Asst. Atty. General Steele Urges Black Unity

Shirley G. Steele does not consider herself a feminist because she says the line dividing sexual discrimination and racism is thin, if not invisible.

Yet, the 35-year-old widowed mother of three enjoys the distinction of being the first black female assistant attorney general in Iowa.

"I've been working since I was 10. I've scrubbed floors to this (working as an attorney). Nobody had me on a pedestal," says Steele, adding her commitment was to the black community. "Women that are discriminated against allowed themselves to be."

A native of Salisbury, N.C., Steele represents the Iowa Civil Rights Commission. Her jurisdiction includes discrimination in housing, employment, credit, public accommodation. She is believed to be the only black female in the attorney general's office, although at least two other black men have held a similar position.

Sex and race have caused few problems in the job she's held since Feb. 1. Her long-range goals may be more difficult to reach,

North Eliminated As Urban Campus

The Des Moines School Board Tuesday decided North High School will not become the new site for the Urban Campus of the Des Moines Area Community College (DMACC).

"I am happy to know that a decision has been made so we can now get on with some firm decisions for providing an Urban Center," said Paul Lowery, college superintendent.

The DMACC board has been pressuring the Des Moines School Board to make a decision about the possibility of using North High School as a new site for the Urban Campus. The present site the former Sabin Elementary School at 5th and College Ave., has been criticized for being too old and inadequately designed for the college purposes.

Lowery has set July 1 as the deadline for his recommendations on a new site for the Urban College. The North High site was favorable to the college board of directors but the Des Moines School Board decided it was not interested in abandoning North for at least 10 years. North was considered for the Urban Campus because the number of students attending the school has slipped to about 670 students from a capacity of 1350 students.

Marjorie Spevak, school board president, thought the school district needed to take a position on the question because the uncertainty over the school was causing morale problems for the north-central neighborhood and teachers at the school.

Lowery said his staff will now prepare a list of alternatives for the Urban Campus site. The Des Moines school board agreed to rent the Sabin school to the college for one more year with an option for another year.

Number of Black Jurors Studied

Figures on the number of Black Polk County Jurors are being sent to the Iowa Civil Rights Commission.

Polk County Attorney Dan Johnston says the statistics will be sent to that unit after complaints from District Judge Luther Glanton claiming many Blacks are automatically excluded from juries hearing cases against Black defendants.

Johnston says the state agency is being asked to review the statistics to determine whether the allegations are true.

Direction Sports Comes to Des Moines

Concentration----

Cheering section----

Direction Sports, a sports centered tutorial program, has made its debut in Des Moines. Direction Sports originated in Los Angeles and is now in operation in many urban areas throughout the country. The program is an attempt to mesh the magic of sports, academic achievement and character development.

On April 5 the Urban Area Branch of the Greater Des Moines YMCA kicked off the Direction Sports Program in six (6) inner-city schools - Edmunds, King, Moulton, Casady, Logan and Dunlap. Two VISTA volunteers were recruited to help launch the program and help with its evaluation. The VISTA's, Cindy Wyllie from Illinois and Gerri Bugg, from Michigan, are working under the leadership of Al Collier, Executive Director of the Urban Branch of the YMCA to make the program a success. The initial run of the program is for seven (7) weeks and involves 80 fifth grade students. In the Fall the program will coincide with the school year and more students will be involved.

Soccer was the sport introduced for these initial weeks and as the program expands so will the number of sports.

The weekly program is divided into two sections: Weekday practice sessions which are held at the school and weekend games held at North High School. The weekday practice sessions are divided into three parts: Chalk talks dealing with reading and math skills, sports skill practice and a group rap session where physical conditioning / nutrition and values for living are focused on. The weekend game also has three parts: Pre game quiz covering the math and reading skills dealt with the preceeding week, the game with another group and post game wrapup where the weeks experience is reviewed and targets are set for the next week.

Parents / guardians participate by granting permission for each young person to participate; helping with the weekly booster sheets sent home with each group member (covers reading and math materials). Parents also attend the games and parents meetings.

Each school (team) has a head coach and an assistant coach both of whom are adults who have an interest in working with youth and who are willing to spend time learning about ways to improve their coaching quality through the development of coaching skills. These coaches have volunteered their time through their companies.

Larry Carter of Dial Financial and Denise Bennett of Central Nation Bank are coaches at Casady School. Paul Fritz from American Republic and Tom Nolan from Iowa Power share the coaching duties at Dunlap School, while Carol Jackson from Sears (Merle Hay) and Vicki Nixt from Amoco, combine their skills at Logan. IBM's representative, Larry Thompson, coaches at King and another Amoco representative, Karen Civitak, coaches Moulton. YMCA staff fill the remaining coaching slots.

Hopes run high for the future of Direction Sports in Des Moines. The program has found much success in the Los Angeles area as well as other cities where it is in operation. It is felt that Des Moines will be no exception, and the results will be positive.

VIEWS and REVIEWS by James B. Morris

NAACP Deserves Support In Membership Drive

Solicitors for the membership campaign being conducted by the Des Moines Branch NAACP have reported that many people have refused to join charging that organization is doing nothing in the community.

This answer smacks at those people who use this excuse to duck paying their way and yet are willing to accept the benefits that come as a result of other peoples effort and money.

The NAACP is not organized to come to the defense of every minority who commits a crime or complains that his rights are being violated. But it does take notice and follow through on those situations where the party is being wrongly dealt with because of his race or color.

If those same people will retrospect they will remember that the better jobs, the better schools, the better enforcement of civil rights, both here and in other parts of the country, have drastically improved greatly because of the lawsuits the NAACP has carried on and the lobbying before legislative bodies that have kept the statute books clear of discriminatory legislation. These complainers should join the organization and help do some of the things that the organization is doing in all parts of the country, including Des Moines.

Legislators Should Know The Laws They Pass

In the course of debate in the United States House of Representatives on the question of foreign aid an allotment to Zaire was considered. One representative in opposition to the appropriation stated that to do so might open the way to sending American troops to Africa and this he bitterly opposed.

Apparently, the gentlemen is unacquainted that the U.S. has agreed to assist Israel in defending that country in time of war and yet Israel is a part of the continent of Africa.

Surely our lawmakers should acquaint themselves with the laws that have been passed by congress.

Loose Voting Bill Stifles Orderly Elections

A measure designed to permit voters in federal elections to register at the time of the election provided that they can present proper proof of their qualifications is being pushed by President Carter. Apparently, the backers of this legislation are not acquainted with the workings of judges and clerks at the polls who now have, in many cases, a difficult time searching the qualifications of some prospective voters and which slows up final counting in many instances. Such a law would add more trouble to the work of these officials.

Further, they are not acquainted with the history of elections in some larger cities where political bosses manipulate all kinds of tricks to win elections. Experience has shown that they vote dead people and haul people to the polls that have no qualification to vote and often allow people to vote more than once and in the end count the results to suit themselves.

The President hopes to get more people at the polls as the record of voting in recent years has been far below that of earlier elections.

The President has vowed to clean up politics in the country and, particularly, in the federal government. But it seems to me that with such a law he would aggravate to the troubles we already have.

Good Citizens Should Not Be Devisive

A group organized to oppose the program for school integration in the Des Moines public schools has announced that a suit would be filed in Polk County District Court seeking an injunction to forestall putting it into practice.

The desegregation question was debated for more than two years in numerous areas of the city and was given wide publicity by the news media which should have been sufficient to fully acquaint the public with it and the adoption by the school board.

Experience of other cities that have raised lawsuits over this question has only precipitated deviceness and in many instances riotous conduct. On the other hand any person has the right to file a lawsuit if he feels that he has aggrieved or his rights denied. But, a good citizen should be interested in making every effort to avert disorder and to maintain peace and accord in their community.

The Des Moines Branch of the NAACP has instructed the legal regress committee to monitor the situation and take such legal steps as are necessary in cooperation with school officials and the civil rights commission.

Anti-Smoking Campaign Urged For Young People

"Many young people still think smoking is sophisticated, so let's get the glamorization of this deadly habit out of advertising", declared Colleen Lemkuil of the Polk County Unit of the American Cancer Society.

A new American Cancer Society study revealed that a half million more teenage girls are smoking now compared with 1969, virtually catching up with boys of the same age. Cigarette smoking among teenage boys remains fairly constant.

According to the study there is a sharp reduction in the number of teenagers who now hear anti-smoking messages on radio or TV. "We are appealing to local stations to quadruple the number of anti-smoking spots they use," said Colleen Lemkuil. "We are also supporting efforts to bar the use of models in cigarette advertising which portrays the habit as conducive to physical well-being, glamour and sex," Lemkuil added.

"Both girls and boys mistakenly think that most everyone else smokes especially their own peers and teachers. We should get across the point that smoking is a minority phenomenon," said Lemkuil.

"Part of what we are seeing here is the play of new values as witness the growth of on-campus and in-school smoking," said Lemkuil. "Many parents, school teachers and doctors seem to be taking a hands-off attitude toward youth smoking. This is part of the challenge the anti-smoking forces face today."

"One has to take a stand somewhere however," Lemkuil declared, "and I think once you set up a smoking lounge in school you're encouraging smoking. It's like the Ten Commandments. You can't always enforce them but that doesn't mean you throw them out."

"Thus there is a broad basis for getting young people to stop smoking. Parents, schools, and non-smoking youth themselves as well as the entire medical profession can take a part in curbing and finally eliminating this single biggest environmental cause of cancer," Lemkuil said.

Recall "Mr. Coffee" Coffeemakers

Al Cerruti, director of the Consumer Safety and Health Section of the Iowa State Department of Health, today announced the voluntary recall of more than 3 million "Mr. Coffee" coffeemakers. The machines, which were manufactured from July through December 1975 and distributed nationwide by North American Systems, Inc., pose a potential shock and/or fire hazard, according to Cerruti. He said a proportion of them might require modification.

"Mr. Coffee" coffeemakers subject to the modification are identifiable by a letter and a two-digit number etched into the upper right-hand portion of the outside of the back cover plate. Only those machines bearing the letters "G", "H", "I", "J", "K", and "L", and the number "75" are affected. (For example "G-75".)

The company asks that consumers examine their machines for these markings, and, if their machines fall into this group, that they write to P.O. Box 22132, Cleveland, Ohio 44122, supplying their name, address, telephone number and the code number of the machine. The company will maintain records of the names, addresses, and phone numbers of these consumers and will promptly contact them and inform them where to take their machine for free modification.

Pending modification of these machines, the company recommends that owners follow these important safety instructions:

- Do not leave the machine unattended while in use.

- Be sure to unplug the machine when it is not in use.

- Turn off the brewing switch when the brewing cycle is completed and turn off the warming switch when the coffee is no longer being kept warm.

- Do not tamper with or attempt to adjust the machine. The machine should be serviced only by an authorized Mr. Coffee service center.

Student Discipline: Growing Problem in U.S. Schools

Student discipline problems are increasing and are a major concern of school authorities across the nation, according to a study report issued by the National School Boards Association (NSBA).

The conclusions are based on a survey of 100 school districts conducted by the Ad Hoc Committee on Discipline of NSBA's Council of Big City Boards of Education.

About 75 percent of the districts reported truancy and tardiness as the most frequent causes of disciplinary action. The report also cites statistics which show that robberies and burglaries in secondary schools jumped nearly 50 percent in the past 5 years, while assaults on teachers rose 73 percent and assaults on students were up 85 percent. The data shows that the cost of school vandalism is the U.S. is now $500 million annually.

Disruptive behavior is most common among students in junior high school and the early years of high school, the report notes, while the problem is growing but not yet serious in elementary schools.

The report says no evidence exists that discipline problems are related to students' ethnic or racial background; disruptive behavior is increasing in rural and urban and in affluent and poor areas.

According to the report, many Ad Hoc Committee members believe the increase in school discipline problems is due to erosion of parent-child relationships and an increase in violence in society at large. Recent court decisions in students' rights cases, which reduced the authority of school officials, were also cited as a possible contributory factor.

The committee's recommendations to school districts facing discipline problems include:

- Establish a task force, composed of school board members, parents, teachers, administrators and students, to determine the dimensions of the problem.

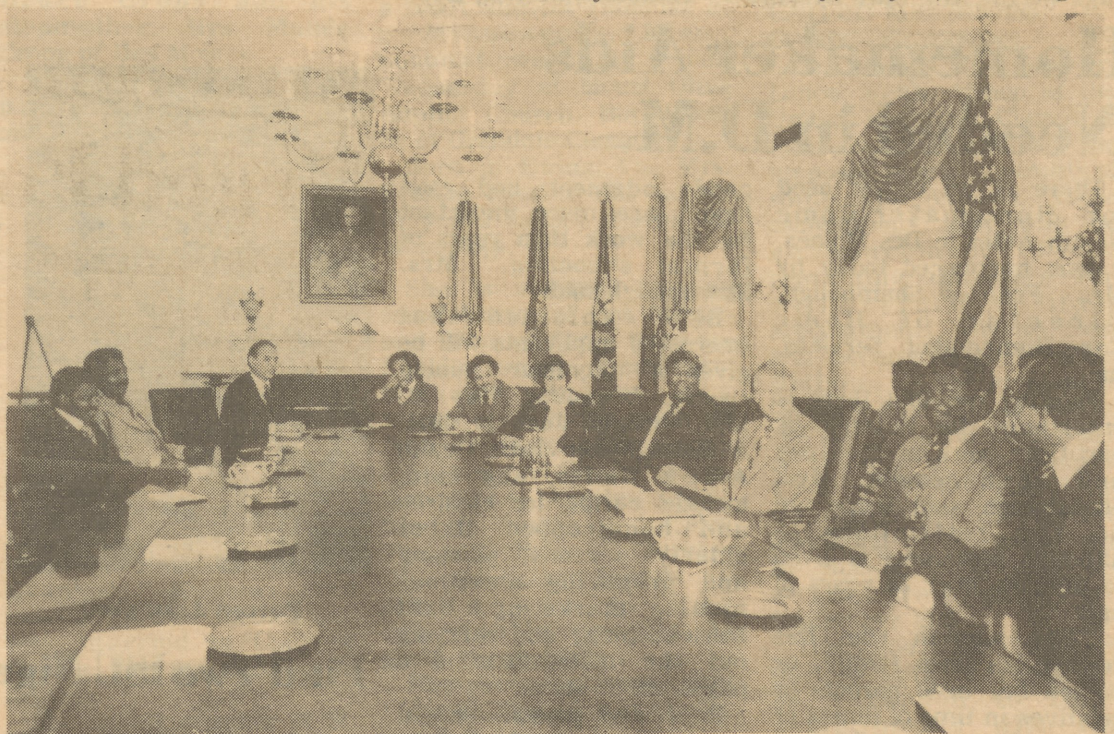

- Involve students, parents, teachers and administrators in a school board's development of discipline policies and procedures, to ensure community understanding and support.

- Distribute written policies on student behavior to parents, students and all school employees.

- Provide seminars and workshops on techniques for dealing with student offenders consistently and fairly.

- Encourage school employees to exercise their full legal rights to prevent violence in the schools. Support those employees, especially in the courts, when their authority is challenged.

- Develop alternatives to student suspension, including alternative educational programs.

Rehabilitated House Ready For Low-Income Family

One poor family in the City of Des Moines, who could not afford adequate housing on their own, will be moving into a renovated home, soon. The house was rehabilitated by a group of interior design students working under Ms. Nancy Helgeson of Iowa State University.

HOME, INC. is a private, non-profit housing agency in Des Moines, sponsored the project. HOME, incorporated in 1967 for the purpose of helping low-income families obtain and retain adequate housing.

UNITED METHODIST COMMUNICATIONS

Des Moines...The Rev. Dr. Lance Webb, bishop of the United Methodist Church of Iowa has announced the proposed new assignments of some 149 pastors. These assignments, along with the announcement of the remaining ministers who will return to their appointments, will be final and become effective when Bishop Webb announces them at the 134th session of the Iowa Annual Conference on June 7 in Des Moines. This will be the first appointment of United Methodist ministers in Iowa by Bishop Webb since his assignment here in September 1976.

The superintendents of the thirteen districts in Iowa will be returned to their assignments with the exception of the superintendents at Creston and Muscatine. They have worked with Bishop Webb to complete the list of appointments before the June 3-7 Annual Conference in order to relieve some of the tensions that arise in the moving process for the pastor, his/her family, and the members of the churches involved.

Pastors who are scheduled for a move have personally announced to their congregations the proposal. They will not be moving to their new location until after June 12.

Strokes and Folks

by Edna Griffin

Des Moines is most fortunate in having the Furgerson family in our midst. Five years ago Lee and Penny Furgerson dared and undertook the building of a community-based dance group of working people willing to rehearse regularly, willing to strive for nothing less than the best under Penny Furgerson's direction. It is not widely known that Penny had two possible choices concerning what to do with her eight years of training in the dances of India after coming to America as a college student. Her decision was to share her training and experience with the talent in need of challenge and opportunity.

The second annual concert of the Gateway Dance Theatre at Drake University Hall of Performing Arts is the most recent example of five years of unceasing efforts of dancers, directors, guest artists and choreographers coming from Chicago and New York City. I, quite frankly, was impressed with the variety of the program offered before the concert began. The program arrangements were in good taste. Curried Soul, an acknowledgement of Shiva, the Hindu deity of dance, followed by Alirippu, invoking God's blessings on the evening's performance is an example of creative arrangement. Butterflies is a dance I should like to see again because it brought back memories of childhood observations of butterflies. I intend to talk with some children who were in the audience. My feeling is children who have ever watched a group of butterflies would instantly respond to Butterflies as they do to Being Green.

Bojangles and Ebony Eyes were "between a rock and a hard place", sandwiched between two compelling statements about the human condition. Being Green and Color are two numbers difficult to precede or follow. They were high points in Part I of the concert. I think many would agree.

Part II was choreographed around a single theme, the enslavement of Blacks, presented in four parts — capture, transport to America, the cotton fields, a sense of identity, and a growing sense of one-ness. Mother Africa, crossing, fields, come Sunday, and from these roots. A portrayal, a re-telling of our history, a celebration of our common bond and pride in our capacity to survive. These are some of the feelings stirred in me during the four-part story unfolded in the dances, choreography, and music. I was deeply moved by the presentation in dance form of a heavy painful subject, briefly and dramatically.

Part II was re-telling of our history in four segments: an African village celebration suddenly disrupted by a raid of slave catchers. The second segment reveals a very artistic bit of choreography. Slaves chained together, and a symbolic breaking of a link indicating separation from Africa and family. An awareness of American shores is created by the cries in the background of the slave auctioneer. This is truly a superb moment. Greater self-confidence of the performers will transform this moment into an even more dramatic and powerful telling of our history.

Come Sunday, a brief rest from the fields, a time of pouring forth of anguish and a cry for divine guidance. Veola Perry dances from within. Direct communication while in silent with the audience was effectively achieved with her hands and arms. I understood. I think the audience understood. From these roots was a quiet statement. We are one with all our black brothers and sisters. We are one with our roots — our ancestors.

Part III opened with an outerspace experience which I saw only the very last part. The second number, Amazing Grace is a number I have watched develop. Carla Sears' solo was performed with greater self-confidence, and freedom of movement.

Roots Rock Reggae and Jamoca are expressions of pure joy and celebration close enough to the people to need neither comment nor explanation. We sat back and enjoyed!

Mood solo by Penny Furgerson is, in sharp contrast to the previous number and to Jamoca which followed. It was a subdued expression of the joy of being alive. Breathtakingly beautiful, skillfully executed, it is a statement of identity to be shared with all humankind.

The Gateway Dance Theatre's most outstanding quality is its close communication with its audiences of many kinds and in many places. We grow in knowledge, interest and understanding of the many forms of dance along with the Gateway Dance Theatre. It is a unique experiment in our country.

More later, folks!

Pam Page Participates In National Track Meet

Pam Page, Iowa Wesleyan College's freshman track star, participated May 16-18 in the AIAW (Association of Intercollegiate Athletics for Women) national track meet on the UCLA campus in Los Angeles.

Pam was a standout track star at Evanston Township High School and enrolled at Iowa Wesleyan College last September where she could continue with the sport.

After lettering in volleyball last fall, Page began preparations for the track season. She and her five teammates participated in two indoor meets and then turned their attention to the outdoor season.

She ran the sprints, the 100 meter hurdles, and long jumped. She won most of her team's points (82 of 109 for the year) along the way. She qualified for the May 12-14 regional meet in Wichita in both the 100 meter dash and the 100 meter hurdles. But it was not until the next to the last meet of the season that she qualified for the nationals. At Illinois College in Jacksonville she ran the 100 meter hurdles in 14.2, easily topping the qualifying time of 14.7.

Page hopes to qualify for the nationals in the 100 meter dash at Wichita. She'll need a 12.0 to qualify. She qualified for the regionals with a 12.4 mark.

LOOK ON SPORTS

If you saw the fight last Monday night, maybe you are among those who keep asking why the man doesn't quit before he gets his block knocked off. But, when you think about it, you don't have to wonder. Muhammad Ali is the greatest drawing card in the history of boxing.

About sixty percent of the people come to be there when he finally gets it. They will pay any price just so they can see it when it happens. Others are in his corner, and think he is the greatest. For the kind of dough the guy is pulling down, I would get out there and swing a few fists myself.

Promoters keep digging up these characters out of the woodwork for him to defend his title against. They talk about Jimmy Young and Ken Norton. One guy said that either man would have beaten the tar out of Ali last Monday night. They likely would have if they had caught him in the shape he was in then.

Jimmy Young caught him like that in their first fight, and so did Norton. They didn't beat the tar out of him.

It is my guess that if and when the champ finally gets his, he won't get really beaten up by whoever the fellow is. He is a fine boxer, knows all the tricks of the ring. For instance Monday night whenever he wanted to break away from his opponent at close quarters, he would put his hand on the back of the Spaniard's neck. The referee would promptly break them, which was exactly what Ali wanted. That was just one of the many tricks the old master knows to protect himself.

Who is gonna beat him? You say Norton beat him in their last bout, but the margin wasn't enough to convince the people who judged the fight. Jimmy Young claims he did Ali in, but again the margin was too close to give Young the edge. What will they do in another fight?

Norton? Ali knows every move Ken makes and has the counter for it, so I don't think Norton will ever beat the man badly enough to take his title.

Jimmy Young is not aggressive enough and isn't too much of a puncher. He can't out box the boxing master, as old as he is. No, the next champion has to come out of the ranks. Probably some fellow we don't know about and when the match is made, we will say "Who he?" But I would hazard a guess that the guy won't beat the champ badly. He might knock him out with one surprise punch or swarm over him so he can't get untracked. But, whatever happens, the champ won't get hurt. He can protect himself too well for that, which is why people have a hard time getting to him now. And when ever he has to, Ali can come on and fight. He nearly turned the first Fraiser fight around if he had not caught that left hook when he did. That was the margin for Joe.

And when the champ finally goes, the next fights won't draw flies. Who can you name that would draw the dough that Ali is getting now? A fight between Young and Norton with the winner to take on the champ might produce a big gate because folks would want to see which one will get a crack at the champ. But after that and with Muhammad out of the picture, it will be a while before anybody comes along who can draw the interest that he did.

Listening to people gripe about this last bout, I have to say, "Why did you stay and watch the whole thing. If it was so bad, you could always turn the dial. But that fascination is what makes the drawing card of the man.

Reminds me of a time when a former heavyweight champ was giving an exhibition here. He was clean out of shape and was barely going through the motions. People began to boo, so the champ stopped, came over to the ringside and said, "You clowns paid to see me and that is just what you are seeing. If you want to see me fight, you will have to pay more for a third balcony seat than you did for your ringside seats tonight."

So if you want to see Ali retire, just cut off the dough.

Don't know what is with the Tech girls track team, but I guess that by the time this gets out, the daily papers will have the story. Maybe it doesn't sound too kosher, I might ask a few questions myself. But until then, I will leave it alone.

Time was that we could get a pretty good story out of the blacks in the state high school track meet, but now they are just so much news. Maybe we shall see what we can come up with.

And speaking of stories, I got chewed out because I didn't mention that Toney Stingley is black and won half of the Kodak mixed doubles. Well, I never gave it a thought. He didn't win because he was black or green, but because he and his partner were the best doubles team in that meet on that day. Maybe they would not have been the very next day.

To me, tennis players are just that. Tennis players.

Israel's Leading Model is Caribbean Black

by Phillipa Marcus

Six years ago, a Black Caribbean-born singer and fashion model named Lois came to Israel to visit a friend.

She stayed, married him, and is now Israel's top fashion model, in constant demand for her striking good looks and her flair for showing new clothes designs to best advantage.

Lois met her Israeli friend, Moshe Chezik, in Toronto, where he was on holiday from his kibbutz. She was singing at "Expo '67" just opposite the Israeli Pavilion there, and so the two met in a fittingly international locale.

Lois had been modeling while in Toronto, and her photos had appeared in leading Canadian newspapers as well as in Harper's Bazaar and other important fashion magazines throughout the United States.

Lois is a striking beauty tall (5'11"), shapely and intelligent. "People really don't know much about the life and work of a model," she says. "Being a model in Israel is a prestigious job. That's because the Israeli fashion industry is highly developed and recognizes that top quality fashions must be shown by top quality models. A good model is also interested in the design and the materials of the garment she is showing. She could know that she is selling the garment she wears—and not herself."

Lois says of her career: "I truly enjoy my life as a model in Israel. I wasn't raised to believe that a woman's job in life is to get married and have children. I am a woman, but I am a whole person, too. Women have the right to build satisfying careers for themselves. And I'm satisfied."

Keep, Sell, Pass It On?

If you've made the decision to move from a big house into a small dwelling now that your family's gone, then you're faced with the next big decision—what to take with you?

Regina B. Fineran, extension home economist says many older persons have more furnishings than will fit and look appropriate in a smaller space. She says there are three choices for each item—keep it, sell it or pass it on to a friend or relative.

The latter choice can be touchy, since you have to worry about which person will most appreciate an item, and how to seem fair as you parcel out things to avoid family friction.

Fineran suggests involving family and friends in the decisions. Encourage them to be honest in saying what they really would like and could use or don't want given to them.

If no one really wants a certain item or if everyone does, it may be best to sell. Then the problem is in deciding the worth of the items. Fineran suggests talking to several antique dealers and others whom you trust to get a variety of opinions.

"Many times people tend to undervalue certain furnishings and accessories because they seemed so commonplace in their day. But as time passes, there are many items that increase in value," Fineran said.

There are probably many items you'd like to take but know you can't because they won't fit or will seem out of place in a different type of decor. Fineran says it's important to keep the items with the greatest sentimental value, but to consider your comfort and the looks of your living space as well as your emotional attachment to certain furnishings.

Companies are producing more furniture on a smaller scale to fit into today's small apartments. If you look around you may find new furniture more appealing than some of the big, older furniture you now have," Fineran added.

Insulation saves... all year 'round.

You can save both energy and money all year 'round... by adding insulation in your attic.

During the hot months, insulation helps keep the sun's heat from penetrating your ceiling and helps keep cool inside air from escaping.

During the cold months, insulation works in reverse, keeping cold air outside and warm air inside.

There are several types of insulation which you can install yourself. At least 10 inches of ceiling insulation (R-30) is recommended. Take your attic measurements to an Iowa Power Registered Insulation Dealer, and he will help you determine which type and how much you need.

Iowa Power has an insulation financing plan that lets qualified customers insulate now and take up to three years to pay. And more and more financial institutions are offering low cost energy conservation loans. For more information, call Iowa Power.

LET YOUR PASTOR KNOW

And she'd like to tell the Pastor

A few things, and make him squirm.

Mrs. Huff was sick abed, sir,
Yes, sir, sick abed a week;
And the Pastor didn't call, sir;
Never even took a peek.

Wasn't that enough, enough sir

To provoke a saint to wrath?
And to make a Christian Pilgrim
Wander from the churchly path?

When I asked her if the doctor

Called to see her, she said, "Sure";

And she looked as if she thought I

Needed some good strong mind cure.

Then I asked her how the Doctor knew

That sickness laid her low,

And she said that she had called Him

On the phone and told him so.

So the doctor called to see her,

But the pastor didn't go,

For the doctor knew that she was ill

And the pastor didn't know.

Now the doctor gets his bill paid

With a nicely written check'

But the pastor—for not knowing,

Simply "gets it in the neck."

MESSIAH TEMPLE

After a moving testimony service the Lord blessed us to hear Reverend Chance Turner. Reverend Turner used "Yea tho I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil" as his text. With stirring words of encouragement, he taught us that you have to leave something to serve the Lord.

Messiah Temple praises the Lord for our visitors, the Kenneth Woods, last Sunday.

Sunday School is at 10:30 with worship services at 11:30. The Book of Acts is taught every Sunday evening at 7:00. Prayer meeting is every Wednesday evening at 7:00. Our prayer meetings are truly occasions to get in touch with the Lord. We have a special circle of prayer in addition to our individual prayers. Lessons are taught each time we meet by members of the congregation taking turns, telling what the Lord has given them to say.

U.S. DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE

WASHINGTON, May 10 — Food stores will now be removed from the food stamp program without delay when a change in business operations makes them ineligible to accept food stamps, the U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA) announced today.

Under a new food stamp program rule, when a participating firm has changed the nature of its business and is no longer eligible to accept food stamps, USDA's Food and Nutrition Service (FNS) will immediately notify the firm that its food stamp authorization is being withdrawn.

FNS officials offered the example of a delicatessen that sells groceries and provides carry-out food service. If the delicatessen eliminates grocery sales and converts to a restaurant, it can no longer accept food stamps under USDA regulations. FNS field offices monitor participating food stores to make sure they comply with program rules.

Under the old procedure, FNS first had to ask the firm to submit a new application for food stamp authorization. If the firm was ineligible, the application then would be denied and permission to accept food stamps withdrawn.

Religious Speakers Colson, Hughes At Vets July 15

Two powerful men who were once mortal enemies in the convoluted Washington political arena, who came together under the most trying circumstances in the post-Watergate turmoil, and who now call each other "brother" will speak from the same platform at Veterans Auditorium in Des Moines the evening of July 15, 1977.

They are former Iowa Governor and U.S. Senator Harold Hughes and Charles Colson, once called the Nixon "hatchet man" who went to a Federal prison for his part in Watergate-related events, after pleading guilty. Their scheduled appearance here is to be called simply "An Evening With Harold Hughes and Charles Colson." These two men — once poles apart politically, philosophically, ethically and spiritually — will share the tumultuous events and decisions which brought them to the point in their lives where they COULD call each other "brother." Both will share what happened to them and what they are doing now.

Hughes looks back fondly on his years as Iowa's governor — perhaps the most popular governor in Iowa's history — but he says "now I'm doing what the Lord led me to do and I've never had one moment's regret."

Charles Colson, once one of the handful of men closest to President Nixon, has written a record best-selling autobiography called, BORN AGAIN, which paints an intimate view of lives shattered by the greatest U.S. political crisis in 100 years and of some men like himself who eventually gained great peace and purpose through the trauma of Watergate.

Colson, who masterminded Nixon's record 1972 landslide, which carried 49 states, was the subject of much ridicule and derision when he announced that he had accepted Jesus Christ. Many cynics accused him of being phony. Many still do. Although they may differ on methods and means, Colson and Hughes consider themselves brothers in the finest sense of the word. Colson comments "It is hard for people to understand the friendship between Harold Hughes, the flaming liberal from Iowa, and Richard Nixon's hatchet man."

Both men are associated with Fellowship Foundation in Washington. Colson is very active in the Prison Fellowship which does intensive discipling among prison inmates.

Neither Hughes nor Colson receives speaking fees or compensation. All contributions are turned over to Fellowship House in Washington or to the Prison Fellowship. Colson also contributes a substantial portion of his royalties from BORN AGAIN to the prison fellowship.

There will be no admission charge for the July 15 appearance of the two men. Their appearance in Des Moines is being arranged by Fellowship House-Iowa which is affiliated with Fellowship House in Washington. The chairman of the event is Norman Pawlewski, Iowa health commissioner.

Many Blacks Suffer From Undetected High Blood Pressure

High blood pressure is the major health problem for Black Americans, according to Dr. J.P. Long, President of the Iowa Heart Association. And though it affects approximately 3,500,000 Blacks, he said statistics indicate that almost 3,000,000 of them either have not yet been discovered or are not receiving proper treatment.

High blood pressure is a serious but frequently undetected disease, which if not controlled medically can lead to heart attack, stroke and other cardiac and kidney problems.

"It now affects an estimated 23 million Americans of all ages and races, but Blacks are particularly vulnerable," Dr. Long said. "We don't know why, but Blacks are twice as likely to have the disease, and those who develop high blood pressure probably will do so at an earlier age and have a more severe form of it than Whites," he added.

"What complicates the problem is that about half of all those who have the disease in one form or another are not aware of it because it has no set symptoms. The statistics, from various studies, also indicate only half of the others who know they have it are being treated, and only half again have had their blood pressure brought down and maintained at a level likely to avoid major complications. In other words, only 1 in 8 are receiving proper treatment for their blood pressure."

The irony in this situation, according to Dr. Long, is that high blood pressure can be detected easily, painlessly and inexpensively. And it can be brought under control by treatment. There are many drugs developed in recent years that singly or in combination can do the job, he said, adding:

"These are among the reasons we stress that people — even those who are feeling well or have no symptoms of illness — see a doctor to check for high blood pressure. Only a doctor can detect and then control it."

For pamphlets that will tell you more about high blood pressure, write the Iowa Heart Association, 3810 Ingersoll, Des Moines, Iowa 50312.

VETERANS ADMINISTRATION

Q — How may a former serviceman obtain a copy of his lost or destroyed report of separation from service?

A — Any Veterans Administration regional office will provide a form on which he may request a duplicate from the National Personnel Records Center in St. Louis. In addition, if the former service person had his discharge recorded with his county upon separation from service, he may be able to get a copy from that source.

Q — How much burial expense is paid by the Veterans Administration upon the death of an honorably - separated wartime veteran?

A — A burial allowance not to exceed $250, plus an amount not to exceed $150 toward cost of a burial plot or interment if not buried in a national cemetery. Payment not to exceed $800 may be made if the veteran's death is found by VA to be service-connected. Additionally, transportation costs are paid in certain instances.

Q — May a beneficiary receiving dependency and indemnity compensation from the Veterans Administration reside in a foreign country?

A — There are no restrictions to beneficiaries residing in foreign countries, except those residing in "blocked countries." Complete information is available at any VA regional office or American consular office.

Linn County Extension Home Economist Reupholstering— When Does It Pay Off?

Reupholstering is a popular hobby and it's not wonder! For you can save a great deal of money by doing it yourself— if you have the expertise and are willing to devote the time necessary to the project.

As an example of what you can save, consider these costs for reupholstering a short sofa (about 72 inches long):

The 10 to 12 yards of fabric needed for the project will cost $150 to $360 (at $15 to $30 a yard).

If you choose to have the work done professionally, add $125 to $180 for labor—that's a total of $275 to $540 for labor and materials.

But if you plan to do the job yourself, it will cost you $30 (for tools, tacking and cording) in addition to the fabric. The total job will cost $180 to $390.

But you must also consider your time. If you are experienced, the project will take 24 to 30 hours. Add another ten hours if you have never reupholstered before.

In contrast, you might find a new sofa (perhaps one used as a floor sample) on sale for only $300 to $600.

William Davis Gets Promotion

Following the May meeting of the Board of Directors of the Iowa-Des Moines National Bank, John R. Fitzgibbon, Chairman, President and Chief Executive Officer announced the election of William W. Davis as Senior Personal Banking Officer and Assistant Manager of Retail Banking.

though.

"My long range objective is to practice corporate law in California — whenever I go — for 5 or 6 years. After that, I want to go back to North Carolina and set up private practice," she says.

Her future plans appear insignificant when compared to her past.

The outspoken North Carolina native says she comes from a "very poor family," was married at the age of 18 and left to raise three children in 1970 when her husband was killed in a car accident. She has two daughters — Cheryl, 17, soon to enter Drake and Joan, 13 — and a son, John 11. Although she and her husband had always planned for her to return to school for a bachelors degree, she'd never dreamed of becoming a lawyer.

The turning point came shortly after the death of her husband in Nov., 1970, when she filed suit against the man driving the car. The the Operations area of the bank. He was elected Personal Banking Officer in December of 1973.

Mr. Davis began his banking career with the Merchants National Bank in Cedar Rapids in 1965. Prior to joining the Iowa-Des Moines National Bank, Davis was Director of the Career Opportunities Program for the Joint County School System for two years.

court allegedly calculated her husband's age, longevity and income, awarding her only $11,000. He was earning about $10,000 a year at the time of his death, she says.

"The day of the verdict, I went home and cried," says Steele. "I was disappointed in my attorney because he didn't explain things to me. I thought — it wasn't a big thought — that if I got into the profession, I could make a contribution to the black community."

A year later, Mrs. Steele entered her hometown school, Livingstone College, and graduated cum laude in 3½ years with a bachelors degree in sociology. It wasn't until she began to apply for masters programs in sociology that she seriously began to consider law as a profession.

On June 6, 1974, she entered Drake University Law School and in 2½ years had earned her law degree. She took the Iowa bar examination Jan. 10-12, was sworn in the next day and began working for the attorney general's office Feb. 1.

Steele says she's proud of her accomplishment, but admits, "It was hard as hell, too."

"I never quit," she says. "I became frustrated and 'I say' I almost had a nervous breakdown. I studied Saturday, Sunday, Friday night and weekends. It was the same time all the time — study time. One time I was working so hard, I had no time for my kids. They were here (in Des Moines) all but one semester."

"It just can be done. I attribute my success to my kids and their southern upbringing. My kids are just delighted, but I can't talk any of them into following. They know the discipline that's required." Despite several "lucrative offers," Steele says she will remain in Des Moines for a while to help fight discrimination in the state and possibly work within the black community. She served on the Model Cities board two years.

"You cannot turn to the black community for support here. You might get one sympathetic 'if', but that's all," she said. "There needs to be unity. I want to encourage blacks to become productive citizens. Standing out on the street, you just support statistics."
