220 Black Women Hold Office in South

Atlanta, Georgia— A total of 220 Black women currently hold public office in the 11 southern states, according to a research study of the Voter Education Project, Inc. (VEP)

"Women have played a crucial role in the long, historic struggle of Blacks in the United States," said John Lewis, civil rights activist and executive director of the Voter Education Project. "Our struggle for equal rights owes much to the strength, creativity, and dedication of black women. It therefore comes as no surprise to document that black women are a growing force in the politics of this region and in the nation as a whole."

"With little public visibility, Black women have literally been the backbone of the civil rights movement," said Lewis.

"When we marched for voting rights on 'Bloody Sunday' in Selma, Alabama in 1965, it was mostly Black women and young children who had the raw courage to nonviolently face the brutality dealt out by Alabama Highway Patrolmen."

Black female public officeholders are geographically located throughout the South as follows: Alabama, 25; Arkansas, 16; Florida, 11; Georgia, 24; Louisiana, 20; Mississippi, 44; North Carolina, 24; South Carolina, 14; Tennessee, 15; Texas, 16; and Virginia, 11.

"We're in a new era of southern politics now, with a highly visible and politically effective black woman like Representative Barbara Jordan providing national leadership in the U.S. Congress," observed Lewis.

Take Health Delivery Services From Gov. and Shoddy Agencies

Philadelphia, PA... "Black professionals must take health delivery services away from government and shoddy agencies and administer them to our own people," Dr. Kenneth Brown, national president of Chi Delta Mu Fraternity, said Friday in his Philadelphia office.

This statement was made a week before the fraternity's sixty-third annual convention to be held at the Valley Forge Hilton Hotel, outside Philadelphia, from June 23 to 27. Chi Delta Mu is comprised of Black physicians, dentists and pharmacists. It was founded at Howard University in Washington, D.C. in 1913.

Brown's statement came as a result of a poll taken within the fraternity on the direction the organization

This series of photographs tells the story of a now common sight in Des Moines, particularly in the area north of the downtown business district.

This house, once located on the corner of Eleventh Street and Forest Avenue, was one of only two houses left on Forest between Tenth and Eleventh Streets. But as the photographs show, it soon joined the ghosts of other demolished homes when it became a victim of the bulldozer. The bulldozer continued its demolition and then tore down the other demolished homes when it became a victim of the bulldozer. The bulldozer continued its demolition and then tore down the other house at the opposite end of the block.

All that is left on that section of Forest Avenue now is a block-long stretch of brown dirt and cropped weeds. And further west, on Twelfth Street along Forest is another large vacant lot where the Forest Avenue Gospel Church of God in Christ once was located before that structure burned to the ground last fall.

President Ford using Anti-Busing to Bolster His Campaign

It comes as no surprise that President Ford has chosen to raise the busing issue during his campaign for Republican nomination. In view of the fact that he selected an incompetent campaign manager in the beginning, who failed to perfect a knowledgeable organization in the different states he allowed Governor Reagan to get a lot of convention delegates.

He has assembled Attorney General Levi and several political leaders to explain his proposed legislation which would limit the power of the federal courts to implement the decision of Brown vs. Board of Education.

Speaking before the Junior Chamber of Commerce in Indianapolis, Indiana, Tuesday, President Ford said, "There is no good reason why we cannot wipe out the vestiges of discrimination in America, achieve equal education for our children and at the same time minimize the massive busing of our children." He said further, "that he was opposed to oppressive, heavy handed bureaucratic government."

This is the same speech that we have heard from opponents of Civil Rights from reconstructions days. In spite of what President Ford says it was the Supreme Court that implemented the fourteenth amendment and not the executive branch of the government which is required to do so.

President Ford will not gather sufficient support in Congress to pass any busing measures this year. And unless he changes his tune it is doubtful whether he will be on hand to sign such a bill if it is passed by Congress next year.

I am skeptical on any attempt to limit the power of the Supreme Court to interpret the law as it is written for if this is accomplished with reference to busing there is no guarantee that other restrictions may be placed upon it which would be more dangerous than even in the case of busing. (President Franklin Roosevelt got in trouble trying to limit the Supreme Court).

President Ford proposes that the courts would be empowered to implement busing only in cases where it can be shown that school boards had manipulated the school boundaries so as to create racial discrimination in the schools.

President Ford is not thinking at the real cause of this concentration of minorities in certain areas. No doubt he forgets that Negroes were segregated in housing until the Supreme Court held such laws unconstitutional. He forgets that people live in squalid areas, to a great extent, because they are unable to pay the higher price for better places to live. He forgets that discrimination in employment has contributed to these concentrations in low housing areas; he does not know, maybe, that real estate interests have consistently failed or refused to show good homes to minorities and wherever there is a breakthrough, as is often in Des Moines, individuals have sold houses to minorities throughout the city.

Frankly, I'm ashamed of this turn of events by President Ford and as an alternate delegate to the Republican National Convention, my support must be in doubt.

Political Conventions Don't Seem To Change

I attended the Republican State Convention last week putting in hours far beyond my bedtime and which left me far less physically able to take it as has been in the past.

Here, the grass-roots of political activities in the precincts are put together and the 3,500 delegates, in most cases, have little to do other than vote yes or no on the motions.

I have attended these conventions for over 50 years and it was interesting to note that most of the old timers who gathered in these conventions in earlier years were absent and today an almost entirely new leadership is operating the machinery. However, the convention was not short of younger men and women who organized the machinery so that it ran smoothly even though there were sharp differences in support of the two candidates for the Republican nomination for president.

This country is run by parties and not individuals and thus the success of any party depends greatly on the issues which it takes and the type of candidates which it places before the public.

Among visitors at the fourth district caucus, it includes ten counties including Polk, was Governor Reagan. He is a dynamic speaker, but I find him far afield in some of his positions. For instance he harps that education should be returned to the people from Washington. During questions and answers I challenged him on this broad statement pointing out that it was the Supreme Court in Washington which levelled the salaries between black and white teachers with the same qualifications in the public schools, required states to furnish even graduate education within the confines of their own borders, extended the so called separate but equal education in the schools which led to a grand building program in the public schools in the south fearing complete desegregation and other measures which many of the states failed or refused to do. He admitted that these were justifiable requirements which the states should have done without being forced by the action of the Supreme Court and which he said was justified.

Unfortunately, Negroes were poorly represented at the convention due to their own lack of participation in political affairs. This is one instance where there is opportunity in both parties to do this and the proper exercise of this privilege constitutes a substantial part in making democracy work in this country.

Appoint Good Candidates

Governor Ray is in the process of appointing heads of two important commissions: Civil Rights and The Aging. I am sure the appointments will be made on the basis of qualification and experience such as to ensure the successful operation of these departments in government.

"Continuation of Spiritual Fast and Political Hunger Strike For Justice and Human Rights"

I wish to take this opportunity to express my sincere appreciation to the thousands of supporters across the United States and from around the world who have sent letters, telegrams, and messages of solidarity to me as I continue to fast for justice and strike for human rights for all oppressed peoples.

Today marks the forty-fifth (45th) day that I have not eaten food in a non-violent moral effort to awaken the sleeping masses of Black and poor people to the ever increasing necessity to struggle against racism in all of its many forms.

Initially I began to fast on April 30, 1976 to protest the cruel and unusual treatment I was receiving from the N.C. Department of Corrections. The prison officials sought to isolate and punish me for political reasons — the officials feared that I would help fellow prisoners seek their human rights at Caledonia Prison Farm in Tillery, N. Carolina, consequently I was transferred to the State Prison Sanatorium, McCain Prison, in McCain, N.C.

Because of the unhealthy environment at McCain and after I found a large roach in my food for the second time I gave notice that I would not eat food until I would be transferred to a regular prison unit.

On June 1, 1976, I finally was transferred away from McCain Prison Sanatorium to Central Prison. I consider the transfer a significant victory.

However, there is a greater need to further expose the reality of gross racial injustice in the United States even as we are in the midst of a Bi-Centennial celebration.

Therefore my conscience compels me to continue fasting to emphasize and dramatize the following:

a) Freedom for all U.S. Political Prisoners in 1976.

b) Support for the Wilmington, N.C. Community Involvement Commission's Black Freedom Festival, July 4, 1976

c) Support for Dick Gregory's National cross-country "Run to End Hunger"

d) Support the National March for Human Rights and Labor Rights September 6, 1976 in Raleigh, No. Carolina.

e) A call for universal love and peace among all peoples and nations.

I will continue to fast as long as I can. Only through constant struggle will the Wilmington Ten, the Charlotte Three and other political prisoners be rendered justice.

We shall overcome.

Sincerely,
Rev. Benjamin F. Chavis, Jr.

A helluva way to write a story by Don Rhone

"I was actually afraid to get off my bicycle."

I could understand this, here was a man trapped in the jungle and alone, except for his family, perched precariously behind him.

"They can't help the way they are," he commented, and I could almost see the love pouring out of him where lay in his hospital bed.

I sympathized with him, of course, the man is somewhat of a hero.

"I heard that Tarzan would be nearby," he responded to my question, I wanted to know why he had been... there, "or at any rate this was implied by what I'd heard over the vine." And so alone and unaided this braveman had gone into the jungle.

A nurse flitted in, "not too much longer sir, he has been through a lot, you know." She glanced at him with cow eyes and backed out the door. When she was gone I asked him how it happened. "Well," he said, "they asked me for a banana you know how they like them. But I just kept going... hell the price of food you know."

Anyway I'd got bogged down in the swamp farther on, and this one ape—I'll never forget him—stepped right in front and fired point blank into my windshield."

How it got there, I'll never know.

"I don't hate 'em though," he continued, "Don't get me wrong, I ain't no religious nut. But, gee, they've had a rough time." He paused to cough, "anyhow I know how it is out there in the jungle."

He looked at me through his bandages, his children gathered around him understandingly, "We had a garden when I was comin' up", he proclaimed, "and the weeds were pretty high."

Ray Charles, Genius with capitol G

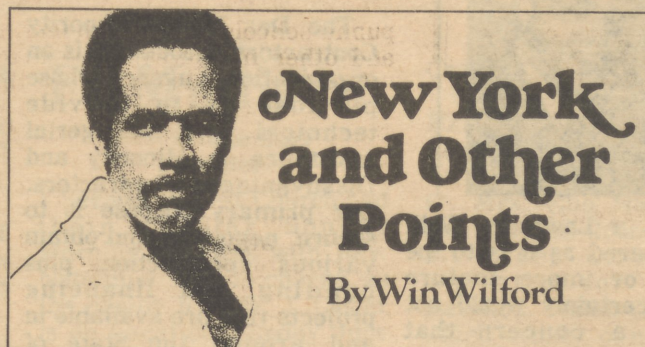

Ray Charles; Genius With a Capitol "G"

There is the distinct possibility that Ray Charles IS soul. But there remains the fact that Charles, The Genius, is a man who is a legend. And the legend, in many respects, has over-powered the image of the man. "My people made me, and I can always go back to them." Ray Charles, the man.

It is disconcerting to realize that Charles was born September 23, 1930. The monument, the legend, seems forever; the man is but in his early forties.

An accomplished musician, Ray Charles taught himself to play and write for every brass and wind instrument in an orchestra, specializing in piano, organ, and sax. He composes and arranges. But such virtuosity in itself is not sufficient to account for the legend.

The genius of Ray Charles is his baring of his person, of his soul, with its wounds and scars, to his audience.

"I try to bring out my soul so people can understand what I am. I want people to feel my soul ... Soul is when you can take a song and make it part of you — a part that's so true, so real, people think it must have happened to you ... Soul is like electricity, like a spirit, a drive, a power."

And for over twenty years, Ray Charles has done precisely this, reaching out to, touching ALL people — transcending barriers of language, culture, educational differences — running through and transforming the gamut of fashions within the idiom of popular music, making rhythm and blues, rock, country and western all uniquely his element, communicable to no less large an audience than the generic group "homo sapiens" — people.

His triumphs as an artist are the reverse coin to the personal tragedies which have plagued him, but have also made him the man he is, creating the strength which triumphs over circumstance, the light which conquers the dark. It would seem that if Ray Charles could be said to have a message, that message would be hope.

"I don't even remember when there wasn't a Ray Charles," remarks a young Negro actor. Ray Charles, the hero.

More on the "Ratings Game"

I would like to continue some observations I made last week on television and radio program ratings and how this is of concern to a number of people, especially blacks and other minorities.

In response to a letter from Representative Timothy E. Wirth in respect to a question on the effect of broadcasting ratings on programming decisions, I said:

"I believe the propensity of broadcasters to maximize their audiences had led to an inequitable neglect of the minority viewers of this country, both racial and cultural.

There have been improvements in this condition in recent years which I believe have been a function of the following: increased pressure on broadcasters by minority citizens and public interest groups; increased responsiveness by the Federal Communications Commission to the cause of these pressures and a reaffirmation of the principle that broadcasters must ascertain and serve the needs, problems and interests of all segments of the licensee's community; and finally, a heightened consciousness and reaction as a result of these pressures.

"Nevertheless, we are still a long way from where what I want to be in terms of service to minority audiences and increased coverage of news and public affairs affecting the larger community.

Some 70 million American homes have TV sets. Many have more than one set. Nielsen measures each set, according to law professor Michael Wheeler, as a household. Thus, the number of TV households could be well over 100 million. Millions upon millions of dollars rise or fall on the rise or dip of Nielsen rating points.

Thus, we know, like it or not that the so-called "ratings game" often determines what American TV viewers see on the TV or hear on radio.

Les Brown of the New York Times, adds a grimmer note: "This emphasis on popularity of shows has made TV appear to be democratic in its principles of program selection.

In truth, programs of great popularity go off the air, without regard for the viewers' bereavement, if the kinds of people it reaches are not attractive to advertisers."

What does this mean in practical terms? Well, it means, I would think, that certain shows attract certain kinds of advertisers. For example, a Lawrence Welk show, geared as it is to the elderly or more mature citizen, certainly would not attract a concern that advertises hot rod sports cars, or elevator shoes, or leather jackets and motorbikes.

Similarly, Soul Train would not attract advertisers of luxury housing, Brooks Brothers suits, or Geritol tonic. If an advertiser by some happenstance managed to find himself in one of these shows which attracts an audience he definitely is not looking for, he would get out as soon as the first report on demographics (age, marital status, race, income, etc.) hits his desk.

This raises the profound question: Do the commercial advertisers have too great a say in what the general public sees on TV or hears on radio?

What is the alternative, then, to advertising-supported programming? Public (or people) supported programming? Government supported programming? The latter two are being tried and in both cases (Government supported combined with people support have not done well in the great realm of being responsive. We must continue to struggle to make it so.

We are asked: What is the FCC going to do about this? In my letter to Rep. Wirth, I questioned whether the FCC can do anything to "alter the system without congressional amendment to the Federal Communications Act." For while Sec. 326 of that Act places constraints upon the Commission in this area of commercial broadcasting, another section of the Act exhorts us to regulate in the "public interest, convenience and necessity." How to walk this tight First Amendment line?

We must reemphasize that those who control the airways, do not own them. They are acting in behalf of the general public and thus, have an obligation to program from time to time in their interest. (NNPA)

Des Moines Minority Contractors Willing to Help

The Des Moines Minority Contractors Association is an organizational agency whose purpose is to provide technical and managerial assistance to Minority and Disadvantaged Contractors. Our primary purpose is to secure, negotiate, and obtain various construction, plus bonding and financing projects that are available in and around the State of Iowa. We have contractors available who can handle projects from demolition, painting, concrete work, electrical wiring, remodeling, and general contracts to personal home improvement.

The Association has been in operation since the Spring of 1972 and is funded as an affiliate of the Missouri-Kansas Minority Contractors in Kansas City, Missouri, which in turn is funded through the Community Services Administration, Region VII, with other affiliates in Omaha, Nebraska, Wichita, Kansas, St. Louis, Missouri, and Topeka, Kansas. In the main, the organization is to expand the business opportunities for individual clients and contractors who may seek assistance from the Des Moines Minority Contractors Association. Due to a lack of opportunities for these clients, all contract opportunities are welcome. Part of this Federal responsibility is to ensure that equal opportunity is provided.

We are also actively recruiting new members and clients for the Des Moines Minority Contractors Association, and any contractor in any field may contact: Mr. Ronald C. Howell, Executive Director, Des Moines Minority Contractors Association, 2212 Forest Avenue, Des Moines, Iowa 50311, Telephone: (515) 277-6203.

The Association is also not limited to contractors who may reside in the Des Moines area, but any minority contractor residing in an area anywhere outside of Des Moines can readily be made a member via the above contact.

A cordial invitation is extended to any interested parties, who may avail themselves of the organization's services at any time that they wish.

Dogs; 21 People; 0

"Dog bites have increased alarmingly in the first few days of June," said Dr. Julius S. Conner, Director, Des Moines-Polk County Health Department. "Dogs should always be treated with respect, including those thought to be friendly."

Dr. Conner went on to cite five month figures showing the number of reported dog bites from January 1 to May 31 for the last 3 years. Statistics show the total number of dog bites in 1974 was 411 in Des Moines and 42 in Polk County. In 1975 there were 402 in Des Moines and 45 in Polk County. And during the first 6 months of 1976 there were 400 bites in Des Moines and 36 in Polk County. The month of June is starting off to be one of the highest dog bite months in recent years. The first two days of June, 1976 there were 21 reported dog bites. The first two days of June, 1975 there were 7 reported dog bites and for the same time period of 1974, 10 reported dog bites.

According to Frank Harman, Supervisor of the Humane Officers, there are a few important points to remember about dogs during the summer months that will help prevent unnecessary bites.

1. Dog bites increase in frequency during warm weather when both children and dogs are outside and more likely to come into contact with each other. Now that school is out, parents should counsel their children on handling dogs. Mr. Harman went on to urge that people use caution when encountering a strange dog and also they should beware of provoking a family pet.

Coated rice linked to asbestos hazard

MOUNT VERNON, N.Y. — "Stay away from coated rice," advises Consumer Reports, citing the possibility that the unnecessary coating may be contaminated with asbestos, which may cause cancer in humans if ingested.

The coating of glucose and talc is applied only to make the uncooked grains more attractive and is meant to be washed off before cooking. But, Consumer Reports points out that researchers who have studied the problem believe that residues of asbestos from the talc may remain even after washing.

Consumers Union, nonprofit publisher of Consumer Reports, urges the FDA to adopt a ban on coated rice, which represents an estimated two per cent of rice sales in this country. The consumer organization notes that the Rice Millers' Association has itself urged such a ban since 1972.

The Rev. Floyd H. Flake officiated at the 1 p.m. ceremony. Mrs. Frances Haywood was soloist accompanied by Dr. Max Miller.

The bride was given in marriage by her brother, Lt. William H. Harper, III. For her wedding, she selected a long ivory gown of sheer polyester sata-peau richly re-appliqued with alencon lace and seed pearls. The empire bodice was styled with a wedding ring collar. The long full sleeves were cuffed with a double band of lace. Ruffled double lace outlined the bottom of the bridal gown. A long mantilla veil was bordered with matching lace caught up to a headpiece of lace and pearls.

Denise Cheesman and Andrea Johnson, cousins of the bride, served respectively as maid and matron of honor. The bridesmaids were Paula Cheesman, cousin of the bride, Marilyn Finch, bridesmatron, sister of the groom, Laura Murphy, and Julie Markham.

The groom's niece, Kristin Pierre, served as flower girl. Dr. Charles Finch, III, served as his brother's best man.

Arthur, Anthony, Mark and Gregory Finch, all brothers of the groom, served as groomsmen. Freeman Harper, brother of the bride, and Charles Cheesman, III, cousin of the bride, were also groomsmen.

Immediately following the ceremony, a banquet reception was held at Sheraton Boston Hotel, Boston.

The couple honeymooned in the Barbados, British West Indies.

Mrs. Finch was graduated from Wellesley College, Wellesley, Mass., in May 1976, with a degree in Business and American Studies. Dr. Finch was graduated from Boston University School of Medicine, Boston in May 1976.

Dr. and Mrs. Finch will live in California where Dr. Finch will be engaged in a pediatric internship and residency at Kaiser Hospital, Hollywood.

We certainly identify with the people who need it, we are most capable of handling this program, and we are dedicated to this purpose." Dr. Brown also said that if Chi Delta Mu were not chosen to administer the program, his fraternity would be satisfied with any combine of Black doctors, dentists and pharmacists.

In taking this message to his convention, a formal speech has been prepared in which the national president urges the professional membership to break the long tradition of quietness and politeness in the community and become audible and demanding. He insists that governors of states, mayors and city medical officers be called upon and that the President of the United States be asked for audience, "so he can hear our voices."

CUTWRIGHTS DELEGATES TO ANNUAL CONVENTION

Mr. and Mrs. Louis Cutwright, Jr. and children, 2517 Woodland, will be delegates to the annual convention of Jehovah's Witnesses at Veterans Memorial Auditorium this week. About 10,000 will be attending from all over Iowa and eastern Nebraska.

Cutwright, who is an instructor at Des Moines Area Community College, said the theme of the conference is "Sacred Service" and he added the program will address itself to improving life spiritually within the family circle.

"There will be specific information for husbands, wives and young people," Cutwright said, "designed to examine the problems confronting society today and suggesting concrete solutions to overcome them."

Cutwright pointed out the confusion over moral issues such as divorce, birth control, homosexuality, pre-marital sex and women's liberation. "The division in many religious systems," Cutwright said, "is causing the confusion because of varying opinions expressed by religious leaders. People are left without a solid guide for their lives."

Cutwright said the convention will consider these matters from the viewpoint of the Bible and counsel will be given from that viewpoint.

Many cosmopolitan or sophisticated people feel the Bible's comments on human behavior are "out of touch with reality, outmoded," commented Cutwright.

"Time has changed human governments and societies," Cutwright said, "but it has not altered the individual needs of man. Only the Maker of man truly understands what these needs are and how they best can be supplied. Listening to Him is still the most advisable course for man," he said.

The Cutwrights are associated with the Murray Hill Congregation of Jehovah's Witnesses whose Kingdom Hall is located at 2608-24th St.

Exploring Black Culture On Three Continents

In October 1973, an interdisciplinary committee of Black cultural workers and scholars gathered at the Smithsonian Institution in Washington, D.C. Their goal was to develop a concept for the presentation of Black cultural materials at the Smithsonian's annual Festival of American Folklife.

Since 1967, the Festival had presented cultural traditions of the many ethnic, regional, and occupational groups which comprise the USA. While included in various presentations, Black culture had never been systematically explored.

The program developed focused on an exploration of Black American culture, documenting those aspects that link Black Americans to Africa, the Caribbean, and Latin America. It was named African Diaspora to depict the dispersal of Black peoples and cultures throughout the world.

The African Diaspora Advisory Group (ADAG), as the interdisciplinary committee came to be known, made its tri-continental statement within three conceptual units: home, worship, and trade. For this summer's Bicentennial Festival, these conceptual units will be represented by a house, an altar, and a marketplace. They will serve as staging units for performances and demonstrations by participants from the USA and the 12 invited nations. Invited from Africa were Benin (formerly Dahomey), Ghana, Liberia, Nigeria, Senegal, and Zaire. From the Caribbean and Latin America Brazil, Guyana, Jamaica, Haiti, Surinam, and Trinidad and Tobago were invited.

The program aims to show the cultural forms of music, dance, material culture, and the spoken word on traditional, evolved, and revival levels.

Decisions on cultural forms to be presented are made on the basis of extensive field research. Traditions sought are those which highlight the cultural family of Black peoples throughout the world. Findings from domestic research provide the basis for international investigations. These are preceded by a formal government to government invitation extended by the Smithsonian Institution via the State Department.

The invitation requests that a folklorist from the Smithsonian be assisted by a folklorist appointed by the invited country. The Smithsonian's folklorist, selected by the ADAG, has in-depth knowledge of the African Diaspora concept and general knowledge of the culture of the invited country. This is complemented by the local folklorist who has specific knowledge of the various cultural groups and forms of that nation. Together they review performing groups and craftspeople, seeking those whose skills will most effectively illuminate the tri-continental concept.

The 12-week Bicentennial program, expanding upon the tri-continental concepts demonstrated previously, has required the efforts of at least a dozen field researchers working in the invited nations and in cities and towns throughout the continental USA and Puerto Rico.

Titsworth Opens Body Shop

Walk into the Michigan Avenue Body Shop, 1537 Michigan Ave., and amid the hiss of torches and the scrape of sandpaper on metal will come the call, "Hi there, come right on in."

The welcome will come, as it did one morning this week, from R.D. Titsworth, the 53-year-old owner of the shop. On that morning, he had been busily waxing a newly repaired small red station wagon.

"Excuse me, I've got wax on my hands," he said as he offered his wrist for a hand shake.

Titsworth shop officially opened earlier this month. It is located east of Second Avenue and road construction currently makes access somewhat tricky, "But for most people who want to find us, they can," Titsworth said.

Titsworth is a long-time auto body shop businessman who first operated a "clean up" shop and other services at his home at 1166 Seventeenth St.

He has two employees— his son, Ricki, 22, who on that morning was perched on a ladder as he sanded down the roof of a wrecked truck, and Ed McQuarry of 1124 Seventeenth St., who attempted to open the right front crushed in door of a late model automobile with a cutting torch.

"Come look at the paint booth," Titsworth told his visitors. In the "paint booth", one of the latest areas to be remodeled in the shop, set two pieces of newly painted auto parts.

And how long would it take to paint an automobile? Titsworth was asked.

"That's like (asking) how far is up," he laughed, then added that if the vehicle had no dents it would take about two days.

Ricki Titsworth carefully sands down a portion of the cab of a repaired truck.

One special service the shop provides is to pick up a vehicle (if it can be driven), take it to the shop while the owner works elsewhere and return it the same day so that the owner can drive it back home.

Prices, which vary depending upon the amount of work needed to be done, are "pretty reasonable," Titsworth said.

Both black and white customers come from throughout the Des Moines area, but "I think we should shoot for more black consumers," Titsworth said. "There's enough of it out there."

Traditionally, both the businessman or woman and the black consumer have been apt to be at odds with each other over quality of work versus prices and fees charged, especially when the black consumers compare the work done by white merchants.

On the other hand, some black merchants have felt that the black consumer's expectations are higher when they deal with merchants of their own race than with whites.

Titsworth is aware of this. "Just because you're black, the blacks (and whites) sometimes want to beat the

Rising Community College Enrollments

Community colleges accounted for one-half of the increase in undergraduate enrollment during the past five years, according to a report issued by the Bureau of the Census today. During this five-period, two-year college enrollment increased by about 50 percent while undergraduate enrollment in other colleges increased by 31 percent. About one-half of older college undergraduates aged 25 to 34 were enrolled in community colleges in 1975 compared with 38 percent in 1970—an increase of 166 percent.

These estimates are based on data collected during a nationwide survey conducted in October 1975 by the Bureau of the Census U.S. Department of Commerce.

Overall college enrollment increased by 10 percent since 1974, resulting in one of the largest numerical 1-year increases in the past 10 years. The report attributes the gain largely to an increase in the number of young students. The students were also more likely to enroll full-time, reversing the trend toward a greater proportion of part-time students noticed between 1970 and 1974.

The High unemployment rate in 1975 may have contributed to a rise in the enrollment rate of 18 and 19 year olds. The enrollment rate for men increased from 47 percent in 1974 to 50 percent in 1975 and among women in this age group, the change in participation rate between 1974 and 1975 was from 41 percent to 44 percent. The report indicates that college enrollment since 1970 has increased by 31 percent largely because of a greater number of women students. Women students increased by 45 percent compared to 21 percent for men during this period, though men still have higher enrollment rates than women for every relevant age group.

Black college students increased by 16 percent in one year to total nearly 1 million in 1975. Black persons now account for 10 percent of all college students compared with about 7 percent in 1970 and 5 percent in 1965. The college enrollment rate among high school graduates 18 to 21 years old was about the same for blacks as for whites— 41 percent and 43 percent, respectively.

Ed McQuarry, cutting torch in hand, prepares to work on an automobile.

price and expect you to do a lot more than you agree to do," he admitted. "But on the whole, people are pretty good."

The shop is currently under lease, but Titsworth, who obtained a loan from the Small Business Administration, hopes to eventually own his own building.

Titsworth pointed to another truck from a dealer, one of several vehicles which have been sent to him from local motor vehicle companies.

"It (truck) was a wreck and we just rebuilt the wreck," he said proudly. "We think it looks real sharp."

The Michigan body shop is open from 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Monday through Friday.

ALLEN ASHBY with a LOOK ON SPORTS

Since this is the first day of summer as I write this, Valley tennis ratings for 1975, and there are a couple of names that I remembered hearing and talking about at the Junior Valley meet here a couple of years ago. Renee Blount is the number one in the eighteen year old girls, and her sister Melissa rates third in the fourteen year old girls. She rates third in the girls doubles in this division also. The two Blounts are rated nationally, both being in the top twenty-five.

The names of Foxworth and Farrow don't show up in this list because both fellows got ratings in the ATA., and for some reason both were listed as being from some place in Virginia. It seems that if you don't live east of Chicago you don't count in the ATA. MAYBE I could be wrong. But here in the state there was nobody rated largely because there was nobody much playing.

Reggie Morrow got mentioned but not rated in the Iowa ratings, and that was about it. I don't recall Mark Morrow getting into enough meets to gain any sort of ranking. Maybe this year.

And on the national scene, John Lucas is going to try both tennis and basketball team at the same time. He is one of the best guards in the college game, and has a fine chance to make it with the pros. Proof of this is the nearly half million dollar no cut contract he got for five years as a cager. I haven't heard what his tennis contract called for, but I bet it wasn't hay.

Lucas was beaten in the NCAA tournament because he hadn't concentrated on tennis enough, and wasn't ready for a tough tournament. People who saw him play have said that he could have possibly gone at least to the semi finals if he had really set his sights on doing that.

And for Arthur Ash. He is rated number one at Wimbledon, but I would guess that he will have to struggle to get past the third round. He has a bone spur on his heel that gives him fits at times, and it acted up in the French clay court matches. But then he might not have won that one heel or no heel. There is no doubt that the thing will plague him in the next two weeks. You won't hear about it because Arthur believes that once you walk out on that court, you are out there to play, and there are no excuses. If you don't feel like playing, don't start. so his probably early exit from the meet will be labeled an upset and an indication of his lack of something or other.

I was amused at the news stories out of England when he lost in the first round of a warmup tournament. The first story had it that he wasn't bothered at all. Said he had just come off clay and really wasn't ready for grass, so now he could really practice on grass. The other story said that he was visibly shaken and very gloomy by his defeat. If that is so, that was the first time Arthur showed his emotion after losing a match, not even after some of the ones he really wanted to win. Then there was the story of how he had a tough time beating his first round opponent, with no attempt to account for the fact that this was his first match on grass. I guess the experts have him pegged to finish second and have to look good.

How Come no Picture?

The winner of the Amana VIP golf tournament Monday was big Jim Dent who hits a golf ball farther than most of the pros playing today but has trouble with his short game. But this time he got it together and came in 11th. Now Dent is black, and you'd be surprised how many people asked me why there was no picture of him on any TV or in the papers. I don't know.

If I had to guess, it would say that the people with all kinds of cameras followed the folks they thought were going to win, and Dent slipped through a crack in the fence and caught them with their cameras down.

Still, if they had time to interview the man, you would think that there would have been time enough for at least a still shot. Camera men, can you explain that because lots of people are thinking things that don't sound too good.

The Olympics

Do you know that the competition for places on the U.S. Olympic team is so tough that some of our best athletes are burning themselves out? It is certain that the fellow who is supposed to be our best sprinter, in spite of Harvey Glance and Huston McTear, won't be in it because of pulled hamstring muscles.

When a fellow has run the distance in record time five times, in competition, why should he have to take that chance of injury to qualify? I would argue that any time an athlete has a world record performance at least twice during the Olympic year, he should be given a place on the team or at least the final tryouts. Does that sound fair?

Some will argue that some athletes don't peak until the tryouts and with them in mind are at their best. Maybe so, but they had better come to my Olympic trials prepared to finish at least second if they wanted that trip to the games.

All-American to Play With NBA Bullets

GRAMBLING — Grambling All-America cager Larry Wright last week signed a contract to play professionally with the Washington Bullets of the National Basketball Association.

Wright, who earned All-America at Tigertown as a sophomore and as a junior, was drafted in the first round by the Bullets last week. He was the 14th player selected in the draft.

He had a season of eligibility left at Grambling but qualified for early draft status by filing for eligibility under the league's hardship rules.

The multi-year pact was signed in the nation's capitol last week at Western High School where Wright played his senior season of prep basketball.

A native of Monroe, La. Wright averaged 23.5 points in three years of basketball at Grambling. He scored 1,959 points and ranked seventh on the school's all-time scoring list.

Wright was voted the Most Valuable Player award in the Southwestern Athletic Conference past season and received an invitation to the U.S. Olympic trials. He averaged 25.4 last season.

Wright's college coach was Fred Hobdy.

Honored

Mr. and Mrs. Earl Wilson were honored recently by the Lisbon Optimist Club for their work with foster children. The Wilsons have taken care of more than 40 mentally and physically handicapped youngsters during the last 25 years. — Mt. Vernon Sun.

Grambling's Reggie Baldwin Drafted by Houston Astros

GRAMBLING — Grambling catcher Reggie Baldwin was selected last week in the third round of the annual major league draft by the Houston Astros.

Baldwin, a native of Detroit, Mich., has been the leading hitter at Grambling for each of the past four seasons.

A highly-touted prospect, Baldwin finished the 1976 season with a .393 batting mark, six home runs and 23 runs batted in.

A 6-1, 195-pounder, Baldwin has batted over .300 in each of his collegiate seasons. As a freshman he led the team with a .342 average and backed it up with a .385 mark as a sophomore. Baldwin batted a hefty .444 as a junior.

He earned All-American recognition in the summer of 1975 while playing in Alaska under the auspices of the National Baseball Congress.

Drake Honor Students

Des Moines, Iowa—Marion Eppright of Des Moines, and Gerald Tolson of MT. Pleasant are among the 889 students named to the President's and Dean's Honor Lists at Drake University for the spring, 1976, semester.

The 250 students named to the President's Honor List have earned perfect 4.0 grade point averages for 12 hours or more of course work.

Those named to the Deans' Honor Lists had a 3.5 grade point average or higher for 12 or more hours of course work.

WHAT'S NEW
AT I.S.U.

Summer days may get us enthused about cleaning up or refinishing our children's furniture.

Used furniture being used for the second-time around may need to be disinfected to make us entirely comfortable about using them for a new baby.

Recommendations are to wash with vinegar, soap and water, using mainly the soapsuds. When used on furniture be sure to rinse and then dry promptly.

Wooden furniture, toys or playthings for children may be finished at home, but these precautions need to be followed:

1. Use paints or finishes that are labeled non-toxic.

2. Always store finishes out of reach of children.

3. Allow for an extended drying time after applying finishes before placing objects into children's area.

4. Federal regulations have prohibited the sale of lead-based paints since January 1, 1973. Any paints purchased before then should be checked for lead percentage.

5. Enamels, latex enamels and urethanes are generally safe for children — check the label before buying. Use only washable finishes.

6. Toys or areas prone to chewing or mouthing can be finished by rubbing in 2 coats of mineral oil and wiping off excess. Allow for overnight drying before use.

7. Do not apply wax over finishes.

EPIDEMIC OUTBREAKS

The history of the United States makes many references to epidemic outbreaks of disease that have affected large groups of pioneers and early settlers in our country.

The development of Public Health has, from the beginning, been aimed toward preventing and controlling such epidemics as Smallpox, Polio, Diphtheria, Whooping Cough, Tetanus, Measles and many other serious communicable diseases.

Today, we have safe, effective vaccines for all of these diseases. There is no reason for any person, adult or child, to remain unprotected from these serious diseases. Not only children, but adults throughout their lifetime need immunizations. When the vaccines first became available they were widely used because people had seen the results of these diseases and wanted to make sure that their children were protected. As the years passed, the memory faded.
Parents became less diligent about immunization for their children and themselves. All of these serious diseases are present in our environment, waiting for an opportunity to attack susceptible people who have not been protected through immunization. We must not let ourselves become increasingly and needlessly vulnerable to serious disease, disabilities and death.

With warm weather upon us; yardwork, gardening and other outdoor activities are drawing us outside and there lies the danger of tetanus or lock jaw, a disease caused by a spore that is found in the soil. Both adults and children need immunizations against this disease throughout their lifetime.

If you are unsure about ever being immunized then you should check with your doctor or local health department.
Perhaps a booster is all you may need. Diphtheria, Tetanus, Whooping Cough, Polio, Measles, Rubella, and Mumps can all be completely and permanently eliminated if everyone would be immunized.
Health and the prevention of disease is an affair for the entire family.
