. I will have to see them play at least once, because I want to see what is happening. I probably could talk to the young man, but I would rather see for myself.

Hoover, the other team figured to have a shot at the Metro crown, may get rolling, and if they do, will be tough. East and North may have to battle Tech for the other spots in the league. What about Valley? We won't place them, but will let them find their own level.

Tech could develop into a good ball club by the second semester, and it is possible that East might get it all together by then also. Roosevelt doesn't look right not being figured in the title chase. For years they have been right up there, and it seems funny to see them struggling to get back into things. But don't sell them short.

Can't let this pass without mentioning girls' basketball. For years I used to argue that there were some good black female cagers in the city and it looks as if they have found a few. For instance, Tech doesn't win all their games, but this Tindrell girl is going to be right up there in the race for scoring honors. And she isn't all of them.

Rate Improvement on Seasonal Games

IOWA CITY, Iowa — Lynn Oberbillig and Valerie Edwards, both of Des Moines, sophomore and freshman respectively at the University of Iowa, play forwards on the U of I women's basketball squad this year.

This year's team is quick but lacks height, Coach Lark Birdsong says. She is in her second year as head coach of women's basketball at the U of I.

Five of this year's roster of 10 varsity players are back from last year, when the U of I tied for second in the Big Ten tournament. They are Becky Moessner, North Liberty; Oberbillig; Margie Rubow, Edlora; Shirley Vargason, Keystone, and Kathy P Peters, Bellevue.

All but Peters, who is a junior, are sophomores. Peters was team captain last year, and Rubow is in that post this year.

Four of this year's team who played on Iowa high school girls' basketball teams which competed in state tournaments are Oberbillig, Peters and Rubow, and Melinda Welter, Hopkinton first-year student. Welter was on the team from Maquoketa Valley High School which made it to the "Sweet 16" of Iowa high school girls' basketball in 1974.

Four team members who hold athletic scholarships in basketball this year are Peters, Moessner, Rubow and Diana Williams, Pleasantville first-year student.

Since the U of I women's basketball program is in only its third year, but is competing against a number of teams from schools which have fielded teams 10 or 15 years, the scoreboard record doesn't give a realistic rating of the team's achievement, Coach Birdsong points out.

"We're judging our performance this year on the basis of improvement over past games of the season," she explains. "After each game, we assess our performance, with each player and the coach having one vote."

Each player also assesses her own performance in each game and keeps a record of her "yes" and "no" games, which she compares with Coach Birdsong's "yes" and "no" ratings on her.

The U of I coach believes that her team's yes-no method of rating both team and individual accomplishment fits the basic philosophy of the relatively new women's intercollegiate sports program at the U of I, where emphasis is on individual improvement rather than on final scores.

Morgan Wins 4th Metro Tourney

First, the National Boh Tournament Coaches seeded Morgan third in a tournament Morgan has won three years in a row. Then the news media says that with the loss of Marvin "Human Eraser" Webster, (1st pick in the ABA draft) Morgan will not be as good as in recent years and to top it all off the media says Billy Newton, Morgan's star guard, is too short.

So how do the Morgan Cagers respond to all this? For the fourth year in a row, the Morgan State University basketball team has proven that they are the top team in the city of Baltimore, as they defended their title in the National Boh Metro Tournament with a 70-64 defeat of Towson State College. And the "too short" guard, Billy Newton, won the Most Valuable Player Award for a clean sweep of honors for Morgan State.

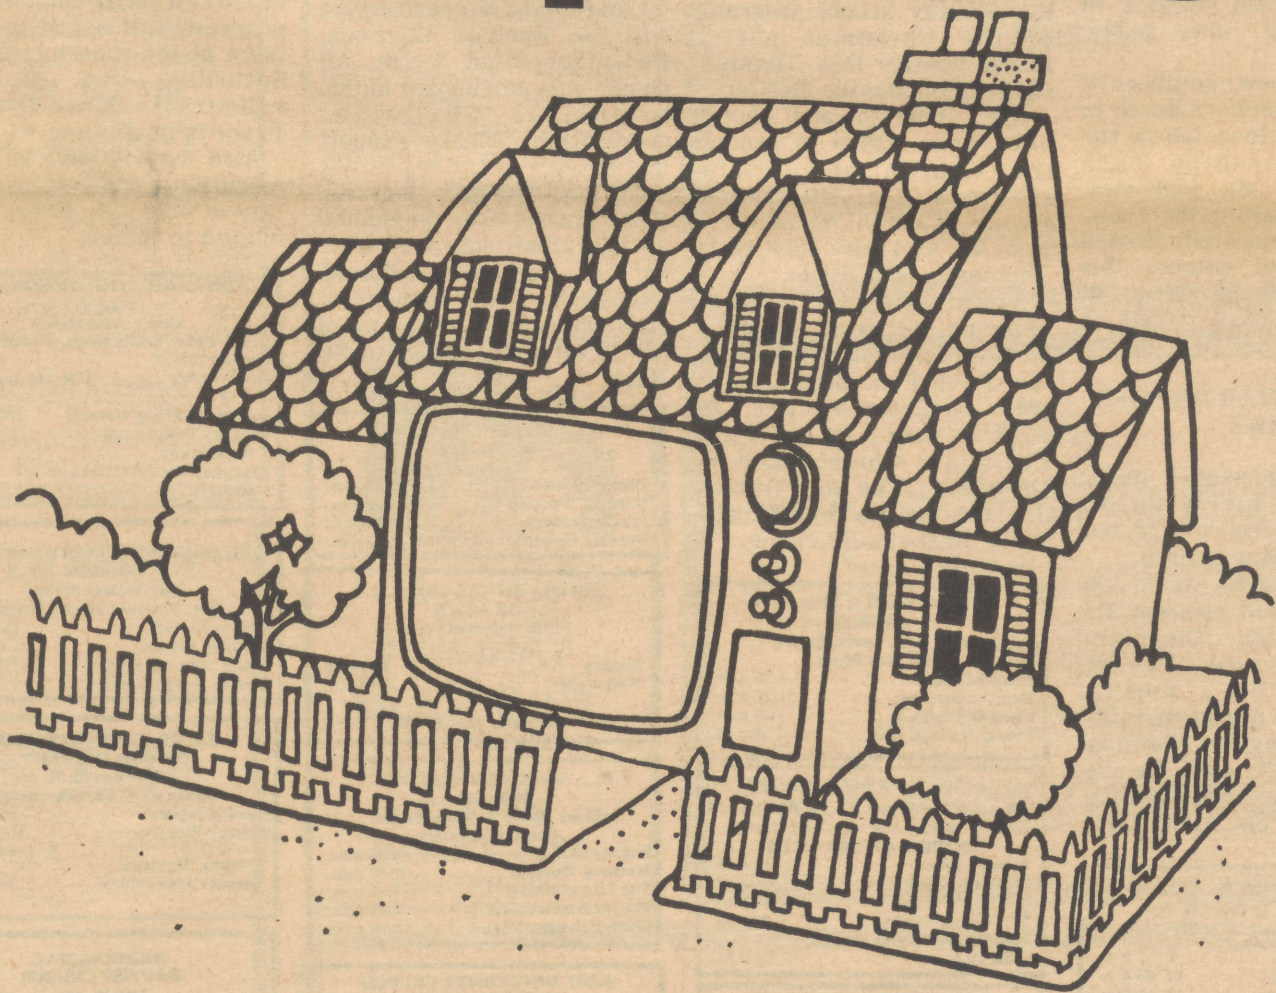

In the first night of action, Morgan defeated Johns Hopkins in a very discipline game 70-51 as Newton and Eric Evans scored 18 and 15 points respectively.

On the second night Morgan, down 37-24 at halftime, took All-American Joe Pace and Coppin State into double overtime before pulling out at a 77-76 victory that put Morgan in the finals. Again, Newton and Evans led scoring with 22 and 21. Ivan Young had 14 rebounds.

This set the stage for the championship game against Towson State College. Four thousand fans packed the University of Maryland, Baltimore County gym to see Towson take a 30-28 lead at halftime, only to fall victim to the strategy of Coach Nat Frazier and the engineering of Newton, Evans and the entire Morgan basketball team in a 70-64 overtime victory.

As Newton scored 15 points and Evans and Freshman Anthony Young controlled underneath the boards.

MESSIAH TEMPLE CHURCH NEWS

Rev. Jacob Reed spoke last Sunday from Mark 16: 1-8. His lesson, "And Peter," was a special message to all of us.

Peter had denied Christ, yet Jesus let him know he was forgiven by singling him out from the other disciples. The gulf from Peter's denial was no longer there; Jesus bridged it. We cannot bridge the distance between ourselves and Jesus by our own power. Still, Jesus singles each of us out to let us know He has taken care of all distances if we just yield to His love.

Sunday school is at 10:30 with worship services at 11:30. Sunday evening services are at 7. Prayer meeting is every Wednesday at 7 p.m. Join with us soon in worshipping the Lord.

EAST UNIVERSITY COGIC NEWS

Elder James C. Coburn, associate pastor, brought to us last Sunday's sermon. It was enjoyed by all who heard him.

Elder Coburn is truly a well-versed man in the scriptures and always gives us knowledgeable sermons. The Helping Hand served a wonderful dinner after morning service for all who stayed to eat.

There will be a special Christmas rehearsal for the children on Friday evening.

Paul Hardin

Journeyman Carpenter

This picture of Paul Hardin, who is a journeyman member of Carpenters Local Union No. 106, was taken at the construction site of the new State Agriculture Building, E. 7th and Grand Avenue.

Hardin has worked for the Ty-Mar Construction Company on this job since it began several months ago. Before that he was employed with the Standard Oil Company in West Des Moines and on several projects at the Merle Hay Mall.

Hardin, who is a native of Sedalia, Missouri, went to high school there and later worked on heavy and highway construction as a laborer and carpenter. Because of the experience he had, Hardin was taken into the Carpenters Union in 1973 and has made satisfactory progress since that time.

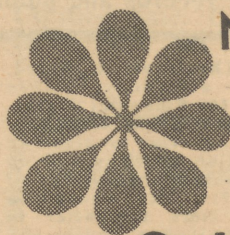

The construction superintendent on Hardin's job said, "Paul is dependable, a good worker and that they think very highly of him and his work."

Hardin said, "I like the carpenter trade real well. I have had some rough times and felt like quitting but now I am glad I stuck with it."

As a journeyman carpenter, Hardin earns $8.99 per hour plus other benefits. He and his family reside at 1534 - 18th Street.

Phoenix to Host 1976 Miss Black USA Pageant

PHOENIX, ARIZONA — Major Davis, president of the Miss Black USA Beauty Pageant announced in Phoenix this week plans to conduct the first annual Miss Black USA Beauty Pageant, July 31, 1976 in Phoenix. There will be 31 contestants from around the United States.

The new national pageant is produced by the Youth Together, Inc., a non-profit organization whose purpose is to bring together youth and adults in an organized manner so that they can better serve their communities in solving some of the problems identified by youth that they would like to deal with, with the cooperation of adult counselors throughout the nation who are experts in the following fields: Drugs, youth, crime in communities, cultural and social environment programs, recreational facilities, youth and decision making, economic development programs, voter registration, and voter education.

The announcement was made to correspond with the presentation of a $19,000 Miss Black USA Silver and Turquoise Christmas Tree, designed by Tim Smith, donated by Harlon Norman, owner of the Cherokee Silversmith Company of Tempe, Arizona.

The tree, a one of its kind in the world is four feet tall, three and one half feet wide at its base, contains 1100 silver strands, 132,000 Norman Turquoise beads and 1800 silver beads. The gift also includes a silver and turquoise Miss Black USA Crown, also a one of its kind valued at $1500.00.

Davis stated he will donate the Christmas Tree to the Arizona Sickle Cell Awareness Foundation for a fund raising effort. The money will be given to participating sickle cell organizations around the United States. The Miss Black USA program's second objective is to support the national efforts to stamp out sickle cell anemia.

Some of the new innovations of the Miss Black USA pageant are the contestants ages 18-26, they having been married and divorced retaining their maiden name and never bearing a child are just a few changes. A creative section has been added to include a talent, swim suit, evening gown and poise section. All judges, entertainers, directors, and coordinators need not be black.

The winning contestant will wear more than $10,000 in Indian jewelry during her reign, $1,000 cash, college scholarship, complete wardrobe, television screen test and appearances, trophies and gifts. All contestants will receive gifts.

For further information please contact Mr. Major Davis at (602) 268-2818.

Once again a troubled world looks to the Star of Bethlehem, recalling the birth of the Prince of Peace. May He be born again in every heart this Christmas, so that at last all men may dwell together in peace and harmony.
