Dr. George W. Carver Named To National Hall Of Fame

Second In Race To Be So Honored: Booker T. Washington first

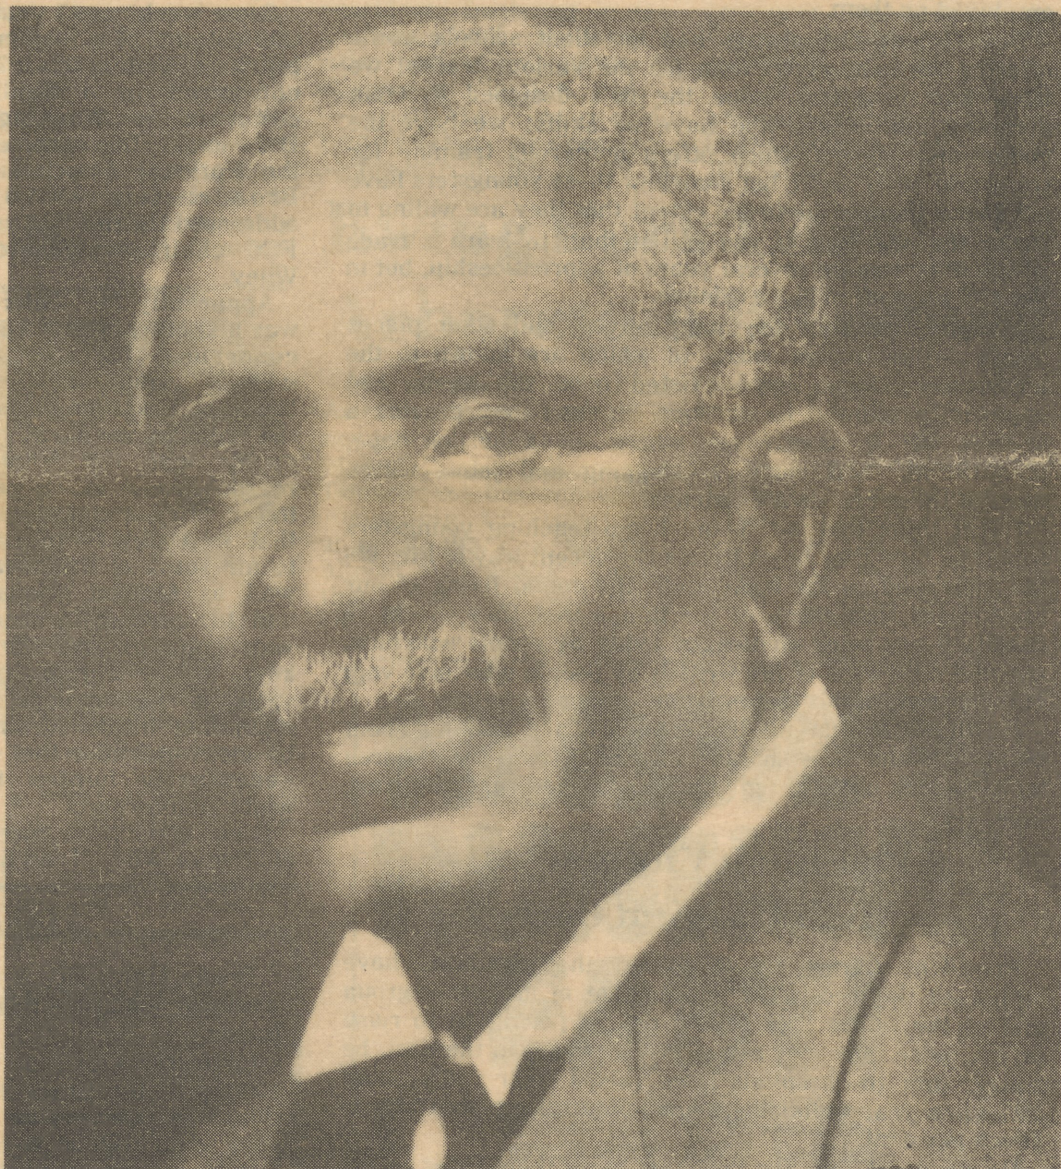

TUSKEGEE, ALA. — Dr. George Washington Carver, Tuskegee Institute's famed scientist-humanitarian, Saturday became the second black to be inducted into the Hall of Fame for Great Americans.

The first black to be inducted was Tuskegee Institute's founder, Dr. Booker T. Washington, who was enshrined in 1946.

Born a slave, Carver came to Tuskegee in the 1890s and with his research helped turn around the southern economy. He is best known for his work developing uses for the peanut.

Dr. Carver attended Simpson College, Indianola, Iowa, and was graduated from Iowa State University. A few years ago a new science hall was built at Simpson College and is named Carver Science Hall. At the time of the dedication the Iowa Association of Colored Women sponsored a special room in memory of Dr. Carver.

Iowa State University erected a new science building not too long ago and it to is named for Dr. Carver. Thus Iowa, to, has given great recognition to him.

Welton Charged With Police Murder

David Louis Welton, 22, 1416 22nd, was arrested and charged with murder in the shooting death of police officer Brian Melton last Thursday.

Melton, 25, was shot in the chest about 9:15 p.m. April 21 during a struggle between Welton and another police officer over a gun in the 3200 block of Bowdoin Street.

Officer Melton was killed by a bullet fired from a .38-caliber police revolver wrested from Police Officer Lawrence Reynolds. Bond for Welton was set at $500,000 by Magistrate Matthew McEniry.

Also arrested in the incident was Paul Anthony Bell, 36, 3307 Bowdoin St. Bell was arrested for intoxication. Jessie LeRoy Williams, 22, 314 E. Sheridan Ave. was held for questioning after the shooting but was later released by police and not charged.

The incident began when Officer Melton responded to a citizen complaint that intoxicated people were congregating on the side of Bowdoin St. Melton was alone when dispatched but was soon joined by three other officers.

Melton was apparently placing Bell in the police paddywagon when Welton started fighting with the other three officers. The three officers and Welton fell to the ground in the scuffle and Welton allegedly grabbed Reynolds' service revolver and fired twice toward Melton.

At the time Welton was on probation for a charge of assault with intent to commit rape. He pleaded guilty to the charge in April 1976 and was given a two year suspended sentence and released on two year's probation by Polk County District Judge James Denato.

Denato has been charged in a complaint filed by the Greater Des Moines Support Your Local Police group. The citizens group charged Denato with disregarding public safety by refusing to revoke Welton's probation last December.

Mawere Seeks Power For Black Rhodesians

by Tamara Cooke

The struggle for freedom in Rhodesia differs from the civil rights movement because most black Americans want to be accommodated into the system, while Africans want to create a new society, a Rhodesian liberationist said recently during a tour through Iowa.

Tapson Mawere, a representative of the Zimbabwe African National Union (ZANU), said recently during a tour through Iowa.

Tapson Mawere, a representative of the Zimbabwe African National Union (ZANU), said most African countries obtained their independence through means similar to those used in the American Civil Rights movement, but the similarity ends there.

"The Civil Rights movement seeks reforms and social adjustments. They look for accommodation into the status quo. They do not affect (people in) power," Mawere said. "Our struggle is not to seek social adjustments. We want to take power from where it is."

Mawere, who visited several Iowa cities as part of a tour through the United States to garner support for ZANU, is attempting to acquaint Americans with the situation in Rhodesia, known to Africans as Zimbabwe. He spoke to groups in Davenport and Des Moines and at Iowa State University and the University of Iowa.

Danger of Crime Breeding Areas

Ordinarily, I don't discuss evidence in a criminal case pending before the courts. Nor do I announce any opinion in advance as to the guilt or innocence of the parties.

Des Moines had a most unfortunate incident last week culminating the shooting death of a police officer. As told in the news media, this young man charged with the crime, has never had a chance having been involved in problems of misbehavior from his early childhood.

The problem of what to do with these unfortunate youngsters who ruin themselves and many others with whom they associate is difficult.

Daily I pass some areas where groups of youngsters gather day by day standing around doing nothing, with no jobs, but spend the time thinking up methods of getting by. And without jobs they have little money and, therefore, make plans how they can get another person's money to carry on the activities which they concoct.

As I look at the work being done in front of my office today, and the construction being done downtown by the utilities and builders, seldom are Negro youngsters being employed on them.

Des Moines has always had excellent schools, some offering elementary training for the various trades; we have had programs since the 60's designed to train dropouts and others who have no skills; we have the community college which offers numerous training for trade and other skills, but somehow these youngsters have not found themselves to the extent that they are willing to make the sacrifice, if you call it that, to learn a trade which may require several years of apprenticeship, but in the end pays off in big dividends.

Frankly, we have too many 'dives' and other places where crime breeds, many of which are known to the authorities. Some have existed over the years and apparently allowed to continue because they provide a section off to themselves where all kinds of dope, prostitution, theft rings, bootlegging and joints where most of these crimes are hatched.

I still think that we should begin teaching youngsters from the time they begin to talk the decent way of life. We have strayed so far away from the sound living of our forefathers that many of the things that they fought to maintain are being challenged today by people who have learned new ways of life written by people who have very few ideas of morals themselves.

I still think that all the noise we are making about building better jails should be spent helping the children learn to stay out of these jails. It is too late when they are teenagers.

President Challenges High Hospital Costs

President Carter has proposed that hospitals have increased their costs far beyond that of any other group and in the future they should not be permitted to raise prices more than nine per cent each year. In the past, he states, that the hospitals have raised their rates about 15% each year while others have only raised from four to seven per cent.

He proposes that the hospitals raise their rates in the future no more than the prevailing rates in other businesses. There is no reason why they should be favored over the others who are in the business of rendering services.

Medical costs are hidden in many ways today as specialists in one area or another are required rather than one bill from the hospitals. Of course, much progress has been made in health care and the medical profession need not be picked on only that they are dealt with on the same basis as others.

President Ford tried voluntary phases of controlling prices, but they failed. Voluntary compliance is not the remedy because every fellow raises his prices because the other fellow has raised his prices for products he must use.

I hope we can get some measure of relief in this matter of costs for medical services while the middle class are the ones, who even though maintaining some type of hospital insurance, always winds up paying the balance.

For more than two months now a Minority Ownership Task Force, headed by Ms. Patricia Russell, deputy director of the Commission's Industrial EEO Unit, has been formulating plans for the Federal Communications Commission's Minority Broadcast Ownership Conference.

The conference, a two-day affair (April 25-26) will for the first time in the history of the Commission take a serious look at several aspects of the industry that appear to be stumbling blocks to minority entry to and survival in broadcast ownership of commercial and non-commercial properties.

Some weeks ago I wrote in this column of a meeting of black broadcasters. They conferred in a day-long conclave in Washington, D.C. under the auspices of the National Association of Broadcasters (NAB). I addressed the meeting as did FCC chairman Richard E. Wiley.

Apparently the conference was a success. The NAB was concerned that there was now a group of minority broadcasters who belong to the organization along with a group who for whatever reasons does not. It seems the meeting was a success in that it permitted minorities to air some of their real as well as fancied grievances and to confront in concrete ways some experts who hold keys to the elimination of some of the more pressing stumbling blocks to smooth business operation that don't necessarily burden their white counterparts.

Soon after that meeting, chairman Wiley, I am happy to say, announced that the FCC would hold a two-day conference to look into some of the more egregious minority broadcaster charges in respect to difficulties in entering and succeeding in the complex and highly competitive world of broadcasting.

It is a singularly important conference and I hope that many interested blacks, especially those in opinion making positions, not merely the owners or potential owners of broadcast properties, will attend.

All meetings will be at the FCC, 1919 M Street, N.W., Room 856, Washington, DC. If that room becomes too crowded provisions are being made to accommodate an overflow audience in a second room which will receive a video-feed from the main conference room.

Topics to be addressed on Monday, April 25, are: (1) Sources of Financing — Federal and Private. This panel will include representatives from various federal and private funding sources, and minority broadcasters; (2) Access To and Use of Professional Help. This panel will include communications broadcasters, attorneys and educators from schools of communications.

On Tuesday, April 26, there will be a panel on Operational Problems as Barriers To Entry. This panel will include advertisers, rating services and minority broadcasters who have diverse program formats. And finally, there will be a panel on Public Policy Relating to Minority Ownership. This panel will include each overview speaker from previous panels, Commission personnel, representatives from the House and Senate Subcommittees on Communications and attorneys who are knowledgeable in the area of public policy concerns relating to minority ownership.

All of us know by now that owning and operating a business is difficult. The problems that are attendant to the operations of a bank, an insurance company or a savings and loan association are the same as those of an apple stand, barbershop, shoe shine stand or barbecue restaurant.

There is merely a difference in scale. Of all the small businesses that begin operation in any given year, 20 percent fail in the first year, and there is an attrition rate of failure that continues in succeeding years. This is true regardless of race or color or whatever of the entrepreneur.

So a small business venture is a high risk venture at best and radio being such a highly complex and competitive enterprise, is no exception to this failure-success in this highly selected field that do not assail his white counterpart on the same mammoth scale: financing the initial purchase, securing national advertising to insure survival and ultimate operational success; securing skilled help, etc.

This historic conference will address these vexing problems and hopefully point the way to the solution of some. The FCC wants to bring more diversity of voices to over-the-air broadcasting. More minority ownership of radio-TV licenses will help bring this diversity to the marketplace.

Therefore, anything that impedes the entry of minorities or operates against their making a success in this competitive field is against the public interest the FCC is mandated to serve.

Drake Relays

Drake University is sponsoring its annual 'Relays' this weekend bringing athletes from schools all over the country.

Contestants in past relays have not only made great strides at the Drake Relays but have gone on to higher things in professional sports and at the olympics. This year girls will be in full force in competition for many events among themselves. This continues to add a new tone to the meet and many will be on hand to witness this event by the women.

The relays are well worth attending both as entertainment as well as the support given a worthy project in Des Moines.

Masonic Research Chapter Organized

by Paul V. Best

Exec. Sec. Phylaxis Society

Saturday, April 23 signalled another historic occasion for the Iowa Prince Hall Masons and the city of Des Moines: the establishment of the A.G. Clark Chapter of the Phylaxis Society. The Phylaxis Society is an international research body comprised of Prince Hall Freemasons who seek more light and who have light to impart. Literally, it attempts to promote, protect and to preserve Prince Hall and Prince Hall Freemasonry, which has celebrated 202 years of existence in the United States. (Note that the Prince Hall Fraternity is as old as the United States itself).

Best became the first member, Dr. Lewis James having been informed by a sharing of knowledge with another Iowa Mason, and has since built the Chapter until it now numbers 15 members statewide. It is dedicated to A.G. Clark who thus far has been the most prominently nationally known Prince Hall Mason from Iowa. A Past Grand Master of Missouri, and the first Grand Master of Iowa, A. G. Clark was an entrepreneur and eloquent spokesman for Civil Rights. His son was the first Black graduate of the University of Iowa Law School and A. G. himself entered at age 57 and became the second Black graduate. When his daughter, Susan, 12 was refused admission to a grammar school, Clark sued the school board resulting in an Iowa Supreme Court landmark decision which ruled that all children — regardless of race, religion, nationality or appearance — had a right to attend Common School in Iowa (1867). A most befitting and well deserved commemoration.

PAUL BEST

The Chapter establishment coincided with a personal visit paid to Best, (who is) Executive Secretary of the Society, by President Joseph A. Walkes, wife Sandra from Leavenworth, Kansas. It would have been unthinkable not to share this moment with the members. Hence, Ms. Bertie Hayter and Doris Wilson, both active in local Eastern Star Chapters saw to it that Ms. Walkes was well introduced to Des Moines, while the men entertained President Walkes. An invitation was extended to Jerry Marsengill (Des Moines) and Keith Arrington (Cedar Rapids), both Honorary Fellows of the Phylaxis Society and ardent supporters of Prince Hall Masonry, to fellowship. Certificates of membership as Charter Members of the A. G. Clark Chapter were presented to the following: Paul L. Wilson, Dr. Lewis A. James, Cleo Morrison, Jerry Marsengill, Basil B. Townes,

Bobby L. Ray (Davenport), Keith Arrington (Cedar Rapids), Jake L. Nelson (Burlington), Joseph P. Wallace, James O'Daye, Victor Coleman, Everett Matthews, Charles Watkins, Milton Price, Edgar L. Palmer, and of course Paul V. Best. A special award for meritorious service to the Phylaxis Society and Prince Hall Masonry in general was presented to Joseph A. Walkes, President, from the

Chapter. The men were then joined by their wives for a buffet and all enjoyed good fellowship.

Our special thanks to Sister Evelyn Davis for her assistance and to my wife Carolyn Best and all the members who worked so diligently to make this program a success. A note of special appreciation to Grand Master Adolph Ollison for allowing the members to participate in the Phylaxis Society and therefore find out more about Prince Hall Masonry.

Hijacker Wants to Come Home

On January 22, 1971, Black Panther Garland Grant of Milwaukee, Wisconsin hijacked a Northwest Airlines jet to Cuba. Six years later Grant looks upon that day as "the dark day of my life."

The years in between were filled with racism, hard labor, and 5½ horrible years of prison during which he lost an eye in a beating by prison guards.

"I've been in this place six years and I'm out of my mind. Believe me, I'm all for the United States now," he said.

Grant approached an

Associated Press reporter with his story on a park bench in Havana. He said he was probably being watched but he no longer cared. "They can't do anything more to me that they haven't already done but put a bullet in my head."

Grant said his main goal in life is to get out of Cuba. He just doesn't know how. He began efforts to return to the U.S. six months after he arrived in Cuba. He believes that is what has caused most of his trouble. Currently he is trying to get help from the Swiss embassy which represents U.S. interests in Cuba.

Garland Grant

He knows that he would go to prison in the U.S. for the hijacking but that doesn't bother him. "Just open my cell door, and I'll walk in."

After this stirring message, there was an altar call.

QUESTION: I'll be 62 in September and expect to retire and apply for social security retirement payments. I know that my payments will be reduced because I'm retiring before 65. However, my wife is now 65 and will also be applying at that time for checks on my earnings record. Will her benefits also be reduced?

ANSWER: No. Since your wife has already reached age 65, she will receive an unreduced wife's benefit. She will actually receive about 62.5% of what you receive.

QUESTION: I'm covered by both parts of Medicare, the medical insurance and the hospital insurance. However, I also have private insurance. Will my Medicare benefits be reduced because of the payments I get from the private insurance?

ANSWER: No. Medicare benefits will be paid no matter what other benefits you get from a private health insurance plan or through any other private casualty and liability insurance.

QUESTION: I left my job 18 years ago to get married. I haven't worked at all since that time but I'm going back to work now. Am I still entitled to the social security credits I earned for the time I worked before I married?

ANSWER: Yes, indeed, your earnings credit remains on your social security record permanently. When you return to work, the credits you earn under social security will be added to your social security record and will help build up protection for you and your family.

'DING' DARLING EXHIBIT OPENS APRIL 27 AT ISU

Ames, Iowa — "Agriculture and Conservation" is the theme of an exhibit of works by the late J.N. "Ding" Darling at Iowa State University's Brunner Gallery from April 27 through May 26.

Darling was editorial cartoonist for The Des Moines Register for more than 40 years. His cartoons of politics, humor, conservation subjects and life in general enjoyed great popularity and through syndication appeared in daily newspapers throughout the United States.

He twice won the Pulitzer Prize for his cartoons. Although he was a Republican, his interest in conservation caused him to be appointed chief of the U.S. Biological Survey by President Franklin D. Roosevelt in 1934. In Washington, Darling assisted in the passage of the Migratory Bird Hunting Stamp Act of 1934 and designed the first Federal Duck Stamp.

Zack Whyte, Al Sears, Fletcher Henderson, Noble Sissle and Benny Carter. In 1944 Roy left the road and started arranging and gigging exclusively in the Los Angeles area.

During this period he played with and arranged music for such world famous show business personalities as Duke Ellington, Tommy and Jimmy Dorsey, Artie Shaw, Earl "Fatha" Hines, Charlie Barnett, Les Brown, Sammy Davis Jr., Ella Fitzgerald, Frank Sinatra, Sarah Vaughn, Cab Calloway and Nat King Cole.

At the time of his retirement in 1965, Roy was associated with Desi-Lu Productions in Hollywood, California.

Energy theme announced by savings & loan company

Richard L. Bryan

One of the first adoptions of the Iowa Energy Policy Council's (IEPC) new energy action theme was announced at a press conference held April 21 in Des Moines. The joint press conference was called by Iowa Power and Des Moines Savings and Loan Association. At the conference, Richard L. Bryan, president of Des Moines Savings, announced that he had issued instructions to his marketing and advertising departments that, effective immediately, the IEPC action theme would be incorporated into Des Moines Savings' new Energy Conservation Program. Bryan added that the theme of "Do Something ... Do It Now!" would appear in all of Des Moines Savings' energy related advertising.

In addition to the theme adoption announcement, Bryan announced that a four-month series of energy conservation seminars and displays will be offered free to Iowa homeowners, beginning in May.

Bryan said that Des Moines Savings has developed a special energy loan program to coincide with the educational program and IEPC's energy conservation promotional efforts.

The loans, according to Bryan, would be made at the homeowner's present mortgage rate for the remaining term of the mortgage. To illustrate how the loans would work, Bryan gave the following examples:

For Iowans who are not Des Moines Savings mortgage holders, 10-year, nine percent loans for up to $5,000.00 are available, again for energy saving home improvements, Bryan said.

"Obviously, this loan program is expensive for any lending institution to offer," Bryan commented, "however, if we are to meet the goal of insulating 90% of America's homes and buildings, we all have to make sacrifices, now, before it's too late."

East Des Moines Woman of the Week

Perhaps this letter comes a little overdue, as I would like to nominate Mrs. McCeil (George) Clinton, 725 S.E. 26th Street Court, for the "Woman of the Week." As an active Christian leader, she is presently the President of Church Women United; a member of the D.M. Religious Area Council, State Youth Director of the Iowa M&E Baptist State Convention; Sunday School Teacher, and at our church, she began several church groups such as children's choir, youth choir, young matrons, junior ushers, etc. She is a PTA member having received the "Lifetime Membership Award"; All of her four children have graduated from East High, and attended college.

During the East High football season and basketball season, you can find her helping in the concession stand. She was elected to the Board of PTA Council. She is a well known speaker and narrator for the religious pageant, the Old Ship of Zion. She is always aiding in helping others, young people and elderly people as well; aiding those in the community who are in need. Her work never ends for she feels the needs that others have and attempts to fulfill them with love and compassion, and as the Master said, "love thy neighbor as thyself."

Alcoholism Program On Public Television

Carol Burnett hosts this special which incorporates hard facts mixed with

Model City Home Repair Proposed

David Pickett, chairman of the Model City citizen's board, will propose a $100,000 home repair project for the area at the Des Moines city council meeting next Monday.

The plan to improve the appearance of homes in the neighborhood located north of the downtown area would include a repair truck with necessary tools to make home repairs.

The plan will stress improving the appearance of the homes in the area rather than making major repairs to bring homes into compliance with city codes.

Pickett thinks the program will increase home ownership in the area and will increase area pride among Model Cities residents.

He said the $100,000 will come from funds not used in a $3 million urban renewal project in the area.

with an alcoholic to admit the problem and then get help. She points out that alcoholism is a disease which can hit any "average American" and frequently does.

DRINK, DRANK, DRUNK was originally telecast in 1974. This rebroadcast can be seen on IPBN Channel 11, Des Moines; Ch 12, Iowa City; Ch 21, Fort Dodge; Ch 24, Mason City; Ch 27, Sioux City; Ch 32, Council Bluffs; Ch 32, Waterloo; and Ch 36, Red Oak.

Waterloo Black Radio Station Nears Air Date

A Black radio station for one of Iowa's largest Black communities is one step closer to reality. A $25,000 Manpower Grant was okayed Monday by the Black Hawk County Board of Supervisors. Afro-American Community Broadcasting will use the monies to pay the salaries of three staff members including an administrator.

"The range of the station will be limited to Black Hawk County," says W. C. Cribbs, president of board of directors. "But, by keeping in touch with other Black information agencies we hope to establish at state wide network of Black news".

The organization was one year old on April the 4th. As a non-profit group the station hopes to receive funding from public and private agencies. "As a community owned and operated station we intend to program to the needs of the people", says Ralph Patterson vice-president of the board. Other board members commented that discussions on employment, education, the arts, and issues of self-determination will be key elements in forming programming. Patterson went on to say, "We plan to be more than just a juke box, though we will give folks musical entertainment that they are not now receiving."

Support has come in the form of money, food and clothing with Iowans contributing about $1,500 in cash and several boxes of clothing.

A Cornell University graduate in agricultural engineering, Mawere, 47, said most Americans have a one-sided opinion about the strife in Zimbabwe because their information comes only from newspapers and periodicals.

Zimbabwe (Rhodesia) has a population of about 6.5 million with 96 per cent black and 4 per cent white. The country is ruled by the small percentage of white with most of the blacks exploited and denied human rights, he said.

The name Rhodesia comes from the empire builder, adventurer and Prime Minister of Cape Colony, Cecil Rhodes. In 1890, Rhodes sent an expeditionary force of British settlers to colonize Zimbabwe on behalf of the British Government. In 1896, the country was ruled by Rhodes British South Africa Co. Relationships in the country rapidly deteriorated from 1898-1930. White settlers in Zimbabwe were granted internal self-government with a cabinet and Prime Minister and were allowed to raise their own defense. The Land Apportionment Act was passed by the Rhodesian regime in 1930, dispossessing most Africans of their land.

"The first purpose of colonization was to exploit Zimbabwe. That purpose has never been removed. We were given the west, rocky, barren land, while the settlers took the rich soil, like you see in Iowa," Mawere said.

ZANU was formed in 1963, and Mawere said the organization usually is described in the American news media as a militant, guerilla organization that frequently uses violence. ZANU is illegal in Rhodesia, he said.

Mawere does not dispute published reports about his organization: "In my country, workers are paid a maximum of 3 cents, 6 cents and 10 cents an hour. Bread cost 48 cents. You think these people don't like bread. You think these people don't like meat. Sure they do. That is violence. Our children are disfigured from malnutrition. You think these people like to see their children disfigured. That is violence."

"That's the trouble in Zimbabwe," Mawere continued. "We cannot allow violence imposed on people to go on. If we allow them participation in the government, we'd be run down."

Other problems encountered in Zimbabwe are foreign companies. Mawere said there are 52 United States corporations in Zimbabwe, including Union Carbide and U.S. Steel. South Africa had about 360 American companies. In Zimbabwe, the companies employ about 927,000 Africans with 337,000 of them farm workers, he said. The firms, which in America pays its employees up to $200 a week, pays African workers an average of $10 a week, according to Mawere.

"American foreign policy is intended to protect profits, not people. America and Britain (don't support liberation movements) because they are not sure their industry can continue under a new government," he said, adding that the U.S. refuses to support Zimbabwe because "we use violence for change. But actually, you are just choosing 6 certain type of violence."

He said foreign companies probably would not leave the country when the government changes hands.

"I don't believe they will run away. The U.S. will stay because they want our chrome ... there is no place else they can get chrome like ours. To run away means the industry will collapse at home. They need the raw material."

Despite the problems faced by the ZANU, Mawere predicts the struggle will end within 24 months. The reason, he said, is because white settlers are beginning to leave the area — more than 10,000 left the country last year and about 1,500 pack up a month. Also, tourism has "come to a standstill" with most of the hotels "closed or empty."

"Quite significantly, the (Rhodesian) government has reached the ends of its rope in terms of recruiting. Now, they recruit women ... recruiting everybody under 38 and are drafting men between the ages of 38-50. Also, the ratio of guerillas to security force members was 10-1, now its 5-1. By all signs it won't last too long," Mawere said.

Mawere said ZANU will be prepared to take over the government, which has been visualized as a "Democratic state with a socialist" system. ZANU is supported by Sweden, Russia and individual Americans and has been using the funds to, among other things, educate about 6,000 Africans and send several thousand more to schools in the U.S., England, Europe and Canada.

"Whites can stay if they agree to black rule," Mawere said. "But there will not be any sense of liberation or independence if there's just a change of icing on the cake — once it was green and now it is yellow, but the substance is the same. We are not fighting to Africanize the oppression of Zimbabwe people."

Stamp show

A Stamp Show will be held at the Downtown Ramada Inn, 929 3rd Street, Des Moines on Saturday and Sunday, May 7 and 8. The exhibit is free and open to the public from 10 a.m. to 9 p.m. on Saturday, and 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. on Sunday.

There will be United States and United Nations Postal Stations and a 16-dealer bourse. Two special historic cacheted envelopes designed by William Wagner, Des Moines artist and architect, will be available.

New College Fund Advertising Campaign

"We are turning a corner with this campaign," Christopher F. Edley, executive director of the United Negro College Fund, declared at a news conference announcing the sixth "A Mind is a Terrible Thing to Waste" public service advertising campaign being produced by The Advertising Council on behalf of the UNCF.

"For the first time we are not begging, or underscoring our need or making a negative appeal," he said. "We are saying, 'Look, America, look how far we've come with your help! We're proud of our progress, but we need your help to let us continue it.'"

Robert P. Keim, president of The Advertising Council, said in announcing the campaign, "The United Negro College Fund has been one of the most heartening success stories among Advertising Council campaigns, and we believe that the new media materials will help it to reach new levels of public response."

Mr. Keim indicated that since the campaign was accepted by the Ad Council years ago the rate of giving has climbed from six or seven million dollars annually to thirteen and a half million last year.

The United Negro College Fund is the non-profit organization which raises money to help operate forty-one predominantly Black member colleges and universities. All UNCF schools are private and full accredited.

The Advertising Council is the non-profit private organization established by the advertising, media and business communities to produce public service advertising campaigns in the national interest. At the present time, the Council is producing 28 major public service advertising campaigns in such areas as child abuse, high blood pressure education, older persons as a national resource, and the American economic system. Such well-known national symbols as Smokey Bear, who warns about forest fires, and Iron Eyes Cody, the Indian who cries about pollution, are products of Ad Council campaigns.

The Black Presence: A Matter of Legitimacy

NEW YORK — The theme of this year's BLACK JOURNAL series has been "The Black Presence." In its ninth season — making it the longest-running national Black public affairs program on television — BLACK JOURNAL reviews the issues and topics examined by the 1977 BLACK JOURNAL series, how they reflect "The Black Presence" concept, and the role played by the series for both Blacks and Whites.

"The real challenge to Blackness in the last quarter of the 20th century is legitimacy," BLACK

JOURNAL's host and executive producer Tony Brown said. "Slavery has gone by the wayside and racism is grudgingly following, but the effects of both are still with us. In our own small way, here in this studio, we fight the remaining injustices by bringing into focus issues and personalities not traditionally allowed on TV."

"By legitimacy, I mean that the Black presence must be represented in the same way the White presence is, based on the following assumption: Blacks are just like Whites — most of us are average, some geniuses with a liberal sprinkling of fools."

"We've struggled at BLACK JOURNAL for nine years now — learning, failing and succeeding at understanding ourselves, our Black community and the use of mass media," Tony Brown said. "...BLACK JOURNAL is a program with a mission — to serve by enlightening our Black community and secondarily our White community. We're a team of people of various backgrounds — and we know that the Black presence is a legitimate one and we're learning how to present it in universal terms."

Spring Rains Bring Traffic Accidents

April showers may bring May flowers, but they also bring slippery driving conditions and increased accidents, according to the Iowa Department of Public Safety. Facts indicate that more fatal and injury accidents occur annually during rainy weather conditions than during sleet or snow conditions.

One obvious wet weather problem is reduced visibility and increased stopping distance. Drivers should keep twice as much following distance as normal, and start braking as much as three times earlier in order to avoid an accident.

Another problem may be hydroplaning, which occurs when a vehicle's tires start to ride on top of the water surface, instead of the surface of the road. This results in the loss of traction, essential both to safe steering and braking. Good tires with deep treads and a reduction in speed can help solve the problem.

A new rain may also cause streets and roads which have accumulated a thin coating of oil to become slippery when the rain mixes with oil. This is particularly a problem at intersections where cars stop. The amount of time necessary to wash this mixture away may vary from 10 to 15 minutes to two hours, depending on the intensity of the rainfall.

A final problem may occur when a motorist drives through a deep puddle at a high speed. This may result in a flooded engine, which will quit due to the sudden intake of water, or flooded brakes, which may refuse to hold. A few light applications of the brake pedal will serve as a test and will also help to dry out the brake linings. If the engine gets wet and starts to sputter, shift at once to a lower gear and continue driving, or pull off the road, shift to neutral and feed the engine enough gas to keep it going. The heat of the engine should dry the moisture.

Drivers are encouraged by the Department to take special caution in the spring months in order to avoid potential accidents.

THE POWER & THE GLORY

By Dr. G.E.A. Toote

New Budget Concept

Most businesses, governments and even homes use the traditional budget formula of devising consistent spending levels for re-occurring expenses.

Let's assume you have been intending, and trying to stop smoking. Yet, every week when you go to the grocery store you carry the same basic list for purchase. Items that vary from week to week are added, on the way to the market.

Old Risk

Chances are when you leave the check out counter, your usual purchase of cigarettes will be in the grocery bag. You chuckle and remember that you forgot not to buy the cigarettes.

This happens to government and business also. They get accustomed to standard expenses, and budgeting for them becomes automatic.

No Re-evaluation

The reason why the item appeared on the budget may be forgotten. The continued expense need is not re-evaluated, and new products, possibly cheaper or better are never considered.

Costly Confusion

This is an over-simplification of a growing budget problem, that is real and costly to government. It is one of the reasons there is a

High Blood Pressure, Your Doctor and You

Your doctor has just told you that you have high blood pressure (hypertension) and that you need treatment. It is important that you understand a few things about blood pressure in order to cooperate as full as possible with your physician.

Hypertension is no longer a disease to be feared, yet you cannot sit back and ignore it. Recent studies have shown that modern treatment is helpful and can prevent many of the complications that occurred in some patients prior to the availability of effective therapy.

What is high blood pressure? Normally, when a doctor records your blood pressure, he writes down two numbers, an upper one called the systolic pressure, and a lower one known as the diastolic pressure. The systolic pressure represents that blood pressure in the arteries when the heart is pumping; and the diastolic pressure is the pressure in the arteries at the time the heart is filling with blood for the next beat. Usually, in any person under the age of 40, a systolic pressure greater than 140-145 is elevated. When the diastolic pressure is constantly greater than 90-95, the diagnosis of hypertension is justified.

According to the Iowa Heart Association, it should be clear that modern treatment of hypertension may be complicated proliferation of programs for the same services emulating from various agencies.

The public is confused and does not know which agency to apply to for assistance. The funds are so spread out that administration is not cost effective, and in some instances the program no longer has merit.

Zero Based Budgeting

Zero based budgeting may be a tool to reduce government spending, and the hidden funded projects that only politicians and their friends are aware.

It annually requires dividing the budget into specific functions, with program priorities ranked in terms of value and need.

Employment Effect

Consistent dropping of old programs, and the adding of new ones will not adversely effect government employees. A stable number can be maintained by transferring personnel from closed programs to new ones.

This allows an effective use of manpower, and may reduce the present tendency of federal employees to be bored and complacent in job attitude, because of program ineffectiveness and bureaucratic refusal to encourage change and improvement.

Implementation

More than 100 major corporations have accepted this new budgeting concept. We can expect President Carter to implement zero based budgeting in fiscal 1979, next January.

Black America would do well to follow program implementation closely, and be prepared to justify the continuation of those programs that are in our best interest; and be prepared to secure employment in this new procedure of accounting.

Search for preschool handicapped children

A special project designed to identify and serve handicapped children of preschool age has been initiated by the Heartland Education Agency, director of special education for the agency, Dr. Robert G. Gibson, has announced.

The project, which features an intensive search for such children together with a program of education for them and their parents, will be conducted by the special education staff of Heartland in cooperation with local school officials, Gibson said.

Heartland, a public agency, is the educational resource and service center for the 63 local school districts of area eleven. One of the agency's primary responsibilities is to ensure that each handicapped child in the area is enrolled in an educational program that is appropriate to the child's needs.

"Handicapped children are best served when they are identified and placed in a proper educational program as early in life as possible. Early identification gives handicapped children the best chance to cope with their disabilities both immediately and in the future."

"So, we're asking parents of children with known or suspected handicaps to get in touch either with us at Heartland, or with the principal of the nearest elementary school," Gibson said.

According to Gibson, handicapped children who can benefit from the program include those with poor speech or speech defects, hearing or sight loss, or any of a number of physical, mental or emotional disabilities.

"It is our feeling at Heartland that every child has a right to an education that goes beyond mere custodial care, in the case of many handicapped children. Proper educational programs can help handicapped children achieve their fullest potentials, but proper programs depend on the cooperation of parents, local school personnel, our support staff at Heartland and in some cases a consulting physician," Gibson said.

Heartland's special education staff, which supports the educational programs of area eleven's over 6,000 handicapped children, includes psychologists, speech clinicians, hearing clinicians, social workers and consultants in the education of physically, mentally, emotionally and visually disabled children. The agency also employs a number of itinerant teachers of the handicapped.

North 1st Choice

For Urban Campus

Two sites were recommended to the Des Moines Area Community College Board of Directors last night as locations for the colleges urban campus. A citizens committee recommended as their first choice that the college be moved to North High, a recommendation discussed in the past but opposed by the majority of the Des Moines School Board. As an alternative to North, the committee recommended building a new school on a tract of urban renewal land just north of the MacVicar Freeway. The board will discuss the recommendations at their May 9 meeting.

Welton

The complaint says Denato granted Welton probation last June in spite of a lengthy arrest record, sending him to the Fort Des Moines Correctional Facility.

Welton was a problem for the Fort Des Moines officials and later escaped. After his rearrest, Fort Des Moines officials told the judge they didn't want Welton any more.

Denato then found Welton violated the terms of this probation but did not revoke it.

The complaint has been filed with the Iowa Commission on Judicial Qualifications.

Voluntary Integration Plan For Milwaukee Neighborhoods

What can be done when the forced integration of a nearly all-white neighborhood threatens to lower property values in the area? One neighborhood's answer is to integrate voluntarily.

The Sherman Park section of Milwaukee is a predominantly white area with the city's largest concentration of elderly. Recently the Sherman Park Community Association (SPCA) began to receive complaints that some neighborhood residents, particularly the elderly, were being scared by unethical real estate practices into selling their homes to realtors for less than their actual values. The realtor would then use block-busting innuendoes to pressure neighbors to also sell their homes to the realtor at deflated prices. The home thus obtained could then be sold to Black families at actual worth for huge profits.

To fight such scare tactics, the SPCA designed the Neighborhood Affirmative Marketing (NAM) Program. The program, funded by a $15,000 grant from the Ford Foundation, has three goals: 1) To actively promote racially integrated housing patterns, 2) To further support home maintenance efforts by residents, 3) To evaluate and publicize the results of the program to other communities.

The NAM program will attempt to direct Black families to homes being sold by absentee landlords or by elderly Sherman Park residents. One part of the plan is specifically aimed at older duplex owners who are having difficulties keeping up their homes on a fixed income. Under this plan, the duplex would be sold to minority couple who would then rent to the original owner. Thus the senior duplex dweller would be relieved of ownership responsibilities but would not be required to move.

Another practice used by unethical realtors to maintain segregated neighborhoods is that of showing homes in certain areas to only one race. The NAM program would fight this by compiling a list of homes for sale and another list of minority families interested in buying homes in Sherman Park.

According to program coordinator Gordon Kacala, the SPCA goal for this summer is eight to ten Black transfers into Sherman Park. This goal includes only homes sold by absentee landlords or senior citizens planning on remaining at the same address. Not included in NAM are homes of those leaving the neighborhood.

Once a minority family moves into the area the SPCA plans a series of follow-up events such as coffees, meetings, and social gatherings are planned to smooth the transition for both races.

These events will be intensified in the case of an elderly person who now has a Black landlord in the home he once owned. Special agreements in these cases will be made specifying the services the new owners will be expected to provide the tenants who may be too feeble to maintain their side of the duplex.

The NAM program is currently trying to publicize its services and to investigate any complaints of unethical real estate solicitation. The SPCA believes that its program could prevent panic selling by means of controlled integration and thus stabilize property values to the advantage of all. Response to the publicity so far has been non-committal.
