At Senate Hearings

Carter's Cabinet Grilled

Pat Harris defends HUD post nomination

"You do not understand who I am. I am a Black woman, the daughter of a Pullman car waiter. I am a Black woman who even eight years ago could not buy a house in parts of the District of Columbia. I didn't start out as a member of a prestigious law firm but as a woman who needed a scholarship to go to school. If you think I have forgotten that, you are wrong."

Thus, Patricia Roberts Harris Monday angrily defended her sensitivity to the problems of black and poor Americans before the U.S. Senate Banking, Housing and Urban Affairs Committee during hearings on her nomination to head the Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD).

Harris' sensitivity to the problems of the poor was challenged by the Senate committee's chairman, Sen. William Proxmire (Dem. Wis.). In his opening remarks, Proxmire criticized President-elect Jimmy Carter for failing to appoint someone to the HUD post with a background in housing and urban affairs.

"Do you have that kind of track record? Frankly I can't find it," he told Harris. "It is not enough to be black or to be a woman or to be poor or to have any particular kind of disability to understand the problems of so many people."

Harris in her opening statement to the committee and under questioning by committee members, said she supports:

Public housing as "long as there is a disequilibrium between housing supply and housing demand."

The federal income tax deduction for mortgage interest payments.

Expansion of the urban homesteading program in which rundown center city housing is made available at practically no cost to people

Attack Bell on rights record, names Black

Atlanta lawyer Griffin B. Bell, President-elect Jimmy Carter's nominee for attorney general, told the U.S. Senate Judiciary Committee Tuesday he will name Judge Wade McCree of the Sixth U.S. Circuit Court, a Black, as solicitor general.

The solicitor general is the third ranking official in the Justice Department and represents the federal government in cases before the U.S. Supreme Court.

McCree, who sits on the Sixth Circuit Court of Appeals in Cincinnati, Ohio, and lives in Detroit, Mich., is one of two blacks on the 11 federal appeals courts.

Bell, Carter's most controversial Cabinet nominee, told the Senate Committee he might choose people for judiciary posts who in the past have made racist statements and said he views himself as a moderate who would protect the interests and rights of all people.

The attorney general normally is the final official to screen nominees for judicial posts before the name is referred to the president.

Bell said he would not nominate anyone to judiciary posts who have a record of racist actions. He said he would consider those with a record of racist statements, but "I would want to study him to see if he had changed. If it had been made 20 years before, well, we do have redemption in this country."

Bell's hearing is expected to take several days due to opposition to his nomination by civil rights groups, such as the NAACP and Americans for Democratic Action, because of his record on civil rights. Despite this opposition, Bell is expected to win the nomination.

At Tuesday's hearing Bell was questioned closely about his support for Harrold Carswell, who was a U.S. Supreme Court nominee in 1970. Carswell was rejected by the Senate after it was disclosed he made a speech endorsing white supremacy and opposing racial integration.

At the time, Bell was sitting with Carswell on the VIEWS and REVIEWS by James B. Morris

Early Teaching A Better Crime Deterrent

Wednesday, January 5th, NBC carried a televised show entitled, "Violence in America" "a three-part examination of violence covers domestic and sexual violence including child abuse and wife beating, focuses on the subculture of violence and climate of fear in America, and attempts to answer whether movies, theater, television and professional sports cause violence or reflect it."

It was practically a repeat of a number of shows that are appearing on various television stations with a few specials to emphasize the subject.

Later in the evening a panel consisting of Edward Newman of NBC, the director of the Urban League, a woman lawyer, an Episcopal bishop, and a college professor who had prepared a part of the program conducted a half-hour wrap up of the show.

Each gave views on how best to curb crime. Some emphasized better and more prompt service by the courts, some by scientific methods of rehabilitation; some emphasized that living conditions in the poor and ghetto neighborhoods should be improved; some that full employment should be made available to occupy the time of people as well as have them earn their own money.

Surprisingly enough, none spoke of the jobs parents could be doing at the age from two through ten years when the minds of children are pretty well fixed as to their attitude toward others and a proper course of conduct for themselves. Young people are smarter today and therefore, the job of charting their course in life must be done early.

The Constitution of the United States emphasizes the separation of church and state and since public schools are part of the state, religion has been pretty well taken out of the schools. And while the general provision of the Constitution has merit there seems no substitute, so far, of teaching youngsters in the public schools about religion which is the basis of our conduct. Somehow maybe by teaching ethics the school could emphasize to children not to lie, not to steal, not to hate and to treat others as they wish to be treated.

Today children have more distractions that compete with their time, often leaving little to learn the things that make them good citizens. It seems to me that programs in this direction, especially public broadcasting, have a great opportunity here that would emphasize the things that are better in life than those that constantly teach how to kill, rape or steal and which would help to fill the gap that exist because of the provisions in the Constitution.

Sunken Ships Don't Belong To Liberia

The news headlines have been full of stories about seagoing ships that have been sunk or blown aground some losing their whole cargo, much of which is precious oil. Most of these ships are registered in Liberia, one of the states in Africa.

Evidence has shown that many of the crew are poorly trained, that the ships are of poor construction and are not seaworthy.

It should be made plain that these ships do not belong to Liberia but are simply registered in that country headed by American interests so as to escape the high wages paid American sailors, tight inspection and insistence on ships that are seaworthy.

It is unfortunate for Liberia in that the public does not know generally the whole story. The fact that these ships are registered in the name of Liberia would give the impression that this country is not prepared to produce seaworthy ships capable of carrying the type of cargo these sunken ships carry.

Open Letter to Carter

My first response to the idea of total and unconditional amnesty was a mixture of anxiety and unwillingness to consider. Not wishing to be suspected of being set in my ways or unwilling to consider new ideas I have made a conscientious effort to read extensively concerning the case for amnesty.

I have listened to representatives of veterans' organizations speaking for those who have died in battle. I have pondered your position of pardon for some and case by case review for others.

Mr. President, I am most disappointed. It is my understanding that your advisory committee in this particular area of concern has been briefed in detail by spokesmen for total and unconditional amnesty as most nearly achieving justice.

Would it not be reasonable, Mr. President, as a first step, for the incoming President of our country to lay before the American people the scope and complexity of issues remaining from the Viet Nam war rather than limiting your remarks to two categories and tentative solutions?

One of the most compelling reasons for total and unconditional amnesty, in my opinion, is the careless use of Article 15, a non-judicial procedure for officers to punish soldiers without providing an opportunity to be heard before the use of demotion and reduction in pay.

In the armed forces these arbitrary actions are called maintaining military discipline. The Congressional Black Caucus reports these findings about Article 15. "No military procedure has brought forth a greater number of complaints and evidences of discrimination ... non-judicial punishment. Article 15 ... has, without doubt, resulted in irreparable damage to the military careers of Blacks".

The Department of Defense, has this to say in its 1972 Report of the Task Force on the Administration of Military Justice. "Systematic racial discrimination exists throughout the armed forces and in the military justice system. No command or installation ... is entirely free from the effects of systematic discrimination against minority servicemen."

It is well to remember that the service record of each enlisted man follows him wherever he goes. It presents his superior's view of him. Article 15 not only destroys the military career, it can be used to destroy a man in civilian life with a less than honorable discharge. Military discipline cannot be maintained without justice.

Mr. President, I do not wish to leave the impression that Article 15 is directed against Blacks alone. It is brought to bear against other minorities and against poor whites.

I emphasize the plight of Black enlisted men because you, too, are silent about the subject of racism in the armed forces undermining morale. In the spirit of total and unconditional amnesty, I will blot from my memory my hostility toward those who have abused their trust in the name of military discipline.

Total and unconditional amnesty, Mr. President, is only the first stride toward justice. I believe the people will support an effort to right past wrongs, if the scope and complexities of problems are calmly and clearly.

Sincerely,
Edna Griffin

Dear Mrs. Bonnie Forrester,

From the get go, let me tell you a little about myself. As stated in the above, my name is Bro. Horace M. Johnson II — Vice president of the Progressive Black Culture Organization of the men's reformatory in Anamosa, Iowa.

As vice-president of the black culture organization it is my job to see to it that the people are informed on what's happening in here to the brothers, and even our brothers of the Indian minority.

So at this time, I'd like to run down the true goings on of the organization and what we'd like to do in here for our brothers. At the present time we have two meetings a month, one on the (1) first Tuesday of every month, and the other on the (3rd) third Tuesday of the month.

Our meetings are from 6:00 until 8:00 P.M., and we discuss the minutes at hand from the last meeting and the problems that we may come across in the way. Now on the subject of what we do, and like to do for our brothers in here.

From the get we know have a black library that is fairly filled with some pretty good books on the subject of the black race and its history. But we could use more, so if there's any way that you can help us in this cause you do so.

I'm rapping about donations of black books that I'm sure the brothers and sisters of my hometown can produce, so rap to them for us if you ever get the time. Also if there's any comm. or agencies that would like to come up and speak to the Blacks here, all they have to do is send us a letter in care of Tom Smith.

And we'll see to it that they will come in and rap. Now if for some reason they can't come during our meetings at night, they can come during the day from 11:00 to Noon to rap with the members of our organization.

We also would like to get black groups to come in, and that's from any area of music. From church all the way down to soulful singers, so there you have it.

Now if there's any questions that you would like answered about the organization please feel free to ask for we will answer all. Thank You.

"We are the people of darkness, and we own the midnight skies"

Conference on Religion, Arts & Liberation

When David Driskell, 45, resigned as chairman of the art department of Fisk University, Nashville, Tennessee, last October to move to an art professorship at the University of Maryland, The (Nashville) Tennesseean newspaper lamented his leaving and praised his contributions.

"In his ten years here," the article said, "he has introduced many solidly based innovations in teaching and exhibition of art programs at Fisk at his behest. Through his efforts the university became the recipient of the remarkable Afro-American collection owned by the Harmon Foundation and, on extended loan, a privately owned collection of regional art from Africa."

Some of these pieces of art, along with others collected under the direction of David Driskell, are on display now at the Brunnier Gallery of the Scheman Center on the Iowa State University Campus in Ames. The display will be there through January 23 and will be a focus of the "Give us Free" Conference on Religion, the Arts and Human Liberation which will be held at Scheman Center January 16 from 2:30 to 9:00 p.m.

Fair play for Israel

Israel has recently come under devastating criticism from the Black press for its decision to trade with South Africa. Israel has responded that it in fact has little choice since it is being ostracized on the international scene by an increasingly stringent Arab boycott which is being participated in by numerous American businesses.

The partial listing of such businesses by the Ford administration following one of the debates, is just that, only a partial listing but large enough to give us a fair idea of the financial power of the businesses who are doing business with Israel's enemies. The list is impressive and names some of the most prestigious businesses in America.

Yet there has been little if any outcry from the black press over this outrage. It seems self-evident that if Israel is to be condemned then so should any and all American businesses who seek to turn a buck by trading with people dedicated to blowing her off the face of the earth.

But by far the most serious charge by the Israelis in response to criticism by the Black press has been that which claims that there is also considerable trade between racist South Africa and Black Africa.

The charge is substantiated from other sources including some angry Black African nations who view this development with alarm. Once again the Black press has been caught off base with a one-sided barrage against Israel, which, in fact, should have included all the African nations as well that do business with the Southern butchers.

The Black press cannot allow itself to be roped into a oneway blind alley in support of any one party and ignore the merit in another's position.

There are 214,282 foreign Black workers in South Africa of which 180,000 are from Mozambiquean government by the South African companies in gold bullion.

The government keeps the worker's wages until their year of labor is up and they return home. The government then pays the laborer off in government scrip and keeps the gold. This helps Mozambique's balance of payments on the the exhibit derives its name from a slave ship, La Amistad, on which 53 African slaves mutinied in 1839. Held captive in the United States, they were freed in 1842 by the U.S. Supreme Court.

Driskell will give the keynote address at 2:30 p.m. at the conference and will lead, along with Nancy Gillespie, director of the Brunnier Gallery, a workshop explaining the items on display. The title of his address, "Give us Free", is taken from the words spoken by the leader of the La Amistad slaves who knew only those words in English.

Having become nationally-known for his knowledge of Afro-American art, he added incisive things to his Fisk courses. He world market and improves its trading position.

Altogether 18 Black African nations trade with South Africa so the charge against Israel which does not also include the 18 Black states in its denunciation is hypocritical nonsense.

If the Black Press and other critics of Israel's trading agreements with South Africa are really concerned about the situation, and they should be, then they should busy themselves encouraging those Black African states to reestablish their trade relations with Israel instead of seeking to isolate her from the markets of the world. Some of them, in fact, already have.

added photography to the curriculum to allow the student to retain a record of their artistic growth, instituted "oral history" projects in which sound recordings were made of interviews with living artists that have left their legacies", and added courses in museum science aimed at giving students experience in the operation of galleries and neighborhood museums.

Another highlight of the conference will be the presentation of "Chains", a choreographic chronology portraying the Amistad incident and several major events in the history of the black man in America. This performance will be at 8:00 p.m. in the C.Y. Stephens Auditorium which may be attended, for $1.50, by those who may not desire to participate in the entire program.

Afternoon seminars will include the following subjects and their presentors: (I) "The Arts and Human Values", James Spaulding, University of Iowa; (II) "The Humanities and Law Enforcement," Theodore Gill, John Jay College of Criminal Justice; (III) "The Humanities and Penal Reform," Herbert Miller, Georgetown University, and Ira Schwarz, John Howard Association, Chicago; (IV) "The Minorities and Land Use," George Garcia, past chairperson, Iowa Civil Rights Commission.

Reactor panels for each seminar will include respectively: (I) Edward Sovik, architect, Northfield, Minn.; Marilyn Parks, Iowa Arts Council; and Doyle Hansen, pastor, Des Moines;

(II) Norman Jesse, Iowa House of Representatives; Charles Knox, National Conference of Black Lawyers; and Craig Beck, Iowa Bureau of Criminal Investigation;

(III) Maurice Dingman, Catholic Diocese of Des Moines; and Kevin Burns, State Department of Social Services;

(IV) Betty Fitzsimmons, League of Women Voters; Fred McTaggart, author of study of the Mesquakie Indians' quest for land; and Larry Young, Roslyn, Virginia.

Registration cost is $7.50, including dinner, and can be arranged by writing "Give Us Free", 3300 University, Des Moines, Iowa 50311.

George Garcia

Dear Sir,

It has been seven long months since this nation's bicentennial celebration, and it has been 201 years since these words were spoken: "We hold these truths to be self-evident that all men are created equal, that they are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable Rights, that among these are Life, Liberty and the Pursuit of Happiness."

Thus wrote the founding fathers of the United States of America in their Declaration of Independence. Thirty-five words strung together eloquently, pledging for the signatories and for the generations that would follow them the ultimate goals of the Great American Dream.

Today we must ask the larger question: How have the United States fared in pursuit of the Great American Dream.

In many material ways she has succeeded where some countries have failed. But it is this very fact of its many material achievements which makes its moral failures the ultimate failure.

Today she can accomplish that moral achievement in terms of having her peoples live together as one and equal. But America is content on remaining, as was pointed out in the Kerner Commission Report, "A house divided."

To be perfectly truthful, America has always been divided, for even as the founding fathers wrote the Declaration of Independence, the aborigines of the land to which they came in search of "Life, Liberty and the Pursuit of Happiness", were being decimated in numbers to be broken ultimately in spirit also.

Even as the signatures were flourished on that charter of freedom, our African descendants were being reduced to servitude. In 1977, we are 30 million Black Americans, forming the largest concentration of people of African descent outside the continent of our ancestral origins, but we are still divided as a people on many issues.

We have advanced somewhat up the road since 1776, as we should have if only for the time that has elapsed. Legalized slavery is no more, fought out by abolitionists and Black resistance.

But even so, today the Black man in America is still down at the bottom of the totem pole and whatever the changes in our legal status, whatever the improvement some of us have economically, there remains the fact that American society will not grant any of us the full restoration of our dignity.

So I look back on the Declaration of Independence that proclaimed that "all men are created equal", and think of what the late Malcolm X said, "America's problem is that you're not one," although one could say that Thomas Jefferson fought but failed to have slavery condemned in the document.

Yet on paper America has periodically tried to relieve us of our burdens. From the days of the abolitionists, to the more recent times of President Franklin Roosevelt, who because of the grievances outlined by men like Marcus Garvey, issued Executive Order 8802, eliminating discriminatory practices in the defense industry during World War II, to 1954, in which the Supreme Court rules because of a Black man's challenge, that separate educational facilities are inherently unequal, to the Civil Rights Act of the Johnson years, which was passed because of the ghetto riots of 1964.

It is clear to myself that these steps were taken in the face of unabated struggle by the masses of Black Americans. As early as 1663, when a group conspired to rebel in Virginia, we have fought for our rights.

The Hollywood image of long suffering, docile black people is as much fiction today, as was the fiction of Harriet Beecher Stowe's Uncle Tom's Cabin in her day. In truth there were significant insurrections, such as Nat Turners, and within our own memory, we have had riots.

In politics today, Blacks are only beginning to make a modest impact as a force to be reckoned with, such was the case of Carter vs President Ford. This may signify progress of a sort.

However, nothing that the masses of blacks have gained politically today have been sufficient to remove unemployment, job discrimination, and the fact that America still refuses to admit us through the front door.

Ambassador Andrew Young wrote: "You can't make a man, through legal structures and judicial decrees or executive orders, love somebody else." So brothers and sisters my answer to you in 1977 would be as Fredrick Douglass said: "He who would be free must strike the first blow, you know that liberty given is never so precious as liberty sought for and fought for".

By James L. Woods

Dr. Bowman explains Elementary philosophy

"The formal educational process should begin and continue in a multi-cultural and multi-ethnic environment so children can come to know, love and respect all others as themselves," says Dr. James Bowman, 3608 Valdez Dr., executive director of the elementary schools for the Des Moines School District.

He continues: "Throughout our school programs we must have primary concern for the personal worth of each child and the dedication to help each one realize his/her potential to the fullest possible extent.

"This means all students must be properly prepared with the basic or fundamental skills so necessary for success in a complex and ever changing world. Individual needs should be of highest priority but the need for self-discipline is an imperative and must evolve from the combined efforts of parent and teacher.

"The parents' role in the education of their children can no longer be seen as optional. Inspiration, motivation, and a quest for knowing begin at home where learning must enjoy a high priority.

"Only the combined efforts of teachers and parents with compatible or parallel philosophies will result in the best efforts directed at educating children. Parents must understand and participate in the school's program if success is to be realized.

"Morality, integrity, and respect for the ideals of our country must evolve from a healthy respect for others and for self.

"It is the school's responsibility to stimulate creative thinking, curiosity, and imagination in all children while affording them myriad opportunities to experience and appreciate the beauty and wonders of their environments.

"We must develop and promote high aspirations and leadership in a warm and accepting climate.

"Finally, each child's opportunity for love, self-realization, and the highest quality of education possible is not only his/her right, but also is indeed our mandate."

Dr. James Bowman

Bowman and his wife Gloria have lived in Des Moines several years now and they have two daughters, Gail, who is studying law at Harvard University and Linda Lane, who is a teacher at Greenwood Elementary in Des Moines.

Go to College In Your Home

The college dream can come true, at least partly, for Iowans who, for one reason or another, are unable to attend regular classes on a campus. Polk County Extension Director, Ober J. Anderson, says that through the University of Mid-America, credits can be earned by watching television, listening to the radio, or reading a newspaper!

The University of Mid-America is an organization of state universities in six midwestern states. It offers courses to anyone, using mass media as one of the teaching methods. Iowans may earn credits from either the University of Iowa or Iowa State University when they register for and complete a UMA course. Since UMA came to Iowa last spring, more than 320 Iowans have received credits.

Three home-study courses will be offered by UMA when the winter-spring term begins in early February. "Classic Theatre," a series of 13 plays, will be aired weekly over IPBN TV stations.

"Moral Choices in Contemporary Society," a balanced study of moral problems in modern America, will appear weekly in several newspapers around the state, including the Ottumwa Courier, the Cedar Rapids Gazette, the Council Bluffs Nonpareil and the Creston News-Advertiser. "Introduction to Symphonic Music" will be broadcast in two programs a week over WOI-AM radio.

Persons registering for any of the courses will also receive textbooks, a study guide, and other course materials. ISU or UI instructors will be available to answer questions via toll-free telephone. Learning centers in 16 locations around the state including Des Moines will be open for review and exams.

Tuition for the UMA courses is the same as the basic ISU or UI tuition. Books and study materials cost extra. Persons interested in more information may contact the Polk County Extension Office at 284-4158, Des Moines, or write UMA, 111 Curtiss, ISU, Ames, 50011.

The contract calls for a salary of $9,800 for starting teachers, up $450 from the current year, an increase of 4.8 per cent. Top salary under the contract would be $19,704, an increase of $891 over the $18,813 this year.

The top salary is paid to teachers with a doctor's degree and at least 16 years experience.

The joint announcement, by Walter Galvin, executive director of the DMEA, and Dr. Donald Prine, negotiations specialist for the Des Moines Public Schools, said the economic package includes increased salary, insurance and supplemental pay benefits.

In addition to the economic package, the contract covers procedures for evaluation, transfer, staff reduction, inservice training and settlement of grievances.

MESSIAH TEMPLE

The Second Sunday of the new year came with "The Recipe For A Happy and Prosperous New Year", from our Pastor Rev. Reed.

Marva Frazier was in charge of Sunday School again, leading us in prayer after we sung Leaning on The Everlasting Arms.

Our Sunday School lessons are always a blessing because our teachers study the Word of God before they come to class. They dig down and get the nugget out of God's Word, so they can present it to the class.

We're looking forward to Sister Ott being back with us; she's recovering from surgery.

PUSH Sets Ethics In Media Conferences

Reverend Jesse L. Jackson, national president of operation PUSH (People United To Save Humanity), today announced that the first in a year long series of five regional and one national conferences on "Ethics in the Media" will be held in Chicago, Illinois on January 14-15 in the PUSH National Headquarters, 930 East 50th Street (60615).

Though each of the conferences will be open to persons from any part of the country, this first "Midwest Conference" will focus on the ten states of Illinois, Indiana, Missouri, Ohio, Michigan, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Nebraska, Iowa and Kentucky.

Reverend Jackson said: "We must come to grips with the many forms of decadence that are presently morally corrupting our society. Sex without responsibility on the radio and killing without cause on the television must be challenged. The radio, television, record and movie industries, as the primary distributors of information in the society, have become powerful instruments for climate setting and value orienting in our culture."

"Their responsibility must be equal to their power and ability to influence the citizenry. 'Shake Your Booty', 'It's Alright to make Love on the First Night' and other contemporary songs are not positive or mature messages of love for our young people and encourage an attitude of sex without responsibility."

The two day conference will begin at 12 noon on Friday, January 14th and continue into early afternoon on the 15th. Reverend Jackson said: "We are challenging a major industry with a wide range of vertical and horizontal economically interdependent relationships. We must challenge this broad industry because the various segments can't solve it by themselves and will be tempted to pass-the-buck."

Each of us (individually and collectively) must assume our rightful responsibility to pull our load where we are to the degree that we can."

Therefore we are inviting representation from the Federal Communications Commission, broadcast and recording associations, station owners, station managers, program directors, disc jockeys, advertisers, ad agencies, record company executives, entertainers, writers, record producers, and distributors, and anyone else associated with the industry. Religious leaders, interested local and national media groups, consumers (listeners / viewers) and concerned citizens are also invited to attend."

The conference will consist of workshops, panel discussions and speakers defining and coming to grips with the various issues involved as well as strategies and tactics for action and mobilization for the future.

For further information or contact Reverend Frank E. Watkins, National Director of Communications for Operation PUSH, 930 East 50th Street, Chicago, Illinois, 60615, or call (312) 373-3366.

MT. OLIVE BAPTIST CHURCH

Sunday morning's 11 a.m. message was delivered by the Pastor Reverend H. R. Fields, from 32 Psalm, verse 8 which reads: I will instruct thee and teach thee in the way thou should go.

Sis. Carol Ousley reunited with the church on Christian experience.

Next Sunday morning at the 11 a.m. service, a special Mission Offering will be taken which will be used to help defray the expenses of our Convention State President, Reverend George Parrish, who will be leaving on a preaching tour of Africa. Mt. Olive members are asked to participate in this endeavor.

The following Mt. Olive members are hospitalized: Brother Bert Moody, ICU-Mercy Hospital; Brother Roosevelt Johnson, Mercy Hospital, Brother Norman Brown, Younkers Rehabilitation Center. Please remember them in your prayers.

OBITUARIES

MARY ELLA REED

Services were held at 1 p.m. Monday at the Union Baptist Church for Mary Ella Reed, 48, of 1621 Cleveland Ave., who died Friday at Mercy Hospital of cancer. Burial was at Laurel Hill Cemetery.

Born in New Franklin, Mo., Mrs. Reed lived in Des Moines for 27 years. She was a retired cooking supervisor at Veterans Hospital and was a member of Union Baptist Church.

Survivors include her husband, James; two sons, Paul and Ronald, both of Des Moines; four brothers, James Ralph of Detroit, Mich., John Ralph of Columbus, Mo., Tommy Ralph of Rockford, Ill., and Leon Stapleton of Kansas City, Mo.; and a grandchild.

MRS. MAGGIE FIELDS JOHNSON

Mrs. Maggie Fields Johnson, 71, of 1125 Tenth St. died of a kidney ailment Sunday at Elm Crest Nursing Center, 2348 E. Ninth St., after a lengthy illness.

Services were held at 1 p.m. Wednesday at Estes and Son Funeral Home, with burial in Glendale Cemetery.

Mrs. Johnson was a native of Bunceton, Mo., and lived in Des Moines 45 years.

Surviving are a sister, Mrs. Helen Mae Wright of Boonville, Mo., and a brother, Eugene Fields of Bunceton.

Six years ago, a group of spirit-filled young people organized themselves to sing praises to the "Glory of God." They had no name, place to rehearse, and were unknown by the public. But a strong determination and the center being Jesus, with the Holy Ghost leading and teaching, they began a ministry of song that was spread wherever these young people went. On a trip to Detroit, God gave them the name of "Inspirational Youth Fellowship Choir."

HOLLIE C. CHERRY

We sincerely hope that you will be able to come to Washington and participate in the Inauguration of Jimmy Carter and Walter Mondale. You are entitled to view and take part in the two major Inaugural events: The Inaugural Ceremony, which will take place at 11:30 a.m., Thursday, January 20, and the Inaugural Parade on Pennsylvania Avenue, which follows at 1:30 p.m., January 20.

There are some Inaugural events which will require special tickets for admission. We deeply regret that, due to the limitation of space, this invitation cannot be honored at those events. We would like more than anything to be able to invite everybody to every Inaugural event, but we know that you understand and hope that you'll take advantage of the hundreds of things to see and do in Washington during Inaugural Week. KEOKUK — Ottumwa High School boys appeared headed on their way to snapping a five-game losing streak Saturday night. That was until the third quarter came along.

The Keokuk cagers rallied from a 12-point deficit and went on to defeat the Bulldogs 58-55 in the first boys basketball contest played in the renovated Wright Fieldhouse.

Ottumwa (1-7) led 32-20 with two minutes left in the first half despite suffering 11 of its 12 first half turnovers in the second quarter.

Keokuk (4-4) closed within 32-24 at intermission and scored two quick baskets to start the third quarter to get back into contention 32-28.

That was about the time the Bulldogs' board man, Jim Nickerson, went to the sidelines with a bad ankle twist. The Purple Chiefs made the opportunity a golden one scoring on numerous offensive rebounds.

In the third quarter the Bulldogs were outscored 21-11 as Keokuk hit 10 of 24 shots. For the entire game Keokuk was 25-68 compared to 22 of 52 for Ottumwa.

Ottumwa hit 7 of 18 attempts in the first quarter and 8 of 12 in the second to roll away. But the Bulldogs could manage just 7 of 19 for the entire second half.

"We had a chance to put things away in the second quarter, but turnovers slowed us," said OHS coach Bill Kramer. "The thing that killed us was Keokuk's offensive rebounding in the third quarter."

Keokuk moved from a 45-43 lead at the start of the final period to a six-point margin with four minutes remaining.

The Bulldogs came back within 55-54 and tied it at 55-all with a minute left. Keokuk scored for the decisive basket. Ottumwa had three possessions but failed to connect due to a missed shot, offensive foul and a turnover.

Junior Erick Winston, the Bulldogs' top scorer on the team, finished with 18 points having an excellent first half hitting seven of 12 shots.

Sophomore Ron Harshman finished with 13 and Nickerson added 11. Nickerson led in rebounding with 9 rebounds and had 4 steals. Kevin Carroll had 7 rebounds and Joe Curran 5 steals.

ENTERTAINMENT WORLD

Stevie Wonder's genius makes "Songs" best in '76

Since roughly two and a half years have elapsed since the last Stevie Wonder album, the fantastic "Fulfillingness' First Finale," everyone expected the long-awaited new product to be something special.

Yet when pressed most people had to admit that deep down inside there was the nagging fear that the album might not live up to such great expectations. Well, those fears were unfounded because "Songs In The Key of Life" is the most exquisite, diverse, nearly perfect album of the past year.

Many years ago, in 1962 to be exact, when comedian-emcee Bill Murray introduced "Little Stevie Wonder" to the audience of the Apollo Theater, he was described as the "genius of our time."

Indeed the young fellow was extraordinarily talented but today he actually is the genius of our time, not only as singer but as songwriter, producer, arranger, musician... and humanitarian.

When America (and the whole world) enjoyed Stevie's numerous hits of the 60's and early 70's not many recognized the greatness that was developing and would blossom in the mid 70's.

And by the way, those great records of the past must never be overlooked, including "Signed, Sealed, Delivered I'm Yours," "I Was Made to Love Her," "Uptight," "My Cherie Amour," "Fingertips," "Yester-you, Yester-me, Yesterday," "Blowin' In The Wind" and "Castles in the Sand" among others. (A Stevie Wonder anthology would be nice to have right, Motown?)

But back to "Songs In The Key of Life." In addition to his phenomenal talent, an intriguing aspect of the Motown superstar's musical persona is his boundless imagination and his determination to create music that is not only A-1 in quality and general appeal but unique as well.

A perfect example is "Village Ghetto Land," the lyrics of which describe certain grim realities of at least a portion of the ghetto with a heavy symphonic musical accompaniment which is strange and yet somehow very appropriate.

Another is the exceptionally beautiful mid-tempo "Pastime Paradise" which is captivating in an almost hypnotic way and makes brilliant use of words ending in "tion."

Actually with the exception of "Ordinary Pain"—a decidedly bland song utilizing several female vocalists—"Songs in the Key of Life" is a double album—plus containing nothing but winners, some fast and funky ("All Day Sucker," "I Wish") some slow and litely beautiful ("If It's Magic," "Joy Inside My Tears") others defying classification of any sort, such as the rollicking "Sir Duke" and the bouncy "Ebony Eyes" although the albums' tour de force in this respect is the charming and melodic "Isn't She Lovely?" "Have a Talk With God" is gutty piece of Wondersque gospel which is a smoker.

"Easy Goin' Evening" is a lazy, moody bit of jazz instrumental with Stevie's harmonica out front and "Contusion" is perhaps the definitive progressive funk-rock jazz instrumental. And there's more too.

To put it as succinctly as possible, Stevie Wonder's "Songs in the Key of Life" is a masterpiece.

"The myth and reality" of Big Government charges are explored with a surgeon's scalpel by Senator Gary Hart (D., Colo.) in a speech he delivered before the Western Electronic Manufacturers' Assn., earlier in 1976.

And I agree with most of his findings. I am, however, troubled that he did not emphasize more the fact that individuals not corporations now bear the brunt of current federal taxation.

But I found some of his findings absolutely astounding as I am certain you will. For example: "The Federal Bureaucracy, of course, is people — federal employees. In 1974, the Federal Government employed about five million persons. But ... that was almost exactly the same number of federal employees on the payroll 13 years earlier, back in the year 1961."

Moreover, Hart points out, not only has a huge expansion in federal employment not occurred, a significant number of important government agencies are noticeably smaller. For example, three major agencies are smaller now than they were in 1961 — the Department of Defense, Department of State and the Agency for International Development (AID). The Departments of Interior, Agriculture and Postal Service were also smaller in 1975 than in 1970.

So while critics point out that new agencies are created and others grow, they fail to mention an important fact: agencies also cut back. Hart is relentless. He goes on: "One statistically sound way to measure the size of the bureaucracy is to compare it, year by year, with the population."

This tells how many of each 1,000 citizens are now working in government. In 1950 13 out of every 11,000 persons were civilian government employees. In 1955, 14 out of every 1,000 were federal employees. Jumping 20 years later — to 1975 — we discover the statistic is exactly the same: 14 out of every 1,000 citizens are civilian employees."

The same with payroll. In 1950, the payroll amounted to 16 percent of the federal budget. In 1960, it was 14 percent, in 1975 it was 13 percent. Sixty four percent of the five million federal employees in 1975 worked in just one huge agency: Department of Defense.

This amounts to a 3.2 million — civilians and citizens in uniform. But the next giant agency is the U.S. Postal Service with about 700,000 employees. The Postal Service is three times larger than any other agency except Defense. HEW — the welfare giant — has only 139,000 employees and Treasury, a total of 126,000.

So most of "Big Government" is employed largely in Defense and delivering our mail. "Big Government" charges apply more accurately to the state and local governments than to the federal. Hart points out that in "1960 there were about 5.5 million state and local government employees. By 1975 that had more than doubled to 11.7 million. This growth occurred not in distant Washington, but in the government closest to the people."

Most local government workers (nearly half) were employed as teachers or in other support roles in our educational system. About one million are police and another million are firemen.

So the majority of local and state government employees are in the educational and security systems of local government. A much smaller number is employed in the delivery of welfare and other social services.

Gary takes a whack at charges of "Big Government" spending. In 1952, federal budget was about 19 percent of the nation's gross national product. In 1973, the percentage amounted to 20.9 percent of the national budget, or just about the same.

In 1951 and Federal Government collected about 20 cents of every dollar of good and services produced in the U.S. A decade later, the collection percentage was the same. In 1973, however, the government took 21 cents in every dollar.

But in concrete terms federal tax burden has not changed significantly in 25 years. Only the burden has been shifted from corporations to individuals. In the three critical areas, then he unmasks "Big Government" changes as unfounded.

"The federal bureaucracy is not an expanding octopus," he says, applying facts and figures to any stubborn beliefs. "On the contrary it has remained about the same size. Federal spending has grown in production with the economy and inflation — maintaining a roughly constant share of our output of goods and services.

I have always felt, as does Senator Hart, that the problem of "Big Government" really is the expectations of our citizens. Big Government promises so much, it raises our expectations it cannot deliver, thus the public is highly disillusioned.

For a liberal Senator, Hart is taking a conservative stance: people in a society that no longer has an unlimited frontier must begin to rely more on themselves. I share that view. I do not believe, however, that the burden of federal taxation should be shifted from corporations who are best equipped to pay, to individuals, who may not be so well equipped. (NNPA)

Sammy Slows, Money Grows

Is Sammy Davis Jr. fading in show business now that he is past 50 years old?

Not if his account books tell the story. Sammy still grosses anywhere between 3 to 5 million dollars a year, the IRS will testify.

But Sammy does admit he's slowing down and has trouble doing those sizzling dance routines he was always famous for.

"I need two weeks at least by myself just to get my legs in shape to dance," he admits. "When you get older you have to practice."

Sammy and Lisa Minelli were set to appear together in a Florida hotel with the tab a whopping $250 for the night.

Chicago Welfare Queen

She's known as Chicago's "Welfare Queen," and even became embroiled in presidential politics when Ronald Reagan used her "80 names, 30 addresses, 12 Social Security cards" and "tax-free cash income of over $150,000" as an example of welfare abuse.

To prosecutors she's Linda Taylor, 47, who is charged in a relatively mild indictment of using four aliases to get $8,000 in welfare money.

Even so, the case has been stalled since the indictment was returned in November, 1974, and she has yet to go to court.

LOOK ON SPORTS

Now that we have got football out of the way, it is time to turn our attention to basketball. But first just a little more football.

I trust you saw the alleged football Super Bowl game Sunday. When I kept hearing people say about how many times the Vikings had been to the top of the mountain and never made it over that top, I was reminded what someone said about Arthur Ash when folks were reminded that he had lost more final matches than anyone else they could think of.

In order to lose final matches you have to get to the finals. And you have to win your way there. Nobody just puts you into the finals. So, in order for Minnesota to lose four Super Bowl games, they had to be in em, and they weren't defaulted into any of them. I know how they must have felt. You want to win something so very much, and keep losing it. Then you think this time you might have a chance. A bad roll at the start, and you begin to get the fear of losing deep down inside. So you try to do desperate things to avoid losing, and make foolish mistakes that cost. Or you just get numb and don't do anything. One has to have been in that position to appreciate it. How do I know? I have been there in tennis and basketball, so I am speaking from bitter experience. Will they get over it? Yes, it isn't the end of the world, and one has to go on, because there is always tomorrow.

And now to basketball

Perfect records are being spread all over the place. I have to repeat my former assertion that there won't be a major unbeaten team come tournament time. In fact, this could be the first NCAA meet in thirteen years without UCLA. The Uclans could maybe make it as a wild card team, but they might not win the Pac Eight title this year.

Around the country there are Alabama and teams on both the East and West Coast, but they will likely fall at least once. Iowa after staging a comeback against Minnesota would have to be given a chance to finish high in the conference, and with a slim chance at taking it all.

By the way one of the unbeaten teams around is the Gophers.

But in spite of the experts Michigan doesn't have the title locked up by any means. The Big Eight could be a wild scramble also, and Iowa State just may not finish in the cellar as they are supposed to. Drake seems to have jelled, or have they caught a string of patsys. Three in a row? Maybe.

From what folks tell me, the Bulldogs could get really tough by the middle of the season. Looks like an interesting year for round ball.

So much for that. The Metro conference race isn't as close to being settled as one might think. Valley has suddenly awakened and bids to make that scramble a three way affair. It seems as if East, North and Tech aren't going anywhere, but one of them could well have a hot night and put a dent in the leader's marks.

I still think that the only cure for Tech is to have some fellows who have enough time to go out for the various sports. They tell me that good athletes have to pass up things like football, basketball and such because they have to work.

The story in the Register about the girls who have to work as well as play reminded me of the situation of the boys. They are in the same bind, and I just done know what can be done about.

At one time I thought that good coaches could be the answer, but no matter how good a coach is he has to have the players.

And another thing. I have been intending to come up with a list of the scores from the black schools, and I shall yet. Do you know that you can scan the pages of the dailies and you will be lucky to locate a half dozen scores from black schools. Don't ask me why. I thought they used the same wire service that the others do, but maybe they don't. But, starting next week, I will have some scores here.

There is a lot of talk about the difference between sports as the old timers played then and the kids today. After analyzing the sports, I can see very little difference except in wrestling where the game is as far away from the pro game as night is from day, but in the basic team sports, football, basketball, and baseball, the main difference seems to be the size of the players.

Then there are the specialists who go into a game to do one thing where the old players did it all. So both teams got equally tired and the best conditioned club won.

Today it is often won by the guy who can do just one thing. This stamina thing is the main reason we have no tiebreaker in our Hilltop tennis matches. We believe that endurance and such are an important part of the game of tennis, and as long as the rule book says we can have our option, we are going to play it like it was when you played until somebody dropped.

Jewish Congress joins NAACP in Bell opposition

The American Jewish Congress, Friday, Jan. 14 opposed the nomination of Griffin B. Bell as Attorney General and urged that "the most comprehensive examination of his personal and professional history be undertaken before a vote is held."

Rabbi Arthur Hertzberg, president of the Congress, said in telegrams to members of the Senate Judiciary Committee that his organization joined the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People in voicing "grave doubts concerning Mr. Bell's fitness for the post."

"Should new information develop contrary to what the hearings have revealed thus far," Rabbi Hertzberg said, "we will of course reconsider our position."

In its message to the Senate Committee, the American Jewish Congress declared:

"At a time when the

ISRAEL ASSISTS MOSLEMS IN PILGRIMAGE TO MECCA

A farwell ceremony held in Gaza recently for the region's Mecca pilgrims was attended by some 200 notables, including the Israeli commander of the Gaza Strip, the Mayor of Gaza (Haj Rashid as-Shawwa) and the president of the "Sharia" or Moslem religious court, who addressed the pilgrims.

This year about 3,000 residents of the district set out on the 'Haj' for Mecca. The military government took special steps to facilitate the pilgrims' exit across the Jordan bridges and their return to the Gaza Strip.

Saudi Arabia allows the Moslems of Gaza, Samaria and the Old City of Jerusalem to perform the pilgrimage to Mecca, but discriminates against nearly 400,000 Moslems who hold Israeli nationality. Since 1948, these Moslems have been denied the right to perform the pilgrimage, one of the cardinal precepts of Islam. Presumably, Saudi Arabia is still incensed against these Arabs for having elected to live in Israel since 1948 and for ignoring the call of the Arab governments to become refugees.

Of all the millions of Moslems across the globe, only those with Israeli passports are singled out for discrimination by the "Protector of the Moslem Holy Cities," as the King of Saudi Arabia is styled.

Warns Carter about jobs for women

The only woman among Carter's top White House staff members, Margaret Costanza, says she'll take the President-Elect to task if he doesn't do enough to put women in key jobs. She says she feels an effort is being made, but she doesn't yet know to what degree Carter aides have sought out women for posts.

symbolic nature of the Attorney General's office has assumed ever-greater importance for the American people, the person designated for that position must be one whose past record and present attitudes justify both confidence and respect.

"Mr. Bell's support of the Supreme Court nomination of Judge Carswell, his role as architect of Governor Vandiver's massive resistance of desegregation, his membership in clubs that exclude Blacks and Jews, his decision supporting the Georgia Legislature's refusal to seat Julian Bond — these are, in our judgment, sufficient reasons to justify the fear and discomfort which many Americans feel toward his designation. Such a man cannot inspire confidence and respect."

Office Too Important to 'Take Me on Faith'

In his telegram, Rabbi Hertzberg said: "We do not for a moment question Mr. Bell's sincerity as he pledges fairness and justice for all should he be confirmed as Attorney General of the United States."

"But that office is too important to permit confirmation on the basis of promises and his pleas to 'take me on faith.'"

"The influence of an Attorney General goes far beyond what may be seen in his public acts. It includes advice to the President on critical public issues and on his appointment of Supreme Court, Circuit Court and District Court judges, United States attorneys and a host of other important policy-making positions.

"It includes supervision of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, the Bureau of Prisons and the other parts of the Department of Justice. It includes the power to make decisions on what prosecutions to start, what appeals to take, what wiretaps to authorize and what investigations to launch."

"The only assurance that

A Chance To Win $10,000 Cooking Contest

If you often get compliments on your good chicken cooking, here's a chance to be a winner in the big chicken cooking contest. It's worth a try for there are many ways to win in this contest.

First prize is $10,000; second, $4,000; third, $3,000 fourth, $2,000 and fifth, $1,000. Each of the 51 finalists one from each state and the District of Columbia wins $100 a trophy and much more.

According to the National Chicken Cooking Contest, all you have to do is pick out your best chicken recipes and make changes in them so that they meet the contest requirements. Cook your new recipe over and over, making changes according to your tastes, until you are happy with it, then send it in.

Now for the requirements: Your recipe (or recipes) must each include a broiler-fryer (2 to 3½ pound) chicken (or it can call for any part or parts). It must also include at least ¼ cup Mazola corn oil and at least 1 teaspoon Ac'cent flavor enhancer. Each recipe should make about 4 servings and use only ingredients that you believe are nationally available. Make sure, too, that all ingredients amounts are exact and that the instructions in your recipes are complete.

The recipes will be judged on simplicity, interest, appearance and flavor. Each recipe should take no more than 3 hours total preparation time, for that's all that will be allowed at the cook-offs.

From recipes that are mailed in, judges will pick five or so recipes from each state. Then, through cook-offs in each of the 50 states plus DC, the state finalists will be selected by the judges. Each finalist receives an expenses-paid trip to the national cook-off on July 27, in Jackson, Mississippi. In this cook-off the 51 states and DC winners will cook their dishes to be judged for the five big money prizes.

All kinds of recipes have won in past years including many national and ethnic type dishes. The recipe here for Spicy African Chicken, a popular stew made with Chicken, vegetables and farina is an example of how to write a contest recipe entry.

When you have your own recipes ready, mail them, with your name, address and telephone number clearly written

TRY THIS RECIPE FOR SPICY AFRICAN CHICKEN. It's the type of chicken dish African cooks often serve. Because the recipe given here meets all the rules for the 1977 National Chicken Cooking Contest, making it may also help you get started preparing your own recipes for the big contest.

Spicy African Chicken

1 broiler - fryer chicken, cut in parts; 1 teaspoon Ac'cent flavor enhancer; ¼ cup Mazola corn oil; ½ cup chopped onion; 3 cups water; 1½ teaspoons salt; ¼ teaspoon pepper; ¼ teaspoon ground ginger; 1/16 teaspoon cayenne; 2 medium turnips, peeled and sliced; 4 carrots, cut in 1 inch pieces; 1 medium soft-skin squash, sliced; 2 cups cooked farina or rice.

Sprinkle chicken with flavor enhancer. In large skillet, heat corn oil over medium heat. Brown chicken on all sides. Add onion; cook until tender. Add water, salt, pepper, ginger, and cayenne. Cover and cook gently 15 minutes. Add turnips and carrots; cook 15 minutes. Add squash and cook 10 minutes, or until vegetables are tender. Serve with farina or rice. Makes 4 servings.

on each to: Chicken Contest, Box 28158, Central Station, Washington, DC 20005. They must be postmarked no later than March 1, 1977.

For a recipe folder with more contest information and recipes that won first prizes in the past, send a self-addressed, stamped envelope to: "Six $10,000 Chicken Recipes" at the same address.

The contest is sponsored by The National Broiler Council and the makers of Mazola Corn Oil and Ac'cent Flavor enhancer.

inequality of income distribution in America.

In 1947, the top five percent of all individuals received 33 percent of the income, in 1975 the figure was only 19 percent. At the lower end of the scale, the poorest 20 percent in 1947 received 2.9 percent of all income going to individuals, and in 1975, this share had risen to four percent.

This means that blacks had best keep pace with the changes in income distribution in the population or slip even further behind.

There seems to be emerging three new district income groups in America, the older retired pension person, the matured married female and the educated young adult. These groups have the extra money available in today's economy.

Blacks, about 12 percent of the population, account for 18 percent of high school drop-outs. Howard University Institute for the study of Educational Policy, researchers found that in the fall of 1974, there were 10.3 million high school drop-outs in the age range of the college availability pool.

No equal opportunity commission or affirmative action program can get them back in school. On the road for freedom, don't stop for racism, keep right on running. NNPA.

January Is Month for Black History

On New Year's Day 123 years ago the first college in the U.S. was chartered in the state of Pennsylvania.

Sponsored by the Presbyterian Church, the school then called the Ashmun Institute was set up on 30 acres of land in Chester County. 12 years later in 1866 its name was changed to Lincoln University after the assassinated President.

Lincoln University became the first of what would grow into 120 black colleges in the 20th Century.

First named for Jehudi Ashmun, a missionary who gave his life in the early settlement of Liberia, Lincoln University actually had its beginnings at a meeting of the Presbytery at New Castle, Pa., on October 5, 1853 when it was decided to start an institution "for the scientific, classical and theological education of colored youth of the male sex."

The land for the new school was bought in November of that year for $1,250 and the legislature granted the charter in 1854, empowering the trustees to admit students of all religious denominations
"who exhibit a fair moral character and are willing to yield a ready obedience to the general regulations prescribed for the conduct of pupils."

The school was formerly dedicated at the end of 1856 and has been in operation ever since, among its most prominent alumni being prominent educator Horace Mann Bond.

that Harris would probably be confirmed to the Cabinet post. "You are nevertheless going to be confirmed," he said. "Because anyone in the Senate these days who calls for qualifications other than brains and character for Cabinet officers is regarded as somehow unrealistic, and you certainly have both brains and character."

WivesPhoneListing

(New York) — The New York Telephone Company has given in to liberated wives who want their names listed with their husbands in the telephone directory.

But the firm says it will have to charge 25 cents extra. The proposal is subject to approval by the state public service commission.

The telephone company says the extra two-bits is a nominal fee considering the cost of processing the additional names.

Bell

From page 1

Fifth U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans, La.
and wrote a letter recommending Carswell to the Supreme Court. Bell said Tuesday he wrote the letter partly out of parochial pride in a fellow southerner, partly because of friendship with a former law school classmate and partly because he thought Carswell's trial experience would be an asset to the high court.

"That's just a part of my record. I'll have to stand on it," he said. "When I die, I'm sure they'll have on my tombstone: 'He wrote a letter for Judge Harrold Carswell.'"

As an advisor to Georgia Gov. Ernest Vandiver in the late 1950's, Bell said he acted as a moderating influence on segregationists who were threatening to close the state's public schools rather than follow the Supreme Court's decision ordering integration.

President John Kennedy appointed Bell to the bench in 1961. He served 15 years before returning to law practice last spring.

Questioned about his views on civil rights and political issues, Bell said, "I've never professed to be an activist.
I've never professed to be an extreme liberal. I've always professed to be a moderate.
I've always thought that only moderates should be on the bench."

Business in the Black

By Charles E. Belle

The first problem for black youth in attempting to acquire a job is racism in America. The second is their lack of a quality education.
These two giants are gunning down too many of our young people. There is hope only for the well educated and trained thinkers of the future.

In 1982, enrollment in engineering schools across the country will have minority students equal to their proportions in the nation's population. There are no shortages of jobs for engineers.

We need more black doctors, dentists, nurses, administrators and advanced business degree people. The nation needs more plumbers, welders, electricians, carpenters,

craftsmen, contractors,
police officers, truck drivers,
crane operators, typists, stenographers, security guards and seemingly thousands of more trained people.

The fact is that while the job market in general is expanding, for unskilled and little educated workers the job market has been in a steady decline for years. A look at distribution of income to individuals shows a decided decrease in the
