In Letter to Coretta King

Jewish Congress for Jobs Bill

In a letter to Coretta Scott King, the American Jewish Congress this week pledged full support of the Humphrey-Hawkins Full Employment Bill.

The letter to Mrs. King, who heads the Full Employment Action Council, enclosed copies of an American Jewish Congress statement addressed to Senators William Proxmire and Harrison Williams voicing the organization's endorsement of the full-employment bill and urging the Senators to "move expeditiously toward approval."

Joseph B. Robison, general counsel of the American Jewish Congress, said in his letter to Mrs. King:

"The American Jewish Congress believes that putting an end to the intolerable level of unemployment must be a top priority for this nation in 1976. We look forward to working with you in the months ahead."

The Humphrey-Hawkins legislation would declare as a matter of federal policy "that all adult Americans able and willing to work have the right to equal opportunities for useful paid employment at fair rates of compensation." The bill would also establish and mandate a procedure for developing the measures necessary to carry out that policy.

At its recent biennial convention, the American Jewish Congress adopted a resolution on full employment which said in part:

"The current level of unemployment in this country, varying around the figure of 8 per cent, is intolerable and unacceptable. On its face, it means that one out of every 12 employable persons is without a job. In fact, however, the situation is even worse. The official unemployment figure disregards the large number of persons who have given up looking for work and counts as employed millions of persons who have only part-time employment. Furthermore, the unemployment rate is much higher in many urban areas and among young people, minorities, women and other disadvantaged groups."

The resolution went on to call for:

"The enactment of legislation guaranteeing the right of opportunity for meaningful employment to every American able and willing to work on establishing effective ongoing machinery for giving reality to that guarantee."

The American Jewish Congress letter to Senator Proxmire, chairman of the Senate Committee on Banking, Housing and Urban Affairs, and Senator Williams, chairman of the Senate Committee on Labor and Public Welfare, said:

"We understand and accept the fact that this bill, by itself, would not provide the job opportunities that are urgently needed. It is nevertheless an important first step toward that end."

"Our government has never formally accepted responsibility for preventing the rise of unemployment to unreasonable levels. This bill would constitute a declaration of the existence of that responsibility and it would create a machinery effectively designed to insure that responsibility will not simply be ignored."

Recognition Banquet for Luther Glanton

The Drake Chapter of the Black American Law Student Association (BALSIA) sponsored a Recognition Banquet honoring Judge Luther T. Glanton, Jr. at Hotel Ft. Des Moines, Wednesday, May 19, 1976. Over 400 attended the $25.00 a plate dinner.

Nolden Gentry, member of the Des Moines School Board, introduced the speaker who was Dr. Helen Edmonds, Dean of the Graduate School of Arts and Science, North Carolina Central University in Durham., Dr. Edmonds was also Alternate Delegate to the United Nations and National President of Links, Inc. in the early 70's, and is a dynamic speaker. Her remarks traced the evolution of the American Black experience and related it to our Bicentennial in a most extraordinary fashion. It was well received and rewarded with a standing ovation.

Guest Speakers

Other speakers who related to the personal, professional life as we; as the community service of Judge Glanton, were: Attorney John Connolly, III, Clyde Putnam, James Lawyer; Edward Fitzgerald, referee in probate; Leo J. Tapscott, former county attorney; and Gilbert Cranberg, Chief of Editorial Staff, Register and Tribune.

Others appearing on the program were The Most Rev. Maurice J. Dingman, Bishop of the Dioceses of Des Moines, and Ms. Jerry Palmer from the Julliard School of Music. Miss Palmer was accompanied by Mrs. Rose Marie Webster. W. Lawrence Oliver, former law partner of Judge Glanton, presided.

Glanton serves as District Associate Court Judge in Polk County, and has provided inspiration to many who are striving to attain a legal education. He was Assistant County Attorney for Polk County for 5½ years, practiced general law for 13 years, prior to his appointment to the Municipal Court Bench in 1959. Glanton's service on the bench has been continuous and he has served with distinction.

North Carolina—The National Alliance Against Racist and Political Repression met in a press conference, Monday, to announce plans for a massive march on Labor Day, September 6, to protest racial and labor conditions in North Carolina which are said to be the most repressive of all the states in the country. Angela Davis, who heads the national organization was on hand for the press conference.

Oakland, Calif. - Greg Jones was found guilty of homicide by a Oakland jury after pleading insanity. Jones maintained that he was driven insane by racist conditions at his place of work. Psychiatrists testified that Jones was under the delusion that the young white stranger whom he shot after the two mens cars collided was a hit man sent by Caterpillar Tractor Company to kill him. When the shooting occurred Jones was on his way home after having suffered a mental breakdown on the shop floor.

The National Caucus of Black Democrats developed a platform at the convention that called for the federal government to reverse its trend of decentralizing policies that effect the civil rights movement.

VIEWS and REVIEWS

Eighty-Two Years Have Been Rewarding

The New Iowa Bystander (originally the Iowa State Bystander) is observing its 82nd Anniversary with this edition. By all the rules of any businesses, this is remarkable for anyone to have survived such a long time and it is with a source of appreciation from the management that its supporters and friends have helped to make it so.

The paper was started by a group of men who had no experience in newspaper work, but they felt the need of a minority newspaper where its news of all kinds would be published (the news media published only crime news about Negroes at that time); nor did they employ any in their establishments.

All of these men had jobs and thus the Bystander was operated, to a great extent, as a side issue which, for years, had a tendency to impede its growth.

Weekly newspapers, like the corner grocery stores that have been pretty well wiped out by the supermarkets, find themselves in the same situation with regard to TV and radio stations and large daily newspapers. For this reason only those that have been operated by individuals whose personality made friends for the paper, have survived. This is true in Des Moines for such papers as the Jewish newspapers, Italian papers, several labor union papers and Negro newspapers have been started and ceased publication for the same reason.

I had hoped the day would come when minority newspapers would have no place in the community because considerable progress had been made in the fields of Civil Rights and Equal Opportunities. But apparently, the explosions of the 1960's have triggered more resistance than one would have anticipated. The fangs of the George Wallace's and those who support his views have shown themselves. For instance, who would have thought that Governor Wallace would have received 71 percent of the Democratic primary vote in Michigan in 1972; it has manifested itself in the primary elections in 1976; in the riots against bussing also.

Naturally, newspapers operated by minorities, give great support for equal rights for all people without regard to race, color, sex or creed. It has been a pleasure that most people who have the welfare of the country at heart believe this and the Bystander has been able to continue publication because many of these people have supported it.

During the fifty years I was editor and publisher of the Bystander a large number of business institutions and individuals were generous in their support of the paper. Fortunately, it has continued even though there have been some unforeseen problems that inconvenienced many of our customers. While I serve as an advisor only, it will always be my willingness to lend whatever assistance that would be required to continue a smooth operation of the paper.

Polk Democrats Should Not Practice Underhanded Politics

Des Moines does not have a Negro member of the legislature. This is due, in part, to the redistricting by the legislature which cut the heavy Negro vote in the Model Cities area into two parts. Precinct 57 has the distinction of having a Negro woman candidate on the democratic ticket for the June primary election. Representative Caffery, who has represented this district, died recently which left only Mrs. Alexander as a democratic candidate.

Some democrats have concocted a scheme to write-in an independent candidate because they do not want her on the ticket this fall as the democratic candidate.

Like Negroes in most communities, the democratic party has captured 90 percent of their votes since 1936. They have been the difference in electing more than one democrat where the margin of difference between the democrat and republican candidates was slim.

The democratic organization in Polk County knows this and they would be less than loyal if they subscribed to fix that undermines one who represents those who have supported them through the years.

I don't believe that decent democrats are a party to this scheme and I hope that they, as well as the Negro voters, will give this woman a victory in the primaries.

NEEDED NOW...AN AROUSED BLACK COMMUNITY

Black Dean Fired at Georgia State

Mr. Nathaniel Billingsley, Assistant Dean of Men at Georgia State University was dismissed, apparently without reason, by Dean William R. Baggett in a two paragraph letter, dated May 6, that informed Billingsley that his contract would not be renewed after June 30, 1976.

When questioned by Randy Jones, Vice-President Elect,

Black Alliance of the Student Government Association, and Steve Marshall, President of the Junior Class at Georgia State as to the reasoning behind the dismissal of Dean Billingsley Dean Baggett replied, in essence, that he did not have to give them (the students) a reason. Baggett also added that he felt if he gave the reason for Billingsley's dismissal it might be incriminating towards him (Billingsley).

Mr. Marshall stated that, "it is a general agreement among the students at Georgia State, both black and white, that racism" is at the root of the issue. Citing as fact the forthcoming resignation of the present Dean of Men, Timothy M. Singleton and the dismissal of Dean Billingsley, who was next in line for the position. With no dean, and no assistant dean Georgia State University Administration is free to hire another white into the position of dean and another black into the position of assistant dean.

To date Dean Baggett nor Dean Timothy Singleton have yet to comment further upon Billingsley's dismissal.

Metro summer opera begins 4th season

The Des Moines Metro Summer Festival of Opera will present its fourth season of opera in repertory June 18 through July 4 on the Simpson College campus.

The intent of the opera festival is two-fold: to create new audiences for opera in the midwest through performances of both traditional and unusual productions, and to give young professional singers a stage for their talents. Dr. Larsen recruits singers from around the country along with local talent to perform in the summer event.

Another member of the Simpson music faculty, Douglas Duncan, serves as managing director for the festival. Duncan, a tenor, also sings with the festival as do music faculty members Carol Stuart, a lyric soprano, and Anne Ogan Larson, a mezzo-soprano.

The festival, a non-profit venture which is supported through the contributions of supporters and ticket sales, also offers a unique apprentice program for college or post-college-age singers interested in opera performance.

The performance schedule this summer is as follows: "The Barber of Seville" — June 18, 20 and 26 and July 3; "Manon" —

June 19, 27 and 30 and July 2, and "Susannah" — June 25 and 29 and July 4.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR:

Dear Sirs:
I do hope you will give some thought as to the extreme effort put forth by the children of Saint Peters Catholic Church, under the direction of Sister Mary Andrew and Miss Sue Felice in their aid to the elderly. Yesterday they came to my home and washed the windows of my home and even the windows of the garage. They have also made plans to take care of my yard. I realize that at my age there is so much that I cannot do especially because of my physical condition and the losing of my eyesight. Yes, I do try to keep active as I know to stop trying is a detriment. However, there are so many things I am unable to do. Thanking you in advance for letting these persons know that I like others receiving this aid are very grateful.

Very truly,
Mrs. Mary Frances Tillman

ENTERTAINMENT WORLD

Donald Byrd, Man of Many Talents

DONALD BYRD

Donald Byrd is the musician cum laude. Long acclaimed for his jazz trumpet, Byrd is a highly regarded academician, cultural researcher, teacher and humanitarian whose contributions to his profession and his race are numerous.

Although jazz fans have known his excellent trumpet since 1955, it is more recently that Donald has immersed himself in Afro-American music, its history and culture, assimilating new influences into his own personal music, and becoming one of the country's most erudite authorities on ethnomusicology.

Currently the chairman of the Black music department at Howard University in Washington, D.C., Donald teaches four classes each semester, accepts concert and lecture engagements around the country, records for Blue Note Records, hosts a weekly television show in New York's educational station, and has just completed his first year of law school!

Byrd's academic accomplishments are formidable. He was invited to write a syllabus on the teaching of Afro-American music in the classroom, and his method has been adapted by the New York Board of Education. He has been "Composer-in-residence" and conductor of the jazz orchestra at Rutgers University. He was involved with the world-acclaimed Marshall Stearns Jazz Collection, a compilation of over 25,000 albums that traces the history of jazz in this country.

With so distinguishing an academic career, it is easy to forget the Donald Byrd, first and foremost, is one of the strongest jazz voices of the past twenty years. He was born December 9, 1932 in Detroit, the son of a musically-inclined Methodist minister. He joined Art Blakey's Jazz Messengers in 1954, and later gigged with Max Roach, which led to a contract with Blue Note Records. At this time, he returned to school at Columbia University and ultimately earned an M.A. degree from the Manhattan School of Music.

In addition to teaching, law school studies, and his television show, Donald still manages to pursue that first love which opened all these worlds to him: playing. Most recently, he has worked college concerts with such company as Miles Davis, Herbie Hancock, and the Chambers Brothers.

Donald Byrd's latest album, Stepping Into Tomorrow, is one of the best-selling LP's on the charts today.

Hikes are expected for beverages, food, rooms, room service and showrooms... Gordon Parks feud with Paramount Pictures over the company's remanual ad campaigns and quickie bookings for his "Leadbelly" film is paying off. Paramount will open the picture in two major theatres in New York with full page newspaper ads billing the film as a Gordon Parks masterpiece... The Muhammed Ali/Jimmy Young fight helped ABC-TV rack up its biggest rating weekend in sports history.

It is now official that John Amos has dropped out of his co-starring role in "Good Times". Norman Lear, producer of the series said Amos asked for and was granted his release, so he could produce a movie he's been working on for sometime... There's a possibility that Amos may return to the series, however, he has been written out of the first eight episodes. The three Evans children will move into the forefront so that J.J. could be the focus... Beah Richards has been added to the cast of Cicely Tyson and Robert Hooks in Melvin Van Peebles' TV movie "Just An Old Sweet Song"... And James Earl Jones has signed for a starring role in "The Heretic: Exorcist II"... A wax figure of Diana Ross from the film "Mahogany" will be the next attraction added to the list of personalities on display at the Hollywood Wax Museum...

Franklyn Ajay: Flip Wilson's Discovery

Franklyn Ajaye, Flip Wilson's latest comedy discovery, is making 1976 his own special celebration. With a new, live album about to be released on the Little David label (Wilson's company) and two co-starring roles in off-beat movies under his belt, the 28 year old New York born, Los Angeles bred comedian is having the time of his life.

"Dandy, the All American Girl," with Stockard Channing and Sam Waterson was Franklyn's first movie, followed quickly by a featured role in Universal's free form musical "A Day In the Life of a Car Wash." The two movies allow Franklyn an unusual opportunity to display his considerable talents.

"I had never acted before," admits Franklyn, who did in fact study acting at UCLA. "I had done some work at college, but never felt I had a good grasp on what I was doing. When Jerry Schatzberg (producer and director of "Dandy, the All American Girl") called me in to read, I figured there was no chance in the world that I'd get the part."

Franklyn was wrong. He was Schatzberg's first and only choice for the role of Edmond, the car thief with a fierce loyalty to the title heroine. "I really liked Edmond," says Franklyn. "I could understand who he was. I mean, he was out stealing cars because that was his way to survive. He wanted money and a slice of the good things in life, and had no other way of getting them. I think Dandy is a little bit more complicated, she steals cars from some other idealized concept of freedom. But Edmond, he's just a street kid, making a living."

This summer, Franklyn will go out on the road as a comedian, putting forth routines from his upcoming Little David album "Don't Smoke Dope, Fry Your Hair."

"I'm real proud of that album, it's the best thing I've ever done," admits Franklyn who has two previous albums out on another label. "I think all of it holds up real well and I'm anxious to see how it plays before an audience. We recorded it live at the Roxy, but taking it out to the Middle West and the East Coast will be something else."

A former law-school drop-out, Franklyn says he'll be happy to go out on the road "as long as I don't have to go to New York. I hate New York. I hate the pace and the dirtiness of the city."

When it's pointed out that no comedian, or actor for that matter, can really break into the front ranks without New York City under his belt, Franklyn just smiles. "I might be the first one to do it."

I must admit I was not a 100% Santana fan. I always liked his music, however, attending a Santana concert was not on my top priority list. What's more, Santana had not toured in over a year, so I felt it my duty, on his current tour, to check him out. It was totally a complete entertaining experience. The stage was decorated with palms and Draceana trees. His light show accented every mode of his music and his back up musicians were perfect. Santana played several cuts from his current Lp, "Amigo," as well as hits from the past. It was a great show. I don't think I'll ever miss a Santana concert again...

Kathleen Cleaver is on a national tour drumming up support for the Eldridge Cleaver defense committee... The Jackson Family has completed taping of their four television specials that will air this summer starting June 16th. Guests include, Sonny Bono, Joey Bishop, McKenzie Phillips from television series "One Day At A Time" and Ed Mahon, Ken Walker a member of the Platters singing group, was found dead in his bed in Sydney, Australia, where the group is performing. Death apparently resulted from natural causes. He was 25.

Although they brought in George Faison and Gilbert Moses to co-direct and rescue "1600 Pennsylvania Avenue," the musical about a 100 year tour of the White House, the Broadway critics unanimously turned thumbs down. The closing cost investors $1,300,000... Prices could go sky high in Las Vegas as a result of strike settlement with unions.

Fredrick Douglas Mobile Theater

An outdoor stage production reflecting the history and participation of blacks in the United States is being developed by the National Park Service as one of its major Bicentennial projects.

The Frederick Douglass Mobile Theatre will appear July 9 and 10 at 8:30 p.m. at the Frederick Douglass Home in the Anacostia section of Washington, D.C.

The Frederick Douglas Mobile Theatre will present "The Bicentennial: Black American Reflections." The Afro-American Bicentennial Corporation, a non-profit Washington-based corporation, is producing the program under contract to the National Park Service.

"Reflections" will highlight the nature and quality of the social, political, and cultural experiences of Black Americans since the founding of America 200 years ago. It is a musical drama that will be narrated by four prominent entertainers at separate presentations. Also featured will be a cast of professional dancers and singers.

The outdoor program will be presented on a specially designed 29'x36' stage, fully equipped to accommodate a full-scale professional production.

Communist China: A Black Perspective

By Paula Baker

A question that is often asked about life in China or in any totalitarian country is what is life like without personal freedom? In America when we talk about personal freedom we usually think of the first ten amendments of the American Constitution which: the Bill of Rights, guarantees that every American citizen has a right to "Life, Liberty and the pursuit of happiness".

The two most important tools available to Americans for achieving the fruits of these rights are first, the right to vote and to democratically choose representatives to local, state, and national offices that we feel best represent our viewpoints and who are capable of making important decisions to further our best interests as citizens of this country; and secondly the right to free speech and assembly.

China also feels that it has a democratic system of government and that the government is truly representative of the peoples needs and desires. Indeed, though China is a dictatorship it distinguishes itself from being a country ran by a few in the interest of a few ... instead China's dictatorship is called the "Dictatorship of the Proletariat", or a dictatorship of the people, in the best interests of the people. China too, claims to have participatory democracy and in general the Chinese feel that their system is superior to any other system of democracy in the world. The Chinese feel that their system of participation guarantees input from all Chinese in every walk of life.

The Chinese system, based on Chairman Mao's teaching of the concept of "criticism and self-criticism", seeks to not only guarantee that the Chinese people have a right to participate in decision-making processes that affect their lives and that of their country, but it seeks to instill in each Chinese citizen that they have a responsibility to understand the principles upon which the Chinese system of government is based and further, that their responsibility is to see that those principles are lived up to.

We often hear that voting in China is mandatory and that elections are decided even before votes are actually cast. But what is important about the Chinese system of representation is that the Chinese people are constantly in the process of choosing their leaders.

Politics in China are not excluded from the every day activities of life. In contrast to the American citizens' attitude that "I don't want to have anything to do with politics", the Chinese citizen is involved in politics at home in his residential facility, at the neighborhood level, and at his place of employment.

People in leading positions at the residence level are chosen by fellow neighbors in the residence, people in leading positions at the neighborhood level are chosen by fellow community members, and production leaders at the work place are chosen for their positions by fellow workers. When a person has reached higher levels of authority in the production brigades, district, state or national level offices, he has usually shown leadership abilities in all or several of these basic levels of Chinese life.

It can be said that the Chinese system of government seeks to involve all Chinese in decision-making by structuring all levels of life in China around the principle of collective decision-making. Because it is necessary to have a basic understanding of the principles of the Chinese system of government in order to provide constructive input into decision-making at any level of Chinese life, political study becomes a part of Chinese life very early and continues throughout old age. Political study takes place at school, in the neighborhoods, and at the work place.

It appeared to me that most of the Chinese I questioned — the young and the old, looked forward to political study at the various levels of their life. They accepted their responsibility to their country to utilize their own insights to contribute to the construction of a strong China. Especially amazing was the liveliness and vigor of the older Chinese people when they explained to us how they went about making their contributions to Chinese life. They felt that their role was vital to the construction of a China that would be strong for future generations. They fulfilled this role in a variety of ways, older craftsmen in the factories instructed younger workers in the skills of the trade; upon retirement from work the older people became active in neighborhood affairs and worked with the young people in the schools to give the younger generation a first hand account of the old Chinese society and to contrast the old with the new.

The principle that encourages this kind of energetic participation is the principle of Criticism and Self-Criticism. The principle has 11 points, and they are:

1. Not to let things slide for the sake of peace and friendship when a person has clearly gone wrong, and to refrain from principled argument because the person is an old schoolmate, a close friend or loved one.
2. Not to engage in irresponsible criticism behind ones back, to say nothing to an individual in his face but to gossip behind his back.
3. Not to let things drift if they do not affect one personally, to say as little as possible while knowing that something is wrong, or play it safe and seek to avoid blame.
4. Not to demand special consideration from the organization but to reject its discipline.
5. Not to enter into an argument to vent personal spite, to seek revenge or to pick quarrels without regard to unity or to performing work properly.
6. Not to hear incorrect views without rebutting them, to listen calmly as if nothing had happened.
7. Not to fail to educate the masses when among the masses, failing to participate in directing the masses.
8. Not to see someone harming the masses yet not feel indignant or seek to stop him or reason with him.
9. Not to work half-heartedly without a definite plan or direction.
10. Not to regard ones self as being too good or too experienced to perform minor tasks, not to be slipshod in work or study.
11. Not to be aware of ones own mistakes but to make no effort to correct them ... not to take a liberal attitude toward ones self.

In addition, the Chinese follow the beliefs to "Say all you know and say it without reserve", "Blame not the speaker but be warned by his words", "Correct mistakes if you have committed them and guard against them if you have not", and "learn from past mistakes to avoid future ones" and "Cure the sickness to save the patient". These may sound very simple and down to earth and they are, however the great impact of these beliefs can be witnessed by the fact that China reached goals never thought possible and that relative unity has been maintained in China.

Next week I will discuss how I feel that self-sufficiency, and increased moral responsibility are Chinese characteristics that can be utilized in strengthening the unity and direction of black people in America.

|--|--------------------------------------|
| 2 to 2½ pounds chicken parts | 2 teaspoons paprika |
| ¼ cup flour | ¼ teaspoon pepper |
| ¼ cup salad oil | 1 small bay leaf |
| 1 can (10½ ounces) condensed tomato soup | ½ cup sour cream |
| 1 soup can water | 1 tablespoon salt |
| 1 can (4 ounces) sliced mushrooms, undrained | 3 quarts boiling water |
| ¼ cup chopped onion | 8 ounces (3 cups) ready-cut macaroni |
| | Minced parsley |

Roll chicken in flour. In large skillet, brown chicken in oil; pour off excess drippings. Stir in soup, water, mushrooms and liquid, onion, paprika, pepper, and bay leaf. Cover; simmer about 45 minutes or until chicken is tender, stirring now and then. Remove bay leaf. Blend in sour cream; heat a minute or two. Meanwhile, add salt to rapidly boiling water. Gradually add macaroni so that water continues to boil. Cook uncovered, stirring occasionally, 9 to 12 minutes until desired tenderness. Drain in colander. Return macaroni to pot and pour in sauce from chicken; mix well. Turn into serving dish; top with chicken; sprinkle with parsley. Yield: 5 to 6 servings.

NEWS OF BICENTENNIAL AMERICA

A LEGACY OF AMERICAN HISTORY

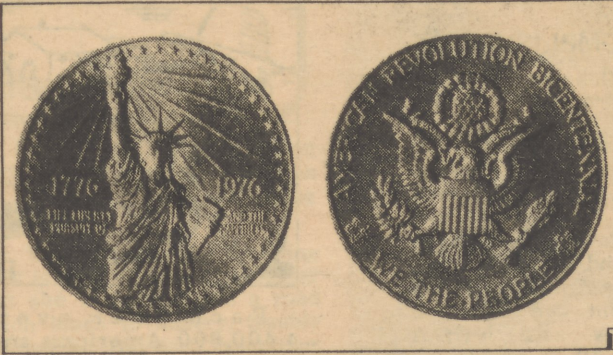

Americans can now own the only gold medal ever authorized specifically by Congress for public sale. The National Bicentennial Medal offers an unprecedented opportunity to possess a prestigious reminder of the basic documents upon which the country was founded and the national spirit which guided its people through 200 years.

In order that every American may participate in this historic occasion, the American Revolution Bicentennial Administration offers the National Bicentennial Medal in seven selections... from the beautiful $5 bronze to the historic $4,000 gold.

The obverse (front) of the National Bicentennial Medal presents the Statue of Liberty, surrounded by a ring of fifty stars, one for each state, and the words, "Life, Liberty, and the Pursuit of Happiness," the inalienable rights, so proclaimed by the Declaration of Independence.

The Statue of Liberty, originally called "Liberty Enlightening the World," was a gift from the people of France to the people of the United States. Presented to our country in Paris on July 4, 1884, it "commemorates the alliance of the two nations in achieving the independence of the United States of America, and attests to their abiding friendship."

The 225-ton copper-sheathed, steel-framed statue was designed by the French sculptor Frederick Auguste Bartholdi. In her right hand, Liberty holds a torch as a beacon to all mankind, and in her left hand, illuminated by the torch, is a tablet with the date July 4, 1776. At her feet is a broken shackle symbolizing liberation from tyranny.

The reverse (back) of the National Bicentennial Medal includes the American bald eagle as it appears in the Great Seal of the United States, and the opening words of the Constitution, "We, the people."

The creation of the Great Seal was the first order of business undertaken by the Continental Congress after the signing of the Declaration of Independence. The original committee was composed of Benjamin Franklin, John Adams and Thomas Jefferson. (Franklin favored the turkey over the eagle. Jefferson proposed the phrase, "E Pluribus Unum"—out of many, one.)

After much deliberation by a number of committees, the present seal was adopted by Congress on June 20, 1782. Impressed on certain documents by direction of its custodian, the Secretary of State, the seal authenticates the President's signature on various acts of our government. It represents the ideas and idealism of the stirring days of our War of Independence. Most of the details of the design are symbolic: union of the States through Congress; the qualities of purity, valor, vigilance, perseverance, and justice; the dedication to peace; the capacity for self-defense—all find expression in the device of the seal.

The official symbol of the American Revolution Bicentennial is represented on the medal, adjacent to both talons of the eagle.

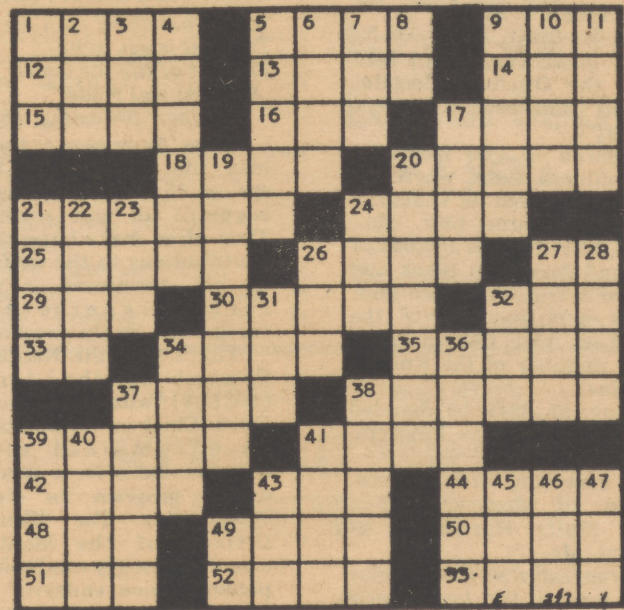

The National Bicentennial Medal, in any of its sizes, makes a proud and welcome gift to family, friends and business associates. For a free brochure describing the medals in detail write, ARBA, 2401 E Street, Washington, D.C. 20076. Orders for the National Bicentennial Medals must be received no later than July 31, 1976.

Adding a teaspoon of salt to the warm water while sprinkling clothes will keep them from smelling of mildew if the ironing is not done on time.

BLACK NATIONS IN U.N. REVERSE POSITION, ACT TO BLOCK ANTI-ZIONIST RESOLUTION

An Algerian-led attempt to link Zionism with racism in two resolutions before the United Nations Economic and Social Council was thwarted last week by several Black African countries.

The African action marked a clear turning away from activities in the General Assembly last fall, when a majority of Third-World countries joined in support of a resolution in which Zionism was condemned as a form of racism and racial discrimination.

That action was denounced in the United States by government officials and organizations of all backgrounds. America's Black newspapers and leaders joined in the reactions of outrage, calling the resolution "ridiculous," (Kansas City Call) "malicious" (Chicago Defender) and "an act of gigantic hypocrisy" (Dallas Post Tribune). Urban League Executive Director Vernon Jordan called the anti-Zionist resolution "a setback for the UN." The action of the African nations last week prevented a similar reference to Zionism from being included in two related resolutions dealing with UN efforts to combat racism.

The two texts, without the proposed anti-Zionist amendments, were approved on May 12 by the UN Economic and Social Council with 40 countries voting in favor.

NEW RECOGNITION FOR ACCOMPLISHMENT

*"Grow old along with me!
The best is yet to be,
The last of life for which the first was made."*

—Robert Browning, 1864

Older Americans — those men and women over the age of 65 — are a valuable segment of our society. They often make important contributions to the welfare of all Americans — yet rarely receive the recognition richly deserved.

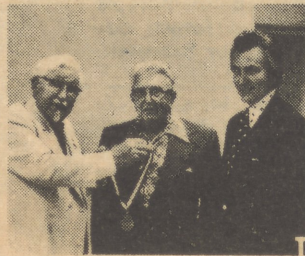

That's why the National Council on the Aging (NCOA) and Kentucky Fried Chicken Corporation have combined their resources to offer a special awards program for older Americans. The "Senior Citizen of the Month" award is a newly established public service endeavor to honor older Americans who effectively demonstrate "Accomplishment knows no age"... that age 65 isn't a magic number signalling the end of productive years.

The NCOA is a non-profit organization that serves as a central national resource for planning, information, technical consultation and materials for older people. "We're extremely pleased to be participating in this effort to honor older Americans," observed Jack Ossosky, executive director of the NCOA. "The program is in keeping with the goals and philosophy of our organization."

Colonel Harland Sanders, who founded Kentucky Fried Chicken at age 66, pioneered the concept of fast-food franchising. The KFC System underwrites the awards program as a tribute to its founder — one of America's foremost senior citizens. "Older Americans can and do make valuable contributions to American life," noted the Colonel, "and the awards are a fine way of making more people aware of that fact."

A national panel of distinguished Americans representing a variety of disciplines vote for the monthly winners. Among the judges are former Supreme Court Justice William O. Douglas, former Senator Margaret Chase Smith, broadcasters Hugh Downs and Art Linkletter, journalists Ann Landers, Pia Lindstrom and Elizabeth Janeway and NCOA president Albert Abrams.

The actual award presented to each winner is a handsome gold medallion. On one side the phrases "Senior Citizen of the Month" and "Accomplishment is Ageless" appear above and below a specially commissioned drawing representative of America's senior citizens. The name of the winner and the date are engraved between the logos of the cosponsors on the reverse side.

The program is national in scope and candidates are selected from all walks of life. And the National Council on the Aging and Kentucky Fried Chicken are always looking for individuals deserving of the honor. Anyone 65-years-old or older who has continued to be active in his/her community or career is a potential candidate for the award. Recommendations for the honor can be made by writing:

Senior Citizen of the Month
Suite 1400
221 N. LaSalle Street
Chicago, Illinois 60601

The candidate's name, address, etc. and reasons for his/her selection should be included.

Several worthy senior citizens may finally get the recognition they deserve.

Quick Quiz! by Thompson

ANSWERS:

Each year over 4,400,000 Americans are injured in accidents in and around the home. Incredible? Yes. But even more incredible is that many of these unsafe conditions could have been prevented. Why not take this quick quiz and see how much you know about safety prevention?

1. To make sure you're not headed for a fall in your bathroom (a) use non-skid mats on tubs and showers (b) walk slowly (c) have a sturdy grab bar for your tub or shower?

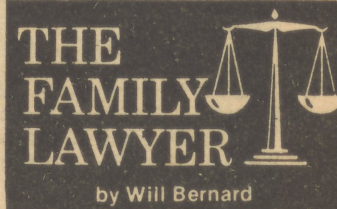

2. To make your home less accident-prone, run your extension cords under the carpet (a) true (b) false?

3. If you had to walk to a curbside mailbox to get your mail, your chances of being involved in a crime would (a) increase (b) decrease (c) stay about the same?

4. Stairways in your home should have a switch (a) at the top (b) at the bottom (c) both top and bottom?

Unordered Merchandise

Suppose you receive in the morning mail a brand new dictionary that you haven't ordered. Enclosed with the dictionary is a bill for $25. If you leave the dictionary on a shelf, unused, you cannot be held legally liable for the price.

But suppose you do start using it. Or give it away to a friend. Or toss it into the ashcan. Then, according to an old common law doctrine, you have "exercised dominion" over the book and must pay for it.

Under this doctrine countless consumers, over the years, have paid for things they did not really want.

But now most states as well as Congress have passed special statutes changing the common law. These statutes usually allow the recipient of unordered merchandise to simply treat it as a gift.

This does not mean, however, that the recipient can take unfair advantage of his new privilege. Say a delivery boy leaves a carton of groceries on your doorstep by mistake. And you know perfectly well that the groceries were meant for the people next door.

You might argue that this was "unordered merchandise," hence yours to keep for nothing. But chances are that the statute would not be held applicable in the event of an honest mistake.

In one case a man received the annual renewal of an insurance policy from his broker. For two months he kept it, making no response. Then he informed the broker that he was not taking the insurance.

But in these circumstances, a court ruled later, the man could be held liable for at least the two months' insurance. The years of previous dealings, said the court, had justified the broker in assuming that "the retention of the policy implied acceptance."

There's an Answer!

by Norman Vincent Peale and Ruth Stafford Peale

Q. It's not exactly a joy to watch all my younger sisters getting married, engaged and dating while I have no one. I'm 24 years old and have lots of wonderful friends. Yet I feel empty inside without a man to love me.

Lately I met a guy and we got along really good. He's had a rough past and it seemed so easy for me to talk to him and relate to him. He used to be a dope dealer, but he was turning to God and seeking a new life. I guess I started to care about him more than I should have. I had hopes that he would love me. But now I'm told he is returning to his old life. It hurts so much. I feel depressed. How can I forget him?

A. Think how fortunate you are! Some months of hurt feelings and depression are far better than years of misery. You have been saved from a cruel, hard life. Thank God for that.

Now, paint a picture in your mind of the fine young man you want to walk into your life. See him. The strongly held mental image tends to become a fact. Dwell on the fine qualities he must have.

Then go about being happy and released and fun-loving. Get into lots of things. Every day do something kind and thoughtful for somebody. Try forgetting yourself. Become the radiant, happy, joyous person God meant you to be.

Always believe that somewhere in this world is your young man. Unconsciously he is looking for you. In the mysterious ways of human experience you will be brought together, Miss Right and Mr. Right at the Right time. Right?

Q. My daughter is married to a man in the military service. She has one small child and lives here with us. Now she is dating a married man who has four small children. I know she is lonely, but she is breaking up his marriage. I don't want to ask her to stop seeing this man because then she will leave. As her mother I hope I'm doing what is right.

A. You certainly are not doing what is right. Tell your daughter that she is going down a road which leads to misery, trouble and regret. But don't hound her about it. Be loving and kind and understanding—but firm. You should try with every strategy at your command to forestall an outcome that will wreck your daughter's life.

Figure out a way to involve your daughter in some interesting social life. This could help her decide to get away from a course that is certainly going to crack up her life.

Q. How can we think of God as a loving Heavenly Father when He has created on the earth so many faces that kill or injure His children?

Only God creates hurricanes, tidal waves, earthquakes, tornados, typhoons, floods, volcanos, storms at sea, lightning and drought. Fire can also kill.

This question has troubled me and no doubt many others, in view of the tragic loss of life in disasters such as the Guatemala earthquake. Only God's law causes an earthquake—why? Is this the act of a loving Father?

A. God is a loving Father, all right. In fact He loves His children so much that he wants to develop them. And He knew that to do so they must experience tragedy and suffering. Cruel as it may seem, such natural forces have motivated man to think and create a world in which there is a greater degree of security.

But there will always be insecurity, for in a perfectly secure world man would deteriorate.

Also, such tragedy keeps man compassionate and, without compassion he would be less than human.

Former Canadian to Speak at Brother, Sister

Yvonne Harris

Exploring man's interpersonal relationships and his relationship with God is the task that Yvonne Harris sets out to accomplish in her presentation for the Brother and Sister Day services at St. Paul A.M.E. Church this Sunday at 10:45 a.m.

The "Tie That Binds," is the speech topic, taken from I Corinthians, chapter 12 which illustrates man as a part of the body of Christ, and tells the story of his dependence on one another.

"I hope to show the sense of togetherness between both man and God and man and others," she said.

Harris is a native of Toronto, Canada where she completed her education and worked as an Audio Visual Adviser for the Anglican Church of Canada.

She has served in the Canadian Conference Women's Missionary Society on the Executive Board and as Promotion and Missionary Education Chairman.

Harris was one of the Denominational representatives on the Women's Inter-Church Council of Canada, where she served on the office and publicity committees.

She is the wife of the Rev. Artie S. Harris, pastor of St. Paul A.M.E. Church and has one daughter, Loretta.

Brother and Sister's Day this year at St. Paul, is a combination of the annual services which were formerly known as Men's and Women's Days. The program serves as an annual fund raising project for the church. Gwendolyn Fowler and Everett Mays are co-chairmen of the program.

"Eye That Cycle" driving

The Motor Club of Iowa alerts car drivers to the potential hazards when a segment of the traffic stream is motorcycles. It is vitally important that Iowan's be aware of the additional problems that exist as more motorcycles appear in the traffic mix during the warmer months.

In 1973, the Motor Club of Iowa recognized, by studying their own insurance company statistics, that automobile drivers were being propelled into accident situations because of their lack of awareness of the motorcycle and its capabilities. Thus, the program, EYE THAT CYCLE was born. It is a two-phase awareness program; Phase I to educate the car driver, and Phase II to educate the cyclist in how to recognize and react to accident-producing situations before they become a tragic statistic.

An example, the U.S. Department of Transportation reports that braking performance information is based on the distance in feet required to bring the vehicle to a full stop from a speed of 60 miles per hour. Best and worse performances involving 1976 car models range from 159 to 250 feet, and for motorcycles range from 121 to 183 feet. The Eye That Cycle program asks the car driver to be aware that some cycles have the capability to stop more quickly than most cars, yet other cycles take a longer distance to get stopped than some automobiles. This overlapping of braking distances creates for some drivers, an unrecognized hazard. How do you protect yourself and the cyclist?

Iowa has over 149,000 motorcycles registered in this state. This spring and summer, auto drivers will be sharing the road with some of them. Motor Club of Iowa officials ask you to study the following Eye that Cycle driving tips:

Give the cycle a full lane like you do any four wheeled vehicle. Look ahead for a highway marker, mailbox, tree, bridge, or other stationary object. Note the instant the cyclist passes it. time and distance.

Make a specific effort to look for a cycle before turning left.

Glare from headlights on a cyclist's goggles or face shield is very severe. Dim your lights early, you don't want to meet a blind driver. Consider every "single headlight" a possible cyclist.

Outside rear-view mirrors are not enough to determine if a cycle is back there.

Then count- one thousand one, one thousand two, one thousand three. If you get to the marker before you say "one thousand three" you're following too closely. Drop back. The three second rule is for ideal conditions. Add extra seconds to the rule for adverse driving conditions.

A motorcycle, being a lighter vehicle, has the capability to stop in a shorter distance, unless it is on a wet or slippery road surface. Then, the braking distance may grow to three times as long because of minimum tire-road contact. Use the 3 Second Rule when following a cycle.

Some hazards to cyclists that auto drivers must recognize are gravel, sand, leaves, twigs, water and oil on the pavement. Also, manhole covers, rumble strips, and painted lines may make the cyclist lose control. Recognize when any of the above conditions exist and be prepared to give him more room and slow down.

Cyclists avoid driving down the middle of a traffic lane as it is particularly slippery because of oil from other vehicles.

The cyclist should maneuver to cross the tracks at right angles. Recognize the added hazard of the railroad tracks and give him more room by reducing speed (do not pass within 100 feet of railroad tracks).

The cycle's smaller size makes it appear further away and to be moving slower. Compensate by allowing more

Blow to HEW's Enforcement of Anti-discrimination Laws

With disheartening predictability, the House of Representatives last week adopted three amendments to education bills that could block enforcement of the federal laws that prohibit educational institutions from discriminating against minorities and women.

The amendments it adopted during debate on the Vocational Education and Higher Education

Bills had a familiar target: Title VI of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, the provision that enables the Department of Health, Education and Welfare to cut off federal funds to any school district or college that discriminates unfairly. At least two of the amendments are also aimed at blocking enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972, which prohibit educational institutions from discriminating against women.

Two of the amendments were offered by Rep. Edwin Eshleman (R., Pa.). One would require HEW to keep funding a school district that was violating the law until a final judgment of non-compliance with the law was handed down by an administrative law judge. The other amendment, (to the Higher Education Bill) is aimed at blocking HEW from using statistical evidence to establish that an institution was discriminating on the basis of race, national origin or sex, even though the courts have long recognized such evidence.

FOOD MARKETING ALERT

USDA

Agricultural Marketing Service

As of mid-May, the supply situation in June is expected to look like this . . .

RED MEATS —

Beef . . . plentiful. Production rates to average 6-8% above year earlier and about 8% above the June 1973-75 average. Gains from year earlier in fed beef output will more than offset declines in nonfed beef production.

Pork . . . light. Production rates during June will be seasonally reduced, but up about 5% from the unusually low level of last year. Output near 6% below the June 1973-75 average.

POULTRY & EGGS —

Broiler-fryers . . . plentiful. Record June marketings to be about 12% higher than both the year-ago and June 1973-75 average.

Turkey . . . adequate. New crop marketings in June to be nearly 20% higher than last year and 10% more than the June 1973-75 average. June 1 cold storage holdings, however, are expected to be 25% less than both year earlier levels and the 1973-75 June average. Hence, the total supply of turkeys for June would be about 6% lower than last year.

Eggs . . . adequate. June 1976 output only slightly over last year's level, but below the 1973-75 June average.

MILK & DAIRY PRODUCTS —

Milk and dairy products . . . plentiful. Milk production in June will be at or over its seasonal peak and 2-3% above its previous yearly and 3-year average levels for the month. American cheese output in March was 15% over the previous year and 6% higher than its 1973-75 average. Butter and nonfat dry milk production levels in March were relatively low. Although commercial stocks of major dairy products at the end of March were below the 1973-75 average, they are expanding seasonally.

FRUITS, VEGETABLES, NUTS

Fresh citrus fruits and juices . . . plentiful. Oranges and lemons remaining for harvest May 1 represent 33% of expected total U.S. orange and lemon crops. About 17% of the grapefruit crop remained for harvest May 1—3.6 million boxes more than this time a year earlier. Florida frozen concentrated orange juice stocks May 1 were 8% higher than year earlier and 14% more than the past 3-season average.

Canned non-citrus fruits . . . plentiful. April 1 canners' inventories of most canned fruits were heavier than a year earlier: canned peaches, up 31%; canned pears, down 3%; canned fruit cocktail, up 5%; canned purple plums, up 73%; and canned apricots, up 361% from 1974-75's very short supply.

Raisins . . . plentiful. The 1975 production about 18% larger than the heavy 1974 crop. Dried prunes . . . plentiful, with 1975 production 6% higher than in 1974.

Processed vegetables . . . plentiful. Canned vegetable inventories are high with prospects for a large aggregate carryover to complement '76 packs. April 1 canners' stocks of 5 principal items up 29% from year earlier and 52% over 1973-75 average. Snap beans exceeded 1973-75 average by 63%; Sweet corn by 44%; tomatoes, 68%; tomato juice 17%; and green beans 78%. Of the principal frozen vegetables March 31 stocks of sweet corn, green peas and lima beans were well above year-earlier and 3-year average inventories. Frozen snap bean and carrot holdings are adequate, each substantially less than a year earlier, but about equal to 3-year average. Frozen potato holdings down 4% from year-earlier levels, but 2% above 3-year average.

Fresh potatoes . . . adequate. Although April 1 storage stocks were 11% less than the large holdings last year, spring crop production up 19% from 1975 production figures and 6% above latest 3-year average. Potato supplies from the 1976 summer crop, adequate. Dry onions . . . plentiful. The 1976 spring crop is up 35% from last year's low.

Peanuts . . . plentiful. Commercial stocks on March 31 were 11% higher than a year ago. The 1975 crop was 5% larger than previous record. Almonds, walnuts, pecans . . . plentiful with large 1975 crops up sharply from year earlier.

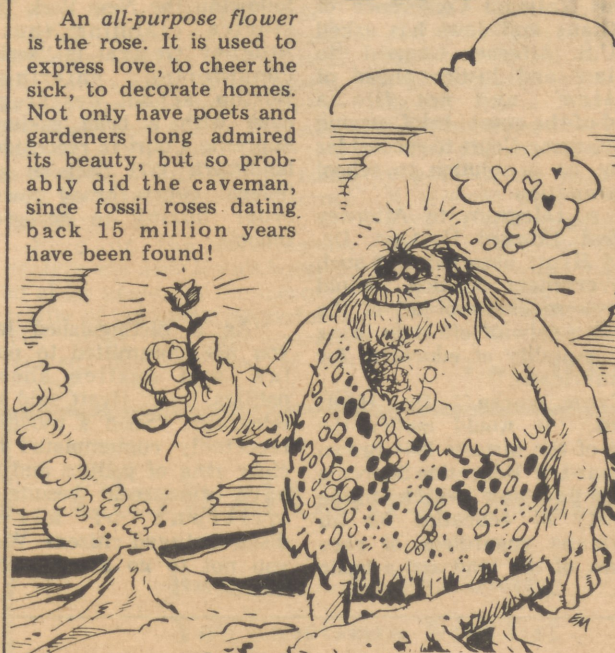

GRAINS & LEGUMES —

Rice . . . plentiful. Production in 1975 was 15% above previous year, and 30% higher than 1972-74 average. Exports are estimated at 15% lower this year. Wheat . . . plentiful. Carryover stocks are up an estimated 70% over previous year's low level. Production in 1975 was 20% above 1974 and 25% over the 1972-74 average. Corn . . . plentiful. Carryover stocks at 15% higher than last year. Production in 1975 was 25% over 1974 levels and up 10% from 3-year average. Dry beans . . . plentiful as a result of reduced export demand. About 3% fewer acres to be planted in 1976. Dry peas . . . plentiful because of large carryover and reduced export. Farmers to plant 20% fewer acres this year.

Terminology used: PLENTIFUL — More than enough for requirements. ADEQUATE — Enough to meet needs. LIGHT — Less than adequate; not enough for normal needs.

FANCY THAT!

An all-purpose flower is the rose. It is used to express love, to cheer the sick, to decorate homes. Not only have poets and gardeners long admired its beauty, but so probably did the caveman, since fossil roses dating back 15 million years have been found!

An all-purpose vegetable is the potato. It is cooked in many ways to make many dishes for many kinds of people. Unknown to the world until the Spanish found Incas eating it in 1530, the potato has since grown in size, quality and popularity. Today, the world potato crop is second only to the wheat crop!

An all-purpose insecticide that not only protects roses and potatoes but many other flowers, fruits and vegetables is Spectracide® with Diazinon®. Its spray kills many chewing and sucking insects, keeping your garden beautiful and productive all year round!

NCCJ urges U.S. Atty. Gen. Not to file Anti-Bus Brief

NEW YORK — The President of the National Conference of Christians and Jews has asked the U.S. Attorney General "to put law and justice ahead of politics" and not file a friend-of-the-court brief urging the Supreme Court to reconsider busing as a solution to school desegregation.

In a telegram to Attorney General Edward H. Levi, Dr. David Hyatt asserted that such a government position "would make a mockery of all of the past 22 years of effort to bring about equality of education for all Americans."

"Even worse," Dr. Hyatt stated, "it would nullify the effect of the historic 1954 Brown vs. Board of Education Supreme Court decision which made equality of education for all Americans regardless of race the law of the land and a basic right."

Dr. Hyatt sent the telegram following the New York Times' stories claiming that the Attorney General is "seriously considering" entering the Boston school desegregation case with a brief asking the Supreme Court to reconsider its landmark 1971 decision giving federal courts broad power to order busing to desegregate schools.

"As a distinguished lawyer you are committed to put the law and justice ahead of politics," Dr. Hyatt said in the telegram. "Such a move as is reportedly contemplated has a clear ring of politics and would have disastrous results upon millions of already disadvantaged citizens. We urge you not to go ahead with this move."

Benjamin L. Hooks

A recent address by the Federal Communications Commission Chairman Richard E. Wiley before the 25th Annual Convention of the National Cable Television Association in Dallas, Texas, underlined a growing painful reality: cable is not the be-all blacks, other minorities and women once thought it would be.

Indeed, Wiley pointed out that widespread employment bias infests the foundations of cable like a dry rot. He urged owners of the systems to begin work now to eradicate it.

Wiley's message rapped early industry "puffery" on such "Blue Sky" promises as "free channels for everyone and everything," a concept government bureaucracy also bought. "The wired nation," he opined, "in all honesty, is not just around the corner."

To be candid, cable egregiously was oversold in the 1960's as the solution to everything from ballots, to burglar alarms, to electronic babysitting."

He dramatically urged both the industry and government bureaucrats to embrace a "New Realism." He said, "I also hope the New Realism will embrace your own self interest in the public interest — what is both the law of the land and a moral obligation."

"I refer, he continued, "to equal employment opportunity. Here again, cable has been oversold — oversold as the entrepreneurial and employment answer for every member of a minority. To date, I regret to say that your industry has not initiated an effective program in this area."

He pointed out that "our most recent EEO reports (1974) show that out of a total of 17,300 employees in reporting units there are only 538 Black Americans. This translates as an industry work force on only 3.1 percent."

Worse yet, in high salaried job categories (including officers and managers, professionals, technicians and also workers) blacks constitute only 2.2 percent."

Blacks in over-the-air broadcasting enjoy a much better life. They comprise (in 1975) 8.8 percent of a total work force of 146," (and all minorities made up 12.9 percent of the total). And blacks in increasing numbers are moving into top station management and professional jobs.

In cable, ownership is also a bleak prospect for blacks. As of March, 1974, for example, there were 3,070 cable systems in operation in this country. And although blacks owned some 20 of these systems, only two, no more than three, were in actual operation. (Blacks now own more than 50 of the more than 7,000 commercial radio stations; only five of 1,000 TV stations.)

Cable, which seemed to offer such a golden, last-chance opportunity for black entry to historically closed field of broadcasting communications may, on second glance, not be so generous after all.

If true, this would be, indeed, unfortunate — both for blacks and other minorities, whose deep frustration with the media was given some promise for constructive outlet, and for the industry, itself.

For, it seems to me, cable is now reaching a point of growth where if it gains and keeps the respect and confidence of most of the people, it can become the useful technology it was first touted to be.

I have always believed that cable was worthy of support and have given it unstintingly during my tenure as an FCC member. It is my belief, that since 1969, over-the-air broadcasting has been trying, belatedly to be sure, to correct its long and shameful history of employment, ownership, and programming prejudices.

Blacks and other minorities will not take too kindly to a "new" technology such as cable, re-erecting barriers to entry in the field of broadcast communications. (NNPA)

THAT'S BETTER

I watched Muhammad Ali put away the latest challenger for his heavyweight fight title. It was obvious that he was out to regain whatever prestige and respect he had lost by his performance in the Jimmy Young scuffle. And I would guess that he did, in spite of the fact that the Briton wasn't the greatest fighter in the business.

A lot of folks wondered why the champ wasn't dancing as he sometimes does. I think that was because his opponent was lefthanded, and it is hard to keep away from southpaws. The best way to fight them is to circle to their left and try to stay inside of that left hook. You can counter it with a straight right which is why Ali landed so many right hands as the thing wore on. You simply move inside of your opponent's left and throw a straight right.

At one time there was a fine southpaw in Des Moines who beat a lot of good boxers, but he never did beat a fellow named Kid Lawson. Lawson would stay on top of the guy all night and punch him full of holes with those straight right hands, and the fellow finally said he just couldn't beat that — Lawson.

That was Ali's strategy the other night, something I haven't seen in years. Don't they teach boxing any more, or do they just toss a promising fighter into the ring and let him learn by experience?

TURN BACK THE CALENDAR

Fred McCracken gave me some clippings and letters on an old pal of mine from the late twenties. Chet Brewer is a scout and talent hunter for the Pittsburg Pirates. He is the only player from Des Moines to make it big in the Negro baseball leagues.

I have argued for years that Chet was every bit as good as Satchel Paige, and maybe better. Paige, Brewer and a fellow named Bullet Rogan hooked up many times in the old league days and the outcome was decided by an error or a passed ball.

You know that there were so many good black ball clubs in the days before the color line was broken that there had to be some fine hurlers besides Satch. But Paige was the guy who got the ink, and also the reputation for showing up at black games whenever he felt like it. Or for pitching maybe a couple of innings and leaving. So that made him colorful, and, being talkative, he talked to the press a lot.

Now, make no mistake about it, the fellow could pitch, but so could others like Brewer, Rogan and Jones. The difference between Brewer and Paige is best told by a guy who caught both men. "I could catch Chet in a rocking chair, the ball was always right where you asked. But Satch threw what he wanted to because he was Paige. That was fine with me because they didn't beat him much, but it was work."

Chet and I became friends when we were both in our teens. He was pitching for a young group of black kids called the Dashing Eagles. They were a fine bunch of athletes in that time, but they almost never lost a baseball game because even at sixteen, almost nobody in town could hit the Brewer fast ball. But the fellow never did boast, because the bunch around him just didn't believe in that. They let their games speak for themselves.

The first time I ever saw a tennis racket Chet introduced me to it and we won the doubles at Y Camp in about 1923, I think. We played basketball and football together and came up with our first unbeaten cage team in the old Crocker Y league.

He was a fierce competitor and always thinking. His philosophy was this. "I know you are tough, and I think I am tough, too. You are gonna scuffle, and I figure that scuffling right back at you gives me a chance."

From the stuff that Fred gave me, I learned that Chet has become quite a speaker at different high school functions on the coast. Well, he always had a good delivery, good common sense, and with his background could keep just about any group of sports fans spellbound for as long as they wanted to be. Then he had some rather straight ideals that he never departed from as long as I knew him. For instance, he cussed but would never use the names God or Christ in that category any time.

Even away from home for months at a time he was honest with his family and told things like they were, so he never lost the respect of his gang. And he would also tell it to you like it was, so perhaps that was why we remained friends for so long. He was through here about a year ago, but I was out of town. Really hated to miss him.

I still have two baseballs autographed by him when he pitched the opening game of the Negro National league season way back when. Yep, it was just too bad that the white people didn't take time to learn about anybody else but Satchel Paige and Jackie Robinson. Maybe I wouldn't be writing this now.

TRACK MEET FOR GIRLS AND BOYS

A city-wide track meet for girls and boys ranging in age from 8 to 15 will be held at Drake Stadium June 5.

The meet will include events for both girls and boys. Medals and ribbons will be awarded to the first four places in each event. Registration will start at 8:15 a.m. the day of the meet.

A parade— with all participants taking part— will be held at 9 a.m. and the track meet will start at 10 a.m.

There is no charge for entering the meet sponsored by the Olympic Development Program of several youth organizations in the Des Moines area.

Interstate information centers aid vacationists

Travelers on Iowa's interstate highways this summer will find ample information about vacation areas in the Hawkeye State, through any of the seven information centers now open.

May 1, information centers were opened through the cooperation of the Iowa Development Commission (IDC) and the Iowa Department of Transportation (DOT). They are open during the peak tourist season, from May until September 30. Each center is staffed by two persons who provide personalized information and brochure materials for the tourists who want to include Iowa attractions in their 1976 vacation schedule.

Open seven days a week, including holidays, the hours of the centers vary. At the present, four of the information centers are open from 9 a.m. to 8 p.m. The other three are open from 8 a.m. until 4 p.m. But the hours may be extended as the summer progresses.

Five of the information centers are near Iowa's borders, to allow access by the incoming traffic of the interstate systems. The other two are centrally located, one just west of Des Moines, and another on the eastbound lane of I-80 near Victor.

Last year, the information centers were widely used. At the end of September, 1975, almost 125,000 visitors had signed the guest registration books, representing all 50 states and over 60 foreign countries. Nearly 300,000 travel brochures were distributed from the centers.

MESSIAH TEMPLE

"JESUS IS ALL YOU NEED," was the title of the lesson given by the Reverend Jacob Reed last Sunday. Regardless of who we are, we need forgiveness of our past sins. In these current times people will follow a man who tells them how much Jesus is giving, but they will not follow a man who says how much we must give. We must give to be forgiven. We need forgiveness to have hope for the future. Remember, we may be poor in this world, but we all have the opportunity to be rich in the hope of God's glory to come.

Dr. Ireland

Ireland Calls for Black Doctors

"For too many black patients, health care is a luxury which must wait until the moment when pain and weaknesses no longer allow them to drag another step," writes Dr. Charles S. Ireland, director of the Howard University Hospital in Washington, D.C.

In an article called "The Health Woes of Blacks" appearing in the June issue of Reader's Digest, Dr. Ireland identifies the Four Horsemen of the black community as alcoholism, malnutrition, hypertension and mental disturbances.

Calling hypertension "the most serious health problem of blacks in America today," he points out that about one in four blacks over the age of 18 has it; over the age of 40 the ratio rises to two out of five. The mortality rate from high blood pressure in black males is 1½ times the rate for white males between ages 25 and 44. Hypertension kills black females at 17 times the rate for white females.

"Day after day, in the emergency rooms and wards of our hospital, I see evidence that the medical problems of blacks are more acute, more complicated and more neglected than those of other Americans," he declares.

To remedy the double standard of health care which has created these desperate conditions, Dr. Ireland calls for education: "Education of more black doctors, of blacks, of the public." He urges higher quotas for blacks in medical schools, government subsidy to prepare qualified medical students and see them through their training, and white political support to ensure that these subsidies are not reduced.

The health of 25 million black Americans affects all Americans, the noted physician believes. He contends that "In view of the present cost of illnesses—including the millions of lost hours of work, the billions of dollars spent on welfare for the victims of ill health, the added billions spent for alcohol-related illnesses and accidents—the cost of what I have suggested is trifling."

ASLAH to Honor "That NAACP Woman"

The Association for the Study of Afro-American Life and History (ASLAH) will present a bronze marker to be placed in honor of Dr. Lillie Mae Jackson, Tuesday, May 25th at 12 noon at Freedom House, located at 1234 Druid Hill Avenue, in Baltimore, Maryland.

The Association will honor Dr. Jackson, often referred to as "Ma Jackson" or "that NAACP lady," in the fourth of a series of 100 markers dedicated to Black American pioneers.

An ASLAH research committee headed by Dr. Roland C. McConnell, Chairman of the Morgan State College Department of History, reports that Lillie Mae Carroll, born in Baltimore on May 25, 1889, was a descendant of Charles Carroll, signer of both the Declaration of Independence and the United States Constitution, and John Bowen, a free African chief.

President of the Baltimore Branch of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People for 35 years, she increased the NAACP membership from 2,000 in 1935 to nearly 18,000 by 1946, making the NAACP the largest civil rights organization in Maryland.

Through the NAACP, Lillie Jackson used seven successive law suits in the Maryland Court of Appeals to open the University of Maryland Schools of Law, Medicine, Pharmacy, Dentistry, Nursing, the Graduate School of Sociology and the Undergraduate School of Engineering (1935-1950) in her fight against segregation.

Her work with the NAACP resulted in successful campaigns to employ blacks as cab drivers, bus drivers, firemen, policemen, and other municipal and state employees, as well as employees in the private sector. Municipal swimming pools, tennis courts, State Parks, and beaches were desegregated through a series of suits won in the Supreme Court (1954), setting a precedent for the entire nation.

A CONSTANT THREAT TO CHILDREN: POISON AROUND THE HOUSE

You wouldn't give your child a bite of strychnine.

You wouldn't pour lye down your tiny brown-eyed beauty's throat.

Of course not. Yet every year thousands of children die needlessly from poisoning. Where do they get it? In their own homes — from the bathroom medicine cabinet, from the laundry room, from under the sink, from dad's workshop, mother's vanity drawer.

In the very loving homes where the parents have tried to provide everything to nurture their child's health and happiness, a "little" carelessness has caused suffering, permanent maiming and death.

Part of the normal growing process for children is to explore their world — their home — by climbing, opening drawers and cupboards, reaching, feeling, tasting. In fact, they will test almost everything they pick up by putting it in their mouth — even when the taste is vile.

Teaching is not good enough for youngsters one through three. The only safe way to protect them is to put every poison in your home out of their reach, according to Health, Education and Welfare's experts in emergency health services.

Put Poisons in Safe Places

Where are your household cleaners — bleach, detergents, floor wax, furniture and metal polish, window cleaner, and lye? If they are under the sink or in easy reach in the laundry room, find a safer place.

Check your garage or workshop. If your child could conceivably reach insecticides, garden sprays, pesticides, paints, solvents, gasoline or kerosene, get them under lock and key or completely out of harm's way.

In your bathroom, devise a locked area for medicines and drugs, and make sure all your cosmetic preparations and external medications such as skin lotions, deodorants, hair tonics, perfume, nail polish, eyewash, alcohol are inaccessible to children.

Avoid Scenes Like These:

The two-year-old who lost consciousness after chewing a bottleful of candy-coated aspirin. Or the agony of a tot with mouth and throat burned from swallowing bleach. Or a three-year-old boy in convulsions with an empty nail polish bottle beside him.

But if Your Child is Poisoned, Here is What to do:

1. Call a doctor or get him to an emergency hospital at once.

2. Give the child two cups of milk or water to dilute the poison and slow its effects.

3. Induce vomiting by slipping a finger down the child's throat. Have him lying on his stomach on the bed or on your lap with his head hanging over the edge. Bring to the hospital some of the vomit and the poison container. (Exception: Do not make the child vomit if he is unconscious or in convulsions or if he has swallowed petroleum products, acid or alkali).

Better Yet, Avoid This Experience Altogether by taking inventory of your home now to make sure all potential poisons are completely out of reach of children. (NNPA)

IT'S THE MOST!

The country that could boast the smallest stamps ever issued was the Colombian State of Bolivar. The 10 cents and 1 peso stamps issued between 1863 and 1866 measured 0.31 of an inch by 0.37 of an inch.

The country that posts the largest number of letters is the United States. Last year, a reduced postal staff handled more than half of the world's mail. Legislators concerned about the unemployment rate are fighting to have the Post Office get enough money from the government to keep from reducing its staff even more.

Business in the Black

By Charles E. Belle

Fire the Bums the new york city budget

New York city is called a haven for fat cats and burns by southern boys. The cleavage between the chic rich and poverty stricken is fairly pronounced in the big apple. The high unemployment in excess of 10 percent is just a side attraction to the city's urban dwellers. The politicians now have placed a priority on property in New York.

Donald Kummerfeld, Director of the Office of Management and Budget for the city of New York, speaking across the country in San Francisco exclaimed the city fired 44,000 workers.

While Mr. Kummerfeld was not quite sure whether the city's work force was 300,000 or 150,000, the cut was made. The former Boston banker was big on dumping the damned. He made his point to his fellow members of the Municipal Finance Officers Association, at their 70th Annual Conference luncheon.

Unfortunately they had to forego their dessert in order to hear him speak. The immense grumbling indicated that it was not a democratic decision supported by the majority.

It was, however, the proper place for confessions of cities. Over 2,000 chief finance officials from both large and small cities across America came to discuss their financial fiascos. Many municipal men thought New York's situation was but a public mirror of their own town.

Mr. Kummerfeld was kicking out life preservers to these patients. His most sick idea as viewed by the victim was that of killing off social security for city workers. Stating that since the workers already had a pension plan, why not put the social security benefits in the bank for the property owners?

The employers portion of the workers salary would be saved for the city. This would mean less revenue would have to be raised by the city. Social security, however, provides more than pension payments to the poor and the aged.

Social security provides both income and health insurance protection in your older years, as well as, protection for your family in case of your death or disability.

John Orlando, though dying of leukemia, continued to work for the city of San Francisco in the hope that he would last long enough to qualify his wife and four children for death benefits that would equal one-third of his salary.

But death overtook him with less than three months to go to his goal of ten years for eligibility under the city's pension plan. Social security would have made a difference had San Francisco sent in its option to secure this coverage.

Social security is a group life and disability program, providing protection for the person's family before the worker retires as well as after. It provides health insurance for the elderly and those who become disabled when the health coverage they may have had at work ends.

New York city has come to the point of cutting off the life enhancement programs. According to Kummerfeld, they want the federal government to get funds for the courts, city college, housing and welfare.

These are reasonable requests. But with a three year budget developed with the federal government financed in part by the pension plans to the tune of $2.5 billion, don't sink social security.

The comprehensive budget for New York will control the city until July 1, 1977. It takes two years to withdraw from social security.

This must be what Mr. Kummerfeld admitted admiring most about California's governor Jerry Brown's "lowering of expectations," that is if you are not a banker.
