Remanded For New Trial

U.S. Supreme Court Reverses Williams Case

Victim Disappears While Watching Wrestling Meet

Although bitterly divided, the U.S. Supreme Court Wednesday overturned the 1969 murder conviction of Robert Anthony Williams for the slaying of 10-year-old Pamela Powers.

The sharply divided high court ruled Williams was convicted by evidence obtained by police without an attorney being present, a violation of a constitutional right.

Pamela Powers was killed on Christmas Eve 1968 while attending a wrestling meet at the Des Moines YMCA to watch her brother compete. The search for her began when she failed to return from a trip to the restroom.

Williams, a self-proclaimed minister and escaped mental patient, had a room at the YMCA and was seen by three people leaving the building carrying a large bundle wrapped in a blanket.

Two days later William's car was found in Davenport and a warrant for his arrest was issued. He telephoned the late attorney Henry McKnight in Des Moines and was advised to surrender to Davenport police which Williams did.

While being transported from Davenport to Des Moines, Williams led police to the place where Pamela Power's sexually molested body was found.

Testimony at the trial showed Williams escaped from the state mental

A Night In Jail

by Edna Griffin

I spent last Wednesday night in jail graciously volunteered and highly recommended by a friend!

My husband and I had our last meal together before taking me to First and Mulberry. Chief Nichols knew we were coming.

Orders were issued for all crawling things to "ship out" and remain at least four blocks away for the night. I reported, as instructed to Sgt. Stanley where I met two other women volunteers.

Dressed in several layers of clothes, "North Pole" parka over my arm, and an over-the-shoulder canvas bag full of toiletries and a book, I was prepared for the night. I don't remember what the Sargent had to say - only an impression that I was not there as far as he was concerned. I think my companions missed that in the midst of their questions and the Sargent's answers.

In due time, we were taken to the booking room where we turned in our money, watches and rings for safe keeping. We were fingerprinted and then frisked by the matron before joining her on the second floor where she briefed us concerning her responsibilities and problems.

We were told the inmates were looking forward to our visit. Inmates folders were reviewed without giving any of their names. We realized our reception depended upon us. Our arms full of bedding, the cell door was opened for us to enter. It helped to know that we were free to leave at any time when I heard that key lock the barred door.

"My name is Edna". After a brief silence, I heard three or four other names. The other volunteer inmates gave their names. More silence. Someone pointed to the available bunks. I chose a top bunk with the idea of being close to the light to read.

There was some laughter at my hassle up there with my bedding. There was sudden alarm I might break my neck getting down from my bunk. Detailed instructions were suddenly given.

Parrish Serves The Community

by J. R. McCrea
and
Bonnie Forrester

As the second of our series of articles honoring local Black citizens who are actively involved in the community, the New Iowa Bystander would like to salute Al Parrish, an attorney at law in the cities of Des Moines and Waterloo.

Parrish feels deeply sympathetic with people in need of legal help but who are unable to afford the services of a lawyer. He frequently takes cases for clients who don't even have enough money to pay the retainer fee. He feels cases should be worked on the basis of legal merit and need rather than the ability of the client to pay.

As a lawyer Parrish's major area of practice is in criminal law and personal injuries.

Parrish's most famous case came earlier this year when he represented T. J. Wilder, a wrestler from East High School in Waterloo, in his attempt to end the ban on his participation in the state wrestling meet.

Wilder had been charged on January 26 with robbery with aggravation in a holdup of a Waterloo gas station.

Because of the charges, which were later dropped for lack of evidence, Wilder was ruled ineligible for competition by Waterloo school administrators.

Following a successful attempt by Parrish to win an injunction against the Waterloo administration ban, Wilder had to again resort to court to be allowed to compete. This action, taken against the Iowa High School Athletic Association (IHSAA), was required because the tournament officials had filled Wilder's spot in the tourney with another wrestler.

Wilder and Parrish are currently seeking redress in the well-publicized case with a suit pending against the IHSAA and Waterloo school officials.

Parrish is currently at work on a meeting of Black lawyers and law students for the discussion of pre-paid legal services. The meeting, organized by Parrish and Charles Knox and sponsored by the National Conference of Black Lawyers, will be held Thursday March 24 at 6:00 at the National Motor Inn.

Parrish says that "this will be the first step in a series of meetings to see that legal services are reaching the middle class and poor people in our society."

Parrish believes that 70% of the people in our society do not have access to lawyers due to prohibitive cost. The Black lawyer group will seek ways to expand legal services to the poor.

In addition to his courtroom practice, Parrish keeps busy with his positions on the Gateway Board, the Polk County Mental Health Board, and the Citizens United for Responsible Surgery. He also assists in many other charitable organizations.

Parrish was born in Alabama, one of four children. In 1965 he was an exchange student in the British Isles. He later attended the University of Dubuque, receiving his degree in 1967. He went on to law school at the University of Iowa, graduating in 1970.

Parrish recently decided to open a second law office in Waterloo following the publicity he received from his efforts for Wilder. The move is keeping him extra busy but he feels that multi-city law practice is the wave of the future.

VIEWS and REVIEWS

by James B. Morris

No Place in Armed Service for Labor Unions

In the early days of the labor union movement, seemingly, industry became drunk with power. The mistreatment of labor in those days, involved goons who used clubs to keep the members in the line and the financial strength of industry created bad working conditions, poor pay, child labor and other tactics that were designed to put fear in the hearts of the workers.

Progressive minded citizens and members of congress reacted against these conditions and brought about a gradual change in most of them. Then came President Franklin Roosevelt who opened the door to complete organization of labor and provided machinery to enforce the demands of the workers.

In recent years, policemen, firemen, teachers and others in public work were organized. Later, catering and food handling industry were also organized and today practically every group in every kind of work has some type of union organization.

I am not opposed to union labor, but strikes by policemen, firemen, school teachers and other public servants for the protection of the public and the education of our children go beyond reason and, in many cases, have caused difficult situations in that no substitutes are available to take their places.

The newest thrust is a proposed organization of members of the armed services. This is intolerable and should not be allowed to get off the ground.

Thousands of men and women made a mockery of our laws and their oath during the Vietnamese war when they left for Canada to duck the service or deserted after they were inducted into the service.

We lost 50,000 men and left thousands wounded during the Vietnam war. They answered the call to service believing that it was their duty.

Ordinarily, unions operate under the law and by vote of their members. A number of strikes have occurred when the courts ordered men back to work, but in most cases, the leaders have refused to obey the court order and generally were able to settle the strike using the forgiveness of their criminal acts as a part of the settlement. The same thing would occur in the armed service and the vote of the unions would sometimes disobey the orders of their superiors.

It is true that in some instances many of the members of the armed service have been misused, but striking is no way to settle an issue involving the requirement that they obey orders of their superiors.

Proposed New Campaign Financing Another Bureaucracy

Public financing of presidential elections worked out very well in the 1976 campaign much because only four candidates were eligible to participate in it. However, others applied but were disqualified because they had practically no political organization.

During the debate in congress when the legislation was considered some members of congress suggested that house members should be brought under legislation.

There are 100 members of the senate and 435 members of the lower house. This would mean at least 66 senators running for office every two years and 870 candidates of the congress up for election every two years if each member had an appointment.

In the primaries almost twice that number for each seat would be running and, if the law covers primaries we would be financing almost 2,000 people at every federal election.

It will be difficult to handle situations of this size as the details would be almost unworkable.

This money is paid out of the public treasury and creates another bureaucracy which adds to the already numberless arms of the government.

President Carter, in his campaign, promised to eliminate hundreds of federal departments which he said made the operation of the government more cumbersome. He is submitting a new measure to congress which will include candidates for president and members of congress. This is contrary to what the public looked for even though only four candidates were involved in the 1976 election.

The president also proposes that a person could vote at the time he registered and identified himself. This will lead to many duplications at the polls and would play in the hands of the big political machines in the cities.

Readers Digest Repeats "Roots" Condensations

In an unprecedented publishing action, The Reader's Digest will re-issue its two condensations of Alex Haley's record-breaking book, "Roots." The two condensations from the book, which appeared originally in The Digest's May and June, 1974 issues, will be published again as a bonus to readers in the upcoming April and May issues.

Along with the second installment, to be published in its May issue, The Digest will carry an exclusive article by Mr. Haley, titled "What Roots Means to Me." In his four-page article, Haley discusses the reaction to his book and the TV series: the thousands of inquiries from people, black and white, seeking clues to their own backgrounds. "Personally," he writes, "I have gotten thousands upon thousands of letters in which people pour out their hearts to me, with one recurring poignant line: Help me find out who I am!"

"In all of us," he says, "black, brown, white, there is a desire to make this symbolic journey back to the touchstone of our family."

Surprisingly, Haley says that about 90 percent of his mail is from whites. "The pattern is for the writers to tell me that (1) they are white; (2) Roots caused them to realize they had never understood the black condition; (3) the book started them thinking about their own family."

Noting that the book took him 12 years to do, Haley says that its publication came "at a time of a convergence of social assuagements and a healing political climate. People are starting to find each other," he writes, "and this is where, for me, the meaning of Roots lies."

In his Digest article, Haley notes: "In my long and troubled journeys to complete Roots, I owe an undying debt to The Reader's Digest. Without its help and encouragement Roots could not have been written with the scope that it has. The magazine's support enabled me to make repeated trips to Europe and

NOTICE

The New Iowa Bystander will not publish any letters to the editor unless they are signed by a person's full name, street address and town or city.

Africa. Without it, I could not have afforded the traveling, and consequently, explored my roots."

The Reader's Digest became involved in Mr. Haley's project when he brought Digest editors the idea for Roots in 1966. Haley had previously written several articles for the magazine. Digest editors agreed to support the project, and began to pay Haley a monthly stipend plus travel expenses so that he could continue his research. He delivered the first manuscripts some eight years later, and The Digest published these in its May and June 1974 issues. The first condensation was preceded by a six-page article by Mr. Haley, "My Search for Roots," in which the writer described the impetus for his work and discussed some of his research. That work is to be the basis for Mr. Haley's next book.

Haley notes that, far from taking 12 years of his life, the book has added years "and brought me incomparable rewards." For example, he says that in Los Angeles, a pregnant black woman asked him to autograph two copies of the book. "One is for me," she said; "the other is for him" - and with that she patted her belly.

Haley believes that his book has helped to give blacks, particularly young blacks, an image model.

THE PRESIDENT
THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON, D.C. 20500

Dear Sir;

Despite your Peanut Policy to reinstate public respect, esteem, prestige, faith and trust in the national government, I think that you look pretty hep in your cardigan sweaters.

Jeans also in effect make your appearance more credible and appealing, as well as impressive.

I also think if you tried a wind blown hairstyle and converse tennis shoes that this would make you look even more credible and touchable, in coherence with and in reference to the public common people. The wind blown hair style is not only conservative (the rage on college campuses), but it is leastly, the look for todays business and management minded people.

All in all Mr. President, you crack me up, but you're Pretty Cool, and I dig your style!

Keep on pushin', be happy, and continue to be strong.

Respectfully Yours,

LeClaire Mitchell

Council Delays Dropping Crocker-Scott Bus Route

The Des Moines Citizens Advisory Committee on Transit recommended Monday that service on the Crocker-Scott bus route be reduced but not dropped altogether.

The recommendation would keep intact early morning and late afternoon rush-hour service, but end all midday service to the area, also known as the orange route until July 1. The committee did not define the limits of rush-hour service.

The committee recommendation was formally proposed in a letter to the Mayor and City Council later in the week. The committee has no power over routes or schedules and can only offer advice to the City Council on transit matters.

The committee proposal set the date of July 1 on the midday service curtailment to create a testing period for the route. During this time study will be made of the number of people serviced by the route and ways will be sought to find service for "those groups of citizens needing public transportation during midday hours, specifically the elderly and the blind."

Helen Daly, transit committee chair, estimated the recommendation would cut MTA operating costs $30,000.

Forest Swift, general manager of the MTA, had originally recommended to the MTA trustees cancelling the orange entirely by July 1 studies showed no increase in the number of riders. The trustees, however, voted to cut the route immediately in reaction to pressure from the City Council to spend no more than $90,000 a year on the city's bus service.

It was estimated that elimination of the orange route would save $75,000 a year.

Councilman George Nahas vowed that he would urge the MTA board of trustees to delay and scheduled cancellation of the route on April 4, at least until the next MTA board meeting April 12.

Russell E. Fossett, 67, the son of Mrs. Abbie C. Pease, 84, of Los Angeles, Calif. is capping off a varied 40-year career in teaching, library science and music in Alabama, New York, Massachusetts and California by serving as a Peace Corps volunteer in the South American country of Chile.

He is researching education evaluation methods for the Centro de Perfeccionamiento, a postgraduate training center for Latin American teachers in Santiago, Chile's capital city.

Working as a librarian, Fossett researches information on testing and measurement techniques for the center's new course on education evaluation. The purpose of the course is to teach standard scoring, testing and evaluation devices that could be set up nationwide in Latin American countries.

A 1950 education and modern language graduate of Suffolk University in Boston, Mass., Fossett received a master's degree in library science in 1951 from Simmons College in Boston. He is one of about 80 Peace Corps volunteers serving in forestry, fishery, wildlife, business development, health and nutrition, physical education and teacher training programs in Chile. Around the world, nearly 6,300 Peace Corps volunteers and trainees serve in 65 developing countries.

Minority Business Conference March 31

AMES, IOWA — A mid-winter conference on minority business enterprises (M.B.E.) will be held on March 31, 1977 from 8:00 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. at the Scheman Continuing Education Building on the Iowa State campus, Ames, Iowa. The conference is a federally funded supportive services program sponsored by the Contracts Department of the Iowa Department of Transportation (DOT).

The goals of the M.B.E. conference are to: identify problems of minority contractors in Iowa; structure plans and procedures for providing assistance to minority contractors; establish relationships with the Office of Minority Business Enterprise (O.M.B.E.), Small Business Administration

(S.B.A.), and other Iowa agencies; and develop an Iowa program-oriented for removing or diminishing barriers which minority contractors face, according to Marion Eppright, DOT supportive services coordinator.

Guest speaker for the conference is Frank H. Carpenter, National Coordinator of Construction Programs, O.M.B.E., Washington, D.C., Al Lang from S.B.A., Des Moines, and John R. McClanahan, Jr. of the Illinois DOT will be present to assist with workshops along with many other Civil Rights, State Equal Employment Opportunity and Federal Highway Administration officials.

Registration is from 7:30 a.m. to 8:00 a.m. on March 31. Public is invited.

Traffic Deaths Down For February

Iowa experienced a 46 percent decrease in traffic fatalities during the month of February compared to February 1976. Preliminary statistics released by the Iowa Department of Transportation show that deaths of 23 persons from accidents last month have so far been officially reported, compared to 49 last February.

Ordinarily, the preliminary statistics are not complete because of deaths that are reported late and deaths that occur some time after the accident but as a result of it.

An oddity last month was that each fatal accident involved the death of only one person. Usually there are a number of multiple-fatality accidents during any given month.

According to Iowa Public Safety Commissioner Charles W. Larson, the improved statistics for last month are no cause for optimism about the fatality picture for the rest of 1977. "We don't have statistics yet to support it," Larson said, "but in all likelihood Iowans drove less last month than in the average February because the month was one of the coldest on record."

Luther Glanton III Charged With Arson

Luther Glanton III entered a plea of innocent Monday in Polk County District Court to a charge of arson. The charge was made in connection with a February 22 house fire at 1125 Eleventh Street.

Glanton, 20, is the son of Polk County District Judge Luther T. Glanton, Jr.

Presiding over the hearing, District Judge Ray Hanrahan set bond for Glanton at $10,000. Trial was scheduled for May 2.

Glanton is currently being held at the Story County Jail by special request from the Polk County attorney's office.

The request, made by Assistant Polk County Attorney Chester Woodburn, cited the number of individuals sentenced by Judge Glanton to the Polk County Jail. Therefore, Woodburn stated, it is possible that young Glanton would be in physical danger if he were jailed in Polk County.

Glanton was indicted by a Polk County grand jury March 8 and was arrested in San Francisco March 10.

EDMUNDS INDICTED FOR TAX EVASION

This week a federal grand jury indicted Robert Edmunds, 42, owner of Robert's Lounge, 1025 University, on charges of federal income tax evasion.

Edmunds allegedly failed to report income totaling $60,000 for the years 1970-1972. If convicted, Edmunds faces a maximum penalty of a $15,000 and nine years in prison.

Black women are highly in demand for office or clerical positions. Requirements for these positions include: typing at least 35-40 words per minute, some knowledge of bookkeeping and figure work, adding machine and calculator experience, sometimes shorthand, pleasant personality and voice for answering the telephone and receptionist duties. Not all of these requirements apply for each position. It depends on the job title.

Surveys show that young blacks are not taking advantage of these courses offered in school and their counselors can't seem to persuade them to do so.

Today's employment for Black women is better than ever before. If you're interested in more information on the positions available, contact Bev Burrell, an employee of Job Services of Iowa, 601 8th Avenue S.E., 365-9474 or if you're a student talk to your counselor at school. The monthly NAACP meeting held at Jane Boyd Community House, Friday night, March 11th, was attended by about 30 persons.

George Colbert, Chairman of the local chapter's Labor & Industry Committee, conducted the meeting. Guests included Acting Police Chief Gareth Clift, Safety Commissioner Ed Colton & George Gable, Chairman of the Civil Service Commission.

They each had equal time explaining their responsibilities in trying to recruit minorities for the police force. The physical requirements, testing procedures, academy training and polygraph test were explained by Mr. Clift. He said there were 11 applications sent out before the recent civil service exam, but only one was returned. He felt they were negligent in not following up to see why the other 10 didn't return the applications. Several persons in the audience were not pleased with his reasons why he felt the applicants didn't return the forms.

Mr. Colton felt there was lack of communication among the agencies involved and expressed a determination to do something about it because he didn't want to have another meeting like this in another five years.

The meeting was later opened for questions directed to the guest from the floor. Many expressed concern about there not being another test until about September. A suggestion was made to have another test now, so the names of qualified blacks and other minorities could be placed on the present list, but Mr. Colton felt there might be lawsuits filed from the ones already on the list.

Mr. Colbert presented a list of 17 names of qualified minorities interested in police work at the end of the meeting. Luther Trent is president of the local chapter.

PSALM, 17, God Word Will never pass away.

They are the workers of iniquity fallen, they are cast down and shall not be able to rise. Fret not thyself because of evil doers, neither be thou envious against the workers of iniquity for they shall soon be cut down like the grass and wither as the green herb. Trust in the Lord and do good, so shall thou dwell in the land and verily thou shall be fed, Delight thyself also in the Lord and he shall give thee the desires of thine heart, Commit thy way unto the Lord, Trust also in him, and he shall bring it to pass. Rest in the Lord, and wait patiently for him. Fret not thyself because of him who prospereth in his way. Cease from anger and forsake wrath. Fret not thyself to any wise to do evil. Those that wait upon the Lord, they shall inherit the earth. The wicked ploteth against the just and gnaweth upon him with his teeth, The Lord shall laugh at him for he seeth his day is coming. The knoweth the days of the upright and their inheritance shall be forever, Mark the upright for the end of that man is peace.

MESSIAH TEMPLE

Messiah Temple is blessed each time we meet as its leaders show us a closer walk with God. They are careful to study the Word and apply it to their lives as they teach us how to step toward higher ground.

Last week Evangelist Zora Reed, a person truly gifted by God, blessed us with the lesson, "Each Will Give Account of Himself to God." God's promise to bless each time Evangelist Reed speaks was again shown as she taught us that words of praise can never replace faithful everyday service to God. God is there to help us help others to see Him clearly. This is done by our work for Him.

Our visitors were Mr. and Mrs. Mac Griffith.

Sunday school is at 10:30 with worship services at 11:30. The Book of Acts is taught every Sunday evening at 5:00. Prayer service is every Wednesday evening at 7:00. Messiah Temple is a teaching, praying church, seeking a closer walk with Jesus. Come and lean with us as we are fed by His Word.

REMEMBER: God wants action. Get up and get busy for God. Reverend Jacob Reed is the Pastor.

SHILOH BAPTIST CHURCH

This Sunday March 27, 1977. Rev. B. Jamison will preach and the Youth Choir will sing.

Last Sunday Rev. B. Jamison brought us a very fine message taken from the 8th Chapter of Acts. 18-21 verses. His topic "On Being Wrong."

The Senior Choir and the Men's Chorus will rehearse on Thursday, March 24, 1977 at 7:30 p.m.

The Senior Choir will sing at the Kyles A.M.E. Church on Monday, March 28 at 7:30 p.m.

A business meeting for Gospel Choir members will be held on Friday March 25 at 7:30 p.m.

UNION BAPTIST CHURCH

Wednesday at 7 p.m. each week prayer services and Bible study classes are held at Union.

Sunday the Grand Lodge Knights of Pythias will have their Thanksgiving service at 3:30 p.m. The choirs of Union will furnish the music.

Sunday April 3rd, the Senior choir of Union will sponsor the pageant "Old Ship of Zion". Sister Esther Wadsworth is Chairperson, Sister Clara Wade is narrator.

NEW FRIENDSHIP CHURCH OF GOD IN CHRIST

THE NEW FRIENDSHIP COGIC is very happy that the Lord has blessed us to move to our permanent quarters at 1600-17th Street. Even while we are holding services, the Lord is blessing us to be remodeling and working on the building. On Sunday, the Lord blessed our pastor to preach until the power of the Lord came down. We were blessed to have our District Miss. Spriggs and her Assistant, Miss McNear to be with us in our service. On Tuesday night, prayer and Bible band will meet at 7:30 p.m. On Wednesday evening, the YWCC will meet in the home of H. Jenkins at 7:30 p.m. Young Adult choir rehearsal will meet on Thursday night at 7:30 p.m. Easter program and play rehearsal will meet Sat. at 4 p.m. On Sunday, March 27, 1977 the church and pastor will fellowship with Community No. 2 in Des Moines at 4 p.m. The YWCC members will hold a special service at the East University COGIC at 1639 E. University, where Bishop Bassett will preach for the State YWCC. On Sunday, March 27, beginning with the morning service, Elder and Sis. J. Martin, a husband and wife evangelistic team will begin a one week revival at NEW Friendship. You will miss a treat if you miss these young people working for the Lord. Elder Martin is formerly of Denver Col. now residing in Racine Wisc. with his wife, where they worship at the Shiloh Stronghold COGIC. Pastor, Elder Ramsey. Come if you want healing for your soul and body. The revival will convene for one week beginning March 27 at 7:30 p.m. nitely.

HOLLAND & HARRIS MUSICAL AT ST. PAUL

The Holland Family Singers and Miss Tammy Harris will be presented in a Musical Program, Sunday, March 27, 1977 at 4:00 p.m. at St. Paul A.M.E. Church.

A very spiritually talented group, the Holland Family Singers will bring a message in song.

Eleven year old Tammy Harris is a very gifted singer who will thrill you with her beautiful voice and her soul-stirring song presentations.

This is a program you won't want to miss. It is Women's Day Effort.

MT. OLIVE BAPTIST CHURCH

Morning devotions were under the direction of Deacons W. Thomas and H. Cherry.

The 11:00 a.m. sermon was delivered by our pastor, Reverend H. R. Fields. The sermon was taken from the 18th Chapter of Matthew, and the pastor's text was "Conversion". The Mt. Olive Senior Choir rendered the music.

Visitors at the morning service: Mrs. Wilma Bruce (Union Baptist).

At 4:00 p.m., the Reverend E. J. Carter, Heavenly Temple Church of God in Christ, along with their Choir, rendered service for the Sisterhood of Mt. Olive, who were celebrating their 21st Anniversary. Reverend Carter's sermon was entitled, "Time Is Winding Down", and he used two scriptures: 5 Ephesians 14, and 52 Isaiah 1-4.

Next Sunday afternoon, March 27, Reverend Fields and Choir will render service for the East Side Union Missionary Society at First C.M.E. Church.

Sunday evening, March 27, at 7:00 p.m., the Mt. Olive Church will be presenting Ms. Charlene Pack in recital, accompanied by Mrs. Jessie Fields. The public is invited to join us.

Good Friday services will be held Friday, April 8, Mt. Hebron Baptist Church, from 12:00 to 3:00 p.m.

Parents wanting their boys and girls, ages 4-9, to participate in the Angel Choir are asked to give their names to Sister C. Pack. Organization will be in early April.

Remember our sick and shut-in: Sister Marie Williams, DM General Hosp., Deacon Travis and Sister Beatrice Bailey, Brother Roosevelt Johnson, Brother A.M. Anderson, Brother Frank Smith, Sister Beulah Powell, Brother Grant Shade, Brother James Duffy, and any others we may have missed.

KYLES TEMPLE A.M.E. ZION CHURCH

Sunday, March 27, the Morning Celebration will begin at 11:00 a.m., with Bishop George J. Leake III delivering the message. The Young Adult Choir will sing. Bishop Leake, Presiding Bishop of the 11th Episcopal

District of the A.M.E. Zion Church will conduct Revival Services Monday, March 27 - 30. The evening services will begin with Devotions at 7:30 p.m. Guest Ministers, their choirs and members will be participating each evening. Everyone is welcome.

Saturday, April 16, 1977, there will be a Banquet at Kyles. Tickets are now available. There will be informal modeling - Talent Show and a very lovely menu planned for your enjoyment. For information please call 266-5782. REMEMBER THE DATE - APRIL 16, 6:00 P.M.

Black Journal Examines Threat to Black Colleges

NEW YORK — "Although Black public colleges have always been the stepchildren of American higher education, they have also served as a vehicle for Black mobility," BLACK JOURNAL's host and executive producer Tony Brown says.

Now the existence of Black colleges in the United States may be in jeopardy, as the result of a law suit filed by the NAACP Legal Defense Fund that demands the curtailment of Federal funding for Black colleges.

The complexities of the case, and the role of Black colleges are the subjects for the next edition of BLACK JOURNAL, "Are Black Colleges Finished?"

Produced by WNET/13, New York, "Are Black Colleges Finished?" will be distributed nationally by the Public Broadcasting Service to its member stations the week of Sunday, March 27, 1977 (Important: Please check local listings for correct area broadcast time. In New York, WNET/13 will air "Are Black Colleges Finished?" Sunday, March 27, 6:00 p.m.)

BLACK JOURNAL is produced with the assistance of a grant from Pepsi-Cola Company.

The NAACP Legal Defense Fund is a separate organization from the NAACP. It originally was formed as a special contributions fund for the NAACP, but in 1939, after warnings that it would lose its tax exempt status unless it separated, the Legal Defense Fund became a separate group. There is no legal relationship between the two.

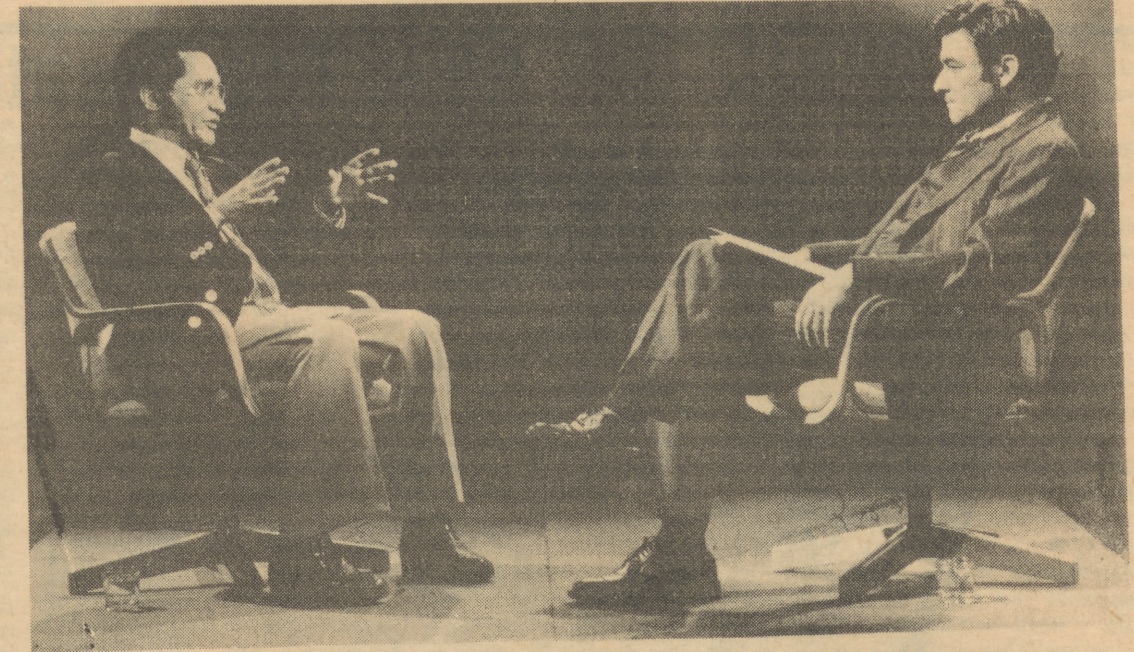

At the core of the NAACP Legal Defense Fund's suit against the Black colleges is Title VI of the Civil Rights Act of 1964.

Title VI forbids an institution receiving Federal aid to discriminate on the basis of race, creed or national origin. The Legal Defense Fund has argued that the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare should withhold Federal funds from Black public colleges because integration at these schools is not satisfactory.

"The NAACP Legal Defense Fund is concerned about the really deprived state of higher education for Blacks in the United States," Legal Defense Fund Director Jack Greenberg told Tony Brown on BLACK JOURNAL. "It is asking for an upgrading of education for Blacks in institutions of higher learning and that includes White institutions and those that are traditionally known as Black institutions. That will require a measure of racial integration in both types of institutions."

But Black college presidents disagree. They say that Black colleges do not keep White students from attending them. In an interview on this week's BLACK JOURNAL, Morgan State College President Andrew Billingsley said, "I think the problem is they (the Legal Defense Fund) are misguided. They have a conception of integration, of desegregation, which requires a White majority and requires Blacks always to be in the minority ... Black colleges are not discriminating against anybody who wants to come there... Enhance these institutions so that more Blacks will be educated, and Tony Brown (left), host and executive producer of BLACK JOURNAL discusses the future of Black colleges and universities with Jack Greenberg, director of the NAACP Legal Defense Fund. The Defense Fund has filed suit against the Department of Health, Education and Welfare, demanding that Federal funds given to Black colleges should be withheld because they are not satisfactorily integrated. Produced by WNET/13, New York, with the assistance of a grant from Pepsi-Cola Company, BLACK JOURNAL will be distributed nationally by the Public Broadcasting Service the week of March 28, 1977 (Check local PBS station for correct area broadcast time. In New York, WNET/13 will broadcast BLACK JOURNAL, Sunday, March 27, (2:00 p.m.) Photo: Bert Andrews.

Whites could attend there, too, rather than dismantle them and put them out of business. Because if you do that, fewer Blacks will get an education."

Herbert Reid, general counsel for the Black college presidents, and former dean of Howard University's Law School, thinks that the Legal Defense Fund's law suit will lessen the chances of a college education for Blacks. "This litigation focuses on everything other than how do you best train and increase the pool of Black professional people," he said to Tony Brown. Billingsley agreed with him. "It is still true that the majority of Blacks who graduate from college with a bachelor's degree graduate from the 107 predominantly Black institutions. These institutions just do a better job than the White institutions are able to do of taking Black kids and moving them all the way through to the degree," Billingsley said.

In a BLACK JOURNAL POLL, which consists of two samples — Ebony Magazine's 100 Most Influential Black Americans and another 100 Black leaders selected by BLACK JOURNAL — found that a majority of those polled do not believe that Black colleges are segregationist,

Ali Is The Greatest

THE GREATEST — Now, it's Muhammad Ali, Actor, shown above in four varied moods captured during the filming of "The Greatest," screen biography of the colorful world champion in which he portrays himself. The film marks the first time in screen history that an internationally-known figure of Ali's stature appears in his own life story.

In answer to why he chose to become a screen actor, the popular fighter answered: "Why not? I've done plenty of acting in the ring."

"The Greatest," a John Marshall Production directed by the late Tom Gries from a screenplay by Ring Lardner, Jr., features an all-star cast with Ernest Borgnine portraying Angelo Dundee, Muhammad Ali's long-time trainer and ring mentor. The new motion picture will be a Columbia Pictures release in May.

Black Architectural Firm Designs Hotel

by James Roland

Washington, D.C. has long been the frontrunner in unveiling new projects, programs and proposals. And this summer it will become known for spawning the first major hotel owned and operated, as well as designed by Blacks.

The Harambee House Hotel, standing near the Howard University campus, was conceived by Blacks during the Johnson Administration and plans finalized during the beginning of the Nixon Administration.

According to the hotel's designer, Leroy Campbell, a principal partner of the Sulton-Campbell Architectural firm, the idea for building the hotel was initiated by Washington businessman Ed Murphy, who owned a restaurant on the site where the Harambee now stands.

"Once the Commerce Department's Economic Development Administration began taking serious note of what he (Murphy) was talking about, a feasibility study was conducted," Campbell stated.

Involved at the outset, the Sulton-Campbell architectural firm played a key role in the successful results of the survey.

John "Dennis" Sulton, Campbell's partner, emphasized the impact the Harambee House will have on not only the local population, but nationally and internationally as well.

"This hotel is unlike any other within this city," Sulton comments, adding that the architectural design has been approached from several humanistic perspectives in addition to those of business.

The nine floor hotel will cost almost seven million dollars upon completion, and includes such features as retail shops, a nightclub-restaurant, swimming pool and health club. The decor, designed by a Black interior decorating firm, gives the hotel a multi-national atmosphere. The guest rooms have been wallpapered in African motif and decorated with Third World art.

This project challenged the creative minds of Black architects, designers and builders who together have created a unique hotel.

The Harambee will have 165 guest rooms, including two apartment suites. Its valet parking capacity has been estimated at 180 for guests and a total capacity of 215 parking spaces.

Although it is the first hotel Sulton-Campbell has ever undertaken, it is not the first designing job of a major building. The firm has been heavily involved in the design of rapid transit systems, schools, government and private entities for more than 12 years. It remains one of the largest architectural firms in Washington, with a staff of 22. Headquartered in the District of Columbia, the firm has a branch office in Baltimore, Maryland.

The Harambee boasts a maximum security system based on the innovative "Card Guard" computer unit which provides entrance to the various suites to those patrons whose card matches the computer program of each door. The "programs" can be changed at any time deemed necessary by the hotel management. According to Sulton, this is the first time such a system has been installed within a Washington hotel.

Unlike many other cities, the Nation's Capital has a constant flux of Third World traffic, with diplomats coming to the city on a regular basis. The hotel's management hopes that some, if not all, of this multi-national trade can be attracted to the Harambee House Hotel.

The Peoples Involvement Corporation (IC), a non-profit agency which promotes Black enterprise through ownership and management, is the official owner of the hotel, while management will be handled by Ed Murphy and Associates.

Even during construction, the hotel has already served to revitalize the Georgia Avenue corridor where two medical centers are going up on either side. Other businesses in the area are planning to expand their buildings to bring them closer in line with the height of the hotel.

"I personally hope to see the day when it will no longer be unusual for Blacks to build hotels or other such establishments across the country," Campbell states with optimism. The eyes of Black America and other Black architects throughout the United States will undoubtedly look upon the Harambee House Hotel with envious anticipation.

Mid City Library

"Patience Is A Virtue"

It seems a shame the wasted pain,
The time we spend trying to pretend,
The many changes we take ourselves though,
Following the dreams we've set out to pursue.

With our goals in mind we start our climb,
But the road to success will be quite a test
Our minds will encounter many things along the way,
Some of which will cause us delay.

The strong will receive what they set out to achieve,
But the weak lack the devotion to keep their plans in motion,
The key to success lies within your mind,
For patience is the virtue we all must find.

Rev. Perkins: A Leader In Racial Reconciliation

Reverend John M. Perkins, black founder and director of Voice of Calvary Ministries, a Mississippi-based Christian movement of community renewal among rural blacks, is a man of many contrasts.

A third grade drop-out, he now speaks to thousands of people across the country every year on the complex issues of community development. A victim of injustice and violence when almost beaten to death by law officers in a county jail, he is now one of the leading proponents of racial reconciliation. The director of a relatively unknown program limited for 14 years to one rural Mississippi town, he is now approached by church and government leaders on facets of health care, education, economic development, and evangelism.

Perkins has written a new book whose title reflects some of the obvious contradictions in his own life. A Quiet Revolution (Word Books, Publisher, Waco, Texas, $4.50) is more than a history of a few Christians — black and white — struggling together to apply the love of God and Biblical principles to the needs of poor people in rural Mississippi.

It is, like Perkins, a refreshing and musical mixture of black folk wisdom and applied theology. It throbs with the prejudice, poverty, and violence but also sings the stronger alternatives of love, cooperative economics, and radical reconciliation through faith in a living God. Perkins' own story began with poverty.

"My mother died when I was seven months old, and my father drank a lot. He gave us to his mother who had been the mother of nineteen children herself. So as far back as I can remember, there were eight of us together on a shuck bed."

This was Mississippi in the 1930's, the "Old South." Then in 1946, Perkins' life was changed. He was 17, working with his family as sharecroppers, when his brother was shot to death by the local sheriff for "disturbing the peace." Perkins was sent by his family to California.

"It was the right place to be and the right time for a black," he recalls. "After serving in the Army, I got a good job with a good company and started moving up. By this time I was married and had a couple kids, when one day my son came home from one of these neighborhood Bible clubs. I saw something in his life I never had. I went down to the church and began to investigate. A few months later I came to know Christ as my Lord. This was in 1957."

With this new beginning came the first of many reversals in his life. Although today blacks are returning by the hundreds to the "New South", Mississippi was the wrong place for blacks to be in 1960. But after almost two years of intensive Biblical training, he and his family went back home to Mendenhall, Mississippi.

"We began teaching the Bible in the churches and in the schools. After a year or two we were reaching thousands of kids every month. The people took care of us and saw that our needs were met, letting us farm with them, giving us vegetables and milk for our kids."

"But the evangelism and speaking took us face to face with the more desperate needs of the people. Many kids were hungry, some were not in school. Housing was one of the worst needs — sometimes as many as 10 people crowded into a shack without plumbing or food."

Because Perkins lived in the community the needs became his too. "We felt God wanted some changing done. We began organizing with the people around the needs they felt most. We now call this the 'felt need concept.' It led us to forming a tutoring school, a fertilizer buying club among farmers, a day care and feeding program, and a housing cooperative. Today in Mendenhall alone we operate a leadership development program, a community store and a health center offering comprehensive health care to all of Simpson County and surrounding areas."

But these developments didn't come easy for Perkins and his colleagues. The biggest roadblock came in the midst of voter registration and protests over several beatings of blacks by local law enforcement officers.

On one particular Saturday in 1970, a van load of college students was stopped on the highway on their way home from VOC. They were taken to jail in the adjoining county. When Perkins went with two others to post bond, he walked right into a trap.

"Just innocent fools we were. When we got into that jailhouse they began beating us. It went on for hours. I thought I was gone. These sheriffs and highway patrolmen just brutalized us. The doctor had to drain a cup of cold blood from my head when I finally got out."

Listening to him speak to groups like the 17,000 college students gathered for the Urbana '76 missions conventions, you see one of those great reversals so rare to human experience. Instead of hatred, bitterness, or revenge there is love and a deep concern for healing.

"In that jailhouse, in the faces of those men, I saw what hatred could do to a person, how it could destroy me too. Only the power of God could deal with the hatred I had in me. God broke me down in order to give me a higher calling, to get me beyond my own racism and call for a deep reconciliation."

Since then Perkins has organized cooperatives all over the state of Mississippi, working mostly with low-income farmers.

One of the greatest contradictions about the man is that recent exposure and notoriety has not taken away his earthy openness. Whenever he is introduced with glowing reports of his role in developing health centers, co-ops, feeding and tutoring programs, and housing among the rural poor, his own words have a way of sweeping the rhetorical flowers aside, revealing a real humility.

"My commitment to poverty," he shares slowly, "goes back much further than the present needs. It goes back to my birth. I am told I was born sick. My mother had pleurisy and died from it when I was seven months old. I needed milk, but none of the people around us could afford cows, but they tell me that an old lady up the road would come to our house every morning with a quart jar of milk for me. That old lady was poor herself. So my commitment to poverty comes out of my debt to her and to others like her who have taken care of me. I can say with the Apostle Paul, 'I am a debtor' and that's where I get my energy to preach and do the gospel."

That type of calling and commitment has been passed on to others — perhaps the best testimony of Perkins' effectiveness is the number of young black leaders who have come up through his ministry, have gone away to school to get skills, and have returned to apply those skills to their own community.

"We need more than welfare and give-away programs that damage our people," says Perkins. "We need a comprehensive strategy for community development."

A strategy comprehensive enough to turn hate to love, to turn the oppressed into community developers, to turn around the exodus of black leaders from their home towns — this has been what has made Voice of Calvary Ministries more than a program or an organization. Instead it is a people movement.

Perkins' book, A Quiet Revolution, captures a piece of that movement. It flows with the syncopated beat of black jazz, and like jazz, it resolves some of the pain and discord of the American black experience with a vibrant call to faith in God and comes out in a tune that can be hummed for days.

TO HEAD DIOCESE — Bishop Joseph L. Howze, 53, was named the first black to head a diocese in the Roman Catholic Church, March 8 when Pope Paul VI named him to head a newly established diocese in Louisiana and Mississippi. The Alabama born Howze will head the diocese of Biloxi, Miss.

Statewide Program Set For Energy Conservation

A statewide energy conservation program by eight investor-owned utilities in Iowa was announced jointly today by:

Interstate Power Company, Dubuque, Iowa
Iowa Electric Light & Power Co., Cedar Rapids, Iowa

Iowa-Illinois Gas & Electric Co., Davenport, Iowa

Iowa Power and Light Co., Des Moines, Iowa

Iowa Public Service Co., Sioux City, Iowa

Iowa Southern Utilities, Centerville, Iowa

Peoples Natural Gas, Council Bluffs, Iowa

Union Electric Company, Keokuk, Iowa

Gene Young, Iowa Power Vice President, said that participation in the program is voluntary, and will include new programs and incorporate existing energy conservation activities aimed at encouraging residential customers to reduce energy waste and to increase efficiency of energy use.

The record cold weather this past winter has created a great awareness of the need for increased conservation efforts, Young continued.

Each utility will announce specific details of the program available in its service area. For Iowa Power customers, Young said, this includes:

1. A home insulation program with financing support by Iowa Power and lending institutions.
2. A homeowners energy audit or checklist.
3. Insulation dealer standards.
4. Thermogram identification to indicate poorly insulated dwellings.
5. Energy efficient home standards for new and existing construction.

6. Energy management program for commercial and industrial customers.

Although the voluntary nature of the program was stressed repeatedly, Young said, "Customers who embrace this energy-saving program will have the opportunity to reduce future utility bills as well as to preserve energy supplies."

"Iowa's utilities have done a good job of providing adequate energy as well as urging the wise use of energy. We know that no insulation job in the world can protect consumers' pocketbooks from rising energy prices," he said, "but conservation can protect the customer from using more than is needed."

Iowa Power will not be involved in actually selling or installing insulation.

In those areas of the state where gas and electricity are provided by different utilities, customers may deal with either or both companies.

MOTOR CLUB OF IOWA PRAISES SUPREME COURT TRUCK DECISION

In a statement issued Thursday, the AAA Motor Club of Iowa praised and approved this week's state Supreme Court decision which, in effect, closes the door on 65 foot double-bottom trucks this year.

The AAA club's Director of Public Affairs, John R. Bireline, said, "We are, to say the very least, most pleased with the Court's wisdom in affirming both our position and moral philosophy in this case."

Bireline added, "We interpret the decision as both a life and tax saving victory for about 99% of Iowa citizens."

I have decided that as a basketball expert I would make a pretty good golf player (and I never played the game). Every team that I picked to make it to the final four fell out. UCLA, Michigan, Tennessee and Notre Dame. Of course, I have been saying all along that the NCAA championship is up for grabs this year, but I thought, as did everybody else that at least Michigan would be in the final round. And I thought that UCLA would make it, too. What happened to those clubs?

Well, the UCLANS ran into a zone defense and in a case like that at least one of your fellows had better be hot from the outside. It seems as if nobody on that club was shooting from way out, so the Bruins could never bring that one out.

Saturday this same Utah club set up that zone defense and the boys from Las Vegas shot over it and forced the giant killers into a man to defense, and that was it. Those Vegas shooters were hotter than a burnt boot from outside, and that is what it takes to beat a good zone.

Michigan ran into a ball club that people hadn't heard much about, but was a good solid team. They refused to let the fact that they were playing number one shake them up. In fact, the North Carolina boys seemed to accept the challenge of number one. Some teams always want to meet the best to see what they can do against them, and this club seemed to be like that.

The experts have said that Notre Dame wasn't really ready for the final showdown, so they had to go out. The Irish have played some in and out ball all year, and last week they were out. And Tennessee played a North Carolina team that wouldn't quit, and so they finished second, and that sent them to the sidelines.

Already people are comparing North Carolina Charlotte to the Texas West team a few years back. Those guys had the runningest team that ever hit this meet, and they ran a fine Kentucky team off the floor.

I remember seeing the final game on the tube that night, and every time you looked up there were two or three Texas West guys rambling down or up the floor with the basketball between them. If Adolph Rupp didn't have ulcers, I bet he had them after that game. And incidentally, that was the first all black lineup I ever saw in the final of the NCAA meet.

Anyway, there will be four new clubs in the last four, and you can take your pick.

Some fellows I know like N.C. Charlotte, and some like Marquette. Me. I lost my voice.

Then there was the weekend of boxing. And now everybody is saying that George Foreman will never beat Muhammad Ali. They saw him lose his head, get mad and revert to being a rank amateur again. Young is hard to hit, and his continual yelling at the referee to watch Foreman while Young himself was doing what Foreman was doing, angered George so that he lost his head. When he got Young in trouble, he rushed in like a man fighting bees. Instead of boxing his guy until he was set up for another good shot, Foreman used up a lot of energy punching away like he was working on a heavy bag.

However, I don't think the knockdown should have been a factor in the decision. Foreman was caught with his feet not placed properly and was off balance. That used to happen to Joe Louis at times, and people who didn't know said he had a weak jaw, when all he had was poor balance.

At the start of the thing, ringsiders were remarking how much Foreman had shortened his punches, but when the pressure gets on one he usually reverts to his old habits, and George was no exception.

Will Young get a shot at Ali? I would guess that if he does, the champ will outbox him. He knows that he is in no real danger of being hit hard, so he can take his time and box, which he can do.

Then you saw those two Olympic champs. So far their chief drawing card is the fact that they are Olympic champs. But that is going to wear off soon, and they are going to have to meet some better opponents. Maybe they are good, but they are going to have to prove it.

About two more fights as the Olympic champs and that will be about all the public will pay to see. Maybe they could be taken on a tour of the country, fighting a bunch of guys named Joe. Since the game is money, that is what they want. It was really quite a weekend.

And in our high school meet, Frank Smith couldn't pull it off. The team from Iowa City played him in the usual way to play a high scoring star. You know he is going to get his points, so you do what you can with him, and try to shut off the rest of the team. That is what they did to Lincoln. But I would guess it will be hard to keep Smith off the all state team.

And, speaking of high schools, the death of Eddie Eaves brings to mind a fact that people who weren't in high school with him remember. He was a fine track man on North High relay teams. My most vivid recollection of him was at Grinnell when he was matching strides with East High's Wells. They looked like Mutt and Jeff., for Wells was six feet and Eaves was about five five, but Zeke matched Wells stride for stride all the way.

Iowa's King

BRUCE KING

Bruce (Sky) King of Iowa won the twenty-first annual George Clarkson Award — given to the top senior collegiate basketball player in Iowa at the Boys' State tournament.

King, a three-year starter at Iowa, led the Big Ten in rebounding. He was the second leading rebounder and scorer in Hawkeye history. Don Nelson, career scoring leader at Iowa with 1,522 points, won the Clarkson Award in 1962.

Other nominees were Dennis VanWyk of Central, Dick Grant of Cornell, Terry Benka and Ken Harris of Drake, Joe Thimm of Iowa Wesleyan and Cal Wulfsberg from Iowa.

Williams Ruling

Williams

hospital in Fulton, Missouri on July 6, 1968. He had been confined there after being found innocent by reason of insanity for the rapes of two girls aged 6 and 8. Williams appeared later in Des Moines where he worked in a local church.

The Supreme Court, in its ruling, delayed ordering Williams released from the Iowa Penitentiary at Fort Madison where he is serving a life prison term for 60 days to allow officials to decide whether to give Williams a new trial.

At the time of this writing it is uncertain if there is enough evidence available 9 years after the murder to bring Williams to trial.

In the majority opinion of the U.S. Supreme Court, Justice Potter Stewart reviewed the facts of the case. He said that after Williams was arrested in Davenport and shortly after leaving the city with Des Moines Police Detective Cletus Lemming, Lemming delivered his "Christian Burial Speech" was the means by which the Des Moines police obtained their illegal evidence.

The Detective said to Williams, "I want to give you something to think about while we're traveling down the road ... Number one, I want you to observe the weather conditions, it's raining, it's sleeting, it's freezing, driving is very treacherous, visibility is poor, it's going to be dark early this evening. They are predicting several inches of snow for tonight, and I feel that you yourself are the only person that knows where this little girl's body is, that you yourself have only been there once, and if you get a snow on top of it you yourself may be unable to find it. And, since we will be going right past the area on the way into Des Moines, I feel that we could stop and locate the body, that the parents of this little girl should be entitled to the Christian burial for the little girl who was snatched away from them on Christmas Eve and murdered. And I feel we should stop and locate it on the way in rather than waiting until morning and trying to come back out after a snow storm and possibly not being able to find it at all."

In his opinion Stewart wrote the constitutional issue in this case is the right of the accused to the assistance of legal counsel. "This right, guaranteed by the Sixth and Fourteenth Amendments, is indispensable to the fair administration of our adversary system of criminal justice."

Stewart continued, "The crime of which Williams was convicted was senseless and brutal, calling for swift and energetic action by the police to apprehend the perpetrator and gather evidence with which he could be convicted ... Yet 'disinterested zeal for the public good does not assure either wisdom or right in the methods it pursues!'"

Justices Lewis Powell, Thurgood Marshall, William Brennan and John Stevens concurred with Stewart's opinion. Powell wrote, "The efforts of Detective Learning to elicit information from Williams ... were a skillful and effective form of interrogation. Moreover the entire setting was conducive to the psychological coercion that was successfully exploited."

Justice Marshall wrote, "In my view, good police work is something far different from catching the criminal at any price. It is equally important that police, as guardians of the law, fulfill their responsibility to obey its commands scrupulously. For in the end, life and liberty can be as much endangered from illegal methods used to convict those thought to be criminals as from the actual criminals themselves."

Chief Justice Warren Burger in an unusually bitter dissent said, "The result reached by the court in this case ought to be intolerable in any society which purports to call itself an organized society ... Williams is guilty of the savage murder of a small child; no member of the Court contends he is not. While in custody, and after no fewer than five warnings of his rights to silence and to counsel, he led police to the place where he had buried the body of his victim. The court now holds the jury must not be told how the police found the body."

Chief Justice Burger continued, "The effect of this is to fulfill Justice Cardozo's grim prophecy that someday some court might carry the exclusionary rule to the absurd extent that its operative effect would exclude evidence relating to the body of the murder victim because of the means by which it was found."

"In any event, the fundamental purpose of the Sixth Amendment is to safeguard the fairness of the trial and the integrity of the fact finding process. In this case, where the evidence of how the child's body was found is of unquestioned reliability, and since the Court accepts Williams' disclosures as voluntary and uncoerced there is no issue either of fairness or evidentiary reliability to justify suppression of truth. It appears suppression is mandated here for no other reason than the Court's general impression that it may have a beneficial effect on future police conduct..."

Justices Harry Blackmun, Byron White and William Rehnquist joined Burger in the dissent. The officer's conduct did not jeopardize the fairness of Williams' trial or, in any way, risk the conviction of an innocent man, the dissent said.

Pilot Ordered Out of Zambia

(Lusaka, Zambia) — An American pilot, Dennis Pearce — who flew illegally into Zambia after deserting from the Rhodesian army — was released from detention in Lusaka today and ordered out of the country.

Zambia's home affairs minister, Aaron Milner, confirmed Pearce's release.

He said: "The Zambian government has deported Pearce to the United States.

ARCHBISHOP KILLED

The Catholic Archbishop of the Congo Republic — Cardinal Emile Biayenda — was kidnaped and assassinated March 23. That report comes from the ruling military committee of the Congolese workers party. It said he was killed by three persons, but gave no details. A Vatican spokesman expressed "profound consternation." Vatican sources say the 50-year-old Cardinal was the last official to visit president Marien Ngouabi before the President was killed in Brazzaville last Friday.

We want to level with you

Iowa Power is offering its customers a new, level payment program called Budget Billing. With it, your monthly bill will be one flat or level amount, all year 'round.

Monthly utility bills can vary quite a bit from month to month depending on the severity of the weather and your energy use. Budget Billing will make your family budget planning easier.

If you sign up, we'll look at your bills for the last year and estimate your energy use for the next 12 months. That yearly total will be billed to you in 12 equal parts.

Of course, we'll continue to read your meter and if we find you've been paying for much more or much less than you actually used, we'll adjust your monthly bill accordingly.

Some Iowa Power customers have already received a personal mailing on Budget Billing and over 5,000 are already on the plan. More personal mailings that explain the program in detail are on the way. They will tell you what your own monthly budget amount will be and include the necessary forms to sign if you decide Budget Billing is for you.

Watch for your individualized Budget Billing materials. If you have any questions, call your local Iowa Power office.

Killed in Uganda

A newspaper in Kenya reports that forces loyal to Ugandan President Idi Amin killed children of Christian tribesmen in a raid on a school last week.

Amin, a Moslem, reportedly has ordered his military camps rid of the men from the Christian Langi and Acholi Tribes. But the paper quotes a refugee from Uganda as saying tribesmen of one battalion gunned down Amin's security agents, and then the survivors retaliated against the soldiers' children. The paper did not say how many children were killed.

SPANISH CENTER FUNDING

Edward Samori... a spokesman for the Des Moines Spanish-speaking Center... asked the city fathers for $8,500 for additional funding for the center. City Councilman Archie Brooks motioned the council to give the center the money; because they did not receive all the total funding they had requested previously. They were granted the money because the council saw valid use of the money by the center.

Segregation in S. Africa Criticized

President Carter is expected to give a warning today to the next foreign minister of South Africa, R. F. Botha. According to sources in both governments, Carter probably will tell him South Africa must look at its own segregation policies.

The U-S has called on South Africa in the past to help settle racial problems in neighboring Rhodesia. But South Africa itself is ruled by a white minority. And Carter is said to have reports that, unless South Africa changes its ways, it could face more international pressure for change.

Botha, currently Ambassador to the U-S, said last week he personally favors abolishing racial discrimination. But he said he would not want non-whites to have the same voting power as whites.

Zaire Invaders Capture Town

Invading exiles from Angola apparently have regained control of Kasaji — a town 130 miles from a copper mining center in Zaire. This word comes despite claims from the government of Zaire that it is driving back the invaders with what it has termed "massive bombing raids." Foreign observers have doubted the claims, saying Zaire's Air Force isn't capable of such raids.

The invasion force is estimated to consist of two-thousand Katangan troops who fled to Angola after losing a war for the independence of their province from the former Belgian Congo.
