Black Congressmen Sponsor Anti-Arab Boycott Amendment

Four Black members of the House of Representatives are co-sponsors of an amendment that would prevent the awarding of government contracts to any firm participating in the Arab boycott against Israel. The four — part of a group of 63 Congressmen co-sponsoring this amendment — are: Yvonne Braithwaite Burke, Calif.; Shirley Chisholm, New York; Robert N. C. Nix, Philadelphia; and Charles B. Rangel, New York.

The amendment was proposed as an addition to the current armed services procurement regulations to strengthen enforcement of the Export Administration Act of 1969. That act declares the American government's commitment to "oppose restrictive trade practices or boycotts fostered or imposed by foreign countries against other countries friendly to the United States," and to "encourage and request

King assassin denied appeal

The U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals denied, Monday, James Earl Ray's appeal from his plea of guilty in the shooting death of Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. The Court unanimous decision concluded that the U.S. District Court for the western district of Tennessee was correct in turning down Ray's motion for a new trial.

The district court stated that Ray failed to prove that his defense attorneys provided Ray with ineffective assistance, improper investigation or domestic concerns... to refuse to take any action" in furtherance or support of such restrictive trade practices or boycotts.

that Ray was induced to plead guilty on March 10, 1969.

Right-wing Ultimatum

Thursday President Ford was presented an ultimatum from a coalition of 65 right-wing organizations. The ultimatum said either fire Henry Kissinger as secretary of state, reaffirm U.S. sovereignty over the Panama Canal and drop all sanctions against the white minority government of Rhodesia, or they will support his Democratic opponent November.

Washington, D.C. — The Congressional Black Caucus today called for a thorough congressional investigation of the Federal Bureau of Investigation's illegal domestic intelligence-gathering activities against lawful private organizations and individuals. Caucus members urged the Constitutional Rights Subcommittee of the House Judiciary Committee to widen its investigation of Cointelpro programs within the FBI. The 17 black members of the House of Representatives also urged that permanent Select Committees on Intelligence should be set up to continue the investigation.

Congresswoman Yvonne B. Burke (D-Calif.), Chairperson of the Caucus, said that "every American should consider what the FBI's actions mean in terms of organizations to which he or she belongs. These were law-abiding citizens who were attacked and intimidated by the FBI," she said, "including Members of the nation's highest legislative body."

The Senate Intelligence Committee has released reports detailing FBI COINTELPRO activity against individuals ranging from Members of Congress to college professors to leaders of civil rights organizations, including extensive efforts to destroy the late Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. and the Black Panther Party. The report showed the FBI to have engaged in extensive surveillance, bugging, wiretapping and provocative activities to sow distrust and hate within and between lawful organizations white as well as black.

In calling for the congressional investigation, Congresswoman Burke recalled the speech by the late House Majority Leader Hale Boggs on April 22, 1971, in which he expressed his belief that many Members of Congress had been subject to illegal spying by the FBI.

Congressman Ronald V. Dellums (D-Calif.), the only black member to serve on the Select House Committee on Intelligence, stated that "Congress will soon be considering corrective action. But all of us have a stake in the outcome. Wherever we are, whatever we do, whatever our political interests or activity — each of us is a potential victim of Intelligence Agencies' illegal activities."

F.B.I. Files Reviewed on King

In response to inquiries from the news media regarding the Civil Rights Division's review of the Martin Luther King files, Attorney General Edward H. Levi issued the following statement:

I have directed the Office of Professional Responsibility, headed by Michael Shaheen, to complete a review of all records in the Department of Justice concerning the Reverend Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. The Civil Rights Division, under the personal direction of Assistant Attorney General J. Stanley Pottinger, completed on April 9 a five-month preliminary review of files at FBI headquarters. As a result of this preliminary review, the Civil Rights Division has recommended that the review be carried forward to completion with an additional examination of records at FBI headquarters and field offices. It is believed that more than 200,000 documents may be involved.

On the basis of this preliminary review, Assistant Attorney General Pottinger stated that his tentative conclusions were (1) there was no basis to believe that the FBI in any way caused the death of Dr. King, (2) no evidence was discovered that the FBI investigation of the assassination of Dr. King was not thorough and honest, and (3) instances were found indicating that the FBI undertook a systematic program of harassment of Dr. King in order to discredit him and harm both him and the movement he led.

In ordering on April 26 the complete review by Mr.

Monitoring Model Cities Comes Too Late

Over the years, I have criticized the city council because they failed to make any plans to development Model Cities. All kinds of planning groups are maintained, lots of money is spent bringing specialists in to advise on the plans and programs for the city but not Model Cities.

The federal government appropriated the money and gave it to the city with the idea that they would assist people living in such communities to advise in the expenditure of funds by people who have had experience in doing so. But they did not monitor Model Cities programs in the beginning.

Today, the city has $198,000.00 of federal funds which was originally planned for Community Action and which had been set aside for programs in the Model Cities area along with a contribution from the county. Now all at once the city refuses to turn it over unless they have an opportunity to monitor the recipients of these funds.

Just what good monitoring these funds would do at this time is hard to understand unless they propose to hire some experts to do the job for them. The program that the city has followed has been to do nothing to make the program work and now comes up with an idea of monitoring what is being done to show that it has not worked.

The federal government, I am sure, would not approve of this kind of procedure in the allocation of funds which are contrary to manner in which its guidelines have been set up.

Cyclone Stadium Committee

I thought that the new stadium at Ames would be named after Jack Trice or the financier who put up a lot of the money to help build it, but the committee charged with suggesting a name to the president ducked the issue and chose the name Cyclone Stadium.

It is interesting to note that the main reason relied upon came from one of the members who stated that Cyclone Stadium would honor all Iowa State athletes and not just Trice. They noted that Clyde Williams, the name of the old stadium graced the school for years and few people knew who Clyde Williams was and that the name Trice would be the same thing.

This was not the reasoning of those naming the football stadium at Iowa City, Nile Kinnick. Kinnick was a famous football player who lost his life in World War II. Jack Trice lost his life on the football field playing for Iowa State. Consequently, it is no excuse that people don't remember an athlete that it makes any difference here. But it is important when one loses his life in an effort to make an institution great even in athletics.

The Real Issue Congress Should Keep Out of Spying

Congress continues to explore dirty tricks which the FBI and the CIA have done in the past. Many of them have been absolutely ridiculous and far from anything the public thought either of these arms of government would do.

It is valuable information — surprising to many people, but not surprising to Negroes, for in spite of the high respect in which the FBI had been held all along, they knew that J. Edgar Hoover was a racist but flying under false colors.

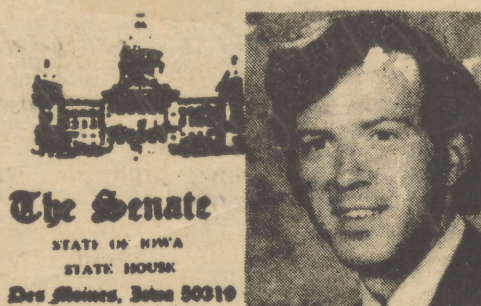

But I don't believe it does any good to continue airing these dirty tricks for to do so is a continuation of what we already know.

It is well to have pulled the cover from officials who have the secrecy with which they can misuse the things they want.

Now that the information is out, Congress proposes that a watch dog committee be set up to keep an eye on these agencies. The trouble with this operation is that, as has been in the past, proceedings are leaked to some hungry reporters and the public, including overseas, know exactly what we are doing.

Of course foreign countries have spies in our midst, just as we have spies in other countries. It is a game of national security, but we need not help them get our secret.

"AN EXCITING PAPER

By Earl M. Willits State Senator

This week the Iowa Senate began debate on the House passed version of the massive 427 page Criminal Code. The States Criminal laws, which has had little updating in the past 100 years, was debated and approved last Session in the Senate. The House, after 6 weeks of debate this year sent the Code back to the Senate for consideration of House Amendments.

The debate began with a lengthy discussion on a House amendment which would have banned nude entertainment in bars. The Senate rejected the House ban on nude performers by a vote of 23 to 22.

The Senate also rejected an amendment which would prohibit sale or distribution of obscene and pornographic materials to adults. By opposing the House amendment, the current law which prohibits such sales to minors only, will remain in effect.

On a vote of 26 to 18 the upper house rejected a House-passed amendment which prohibited "no knock" entry by police into a private home. The senate retained a provision which would allow enforcement officers to enter, unannounced, a suspects home if there was danger of losing the suspect or danger of injury to the officer. In such cases a policeman would still be required to first obtain a search warrant.

In addition, the Senate rejected the following House amendments:

A provision to allow officers to use deadly force in preventing the escape of a prisoner. This provision was defeated 35 to 8.

A measure prohibiting an ex-convict from possessing any fire arm including a hunting rifle. It was rejected 23 to 22.

A House amendment to lower the penalty for possession of one ounce or less of marijuana to 30 days in jail and $100 fine was defeated 25 to 20. The Senates rejection of the lower House penalties leaves possession punishable by 6 months in jail and $1000 fine.

Some of the controversial House amendments agreed upon by the Senate include:

Repeal of the provision requiring wearing of a helmet while riding a motorcycle. The helmet requirement was repealed for individuals 18 years and older. Those minors below 18 must still wear protective headgear. This section unlike most of the Criminal Code would take effect in 1976.

The Senate supported the House passed amendment which would charge a prisoner who kills a guard with first degree murder.

The Senators agreed to a House amendment which says an aborted fetus of any age must not be killed or allowed to die if it shows signs of life. This amends a Senate provision which says feticide is a felony only after the 20th week of pregnancy.

The question of an individuals right to die was also discussed this week. The Senate defined death as "the irreversible cessation of spontaneous brain functions" when a machine is used to maintain life. This section is not in agreement with a House provision which allows artificial supports to be terminated when there is "no reasonable possibility of a patient emerging from a comatose condition."

On provision which generated considerable debate concerned a House amendment which mandated a 7 day jail sentence for conviction of drunken driving. The Senate lowered this provision to two days in jail.

The bill was still pending as of the writing of this newsletter.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Mr. James B. Morris
Publisher Emeritus
The New Iowa Bystander
140-4th Street
West Des Moines, Iowa 50265

Dear Mr. Morris:

I am very disturbed by your editorial of May 6 supporting the Supreme Court decision regarding bilingual education. As you seem to be unaware, Spanish-speaking and Indian speaking groups have lived in what is now called the United States long before European or African immigrants immigrated to this country.

These groups were conquered and the U.S. has historically tried to oppress their language and culture through racist and nativist legislation. Despite this oppression, these groups have held to their customs and language and the Supreme Court decision that you were referring to is another indication of this country's attempt to make everyone monolingual and mono-cultural — maybe even "white" despite the fact that this country is multi-cultural and multi-lingual.

Your conclusion would have your readers believe you still support the old "melting pot" myth that has been so destructive to minorities in this country who could never fit the U.S. mold because of their different color, culture, and language — even different black dialects.

Cordially,

George F. Garcia

Drake Law School Faces Criticism

by Eleanor E. Tate

The Drake University law school has been under criticism for its alleged discriminatory treatment of non-white students. Federal officials are investigating these charges and at least one lawsuit has been filed. Drake University denies those allegations.

Linda Hardnett, 25, of Manchester, Ga., is a former Drake University black student who "flunked out technically" this spring. She majored in psychology at Dillard University in New Orleans, La., and maintained a "B" average, she says. She had had "no intention" of entering law school "until Drake recruited me."

She is a winner of the Council on Law Education Opportunity (a national grant) and her writings have appeared in various publications. She plans to attend the Fred Hampton People's Law Center in Chicago.

Q. What conditions did you find when you first entered the university's law school?

A. "When I got there, I found out that I was 'disadvantaged,' which I knew, but on top of that, I also found out that I was 'inferior,' which I didn't know. They (Drake) proceeded to prove how inferior I was."

Q. How was this done?

A. "I was never called on (to participate in classroom discussion, a procedure used to partly determine a for the black students, either. That's why they don't have a black professor. The problem, again, is the black students."

Q. You say the problem is "again" the black students.

A. "At Dillard (of which she is a graduate) there were black students from Chicago and Detroit. But they were different. Drake takes a different side of Chicago and Detroit. So you're dealing with a Negro, not the type that's going to struggle or help anybody else's struggle. They called me a 'common nigger'. But that makes me feel good. I grew up in a totally segregated society where all of my images were black. For people in the south, there was actual realization of the struggle. You were under the yoke every day. Most of the people who are there (at Drake) are from the north. They grew up in an integrated society. I'm sure growing up like that (meant) that they had to assimilate something. These black students are out for themselves. I went to a meeting recently and the whole question was whether they were being discriminated against. And they couldn't decide."

Q. There has been a long-time complaint from portions of the Des Moines black community that Drake black students do not feel a commitment to the community here. I've also heard that the community has not supported the Drake black students.

student's grades). Basically, when you deal with law, you deal with cases, particularly theory. As with anything, in order to understand something, you need to discuss it. In my freshman year, I was never called on. My discussion was mainly with myself or other black students. After I got my first semester grades, I was a little worried. And I went in to the professors and they told me I was doing okay. But I said no, I know I'm not doing okay. I've never made grades like this before.

"Drake uses a lot of little means to get the black students out ... One of them is a law school exam that is totally subjective. They say they use a scientific method ... but they use a totally non-scientific approach, which is rationalization, which is going to be based on personal experience. They always say to draw upon your background. Well, the black students — we were drawing upon the wrong thing."

Q. Apparently the attrition rate for black students in the Drake law school is more than 50 per cent. Would that mean that black students cannot learn or that the studies are too hard?

A. "They (Drake) would want you to believe that. I must have been putting in a 14-hour day studying. So you're studying, studying, studying and you're never making any better grades. You can't understand that. And they don't tell you why. At Drake you don't get any practical experience unless you have about a 3 point, which is a B. I don't know any black student who gets into the clinic program or the judicial clerkship program (for practical experience) ... They (Drake) know that no black student is going to come up to a B average. Black students struggle ... trying to maintain a 2 point (C).

"This year there were maybe 26 black law students. Three graduated (in December); nine withdrew and the rest are about to flunk out. Drake, though, is not going to flunk out every black student. All Drake wants is some black faces. They know they have a steady supply so they can afford to graduate just one or two."

Q. One complaint made was over the lack of black law professors. What is the problem?

A. "Drake officials said they couldn't find anybody qualified. The black students have a voice in deciding which blacks are hired. But not only were the people (who applied) not qualified (enough) for the Drake administration, but they also appeared not to be qualified

A. "I don't fault the community. My whole thing is that the people at Drake don't realize the roles that they're supposed to play as so-called educated Negroes. I do feel that we have a role to play. We aren't just supposed to go to school and that's that. You can't expect people (in the community) to keep coming to you. At some point you're going to have to go to them and show them that you're interested in what they're doing. It seems that the students are afraid to accept community help."

"I was used to working closely with the community. But here, since they (black students) have so many problems, my question was, 'where is the community'? I admit that community people have tried to help. But the people over there (at Drake) don't know what they want. They have negative feelings toward the community. And why should the black community in Des Moines take an interest in Drake? Drake isn't taking an interest in them. I've heard some of them (black law students) already say, 'well, black folks don't have any money'. They're going to become white lawyers. Now, I've never planned on being really rich. I want to help the people who need it most."

Q. What assistance could the black law students give to the community?

A. "We can't be lawyers (yet), but we could be offering all kinds of little advice on housing, parolees ... In fact, in every field that you think of there's something the community could use."

"I view the black law students as walking time bombs ... as potential threats to the black community, and I personally think they SHOULD stay out. That's bad to say. But being a lawyer you're responsible for somebody's life. If you're afraid to stand up and assert your own rights, you know damn well you're not going to assert anybody else's rights. The same fear they feel now is going to follow them through life. Once they get out of school and do what they're going to do, they're still going to have fear."

MORE THAN $1.4 MILLION IN BACK PAY DUE FOR IOWA HOSPITAL WORKERS

A total of $243,565.40 in back pay plus nearly $50,000 interest is due to 3,110 employees of Iowa's state hospitals, under terms of an order on file today in U.S. District Court, Des Moines. (Filed 4-29-76)

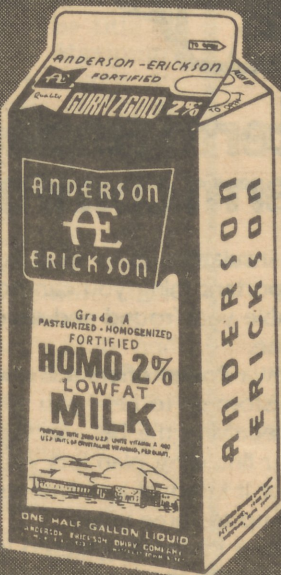

The back pay order concludes a suit filed by the U.S. Labor Department in 1971, alleging that the state had violated minimum wage, overtime and recordkeeping provisions of the Fair Labor Standards Act. Nine state facilities were named: Woodward State Hospital, Iowa Security Medical Facility (Oakdale), Iowa Soldiers' Home (Marshalltown), Glenwood State Hospital, Iowa Annie Wittenmeyer Home (Davenport), and the state mental institutions at Cherokee, Clarinda, Independence and Mount Pleasant.

The District Court originally ruled for the Labor Department and was upheld by the Eighth Circuit Court of Appeals. The Supreme Court declined to review the case, and it was returned to the District Court where Judge W.C. Stuart last December signed a judgment permanently barring the state from future violations of the Act.

A summary filed with the Court shows that over a third of the money due goes to more than 1,100 employees of Woodward State Hospital.

Paul Lynn, Des Moines area director of the Department's Employment Standards Administration, Wage-Hour Division, said that the state has begun the effort to locate the employees named.

"An Equal Opportunity Employer"

Communist China: A Black Perspective

By Paula Baker

In November of last year, I was approached by a friend and asked if I would like to go to China. My immediate answer was "yes". I had always been fascinated with other cultures and societies, but more recently my interest in alternative lifestyles has turned more toward the study of alternative political structures.

The opportunity to go to China seemed to be a once in a lifetime chance to study the culture of a fascinating people as well as to see, feel, and taste life under an alternative political system.

The tour that lasted for 21 days, was sponsored by the U.S. China Peoples Friendship Association, a national organization that has sponsored approximately four tours per year to the Chinese Peoples Republic since the reopening of U.S. China diplomatic relations in 1972. A 24 person delegation left from San Francisco on March 10th and arrived in Shanghai, China on March 12. Though the entire delegation was well prepared for the tour, in terms of what our physical needs would be while we were in China. The amount of political and social preparation varied among tour members. Some members had studied the culture, history, and current political system to a great extent, while others had not. One member had studied Chinese for five years and spoke the language fluently. I had read several highly recommended books and had engaged in discussions and study with the local association.

Though I feel that the pre-trip preparation was very important, I must admit that no amount of reading or study could completely prepare one for the impact of being totally submerged in the Chinese society for three weeks.

From the moment we arrived at the Shanghai airport on the night of March 12th, until the time we left the same airport on April 2, we were engrossed in a rigid but highly exciting schedule of activities that were designed to show us every aspect of Chinese life that was possible in the short length of time that we had to spend there.

We visited seven cities and districts: Shanghai, Wusih, Tientsin, Yangchow, Tangshan, Manking, and Peking. Two, three and sometimes four activities per day were scheduled for us. These activities included visits to social, political, and cultural institutions that are a part of China today or that were of special historical significance to the Chinese people.

We visited workers residences, schools, factories, nurseries, shipyards, coal miners exhibit, parks, museums, small medical facilities and large hospitals.

Warns voters to comply with Registration Rules

Republican State Chairman Tom Stoner warned today that "thousands of Iowans may be turned away at the polls in November" because they have failed to comply with the statewide voter registration requirements.

Stoner's warning was issued in conjunction with announcement of a Republican registration project aimed at encouraging all Iowans, especially Republicans and potential Republican voters, to register and take an active role in the 1976 elections. He said anyone interested in casting a ballot in the June 8 primary must register during May.

He said the "greatest area of concern is in the rural areas of the state where registration was not previously required." Stoner said that registration was required in 76 rural counties for the first time on Jan. 1, 1975, but that the June primary and November general elections will be the first statewide elections since statewide registration was initiated.

"Statewide voter registration is the challenge of the decade in Iowa politics and we are concerned that several thousand voters will be unintentionally disenfranchised and unable to vote in the primary and general elections," Stoner said.

To counter the problem, the GOP state chairman announced that Iowa Republicans will undertake a major voter registration effort called the "Right to Vote '76" project — to encourage Iowans to register. He also announced that Republican State Co-Chairman Margaret McDonald of Cherokee will oversee the Right to Vote project.

Stoner said the project, rug, clay, porcelain, and lacquerware handicraft factories, communes, construction sites, the Nanking River bridge, the Yangchow Hydroelectric Project, and the homes of people who lived both in the city and in the rural areas.

We also visited two universities, an acrobatic performance, a workers sanatorium, and numerous cultural events. We talked with Chinese bureaucrats about planning an foreign policy, and we discussed the basic issues of everyday life in China with three former American citizens who had lived for over 20 years in China. In addition, we talked with foreign businessmen and diplomats about the Peoples' Republics' international trade and diplomatic relations with countries such as Australia, New Zealand, Ghana, Sirleone, the Congo, and Japan.

Needless to say, I have been left with some lasting impressions of "New China" and a much greater knowledge and understanding of what political systems are throughout the world and what they can be.

As most Americans are aware, China today is a socialist country led by the Chinese Communist Party. Under the present leadership China has undergone a massive reconstruction from a poor underdeveloped, overpopulated and minority controlled country to a country that is able to feed, clothe, shelter, and educate 800,000,000 people. This reconstruction is taking place by and for the Chinese people. It was the spirit of this construction that impressed me most about China. In general, every worker, peasant and soldier felt that they had a vital part in building China into a great country. They took pride in the fact that their country was seeking self-sufficiency, that the country had virtually overcome all types of oppression that had existed in the past, and that the Chinese people could, for the most part live a secure and meaningful life.

How China has risen to its present capacity to serve the basic needs of 800,000,000 people without creating external or internal debts and maintaining a stable economy, and how and why the Chinese people feel that their system of government best represents their needs and desires, are all questions that Americans like to have answered about China. Next week in the Bystander, I will attempt to explain some of the basic principles of the Chinese system of government and how they are put to work in New China to serve the Chinese people.

Next Week: Agriculture, China's Key to Self-Sufficiency.

Charge Policemen with Teenage Beating

A Bridgeport, Connecticut, Housing Authority policeman and a Bridgeport city policeman were indicted by a federal grand jury on a charge of beating a teen-age youth.

Attorney General Edward H. Levi said the indictment was returned in U.S. District Court in New Haven, Connecticut, against Gerardo T. Ramos and Joseph M. Procaccini.

The indictment said Ramos and Procaccini kicked and beat Mark A. Napoli on July 31, 1974, at the Marina Village public housing project, violating his constitutional right not to be deprived of liberty without due process of law.

which eventually will be expanded into all 99 counties, "primarily will be aimed at Republican voters and potential Republican voters, but the overall goal of the project is to increase the number of eligible voters who are registered to vote in November."

Shaheen, I directed that the investigation be completed forthwith and that the investigation be completed forthwith and that answers to four specific questions be furnished to me and FBI Director Clarence M. Kelley on the basis of the review of all documents:

— Whether the FBI investigation of Dr. King's assassination was thorough and honest;

— Whether there is any evidence that the FBI was involved in the assassination of Dr. King;

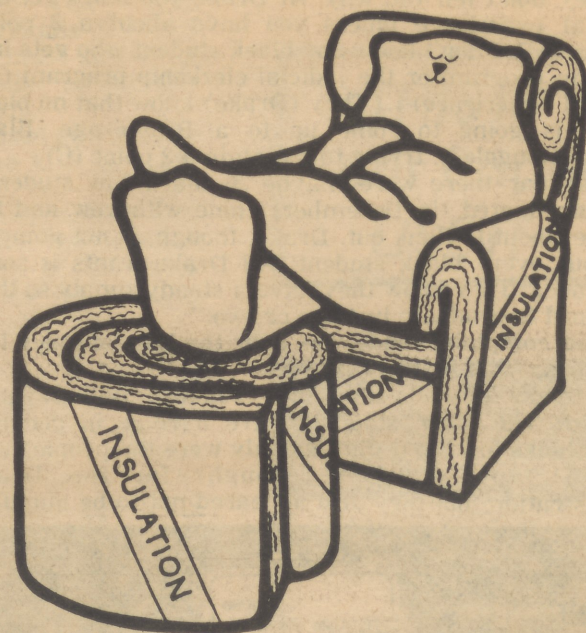

— Whether, in light of the first two matters, there is any new evidence which has come to the attention of the Department concerning the assassination of Dr. King;

— Whether the nature of the relationship between the Bureau and Dr. King calls for criminal prosecutions, disciplinary proceedings, or other appropriate action.

Mr. Pottinger pointed out that the Civil Rights Division has been continuously investigating allegations concerning the assassination of Dr. King as these allegations come to the attention of the Department.

The incident occurred after Procaccini, a city policeman, responded to Ramos's call for assistance to control a youthful disturbance at the housing project. Napoli required six stitches to close a cut over an eye.

The maximum penalty upon conviction of deprivation of rights (Title 18, U.S. Code, Section 242) is one year in prison and a $1,000 fine.

Mrs. Georgia Boyd, 90 with son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Marshall Wilkerson.

90 Year Old Boyd: Spring of Hope, Joy

Georgia Boyd, 90, is an indomitable spring of faith hope and joy despite her familiarity with work and grief. The granddaughter of a slave, a widow, the mother of five sons, three who are still alive, the stepmother of seven, the grandmother of 19 and the great grandmother of 44 and the great great grandmother of seven. Mrs. Boyd was a bride at 16 and again at the remarkable age of 84.

A resident of the Fort Madison Nursing Care Center nearly two years, Mrs. Boyd says she has "graduated" to a wheelchair from a walker and crutches.

A faithful reader of the Bible, she treasures family pictures, does quilting and crafts, attends Center activities and daily wheels herself down the long corridors.

Her memories are pleasant ones. Complaints? She hasn't any. "My family sees to it I have everything I need or want, and the food and care here are good," she smiles contentedly.

Mrs. Boyd was born Jan. 15, 1886, in Pike county, Mo., the second of 15 children of Rachel and Wilson Grimmet. Her father was a truck farmer. He also cut and sold "pipe" poles for making pipes.

Georgia and her first husband, Lovely Wilkerson, moved their family to Fort Madison so their children might have a better education. At that time, children in Missouri had to "board out" in order to attend school and then could attend but four months each year. Wilkerson was employed here by the Santa Fe Railroad.

Pride is evident as Georgia speaks of her sons, Marshall, a Baptist deacon, Raymond, both of this area, and J.D. Wilkerson. The latter lives in Kansas City, Mo., and travels throughout the state as a Baptist minister. William H., the eldest, and Ralph, the youngest, are deceased.

Marshall and Raymond married sisters, Bessie and Bernice Boyd, who were later to become Georgia's stepdaughters as well.

Other stepchildren are Homer Boyd of Fort Madison, Mrs. Myrt (Georgia) Baskin and William Boyd of Gary, Ind., Otis Boyd of Chicago and Mrs. Wilfred (Margaret) Holt of Los Angeles, Calif.

Queried as to her secret of a cheerful heart, Mrs. Boyd stated, "This is where the Lord put me, honey. I wouldn't want to be anywhere else."

ALLEN ASHBY with a LOOK ON SPORTS

IT ALMOST WASN'T ALLEN ASHBY

Maybe you never read it, but I remember reading about a little girl asking, "What if they gave a war and nobody came? What would happen?"

Well, last Saturday I had a pretty good idea as to how the people who gave that war must have felt. For a while I thought I had given a tennis tournament and nobody came. It looked bad for a while and part of it was my fault. I was supposed to let a couple of people know just when the thing would be played, since I had mentioned two days and they wanted to be sure of the right one. I got tangled up in some of my own personal affairs and plumb forgot to call the people, causing them to miss what I believe was the first tennis meet they had entered in and not played in over the thirty years that I have known the guy. I'd have to say that my credibility took a nose dive with him.

But how do you explain a goof like that? You could state the facts, but they just don't seem to do the job. It so happens that in my book you are not supposed to make excuses. Either you do it or you don't, and there I was scrambling around for a suitable explanation.

The fellow never shows his emotions, but I guess he was thinking thoughts that weren't too flattering about me. You see, they showed up about three PM after our meet was under way. One of the fellows who was in the meet said that he had talked to the fellow and he had known about the Saturday decision, but it turned out that the guy who was supposed to have seen our man never did see him.

Now, I have to think he rigged the whole meet with names of people he knew wouldn't be there so he could win the thing which he did. I could be wrong, but I can think what I please. I don't think I'll ever live that one down in my own mind.

This was one of the qualifying rounds of the Younker's Kodel tennis tournament. I had chosen the late date because I wanted to have the last meet. But the rain took care of that and there were about five meets going on at the same time ours was.

Maybe next year we will get together and everyone will know the dates so we can all keep them straight, and there won't be such a gang of meets on the same day. Gahd! What a mess.

No number one this year

After getting off to a fine start this year, Arthur Ash has begun to have his difficulties. He has had a difficult time getting very far in meets lately. But just as I have been arguing all along, there isn't any one tennis player who is going to dominate the scene as players did before the seventies.

They keep calling Jimmy Connors the greatest, but he has taken his lumps from some of the players who have been ranked way below him.

If any player gets in the tournaments he will win some and lose some. I just don't know how the top twenty players will be rated this year. Maybe if a fellow could win both Wimbledon and the U.S. meets, he would be the number one player. But can anyone do that? Maybe the names should all be put into a receptacle and drawn out and ranked in the order in which they come out.

Spring Football

Too bad they didn't have a spring football game at Iowa U. this year. That one at Iowa State must have been a jim dandy judging by the news stories. Iowa State has two fine quarterbacks, both black and folks forget about that when they get into a game.

There is a third signal caller who is just waiting for one of the two to slip. And at Iowa U. Butch Caldwell shows signs of getting back into the picture. It was said that grades got him, and he had to study like mad to make it, but now he has a good chance.

A while back a fellow asked me if I thought Butch could make his grades. My thought was that most players who finish one year at a college can get the work if they will apply themselves.

I refuse to believe that a guy who could make it past his first two years suddenly becomes so dumb that he can't make it in the classroom.

Maybe outside attractions cut into his study time, or maybe he gets fed up with the situation he finds himself in and just doesn't give a damn. But if he wants to, most of the players who have passed their first two years of school can cut the books. So I am not surprised at Butch.

Renee La Mar

Renee LaMar holds Karate Black Belt

Renee LaMar of Des Moines, is one of a small number of women that hold the coveted black belt in karate.

She is possibly the only black female who holds a belt in the state of Iowa.

Recently Miss LaMar has been spending all her week ends traveling to different tournaments around the country. One trip was to Winnipeg Canada, an international tournament where she won first place in her division.

"A man from Jamaica told me to be the best you can. That if your going to be a drunk then be the best drunk."

In keeping with being the best Miss LaMar went to Arizona for a tournament. Marion Barmudas, the U.S. womens national champ was there and entered in the mens division, as did Renee.

When they asked Renee who she would like to fight she pointed at the womens national champ and said, "I want that girl."

She fought dirty, says LaMar, who'd knocked down her opponent a couple of times and each time she turned away she'd been kicked. Each time it happened there was no comment from the referee.

"I landed a couple of good punches and kicks that they didn't point me for," she said, "but I proved to myself that I could beat her." That match had gone to Marion Barmudas.

"If your good they'll hold you back," comments Miss

LaMar who has experienced some difficulties because of her race and sex.

Renee has other things on her mind, although karate takes precedence for the moment.

She had wanted to try out for the Olympic team but, "it was just a bunch of politics," said the disillusioned Renee.

She is interested in transcendental meditation, it helps her in her tournaments. You've got to get used to the idea of winning, she says, experience it in the mind.

Miss LaMar hopes to go to college and get her degree in Criminology. "I've got the self-defense part of it," she says, "now I just have to get the other part."

Baha'i Convention

Mrs. Soo Fouts, of Fairfax County, Virginia, Hawaiian-born of Korean ancestry, was the only newly elected member to the National Spiritual Assembly of the Baha'is of the United States during their 67th annual convention, held recently at the Baha'i House of Worship, Wilmette, IL. She will serve as one of the nine-member body, chosen each year to guide and direct the administrative affairs of the national Baha'i community.

The membership of the National Assembly, reflecting the Baha'i teaching on the oneness of mankind, this year includes three women, three blacks, one Asiatic and one North American Indian, thus including members of the black, brown, yellow and white races.

One of the highlights of the convention was announcement of a special citation from the American Revolution Bicentennial Administration office, in Washington, D.C., in honor of the extensive Bicentennial observance made by the American Baha'i community. Special exhibits were placed in transportation centers throughout the country.

Gary L. Russian, Journeyman Carpenter

Gary L. Russian is a journeyman carpenter working for Vawter and Walter Construction Company. He is also a member of Carpenters Local Union No. 106. Most of his four years on the job training as an apprentice, which he completed in 1973, was done for Ringland-Johnson-Crowley and Vawter and Walter Construction Company. In addition to this work he was required to participate in related classroom instruction.

Russian, who lives at 1131-21st Street, graduated from North High School before entering the carpenters apprenticeship program in 1969.

Some of the construction jobs Russian has worked on are: Area XI College, Hoyt Elementary School, Merle Hay Mausoleum, Farm Bureau Building, and Mercy Hospital.

Gary said, "My four years of carpenter apprenticeship were difficult, but I knew that this was what I wanted to do, so I stuck with it. As a minority apprentice I received little encouragement. It seems as though I still have to work twice as hard as others to keep a job. I have worked with a lot of people, but there is always someone who tries to discourage me or make my job tougher. My advice to minorities entering any trade is to be at work every day, work hard, and learn all that you can on and off the job. By doing this, you will be just as qualified to do the job as anyone else. It will also make it more difficult for those who are trying to make it rough for you."

GET RID OF MOSQUITOES!

The Des Moines-Polk County Health Department urges everyone to help control mosquitoes this summer. Mosquitoes are more than a nuisance, for they carry the threat of disease with their bite. This year your Health Department is mounting a two-pronged attack against them:

1— Larviciding will be done by helicopter over many bodies of standing water throughout Polk County in order to kill the unhatched mosquito.

2— Spraying of adult mosquitoes will take place during the mosquito season along certain roadsides and in dense, wooded areas known to have a high concentration of mosquitoes.

Every citizen can do a lot to help control the mosquito population. The Health Department is urging each of you to do the following:

1— Clean clogged rain gutters and drain flat roofs so that no water stands there.

2— Remove, cover, or turn upside-down all containers that can hold water, particularly buckets, bottles, tin cans, toys, old tires, and wheelbarrows.

3— Screen all septic tank vents.

4— Change the water and scrub the vases holding flowers or cuttings at least twice each week.

5— Empty and refill all bird baths weekly.

6— Empty plastic wading pools daily and store them indoors when not in use.

In addition to these recommendations spray your shrubbery, flowers, and plants with any of several good chemicals on the market to destroy the daytime resting places of adult mosquitoes.

For more information on mosquito-control, call the Des Moines-Polk County Health Department. The telephone number is 283-4999.

High Blood Pressure "Like a Time bomb"

"High Blood Pressure is like a time bomb." The Kidney Foundation of Iowa warned today. "It ticks away quietly with every beat of the heart until it explodes as kidney failure, heart attack, or fatal or crippling stroke."

According to the Foundation, over 375,000 Iowans have high blood pressure, or hypertension, and less than half know they have it. Of those who know they have high blood pressure, only 25% are under adequate treatment to bring their blood pressure under control.

"Most people don't realize how serious this disease is," says John Davis, Executive Director of the Kidney Foundation of Iowa. "They confuse it with nervous tension and think that a long vacation is the cure. They're wrong. High blood pressure is high blood pressure. The pressure on the blood vessels is too high and makes the kidneys and heart work harder. Eventually it may cause kidney failure, heart disease or stroke."

To combat this problem, the Kidney Foundation is launching an all-out campaign during the month of May to help the public to understand the need to control high blood pressure.

Twenty-three million people in America have high blood pressure - one in every seven adults. One in every four blacks has the disease. Doctors also know that some women may have special high blood pressure problems associated with contraceptives, pregnancy, and menopause. Left untreated, high blood pressure may kill or cripple many of these.

Especially because of the severe implications of high blood pressure to kidney disease, the Kidney Foundation of Iowa is anxious to help everyone understand hypertension. If you need further information, consult your physician or contact the Kidney Foundation of Iowa, 3615 Douglas Avenue, Des Moines, 50310.
