WASHINGTON (NNPA) — The 22 business firms that are providing $20,000 annually in merit awards for editors, reporters, columnists, photographers, and other staffers of the 141 member papers of the National Newspaper Publishers Association will be honored during the Mid-Winter Workshop, January 21-24 in the Virgin Islands.

Also to be honored are the sponsors of journalism scholarships, said Dr. Carlton B. Goodlett, president of NNPA and editor-publisher of the San Francisco Sun-Reporter/Metro-Reporters, who announced the awards this week.

The awards, which will be presented during the banquet on the evening of January 23 at Frenchman's Holiday Inn on St. Thomas are laminated plaques displaying a montage of front-page mastheads of the association's member newspapers in 38 states,

Donors Respond To NAACP Fund Appeal

NEW YORK, N.Y. — The year-end fund appeal of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People to meet a budget deficit is bringing responses from across the country, ranging from large national corporations to individuals.

Among the more substantial contributions was one from the Columbia Broadcasting System (CBS). Making one of the larger donations, $25,000, Arthur R. Taylor, CBS president, in a letter to Roy Wilkins, NAACP executive director, wished for "the continued success of the NAACP in upholding the rights of citizens."

A smaller, but no less significant gift, came from Lorenzo Dufau of the Bronx. Having won a discrimination case through the New York City Commission on Human Rights, Dufau came to the national office and turned his award over to the NAACP.

Following a well-attended meeting of labor leaders, the International Ladies Garment Workers sent in $10,000, followed by $500 from the Glass Bottle Blowers Association of the United States and Canada.

The Transport Workers Union sent $1,000 as did the International Union of Dolls, Toys, Playthings, Novelties and Allied Products.

Churches, clubs, civic groups and fraternal organizations joined with thousands of Americans concerned that the NAACP continue in operation without cutbacks.

Impressed with public response to the fund drive, Gloster B. Current, director of branches and field administration, who is coordinating the appeal expressed his gratification and said that if donations continue at the present pace, it may be possible for the Association to meet its deficit before the end of the year.

Despite the much brighter picture, he warned that there is still quite a way to go.

IP Announces New Unit At Power Plant

Iowa Power announced Monday that the new electric generating unit at the George Neal power plant in Sioux City is now in commercial operation. The $116 million, 500,000 kilowatt facility is the largest coal-fired generating unit now operating in Iowa.

It is owned by Iowa Power and three other investor-owned utilities - Iowa Public Service Company, which built and will operate the unit; Iowa-Illinois Gas and Electric Company of Davenport and Iowa Southern Utilities of Centerville.

Iowa Power owns 23 per cent, Iowa-Illinois 29 per cent, Iowa Public Service 20 per cent and Iowa Southern 28 per cent. The output of the plant is being shared in the same proportions.

The Neal No. 3 unit will burn low sulfur Wyoming coal. When operating at full capacity, it will convert approximately 6,400 tons of coal into electric energy each day. Air quality control equipment is designed to remove 99.6 per cent of the fly ash and soot after the coal is burned.

The plant took five years to construct. It stands 25 stories high and covers an area equal to approximately 1½ city blocks. Electrical output at full capacity could provide the electric energy needs of a city 20 per cent larger than Des Moines.

1975, What Next?

January 1 is the day when resolutions are made by individuals and organizations generally proposing to complete jobs that have not been finished the previous year and projecting proposals for the future.

Last year, 1975, came in on a note of expectation and disappointment because of the unemployment situation which existed at the time and the excessive increase in prices which everyone was required to pay.

Politicians and many economists predicted dire shortages of fuel products and many of the essential items which the public uses from day to day. Apparently, few of these predictions have come to pass. The unemployment rate has been reduced slightly. Few people have suffered for what they needed to maintain themselves.

Revelations of the conduct of the CIA and FBI have been a most disturbing factor, both in connection with foreign and domestic operations. Information concerning these activities was developed by the Senate Intelligence Committee, some of which showed crude plans to destroy heads of foreign nations and violate the Civil Rights of innocent citizens of this country.

While it is important that the Senate Intelligence Committee know what is going on, I doubt the wisdom of spreading the information about our attempt on the lives of people in foreign countries. While the right to know is important, there are some things that should be kept secret by proper officials.

I never felt that J. Edgar Hoover had any good blood for minorities; he was given credit for observing the law and he was held up by the citizens of his country as a pinnacle of law enforcement. Maybe little will come of investigation concerning his illegal activities but at least we can take comfort that there are citizens who do not believe in such conduct even by our "highly respected citizens."

The New Year will bring a campaign to elect a President, Vice President, all members of the lower house of Congress and a third of the U.S. Senators, many governors and representatives and senators of state legislatures. Most of these candidates have pet projects which they claim will solve our problems and get the government on its feet again. This is not unusual.

In spite of our recession, the country has moved forward at a pace not as great as we had hoped for, but most of its citizens have been able to live without undue hardships of any kind. Minorities have made considerable progress and will continue to do so by preparing themselves through education, training and learning to work and live with their neighbors peacefully.

True, the crime rate in this country continues to rise. All kinds of suggestions have been made as to the cause, but fundamentally the cure is not in the courts, jails or prisons, but in the homes by the parents who, after all, are initially responsible for the conduct of their children.

I wish everyone a happy and prosperous New Year and that America, in its Bicentennial Celebration, will emphasize in the hearts and minds of people that this country can continue to be great, if this and future generations respect the Constitution which is the foundation of all our laws.

Bigness Misused

Bob Greene's article in the Des Moines Tribune of December 26, contained two paragraphs which demonstrated that he knows little of the background of the Negroes in this country. He states, "Louis was champion in the days before 'black pride' became a national catch phrase—indeed, in the days before most of the country thought of black men and women in truly human terms at all."

Well, do I remember when Joe Gans, who was the lightweight champion from 1901 to 1908, defeated Battling Nelson at Goldfield, Nevada, in one of the greatest lightweight battles of the country?

Well, do I remember when Jack Johnson, defeated Tommy Burns for the heavyweight championship in 1908, later defeating Stanley Ketchel, one of the greatest middleweights of the century and following the call for James Jeffries as the "white hope" to come out of retirement in order to recapture the world's heavyweight championship title? Johnson defeated Jeffries before the eighth round. In each of these instances, there was gratification among Negroes for both of these accomplishments but not in the sense of the so-called "black pride" which is often used and an excuse by both and white and blacks.

The article further states, "One sports writer of Louis' day described the champion as an 'ordinary colored boy slow-thinking and emotionless'."

This paragraph reminded me of an incident involving a Negro businessman in Des Moines who made a lot of money prior to the depression and had a line of credit at

Lucey Speaks At NCIC Convention

WASHINGTON — Gov. Patrick Lucey of Wisconsin will keynote a multiple-panel inquiry into sharply escalating utility costs to consumers with an address on "How Should Utilities Be Regulated?" when the National Consumer Information Center (NCIC) holds its Third Annual Convention in Washington, January 12-16.

The Wisconsin chief executive is one of some 25 speakers and panelists whose names have been released by the Consumer Information Center as confirmed participants in convention proceedings to be held at the Statler-Hilton Hotel.

In addition to Gov. Lucey, Colorado Lieutenant Governor George Brown and Assistant U.S. Secretary of Agriculture Richard Felner, added to the two Cabinet officers (Housing and Urban Development's Carla Hills and Labor's John Dunlop) announced earlier, head the list on the NCIC program who are now committed.

Brown will speak on local government approaches to consumer problems.

Other subjects on the convention agenda include unemployment, health insurance, manpower training, universal product coding, and the impact of federal appropriations on so-called service delivery systems such as sanitation, food stamps and workmen's compensation that are carried out by local subdivisions under federal financing.

Local NAACP Branch Holds Luncheon

The Des Moines Branch of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People inactive for several months, after the transfer of past president Rev. Ivan Johnson, met at a luncheon-meeting at the Downtown Holiday Inn, December 29. Ms. Maude White, vice president, instituted the gathering.

Following a review of the organization and conduct of the NAACP by James B. Morris, Jr., and Robert A. Wright, a committee consisting of Corliss Williams, chairman; Herman Wadsworth, Derry Henry, Ms. Gwendolyn Fowler and Orbie Boggs was appointed to nominate a candidate to fill out the unexpired term of Rev. Johnson until the election in 1976.

his local bank of hundreds of thousands of dollars. Like many business people, he lost most of it. This man had occasion to write a check for his telephone bill in 1933 in an amount of less than $10, which was less than his balance in the bank. The cashier asked an officer if the check should be returned and he replied, "Yes, he is just another colored boy." (The bank had cashed hundreds of overdrafts for him previously).

The statement got back to this man who promptly removed his account from the bank which he thought was his friend to another bank where he had not been a customer before. This bank cherished his account because as in later years he was financed for hundreds of thousands of dollars for construction projects, both in Des Moines and Washington, D.C. and was also loaned a million dollars by a local insurance company to construct a housing project in Washington, D.C.

People in responsible positions should not allow themselves to vent unsavory remarks toward anyone, for invariably they got back to the offended and lower their estimation in the eyes of the individual.

letter to the editor Concern About Apathy

TO THE EDITOR:

As president of the Cedar Rapids Branch of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People I have been actively involved trying to secure memberships and donations for the national office.

I have to voice my concern about the apathy I observed toward my efforts.

I watched the people drive up to the church Sunday morning where we had set up a station to make it easy for the people to support the effort. They drove up in expensive cars, dressed in the latest style clothing and from all areas of the city.

I wondered if they had forgotten so quickly that just a few years ago this was not possible for them to live in these areas, they could not have the jobs they now have nor could they teach where they now teach and through the 66 years of the NAACP

Now is the time to come to the aid of the NAACP in order to maintain the gains achieved and to pursue our goal, equal rights and justice for minorities.

Let's not be deceived that we have reached that goal.

Peanut Flakes Promise Protein

Peanut flakes may soon be coming on the market, and already they're being hailed as the biggest breakthrough for the lowly goober since the development of peanut butter.

Developed by scientists at Clemson University, the flakes contain 33% protein. Research shows the peanut product can be added to casseroles, scrambled eggs, croquettes, sandwich spread, and even candy for greater nutrition.

In its basic form, the new product resembles potato flakes. However, cheese-flavored peanut flakes for use as a snack food are golden yellow.

Hoover's Undercover Attacks On King Gives Us A Shudder

Recent revelations in the nation's press with respect to the Federal Bureau of Investigation's relentlessly harassing Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. at the express orders of the late J. Edgar Hoover are making even the most conservative Americans shudder with horror.

Much of what is now being revealed on the public record was known privately a long, long time ago by Dr. King and those of us who were close to him. Ironically, many white newsmen also knew that Dr. King was an FBI target, that his hotel rooms were bugged and telephone tapped.

Some of them were sent private tapes and transcripts by the FBI of Dr. King's alleged misconduct. But most of them, thank God, were too decent to print the scurrilous garbage the FBI shoveled to them. They shamefully filed it in the trash can where it belonged. One or two deep south newspapers did print this fifth, however.

One shudders to think that the late Mr. Hoover, who headed such an awesomely powerful secret police agency, harbored such sick hatred of blacks, in general, and Dr. King in particular. The record was always there, however, for one and all to see, if we would but look.

But the nation's white press, with very few exceptions, chose not to look, or indeed, to look the other way. After all, the target was Dr. King, a black upstart minister who had the temerity to stir black folks up when it was perfectly obvious that things were getting better for them all the time, right?

There was even suspicion among some movement figures that some of the nation's press representatives were actually spies for the FBI. To his eternal credit, Dr. King never broke stride. He refused to be intimidated or blackmailed by the FBI. He continued to speak out in strong, vigorous terms for freedom, justice and equality for the downtrodden.

His was the voice stressing unity among blacks and whites; and he addressed the nation's conscience in terms of its constitutional promise versus shameful performance in respect to its black and minority citizens.

Recently, a close follower of Dr. King's, the Rev. Jesse L. Jackson, came to Washington, D.C., and announced the organizing of a D.C. Chapter of his PUSH organization with the Rev. Jerry Moore, a prominent Baptist minister and city councilman, as president of the local organization.

A day or so later, the Rev. Jackson led a contingent of the city's leading black ministers to a private chat with FBI chief, Clarence Kelley. It is instructive to note that neither of the Washington, D.C. white daily newspapers which circulate in a city that is 70 per cent black, carried a line on either of these two momentous events.

Rev. Jackson's visit to Kelley, who seems to be a rather decent fellow, raised among other points the FBI harassment of King. Kelley said this will never happen again. (In employment, there are 20,000 FBI employees, 2,000 of them black, the latter clustered in entry-level jobs; 8,500 agents, only 103 of them black.) Jackson also discussed the removal of Hoover's name from the huge new FBI building in Washington, D.C.

Rep. Gilbert Gude (R., Md.) a white lawmaker, has expressed similar views in respect to removing the name of the late Mr. Hoover's FBI building.

I personally believe, also, that Mr. Hoover, Lord rest his soul, has despoiled the honor and the highest ideals of law enforcement with churlish and unlawful harassment of Dr. King and other citizens (using the taxpayers' dollars in such a nefarious way, yet!)

Some of our white friends, however, say that "the public disclosure of (Mr. Hoover's) . . . manic pursuit of Dr. King has irreparably eroded his name. (Therefore) that is stern and sufficient retribution."

Nevertheless, we will continue to view with great interest what Congress does about this, and more importantly, what this lawmaking body does to establish firmer control over the FBI, CIA and other secret police agencies, in the future. These are the questions that continue to plague and perplex.

Steals From Church

Money and property, belonging to the East University Church of God in Christ, were stolen from the church at 1639 E. University Avenue over the weekend.

Des Moines police were investigating the theft of $60 in cash and $684 worth of property Saturday. No arrests had been made late Saturday night.

Officers said the thief broke into the building by removing a screen on the south door, and taking the wood molding from around the window glass.

Rev. Richard Daye told officers he noticed the cash, a tape recorder, a camera and accessories to musical instruments were missing Saturday morning after the church was broken into overnight.

Masons Elect New Officers

North Star Masonic Lodge held its annual election of officers Thursday, December 4.

Officers elected are Paul V. Best, worshipful master; Hercules Payton, senior warden; Walter Humphrey, junior warden; Joseph P. Wallace, treasurer and incumbent Charles W. Peguese, PGM, reelected secretary.

Appointive officers to complete the roster will be announced at the Stated Communication Thursday, January 8.

While our nation prepares to celebrate its Bicentennial, masonry in Iowa and North Star Lodge celebrates its 105th birthday. In March, Prince Hall Masons throughout the world will celebrate 192 years of existence in the United States.

Established due to the determination of Prince Hall, Peter Bess and other free men in Boston, Massachusetts in 1784, Hall and his followers, being refused a charter from the then existing lodges, managed to obtain a charter from the Grand Lodge of England, much to the dismay of American lodges.

Though there has been much debate and question, while other organizations have come and gone, Prince Hall Masonry remains ever alive and well in the state of Iowa having 16 subordinate lodges under the auspices of the Most Worshipful Prince Hall Grand Lodge.

The Des Moines Lodge is located on the corner of 12th and Clark St. where it has been well over 10 years.

Veterans Administration Questions and Answers

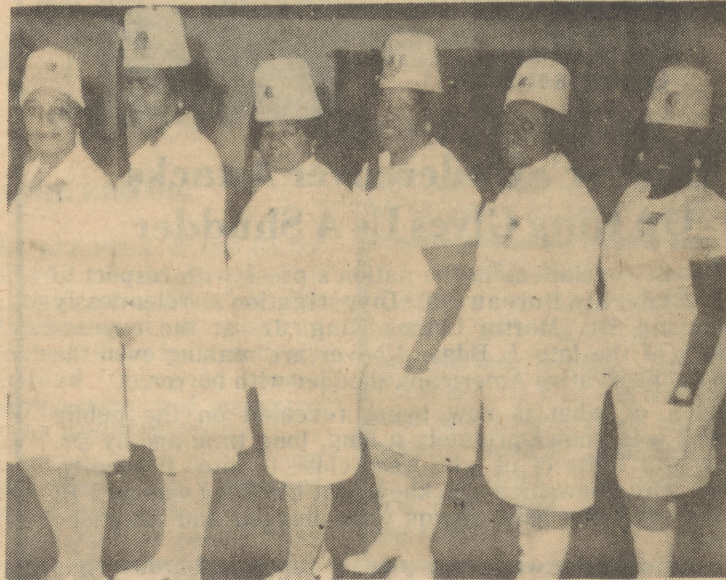

Q — I received a lump sum disability severance pay upon my discharge from service. If I am awarded Veterans Administration compensation for the same disability, will I have to return the severance pay?

A — Regulations require that VA monthly compensation payments be withheld until the amount payable is equal to the amount of severance pay received because of disability. The VA automatically establishes this withholding when compensation is authorized.

Q — I am a World War II veteran who served on active duty in the armed forces from 1942 until 1946. Am I still eligible to use my GI home loan?

A — Yes, the expiration date for all World War II veterans, with basic eligibility, has been removed.

"Jeet kune-do is Bruce Lee's own creation," says Greg Holland, an 18-year-old East High School senior.

Holland knows a lot about Jeet kune-do and he shared his knowledge with me in an interview. He states that Jeet kune do is the only non-classical style of Chinese kung fu in existence today.

Although simple in its execution, Holland said that the form of fighting is difficult in explanation. Jeet means to stop, to intercept; kune means fist or style and do means the way or the power, flexibility, endurance, timing and coordination. Proper nutrition and sufficient rest are also basic assets.

Holland adds that he aims his martial arts ability at the film industry. He has been involved in four movies. The movies were for the purpose of finding which angles and reactions look best on the screen.

The martial arts choreography is grueling at times. Sometimes it takes hours of shooting to get a ten minute fight sequence. It has ultimate reality. In summation, Jeet kune-do means "way of intercepting fist or foot."

Jeet kune-do is also expressing one's feelings with a lot of movement and energy. "Before I got into it, a kick was just a kick and a punch was just a punch. But by involving myself through Jeet kune-do I have learned to put something into everything," Holland said.

"Jeet kune-do is basically a sophisticated form of fighting but stripped to its essentials. My training emphasizes speed, agility, to be perfect," he said.

Holland works with three other martial artists — Larry Quinn, Bill Western and Richard Lepad.

The films are edited and created by Concord Films, Inc. which is in the process of making arrangements for an upcoming film, "Dragons In Fury," which we will begin shooting in January.

Holland stated that he and Quinn will be on KSO's Black Awareness show in the future. In the next few months, he plans to do a film project with and for the black students at Des Moines East High.

classes for six hours every Saturday at Des Moines Technical High School. He studies types of welds for strength, blueprint reading, trade math, signals, and safety measures.

Talton has worked for several of Des Moines' general contractors on jobs such as the Ruan Center, the Control Tower at the airport, and the new South Ridge Shopping Center where he has worked as a foreman.

Talton likes being an ironworker and is striving hard to be tops in his trade. He advises more qualified minorities to take up the trade.

LOOK ON SPORTS

How the News of the Year Looked to Me

You have or will have been bombarded with evaluations of the news stories of 1975, so I will spare you of that. But this is my reaction to some of the stories.

First, there was the fact that I couldn't see why USC was voted the number one football team after the New Year bowl games. They beat Ohio State, but so did Michigan State, and nobody picked the Spartans for too much. Who would I have picked? Maybe Oklahoma.

I wondered that, since so much stress was put on the black managers and coaches in other sports, why wasn't it ever mentioned that the coaches of the two teams playing for the National Basketball Association basketball title were both black. Also the NBA stands out over the rest of organized pro sports like a sore thumb. They have a total of four black coaches—Wilkins, Russell, K.C. Jones and Al Attles—to say nothing of a host of assistant coaches and at least one general manager, Wayne Embry of Milwaukee.

Those guys weren't picked because they were black or because the NBA suddenly got liberal, but because the people who picked them thought they could do the job, and if they didn't they were gone.

Everybody heard about the selection of Frank Robinson as the first black manager in the majors. That was fine, but again, the man was chosen because he had demonstrated that he can manage. I wondered when the writers were going to start referring to Frank as the manager of the Cleveland Indians, which is what he is, and not as baseball's first black manager. I don't think I saw more than two or three stories that didn't contain that phrase. That World's Series had to be the best in years.

Tennis World

I was glad to see Arthur Ashe come through at Wimbledon. I had one stock answer for the folks who always brought up the fact that the man had lost so many final matches, and couldn't win the big ones. I always argued that in order to lose the final match one has to get there and you have to beat somebody to do that.

A couple guys proved that Ashe had the right formula for either beating Jimmy Connors or giving him a tough match. I thought he deserved the number one ranking in this country. Who is number one in the world? Whoever they give the title to, because all of the top players have scars of defeats by the others.

The Thrilla in Manila

The big fight wasn't as big a thrill as people thought it would be, possibly because it was the third time around for both Ali and Frazier, but what a round it was. Now they say that Ali should quit. That is, everybody but the champ thinks that.

Back At The Ranch

I followed the fortunes of the Iowa University football team and listened to the screams of people around me who thought that Butch Caldwell should have taken over the quarterback job. When he did, things turned around, giving people here for next year. At Iowa State, the folks who hire and fire coaches found it necessary to tell the public that Coach Earl Bruce wasn't going to lose his job, although coaches have had better records and been fired. Drake had high hopes for the year and went from bad to worse, largely because of injuries to key men, as was Iowa State's trouble.

Here at home, I got a kick out of the fact that the schools who challenged the supremacy of the black schools in the Drake Relays sometimes had all black relay teams. I usually don't get worked up the Drake Relays, but when I saw an all black girls' relay team win a big one, I wondered if any pride was showing. Maybe it was, but it didn't matter.

The big local story was the fact that Lincoln went unbeaten for the whole year, and looks as if they might do it again. Poor Dowling seems to get into the finals of the high school football playoffs, and fall on their faces every time. This year was no exception. We all thought they would make it this time.

Oh, yes, there was that Tech High quartet of runners who ran short relays faster than they had been run before. They didn't get quite as much media coverage as the famous Flying Four of North got years ago, but they broke that quartet's record. It looks as if girl's basketball is beginning to take hold here and we will have a contender in the state meets soon.

Then there was our Hilltop Tennis Meet. This year we had a host of black juniors from Omaha, and they vowed to be back next year. We got good coverage for the meet. Better make the most of it because the Hawkeye will go on this year, and we will likely have to scramble for

GSU Sweeps Black College Yearly Honors

WASHINGTON D.C. — Jim Hunter, who specializes in picking off opponents' passes and returning punts, has been named the "Defensive Player of the Year" in Black College football in a poll conducted by the Mutual Black Network of conference commissioners and athletic directors.

The Grambling defensive back (6-3, 194, Senior), a native of Silsbee, Texas, intercepted 26 passes in his four years as a collegian and also returned 85 punts for 985 yards and 2 touchdowns. In 1975, four punt returns for touchdowns were nullified because of penalties.

His career total of 26 interceptions fell one short of the Grambling record. He intercepted nine passes in 1975 and returned one for a touchdown.

For his outstanding play, the Buick Motor Division of the General Motors Corporation will award a scholarship of $5,000 to Grambling in the name of Jim Hunter. This money will be used in the school's general scholarship fund.

Hunter's selection means a clean sweep for Grambling. Grambling's Eddie Robinson was named "Coach of the Year," and wide receiver Sammie White was named the "Outstanding Offensive Player of the Year."

Robinson, Hunter and White attended the third annual "Black College All-American Team" dinner on Wednesday, Dec. 10, at the Washington Hilton Hotel.

This dinner for the outstanding performers in Black College football was sponsored by the Mutual Black Network and Buick.

Robinson complimented Hunter on his selection. "Jim is a very excellent player," Robinson said, "a clutch performer. Everybody at Grambling is pleased with his selection."

coverage. Maybe not.

I wondered where they got off rating Esther Snype at number twenty and not rating Alma Jones of Cedar Rapids. I was told they didn't play in enough meets. Esther, you should have gone to Cedar Falls.

Our Hilltop Closed Meet was something to see. It was the biggest ever and we had the finest cooperation from the players. So we say wait until next year.

Now these are merely my reactions to the news stories and just that.

O.J. Simpson Eyes Movies

O. J. Simpson, all America's All-American pro grid superstar, has just about decided to hang up his helmet and shoulder pads for a new career in the movies, reports January Ebony.

It will be a welcome change for the "Juice" to be tackled by the likes of Pam Grier and Jayne Kennedy, instead of the awesome Pittsburgh Steelers' front four.

MESSIAH TEMPLE

Rev. Jacob Reed blessed us with a lesson from Matthew 21:17-22. "How Prayer Helps in the Christian Life," told us of the need for prayer and what it can do for us.

It is a cry to Jesus for salvation no matter how poorly worded in man's eyes. Just as roots are to a tree, prayer is the foundation necessary for Christian growth. Prayer helps us find God's will for our lives.

We give thanks to the Lord for seeing us through another year. He has given us many blessings as we have gained a closer knowledge of the Lord in our lives. We pray that we will freely allow the Spirit of the Lord to lead us safely and triumphantly through another year.

Sunday school is at 10:30 with worship services at 11:30. The book of Acts is taught every Sunday evening at 7. Prayer meeting is every Wednesday evening at 7. Join with us soon in the worship of the Lord.

Erects Bronze Marker At Woodson's Birthplace

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The Association for the Study of Afro-American Life and History (ASALH) and the Amoco Foundation of Chicago will place a bronze marker at the birthplace of Dr. Carter G. Woodson, the "Father of Black History," Friday, December 19, in New Canton, Buckingham County, Virginia.

Dr. Woodson was born on this date in 1875. This year will mark the 100th anniversary of his birth.

The ceremony will begin at 11 a.m. at the Third Liberty Baptist Church, which is about 150 yards from the birthplace. The main speaker is Dr. Edgar Allan Toppin, professor of history at Virginia State College, and president of ASALH. George Harris, director of Instruction of the Buckingham County School Board, will be presiding.

This initial step is part of a joint bicentennial project where ASALH and the Amoco Foundation, Inc. will erect at least 100 markers at places of major black achievement throughout the nation.

Local ASALH branches and other black organizations will be invited to nominate sites from which a final selection will be made by a committee of scholars appointed by the Association's Board of Directors.

The ASALH National Site Selection Committee is composed of President Edgar Allan Toppin, chairman; Dr. Charles Walker Thomas, dean emeritus, District of Columbia Teacher's College; and Dr. Helen G. Edmonds, professor of history, North Carolina Central University. The committee will be augmented by college professors of history and ASALH branch officers in the cities where sites for markers have been recommended and are under consideration.

Realtors Run to Suburbia

Gene Conatser, vice-president of Bank of America, told a luncheon meeting of realtors he doubted that we will return to a normal economic environment. Pointing out that housing starts for 1975 will not even be 1.2 million, he said this is less than half of new housing units in 1972.

The downturn in our economy, Conatser said, was produced by inflation not government policy. The small group of realtors at a syndication luncheon, comprised only a centime of the over 15,000 gathering of delegates to the National Association of Realtors (NAR) 68th convention in San Francisco. Almost too many of the nation's largest trade and professional group of nearly 500,000 members rubbed elbows to be addressed by Carla Hills, Secretary of HUD.

John D. Thompson, president of the National Association of Real Estate Brokers, Inc. (black realists) enjoy an audience of considerably less than the cabinet members. This was unfortunate for Mr. Thompson had an equally important message for the membership. "Don't go to the suburbs with government money."

Brother Thompson placed the blame where it belongs in his opening remark, "ears that tune out the undesirable and tune in that which satisfies." The realtors wanted to hear from Secretary Hills high hopes for the white housing industry. She pleased her audience by announcing $264.1 million impounded by Nixon was released for housing. It is expected to subsidize more than 250,000 units of low-cost housing, generate $6.5 billion in construction activity and create 500,000 new construction jobs.

In addition, HUD's tandem program, mortgages that bear interest rates below the going market rate, 7½ per cent vs nine per cent, on single-family mortgages is expected to aid 500,000 home buyers. A $35,000 mortgage holder, who is likely to be white suburban saves about $20 a month under the program.

Thompson told his crowd to face up to issues and not forsake the inner city cares for the alleged greener pastures of suburbia. Unfortunately, Art Leitch, president of the NAR, was more representative of the realtors. He suggested that some $5 billion under the 1975 Emergency Housing Act be channeled into the single-family home market which is predominately white, away from the predominately black used multi-family units in inner cities.

New Uses For Umbilical Cord

Two surgeons have found a use at last for umbilical cords — the left-overs from belly buttons. They take a vein from the cord and fashion it into a substitute artery. They think they have saved the legs of five persons given the substitutes because their own leg arteries had become blocked.

The umbilical cord is the unborn baby's life-line, bringing blood and nourishment from the mother through the placenta. After birth, the cord is cut near the abdomen and tied, fashioning the belly button, with the rest of the cord then discarded along with the placenta or "afterbirth."

Drs. Herbert and Irving Dardik presented their first report on umbilical cords recently to the International Cardiovascular Society in Edinburgh, Scotland. These two surgeons at Montefiore Hospital in New York developed the new arteries at New York University Medical Center and Union Hospital.

A substitute artery up to two feet long can be fashioned from one umbilical vein, or two veins can be joined together to make it longer. This makes it suitable to replace arteries leading from the groin down to below the knee, the surgeons said.

Eight patients facing loss of their legs were given the new artery when other substitutes were judged unsuitable or when the patients did not have veins of their own that could be used. The operations succeeded in five cases.

New Method Reverses Vasectomies

A new technique for performing surgery with the aid of a microscope may give men who have chosen to become sterilized a chance to change their minds later. A San Francisco surgeon, in a limited number of cases, has had dramatic success — nearly 100 percent — reversing vasectomies by rejoining previously severed sperm ducts with his microscopic procedure.

The first 14 operations, performed in Australia, all resulted in pregnancies in the patients' wives. And 10 patients operated on in California in the last eight months all have normal sperm counts, with two of their wives already pregnant.

The new technique is being perfected by Dr. Sherman J. Silber, a urologist with the University of California Medical Center and the Veterans Administration Hospital in San Francisco. Vasectomy, a simple operation which prevents the release of sperm by cutting and tying off the vas deferens, or sperm ducts, has generally been considered a drastically irreversible step. Nevertheless, it has become the birth control option of about a million American men each year.

The use of conventional techniques to rejoin the severed vas deferens has had sporadic success, but even with the most experienced surgeons, only about 10 to 30 percent of the patients have become demonstrably fertile, said Silber. Those methods have relied on the aid of the naked eye. Silber instead uses an operating microscope which magnified sperm ducts 40 times, as well as highly polished forceps and suture thread finer than human hair.

Pregnant Women and Coffee

Pregnant women who drink more than six cups of coffee a day have a greater chance of miscarriages, a University of Illinois researcher says. Paul Weathersbee says he based his findings on results of a small percentage of the 550 families he observed during 1974. "We found that 13 of the 14 women who said they drink an average of seven cups of coffee or more daily had an unfavorable pregnancy," said Weathersbee.

Unusual Cotton Demonstration Hit Of Exposition

Probably one of the most unusual demonstrations involving a farm product occurred at the Cotton Exposition of 1881 held in Atlanta, according to the National Cotton Council.

The Exposition had been organized under leadership of Henry Grady, editor of the Atlanta Constitution, to demonstrate what cotton manufacturing could do to restore the South's prosperity.

Cotton plants from Mexico, India, and Egypt—along with U.S. upland and long staple varieties—were growing on the grounds when the Exposition opened at Oglethorpe Park on Oct. 5. A model cotton factory, 720 feet long by 400 feet wide, had been erected as the main building.

Shortly after sunrise on Oct. 27—which had been designated as Governors' Day—sufficient cotton was picked and ginned on the ground for two suits of clothes. The cotton was woven into cloth in the model factory, and by sunset the garments were completed and worn by Georgia Governor Alfred Colquitt and Connecticut Governor Hobart Bigelow at receptions that evening.

The Exposition was so effective that similar events followed. Largest of all was the great Cotton States & International Exposition in 1895. With 6,000 exhibits, it drew world-wide publicity and is said to have had a major influence on textile development in the South.

The Second Forty

(A forum about mature women)

by Margaret Brookfield

Have you a problem as a mature woman, or with one? For advice write Margaret Brookfield, Information Center on the Mature Woman, 515 Madison Avenue New York, N.Y. 10022.

Competing With Youth

Dear Margaret Brookfield:

I am 55 and have been divorced for 29 years. Until recently, I worked in an office with much younger women who often made disparaging remarks about "old bags." Now I have been out of work for 10 months, and see the very young getting jobs at companies that have turned me down.

I'm really getting a complex about my age, and have gained 40 pounds since being laid off. Is there no place in the business world for a middleaged single woman?

O.B.

Dear O.B.:

A negative attitude about your age is only going to make it harder for you to compete with younger women. Although it's an unfortunate fact of life that youth does have the advantage in today's job market, there are employers who are looking for maturity and experience. Perhaps your job hunt has taken you to the wrong places. An employment agency may be able to redirect you.

Your gain of 40 pounds sounds alarming. Overweight is a liability at any age and only compounds your problem. Start a diet and check out other ways of presenting yourself to the world as an attractive, vital, and interesting person.

Experts say that chronological age often has less to do with acceptance by one's juniors than does maintaining an open, responsive attitude to new ideas and situations.

Uncomfortable Symptoms

Dear Margaret Brookfield:

I have been suffering from hot flashes, and realize I am going through menopause. Moreover, I am always fatigued. Is this, too, a symptom of my menopause?

D.A.

Dear D.A.:

It may be only that, or might reflect some ailment. Hot flashes are definitely one of the more common menopausal symptoms, but fatigue is associated with a number of other conditions, too. Everyone should have an annual medical checkup, even if they feel in tip-top shape. For women, an additional form of sound preventative medicine is the yearly Pap test.

Consult your doctor about your fatigue. At the same time, he may offer medication that may relieve your hot flashes, if they are caused by an imbalance of the hormone estrogen.

Taxpayers Ask IRS

This column of questions and answers on federal tax matters is provided by the local office of the U.S. Internal Revenue Service and is published as a public service to taxpayers. The column answers questions most frequently asked by taxpayers.

Q. The county widened the street where I live, and everyone on the street was assessed for the costs. Can I get any deduction for this?

A. No. Any assessment for local benefits such as streets, sidewalks, sewers, etc., which usually increases the value of your property, is not deductible as taxes. Instead, you add the assessment to the cost basis of your property. If you later sell the house, this addition to the basis may reduce the gain on your property, and subsequently reduce the taxes you pay on the gain from the sale.

Q. I am divorced and have custody of my six year old son. I help support him, but my former husband also makes child support payments. Which of us is entitled to the dependency deduction for the child?

A. Generally, the parent who has custody of the child for the greater part of the year is entitled to the dependency exemption, but there are exceptions.

Your husband may get the exemption if the divorce decree specifies that he is entitled to it, and if he provided at least $600 of the annual child support.

Also, he may get the exemption if he provided $1,200 or more in child support, and you cannot clearly establish that you provided more.

Q. I work in a factory and have the choice of receiving free meals at the company cafeteria or receiving a cash allowance for them. Would I have to include the cash in my income?

A. Yes. Any cash allowance from your employer for meals must be included in your income. Meals your employer furnishes free are usually not income if they are furnished on the business premises, and if they are furnished for your employer's benefit. However, if you have a choice of accepting either the free meals or a cash allowance, and choose the meals, you must include their value in your income.

Q. I had a car accident and my automobile insurance will pay for the medical care of everyone injured in my car. Can I deduct the medical insurance portion of my auto insurance as a medical expense?

A. No. Since the medical insurance covers anyone in your car, not just your spouse and dependents, it is not deductible as a medical expense.

being manufactured under license from the ARBA.

Membership in various Bicentennial Alliances sponsored by the ARBA was also growing as the year ended. The number of organizations in Bicentennial Alliances are: Service Alliance - 47, Ethnic/Racial Alliance - 22, Sports Alliance - 19, Hospitality Alliance - 8, and the just announced Business Alliance - 4.

The ARBA had also provided official recognition to 209 Bicentennial programs or projects of regional, national or international significance.

The number of Bicentennial projects and events listed in the Bicentennial Information Network (BINET) has risen to over 27,000. The ARBA adds about 1,000 additional projects and events a week to the computerized information system.

Citing his oftstated belief that the success of the Bicentennial will be judged on the number of participants, not spectators, John W. Warner, Bicentennial Administrator, said: "As we reach the threshold of 1976, all signs indicate an explosion of interest and participation in the Bicentennial across the land."

Birth defects kill more than 60,000 Americans of all ages every year, according to The National Foundation-March of Dimes.

Additionally, 608 college campuses and 256 Armed Forces installations had joined the Bicentennial rolls.

Following approval by its 11-member policy board at their December meeting, the RARBA has announced that the Communities and College Campus recognition programs will be cut-off as of March 31 to allow time for processing applications before July 4.

The Board also approved a January 31 cut-off date for license applications for Bicentennial commemorative items now

Health Information Eases Personal, Family Concerns

by Frieda Kaye

TOPEKA, KANS. (MW) — Would you believe teenage boys worry and wonder about female menopause?

When junior high school boys in this state are asked what questions they have about health, their most common concern turns out to be their own sexual development.

But their number two question is: "What is the female change of life?"

"It's always surprised me," said Evalyn Gendel, M.D., associate director of Maternal and Child Health in the Kansas State Department of Health, which coordinates the polling in schools statewide. "We haven't really analyzed this, but I guess menopause is a mysterious thing to these boys. They hear whisperings about their mothers' 'change' and fear they might lose their mothers. Girls know a little more about this — not much, but a little."

Counseling Change of Life

Taking the mystery out of menopause and other health issues is a passion with Dr. Gendel — and not just for puzzled youngsters. Convinced that medical professionals should make themselves available for community counseling, this energetic 53-year-old mother of five keeps in close touch with health centers and women's groups in her own state and throughout the country.

"A common complaint among women I've talked with is that they aren't told exactly what's being done to them — and for them — in a medical examination. Often the physician assumes the patient doesn't want to know!"

Women who don't have the facts about menopause often anticipate the worst, says Dr. Gendel. "A lot of them expect to have pain, to be nervous and neurotic, to have hot flashes and any number of symptoms associated with change of life."

Actually, "many women go through menopause without symptoms," she notes, "while others who experience symptoms when the ovaries taper off their production of estrogen may be helped by hormone replacement therapy."

Menopause & Sexuality

The effect of menopause on sexuality raises many questions, too. "Women want to know if it's true that they'll no longer have any interest in sex after the change," notes the former president of SIECUS (Sex Information and Education Council of the U.S.). "But our data suggest this is usually not the case. In fact, the reverse may be true."

Educating herself about menopause can ease a woman's personal fears and her family's concern about this normal time of life, Dr. Gendel believes, sparing everyone such remarks as: "Don't bother mother right now. She's nervous because Tobacco was the first money-making crop for colonists in America. John Rolfe, who later married Pocahontas, began experiments in growing tobacco in 1612.

Four years later, Virginia colonists were giving so much attention to growing tobacco that they neglected food production.

This led to a regulation known as the "two-acre rule." It required a colonist to plant two acres of corn for himself and for each man servant as a condition for raising tobacco.

Before Virginia-grown tobacco began to be a factor in the British market, Spanish tobacco was such a high-priced product that it was retailed in England by the pipeful.

Tobacco-growing in the Virginia colony was so profitable that some settlers came there to acquire wealth quickly by growing and selling the crop and returning to the mother country to enjoy their wealth.

Colonists' overproduction of tobacco brought on depression, price fixing, and inspection.

she's going through her change."

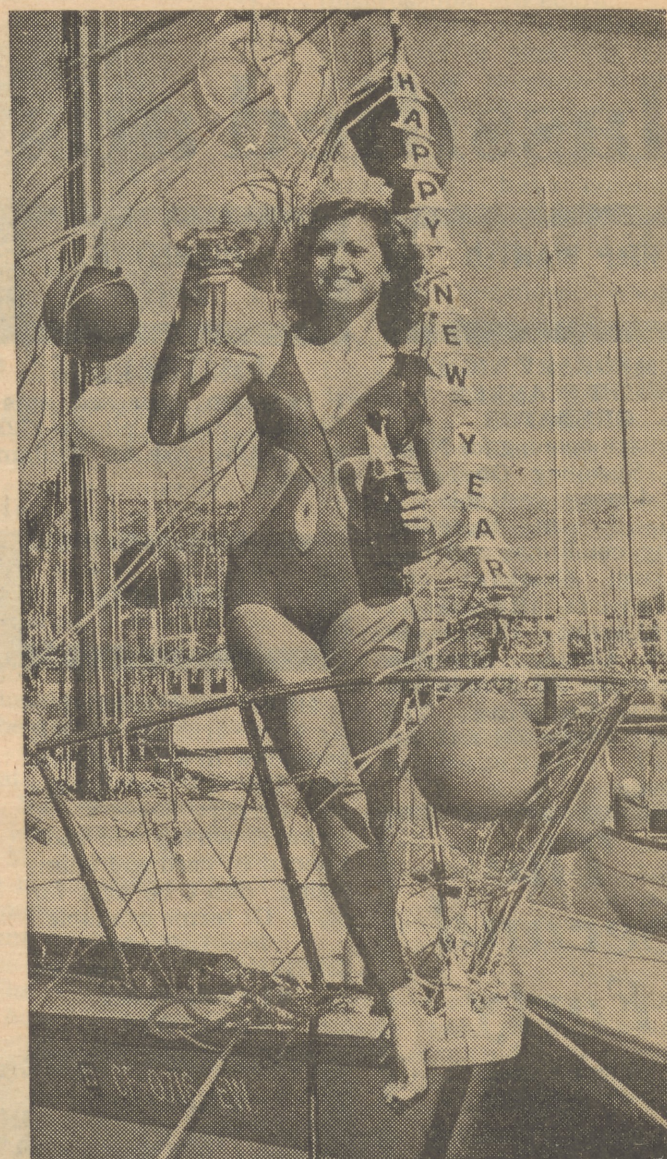

And that should make a lot of teenage boys feel a lot better.
