NAACP Membership Drive To Keep Charter, Support

A "Tribute to Roy Wilkins" membership campaign, recently launched by the Des Moines NAACP, also may help the organization retain its charter and regain support from capitol city residents, according to local President Vincent C. Chapman.

The vigorous membership drive formally began May 7, and Chapman said the goal was to add 2,000 new members to the current group of about 700 persons. The local branch plan to present a scroll with the signatures of all Des Moines NAACP members to Roy Wilkins, the national executive director, during the national convention June 27-July 1 in St. Louis, he said.

The 68th National Convention has gained nationwide attention because of plans by Wilkins to retire from his post.

"This is the kind of retirement gift from Des Moines that Mr. Wilkins would treasure and remember. We have a membership drive annually, but it's more important this year because it's the final year Wilkins will be at the national level. We felt there should be an extraordinary effort to say 'thanks Roy,' he said.

Chapman said the drive also may "re-ignite dedication and interest" among Des Moines blacks to the local branch. Several years ago, Chapman said the organization had about 1,500 members. The group slowly shrunk after the 1960s to only a handful and now is struggling to regain its previous force, he said.

"Des Moines is a unique community. It is isolated from the rest of the world. It's middle western and there's never the kind of tremendous things to rally around that seem to develop militancy," said Chapman. "Our problems are minute compared to Chicago and Detroit."

Another reason for the decrease in membership in the local branch has had

ADAPT Explained

The ADAPT Juvenile Facility is a goal-oriented, community-based program for juvenile boys. One goal we are striving to achieve is to become a positive force in our neighborhood. Hopefully, this will be achieved through a deeper understanding of our program.

This and subsequent articles are designed to open channels of communication which will convey information about our facility and staff.

The basic concept of our program is to work with boys that have problems in a community-based setting. Treatment is generally based on one-to-one counseling, group therapy, family counseling and vocational and educational development. Our program is designed to help these young people acquire a sense of responsibility for themselves and learn sufficient life coping skills.

What about the staff at the facility? We have a diverse blend of training and skills which make for an efficient and successful program. With only a few exceptions, the members of the staff hold a minimum of a B.A. degree, usually in the humanities. One staff member holds a Masters

Irving Neighborhood Clean-Up

In the next two weeks several resident groups from the Model City--Irving Neighborhood area with the cooperation of the City and the County will be combining their efforts to conduct an extensive clean-up of the neighborhood. Clean-up activities will be concentrated on two Saturdays in May--the 14th and the 21st.

On May 14th residents will be working north of University Avenue between 9th Street and the Des Moines River and south of University Avenue between Keosauqua Way and 6th Avenue. On May 21st clean-up will be concentrated in an area bounded on the north by Hickman Road, on the east by 9th Street, on the south by University Avenue and on the west by 30th Street.

Clean-up activities include:

- On May 14 and 21 volunteers from the area will be cleaning vacant lots and providing the elderly and unable with assistance in cleaning their yards and getting their trash to the curb.
- The Iowa National Guard will pick-up gathered trash in the neighborhood on those dates.
- The City Public Works Department will be providing bulk waste pick-up at front curbs during the week of May 16-20.
- In conjunction with the clean-up both the City and the County will be cleaning all public property in the area including streets and alleys.
- Junk car removal will be available at no cost to the property owner.
- The City will provide intensive rat and dog control during the clean-up.

Residents and property owners are encouraged to participate in the clean-up by sprucing up their own properties and volunteering their time to help others.

All manpower is volunteer, if you are interested in getting involved call Evelyn Davis, Irving Neighborhood Council at 243-4212 or 282-4037. If you need help call the Model City Site Office, 283-4104.

It is hoped that this clean-up will be the basis for an on-going clean-up and beautification project using youth manpower. Several groups including Polk County Extension, the Irving Neighborhood Council, New Horizons, and the Model City Neighborhood Foot Patrol are at this time trying to put such a project together for the summer.

Mistakes In Law Enforcement Can Be Expensive

Law Enforcement Officers often face terrible situations in the process of solving and arresting perpetrators of crime. And in the process occasionally they are inclined to forget the law and rules under which they operate.

It is understandable that an officer may, under pressure use sentiment and disgust, rather than follow the proper procedure and the law. But when this happens, the mistake may cost lengthy court proceedings and a terrific cost which the taxpayers must pay.

The Robert Anthony Williams case is an excellent example for had officer Learning performed his duty according to law and carried out the agreement with the defendant's attorneys the case would of been settled long ago.

At this time, another appeal is being made with reference to an appointment of an attorney to defend Williams alleging that a defendant has some right in selection of counsel to represent him in court. It is unfortunate that this has occurred when but it seems to me that a defendant has some rights in the matter even though the cost is paid by the taxpayers. The same is true of public funds paid for relief purposes. We hope that this matter can be consummated quickly and let the public forget about it.

Financial Aid to South Vietnam A Tough Decision

Generally speaking, the losers in a war are required to pay the victors for the expense incurred in carrying on a war. But in recent years, the United States has reversed this practice and help the losers recover.

However, during the present negotiations to normalize relations with Vietnam their representatives are asking United States to fulfill a promise by former President Nixon and Secretary Kissinger to give them 2.5 million dollars to rehabilitate the country which is now in the hands of the communists.

Congress is opposed to even discussing the subject. The promises of Nixon and Kissinger were conditional.

However, Congress feels that we have no obligation to fulfill it. Unfortunately, we got into this mess in order to stop the flow of Communism to Southeast Asia by first sending advisers and then specialists to teach the South Vietnamese soldiers how to use American made war materials. It developed that the South Vietnamese was losing the battle and we moved in to help bolster their defense.

It was unfortunate that we got into this situation but eventually Congress may make some contribution to the recovery to South Vietnam even though by doing so we help the Communist.

Iowa Development Commission Can Do More In Its Own Backyard

Iowa has opened an office in West Germany seeking to sell more goods to Europe and also to invite the location of some of the foreign industries in Iowa.

Recently, a group from the Iowa Development Commission visited Europe and some of the Middle East countries where they met leaders in industry in an effort to sell Iowa products to those countries and to interest European industries which may locate in this country to come here.

I am not so sure we need anymore foreign business industries because the money they make is generally sent back to their relatives and they also constitute a threat to American industry.

Very often we do things in an effort to help millions of disadvantaged citizens and later find ourselves in competition with products they send to this country. Today American manufacturers of television sets are appealing to federal authorities to curtail the flow of foreign made sets because they are losing the American market. In many cases, the goods are cheaper and perform better than our high priced sets made in America.

As a part of his energy message, President Carter proposes to give a tax break to owners of cars with low gas mileage which he states will penalize those who drive gussler gasoline cars. Apparently, he forgets that most of the small cars, which use less gas, are foreign cars which not only compete with American built cars but also enables the foreigners to profit by our mistakes.

What the Iowa Development Commission may well do is cooperate with the north east and midwest congressional coalition which is organized to funnel more federal projects in our part of the country rather than place all of them below the Mason-Dixon line.

Open Letter To Carter

Mr. James Carter, President
White House
1600 Pennsylvania Avenue
Washington, D.C. 20500

Mr. President:

Due to your recent stand on human rights, I want to call your attention to the wholesale violation of human rights here at the United States Penitentiary, Marion, Illinois.

There is a prison within a prison here called the long-term control unit. It has become known throughout the world as the "notorious" H-Unit. Prisoners are sent here from all across the United States to undergo behavioral modification treatment. Any prisoners who refuse to accept the dehumanizing prison system, and who speak out through the courts or the news media are likely candidates for the long-term control unit.

At the present time, there are 47 prisoners confined here: 27 Blacks, 4 Chicanos, 16 Whites. The place is divided into two units. One unit houses 11 Whites, 3 Blacks, and 1 Chicano. This is called the working section. Here the men are allowed out of their cages four hours to work and four hours for television and other benefits. Section two houses 24 Blacks, 3 Chicanos, and 5 Whites. They remain in their cages for 23½ hours daily.

The treatment program in the control unit consists of: physical beatings with baseball bats, forced druggings, mental torture, restrictive diet. Prisoners are used as guinea pigs for untested control methods and mind-depressing drugs. There have been numerous suicides.

The prisoners are given the barest minimum of required calories to sustain human life. Prisoners complain of food being laced with foreign matter, from ground glass to human feces and urine. In a recent news report, the U.S. Bureau of Prisons admitted that prisoners were on a restrictive diet, had been drugged, beaten, and that guards kept a container of urine which they used to douse prisoners with. They maintain that this place is necessary.

The Bureau of Prisons and Warden James Riggsby contend that H-unit is used to house "the most dangerous men in America". Listed below is a profile of the "most dangerous men in America":

Ismail Muslim Ali

(LaBeet) has been in the control unit for 13 months. Reason? "Out of place." He was in an unassigned area, talking to some of his friends. He is Muslim.

Andrew D. Kelly has been in the control unit on indefinite status — 5 months so far. Reason? "Insolence to a white guard."

Randolph B. Peoples has been in the control unit since October, 1976. Reason? "Refusing to obey an order."

Eddie Griffin, chairman of the Black Cultural Society, has been in the control unit for six months. Reason? He received a letter from the Free World asking all prisoners to boycott 4th of July events.

George Blue, chairman of the National Prisoners Association, has been in the control unit since May 21, 1976. Reason? "Unauthorized use of mail." He put a letter to the warden in the wrong mailbox.

Donovan B.X. Gilliam has been in control units since June, 1974. Reason? "Verbally threatened an officer." He is a Muslim.

Milton Raines has been in the control unit since January, 1977. Reason? "Suspicion of having a knife and a past history of insolence to staff."

Spencer Chinn has been in control units since October, 1976. Reason? "Insolence to a White staff."

Hanif M. Shabazz (Gereau) has been in the control unit since May, 1974. Reason? "A fist fight". He is a Muslim.

Lawrence Bey has been in the control unit since April, 1976. Reason? 900 prisoners staged a peaceful work stoppage. He was the only one put into the control unit. He is a Muslim.

Steven Wooden has been in control units since October, 1976. Reason? "Assaulting another prisoner." Since then, another prisoner has confessed to this deed. Wooden was found guilty because of his hostile attitude and his size!

James Watson has been in the control unit since December, 1976. Reason? "Encouraging a boycott." He is a member of the Black Cultural Society.

Mr. President, the above are the "most dangerous black men in America. They have committed "terrible" rule violations to earn this label from the Warden and the Bureau of Prisons. Eight other Blacks are charged with some type of assault. 5 are on a variety of lesser charges. 2 Chicanos and 2 Blacks are charged with murder. 1 Chicano was charged with assault. Of the 16 Whites, most were charged with escape; 4 are charged with assault. No Whites were charged with "insolence", putting letters in the wrong mailbox, being out of place, or refusing to obey an order.

There is a strong implication of political, religious, and racist motives by the Warden and Bureau of Prisons behind these 12 men who were labelled "dangerous". The Bureau of Prisons, in a very racist statement, claimed that Blacks were more violence-prone than Whites. Yet there is documented proof that a large number of Whites were tried for murder and assault; none, however, were placed in the control unit. Instead, they were transferred to other prisons.

Mr. President, on March 18, 1977, two days after you addressed the U.N. on human rights, the Bureau of Prisons banned all Communist newspapers, as well as "The Progressive", one of the oldest magazines in the U.S. Reason? "This publication is being rejected by this institution because it has a tendency to glorify problem inmates, homosexuals, and prison unions which have been a problem to inmates and staff in the security and good orderly running of these institutions." This is reminiscent of the Nazi book burning and cleansing of the libraries. All these papers, as well as "The Progressive" had printed stories or editorials about the control unit at one time or another.

In closing, I wish to say that I hope you will show the same concern for our rights as you did for Vladimir Bukovsky and Andrei Sakharov. Thank you.

Dangerous Complacency About U.S. Unemployment

The growing complacency about unemployment is misplaced and betrays a lack of concern for the less fortunate members of society. An old saying has been amended. It now appears that familiarity breeds tolerance. There seems to be no other way to explain the lack of concern about an unemployment rate that is scandalously high.

We are now more than two years past the peak of joblessness, but the situation has improved only marginally. A historical comparison demonstrates that the job crisis is still real. The lowest rate of unemployment during this recession is equal to the highest rate of unemployment in any other previous post-war recession. Officially, there are still over seven million people unemployed. The official figures, however, badly underestimate the real extent of joblessness. They take no account of the workers who have become so discouraged that they have quit looking for work. And they do not include the workers who have been forced to take part-time jobs, even though they need and want full-time jobs. Thus, the real unemployment rate is around 10 percent.

Not only is the situation bad today, but there is little prospect for quick or significant improvement. It is unlikely that unemployment will fall below five percent, which is still too high, within the next four years. Even this modest improvement will require more rapid economic growth over the next several years than will be possible unless there is vigorous government action to reduce joblessness.

So it is particularly unfortunate that the Carter administration has dropped its tax rebate proposal, which was the major portion of its economic recovery program. Whether or not tax rebates were the best way to create jobs, dropping them is a major blow against the type of vigorous economic recovery needed to cut joblessness. This action is in conflict with the administration's own rhetoric and intentions. There is no doubt that reducing unemployment is a difficult task, perhaps more difficult than the President and his advisors had originally thought. The difficulty of the task, however, should not be an excuse for abandoning the effort or for pretending that it is already on the way to solution. Nor should it be reason to back away from making the goal of jobs for all a fundamental commitment of national policy.

The administration's retreat from full employment creates a number of dangers. Without full employment it will be impossible to achieve needed social reforms and improvements. But a greater danger is that complacency about unemployment will be contagious and frustrate other measures that are needed to improve the lives of the poor, minorities, and workers.

The Republican-inspired attempt to pass a permanent tax reduction, which has been defeated by the Senate, was a political gimmick not a serious proposal to create jobs. Under the guise of an effort to revive the economy, it would have foreclosed the possibility of enacting important reforms to which the administration is committed. It would have made it extremely difficult, if not impossible, to achieve a comprehensive tax reform later this year or next year. More importantly, it would have removed the revenue base that is needed for such long-overdue programs as national health insurance.

There is still a need to stimulate the economy. The $11 billion that was saved when President Carter abandoned the tax rebate should not be used just to cut the deficit; instead it should be used to directly put people to work. There is no way to get a balanced budget without full employment. Employment in public work programs can be substantially increased without creating any danger of inflation. Moreover, in addition to helping the general economy, these jobs can be aimed primarily at areas of high unemployment, where they will do the most good. Increased spending for public service and public works programs must now be supported by everyone who is committed to reducing joblessness.

Complacency about unemployment, in thought and action, must end. Social justice cannot be achieved until there are jobs for all our workers. We have waited long enough for vigorous action to put American back to work.

Ask For Support of NAACP

Dear Editor:

Fourteen years ago our beloved Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. spoke from the steps of the Lincoln Monument in Washington, D.C. about his dream for America, and Americans of color. He pledged to return to the wars and struggles for human rights as long as one vestige of discrimination, or racism remained.

Martin Luther King Jr. set the example for all as he dedicated his life to God's work and to the task of removing all barriers of racial discrimination through the democratic processes; should we do less? Over sixty years ago in 1909 the Niagra Movement which was to become the N.A.A.C.P. began the struggle to make freedom and equal opportunity a reality instead of just a slogan. Many have bled and died for these inalienable rights. The journey towards freedom and dignity has been a long journey, and the end is not yet in sight.

A few months ago most Americans and many black Americans experienced a renewed feeling of exhilaration and pride when "Roots", Alex Haley's tremendous prologue filled our lives and daily routines reminding many of us who had forgotten that "Black is Beautiful" and that we must never give up the quest for freedom, that we must never forget our heritage or our "roots".

Recently I was asked a question that many members of the N.A.A.C.P. are being asked. "What have you done lately?, and what are you doing for me today in Des Moines?" My answer did not please the questioner, at first because I answered with a question. "What do you want done for you that can not be accomplished if you lay your life and possessions on the line with others?" or better yet, and I paraphrase the words of a former president that captured the style and flavor of Americans, "Ask not what NAACP can do for you, but what you can do through the NAACP."

For over sixty years black men and women have gone to sleep every night confident that the NAACP was on the job, standing at the door guarding our security and the freedoms which are being painfully earned. So let me say to you also as I said to my friend in answer to his question, "What have we done?" We have struggled to stay alive, we have yearned for leadership, perhaps our own Martin Luther King Jr. We have fought among each other, we have dwindled in membership from many to a few. Yet we have survived to attack racism in state government, in city government, in public organizations. Even in our weakened state we have been a source of inspiration to youth and others.

We have fought for the rights of the aged and sought economic freedom, jobs and housing. You see, many of those who sharpened their skills as youth and members of NAACP are today working for the same ideas and goals through other organizations and our churches. We have supported the efforts of our ministers and our educators.

We have participated with other groups and organizations in drives for political representation, judicial representation and full minority participation in all facets of life in Des Moines. But if the question really is, "What front page news stories have been caused by the leadership and membership of the Des Moines Branch?" My answer must be found in the following statement.

once said in response to a question about his philosophy of great leadership and his role as a civil rights leader. He said, "I often feel that my people are far ahead of me and I must run to catch up to them." This is ever true today — the people of Des Moines must stay ahead of their leaders so that we would-be leaders or even catalyst for good in the community must hurry to catch up and to lead. We are not happy that our organization has not grown, but the forces of containment grow stronger each hour.

This year, as we launch our "Tribute to Roy Wilkins Membership Campaign" and dedicate our efforts to the steadfast goals of justice, we ask that you join us and pledge your membership support. By making the Des Moines Branch, the people's branch we will insure that discrimination in employment, in housing, in education, will be corrected in your lifetime and mine.

If every person, man, woman and child will take out membership and urge all their friends and associates to join, we will overcome. We in the NAACP must keep the faith and never be discouraged. We are going through a transition period, passing from the great administration of Roy Wilkins to another leader, Dr. Benjamin Hooks. We must not falter or become satisfied. The NAACP needs you. You need NAACP. Let's get together, let's stay together and work to make NAACP stronger in Des Moines and in the nation. "What have we done in Des Moines?" Not enough.

Closed Meeting to Discuss New Urban Campus at North

The Board of Directors of the Des Moines Area Community College Monday night decided to close their next meeting to discuss the feasibility of moving their Urban Campus into North High School.

The decision to hold that meeting was made after proponents for a new Urban Campus had left the meeting between Area College Board Members and Des Moines School Board Members.

Those area residents would like to see as their first choice a new campus built on a tract of urban renewal land, or as a second choice the renovation of the Old Dowling Campus.

Both options could cost anywhere from $1.5 million and $2 million.

Donald Zuck, dean of facilities management and campus services for the community college, outlined five sites for the Urban Campus and their tentative cost projections to the two groups.

This meeting was sponsored by the Polk-Des Moines Taxpayers' Association. This group believes the two boards should work together to find a new site for the urban center because the college might use buildings no longer needed by the Des Moines School District due to declining enrollments.

The site discussed at the meeting were:

- The Old Dowling School at Tenth and College Streets. He said $1,470,000 could be sent on the 8.18-acre site to develop a new Urban Center campus for the college.

- The Irving Junior High School at Sixteenth Street and Forest Avenue. An estimated $650,000 would be needed for reconditioning of buildings on the 5.9-acre site.

- The inner-city site at Seventh and Ninth streets between Laurel and Ascension streets. At least $2,165,000 would be needed to develop new buildings for the campus.

- The 700 block of Sixth Avenue. An estimated $1,805,000 would be spent to bring the seven-tenths-acre site up to the needs of an Urban Center.

- The North High School site at Sixth Avenue and Holcomb Street. The college could spend $1.5 million for construction of a new building to be built near existing North High School facilities.

A college study committee has recommended that the present Urban Center at the former Sabin Elementary School, Fifth Street and College Avenue, be replaced.

A Very Special Mother's Day Gift

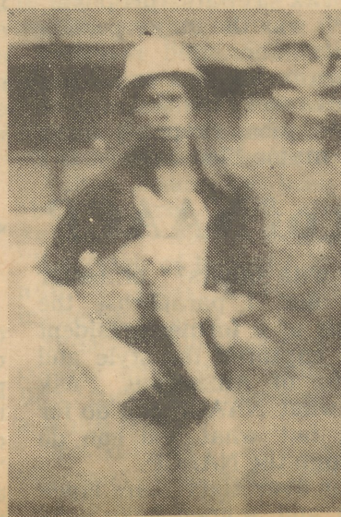

One Colorado woman took the title of President Carter's book, "Why Not the Best?", seriously in deciding on a Mother's Day present this year. Noting the telephone's ad that a long-distance call is "the next best thing to being there," Joyce Beechum decided not to settle for second best.

Although she had never driven on an interstate before, Beechum put aside her fears and loaded her four children, Bubbie, 16; Linsey, 17; Ceradia, 6; and Roderic, 14; and the family dog into the car for a trip to her mother's home in Des Moines. Beechum's mother, Mrs. Audrey Sanders of 1284 E. 30th Street was therefore treated to a visit by her daughter and grandchildren. But that was just the start of the present Beechum planned for her mother.

On the day before Mother's Day, the Beechum family returned to the car accompanied by Sanders. Then the whole group went back to Colorado. There Sanders was given a royal tour of the state from Pueblo to Aspen, all in the company of Beechum and children which was a delight in itself.

The trip ended with a flight back home to Des Moines where Sanders can cherish the memories of a Mother's Day gift that was second to none.

MESSIAH TEMPLE

Messiah Temple was blessed to hear Reverend Everett Cassell speak last Sunday from Matthew 25: 1-10. His lesson from the parable of the ten virgins was one of encouragement for all Christians to be prepared to meet their Lord. People seem to start out for the Lord, but in a little while something else comes along and they go the other way. One of the first things to be neglected is the Bible.

Reverend and Mrs. Cassell were welcomed back to Messiah Temple after spending about a year in Indiana where Reverend Cassell was preaching the word of the Lord.

Sunday evening Sister Carlotta Lewis brought the lesson from Acts 16. We were all taught by the test that was given. All of us at Messiah Temple take our turn at choosing the favorite chapter from Acts and testing the congregation on it.

Sunday school is at 10:30 with worship services at 11:30. The Book of Acts is Sunday evening at 7:00. Prayer meeting is at 7:00 on Wednesday evenings.

Reverend Jacob Reed, Pastor.

Dyanne Webster-Shade Gives May 15 Recital

The Bethel A.M.E. Steward's Board will present Ms. Dyanne Webster-Shade in a spiritual recital, "An Hour with Dy & Friends." She will be accompanied on the piano by Mrs. Delores Garrison and on the organ by Mrs. Alice Boyd.

Her guest will include The Gospel Viduals, Cynthia Jabar, Robert Riley and the Heavenly Meditator's. This will be an hour of music, dance, drama and song. An hour that will be entertaining, unique and unforgettable. Mrs. Doris Tucker will serve as the Mistress of Ceremonies in a program titled "Long Dusty Road."

Dyanne Webster-Shade

Dyanne is a Language Arts Teacher in the Des Moines Public School System, at Amos Hiatt Junior High School. She is also the coordinator of a Creative Arts Troupe of twelve junior high students, that tours the elementary schools located on the east side near Amos. She is a member of Bethel A.M.E. Church, the Steward Board, a Sunday School teacher and she was just recently appointed chairwoman of Bethel's Men and Women's Day Drive.

Dyanne has appeared on many programs in schools, churches and community based programs in Des Moines and nearby communities singing, reading poetry and dramatic readings, and facilitating Human Relations training. Reading poetry is one of Dyanne's favorite past times, but she aspires to be a gospel recording artist, "If not right here on earth," says Dyanne, "somewhere."

Kobie Coleman is Dyanne's seven year old son. "I am interested in young people, I love my son and I love to work with children of all ages. I am extremely concerned about the education of youth today.

"Most young people lack basic skills, reading, writing and arithmetic, I drill my students at Hiatt and I am extra hard on my son when it comes to basic writing, reading and math skills. I can't idly sit back and watch the youth in this city tear up their minds, bodies and souls, I intend to talk with them, work with them and most of all have fun with them.

"Black history is the biggest problem since the majority of schools don't teach black history or literature our youth can't relate or deal with the problems of today, because they are unfamiliar with yesterdays trials and tribulations and can't see that we ought to be about Our Father's business and not the devils — popping pills, smoking weed, drinking alcohol and a host of other deterrents that mess up young people's minds.

"I have no excuse, I am able to teach black history to children and any parent that it able to read and comprehend can also tell their children what went down in history. I can no longer blame the teachers, preachers and society. The best poem I've come across that best exemplifies this is "Children Learn What They Live" it is a monkey see, monkey do world we're living in. I hope that the community will begin to see the light of day before it is too late."

Dyanne is currently trying to seek financial aid so that she may attend the Julliard School of Fine Arts in New York, New York. She wants to study voice and piano so that she will be able to teach music to anyone who cares to learn. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Homer McCurn of Des Moines.

Come out Sunday, May 15, 1977 at 5:00 p.m. to wish her luck and success and most of all let's elevate other's in the spirit of Christian fellowship.

ENTERTAINMENT WORLD

Bobby Womack's Music Touches Many

Bobby Womack means a lot of things to a lot of people. Through his music, he has touched many because Bobby Womack loves people and he loves music. He will be the first to admit "you got to do what you love." And because he does what he loves, Bobby Womack is one of the best.

Bobby and his four brothers had their musical beginnings at the earliest of ages. Indoctrinated in the gospel, childhood was not exactly show business but it was still business. Great gospel groups such as the Soul Stirrers and the Blind Boys benefited from having the exuberant performances of the Womack Brothers as opening act. It was opening for the Soul Stirrers one night that caught the eye of the late Sam Cooke, the group's leader. Knocked out at what he heard, Sam took more than a casual interest in the Womacks and soon after was guiding their career. Bobby's affection and admiration for Sam Cooke is undying: "We learned so much from Sam. He taught us the importance of coming up with a catchy phrase."

The song "Looking For A Love" was just that. Taken from an old plantation melody entitled "Couldn't Hear Nobody Pray," "Looking For A Love" had a hook too good to pass up. Remodeled from the gospel into more of a R&B tune, the song became the Womack Brothers' first record in 1962. It was also a big hit for the J. Geils Band.

Two years later, the Womack Brothers were known as the Valentinos and recorded their classic "It's All Over Now." Composed by Bobby, the song was quickly covered by the Rolling Stones which began a string of Bobby Womack covers that has never ceased. It was then that Bobby began to get his act together, first in the studio as a musician and then as a songwriter/recording artist. His work with Wilson Pickett gave birth to some of Pickett's most memorable jams including "I'm A Midnight Mover" and the super sweet "I'm In Love." Bobby's debut as a solo artist came with the album "Fly Me To The Moon" and it was plain to see that Bobby Womack was clearly on his way.

The release of "Communication" in 1971 established the Womack sound. "Rhythm with a full bottom," as Bobby describes it, characterized a perfect marriage of rock and soul. With the follow-up "Understanding," the groove was firmly entrenched. For the first time, Bobby's music began to reflect a personal philosophy.

Discrimination Reviewed

A federal agency cites some deficiencies in the handling of Minorities on the part of the Metropolitan Transit Authority. However MTA President Forest Swift says he doesn't feel the agency found the MTA to be discriminatory.

The federal agency says in a letter that there were some cases of discrimination, possibly. Various recommendations are laid out by the federal people for the MTA to follow.

Bobby Womack

Success quite naturally agreed with Bobby and hit after hit followed. Among them was the million-selling cover of his own "Looking For A Love" which happened entirely by accident as Bobby explains: "We used the tune as a warm up number for the band. One night the warm up felt so good we decided to record it. We did it in one take."

The good tunes continue to flow from the Womack pen. New Birth's biggest hit was Bobby's tune "I Can Understand It." George Benson doing Bobby's Breezin' (which will be vocally done on a future Womack album) is a platinum success and Vicki Sue Robinson's recent reworking of "Daylight" has got to be a disco delight.

But home is where the heart is and Bobby Womack was destined to find a home where his heart has always been — at Columbia Records. His debut album entitled "Home Is Where The Heart Is," is a real smoker, a dynamic climax of years of perseverance, talent and energy.

ALLEN ASHBY with a LOOK ON SPORTS

Our end of the Younker's Kodel tennis tournament went off without a hitch last week end. Out of twelve couples signed up, ten came to play, and they had some tough scuffles before the champs were crowned. If I had to pick a team to win the think, I would have picked the team of Harold McCullom and his daughter, Laura Williams. They have been playing together for years and are a really tough mixed doubles combination. But Saturday the father-daughter team ran into difficulties in the person of Toney Stingley and Janet Milton. Toney and Janet won the thing by beating the team of Clarksons in the final round. Before that they had set down the team that I though would win it.

Not taking anything away from Stingley and Milton Harold and Laura never did seem to get their game untracked and didn't play nearly as well as I have seen them do at other times.

Stringley was playing better than he was at the end of the season last fall, and had his service coming in most of the time. Then he has such long arms that it was almost impossible to pass him at the net and overheads had to be sky high before he couldn't reach them. It would look as if a ball was past him at the net, and he would reach out and swat it for a winner. That and the fact that their semifinal opponents never got going did them in.

But it was so much better than the fiasco of last year that I went home happy. Another good team was the couple from Argentine, the MaKindleys. They were playing for the first time in ten years, they said, and one could tell that they had it at one time. They got into the thing in order to meet some people, and they did. They played three consecutive matches, and finally had to default because Mr. McKindley broke a blister on his hand. Otherwise they might have had a shot at the thing.

I like this meet because it always amuses me to see how the players try to get into different meets, since they can enter in them until they win one or the meets run out, whichever comes first. Players will get part way through one meet, look over and see that they will have a better chance in another, and forget the first meet. The thing is strictly a fun tournament and everybody from the players to the people who put the various meets on enjoys it.

What price glory? An article on the Davis cup tennis players made a group of us talk about the entire athletic situation here in the United States. The tennis writer lamented the fact that the best players were too busy making bucks to play for their country. But, that is the same with just about all the international sports where America is concerned.

The Olympic basketball team that played at Montreal wasn't the best that U.S. could put together, even if they did win it all. There just isn't the challenge of playing for one's country to motivate athletes today. True, when they get out there in competition, the adrenelin flows and they want to do their best for their country, but the cream of the crop has been left at home to try to latch onto a pro contract.

The dream of just about every college football player was to make the all star team and play in the all star game in Soldiers Field. I can recall crowds of from one hundred to one hundred ten thousand at that classic. No matter if the pros always won, I remember getting upset at the last one I saw because the pros were held on the ground, and that guy Lou Groza kicked four or five field goals from all over the field to beat the collegians.

THE FOURTH ANNUAL MARTIN LUTHER KING, JR. MEMORIAL JAZZ CONCERT was held in McKeesport, Pa. this year as part of the Pittsburgh, Pa. area community week-long celebration of Martin Luther King Week. It was a joint effort of Allegheny County OIC, Gulf Oil Corporation and Hand In Hand, Inc., an organization which raises money for college scholarships for the underprivileged by promoting events honoring Dr. King.

Whatever chance the college boys had was whittled away by the increasing numbers of players not playing in the game because they were afraid of injuries that might hurt their chances in pro ball. So the game became not a contest between the best college players and the pros, but a game between the pros and the best college player the game promoters could dig up. No wonder the crowds fell off until sixty thousand was a big crowd. It goes from that to baseball. It is an honor to be chosen on the all star baseball team, but each year increasing numbers of the stars take that three days off to rest when they were picked to play in the big one.

One used to play high school athletics because one loved the game or college tennis for the same reason. Now high school seniors are counting the number of offers they get to big colleges and college players are waiting for offers from the pros. I could be wrong, but I don't think the games are fun any more because there is too much at stake on too many contests.

A million bucks on Bowl games, hundreds of thousands on tennis matches. More dough on basketball games than most of the players thought there was. Where will it stop? Maybe when John Q. Public gets tired of shelling out that big dough for seats to see the games and refuses to attach so much importance to the outcome of a game between twenty year old boys who have to win in order to save their coaches' job or make enough money to pay for that new course in the school.

problems maintaining its credibility within the black community, which in turn has caused even greater problems, he said.

"Many branches have lost their charter and we are threatened with this. We are on the verge of not having an NAACP branch in Des Moines, he said, adding that the organization is on the 'verge of having the community totally turned off towards the organization.'"

Chapman said residents have accused the group of becoming "bourgeois" and criticized members for allegedly pushing aside persons with less important jobs or careers.

Despite this, Chapman is optimistic the local branch will survive and grow. He said veteran members were working to "strengthen the core group of the organization" and to establish rapport with the community.

"Evidently, we've done a bad job selecting priorities, so we will get input from the community. Next, we will work for credibility with our own constituency. Our members now have the ability to take stands without worrying whether they will be fired the next day."

The membership campaign is considered the first step in garnering support. Letters have been sent to religious organizations and numerous churches, some members are going door-to-door to meet residents personally and others are contacting potential members by telephone.

"We not only want names on a scroll, but people who will be active members, Chapman said.

The change in leadership — from Wilkins to Benjamin Hooks who for several months has been working as NAACP executive director designate — probably will help the organization at both the national and local levels, he said.

"As the national organization goes, so go the branches. I'm very enthusiastic ... the organization will grow and develop from an administrative standpoint and a leadership standpoint. I look forward to the innovation," he said.

Memorial Day Driving Tips

If you're planning a trip over Memorial Day weekend, consider these tips from the Iowa Department of Public Safety:

Observe the 55 mph speed limit. It's a big saver in gasoline, injuries and lives.

Stay close to home. Visit nearby beaches and recreational areas rather than distant ones in order to save gasoline.

Have a safety check on your car before leaving on your trip. Check your lights, brakes, and steering to make sure they work properly. Keep your windshield and glass clean and replenish washer fluid as needed. Keep a watchful eye on your tires for worn tread, cracks, or bulges.

Be sure to allow plenty of time for driving. Rest for 10 minutes at least every two hours. Driving too long without a rest can make you a menace to yourself as well as to the other driver.

Before you start the car for your trip, make sure you and all your passengers have their seat belts fastened. If that's impossible, make children ride in the back seat. It's the least dangerous spot in an auto.

Authorities say alcohol is a factor in over one-half of traffic deaths. The Iowa Department of Public Safety advises motorists to avoid drinking and driving this Memorial Day weekend, and at other times, too.

Practice defensive driving. Always assume the other driver will make a mistake. Be alert at all times.

If you're out on the highways and need emergency assistance or see someone who does, go to the

Urge OIC Support

PITTSBURGH, Pa., May 4, 1977— The president of Pittsburgh's largest company today called on the city's business community to bolster its support of the Opportunities Industrialization Center with "both money and executive commitment."

Speaking at a kickoff luncheon for the Pittsburgh OIC's 1977 fund drive, James E. Lee, Gulf Oil Corporation president and chairman of the $100,000 drive, urged business leaders "to increase previous support of OIC, its philosophy, and endeavors."

"Only by offering to the disadvantaged the advantage of being able to receive training and placement opportunities, can we eliminate numbers from the welfare rolls, from the unemployment rolls, and from the depths of destitution and despair."

Keynote speaker at the luncheon hosted by Mr. Lee was Dr. Thomas J. Ritter, vice chairman of the national OIC Progress Council and the initial executive director of the first OIC chapter in the country.

Since its founding in Philadelphia in 1964, the OIC's of America have trained or retrained more than 300,000 workers all over the country.

To own a broadcast property (radio or TV) in one of the top 50 markets in the US is to own a license, literally, "to make money." That observation, a truism in the industry where last year the pre-tax profits of the network TV stations reached an astonishing combined total of more than $430 million, did not then nor does not now apply to stations owned by minorities.

For most of the nation's 56 radio and three TV stations (two in the Virgin Islands) owned by minorities are struggling to keep heads above water. Many of them, angry and frustrated about this state of affairs, attended a two-day Minorities' Broadcast Owners' Conference sponsored by the Federal Communications Commission in late April.

The fact that the conference is the first of its kind in the history of FCC says something that is not entirely complimentary about this agency and the general attitudes of the nation it reflects.

Rene Anselmo, of Spanish Communications Corp. summed it up: Minorities, he said, should be given "the same liberal treatment given the original guys who got in this business ... It was easy to get in the broadcast business (more than 20) years ago" when TV and radio licenses in the big markets were being handed out like bubblegum cards.

But blacks and other minorities were shut out from the industry at that time. Many of us didn't even know that we could bid for licenses. We certainly had scant knowledge that if we were awarded a licensee where in the world we would drum up the kind of advertising that would keep us on the air and viable.

These were some of the questions yet raised when hundreds of observers and spectators joined the more than 100 minority broadcast owners, managers and officials — advertising and ratings — that do much to determine ultimately whether a licensee lives or dies in the market, in the two-day conference.

The role of the FCC was to determine 1.) what impediments, if any, there are to minority entry to the broadcast industry and 2.) if such as are found, what to do about their elimination or amelioration.

It was a stormy two-day set that was nevertheless, professionally organized and directed and carried through. Ms. Patricia Russell, deputy chief of the Equal Employment Opportunity Industrial Unit of FCC, was the organizer and efficient moderator throughout.

Sharp questions and often, tempers, were raised concerning rating and financing group practices that often make it difficult for a minority to purchase a property in the first place and virtually impossible to stay afloat once he is in the business in the second instance.

Highly intelligent black owner-officials such as Ragan Henry, of Broadcast Enterprises, Philadelphia, Pa.; Elliott Franks, general manager WOIC-AM, Columbia, S.C.; Skip Finley, general manager, Sheridan Broadcasting and Anselmo articulated grievances of minority owners.

Eugene Jackson, president, National Black (Radio) Network, urged that a task force be set up to look into grievances aired at the conference. Ms. Cathy Liggins, WHUR (Howard University) one of the few black women general managers of a radio station in this country, assailed the bias of large advertising agencies. Others deplored the practice of some "people acquiring a license then sitting on it for years without going on the air." Such a practice keeps minorities from acquiring the unused property, they point out.

Others criticized stations which buy audiences through giveaways, etc., to up their ratings. Still others lamented the fact that "all the good properties are gone. There are plenty of 'dogs' on the market, and that's all we (minorities) are able to get. For when the good ones are up for sale we never know about them until they are sold."

Jackson also urged that the federal government set up a "Black Marshall Plan to help minorities get money from banks and lending institutions." Many things will flow from this conference. Many of the grievances will be actively explored by a task force which is indeed already in operation. A research contract will be let to study some of the seamier charges and impediments and bring back recommendations that we at the FCC might act on.

But the first thing Wiley (the conference was called by him) and I will do is go to the Small Business Administration and attempt to persuade it to change its hitherto inflexible policy of not lending money to persons seeking to acquire broadcast properties. We want to make inoperative the facetious tag line that is the final seal of so many conferences: "After all is said and done, more is said than done."

THE POWER & THE GLORY

COUPONS FOR THE POOR

Congress must accept or reject President Carter's new food stamp program. His initial step proposed for welfare reform is a change in the federal food coupon program that would allegedly increase aid for those most in need, while reducing aid for the "less needy."

AFFECT

The effect upon the "less needy" is what makes congressional support shaky. The food stamp program is universally agreed to need change.

Almost one million persons now receive food stamps at a cost of $5.5 billion annually to the federal government. Proposed as an income supplement a decade ago, the program requires poor persons to purchase at a discount coupons that can only be used to buy food.

COSTS

The face value of the coupons depend on family size. Their costs depend on family income. A four person household with the maximum allowable monthly income of $553, pays $142 for $166 worth of stamps.

Automatically eligible are families that receive welfare aid to families with dependent children. This program is funded from 50 to 90 percent by the federal government, with the balance paid by states or municipalities.

Also automatically eligible are poor people who are aged, blind or disabled, who receive supplemental security income.

Support Universal Registration Act

Washington, D. C. — An 18 year-old citizen should be eligible to vote in the United States without having to qualify under the hodgepodge of current state registration laws, officials of the nonpartisan Voter Education Project (VEP) told the House Administration Committee today.

The VEP testimony, delivered by Stanley Alexander, Archie Allen, and Sherrill Marcus at the House Committee hearing on President Carter's proposed Universal Voter Registration

Act of 1977, emphasized that the bill was "urgently needed and long overdue."

"Voter registration laws were passed by the states in the nineteenth and early twentieth centuries for the purpose of decreasing voting, especially among minorities, immigrants and poor whites," testified VEP administrative director Archie E. Allen, on behalf of the organization which has promoted minority political participation in the South since 1962. "These state laws are generally unworkable, antiquated and discriminatory against minorities and poor people. They have contributed heavily to the decline of voter participation throughout this century."

"It is not coincidence that the United States has one of the lowest voter participation rates of any democracy. The United States is the only major democracy which places the responsibility for registration on the individual rather than on the state," Allen explained.

"The Voting Rights Act and positive steps to ease registration requirements at the local level have resulted in increased voter participation. With the serious drop-off in American voter participation, the Universal Registration Act will provide a boost to the democratic system at a time when it is badly needed," the testimony continued.

The VEP team cited the existence of a major gap between the voter participation rates of blacks and whites in many states and called for Congressional action to provide a federal incentive program to the States to promote minority citizenship education until the disparity is eliminated.

"There is a great need to add the participation of more citizens in the affairs of government," the VEP testimony concluded. "We welcome this proposed federal system with its uniform standard for registration. The diverse state registration laws now in existence have proven to be confusing, outmoded, and a very real deterrent to participation in the political process."

The Voter Education Project is a tax-exempt, nonpartisan, South-wide organization with programs of voter registration, citizenship education, and technical assistance to community groups and minority elected officials. Based in Atlanta, its programs are supported by the contributions of foundations, corporations, unions, religious organizations, and individuals.

HAPPINESS THROUGH HEALTH

By Otto McClarrin

POLL SHOWS PEOPLE IGNORE KNOWLEDGE OF HEALTH AND PLACE TRUST IN MEDICAL MIRACLES:

A new Louis Harris survey of 600 Chicago families found them already "well informed about what they should eat and what they should avoid to reduce their chances of getting heart disease, stroke, and other diseases," as well as on the need to quit smoking, to relax, and to exercise more. Yet people prefer to ignore their own knowledge and trust to medical miracles, the pollsters concluded.

Chicago's Mount Sinai Hospital Medical Center commissioned the poll, according to Medical World News, to find out how best to expand its outpatient preventive care department. Expecting to learn that patients would become healthier if they know more about causes of disease and how to find a good doctor, the hospital instead found Chicagoans generally knowledgeable about health and nutrition. Their opinions about good diet indicate that fully 81 percent felt well educated about nutrition, yet 82 percent felt most Americans "eat too much of some kinds of food and not enough of others."

Some 40 percent felt they would be healthier if they ate more whole-grain bread, fish, and fruit, and less white bread, coffee, butter, salt, sugar and soft drinks.

People also knew the benefit of regular exercise, yet only 38 percent of those polled had a regular program. Despite the established hazards of smoking, 42 percent still had the habit.

Even more important, says Dr. LeRoy P. Levitt, the hospital's vice president for medical affairs, "the study indicates the kind of magic-making people attribute to physicians." Most know at least some of the warning signs for heart attack or cancer, but they grossly underestimate the lethality of these diseases.

For example, fully a third of people questioned thought 60 percent of lung cancer patients survive, though only 10 percent do. "The public thinks we can fix anything now," says Dr. Levitt.

Furthermore, many of them think their present lifestyles can't hurt them — about a third of those polled feel they will never develop cardiovascular disease, diabetes, or cancer. "This should teach us to be very realistic to patients of all ages," continues Dr. Levitt, psychiatry professor at Rush Medical College. "Unless we doctors pound away at patients, instead of mollifying them, they may end up in tragedy. Someone has to have the courage to say, 'You know, this could kill you.'"
