Counters "Satisfaction" Survey

Law Suits Attack Housing Bias

by Eleanora E. Tate

A study released recently stated that most Americans were "satisfied" with their homes and their neighborhoods.

But in the wake of two lawsuits filed in Washington, D.C., attacking discrimination in housing and in home loans, it is apparent that at least a few American families are not so satisfied.

The impact of those suits, if they are successful, could mean that housing discrimination could conceivably be on the way out, across the nation and in

Des Moines.

In one lawsuit filed by the U.S. Department of Justice, trade associations that are affiliated with mortgage bankers, real estate appraisers and savings and loan associations were targeted as the ones who help to continue the cycle of racial segregation in the nation's housing.

The second lawsuit, filed Monday in Washington, named four federal regulatory agencies — the Treasury Department's Comptroller of the Currency, the Federal Reserve Board, the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. and the Federal Home Loan Bank Board with failure to practice what they preach.

The agencies, which oversee banks, savings and loans, lending institutions and similar concerns, were not fair in making loans to minorities who wished to buy homes in white neighborhoods, according to the suit.

The practice of "red lining" had not been curtailed, and training for bank and financial institution examiners who would detect discriminatory practices in those institution's record books has not been implemented.

Ten national organizations filed the lawsuit. They are the National Committee Against Discrimination in Housing and the NAACP Legal Defense Fund, both of whom are serving as counsel for the plaintiffs: the Rural Housing Alliance, the National Urban League, the American Friends Service, National Neighbors, the Housing Association of Delaware Valley, the Leadership Council for Metropolitan Open Communities, the Metropolitan Washington Housing and Planning Association, and the League of Women Voters.

Martin Sloane, general counsel for the National Committee against Discrimination in Housing, said in a telephone interview Wednesday morning that the impact of the suits, if successful, would be a major victory for non-white persons and women who have been discriminated against.

"These are the agencies that control the entire network of lending and mortgage institutions," he said. "We're asking the court to take the steps necessary ... to prevent discrimination in the institutions they regulate."

And, said Sloane, if those institutions are required to maintain records with information of loan applicants' race and sex. "Then, for the larger part, the problem of discrimination could be curbed substantially."

In Des Moines, virtually all lending institutions are routinely affiliated with one

NAACP Files charges against KC Bd. of Ed.

Formal action against the Board of Education for the dismissal of 465 probationary teachers and the demotion of 30 administrators were initiated by the Kansas City branch of the N.A.A.C.P., the Teachers' union and the Administrators association.

The Kansas City branch of the N.A.A.C.P., has joined the Teachers union and the Administrators association in taking formal action against the Board of Education for its dismissal of 465 probationary teachers and its demotion of more than 30 administrators for the fall school term.

The N.A.A.C.P., branch, of which Mrs. Julia H. Hill is president, has asked the U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare and the Departments of Labor and the Departments of Labor and Justice to make a "thorough investigation of the personnel practices of the Kansas City, Mo., public schools" with a view toward "the withholding of federal funds on the basis of discrimination against blacks, other minorities and women as administrators and teachers in the district."

The Mexican-American Education Task force will join the N.A.A.C.P. in filing complaints with the federal government departments and with EEOC.

In a letter to the three federal departments, the N.A.A.C.P., charges that "discrimination in this school district is class-wide and in violation of Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964. The branch says that the system also is in violation of Executive orders 11246 and 11375.

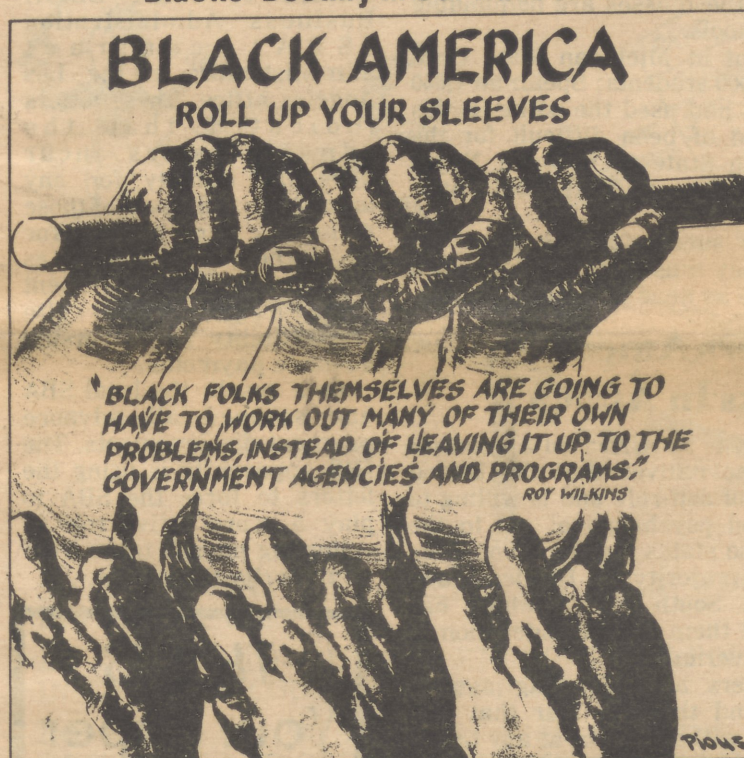

"We hold then," the letter states, "that it is unlawful for HEW to grant any federal funding to the Kansas City school district until it comes up with an effective Affirmative Action Plan which it presently does not have."

With its letter requesting an investigation and withholding of funds, the NAACP submitted documentation concerning recent discriminatory demotions of administrators and lay-offs of teachers.

The N.A.A.C.P., branch also has filed with EEOC a Class Action complaint against the Kansas City school district on behalf of "all minorities being demoted in the Kansas City, Mo., School district."

The Class Action suit was filed with John Nicholson, director of the Kansas City district office of the EEOC.

Blacks' Destiny In Our Hands....

Hastie, first black U.S. Appeals Judge, Dies

The first black U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals judge in the country, Judge William H. Hastie of Knoxville, Tenn., died suddenly, April 14, at the age of 71.

Judge Hastie's death came from an apparent stroke while he was playing on a golf course in Norristown, Pa., near here.

The eminent judge said to have had one of the most brilliant legal minds in the country, was Senior Judge of the U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals, third district, Philadelphia. While he was based here, he was called upon to sit for other judges all over the country. He had been in a semi-retirement status since 1971.

Judge Hastie was appointed to the appellate court by President Harry S. Truman. At that time, his appointment was the highest legal post ever attained by a black lawyer in this country. Many predicted that Hastie would be the first black Supreme Court justice. But this distinction went years later to Judge Hastie's former Howard U. student, Thurgood Marshall.

Before becoming an appellate judge, Hastie had served as governor of the Virgin Islands from 1937 to 1939 when he became dean of the Howard University Law school where he had been a law professor from 1930 to 1937. He left Howard in 1946.

A native of Knoxville, Tenn., Judge Hastie began his career with the federal government in 1933 as an assistant solicitor for the Department of the Interior where he was an adviser on racial matters.

During World War II, he was appointed civilian aide to the then Secretary of War Henry Stimson but Hastie resigned in 1943 in protest

A Rule Should Work Both Ways

Spellman College (Spellman Seminary) in Atlanta, Georgia, was established before the turn of the century as a school for Negro girls.

Named for the wife of John D. Rockefeller, Sr., it is recognized as one of the schools of higher learning in the for many years. Spellman was originally one of the cluster of predominately Negro schools in Atlanta: Atlanta University, Clark University, Gammon Theological Seminary, Morris Brown College and Atlanta Baptist College.

These schools brought to Atlanta a large number of students seeking higher education and their stay has been greatly responsible for the better relationships which have existed between the races over the years.

And from the beginning even until this time the Rockefeller family has made available some of its fortune for Spellman along with many other institutions of learning.

Spellman has a white man for its president. At a recent meeting of the board of trustees, a group of disgruntled students locked the doors of the meeting room and held them hostage demanding that a Negro woman be named president. The job was offered to a Negro man, he accepted, but later withdrew his acceptance.

These young people are short-sighted and possibly misguided by demanding that no whites serve as Spellman's president and yet the masses are demanding that Negroes serve in white schools.

A Negro serves as president at Michigan State Univ. In 1975 Michigan State had 33,000 students; Spellman 1,050 students. If the white students had used the same tactics as those at Spellman it would of been difficult for the board of trustees at Michigan State to retain a Negro president, and the protesting white students would have been called racists.

Most students strive to be successful and head big institutions and companies. They must not complain when a white student strives to serve as head of a Negro school.

Kissinger Offers American Aid To Blacks In Africa

Secretary of State Kissinger, is in Africa on a goodwill tour, designed to convince the natives that the United States supports their position of self-rule and is willing to extend economic, political and psychological aid to the people of Africa. Kissinger also states that he favors rule for blacks who constitute a majority in Rhodesia and opposes doing business with South Africa which has consistently refused to accord them any consideration in the conduct of the affairs of government.

Today black guerilla fighters are operating against white soldiers in Rhodesia and there is fear that war between the blacks and whites will break out at any time.

I hope that this will not occur because the white South African government has all the modern weapons of warfare while the guerillas have very little and depend upon primitive methods even though they constitute a vast majority of the population.

This would be a reminder of the invasion of Ethiopia during World War II by the Italian army. The natives had primitive defense and materials while the Italians had guns, planes and tanks and mowed the defenders down just as a farmer would mow wheat in a field.

There must be a better way to prevent a war. Nations should settle their differences by rules of law and conference rather than by destroying human beings.

D.M. man elected Student President

John Anthony "Tony" Williams, a 33 year old Air Force veteran and student from Des Moines, Iowa was elected 1976-77 Southern University Student Government Association (SGA) president.

Williams, who promised to sponsor leadership conferences to train students as effective spokesmen and lobbyists for Southern at the state legislature, outdistanced Marshall L. Williams of Rayville 784 to 408 in a light voter turnout. Voting totals were low, in light of the runoffs coming on the day of final classes prior to students beginning their Easter and spring semester recess.

Williams, a very articulate and concerned political science major was elated with the victory which now has him heading the largest predominantly black student body in America. Southern University had 9,512 students enrolled on its Baton Rouge campus this past fall.

Williams plans attending law school or obtaining a graduate degree in public administration.

3 Union Leaders Support Busing

Calling any unionists who claim to represent a different position unauthorized mavericks three union leaders said organized labor supports busing when it is necessary to end dual school systems.

While it is admitted that busing is not a panacea, in the absence of other remedies, busing is imperative to preserve rights guaranteed to children by the Constitution," William Simons, president of the Washington Teachers' Union, said at a news conference.

The statement of support came as a group calling itself Union Labor Against Busing prepared to lead a demonstration in Washington Saturday opposing busing.

7,000 From Louisville

The demonstration is being organized by Jack Shore, secretary-treasurer of the sheet metal workers union local in Louisville, Ky. He said in a telephone interview that people from as many as 20 states are expected to attend, with about 7,000 to 8,000 coming from Louisville alone.

Shore said their objective is to force Congress to pass legislation ordering an end to busing. "We've been told by the politicians on a local level that there wasn't anything they could possibly do to stop court ordered busing," Shore said.

Simons said that, "Certainly we feel that such marches are out of order."

"It should be pointed out that these are individuals who might be union members but it (the demonstration) has no sanction by the AFL-CIO or organized labor," he added.

William Lucy, president of the Coalition of Black Trade Unionists, said that President Ford has given comfort to anti-busing forces by his statements condemning a Boston court decision that ordered busing in that city.

Cities Moral Tone

Lucy said that a "moral tone needs to be set" or other cities will become polarized over the issue as Boston has. He said that the "unchecked violence in Boston" may spread to other cities.

Simons said that in this presidential election year voters should demand that candidates make their positions clear on the issue.

"The basic question is not whether one is in favor of busing, but will the candidate use the necessary resources to enforce the law of the land," he said.

Bob Peterson, president of the Greater Washington Central Labor Council, said he does not favor busing for its own sake.

"We would prefer not to have busing necessary. We would prefer to have open opportunities across the board," he said.

But he noted that, "Labor is supporting intergrated school systems, quality education. If busing is necessary to provide that, then we support busing."

Minority Companies Threatened by Gov. Agency Legal Battles

The Internal Revenue Service (IRS) recently wrote letters to three Small Business Administration (SBA) contract administrators in the Los Angeles office. These letters indicated that the administrators incur personal liability for any unpaid payroll taxes of those minority companies for which the administrators (as a part of an 8(a) government contract), have the responsibility for disbursing advance payments.

As a result, the local SBA has stopped all advance payment disbursements. The IRS apparently is using the letters to force the SBA to play a more active role in collecting payroll taxes from all minority companies.

The SBA has refused to negotiate with the IRS until the letters are rescinded. IRS has declined to rescind. While the two agencies engage in a war of nerves, minority companies, caught in the middle, move ever closer to bankruptcy. And according to an SBA spokesman, the same situation is occurring in other regions of the country.

Taking the lead in South African Solution Search

Emerging states are taking the lead in the southern African search for solutions, not the Chinese or Soviets, an American Friends Service Committee specialist said upon return from a tour that included four weeks in the new nation of Mozambique.

Bill Sutherland, an observer-consultant in Africa some 22 years, said Zambia, Tanzania and Mozambique are "not taking their ideology from outside, but are finding an expression of life that is their own."

He visited Swaziland in addition to the others in recent months. Sutherland's Mozambique visit included a meeting with Vice-President Marcelino de Santos and with Minister of Health Helder Martins.

"The people of these countries, including Angola, have been brought up under colonial rule and still have contradictions and massive problems to overcome," the Quaker representative said.

"But they must have a chance to determine things for themselves. It's time for the U.S. to be on the side of the oppressed instead of the oppressor. If the Ford Administration would remove all support of white minority-ruled Rhodesia and South Africa it would find a positive response throughout Africa.

"The U.S. must recognize the little people, as it ought to have learned in Vietnam. The U.S. congressional action to stop Ford-Kissinger intervention in Angola was looked on as a plus and important to the people I talked with. It was on the side of liberation."

Sutherland said there is a feeling of dynamism among the ordinary people of Mozambique, plagued by the worst floods in 30 years and with less than a year's experience of independence from Portuguese rule. Housing is being equalized, he said, while education is being emphasized.

"About 10,000 to 20,000 Portuguese are expected to remain out of a former total of 200,000 whites. But the crucial question is not white rights, rather should there be minority privileges. The series of racially divided concentric circles in the capital—Maputo—starting with black slums on the farthest rim, is being eliminated," Sutherland said.

Zimbabwe

by Jack Hamlett, III

Speaking at a luncheon given by President Kenneth Kaunda of Zambia Tuesday, U.S. Secretary of State Henry Kissinger spelled out the position of the United States on the issues of majority rule in Zimbabwe (Rhodesia) and South Africa.

According to Kissinger, the United States (as of Tuesday) is expressing its "unrelenting opposition" to the racist regime of Prime Minister Ian Smith.

Kissinger laid out a new 10-point plan for majority rule in Zimbabwe that would include financial aid to Mozambique for closing their western border with Zimbabwe; appealing to France and South Africa to abide by the United Nations economic boycott, and economic aid to 20,000 Zimbabwean refugees.

It also included a plan for renewed efforts to repeal the Byrd Amendment, which currently allows the United States to import chrome and other metals from Zimbabwe—in direct defiance of a 10-year economic sanction imposed against the Smith regime by the United Nations.

On one hand, Kissinger vows "unrelenting opposition" to the Smith regime. But 10 years ago when the United Nations declared Smith's government an "outlaw" government and called for an economic boycott of the Smith regime, the United States declared that it had no intentions of boycotting "Rhodesia" and that they would buy all the "Rhodesian" chrome that they needed. As of this article, the United States is continuing to import chrome from the Smith regime.

Kissinger is calling for a negotiated settlement. He refuses to give any tangible support to the African Liberation armies fighting for the freedom of the people of Zimbabwe. At the same time, however, the United States is working out details for selling military equipment to Egypt. That was a reward to Egyptian President Anwar Sadat for expelling the Soviet Union from his country.

BLACK ANALYSIS

While the United States refuses publicly to arm the Africans fighting for freedom in Zimbabwe, Kissinger is willing to give more than $12.5 million in "aid" to Mozambique and to African refugees from Zimbabwe—money that obviously is going to be converted into weapons for the liberation struggle. The "ploy" here is to get in "good" with the African before the Soviet Union has a chance to help significantly.

With the huge mineral wealth of South Africa possibly in mind, the United States and the Soviet Union look like two children elbowing each other out of the way so that one of them can get into the candy store first.

Kissinger's proposals would call for the achievement of majority rule in Zimbabwe within two years. The people of Zimbabwe have been waiting for freedom throughout this entire century—first from the British and now from the "outlaw" government of Ian Smith.

It has become painfully obvious to all involved that Ian Smith has no intentions of relinquishing white control of Zimbabwe. For the United States to talk about gradually working out a solution with Smith over the next two years is like putting off until tomorrow what should have been taken care of yesterday.

Educational Gap Widens

There is a consensus among black educators and their allies that the doors of increased opportunities for blacks in higher education are slowly but surely closing. It is a serious matter when the one mechanism that ensures upward mobility, higher education, begins to show signs of stopping or diminishing its efforts on behalf of blacks. Key government programs, affording blacks educational opportunities, are being eroded by cutbacks and proposed eliminations at a time when the educational gap between blacks and whites is once again widening. A Bill of Particulars on the educational needs of black Americans will be drawn up during the conference's closing session for presenting to the candidates running in this year's election.

or more of the defendants named in the lawsuit.

Local bank officials were either unaware of the suit or did not know how the suit, if successful, would affect them. Those contacted all said they were sure that their institution did not discriminate against non-whites.

Said Henry Grant, legal counsel with United Federal Savings and Loan Association:

"We've represented United for better than 25 years. We've always felt that we made more loans to minority groups than any other lending institution around."

Allen Correll, director of the Des Moines Human Rights Commission, said, "There is no question that there continues to be discrimination in housing as it relates to minorities."

Correll said his commission, however, has not been "successful" in "eradicating discrimination in housing" because "we are not able to levy punitive damages in alleged discrimination cases."

Unlike employment discrimination cases, in which the complainant, if successful, "can get back pay," persons who file housing complaints can rely only on the defendant's good will, "and you cannot really rely on moral commitment," said Correll.

According to the 1975 report of the Iowa Civil Rights Commission, of 703 cases received, 43 involved discrimination in housing. Of those 43, 27 involved race.

The relatively low figure for housing cases filed in the state commission does not, however, mean that local residents are not being discriminated against in housing.

"When people want a house," said Des Moines

Human Rights director Correll, "they want a house now. And people are fed up having to go through the entire system."

Officials of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board here and officials of the Federal Reserve Board in Chicago, Ill., were unavailable for comment.

But Timothy Glass, Housing director for the central-regional National Urban League office in Chicago (this office also presides over Iowa), said that discrimination by such institutions has been going on for years "through the use of red lining and also through benign neglect with the Federal Housing Administration how they fund mortgages and for whom."

Some methods of housing discrimination restricts minorities from moving into areas where industrial concerns are relocating, said Glass.

That means that "it is hard for minorities to buy in the suburbs and they are also losing out on jobs," he said.

Other reports and suits have been released over the years about the role played by federal regulatory agencies, lending institutions, real estate brokers and the non-white family.

Earlier this month, for instance, the United States Supreme Court ruled in a case involving Chicago's low-income housing that a federal court can force area-wide public housing programs in that city. It could have nation-wide impact.

A study compiled by Timothy McCarthy on the housing abandonment process in the Model City neighborhood here in Des Moines noted that "the fear of racial change" in neighborhoods is society-wide and that a "major problem" to potential home buyers in "racially changing areas" is "obtaining mortgages and loans."

The report continues that real estate brokers "theories" include, "a belief in the social and economic virtues of the homogeneous neighborhoods; a belief that the entry of blacks into white neighborhoods damages property values; and a belief that the socio-economic status of white neighborhoods are threatened by non-white entry into the area."

"The broker may maintain segregation and encourage discrimination as he helps guide racial transition."

Nuclear Power Public Forum

Is a nuclear power plant the best solution to meet the energy demands of central Iowa? Is it safe for nearby residents? Is it economically feasible? And why is it being considered now?

These vital questions form the basis for a public forum on the proposed nuclear power plant, which will be held Wednesday, April 28, 1976, at 7:30 P.M. in the Council Chambers of the Des Moines City Hall.

Sponsored by the Des Moines Advisory Committee on Environmental Quality, the forum offers the citizens of the Des Moines area an opportunity to hear and judge the information on nuclear power. It also offers the opportunity to voice opinions and suggestions on an issue that will effect everyone.

Maurice Van Nostrand, Chairman, Iowa State Commerce Commission; Gene Lucas, Professor of Biology, Drake University and Dallas Hamerlinck, Iowa Power and Light, will be the featured speakers.

The Polk County Board of Supervisors voted unanimously Tuesday morning, April 20, to make lead poisoning a reportable disease or condition in Polk County.

Under the new regulation, children suffering from undue lead absorption or lead poisoning will be reported to the Polk County Board of Health.

Reportability is the responsibility of every physician, hospital, public health nurse or other diagnosing person or agency. Also, any laboratory performing blood lead determinations will immediately report the results to the Board of Health.

The regulation has been declared necessary for the preservation of the health, safety and welfare of the people of Polk County and is to go into immediate effect.

Recycled Highway

Recycling has recently become a household word. Cans, bottles and paper are currently undergoing the recycling process. Soon, motorists in Lyon County will drive on a recycled highway — an innovation of the Iowa Department of Transportation. Old concrete highways can now be broken up for use as aggregate mix for new highways.

Recycling the concrete takes three steps, according to George Calvert, Director of the Office of Materials Inspection of the Highway Division.

First, the old concrete is broken up by diesel-driven hammers. The steel reinforcing bars in the concrete are removed. Second, the broken-up concrete is crushed into chunks, each an inch and a

Arts & Crafts

On May 8th and 9th, The Group, an organization dedicated to providing a marketplace for artists and craftspeople, will present a Bicentennial Arts and Crafts Show and Sale at the Valley West Mall, I-235 & 35th Street Exit in West Des Moines.

Included in the show and sale will be paintings in oils, watercolors and acrylics, prints, batiks, pottery, macramé, stitchery, jewelry, photography, woodcraft, weaving, stained glass, ceramics, metal sculpture, toys, and various forms and techniques of folk art.

Each participant in the show and sale has contributed a piece of their work to be awarded as a door prize. These items will be displayed in a window at Johnson's Clothing at the Valley West Mall beginning on April 26th. No purchase is necessary to be eligible to win a door prize.

There is no admission fee to the public for the show.

half or smaller. Finally, the crushed concrete is mixed with sand and cement to make the new roadway surface.

The first recycled highway in the nation will be laid toward the end of July in two locations on Highway 75, south of Rock Rapids. The new process could result in thousands of dollars in savings if road experiments on the new highway in Lyon County are successful. Recycling old concrete could eliminate the need to uncover virgin stone with a dirt-moving operation prior to crushing, as well as the need to break up and bury new concrete. Hauling by truck could be minimized since the crushed and recycled concrete will be available at the mixing site.

Cosmetic Surgery: Nip & Tuck With Nature

Rita Hayworth, in a rare appearance on television, will be a special guest, assessing her views of the ideal man, in "Cosmetic Surgery: Nip 'n' Tuck With Nature," a "Monday Night Special" which conducts a comprehensive examination of the capability and success of modern medical science in altering the appearances of faces and figures. The program airs on the ABC Television Network Monday May 3 (11:30 p.m. - 1:00 a.m., EDT).

Scenes of actual breast operations are followed by a discussion of such operations by a surgeon, a psychologist, two women who have had plastic surgery performed on their breasts, and a third woman who is opposed to the mentality of "breast worship."

Hair transplants, an increasingly popular form of cosmetic surgery among men, will be examined in another portion of the program.

Phyllis Diller, who has had a face-lift, will give her views of that method of improving on nature. After presenting scenes from a face-lift operation, Forst, a physician, a psychiatrist and a man and a woman who have had face-lifts will answer questions from the studio audience. The program will similarly discuss the "nose job," following a view of a nose operation.

Program guests include George Masters, noted theatrical makeup expert; Dr. Robert Auerbach and Dr. Sam Ayers III, hair transplant specialists; Dr. William Keavey, specialist in body surgery; Dr. Morey Parks, nose surgeon, and Dr. Frank Kanner, whose specialty is cosmetic surgery of the face.

LOOK

The sixty seventh running of the Drake Relays had to be one of the wettest if not the wettest of them all. In spite of that there was a goodly crowd on both days, but on Saturday as I passed the people on the way to the meet they were trying to sell tickets they had bought for whatever they could get, from one to two dollars, and as I got closer to the thing people were trying to give tickets away, and they weren't having much luck either. But still folks came dressed for the weather and you'd be surprised how many of them stuck around to the finish. On Friday the rains held off in the afternoon until the finish of the last race, the final heat of the university mile relay, until it came down in earnest.

By now the results are in, in fact they were national news before I got home, so I won't bore you with details of who did what. Eastern New Mexico Mike Boit had quite a meet. He anchored two winning relay teams and won the 1500 meter run making him the outstanding athlete of the meet. I voted for Auburn's Harvey Glance who turned out to be quite a fellow, besides a helluva runner. I wondered how the black schools would fare against the schools with those imported runners, and I soon found out. They were in there all the way. A dropped baton kept Jackson State from having two wins in the university short relays. But they came home first in the 440 yard one. Prairie View grabbed off a couple of firsts in the college section and was in the money in another. They also had two girl's teams that ran away with the mile relay won by the school team and the 800 medley won by the Prairie View Track Club. Iowa State chased the team home and made them hustle all the way, but just couldn't catch up. In the medley race the Prairie View and Jackson State runners acted as if there was nobody else on the track but them, and it was a real race for a while.

High Schools

Our local schools didn't have a really good day in the thing. It would be my guess that if Ricardo Duncan learns to get out of the blocks that he will be really tough to beat. He got off to a poor start in the high school hundred and never did catch the fellow from Kentucky of Cedar Rapids. Tech finished second in the 440 and fourth in the 880, and Lincoln was second in the mile relays. The local girls were also running in the girls races and speaking of high schools, I looked for the Scarlet and Black of East all day and haven't seen it yet. Our guys didn't do too well in the special events, but I don't know what happened because I couldn't get there soon enough to really look them over, but don't believe I missed anything. Tom Wiseman of Davenport Central made a pretty fair long jump to take that event, but the guy I gave a shot at the hurdles didn't qualify.

Interviews

They were bringing the winning athletes to the press box as they finished their events and you could sometimes get more out of them by listening than you could by trying to get in a question. But when the winner of the college 100 meter race came up, there was the largest silence I ever heard. Some of the fellows were really articulate, and others made you wonder. But the most impressive of them all was Auburn's Harvey Glance, winner of the special invitation century and anchor man on the school's relay teams. Glance told how he disciplined himself as a high school runner so he could become strong enough to have a good finish in his races. We all thought that was unusual for a high school sophomore, but he said he wanted to become somebody, and the 1972 Olympics really gave him an inspiration. He has an ambition to represent United States in the Olympics, and I sort of think he will. When he was asked why he chose Auburn he said that it was close to home, and he thought they had the best academic program in the south. What about his future? Professional athletics? The guy said he didn't go to college just to run, but to get an education and after he got that he would take it from there. The questioners didn't quite know how to field that one, so I asked him what he really had in mind. He didn't know just yet, was trying to find himself, but thought that would come after about one more year and he would know it. Quite a young man, that Glance fellow.

Madeline Manning Jackson ran in the women's 1500 meters, but I thought she merely wanted to see what sort of shape she was in, and she didn't really put out, finishing way back in the pack, but obviously satisfied with her progress up to now, since she is pointing for the big one in Montreal. They brought Mike Boit to the press box, but I remembered last year and let him go. But, all in all, it was some meet as are most of them, in spite of the weather.

Hey, People!

Next week the Good Park section of the qualifying meets for Younker's Kodel tennis tournament comes up, and so far nobody has entered. We had better have a flock of entries this coming week.

Deadline nears for G.I. Bill Payment

The application deadline for women veterans eligible for a special retroactive GI Bill payment is less than three months away, the Veterans Administration said today.

Women who attended school under the GI Bill between June 1, 1966 and October 24, 1972, may qualify to receive a lump sum of about $30 per month for each month in training. The payment is being made to equalize benefits with male veterans who were married while in training.

Women veterans must contact a VA regional office before July 1 and must furnish proof of marriage while in training to be paid the retroactive sum.

Letters with a form on the reverse which should be completed and mailed to a VA regional office before July 1 were mailed by VA to 75,000 women veterans in February. This group attended school under the GI Bill during the specified time period, but the agency does not have the authority to pay without receiving applications from these veterans.

Women who trained after October 24, 1972, have already been paid on the same basis as their male counterparts. The law does not allow the additional amount for husbands to be paid to women who trained under the World War II and Korean Conflict GI Bills.

Release trustees after 26 hours

In Atlanta, Georgia, 14 Spelman college trustees were released after having been locked in a room for 26 hours when trustees agreed to discuss student demands for a black woman president.

Faculty member Millicent Dobbs Jordan, a spokeswoman for protesting students, teachers and alumnae at the predominantly black woman's college, said the trustees agreed to meet with four students and two representatives each from the administrative staff, faculty and alumnae.

Mrs. Jordan, aunt of Atlanta Mayor Maynard Jackson, said the board would discuss the possibility of organizing a new search committee and rescinding its appointment Thursday of Dr. Donald Stewart, a black who is now a dean at the University of Pennsylvania.

Essence Magazine Wins 1976 National Award

ESSENCE magazine was awarded a silver plaque, Wednesday, April 14, for Hortense Spillers' "Isom" (May '75 Issue) in the category of fiction and belles-lettres, becoming the first black women's magazine to receive a National Magazine Award. The awards were given at the 11th annual awards ceremony at Pierre Hotel in New York City.

In citing ESSENCE for

Hortense Spiller's "Isom," the judges chose "a telling portrait of vast black family crystallized about the death of its remarkable patriarch. 'Isom,' gave a warm, meticulously observed insider's view of life in the rural South as it once was lived. Sensitive and unsentimental, there was regret for an era's inevitable disappearance and joy in the rich memories passed on to the next generation."

Other finalists in the fiction and belles-lettres category were: The Atlantic Monthly, for I-80 Nebraska by John Sayles; Harper's, for "The Painted Word" by Tom Wolfe; The Washingtonian, for "Black Love Story" by Earl Byrd; The New Yorker, for three stories: "Gray Skies" by Julian Mazor, "Desecration" by R. Praver Jhabvala and Separating by John Updike.

A 12-member selection committee chose five finalist in each of six categories for presentation to a panel of eight judges.

The Committee's formation and its campaign strategies were made public at a news conference during the Pittsburgh conference of the Council of 100, an organization of black republican leaders from across the country. With a large cross section of its members in attendance, the Council of 100 endorsed the committee's plans as announced by Burrell L. Haselrig, Jr., the committee chairman and host for the council of 100 conference.

Haselrig, a prominent businessman and general contractor in Johnstown, Pennsylvania, said in the announcement, "Senator Brooke is the person who is right for the position. He is eminently qualified. He is a man of unquestionable integrity and moral character, free from any taint or wrongdoing."

The committee chairman added that the committee was formed specifically to push the nomination of Senator Brooke as Vice President of the United States. "We have the explicit endorsement of Senators Hugh Scott and Richard Schweiker in this endeavor", Haselrig said.

Flanked by members of the council of 100 and its president, Samuel Jackson, Haselrig added, "Senator Brooke is not seeking the nomination, nor has he asked us to seek it for him. If the party wants him, if President Ford wants him, he can hardly refuse". Jackson, formerly Assistant Secretary of Housing and Urban Development, is an attorney in Washington, D.C.

Minority Banks Make $596 Million in Loans

Minority banks have proved their viability by extending $569 million in loans to the communities they serve, the inner-city, according to Sharnia (Tab) Buford, President of the National Bankers Association.

Buford, who is also President of Douglass State Bank, Kansas City, Kansas, said the large amount of loans made by minority banks is particularly significant because a large percentage of their deposits are of a short term and volatile nature. Total deposits at minority banks are estimated at $1.1 billion.

"It can no longer be said the minority banks are not responsive to the needs of the inner-city, which is the main area served by these banks," Buford said. "Through their sound and sensitive lending practices, these banks have made a meaningful contribution in real dollars to people who live in so-called redlined areas that are economically deprived and depressed."

A major portion of loans made by minority banks are for new homes, expanded and new businesses, college education, home improvement, consumer purchases, and church mortgages, reported Anthony Maxwell, Executive Director of the National Bankers Association, which is the trade association for the nation's 82 minority-owned banks.

Maxwell indicated that the data on the lending practices of minority banks contradicts publicized statements that minority banks have not made substantial loans in their own communities.

the "widespread feeling that the opportunity for minority and poor people provided by City University for so long, now will become a receding dream for too many thousands of New York's young people."

"The effect of merging Hostos Community College with the Bronx Community College and the reduction of Brooklyn's Medgar Evers College from a four-year to a two-year institution, is an affront to the minority communities they were established to serve," stated Dr. Hyatt.

"It seems totally unconscionable now to victimize the minority young people of this generation who finally see an avenue of upward mobility and increasing expectations," Dr. Hyatt said.

"We recognize that the fiscal crisis necessitates paring of budgets, higher education included," he added. "But it seems that the burden of suffering is not equitable."

Continuing Dr. Hyatt said, "It has been reported that under the newly accepted Kibbee admissions plan, 66 per cent of the black and 57 per cent of the Puerto Rican students that enrolled in 1971 would be barred, as against only 37 per cent of the white students now enrolled."

Dr. Hyatt observed that the understated official unemployment rate for black teenagers is 41 per cent and that the rate is even higher for Puerto Rican youth.

"The City University must continue to provide New York's young people, especially the minority youth, with their last exit from the road of despair, cynicism and hopelessness which is inherent in the above shocking unemployment figures," said Dr. Hyatt.
