Zimbabwe Liberation Lecture Here April 21

Tapson Marari, representative of Zimbabwe African National Unity (ZANU) to North America and the Caribbean, will speak at the Cottage Grove Presbyterian Church, 24th and Cottage Grove, on April 21st at 7:30 p.m.

ZANU is part of the national liberation movement for the independence of Zimbabwe (Rhodesia) from the white minority government of Ian Smith.

Marari's visit is sponsored by Des Moines student and community organizations.

He will conduct a news conference April 21 at 10:30 a.m. at the Cottage Grove Presbyterian Church. He will address the current situation in Zimbabwe and the foreign policy implications for the U.S., including the role of Senator Dick Clark.

ZIMBABWE FACT SHEET

From the year 1000 to the year 1830 the people of what is now Zimbabwe (Rhodesia) lived in relative peace in a society with a rich and intricate civilization. All this changed in the 19th century when Cecil Rhodes, wealthy from his pillage of gold and diamonds in South Africa, sent an expeditionary force of British settlers to take Zimbabwe under a Royal charter granted to his British South Africa

Company. European schemes of exploitation and superior weaponry thus began the era of white minority tyranny in Zimbabwe, a tyranny that continues to this day under the Smith government.

This is a brief look at the conditions that have spurred the 5.5 million black people of Zimbabwe to resistance in a way that is today making world history.

Urban Campus Relocation Recommendation by July 1

On April 7 Paul Lowery, superintendent of the Des Moines Area Community College, announced he expects to make a recommendation on the relocation of the school's Urban Campus by July 1.

The comment was made at a public hearing sponsored by the special citizen's committee appointed to study the problems of the Urban Center. The committee was appointed after student's of the Urban Center, now located at the old Sabin Elementary School, 5th and College, began pressing the college board of directors to relocate the center, citing deteriorating conditions of the building and saying the building was designed for elementary students not adults.

More than 100 people attended the 2½ hour meeting.

President of the college board of directors Walter Hetzel of Ames said he welcomed the controversy over relocating the Urban Center. "It is a buoying circumstance to have people so intensely want the product we are responsible for," he said.

Doris Tucker, spokeswoman for the Citizens for Community Improvement, urged the board to keep the center on the near north side of Des Moines so it can better serve the low-income, disadvantaged and minority students in the area.

She said a large proportion of the students at the Urban Campus are from the area and said a recent survey showed 72 per cent of the students want the campus to remain in the area. Thirty per cent of the students are

CHICAGO - Kellogg Company of Battle Creek, Mich. was honored this week for its national leadership role in human relations by the Chicago Conference for Brotherhood.

The Conference presented its famous Brotherhood Award to Kellogg Company and also praised the world's largest manufacturer of ready-to-eat breakfast cereals for its equal employment opportunity and affirmative action programs which help blacks and other minorities attain jobs and promotions at Kellogg's.

Kellogg's was also lauded for its minority vending programs in finance, marketing and sales promotion and industrial supplies.

Robert L. Nichols, president of Kellogg Sales Company, accepted the award presented by Dr. Morris H. Tynes, president of the Chicago Conference. More than 1,000 persons attended the awards ceremony at the Chicago-Sheraton Hotel in what is Chicago's largest interracial banquet.

"We're proud that Kellogg's affirmative action and minority vending programs have resulted in more jobs, promotions and business opportunities for members of the minority community," Nichols said.

Also honored at this year's awards' banquet was U.S. Senator Dick Clark of Iowa, chairman of the African Affairs Subcommittee of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, who led the successful fight to repeal a measure that had permitted the U.S. to import Rhodesian chrome. With passage of this legislation, the U.S. restores compliance with United Nations sanctions against Rhodesia's white minority government.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert L. Nichols accept a Brotherhood Award on behalf of Kellogg Company of Battle Creek, Mich., in recognition of the cereal maker's national leadership role in human relations. Mr. Nichols is president of Kellogg Sales Company.

Des Moines Spring Cleanup Planned

The Des Moines-Polk County Health Department urges everyone to "clean-up" around their yards and homes this spring.

Trash and rubbish on the ground are not only an eyesore but it creates a breeding place for flies, rats and snakes. With winter over we notice many things that need attention around our homes and in our yard.

Spring is the best time to check the foundations of our homes. Keeping them in good repair will keep out insects, mice and rats. Even a rat can go through holes as small as half an inch square.

Be sure to check all steps, floors and the boards of your house. If not protected by paint they will rot very fast and become unsafe.

Bulk waste items weighing 250 pounds or less can be carried away. The City of Des Moines will pickup these items for their residents during the week of April 18 through April 22. Included in the description of bulk items are such things as: HOUSEHOLD FURNISHINGS AND APPLIANCES, WINDOWS AND SCREENS, PRINTED MATTER, RAGS, CLOTHING AND BUILDING WASTES.

Residents are responsible for the preparation of any bulk waste materials to be removed from their property.

The bulk waste materials will be collected by City of Des Moines crews on normal residential collection days, if these items are properly placed at or near the front curbing. Residents with questions concerning bulk waste removal may call 283-4595 or 283-4156.

Clean-up, fix-up and paint-up, not only to protect your investment, but to have a cleaner, safer place to live. Your home will be an asset to your neighborhood and you will be proud of your home.

Garbage pickup for the Model Cities area usually is held on Tuesday.

Televising Incorrect History Unfair to the Public

Anyone who saw the broadcast of the "Life of Christ" on NBC will admit that it was a spectacular show and the performers were excellent.

On the other hand, anyone who is acquainted with the King James version of the Bible or has read stories written which actually coincides with the Bible will agree that much of the historical material was omitted or so botched up that it destroyed the beauty of the program.

Most viewers have at some time read the bible in churches or at home and could easily pick out instances that were clearly contrary to the history as we have known it over the years. (Many families conduct Bible reading with their children periodically.)

Naturally, every step of the way could not be shown in detail, but where the accepted history of the assistance by Simon a Cyranian, bearing the cross and the Lords Supper, appears, they were either left out or so changed that they could not be recognized. When historical events are placed before the public on television they should be correct and not as some producer would like to have them.

It is unfortunate that important history such as the Life of Christ as we have known it for hundreds of years should be twisted so as to give the viewer an incorrect picture of the long accepted history of the civilized world.

Young Must Speak In Diplomatic Language

Andrew Young the U.S. Ambassador to the United Nations, has made another statement for which the State Department has apologized. This time he made the statement that England was a racist nation.

Some truths at times, may very well be unsaid by people who are in a position to stir up antagonism which is unnecessary.

The ambassador was speaking from experience and general knowledge of people who have had an opportunity to know the statement to be correct.

I have never visited England, but did have an opportunity to bump into several British officers while in France in World War I and whose conduct toward Negroes was about that of some of our own prejudiced officers. On the other hand one must not forget the liberal attitude of Captain Anthony Eden, a famous soldier in his own right, who later became assistant to Winston Churchill and at one time ambassador to this country. He soundly criticized his own country for its attitude toward Ethiopia when the Italian armies swept the country, killing civilians as well as soldiers, most of whom were without arms.

Of course, we cannot judge a whole country by what a few prejudiced people do no more than we can judge America on the same basis.

Ambassador Young must consider that he is not now engaged as a civil rights activist in the South, nor a congressman from Georgia, who was constantly in the thick of the civil rights struggle against some type of mistreatment of minorities. But he is now a diplomat and must measure his statements according to accepted and practical diplomatic language.

Helping To Make School Desegregation Succeed

The Des Moines school board is conducting a series of conferences among people who will be effected by the desegregation program and others who are interested in making it work.

No law which does not have the support of the majority of the people, the officials directly involved and the law enforcement departments, can very well succeed.

This is an excellent idea. Experience has shown that cities that followed this procedure have had real success in desegregating the schools in their communities.

The Events in Zaire

By Laura Parks

First thing to note is the fact that the Belgium based National Front for The Liberation Of The Congo consists entirely of Moise Tshombe's former friends and allies. The Front was and is backed by the Belgian government, still entertaining vague notions about recapturing the wealth of the region for Belgian economic interests.

It is worthwhile recalling that Former Prime Minister of the Congo, Moise Tshombe, was generally regarded in black Africa as an agent of Belgian interests. After his forced resignation as Prime Minister he circulated with unusual frequency between Brusells, Paris, and Madrid, organizing international support for a possible coup d'etat in the Congo.

By an odd coincidence, which we cannot relate here, Moise Tshombe fell into Algerian hands, was removed to a hospital and died. Prior to these events the newly independent government of Algeria, which fought a seven year war of independence, denounced the pro Belgian policies of Tshombe. He was called the "traitor of the Congo." His death in Algeria aborted the coup attempt.

Those who have survived in Belgium as the National Front live in fairly comfortable circumstances at the pleasure of the government.

The fact that they have chosen to emerge at this time is entirely due to the apparent confusion that reigns in southern Shaba province, formerly called Katanga. They are hoping, with the Belgian governments backing that in the confusion, they might be accorded some legitimacy by the Powers with economic interests in the Congo (Zaire).

Prospects of this happening are remote. The former Katangese militia men, now inside the provinces copper mining region, are not the same non-political soldiers that Tshombe once led in his successionist war against the deeply anti Belgian leader Patrice Lumumba.

These soldiers, during their exile in Angola during that nations battles with Portugese colonialism, learned some significant lessons about Africa and the nature of some African political leaders supporting neo-colonial policies.

They learned to differentiate between true and false friends, often a difficult accomplishment on continent with boasting over 800 tribes and peoples.

Second thing to note is the fact that the Angolan based formen Katanga Militiamen have not staged a conventional type of military incursion into southern Zaire. The operation has all the marks of a guerrilla operation. The reasons for assuming this are the following considerations: The incursion is taking place at a time when politically and economically the government of Zire finds itself in very difficult circumstances, domestically there is rising discontent due to economic stagnation in the urban areas since 1970, the country, with very poor roads and rail links feels isolated from the capital and the government in Kinshasa. In Katanga's case this is even more pronounced because of the 1500 miles that separate it from the

THE POWER & THE GLORY

HOUSING DEPRIVATION

The high costs of housing has brought about a new form of discrimination that is not limited to minorities.

Substandard, physically inadequate housing is a major problem of the poor. In 1960, 15,000,000 households were in need of better housing.

Seventy-one percent were families in physically inadequate homes or apartments; five percent were in physically adequate but over-crowded quarters; and 24 percent were in satisfactory housing at an excessive cost to the family budget.

CURRENT COSTS

The current price of new single family homes has increased from $25,200 in 1971 to $44,200 in 1976. Recent research predicts that by 1981, new homes will sell for $78,000.

Housing production is well below housing needs. Poor and middle income families will be unable to meet the rising costs, and will be limited to sub-standard housing, unless federal government activity is swift.

HIGH RENT BURDEN

High rent burden is defined as a household with two or more people, with an annual income under $11,400, where the cost of housing is more than 25 percent of income.

Where the head of household is over the age of 65, rental payments in excess of 35 percent is considered excessive.

HUD POLICY CHANGE

The Department of Housing and Urban Development has decided to support efforts to compell the city of Philadelphia in the state of Pennsylvania, to build low income housing in a middle class district.

The city had cancelled the project after protest by middle class residents, and HUD made no effort to insist upon construction.

The issue is now on appeal before the court. HUD in a letter to the court not only supported the construction of low income housing, but stated that the Department's failure to support the project would violate its responsibility for furthering fair housing for minorities.

This is a welcomed reversal of federal policy. Community opposition to integrated housing development in the past has indirectly been respected by HUD.

HUD SECRETARY

Many doubts were evidenced during the Senate confirmation hearings of Patricia Harris as Secretary of HUD. There was doubt whether she would vigorously enforce her agency responsibility to assure the legal protection of non-discrimination in the provision of housing.

She said she would. It seems as if she is indeed a lady of her word.

MESSIAH TEMPLE

Before man was created, Jesus promised to redeem him. "Christ's Cry of Triumph" was the lesson brought to us this Easter Sunday by Reverend Jacob Reed. Christ's cry of "It is finished," did three things. 1) It showed that all the prophecies had been fulfilled. 2) His sufferings were over. And 3) It showed that His work of redemption was accomplished. All that is left for us to do is accept the completed acts of Jesus as Lord.

Sunday school is at 10:30 with worship services at 11:30. The Book of Acts is taught every Sunday evening at 5:00. Prayer meeting is every Wednesday evening at 7:00.

After 66 Years in Prison — Grigsby Finally Gets Out

It was the year 1908. A horse-drawn carriage pulled up at the gates of the Indiana State Prison in Michigan City. Out stepped Johnson Van Dyke Grigsby, and thus began one of the strangest cases in recorded prison history.

First of all, Grigsby had been found guilty of second degree murder in the knife slaying of a white man during a tavern brawl, an offense that usually calls for a five-year sentence or so. Yet Grigsby spent 66 years behind prison bars.

During his 66 years in prison, Grigsby served time with desperado John Dillinger, whom Grigsby calls "the smartest man I ever met." Dillinger was killed by FBI agents in Chicago in 1934 after having been put on the spot by Anna Sage, "the woman in red."

But Grigsby is out of prison now, a free man for the first time. Technically, he was allowed to take a three-day furlough from the prison, but probation and prison officials are working on a plan to make the furlough permanent.

Grigsby had a brief taste of freedom in 1976, when he was paroled and placed in a Michigan City nursing home. He was returned to the prison after officials at the home said he was having difficulty adjusting to his new life.

The latest turn in Grigsby's life came when

Mrs. Sheilah Ford, an Indianapolis secretary, read a newspaper story about Grigsby and was reminded of her late father. Prison officials were willing to free Grigsby, but the problem was what to do with a man who had never known anything but life in prison. Mrs. Ford agreed to arrange a furlough for Grigsby and to look out for him while he was out of prison. It took her three months to work through the maze of government and social service agencies in arranging the visit. Grigsby stayed at the home of a retired construction worker and his middle-aged son during the furlough.

It wasn't easy for Grigsby.

He began encountering the same difficulties he had encountered earlier at the nursing home. Mrs. Ford and her family had him over for Thanksgiving dinner at her mother's home in Indianapolis. Grigsby kept asking what the rules and regulations were. He was assured there were none. It took a while for this to penetrate Grigsby's mind. He couldn't remember when there were no prison regulations to live by.

When he was assured by Mrs. Ford there were none, he couldn't understand. Life without regulations? To Grigsby, this was foreign.

"He can't put it together that we have to get into the car to go from one place to another," Mrs. Ford said. "He thinks he can just walk down a long hall and he'll be there. He very institutionalized."

But otherwise, Grigsby seems to have taken to freedom with a flourish. He has discovered 7-Up and "doesn't want to hear of going back."

All dressed up for freedom! "I never quit dreaming about this day," said J.V. Grigsby.

Black, she said.

Tucker said her organization would like the center located either at the old Dowling High School Campus, 10th and College, or in the urban renewal area bounded by the MacVicar Freeway, University Ave., 6th St. and 9th St.

Another speaker urged the board to locate the Urban Campus south of Court Ave. between E4th and E7th St. Thomas Fredregill, president of a construction company, argued for that location because it is close to the state capitol and the east side business area Fredregill and others are hoping to redevelop.

Another person urged the board not to locate the facility at North High School. North has been considered as a possible site because declining high school enrollment has reduced the school's population to about 700 students. But the spokesman for the North Central Community organization said North must continue to function as a high school or the north-central portion of the city will begin to deteriorate.

Three Blacks Chosen For Mental Health Comm.

Three blacks have been chosen by President Carter to serve on the President's Commission on Mental Health. The Commission will study the Nation's mental health programs — a special concern of Mrs. Carter — and submit a preliminary report to the President by September 1. Mrs. Carter is honorary chairperson.

There are 20 members on the Commission. Those chosen were selected from more than 1000 candidates.

The Commission is composed of eight women and 12 men.

Blacks appointed by the President are:

RUTH B. LOVE, in her early 40s, an articulate spokesperson, lecturer and writer on the subject of education, is the Superintendent of Schools in Oakland, California. She has particular concern for disadvantaged and minority youth and was former Director of the Right to Read Effort in the U.S. Office of Education and former Chief of the Bureau of Compensatory Education Program Development of the California Department of Education. She was also a former Project Director for Crossroads Africa in Ghana.

MILDRED MITCHELL-BATEMAN, M.D., 55, is a Commissioner of the West Virginia Department of Mental Health and Clinical Professor, Department of Behavioral Medicine, West Virginia University School of Medicine. A clinical psychiatrist, she has given special attention to the health delivery problems of the underserved and has worked to develop new systems of reaching and serving people, beginning with mental health programs in the schools.

CHARLES V. WILLIE, 49, is Professor of Education and Urban Studies at the Graduate School of Education at Harvard. A former research sociologist with the New York State Mental Health Commission, he has written on community mental health problems and is active in the development of black colleges as institutions in our society. He is a member of the Technical Advisory Board of the Maurice Falk Medical Fund and a consultant to the Center for Minority Mental Health Programs of the National Institute of Mental Health.

Iowa Power Light Bills Compare Well

A report released recently by the Edison Electric Institute shows that typical electric bills for Iowa Power's residential customers are comparable with the average bills throughout the nation.

In general, the January 1, 1977, report shows that for residential and commercial customers using smaller amounts of electricity, Iowa Power bills are somewhat below national, west-north-central and Iowa averages; but for larger users, the bills are slightly above the averages for the three groups. Iowa Power's rates for industrial service generally compare favorably with those across the nation.

Last year the typical Iowa Power customer used not quite 750 kilowatt hours per month. He paid $30.83. That was 3.46 per cent above the national average of $29.80, .59 per cent above the west-north-central region average of $30.65 and 1.31 per cent below the Iowa average of $31.24. At that usage, 127 utilities had rates lower than Iowa Power

A TIME FOR ACTION

The time for decision is running out. At Iowa Power, we're looking ahead to the 1980's and beyond, and we are alarmed that the basic policy decisions that will determine Iowa's energy future have not yet been made. We believe energy shortages mean fewer jobs, a lower standard of living, and loss of freedom for Iowans.

If we are accused of "crying wolf," so be it.

Our goal is to maintain an adequate and dependable supply of energy for the customers we serve and to plan effectively to meet future requirements. We support a full commitment to conservation and the elimination of waste in energy use. We also support the development of all energy resources.

But, time is needed. Time to plan. Time to seek regulatory approval. Time to build.

And time is slipping away.

Before adequate steps can be taken to build for our energy future, some basic questions must be answered and some basic policy decisions made. We present the following areas of concern to you, the energy users and policymakers of Iowa. At Iowa Power, we have given them much thought. We urge you to do the same. You must become involved if the right answers are to be developed.

Your Congressional Representatives Are:

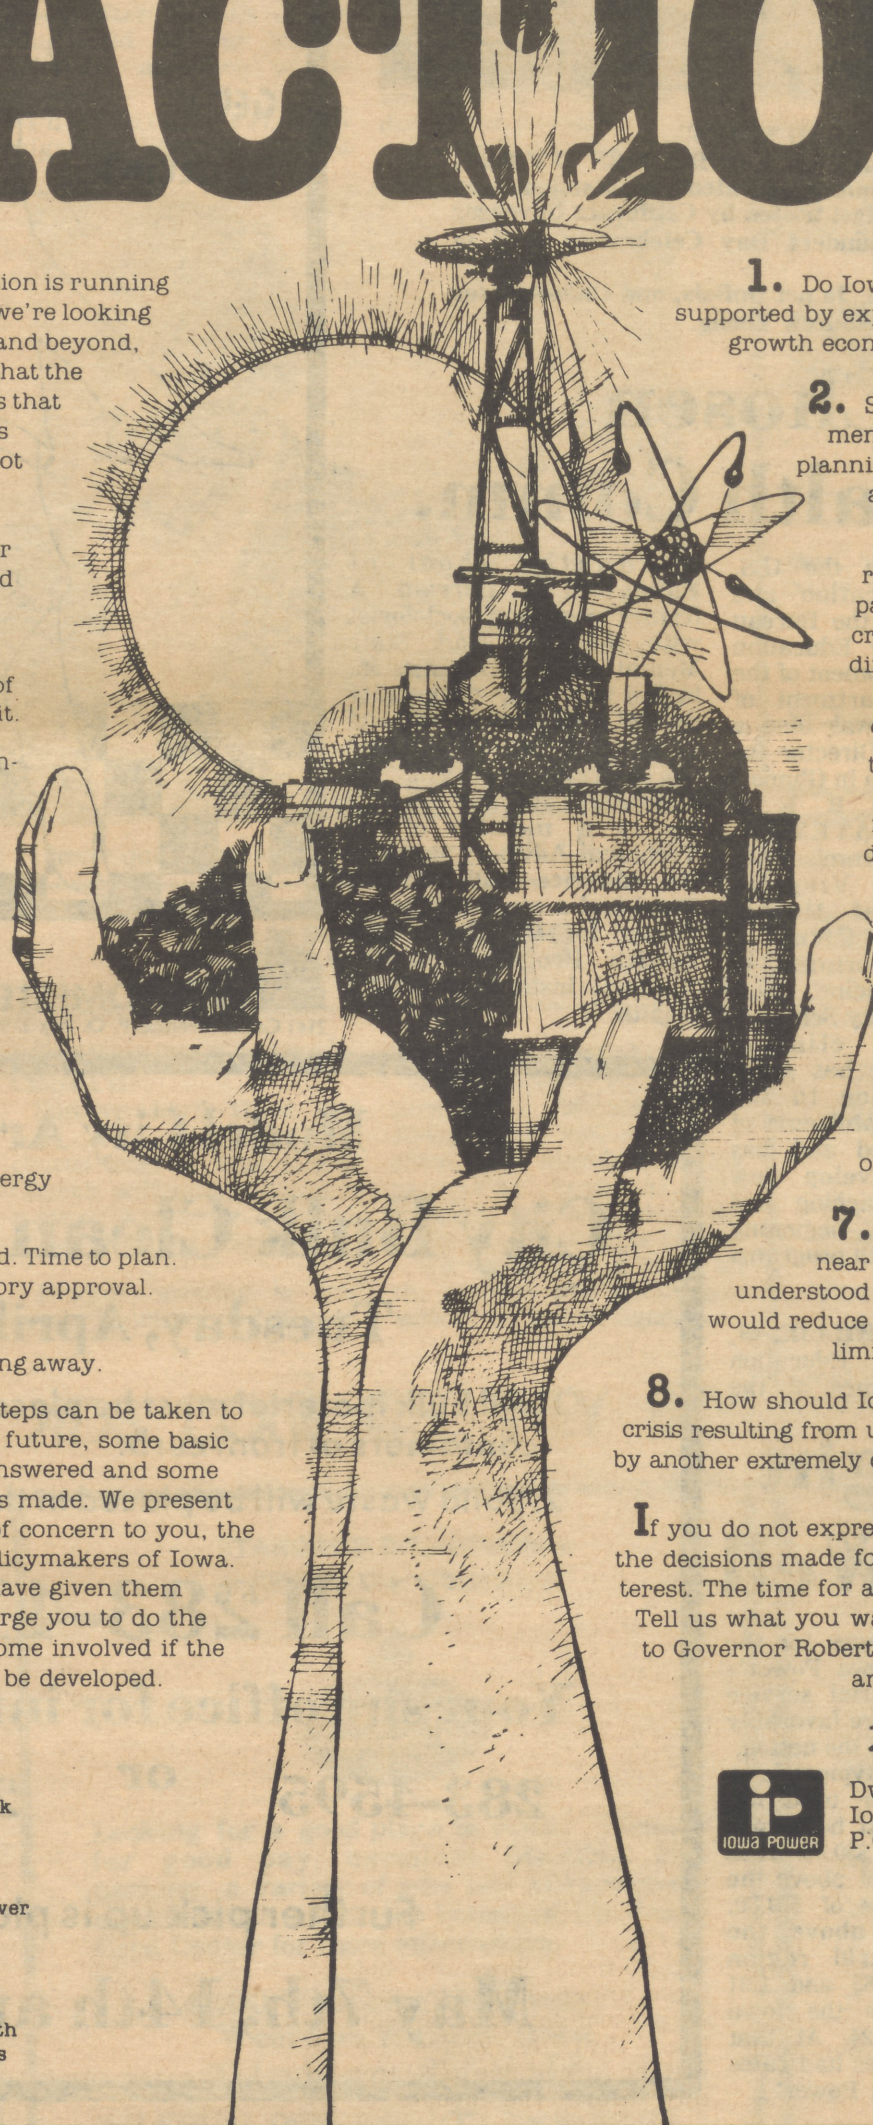

Senators:

The Honorable Dick Clark
United States Senate
Washington, D.C. 20510
202-224-3254

The Honorable John Culver
United States Senate
Washington, D.C. 20510
202-224-3744

Representative:

The Honorable Neal Smith
House of Representatives
Washington, D.C. 20515
202-225-4426

1. Do Iowans want an expanding economy supported by expanding energy resources or a no-growth economy limited by decreasing energy resources?

2. Should private industry or government have the major responsibility in planning and providing home insulation and other conservation programs?

3. Since the supply of energy responds to price, are we willing to pay more in the market place to increase supply? Or do we prefer that diminishing supplies be rationed by government?

4. Will Iowa's industries be able to cope with natural gas shortages in the future? What fuel will industry substitute as natural gas diminishes? Is an adequate supply of the substitute fuel assured?

5. Do you believe solar energy will be lower in cost for Iowans than other fuels? Can solar energy prevent the next energy crisis?

6. Should we modify environmental standards to increase use of Iowa coal as an energy source in the future?

7. Would you favor a nuclear plant near your community if it is generally understood that a nuclear power moratorium would reduce energy supply, increase costs and limit economic development in Iowa?

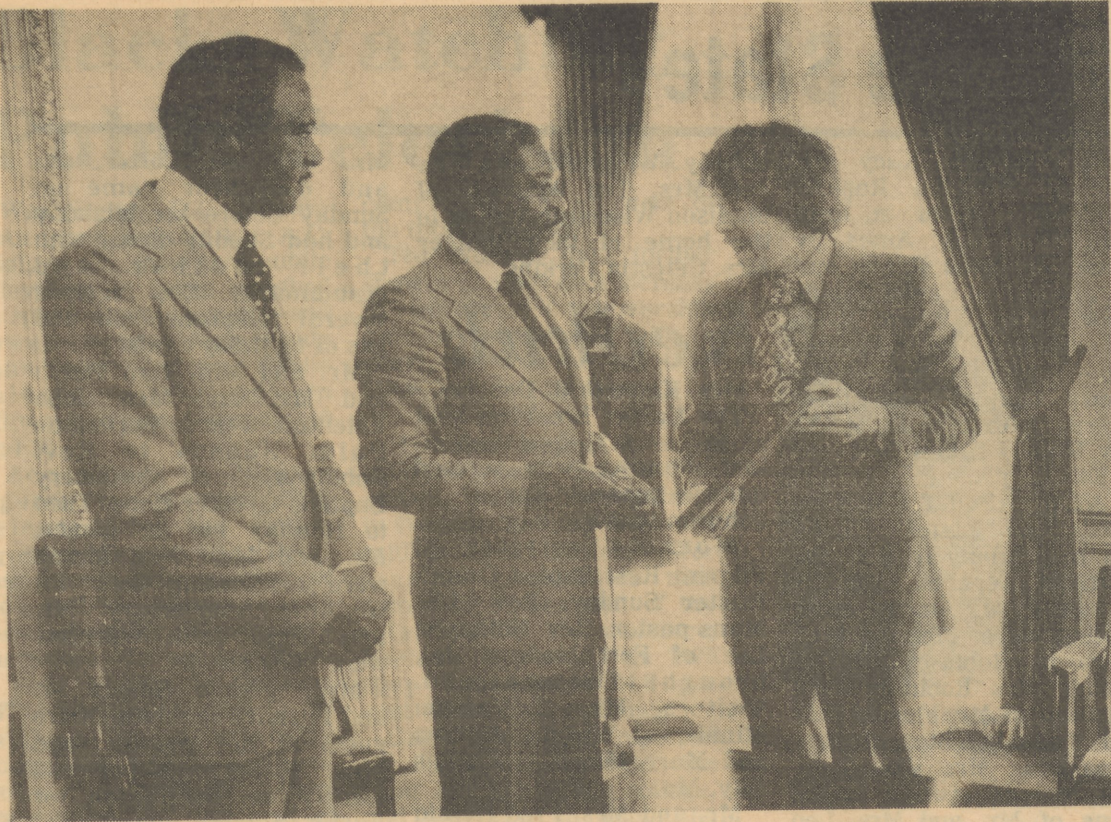

8. How should Iowans prepare for a future energy crisis resulting from unexpected supply shortages caused by another extremely cold winter or another oil embargo?

If you do not express your views on these questions, the decisions made for you may not be in your best interest. The time for action is now or it may be too late. Tell us what you want done. More importantly, write to Governor Robert D. Ray and members of Congress and talk with your state legislators.

without the aid, through foreign investments of firms from the U.S. and Britain in particular. The information on imports and exports and British and U.S. investments has been suppressed under the Trade Statute since 1963, but at that time foreign liabilities amounted to +350 million, of which +200-250 million were British, about 100 million were South African and about 20 million were U.S. Since international sanctions cut off much of the British and U.S. investments in 1965, South Africa has increased its holdings considerably. The major areas of foreign investment are agriculture, mining and manufacturing. The major U.S. - based investors are Union Carbide and Mobil.

The Workers

The Rhodesian Act defined an employee as "any person engaged by an employer to perform ... work ... but shall not include a native."

The Apprenticeship Act (1959) allowed for African apprenticeship for the first time. The minimum qualifications are 10 years of schooling, which excludes most blacks, and appropriate employment, which excludes even more natives. Thus the apprenticeship figures in 1971 looked like this: white - 1,974; "coloured" and Asian - 148; and African - 59. Multi-racial trade unions are allowed, but are white dominated since the Industrial Conciliation Act gives skilled workers three votes apiece; semi-skilled, two votes; and unskilled, 1 vote. This gives whites a voting edge of 33 to 1.

Further, the Industrial Conciliation Act effectively bars strikes and in fact since the Act was passed in 1959 there have been no legal strikes by Africans. Persecution is employed to keep African trade union leaders from active work. As of 1967, 168 trade unionists were listed as being detained in prisons or restriction camps. One consequence of the labor policies applied to Africans is the starvation-level wages that are common and are particularly striking when compared to the wages of whites. In 1965 the gap between the average earnings of whites and Africans was 2,330 Rands (whites earned R2,576 and Africans earned an average of R246). The differential increased by 1971 to R3,072.

Trade

The U.S. has violated the international chrome boycott since 1971 until recently, but most trade reflects the high dependency on South Africa.

Repression

The pass laws, as is the case with other white minority regimes, play a central role in Zimbabwean society. First, they allow the government to regulate the influx of labor into urban areas, to enhance the ability to exploit labor. Second, they serve as a security measure on African people by restricting freedom of movement. All Africans are required to produce valid identity documents on demand and failure to do so can result in imprisonment. The identity card system, like many other repressive measures in white-controlled southern Africa, was developed with the help of large U.S. and British-based corporations.

In addition the Emergency Powers Regulation of 1966 gives the minister power to arrest and detain without trial; power to control possession and distribution of information and media; to impose restrictions on freedom of movement; to regulate possession of arms. This power has been used extensively against opponents of the white minority regime.

Under the Law and Order Act the government can prohibit meetings, publications, and processions as it chooses. The Act sets out mandatory prison terms for certain political offenses, and gives the minister power to restrict people to particular for as long as five years.

Land Allocation

The Rhodesian Act was in effect until 1969 and was based on the recommendations of a 1926 Commission which advised that "until the native has advance very much further on the paths of civilizations, it is better that the points of contact in this respect between the two races should be reduced." Then came the Land Tenure Act, which formalized land distribution so that whites (4½% of the population) have control of 47% of the land, covering all the major towns, mineral resources and fertile land with good rainfall.

Resistance

Today everyone knows that the white rulers in Zimbabwe are in trouble. From petitions and peaceful demonstrations and other forms of resistance, the black majority has developed also a fighting army and political organization to drive the tyrants from power. Early armed resistance and insurgency was carried on by the Zimbabwe African National Union (ZANU). Now ZANU is joined by other nationalist groups in an armed united front against the Smith government. It is estimated that the liberation forces control, in early 1977, nearly one-third of the country.

Ian Smith's reluctant agreement that at least some power should be transferred from white to black hands in the next two years is a concession not only to the fact of international pressure, but more importantly to the fact of present-day Zimbabwean life: that the whites are neither fit nor able to control any more the people of Zimbabwe.

Blacks Watching Public Television

Washington, D.C. — New data compiled by the A.C. Nielsen Co. show that public television is being watched in more racial-minority and lower-income households than ever before. Public television stations in Milwaukee are Channels 10 and 36.

According to Nielsen figures for October 1976, released by the Public Broadcasting Service (PBS) last month, the number of non-white households viewing public TV regularly increased 47.5 per cent from a year earlier. In October, 1976, Nielsen reported, 4.4 million racial-minority households regularly viewed public television; they constituted 11.3 per cent of the total PTV audience. In October 1975, 3.0 million minority households viewed public TV regularly, comprising 8.6 per cent of the total audience.

The Nielsen data further show a 15.4 per cent increase in public TV viewership among households with a yearly income of less than $10,000.

Nielsen reported 14.0 million such households viewing public TV regularly in October 1976, up from 12.1 million a year earlier. Lower income households now comprise 36 per cent of the total public TV audience, Nielsen reported; in 1975 they represented 34.8 per cent of the total audience.

Gains were also reported for households in which the head did not attend college, and for those in which the head is a skilled or unskilled laborer.

The PBS-released data show an 11.4 per cent increase in viewership for "no-college" households. In October 1976, Nielsen reported 25 million such households viewing public TV regularly, comprising 64.1 per cent of the total audience. A year earlier, 22.4 million "no-college" households tuned in public TV regularly, and represented 64.3 per cent of the total audience.

For households in which the head is a skilled or unskilled laborer, Nielsen reported, the gain was 12.1 per cent. In October 1976, 13.5 million such households viewed public TV regularly; they represented 34.7 per cent of the total PTV audience. A year earlier, 12 million such households regularly watched public TV, comprising 34.5 per cent of the total audience.

"These new data," stated PBS President Lawrence K. Grossman, "indicate that public television is building a representative following among underprivileged and historically disadvantaged Americans. We are particularly pleased with the substantial increases among minority and less-affluent households."

Furthermore, he alleges that Doubleday didn't do right by him in the negotiations for the paperback rights with Dell Publications, now a subsidiary of Doubleday. He is now seeking an injunction to stop paperback publication by Dell and a release from Doubleday.

Julian Bond: Can Ben Hooks Save NAACP?

(The following is a commentary by Georgia State Legislator Julian Bond on the NAACP. It will be broadcast as part of the next edition of BLACK JOURNAL, "The New Warrior: Can Benjamin Hooks Save the NAACP?" which will be distributed nationally by the Public Broadcasting Service to its member stations the week of Sunday, April 17, 1977. Please check your local PBS television station for correct area broadcast time.)

Julian Bond: What used to be called the civil rights movement in the United States was never a really national phenomenon — Largely confined to the Southeastern states in the first half of the decade of the 1960's, it was a collection of Black people in independent motion, their activities sometimes coordinated by the big 4 — SNCC, CORE, SCLC and the NAACP — who had the organizers, orators, publicizers, and strategists to make this mass in motion a sometimes cohesive thing.

The unifying evil was the unreconstructed South; the troops were the high school and college age Blacks, who hurled their bodies at segregated lunch counters and later, segregated ballot boxes in the vaguely defined hope that they were creating a new, beloved community.

In a real and measurable way, they did. Legal apartheid has all but been eliminated in America. The political process is more open now than ever before.

But mild success blunted the young warrior's spears. The national consciousness which endorsed and supported an end to legalized discrimination balked at removing privately rooted racism — and its effects — from American life.

A foreign war drained our young manhood, our national treasury and more decisively, our national will. Our best and brightest were beaten down by bullets.

Young Whites, prevented from exercising romantic notions in the ghetto, refused to organize their parents and neighbors into an anti-racist army.

The big four dissolved until only the NAACP now exists — wounded and weak — as the sole national civil rights organization in America.

We're easy to get a loan with

If you're like most people, you need to borrow money from time to time to finance major purchases such as cars, boats, campers, home improvements and special vacations. By borrowing, you can spread the cost of a major purchase over time. And, you can sometimes take advantage of sales and special offers which you might otherwise miss out on. Borrowing money isn't as complicated as it sometimes seems. In fact, at Bankers Trust, we try to make it downright easy. Here are some things to keep in mind when you're thinking about getting a loan with us.

1. where to apply

You can apply for a loan at any Bankers Trust office. And, by the way, you don't have to have an account with us to get a loan. Go where it's most convenient for you. If you work downtown, stop in anytime at the main bank at Seventh & Locust. Or visit one of our other offices in Windsor Heights, Grimes, Eastgate, Merle Hay or South-Ridge.

2. who to see

At Bankers Trust, we make sure you'll have to go through as few people as possible to get a loan. When you come into one of our offices, ask any employee who to see about getting a loan. Very quickly, you'll be sitting down and talking to one of our Consumer Bankers. He... or she... can usually get your loan for you the same day.

3. ask questions

You'll always get full disclosure of the terms and conditions of a Bankers Trust loan. Besides being the law, it's the way we like to do business. But not everyone is familiar with all the legal and financial terminology, so question anything you don't understand, and keep asking questions until you're fully satisfied.

4. put it on paper

It's a good way to remember the answers to the questions you've asked. Our normal practice is to put information on a loan transaction in writing before the transaction is made. But it's a good idea to take your own notes on the particular questions you may have. We'll provide the pencil and paper.

5. be confident

Just remember, when you apply for a loan at Bankers Trust, you're not asking us for a favor. You're telling us you're interested in what we have to sell — the use of our money. And like any good business people, we know it only makes sense to give potential customers the respectful, friendly treatment they deserve. Try us. You'll find we're easy to get a loan with.

Richard Pryor Finally Gets The Girl

In his previous movies, Richard Pryor never got the girl.

In his latest film Universal's "WHICH WAY IS UP," the popular actor-comedian has four leading ladies, and winds up marrying three of them!

If that sounds like too much romancing for one man, it is. But Pryor niftily solves that problem by portraying not one, but three separate roles, all with his customary comedic gusto.

As he waltzes through one characterization after another, 'the ladies in his life' are actresses Lonette McKee, Margaret Avery, Marilyn Coleman and Gloria Edwards.

As Leroy Jones, a timid farmworker victimized by his own greed and ambition, Pryor is married to Annie Mae, a somewhat naive young woman who is reluctant to consummate her marriage.

Margaret Avery, school teacher-turned-actress is Annie Mae.

Forced to flee to the city because he is suspected of union sympathies, Pryor meets and falls in love with Vanetta, a fiery woman who offers him what he missed in his relationship with Annie Mae.

This role is deftly handled by screen newcomer Lonette McKee.

One of Pryor's other characters in "WHICH WAY IS UP" is that of Reverend Lenox Thomas, a guitar-playing, philandering storefront preacher who runs his church services like a rock concert.

Sister Sarah Thomas, his long-suffering wife, plays the church organ, leads the choir, supervises the collection and secretly yearns for revenge against her playboy husband. She eventually gets it...with Leroy Jones' help.

Marilyn Coleman handles the role of Sister Sarah like the acting pro she is.

In this third role, Pryor becomes the father of Leroy Jones; ageless, cantankerous, flirty Rufus Jones, a cagey coot who proclaims he has done everything...at least once.

Gloria Edwards is Rufus' wife, Janelle, 35 years his junior, but still happy with his prowess in bed.

Avery, McKee, Coleman and Edwards...together they help to create a new image for Pryor in "WHICH WAY IS UP" that of the consummate lover and philanderer.

After deserting the classroom, Margaret Avery got her start on the stage, performing primarily on the West Coast. Soon after turning to television and feature films, she earned critical acclaim for her co-starring role opposite Ben Vereen in "LOUIS ARMSTRONG, CHICAGO STYLE" a Television movie-of-the-week.

The soft-spoken actress is well known to TV viewers, frequently appearing in such top-rated series as "KOJAK," "SANFORD AND SON," and in the recurring role of Ruby in "HARRY O."

Ms. Avery appears as Belle, wife of famed ragtime composer, Scott Joplin, in Universal's biographical film, "SCOTT JOPLIN," starring Billy Dee Williams.

Lonette McKee, a tall, sultry beauty from Detroit, is appearing in her second feature film. Without benefit of formal training as an actress, she proved to be the 'sparkle' in last year's Warner Brothers release, "SPARKLE."

Critics loved her in the difficult role of Sister. Her director, Sam O'Steen, praised her as "a natural talent, possessing a quality before the cameras rare even among more experienced actors."

A former fashion model, Ms. McKee is also rated one of the most beautiful women in Hollywood. John Shannon, one of filmland's better known lensmen, says she has the most perfectly beautiful face he has photographed in the past 10 years.

Surprisingly, becoming a movie star was not Lonette McKee's first career choice. A composer-singer since the age of 10, she had a "hit" record at 14, and plans to continue recording and making night club appearances between film commitments.

Marilyn Coleman turned away from a potentially successful career as an opera singer to answer the call of "footlights and greasepaint." Since 1965, she has been a respected denizen of the legitimate theater.

Ms. Coleman got her acting start in Philadelphia's Theater of the Living Arts, appearing in such productions as "ALLEGRO," "BECKWITH," and "UNDER THE YUM YUM TREE."

For several years, she hosted a one-hour television show, "The Truth Shall Make You Free," over Public Broadcast stations, winning several awards for program excellence.

Ms. Coleman came to Los Angeles in 1967, and helped found the Inner City Cultural Center, a community supported theater which trains and showcases new black acting

"WHICH WAY IS UP" PRYOR'S LEADING LADIES...

In his previous screen roles, comedian RICHARD PRYOR never got the girl. In his latest film, "WHICH WAY IS UP," a Steve Krantz production for UNIVERSAL, PRYOR has no less than four ladies in his life as he plays three separate characters.

Gloria Edwards also earned her acting credits in legitimate theater, on and off Broadway, before turning to television and feature films. She starred or co-starred in several major stage productions, including "BLACK GIRL," "AIN'T SUPPOSED TO DIE A NATURAL DEATH," "AMEN CORNER," and "THE GREAT WHITE HOPE."

LOOK ON SPORTS

Just before the Drake Relays and right after the winter sports season we find ourselves embroiled in a grand mess about our Hilltop tennis meet. Maybe we will have one and maybe we won't. It all goes back to perhaps last year when our dates were miscalculated and we wound up a week later than we really wanted to. So the Des Moines Recreation department stepped into the slot that we had left and staged their recreation tennis meet. We had to put our meet back two weeks, but it came off all right in spite of a few lost tempers and the fact that we lost some people, because several folks plan their vacations so they can be in the thing, and couldn't change.

Well, this year we informed the Recreation group in early January that we desired the dates of August 1 for our meet. Well, we waited six weeks for an answer, and not hearing anything, we figured that we had the dates. So we informed the people who put out tennis tournament schedules the dates. Then after the schedules are printed comes the crusher. "You are in conflict with the last week of the National Junior Tennis League schedule. Sorry."

Trying to work out something, we thought we ought to have a date to work to, so we thought about the week of August 16 thru 21. But we really didn't want that week. Tried to bring our case before the Park Board, and was told that the latter date was acceptable. So I informed them that the club would meet and vote on that date, and might reject it. They did with a loud no.

In the meantime we received a permit for that time. There was but one thing to do. Send the thing back, and let the fellow know how we felt about it.

Then I learn that the NJTL has not even set up a schedule yet for the summer, and they would be willing to let us have that week if we can get it. Lots of people got mad when they heard about what took place, and if sympathy means anything, we might get something done.

People who are the leaders in tennis around the city are interested in seeing us get what we want, but I don't know if they can or not, at least not in time. You see, we must have things working within the next month, and it may take that long to resolve the squabble.

I am the last guy to cry discrimination, but it sure looks like a prime case of that to me. Why? I don't know. Why do people do what they do? For instance, why do people do things out of a purely racial motive and swear on a stack of bibles that they aren't doing it for that reason?

Maybe you can answer those questions better than I can. If you can, let me know.

This Hilltop meet has been going on for twenty nine years, and may be the only tennis meet in the country that is run by black people with the players ninety percent white. Certainly we were the first.

We have run it on a strictly no favoritism basis, and would default our brother if he came up wrong in it. For that reason we have enjoyed the respect of all of the folks who play in the meet and a bunch of non tennis players also.

It will be tough to bow out like this after nearly fifty years in the game, but about all I ever got out of the game was an immense measure of self respect, and if we can't have the time we want, at least I can keep myself respect by not letting our club be shoved around. Again, why?

I got my kit for Younker's Kodel tennis tournament next month and I hope we don't have a repeat of last year's fiasco. Our date will likely be May 7th and 8th at Good Park. Like to have a rather late date so we can get the late ones and those who got beat in earlier meets. Some people keep entering in meets until they either win one or until they are all gone. We hope to get some of those.

Our last year's winners were Ron Leizerowitz and his partner whose name escapes me. And then, to top

Drake Relays Events

Relays Week, a series of events on the Drake University campus held in conjunction with the 68th running of the Drake Relays, will run from Friday, April 22, through Saturday, April 30. All events are free and open to the public unless otherwise noted.

At 9:30 a.m. Saturday, April 30, the Shriners Honor Guard and the Drake Marching Band will lead the Relays Parade along Walnut Street from East 9th Street to West 12th Street. Bruce Jenner, decathlon winner in the 1976 Olympics, will be parade marshal.

The parade will be telecast by WHO-TV (channel 13) at 10 a.m. Relays track events will conclude at the Drake Stadium that afternoon.

TENNIS CLUB PRESIDENTS ATTEND KICK-OFF OF YAGO SANT'GRIA BLACK TENNIS CLASSIC

New York, New York — The Presidents of New York/New Jersey area tennis clubs recently attended a reception in their honor launching the Yago Sant'Gria Black Tennis Classic. These exciting tennis matches will take place at the Myrtle Beach Tennis Club, Myrtle Beach, South Carolina, April 14-17.

Everyone interested in participating in this glorious tennis-filled weekend should contact the Central Harlem Tennis Club at 212-926-8127.

it off, Ron wins the men's singles in our Hilltop meet. Maybe that was a harbinger of things to come.

Wonder why we don't get some blacks in this thing. It doesn't cost anybody anything, but you do have to furnish your own tennis balls, as the only thing we are putting out is eyes.

The winner of the local meet goes to the national Kodel meet in Grossinger's Resort New York, and that winner goes to the National meet at Forest Hills. A trip worth trying for and about the only meet in which you can lose and get right back in for another try maybe the next day or the next hour.

I feel good to be a part of this thing, because, while I sometimes think the Hilltop isn't taken very seriously, at least we are recognized as being able to put on a decent meet.

College tennis doesn't seem the same when I look over the Northern Iowa matches and don't see the name of Randy Krecji in the UNI lineup. Thought it was going to be the same way with Mark Morrow at Iowa, but he has gotten back on the ball. I could ask if he was sick or something, but I'd rather guess, and risk the chance of being wrong.

"An Equal Opportunity Employer"

From Rocky the Squirrel To Broadway: Shirley Brown

Shirley Brown is one young lady whose optimism is helping her along the road to success as an actress. You need a certain amount of optimism when your acting career begins with a portrayal of Rocky the Squirrel. Shirley landed that juicy part while majoring in drama and theatrical arts at the University of Cincinnati not too many years ago. Since then she has gone on to Broadway roles, television commercials and soap operas.

Shirley's potential for the performing arts first became evident during her days at Regina High School. Her refreshing beauty and outgoing personality captured for her the title of Prom Queen in her senior year. Upon graduation, she knew she wanted to be involved with people and attended Xavier University where she majored in communication arts. She later transferred to UC where she switched to drama.

Shirley Brown

After college she worked briefly as a girl Friday for a computer programming firm where her duties included demonstrating the functions of the computers to various companies around

Cincinnati. But Shirley kept her eyes on an acting career and soon became involved with the Cincinnati Playhouse in the Park. Her professional debut came in 1973 when she was featured in PIP's production of "A Raisin in the Sun" under the direction of Hal Scott.

It was a stock Broadway situation. Shirley was understudy to one of the major leads in the play. The starring actress became ill on opening night and Shirley went on in her place...with rave reviews. She later appeared in "A Rat's Mass" and "A Street Car Named Desire" at the Playhouse. This gave Shirley her first opportunity to work with professional actors. It also was a stepping stone in developing her talents further.

After consulting with other people in the performing arts, she decided to study her craft further with a well known teacher of drama in Pennsylvania. From there she made the jump to New York where she now lives, and makes a handsome living as an actress.

Shirley was recently featured in an off-Broadway production called "Eden," a family drama by Steve Carter with the renowned Negro Ensemble Company. The play concerned the hostility between different branches of a given race or religion. In addition to her off-Broadway appearance, she has appeared in TV's "Somerset," "The Guiding Light," and "As The World Turns." You have probably seen her in commercials for RC Cola, Tide, Secret and Holds cough drops among others.

From Rocky the Squirrel to Broadway and television, you have to agree that this personable young lady from Cincinnati is on the right road.

Iowa Power Property Tax

A partial payment of more than $4.7 million in property taxes was made March 31 by Iowa Power.

J. P. Glahn, Company Treasurer, said this week the total, $4,791,225.74, was paid to 30 counties in central and southwest Iowa. The figure represents the second payment of 1975-76 property taxes (payable in 1977).

Individual payments ranged from a low of $54.42 (Lucas County) to a high of $2,926,027.62 (Polk County). Revenue from property tax is used by county and city government and in the operation of schools.

"Property taxes are an integral part of the economic as well as governmental system in the U.S.," Glahn stated. "Iowa Power is pleased to do its part in helping maintain such services as the high standard of education that we all expect."

Carter Tribute to Black Press in 150th Year

WASHINGTON (NNPA) — President Jimmy Carter paid high tribute to the Black Press on its 150th Anniversary. His message and picture appear in the Sesquicentennial Black Press Handbook published by the National Newspaper Publishers Association.

Others writing in the Handbook include: Dr. Lionel C. Barrow, dean of the school of journalism at Howard University; Roland Wolseley, author of "Black Press U.S.A.;" Dr. Armistead S. Pride, retired dean of Lincoln's School of Journalism.

Dr. Henry G. LaBrie, III, author of "Perspectives of the Black Press;" Dr. Michael R. Winston, director of the Moorland-Spingarn Research Center at Howard University where the Black Press Archives and Gallery of Distinguished Newspaper Publishers have been established.

Dr. Carlton B. Goodlett, NNPA president and editor-publisher of the San Francisco Sun Reporter/Metro Reporter Group, charges in the Handbook that racism is a challenge that still confronts the Black Press.

The brief history of the Black Press which appears in the booklet was written by Sherman Briscoe, NNPA, executive director-emeritus who edited the Handbook. First black newspaper, Freedom's Journal, was founded by the Rev. Samuel E. Cornish and John B. Russwurm on March 16, 1827.

The booklet also carries a listing of NNPA member newspapers with their staffs, circulation figures, advertising rates, and short sketches of papers and publishers.

President Carter, in his message in the Handbook, wrote:

"The one hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the Black Press is a landmark in the history of freedom of expression and in the life of the country it has enriched. 'Americans can take the deepest satisfaction from the enduring contributions of the Black Press to advancing the ideals of social justice and equality of opportunity on which our nation was founded.

"This important national milestone is an appropriate time for all of us to salute the Black Press of our country. In this spirit I want to express my deepest personal respect for the integrity and public service of the National Newspaper Publishers Association in its championship of one of our most precious freedoms as citizens of a democratic society."

Copies of the Handbook, which sell for $5.00 each, will be distributed free to high school libraries by NNPA member newspapers in the 39 states, Virgin Islands, and Canada where they are published. Purchases of the booklet may be made from the NNPA headquarters, 770 National Press Building, Washington, D.C. 20045.

Vocational Schools Are Not Breaking Sexual Stereotypes

(State College, Pennsylvania) — Two Pennsylvania State University researchers say U-S Vocational High Schools are making almost no effort to encourage young women to become plumbers, auto mechanics and electricians.

And they say this is happening despite agitation for equal treatment of women. Researchers Morgan Lewis and Lynne Warfield say stereotypes of male and female students are behind much of the problem.

They say their nationwide survey of Vo-Tech Schools failed to turn up a single school actively trying to enroll girls in what are considered to be traditionally male courses. And, according to their findings, very few girls in secondary schools across the country are enrolled in what the researchers call "Hard-Core Male Vocational Programs."

"The Penn State investigators say they surveyed the entire country during the 1974-75 school year in search of 'Pacesetter' schools. But they say they found none. However they say they located eleven that could be considered 'Non-typical.'

They define that type of school as having at least five girls taking one or more traditionally male courses. They say courses in printing, industrial chemistry, vocational agriculture and television arts would fit into that category.

The report says that when girls did take courses considered for males only, they did well. And after some initial teasing, they were accepted by teachers and male students.

The study said no relationship could be drawn between the choice of non-traditional courses and family background, the kind of toys the girls played with as children or the household tasks they performed.

The study concluded that Vocational High Schools could be the leader in breaking down sexual stereotypes.

FRENCH DEBATE ZAIRE AID

(PARIS) — The leader of the communist delegation to the French National Assembly was called for floor debate on aid to the government of Zaire. Robert Ballanger says he fears president Giscard D'Estaing has launched France on "An unending new colonial adventure."

TOP ADVERTISERS GET NNPA AWARDS — General Motors, Philip Morris, Ford Motor Company, American Tobacco Company, and General Foods, the top five national advertisers in the Black Press in 1976, received Affirmative Action Advertising Awards from the National Newspaper Publishers Association (NNPA) during its recent Sesquicentennial Observance in Washington at the International Inn.

Their total investment in reaching black consumers through the Black Press was placed at nearly $3 million by Amalgamated Publishers, Inc., a black advertising agency. Representatives of these top advertisers are shown above with their AAAA plaques of laminated Black Press mastheads.

Left to right: James Bowling, senior vice president of Philip Morris; Lee A. Archer, equal opportunity officer for General Foods; Levi Jackson, urban affairs director, Ford Motor Co.; Dr. Gloria E. A. Toote, former assistant Secretary of Housing and Urban Development, received a plaque for her equal opportunity work with that agency; Jarred Finney assistant advertising manager of General Motors; Dr. Carlton B. Goodlett, NNPA president; John W. Edghill, national sales manager, American Tobacco Co.; and William G. Moore, advertising director of American Tobacco Co.

Award participants not shown were: Peter DeLuca, vice president and general counsel of General Foods; Ms. Ethel Moore, assistant sales manager of Amalgamated Publishers, Inc., who served as mistress of ceremonies; and Jerrel W. Jones, NNPA 1st vice president and publisher of the Milwaukee Courier and the Milwaukee Star, who presided.

Keep Lewis on EEOC

Colston A. Lewis

Washington, D.C. — President Carter should be urged to reappoint the Honorable Colston A. Lewis of Richmond, Virginia to an additional full term on the Bi-partisan Equal Employment Opportunity Commission.

As the most experienced member of the Commission, he should be permitted to continue his efforts to eliminate discrimination in employment on the basis of race, color, national origin, religion, and sex as provided in Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1972.

Did you know that the Honorable Colston A. Lewis, Senior Member of the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission:

...Is nearing the END of his present term (June 30, 1977) as a member of this bi-partisan body that is responsible for eliminating discrimination in employment on the basis of race, color, religion, national origin and sex within the provisions of Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1972?

.....that he has served longer than any other Black member of the Commission in an atmosphere of the most invidious "benign neglect"?

.....that he is presently the only "voice in the wilderness" that is raised in defense of the rights of Black complainants who are seeking equal employment opportunity?

.....that he has been honored by the Southern Region of the International Personnel Management Association as the Commissioner most likely to continue to serve the interests of Equal Employment Opportunity for All citizens and good government principles?

.....that he voted for the consent decree in the American Telephone and Telegraph case, although more than 90% of the relief would be benefiting white female employees?

.....that he voted against the consent decree in the steel cases, because it did not provide the proper relief to female employees of all races?

.....that he is the only champion of the rights of all employees of EEOC, who are suffering the results of shabby in-house mismanagement and objectionable treatment by the very officials sworn to protect their rights?

.....that he is the first Black Presidential appointee — at sub-cabinet level from the South?

.....that he is a member of the Board of Directors of the District of Columbia United Way and Crusade of Voters of Richmond?

.....that he is a life member of the NAACP; the Trustee Board of the Second Baptist Church of Richmond, Virginia; a thirty second degree Mason, Mocha Temple of Shrine; Capitol City Elks Lodge; the Independent Order of St. Lukes; Old Dominion Bar Association; National Bar Association; Richmond Chamber of Commerce; Richmond Republican Committee; Virginia Trial Lawyers; Black Athletes Hall of Fame; World Association of Lawyers of the World Peace Through Law Center and Richmond Criminal Lawyers Association?

.....that he is a graduate of Virginia Union University (A.B.); he did graduate work in social psychology and race relations at Columbia University and received a Juris Doctor Degree from Howard University School of Law?

.....that he was president of his class at the famed Dunbar High School as well as Virginia Union University and received an Honorary Doctor of Law Degree from Virginia Union University?

.....that he served in the U.S. Army for four years in the South Pacific campaign and was decorated with the battle star?

.....that he founded the Crusade for Voters in Richmond.

But the most telling evidence is the fact that the militiamen have carefully avoided direct confrontations with the airborne soldiers of Zaire. Reports from both sides indicate that the militiamen have been conducting hit and run raids on towns and villages in the copper belt using machine guns and rockets.

The militiamen are conducting operations among a generally friendly population. Ties of kinship in the villages are providing the cover and supplies for extended guerrilla activity.

The militiamen, taking their cue from lessons learned in Angola, have established local government administrations directly involving the local population. Food gathering and food distribution is being organized for the population.

The militiamen have undertaken an operation, involving calculated risks of the largest magnitude, to force a change in the present governments domestic and international policies. If they succeed then relations between Zaire and Angola, severely strained since the Angolan war with Portugal, will become close and ease the Angolans fear of an invasion from Zaire, financed by French, British and especially Belgian interests.
