Slowed down 'The Machine'

Georgena Alexander, a candidate running for the Iowa House of Representatives District 67 seat, relaxes at her home Tuesday night as she awaits word of the election results.

Supreme Court Ruling a set back for Civil Rights

In a ruling, the possible consequences of which reach beyond the case in question, the Supreme Court ruled that laws which weigh more heavily on one race than another are not necessarily unconstitutional. Blacks must now prove the intent to discriminate, said the court, in challenges of law or government action that is thought to be discriminatory.

The ruling reversed a lower courts ruling in Washington D.C. which ruled that the examination given by the police department and which was failed by a disproportionate number of Blacks, to be discriminatory. And could have a heavy impact on school segregation, college admission, municipal and job bias.

Justice Byron White, speaking for the court said, "the invidious quality of a law claimed to be racially discriminatory must ultimately be traced to a racially discriminatory purpose."

The existence of predominately Black and predominately white schools in a community, white continued, is not of itself in violation of the equal protection clause.

The court criticized 16 lower court rulings won by blacks and other minorities that were based on "disproportionate racial impact" alone and did not give proof of a discriminatory motive.

The Supreme Court decision is in contrast with a previous ruling that disallowed examinations that are failed by a disproportionate number of one race unless the employer demonstrates that there is sufficient relationship between abilities tested in the examination and the job for which the examination is given. No proof of discriminatory motive was required.

Opponents of the Supreme

by Eleanora E. Tate

The primary election polls in Des Moines had closed, and the returns were slowly coming in Tuesday night.

Ned Chiodo, the write-in candidate for the Democratic nomination for the Iowa House of Representatives seat in District 67 was ahead, and Georgena Alexander, a Black woman Democrat also vying for a chance to meet Republican Robert Benson in the general election later this year, was behind.

Alexander committee workers, supporters and friends were gathering at their candidate's home, 1515 Harrison Ave. Tuesday night to await the outcome of the vote.

There was a feeling of pride among her workers, as well as sadness, as they discussed her campaign efforts. Mainly, however, they were concerned about these issues:

—The Alexander challenge to the hundreds of absentee ballots cast for Chiodo, many of which were considered highly suspicious;

—How to continue the momentum begun for the Court Decision have termed the ruling potentially weakening to the safeguards of minorities and women.

35-year-old Des Moines black woman who had fought the "machine" downtown;

—The importance of the "principle" that would show the city, the state and perhaps even the nation that black people, particularly those living on the city's near northside, were still struggling for a piece of the political pie;

—The "complacency" of potential black voters here who could have voted, but didn't.

"Even if I lose, I'm still a winner," said Mrs. Alexander in an interview Tuesday evening.

The same ring of determination that had been heard throughout her campaign was still with her.

"We're not going to stop now," she declared. "We're going to have a Black running for every office that is open from now on."

She hesitated for a moment, listening to an election newscast coming over the radio. Then she added, "We did not beat 'the machine,' but we slowed it down."

According to unofficial returns as of Wednesday morning, Mrs. Alexander received 758 votes and Chiodo, in his write-in campaign, received 1,314.

The campaign, however, may not be over. The Fire Guts House, Six Homeless

by Don Rhone

A fire, according to witnesses, completely engulfed an apartment building near University early Tuesday evening, all but totally destroying the building.

"I had over two thousand dollars worth of clothes," said Benjamin Jackson of 1316-10th Street, who lived in the bottom half of the apartment house.

Jackson and about five others, who also lived in the green apartment house on 10th, had returned to their home after a picnic at Gray's lake to find their home had been destroyed by fire and themselves suddenly without any belongings except the clothes on their backs, still damp from a dip in the lake, and whatever they could pick out of the still smoldering rooms.

Know one knew the apparent cause of the fire. The fire started while the woman living in the upstairs apartment was home, said Wilbur Damon, of 1310-10th, just next door to the ruined building, she came out hollerin' fire an' thats the first we knew of it."

The occupant of the upstairs apartment at 1316-10th Street, identified only as Pat, was unhurt by the flames. The fire, said Lieutenant L. Shultice of Station No. 4 on University, who responded to the alarm, "was already going good when we got there. Somebody drove up, ran in and we were on our way before the alarm even sounded." A neighbor had also called in the fire, apparently at the same time.

While not willing to estimate the amount of damage done to the apartment house Lt. Shultice acknowledged that the damage was extensive. Only the basement and the very back bedroom were not burnt, he said. Both basement and bedroom suffered extensive damage from heat and smoke, however.

Firemen battled the blaze which neighbors feared would spread to their homes for about an hour before putting it out.

The cause of the fire is still being investigated.

Tests Must Bear Equally On All Says U.S. Supreme Court

The U.S. Supreme Court ruled Monday that laws and regulations that bore heavily on minorities were not necessarily unconstitutional unless there was a definite showing of racial discrimination.

The court strayed away from some of its earlier rulings and overruled several cases that had been decided to the contrary in various judicial districts.

The case came before the court challenging an examination in Washington, D.C. in which 57% of the minority applicants failed while only 13% of the non-whites failed.

Today, minorities constitute a substantial number of football, basketball, baseball and track participants in the schools and also, on professional teams. They do so because they measure up, because coaches have learned that they must win games to keep their jobs and that fans cheer for a winner and the color of skin makes no difference. In other words, the job is based on a person's ability and not a decision made behind "closed doors".

Civil Service examinations and other tests were designed originally to determine the ability of a person to do the job to which he aspires. In most cases, those charged with responsibility of conducting these examinations have performed services without partially or without trickery and the public has generally had confidence in them.

However, in recent years, the public has come to cast suspicious on many in government and thus their confidence is often shaken in these examinations.

This question was thoroughly debated by the National Bar Association at its convention in San Francisco in 1973. Lawyers from several states, including Washington D.C., reported results of bar examinations in which 90% of the minorities failed even though they came from such schools as Harvard, Howard and other reputable law schools, (Iowa has taken steps to see that these inequalities do not exist). The Supreme Court, the Attorney General's office and the Board of Examiners have made available to interested citizens their methods so that they may have a pretty good knowledge of how the examination works and have called upon some to assist in them. This has evidenced by the number of minorities that have taken the Iowa bar even though few come from the two law schools here. I have heard some state that they came because they thought they would be given equal consideration.

Of course, competition is becoming tighter and youngsters must prepare themselves to at least pass the examination that are pertinent to the job they seek. And with fair officers in charge of these examinations, in most cases, they will not be stigmatized by falling in the class of those who constitute the majority of those who fail.

This question is being debated in some institutions today claiming that the bars are being let down in order to secure their quota of federal funds.

True or not, this is dangerous because the idea may work in reverse should federal funds be discontinued.

Then too, you do not help a fellow by allowing him to make the grade by any other means than the qualifications that are required of all. You do not help a person by feeling sorry for him, even though he may have handicaps over which he may have no control. What he needs are the tools by which other people have made a success, made available on a square basis.

Inconsistent Judicial Exercise Of Authority

A Georgia judge has refused to permit a white couple to adopt a young child because it is the offspring of a black and white couple. And this even though these people had reared the child from birth and the parental mother approved the possible adoption.

In other words, the old judge still believes that there should be no mixing.

There have been few such cases so that comparisons cannot very well be made.

It is rather interesting that we have brought thousands of Vietnamese to this country, with and without the consents of the parents, and generally there has been little complaint that the adoptive parents are white.

How foolish some can get? It appears hard for some people to change their racial views when they involve blacks and whites when under the same circumstances the mixing is done between whites and another race.

"AN EXCITING PAPER DOES EXCITING THINGS."

Dear Editor:

I should like to make known in this area a pro-life work that makes available to the unwed mother who does not want her child, a better alternative than the abortion she might have been considering.

In the small town of Necedah, Wisconsin there is a home called Seven Sorrows of Our Sorrowful Mother Infants' Home, the purpose being to have a haven for the unwanted infant, who is then placed for adoption. Families in the community have opened their homes to provide free board and care for the unwed mother-to-be during the obvious months of her pregnancy, where she can live and be treated with dignity and respect until the time for her to return home unburdened by the child she is unable to provide for. No one in her home area need know of her problem. She also receives free medical care.

On behalf of the volunteer staff of the Seven Sorrows Infant Home, I would like to invite the unwed mother-to-be to telephone area code 608-565-2417 or write Box 905, Necedah, Wisconsin 54646 for help.

Sincerely,
Loretta Donahue

Parents who put their kids through college are still economically behind

NEW YORK, N.Y. — Parents of black college freshmen are still dramatically poorer than their white counterparts, a report published today reveals.

In the first issue of the United Negro College Fund's new publication, "Research Report," figures show that 68.1% of the entering freshman at black colleges had parents earning less than $10,000 a year. Freshmen at white colleges reported only 22.1% of their families in that economic category.

In addition, freshmen at black private colleges came from families even poorer than those at black public colleges. At the private schools, 24.1% came from families earning less than $3,000 a year while 15.4% did at the public colleges.

"This suggests that the black private colleges, which have traditionally handled the nation's most economically-depressed students, are continuing to carry that responsibility," Christopher F. Edley, UNCF Executive Director, commented.

The study in "Research Report," which is compiled and edited by the UNCF's Director of Research, Alan H. Kirschner, utilized data gathered by the American Council on Education and the University of California at Los Angeles. Some 87,000 freshmen were surveyed nationally.

The Report notes also that almost 35% of the fathers of black college freshmen were either unskilled workers or unemployed. The corresponding figures for white freshmen were 12% unskilled or unemployed.

Fathers of students at the white schools were four times as likely to be in business than at the black schools (27.6% to 7.9%).

When it came to financing their college education, black students were found to be far more on their own. Some 30.7% of these freshmen said they had to provide their own financing, without depending on their parents, as compared to 15.7% of the white students. The blacks also received $500 or more from their parents in half as many cases as the whites.

In the crucial area of depending on government help, the Basic Educational Opportunity Grant, black students were more than twice as likely as whites to depend on this as a prime source of their financing—75.8% compared to 30.7%.

The matter of finances even spilled over into the area of college choice. Many more black freshmen (43.7% to 22.7%) said they had to settle on a college because of the financial aid offered.

Despite the tough financial sledding blacks face in going to college, motivation to go into graduate study is not lacking among them. Among black freshmen, 70.1% said they planned to go on to an advanced degree whereas only 60.3% of the whites had such an intention.

As to the general career aspirations, there were no vast discrepancies between blacks and whites. Among blacks, however, freshmen at the private black colleges were much more heavily aimed at careers in law and medicine than freshmen at black public colleges and at four-year colleges nationally.

ENTERTAINMENT WORLD

The Titantic Temp's

THE TEMPTATIONS

Naturally moving ... the essence of perfection with ease ... a string of hits longer than an arm ... these are The Temptations. The group has become, over the past ten years, a show business institution. Most people wonder what has sustained their longevity. The answer is quite simple, the group's flexibility.

Melvin Franklin, Richard Street, Glenn Leonard, Otis Williams and Dennis Edwards comprise the Temptations. Even though the five man aggregation has gone through many personnel changes, the public has not been tempted to forget who they are and what they have accomplished.

The story of the group's beginning as the Primes, with it's sister group the Primettes (now the Supremes), is familiar to fans around the world. The Primes became the Temptations in the early sixties and the original members were Otis Williams, Paul Williams, Eddie Kendricks, Melvin Franklin and David Ruffin. The group became a unit containing 'five lead singers' and began to be billed as such. That year, 1962, also marked their first album release, "Meet the Temptations." The Temptations were on their way!

So here they are — Melvin, Dennis, Otis, Richard and Glenn — the mighty Temptations.

On stage these gentlemen add another dimension to the field of music. Their distinctive sound and sharp choreography has been imitated by countless groups across the nation, and imitation is the sincerest form of flattery. The Temptations are rare, for when they explode on stage, their energy can be felt throughout an entire audience. The immense variety of their material, funky to gospel, soul to pop, enables them to fit the mood of any audience. The group has performed at all the top clubs throughout the world, including the Talk of the Town in England, the Copa in New York, and the Grove in Los Angeles. They still perform at colleges, too, never losing touch with the youth of America.

The group continues to smile, for not only did they receive another gold record for their album and single, "Masterpiece," but their single release of "Papa Was A Rollin' Stone" was the number one song in the nation. Also sailing into the national top ten was their album, "All Directions," also certified gold.

The Temptations marked the close of their first "Decade of Hits" with the release of their all-time greatest hits, the massive package gives insight into the lasting power of the Temptations. They have never been afraid to break new ground. Indicative of this progressive attitude is their 1975 colossus, "A Song For You," which became a gold album soon after its release. It features hits like "Shakey Ground" and "Happy People," along with the fresh genius of producer-composer Jeffrey Bowen, the act's 17th album offers further proof of why the world is always willing to yield to the Temptations.

Black Pride Inc. Doin' The Hustle

by Don Rhone

Black Pride Inc., a non-militant organization whose membership is open to anyone, is an admittedly young and inexperienced organization.

Began with an eye on the economic and social situation in Des Moines, the goal of Black Pride Inc. is to provide the Black Community and the public in general with activities to take up the slack that not having jobs will create this summer, says John Calhoun, Community Coordinator for the group.

They have tentatively planned "Summer Disco Dances" a both indoors and out for the summer.

"When the funds get right," continues Calhoun, "we hope to get entertainers, like the Black Byrds. "Admittedly that goal is somewhere in the future. Black Pride Inc. sponsored the Malcolm X Dance, May 22, which had a "pretty good turnout," although the dance ended early because of a temporary power failure on the southside.

Presently the group is organizing a basketball tournament with a change of two dollars per person some of which will go to cover the trophy and the rest will go to

New Orleans Conference A Tribute to A.P. Randolph

Norman Hill, Executive Director of A. Philip Randolph Institute, Mervyn Dymally, Lieutenant Gov. of California, Bayard Rustin, President of the A. Philip Randolph Institute and Alexander E. Barkan, National Director Committee on Political Education, AFL-CIO, were keynote speakers at the seventh annual conference of A. Philip Randolph Institute

Affiliates held in New Orleans, Louisiana, May 21-23.

The A. Philip Randolph Institute was founded in 1965. A Philip Randolph was born April 15, 1889 and in 1925, at the age of 36, organized The Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, the first black union of any kind. Serving as international president of the union from its conception until he retired in 1968.

During which time Randolph developed the strategy of mass protest, which has since become standard operating procedure for political demonstrations and protest. Utilizing mass protest Randolph won two very significant Executive Orders. Our banning discrimination in defense plants and established the nation's first Fair Employment Practice Committee. The second, in 1948, when Mr. Randolph told President Truman that if segregated ways of the army did not end that masses of Negroes would refuse induction into the armed forces. Randolphs battle for certification of the Union of Sleeping Car porters, which he finally won after overcoming stiff oposition from railway companies, made possible the first contract ever signed by a white employer with a Negro labor leader.

the campaign against sickle cell anemia. They hope to get a "name basketball star," to give away the trophy.

The basketball tournament will be played on a rise and fly basis.

The groups motto is; "Black Pride is Black Pride."

Also scheduled for the summer is an art exhibition, where local artists will be able to show the fruits of their creative labors.

Black Pride will also arrange your party, hiring the space, setting up bars, etc.

"We hope to arrange a formal," Calhoun commented, "There hasn't been a formal where you can get decked out and really party for sometime."

Butz 'Bleeders'; Don't Slash that Program!

Five of the nation's top Jewish groups have joined with over 100 other religious, civic, consumer, civil rights and labor organizations in a suit to prevent the Ford Administration from cutting $1.2 billion in Food Stamp Program aid.

The suit has succeeded in temporarily blocking implementation of new Department of Agriculture regulations which would remove 5.3 million people from the food stamp program and reduce benefits for an additional 5.5 million Americans.

The five organizations are the American Jewish Congress, the American Jewish Committee, the National Council of Jewish Women, the United Hebrew Trades, and the Workmen's Circle.

The present court action, which is also being joined by 26 states, was brought by the Food Research and Action Center (FRAC), a national anti-hunger interest law firm.

At its recent biennial convention, the American Jewish Congress passed a resolution which supported increased federal contributions to such relief programs as Aid to Families with Dependent Children, Medicaid and maintenance of "a fair and adequate food stamp program." The organization also called for a system that would coordinate cash payments and in-kind benefits for food stamps, day care, Medicaid and public housing programs.

Joseph B. Robison, general counsel of the American Jewish Congress, said: "The American Jewish Congress agreed to act as one of the plaintiffs in the food-stamp suit because we believe that prevention of starvation is a matter of justice. We do not know what contribution Agriculture Secretary Butz thought he was making when he characterized the many states, organizations and individuals who brought the action as 'bleeding hearts.'

don't call us that!

"We suggest that Secretary Butz avoid such inflammatory comments in the future and address and address himself to the actual question which we have asked the courts to decide — whether he has acted legally and justly in adopting regulations that deny needed relief to millions of Americans."

"WE THE CAMPFIRE PEOPLE"

Camp Fire Girls from several groups performed an interpretive dance at the All Iowa "We, The Camp Fire People" Bicentennial ceremonial in Waterloo May 22nd. The girls have been working since January on the number — The Camp Fire Girls Credo. Some of the groups have had projects to raise the money for the trip. Some of the parents drove to Waterloo with the girls and other parents accompanied girls on vans

'76 Ses Session 'Too long'

The 1976 legislative session was "occasionally productive but badly managed and far too long", according to Lieutenant Governor Arthur Neu.

Following adjournment last Saturday, May 29, Neu praised majority party Democrats for completion of work on the massive criminal code rewrite. He also commended the Democrats for taking final action on adoption law, anti-trust and unemployment compensation measures.

The Republican Lieutenant Governor credited the Democrats with presenting a short list of legislative priorities for 1975 and 1976. "But too much of the priority work was left until the 'eleventh hour,'" he said, "and the value of limited priorities was lost."

"What important legislation was passed," continued Neu, "could have been handled months sooner. Adjournment of this year's session should have come much, much earlier."

"The shift to annual appropriations was the Democrats' biggest mistake," emphasized the Senate's presiding officer.

"Approving funding bills for every state agency and program again this year added immeasurably to the length of the traditionally shorter 'second-year session'."

"Regardless of which political party controls the Legislature in 1977," he said, "I sincerely hope that a biennial appropriations process, with supplemental appropriations, will be tried again."

Neu added that "little benefit" was gained by Iowa taxpayers from annual appropriations. "If anything," he said, "Iowans will have to underwrite an even larger state budget than they would have with biennial appropriations, because every state agency was given another opportunity to plead its case for more funds."

Finally, the Lieutenant Governor expressed "great disappointment" at the Democrats' failure to provide a meaningful answer to the State's "roads and bridges crisis". "Simple political timidity is to blame for the Democrats' inaction," he said.

"Minority party Republicans," Neu concluded, "deserve credit for moderating the Democrats' frequent anti-business thrusts. They made the new anti-trust law a realistic one, kept the State's unemployment compensation trust fund from 'going broke', and prevented ill-founded consideration of corporate income tax changes."

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Q— If I am hospitalized for treatment of my service-connected disability, how is my Veterans Administration compensation affected?

A— If you are hospitalized for more than 21 consecutive days, your disability rating will be increased to 100 per cent until the last day of the month of hospital discharge or termination of treatment or observation for the disability.

Q— How much will the Veterans Administration pay me for enrolling in a correspondence course under the GI Bill?

A— Eligible veterans may be reimbursed 90 per cent of established charges for the number of lessons completed by the veteran and serviced by the school. Payment is made quarterly.

Q— The Veterans Administration has terminated my husband's pension payments, reason "whereabouts unknown." Is there any way I can be paid his VA pension since I only receive Social Security payments?

A— Possibly. After 90 days the veteran's pension may be paid to a wife if a claim is filed within one year following date of last payment to the veteran. The amount paid will be that received by the veteran or the amount of death pension, whichever is the lesser.

Direct Deposit Now Available

Thefts of social security or supplemental security income checks may not be a major crime category, but for someone whose monthly checks represent the bulk of his or her income, the loss can be shattering. It may take weeks before a stolen check can be replaced.

A new service makes it possible for people to have their checks deposited directly in their checking or savings account. The check is deposited the same day it ordinarily would be delivered at home.

The program—called direct deposit—is entirely voluntary. People who don't specifically request direct deposit will continue to get social security or SSI checks mailed to their homes.

But those who do want their checks mailed to a bank, savings and loan association, credit union, or other financial organization may do so by filling out an authorization form available at most financial organizations. Completion of the form—SF-1199—only authorizes deposit of your check. No one can withdraw from the account unless you authorize them to do so.

The direct deposit service was tried on an experimental basis in two States before it was extended nationwide last fall. Since then, more than 3 million of the over 32 million beneficiaries have signed up for direct deposit of their checks.

Direct deposit of your check has several advantages. Even if you are away from home, your check is deposited instead of sitting in your mailbox. You don't have any problem in cashing your check because it goes directly into your account. You don't have to stand in line to cash or deposit your

Davenport

Curtis Cregg was home visiting family and friends. Curtis graduated from Central High, Davenport in 1974.

"It all started when I was in fourth grade, when my teacher asked all the kids what they were going to do when they finished high school. I said I am going to college and play football. At that time I didn't have any idea that I would be playing football and going to a major college. It was more or less a dream that little children have.

When I started Junior high I was around sports more and then I became more active in them. People started telling me that I could make something out of myself if I wanted to because they thought there was something special about me. They told me I had to work hard because it doesn't come easy. So I worked hard.

When I got to high school I was told by more people that they thought I could make something out of myself. The person that made it all possible for me was Coach Jim Fox, he said, 'Curt, I know you are going to make it and do alright for yourself."

check. And you don't have to worry about losing your check after you receive it.

When he told me this there was no way I was going to let him down. He was just like a father to me. Coach Fox has instored a lot of things in my mind that will always be there. He said to keep hitting the books. My Mom and Father, Grandmother and all my relatives wanted to see me make it because I would be the first one in my family to do so. I personally wanted the world to know that you can make it if you try.

The Raymond Carter family were Memorial Day visitors with family and friends. They stopped by the Third Missionary Baptist Church for the Bicentennial Smorgasbord.

Raymond and Alyce Carter of Denver, Colorado were formerly of Davenport, Iowa. Mr. Carter was the president of CORE. He is now manager of C.E.D. Maintenance and Supply. He wife, Alyce, is a Field Representative for the Social Security Administration. They have two children, Wendy and Mark.

This was the family's first visit to the area since 1969.

Morning worship by the pastor Rev. R. A. Allen followed immediately by dinner in Fellowship Hall. The dinner was prepared by Lady of the Church. Afternoon services by Rev. William Grimes and Junior choirs of Second Baptist Church. They plan a fall Mortgage burning.

Among the population aged 65 and over in 1975, women outnumbered men by 4.1 million, and that margin is expected to increase to 6.5 million by the end of the century.

These figures are presented in a special study on the older population of the United States released today by the Bureau of the Census, U.S. Department of Commerce. The study brings together new data as well as previously published material to help understand the demographic aspects of aging and the older population.

During this century, America's population

65-and-over has increased from 3.1 million in 1900 to an estimated 22.4 million in 1975, and it is expected to grow to about 31 million by the year 2000. As a share of the total U.S. population, the elderly grew from 4.1 percent to 10.5 percent in the 75 years.

Communist China: A Black Perspective

By Paula Baker

Probably the most difficult of all the principles of Chinese conduct to adopt is the principle of "Serving the People".

Simple sounding, this principle can have a great effect on one's ability to accomplish individual or group goals. "Serving the People" does not mean to perform duties in your community, at home, or in the work place in a begrudging manner. Nor does it mean to become involved in activities that benefit other people merely for the satisfaction of gaining self esteem or respect from others.

"Serving the People" is applied in China in to every activity undertaken by individuals or groups, where all persons involved perform their duties or obligations, no matter how small, in a manner that yields the best possible results for the benefit of all Chinese people. To do the best job you can, in the most selfless manner possible is the essence of this principle. Arrogance, conceit, extravagance and corruption are frowned upon in China when one is undertaking any task that has an effect on the life of the entire Chinese society.

The second most significant principle held by the Chinese that is relevant to the Black situation in America today, is that of "Self Reliance and Arduous Struggle". As we described the "oppression syndrome" at the beginning of this article, there are four characteristics of oppression.

The Chinese principle of "Self Reliance and Arduous Struggle" can be applied to Black America's almost total dependence on the conditions of oppression in American society. We American Blacks look to the American white man to clean up our neighborhoods, to educate our children, to care for our aged, to grow our food, to assure us our livelihoods, and yes, even to assure us of our right to a meaningful existence in the world.

At this point in American history our dependence is almost as complete as it was in the days of enslavement of our ancestors on the plantations.

Our dependence is somewhat hard to see because many of the ways in which the white society has allowed us to become dependent have become so traditional that we fail to see the harm in them. To some poor Black families receiving aid from the government has become as American as apple pie.

To the more fortunate or affluent Blacks, their dependence on oppression is more difficult to reveal. Nevertheless they are dependent on the oppression of their fellow Black Americans to assure them that they are in someway superior to someone, "I must be different because my white friends accept me", or "If I can live in this neighborhood, I must have my self more together than other Blacks". Well the superiority of some Blacks to other Blacks in terms of educational or economic achievements are part of the system of oppression in America.

The apparent success of a few Blacks serves to further divide the Black population between the have and have-not Blacks. These apparent successes also serve to reinforce the feelings of inferiority and lack of self esteem held by the majority of Blacks in America. Most Black Americans, even the now successful ones, have experienced the haunting feeling of insecurity and inferiority that comes with the recognition that you have failed where you have seen other Blacks succeed.

"Self Reliance and Arduous Struggle" is a principle that helped the Chinese people realize their own independent strength, and which enabled them to do away with the scrutches of oppression. This principle holds that together, the Chinese people have the power to take their destiny in their own hands.

The wealth of their society is based on the efforts of its workers, peasants, and intellectuals working together to overcome insurmountable obstacles. This principle also holds that victory in overcoming obstacles will not be easy or based on luck alone, but that the nature of the struggle is such that it will be hard and bitter. But the principle warns against turning away from the realization that the struggle will be hard, instead it tells the Chinese people that the difficulties must always be recognized and never shunned, but that they must never lose sight of their achievements in times of difficulties. "We must be prepared to follow a road that twists and turns".

It appears that the road to equality in America for Blacks has many twists and turns, it also appears that the achievements of Blacks in the past seem small, and that there is much more work to be done to assure our existence in the world of free human beings. But though the task looks arduous and the road is long, we have not yet begun to tap the collective strength of a loving, trusting, courageous, unified Black America.

In unity we can provide for the economic needs of one another, we can affect changes in the education of our young, we can become individuals that strive to undo the damage done to our individual and collective psyches, and we can build communities where every member: the young, the old, the laborer, the intellectual and the artist can contribute their skills to building a better existence for Blacks in America, and people throughout the world.

BLACK CAUCUS CHALLENGES ADMINISTRATION

Washington, D.C.— On behalf of the Congressional Black Caucus, Congresswoman Yvonne Burke (D-Calif.) today called on the Ford Administration to implement the long-awaited U.S.- Africa policy announced during Secretary Kissinger's recent visit to Africa.

Caucus Chairperson Burke warned that the "Secretary's indication of a new, more progressive policy toward Africa will be regarded as merely empty words by Black Africa unless the Administration moves immediately to implement such policy initiatives. These include immediate recognition of Angola in light of Cuba's intention to withdraw troops from Angola; repeal of the Byrd Amendment; and support of adequate funding for development plans for southern Africa as outlined by the Secretary during his recent trip."

Congresswoman Burke recalled Secretary Kissinger's repeated statements that the U.S. accepts the new governments in Mozambique

OBITUARIES

CLARA WAGNER

Graveside services for Clara Wagner, 86, of 2222 Thirty-second St., who died Monday at Mercy Hospital, were at 10 a.m. Wednesday at the Masonic Cemetery.

Born in Bonaparte, Mrs. Wagner lived in Des Moines for 70 years.

She was a member of the New Christian Church and was a 50-year member of Adelpic Chapter 417, Order of Eastern Star.

Survivors include a son, Malcolm E. of Des Moines, and a brother, Harley R. Brown of Runnells.

The family suggests that any memorial contributions be made to the Iowa Heart Association.

PASSED AWAY

Jonas Evans, of Wichita Falls, Texas, was at the bedside of his sister, Mrs. W.

UNION BAPTIST CHURCH

Pastor Thomas' sermon subject last Sunday morning was "It's a Blessing From God". The Adult Choirs sang.

Think about it "HE WHO IS NOT READY TODAY, WILL BE LESS SO TOMORROW".

EAST UNIVERSITY CHURCH OF GOD IN CHRIST

The East University Church of God in Christ is the Church of what's happening now. On Sunday, our pastor really did preach the gospel. How our souls were fed. His text was from Hebrews 2:1-3, subject "The Sin of Neglect". The power of God was great and many were healed, a soul saved, and a backslider reclaimed.

We thank God for our beloved pastor, a man of God with faith and power to cast out devils. Our Young Adult Choir and the Gospel Dimensions rendered the song service. Sis. Shirley Banks, with the Young Adult Choir rendered the song "God Has Smiled On Me" till the power of God fell. After the morning service, we went down to the dining room and had a feast of natural food, prepared by Mothers Jenkins, Peachman, Williams, and Moore. Truly, they are some of the best cooks in Des Moines.

The afternoon service was given by the Pastors Aide President, Mother P. Jacobs. The guest church was New Bethany Church of God in Christ, Eldee A. Johnson, pastor. The NBC Choir rendered beautiful selections, afterwards, the Assistant Pastor, Minis. P. Hardin, fed our souls with the word of God.

Each morning from 9 until 10 a.m., prayer warriors will be meeting at the church, the public is cordially invited to attend the morning prayer revival. Pastor Daye will also be teaching on the Acts of the Holy Ghost. Come and learn about the duties of the Holy Ghost.

The entire Week of June 7 thru 12 will be the YPWW congress convening in Cedar Rapids, Iowa. Our own Missionary R. Woods is the presiding Chairlady. Her night is June 11, we asking all to go on that night, if you cannot go any other nite.

On Saturday nite June 19, the Young Adult Choir is sponsoring an appreciation service for the Church Musician and soloist, Sis. Shirley Banks. We that know her and her beautiful talent surely will come and let her know we love her. Don't forget to watch the Gospel train each morning on Cablevision channel 10 from 6:30-7:30 a.m. Mon. thru Fri. and 7-8 a.m. on Sat. of which our Pastor Elder L. Daye is the host.

LOOK ON SPORTS

This is the year of the Olympics. From here it looks as if the United States will have a busy time trying to gather gold medals in what was once their private property, the track and field events. Most of the runners competing for colleges and universities in this country who are big stars come from places like Uganda, Nigeria, Tanzania, (?) Ireland, England and such.

The sprints used to be our best event, and maybe they are with Harvey Gance and possibly Huston McTear, but those guys from the other countries can pick em up and lay em down too, so if our men don't get off to a good start, they might not be in it.

And in the field events, it will be rough scuffling also. The best jumpers and weight men come from other places. We have the edge in maybe the high jump or pole vault, but by mid summer some European may have a similar technique and take those events, too.

Our basketball team isn't the best one we could field, but it will have to do, and maybe they can play run and gun and beat the other fellows.

There is quite a controversy over the foreign athletes competing in American college sports. People who don't have any are very much against it, and those who do have some are for it. One of the arguments against foreigners is that they are usually older and more matured than our people and are better equipped.

But then you have a fellow leaving high school or college at the age of maybe eighteen or nineteen and playing professional basketball, baseball or maybe soccer or football. They are competing against men in some cases old enough to be their dads, and hold their own.

I once knew a sixteen year old who was wrestling men old enough to be his father and was beating most of them. So the argument doesn't go down too well with me.

If the foreign athletes are better I would have to guess that the difference is in the life styles of the people. In those other places there is a lot of walking done before fellows get cars.

Lots of people never get a car and walk places all their lives. In our young days we used to call a two or three mile walk a short walk. Try to get some kid to do that now. Oh, they might do it once a year for some cause like a fund drive, but to do it every day is out.

So we don't give our kids a chance to develop their muscles so they can build the necessary endurance and stamina to win. Maybe it is a good thing, but our guys take sports as a game while they are in school, and really don't work at it. Whenever anybody does, he usually holds his own with the best in the world, sometimes beating them and some times losing to them. But the athlete is up there because he dedicated himself to the event. And that doesn't mean just for a few months but quite a spell.

American athletes use their athletic success as a means of making a living, and so they leave the Olympic arena as soon as they win a medal. We have very few repeaters from one Olympic games to another. And we don't start getting ready until just a short while before the games. But until we get some athletes who are willing to work for four years after one Olympic to prepare for the next one, the fellows from across the waters are going to crowd us and lots of times beat us.

TOO MUCH PRESSURE

The girls state high school tennis meet didn't go quite according to plan. Our local girl, Joy Rabinowitz, was supposed to just walk to the singles crown, but she got sidetracked by a girl who didn't have a team to represent.

Really, I think that one of the big reasons the Des Moines girl lost was the fact that if you read the daily papers the last three weeks, you might have thought that there was nobody else playing the game but this one girl. That would tend to psyche an opponent up so they would be determined to show those big city people up, and play better than she would have under ordinary circumstances.

The doubles team got it too, but they didn't get the ink that the singles player got, being mentioned more or less as an afterthought in the story about the big star.

My late brother Bill used to make everybody who played him play their heart out to beat him because he seemed to look down his nose at the competition most of the time. I know that actually, Bill did that to bolster his own confidence, but people didn't know that. So that was maybe what happened to Joy Rabinowitz. Maybe she will get another crack at her opponent in the Iowa Open next month.

Hey! Ya Wanna Play?

IT'S FREE... FROM IOWA POWER

Today, more than ever before, people are concerned about the cost of everything, including energy. So, we're offering all our customers this new, free booklet called, "The Energy Diet."

It shows you how much it costs to run each appliance in your home . . . by the hour, by the month, or by the job. If you want to "slim down" your power bill, the booklet shows how much you can save by cutting back on the use of various appliances.

The booklet shows you how, the decision is still up to you.

There's also a complete section with dozens of ways you can use energy more efficiently. At Iowa Power, we want to help you and your family make better use of your appliances, and help you save money on your utility bill, as well. "The Energy Diet" booklet can help.

For your copy, stop at any Iowa Power office—or write and request it. It's free. Because at Iowa Power, we want you to know what it costs every time energy goes to work for you.

absentee ballots cast for Chiodo have been challenged by the Alexander committee.

Linda Carter, an Alexander campaign worker, recalled one conversation with a woman who told her that she had "mailed in" her absentee ballot, "but then wanted to know whether "I still have to go in and vote."

According to law, any "qualified elector" can vote on the absentee ballot provided that person "expects to be absent on election day when the polls are open" or "when through illness or physical disability" the "elector expects to be prevented from going to the polls and voting on election day."

But, said Mrs. Alexander, "We have various people on our committee who have been calling those persons (absentee voters) and they're well and fine and at home."

Georgena Alexander had been running in District 67, an area that had been represented by James Caffrey, who died April 24, leaving her the only Democratic candidate on the primary ballot.

Caffrey's name, however, remained on the ballot until Polk County District Judge Gibson C. Holliday ruled that the dead man's name be removed. Still, the so-called Democratic "machine," undaunted by the removal of the name (left on, Caffrey's name could have won enough votes to allow a "suitable" and living candidate to be named by the county Democratic convention), then apparently moved to support a write-in campaign of Chiodo.

Chiodo, who is the unofficial winner in the Democratic primary, is to meet Republican Robert Benson in the fall election.

Mrs. Alexander's friends and workers continued to stop by her home Tuesday night. Many had been there for some time, making their own tally of precinct returns, questioning election procedures that had occurred that day, helping to prepare food, and generally being supportive.

One of them was A. June Franklin, one of two Black women who had been elected in past years to the Iowa House of Representatives.

"I don't think her defeat was a reflection on her or a reflection on the people who worked for her," said Mrs. Franklin in an interview on the Alexander patio.

"But it's kind of sad because Black people in the south voted. Then they go north and they don't give a damn. Black apathy. The same thing that happened to her happened to me."

Franklin was elected to the House in 1966 and won re-election in 1968 and again in 1970. When she ran for the Iowa Senate in 1972, she was defeated in the primary.

Coupled with the problem of poor black voter turnout for Mrs. Franklin, a Democrat, was re-apportionment that cut the "poor and the Black voting district three ways," she continued. "And then they gerrymandered the whole county" so that certain Democrats could be elected and elected again.

"But what really hurt her (Alexander) was the (lack of the) Black vote," Mrs. Franklin said.

As of 10 p.m. Tuesday night, Mrs. Alexander had not formally conceded to Chiodo, but the probability that he would win was on her mind.

"We have gotten a lot of support and we've worked hard and very diligently," she said during a quiet moment. "The Blacks have rallied around beautifully as far as support. Everyone has done something in their own way."

She paused and the lines of tiredness that come from living 24 hours for the past several weeks in the political struggle could be seen in her face.

Then, "I shall run again in the next election," she said. "We cut into his (Chiodo's) vote on the south side. They just thought we were going for the vote on the north side."

She paused again, then smiled. "A lot of people had forgotten us here on the near north side. But we put it on the map again. The north side is still alive and we're here."

The talk among Georgena's supporters went on. The conversations centered for a moment, around a young white man who went to the south side to campaign for Mrs. Alexander and was called "a red-necked communist and a nigger lover."

Talk centered, too, on the "machine."

"It's hard to beat the machine," said one man.

"You haven't fought against the 'machine' until you fought against (Chicago Mayor Richard) Daley," Mrs. Franklin reminded him.

"We fought a machine and we slowed it down," Mrs. Alexander later told journalist Paula Baker, supporter Linda Carter and Mrs. Alexander's campaign co-ordinator Corliss Williams.

"But wait a minute," Mrs. Williams replied. "You fought 300 years of racism and sexism."

And, added Ms. Baker, "The Democratic Party has been able to overlook the Black vote in Iowa. If we can co-ordinate an independent campaign around Blacks ... And that's what we have to educate Blacks to — that they do have power."

Still, a major concern is the fact that Black people did not vote in the numbers that the Alexander committee felt it should have.

"The complacency in our community is tragic," said Jesse Taylor.

There was praise for the churches and other organizations that supported Mrs. Alexander, as well as for Des Moines residents who spent hours both prior to and on election day working for her.

Someone recalled a passenger she carried to the polls Tuesday — a 91-year-old black woman who was proud to vote.

Mrs. Alexander showed a visitor a letter from a white person which said, in part, "I've been following your effort in the face of those strange efforts of the organized Democrats who appear to carry a lot of big shafts. Win or lose this time out, make plans for the next campaign."

The Alexander primary election campaign was "very low-keyed," Mrs. Alexander said. "We didn't pressure anybody. I didn't ask anybody to vote for me because I'm Black. It was the principle."

"I opposed capital punishment. Maybe that was not the feeling" of District 67 voters, she said, "But that is how I feel. And I will not change."

By now it was nearly midnight. The telephone had begun to ring with requests from the white media for interviews. And then it was early Wednesday morning.

Mrs. Alexander's husband, Joseph (also her campaign manager) spoke up. "We can be proud of one thing — that Black people can stand together," he said. "Let's just work from that standpoint."

All along, said Mrs. Alexander, her husband had been her strongest ally.

"I know that I could have done more for the people than Chiodo," she said. "And I can't be bought and I can't be sold. I've always worked — and I will always work — for the community, whether I'm an elected official or not."

The fight may not yet be over for Georgena Alexander. Committee workers continue to talk about a formal court challenge to the Chiodo absentee ballots.

And former Representative Franklin added a challenge of her own:

"I challenge every Black person in Des Moines who makes $10,000 or more to send Georgena a check for $10 because there are a lot of Black people here who make a lot of money."

Then she added, "And I'm hoping she can tie it up (with a challenge) in court."

TERRACE ROLLER RINK MOVES TO NEW LOCATION

"Let's all skate, slowly and carefully. Couples in the Moonlight, you must be in two's."

These are just a few of the many familiar phrases heard once inside the doors of the Terrace Roller Rink. As of Sunday, May 30, these sounds along with a slightly bumpy floor and many fond memories will be neatly tucked away.

Russ and Nelda Knapp owners of the Terrace Roller Rink have decided to close old doors and open new ones at a different location.

In a recent conversation Mr. Knapp stated that they average about 500 customers per week, but he pointed out as time goes on the average number of people get smaller by the week. He also stated that the rink was closing due to "economic reasons." The new rink was planned previously to be built closer to the older rink, but due to particular zoning laws, plans had to be taken a little farther than anticipated. The new address will be 5660 Hubble Ave. Located a short distance from adventure-land.

In a brief conversation with public relations man, Lieutenant Frank Kaiser, Mr. Kaiser stated that he and Mr. and Mrs. Knapp were, "very happy with the people and hope the same people will continue to patronize the new rink."
