WASHINGTON, D. C. — Disturbingly low black voter turnout rates, a decided preference among black Democrats for Southern-born presidential candidate Jimmy Carter of Georgia, and strong support among black Republicans for President Gerald Ford are the significant findings of a survey conducted in three states by the Joint Center for Political Studies.

The Joint Center's sampling of black voting behavior in presidential primary elections in Massachusetts, Florida and Illinois aimed to determine black America's response to the campaigns of announced presidential aspirants of both major political parties.

The survey zeroed in on urban centers in each state where large concentrations of black voters offered the most pure sampling areas. In Massachusetts, the Joint Center sampled black wards and precincts in Boston; in Florida, wards and precincts in Orlando, Tampa, Jacksonville, Tallahassee and Pensacola, among others; Illinois, in wards and precincts in Chicago where black populations were more than 80 percent of the total.

In Boston, where in sample precincts only 30.3 percent of registered black Democrats and 17.5 percent of black Republicans' vote. Second with black Democrats was former Office of Economic Opportunity Director Sargent Shriver, an in-law of the Kennedy political clan of Massachusetts, who received 22 percent of the votes in black wards.

For Boston as a whole, the top vote-getter was Senator Henry (Scoop) Jackson (D-Washington), with 22 percent of the Democratic primary vote, followed by Representative Morris K. Udall, with 18 percent of the citywide total.

In Florida, the Joint Center sampled 46 precincts in key urban centers across the state. Black Democrats in sample precincts in that state gave Jimmy Carter 70 percent of their vote and Jackson 19 percent. On the Republican side in Florida, blacks gave the President 65 percent of their vote. Again in Florida, the black rate of turnout at the polls — at 43 percent of those registered in both parties — was disappointingly low.

And in Illinois, the homestate of Democratic candidate Sargent Shriver, the Joint Center survey focused on seven sample wards in Chicago that are almost solidly black. Preliminary reports indicate a clean sweep for Democrat Carter, with 48 percent of the black vote, and a second-place finish for hometown product Sargent Shriver, who drew approximately 31 percent of the black vote.

On the Republican side, in Chicago, President Ford received 78 percent of the black vote, with candidate Ronald Reagan, former governor of California, coming in a distant second in the two-man "beauty contest" race.

Also noteworthy in Illinois is the victory of incumbent First Congressional District U.S. Rep. Ralph Metcalfe (D-Ill.), who trounced Model Cities director Erwin France, handpicked by the regular Democratic organization to challenge Congressman Metcalfe. Metcalfe split with the regular organization and with Chicago Mayor Richard J. Daley several years ago over an issue of police brutality. Metcalfe won 71 percent of the vote in his district and carried all but 20 out of 403 precincts.

Of equal note in Illinois is the primary victory of State Senate President Cecil Partee, who won the Democratic nomination for state attorney general. Partee's nomination marks the first time in Illinois history that a major party in the state has slated a black

Fair Enforcement of Poverty Laws

Since the advent of poverty programs, many have complained that a large number of the recipients were being cared for who were capable of paying their own bills; many simply beat the game by making untrue representations to social workers.

This is a complaint which irritates, and while no one should be denied consideration who meets the test, many people who are against such practices are often criticized for it.

On the other hand, it should be made clear that those in need should be given a full measure of what the program calls for. But chislers should be weeded out.

The food stamp program, which is a part of the overall poverty program, is being overhauled today because, like other programs, it is being abused. The enforcement of any law or program and its success are dependent upon meeting the needs of those for whom they are to benefit. Apparently, the enforcement agencies of these departments are not sufficient to carry them out or those in charge with doing so allow sympathy rather than need to permit ineligible persons to qualify.

A Sound Decision

The U.S. Supreme Court has ruled that police departments may constitutionally regulate the length the hair of officers and prohibit them from wearing beard.

I have always felt that a person who applies for a job is obligated to obey its rules. If he refuses, there should be no gripe if he subsequently loses his job.

Generally speaking, rules designed to improve and expedite the operation of a business are thought out by its owner, which in many cases requires uniformity in order to make a successful operation.

The decision is reasonable and should put to rest the mavericks who wish to dictate the rules for which they are employed.

Losing A Good Employee

Last week, the New Iowa Bystander announced with regret the loss of its editor, Charles McCauley.

A 1975 graduate of Louisiana Tech University, Charles came to Des Moines highly recommended by the dean of journalism school and other citizens who know him.

He did an excellent job and soon became involved in church and civic work in addition to his duties as a newspaper editor.

Charles goes to Shreveport, Louisiana, as one of the reporters on a daily newspaper, an objective he had sought after during his stay in school and also while in Des Moines.

The Staff at the Bystander office honored him with a sendoff which was indicative of their regard for him and his work.

candidate for powerful statewide office. The only other black person in recent history ever nominated and elected attorney general of a state was Edward Brooke of Massachusetts, now a Republican United States Senator.

On viewing the primary results in black-dominated wards and precincts in the three states surveyed, Eddie N. Williams, president of the Joint Center, again offered stern words of caution to minority voters who fail to exercise the franchise in these times. He warned that in a period of retrenchment in social programs, austerity in government budgets and erosion of gains won in earlier years by hard, black struggle, "Now is not the time for black Americans to grow silent and lethargic when nearly every issue in the political arena has significant impact, often disproportionate adverse impact, on blacks and other minorities."

The presidential candidates, Williams observed, are addressing themselves to the squeakiest wheels of our society, "and the fact is that presidential candidates seem to be ignoring black concerns precisely because we are not now squeaking loud enough."

Concluded Williams: "...One of the most effective ways of making sure that our political candidates have the courage to protect the civil rights of us all is to be militant and aggressive at the ballot box. That's how to put civil rights back into the political picture."

Food Stamp Outreach Hotline Started in Iowa

—DES MOINES — A press conference will be held Saturday 10th of April to announce the existence of a state wide food stamp outreach HOTLINE, sponsored jointly by the American Friends Service Committee and Food Day Action Committee. The conference will start at 2 p.m. in the basement of the Des Moines Quaker Meeting, 4211 Grand Ave, Des Moines.

—In early January the American Friends Service Committee decided to confront the problem of hunger among senior citizens, working families, and unemployed here in Iowa. Their decision led to the beginning of the Des Moines and Iowa food stamp outreach HOTLINE. The HOTLINE is a free service to prescreen potential food stamp recipients and to provide food stamp information. This service can be used by calling, Des Moines 274-3591, or statewide toll free 1-800-362-2787.

—Joe Morrissey, staff member of the American Friends Service Committee, stated that, "the poor aren't taking advantage of public welfare not because they don't need it, but because of disability, lack of transportation, lack of information, and bureaucratic harassment. Nationally 7% of the eligible households are denied food stamps and 11% are overcharged according to the Community Nutrition Institute. Iowa's outreach program to inform the poor of their eligibility consists of a token program with no money for implementation. The Iowa Department of Social Services and The United States Department of Agriculture (USDA) are being sued for not complying with Federal Regulations in providing Iowa with a comprehensive Food Stamp Outreach Program by the Mothers for Dignity and Justice, Welfare Answering and Advocate Service, and Migrant Action Program Inc., and American Friends Service Committee.

—In addition to administrative difficulties certain attitudes prevailing in our society discouraging food stamp participation. Many senior citizens, working people, and the newly unemployed are too proud to seek food stamps because of the welfare stigma attached to them.

They do have a right to eat.

—Another common misconception is that food stamps aid the rich. Last May, Parade magazine carried an advertisement indicating that a family earning $16,000 could qualify for food stamp. Upon investigation, this proved to be a hypothetical family of eight, with a highly unusual combination of deductions, paying $228 a month for $268 in food stamps. The USDA considered the ad so misleading that it referred it to the Federal Trade Commission for investigation and possible legal action.

—Many see the food stamp program as a "haven for chiselers and rip-off artists." But this is not true. The USDA reported in May to the Senate Agricultural Committee that only 0.08% of the families receiving food stamps were guilty of fraud. On the other hand, IRS indicates 49% of Federal Income Tax Returns are in error. Fraud and error in the Federal Income Tax System means the loss of revenues four times the total cost of the food stamp program. Yet we demand certification and constant recertification for food stamp recipients while only a few income tax returns are audited.

—Food stamps play a significant role in stimulating the local economy. USDA's Economic Research Service (ERS) did a study of the effect of food stamps on the economy of Texas in 1972. It found that the $63.9 million in food stamp benefits distributed in the state that year had generated $232 million in new business and over 5,000 new jobs. That new business, in turn, created $4 million in new federal tax revenues and $12.5 million in new state tax revenues. This $16.5 million in new tax revenues represented six times the amount of the money spent to administer the Texas program.

—The food stamp recipient benefits directly by his increased food buying power. Money he spends at the supermarket, however, multiplies benefits for all of us in terms of production of goods and services. A dollar spent at one point in the economy, a retail grocery store, spurs activity in other sectors. Each bonus food stamp dollar entering the county would spur $3.50 worth of activity in the general economy.

—Because of this multiplier effect, the benefits of the food stamp program are spread beyond its participants and the food and agriculture business. USDA reports that households which do not use food stamps (the balance of the economy) come close to benefitting about as much from the program indirectly as the participants who benefit directly. The food stamp program plays a major anti-recessionary role in stimulating local economy and preventing the unemployment rate from rising to even higher levels. Food stamps are good business!

Third "Second Half" Program

When the children were young, no doubt you made sure they ate the right foods—lots of milk, vegetables, and so forth. But now that they're gone, what kind of meals are you serving? Do you still drink milk every day? Do you serve vegetables or fruits with every meal?

No matter how old you are, you cannot retire from eating right! And that is the subject of Iowa State University Extension television program to be shown April 11 at 6:00 p.m. on IEBN, Channel 11. The program is the third in the series, "The Second Half." And it's intended for persons at the prime of life—in the 40's and 50's beginning the second half of their lives.

What you eat really has a bearing on your health. The program shows how the food you eat, cholesterol level, and risk of coronary heart disease all can be related.

Calorie counting is important, too. Adults, of course, don't need as many calories as teen-agers. Yet many of us go right ahead eating as much food as when we were in high school. Too many calories lead to too many pounds—and being overweight leads to health problems too.

The television program shows how you can cut calories and cholesterol-producing foods from your daily meals and still have plenty to eat. Don't forget to watch on April 11th.

By the way, there's a workbook called "The Second Half of Your Life" which you can use no matter what your age. It's got a great chapter on nutrition, calories, and meal planning. Copies are free to those viewing the television series.

MESSIAH TEMPLE

The lesson, "A Mother's Reward," was brought to us by Evangelist Zora Reed. This moving lesson came from Exodus 2:9, "Take this child and train him for Me and I will give you your wages." Jochebed thought God was her real employer. She knew she had to answer for her actions to Him and not the princess. She looked at her duty as a high privilege.

When God wants to train a child, he sent him to the school of a Godly woman. We cannot commit a greater blunder than to not train a child to love and serve the Lord. There is no higher calling than that of training a person to serve the Lord.

Jochebed received her wages. She was given the privilege of loving and self sacrifice. She received the reward of making a great life. And she mothered a man who led a nation to their salvation. We, too, will receive our wages some day.

A POEM FOR EASTER

Life is a mixture of sunshine and rain
Teardrops, and laughter, pleasure and pains
We can't have all bright days, but it is certainly true
There was never a cloud, that the sun didn't shine through

In hours of Discouragement, some time we feel uncertain and unsure of everything, afraid to make Decision Dreading what the day will bring, we keep wishing It were possible to dispell all fear and doubt

And to understand more readily just what life is all about

God has given us answers, which too often go unheeded But if we search his promises we will find everything 'that's needed

To lift our faltered spirits and renew our courage too For there's nothing absolutely too much for God to do

For the Lord is our salvation and our strength in every fight

Our redeemer and protection, our stern light

He has promised to sustain us he's our refuge from all harm

And underneath this refuge are the everlasting arms

Cast your burden on him, seek his counsel when distressed

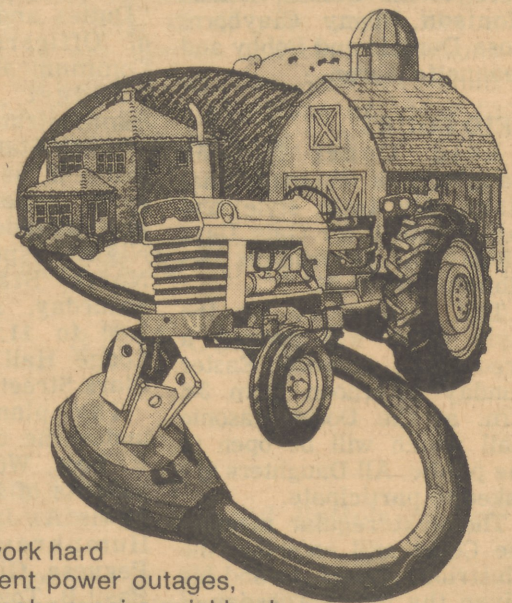

And go to him for comfort when you are lonely and oppressed

For God is our encouragement in trouble and in trials

And in suffering and in sorrow he will turn our tears to smiles

Protect your farm investment with stand-by Electric Power

We work hard to prevent power outages, and to make repairs quickly when they do occur.

But as a farmer, you know that continuous operation of some electrical equipment is necessary to avoid financial loss. With stand-by electrical generation equipment, you can produce your own emergency power during an outage.

A stand-by generator may be used to maintain adequate ventilation in confinement buildings, provide feed and water to livestock, operate milking and refrigeration equipment, and of course, keep your family comfortable.

There are several types of generating equipment to consider. You'll want to inventory your needs and priorities for your own operation.

Call your local Iowa Power office, or your electric generator dealer, for more information and installation requirements.

Language Arts Class Learns Meaning of Ambition

The seventh graders have re-enforced their geographic study of Africa in their Language Arts classes by reading a true, actual account of an African boy who had such a burning desire to get an American education that he walked nearly 10,000 miles to get it.

The story, "Wayo-Man With Smart Brain" by Chales L. Sanders, is a true story of a boy who grew up in Ghana, an independent nation in West Africa. One day the boy happened to see an old American magazine and was fascinated by the pictures of people, but who had fine houses, clothes, and cars, and lived across the sea in the U.S.A.

He ran across the name of Charles W. Simmons, Captain U.S.A. Air Force in the magazine. They became pen pals and Captain Simmons sent money, books, clothes and paid for a year of school for Charles W. Wayo.

Dreaming of an education in American schools, he decided to go to Captain Simmons who was then stationed in Turkey. The article tells how the next two and one-half years were for a boy of twelve. His unbelievable drive sustained him as he kept moving on even through loneliness, hunger, thirst, extreme weather conditions. All added torture to his every step. With the kindness of the people he met, he finally found his friend.

After making numerous long distance calls, Miss Kruger was able to learn that Mr. Wyo arrived at Father Flannigan's Boys Town, Omaha, Nebraska on November 9, 1966, and continued in residence for only five months as he found it extremely, if not impossible, difficult to adjust to his new home. He decided to leave.

Since then it was learned that Mr. Wayo earned a Bachelor's Degree at Vannderbilt University and earned a Master's Degree at Eastern Michigan University in Ypsilanti.

Silent Vibrations is a somewhat mixed group of blacks and whites, seniors, juniors and sophomores. So far this year we have made several field trips outside of our school. LOOK ON SPORTS

As we approach the Olympic games, the people in the United States have to become more aware of the foreign athletes in games we thought we owned. Of course, everyone who knows a tennis ball from an orange can reel off the names of players from other countries who are capable of beating our best players and sometimes do it, maybe more often than the players like. Then there is the impact of outsiders as we would call them in soccer and football as kickers. But the big thing is the host of runners and jumpers from countries that we used to be unable to fine on a world map that shakes up our fans and athletes. It seems that we won't have the short and middle distance races locked up this year. The best long jumpers and triple jumpers are fellows from African countries who are attending American colleges and do you know, the forerunner of these runners was a fellow named Herb McKenna who ran for Illinois a few years ago. The guy was unbeatable in the two hundred meters, as we all found out. And now it looks as if we might fall way back in the scramble for medals this time. I recall last year when Mike Boit was in the press box for interviews along with some other Africans. Reporters were asking the questions like what they did to prepare for a race and what they ate. Stuff like that. I wanted to ask them about their social life on the campus and their social life on the campus and their acceptance by the student body when they were not competing. Well, sir the fellows looked right past me and took on the next question. One of them, I can't remember which said to me in a low voice that they didn't have time for social life because they spent all of their time training. I thought, "Oh, yeah?"

As mad as this makes some of our Americans, I have to wonder if they get mad when they go to Europe to play basketball and to Japan to play baseball. As we go around the world, we can't help but spread our methods and

Honor Louis and Owens

Joe Louis, the famed "Brown Bomber" of boxing and longest reigning champion in the history of the heavyweight division, and Jesse Owens, the renowned winner of four gold medals at the Berlin Olympic Games of 1936 and widely acclaimed "the greatest of alltime track and field champions", have been named as subjects of the thirteenth and fourteenth Kings of Sport Commemorative Covers sponsored by the Lacrosse Hall of Fame, Baltimore, Md.

Other sports greats honored to date in the popular series begun in August 1974 include Jim Thorpe, Babe Ruth, Red Grange, Walter Hagen, Bill Tilden, Johnny Weismuller, Jack Dempsey, Bobby Jones, Joe Demaggio, "Queens" Babe Didriksen Zaharias and Sonja Henie, and race horse Man-o' War.

The distinctively engraved envelopes, designed by Artcraft, depicting either Louis or Owens individually, will be franked and postmarked on May 13 and May 25, 1976, respectively. Each a significant date in the life of the honoree, the Louis commemorative will be issued at Lexington, Alabama on May 13th, sixty-second anniversary of the champ's birth near that city. The Owens commemorative is scheduled for release at Ann Arbor, Michigan on May 25th, anniversary date of the speedster's seldom publicized but perhaps equally triumphant feat of breaking three world's records and equalling a fourth, all in one afternoon while competing for Ohio State against arch-rival Michigan.

Each commemorative also features a specially edited bio-script included with the envelope.

Kings of Sport Commemorative Covers are produced in limited editions by the Lacrosse Foundation, Inc., a non-profit organization that promotes the establishment and playing of lacrosse in schools and colleges throughout the United States. All profit technique in various places. I remember when an American, Bob Simpson was probably the first to coach European athletes in track and came up with some good ones. But, really, if we resent those guys so much, I would guess that the answer to the dominance lies in lots more work than most of our athletes are willing to put into it and some way to continue the sport after college without turning professional right after graduation. I have always argued that our best athletes retire before they reach their prime, or turn professional as soon as they win one championship. But the fact remains that most of the great Europeans train much more than most of our fellows do. Whenever an American really dedicates himself to an event, he usually comes up as a surprise winner, and that is what is going to take more of if we want to keep on top of the track and field events. Of course we know the other countries subsidize their athletes, so they can compete year after year, so maybe we ought to come up with some sort of a plan to do that. We have enough rich sports-minded people around who could do that if they wanted to, and maybe they will.

SURPRISE

I was explaining to a fellow who wanted to know why there were no black swimmers in the big time. I was saying that they didn't have the background training to make it. Then I picked up a Chicago Tribune and I read that they have three swimmers on the Chicago State University team with at least one, Fred Evans, having the potential to make the Olympic team. There was quite a story about him in the paper, and there was also the fact that the Chicago Coach, Bill Adams who was a potential Olympic swimmer is black. This gives all of the potential swimmers who are in high school a lift and maybe some of them will make it. After all, our kids do start swimming at an early age where there are pools they can frequent.

WONT BE LONG NOW

Now that the Texas Relays have started the relay season, all we have to do is wait for the big one at the end of April. We shall see how the black schools which ran away with the college division will fare with the boys from Kenya and Uganda and such places last year they held their own. Maybe they will again. In any event, there should be some good races. Hope to see you there.

Steelworkers "Gratified" About Court Ruling

Pittsburgh, Pa., March 25
— President I.W. Abel of the United Steelworkers of America (USWA) said today that the Union was
"gratified" over the U.S.
Supreme Court ruling that blacks who applied for jobs and were rejected because of racial discrimination should be granted seniority back to the time when they should have been hired.

Mr. Abel said that the Court's decision, which has handed down yesterday, adopted the view urged by both the USWA and AFL-CIO. The Court held that "identifiable applicants who (are) denied employment because of race... may be awarded seniority status retroactive to the dates of their employment application."

"We believe that the Court's ruling provides full remedy to employees who have actually suffered from discrimination at the hands of their employer without undermining the integrity of seniority systems," Mr. Abel said.

The USWA President also stated that "we are pleased that the Court's decision affords no comfort to those who advocate — in the name of civil rights — that seniority systems be discarded in favor of quota systems that would give special job rights to persons because of their race or sex and who never suffered discrimination at the hands

of an employer."

"The competing claims of employees to too few jobs in a recessionary economy give rise to sensitive and delicate legal and moral issues," Mr.
Abel stated. "The Court's opinion represents in our view an appropriate resolution of those claims.
But there is, of course, no wholly satisfactory answer short of creating sufficient jobs in the economy so that all can be employed."

A lower court had held, in the case, that such black victims of job discrimination were also entitled to back pay. This was not an issue before the Supreme Court.

Mustang II...
Our sporty little personal car

Mustang II, which has always featured rich interiors, plus the ride and handling of a fine road car, now offers more: a rare opportunity to design your own brand of small, personal, sporty driving excitement. Besides Hardtop, 3-Door 2+2, Ghia and Mach 1 newness, there's spectacular Stallion styling in 2+2 and Hardtop versions, and an exciting new Cobra II. What's more, Mustang II's have Ford Lifeguard Design Safety Features.

Well-built. Mustang II is built durably. Galvanized parts, zinc metal door panels and a 6-step paint process help fight rust. Further quality touches: good body fits and handsomely tailored interiors.

Maverick...
Still the simple machine

Simple to drive, park and service. The dependable compact you can count on. That's what makes Maverick such an honest value. It's a tough, experienced car backed by millions of owner-driven miles and seven years of honing and refining.

Two basic models: a 2-Door and 4-Door Sedan. Both are powered by a dependable 200 CID Six engine.† (A 250 CID Six and 302 V-8 also available.)

And although Maverick is smaller and priced less, you get the same number of important Lifeguard Design Safety Features found in our bigger Fords: Safety-designed roof structure, steel guard rail in side doors—all the rest.

And we keep making it better:
