Boston, Mass. — The wife of Senator Edward Brooke, Republican of Massachusetts, was granted a divorce last week. They were married thirty years and have two daughters. Senator Brooke was attorney general of Massachusetts before he was elected to the United State Senate. He is the only Negro serving in that body since reconstruction days.

CAPE TOWN, SOUTH AFRICA — White-ruled South Africa unveiled a blueprint for a future political system Tuesday in which blacks living in "white areas" might get direct representation in a central governing body.

NEW YORK, N.Y. — New York State law allowing for unemployment compensation for striking employees after the first eight weeks of a strike was declared unconstitutional Tuesday by a federal judge here.

The order barring the state from making any more such payments was signed by U.S. District Judge Richard Owen and is effective immediately.

WASHINGTON, D.C. (AP) — The House narrowly approved a $100 million transition fund Tuesday for black rule in southern Africa over objections that it is aid for Marxists and risks race war in Rhodesia.

The $100 million fund was approved 208 to 204 in a $3.2 billion U.S. military aid bill that the House approved 242 to 163 and sent to the Senate.

DES MOINES, IOWA — Luther T. Glanton, III was convicted in the Polk County District Court last week on a charge of arson claiming that he set fire to a house at 1125-11th Street. He will be sentenced in June.

Others present were Vincent Chapman, Larry Carter, Al Correll, Robert Davis, Thomas Mann, Senator Willard Hansen, James B. Morris, Senator Phillip Hill. Senators Hansen and Hill were authors of the measure. Ron Langston, Representative Hargrave, Rev. John Donovan,

Among the people participating in the bill signing was ten year old Willie Pack of Des Moines who read his poem "The Man Martin L. King."

The Governor said he was "especially impressed" with Willie's poem and added that it "showed real insight in cutting through a lot of language and saying something that everyone can understand."

Following is the text of the poem:

THE MAN MARTIN L. KING By Willie Pack

Why our school is called Martin Luther King.
Why is it? I'll tell you why.
He never fought or told a lie.

Oh Yeah
Yes he did fight for the equal rights of Mr. Mitchell, Mrs. Florence and all of you. The Senate the Congress and the President too!
When it comes to King, We think he's the best, from north south east and west.
He didn't have much of a chance to be a perfect star.
So the next time you think of Mr. King think of the way he did his thing,
How he got everybody good and nice, Instead of fighting like cats and mice.

New Methods of Carrying On Diplomatic Relations

While the late John Foster Dulles was Secretary of State, he established a new policy of carrying on diplomatic contacts with other nations by visiting them when he felt that the interests of the United States needed surging up. His was a period when the trouble in Korea was still brewing, and the Middle East troubles remained, an unsettled state and relations between some nations and South America were not desirable.

Then too, there was a lack of personal relationships between this country and Russia and China, leading Communist nations.

Even though he drew criticism from Democrats and some Republicans for his type of diplomacy, yet many of his efforts were successful.

President Carter's Secretary of State, many lesser officials, as well as U.N. Ambassador, Andrew Young, have kept the airplanes busy carrying them from one place to another. They too have enlarged the subject matter of their missions covering, not only economic and political differences, but also, a strong plea for human rights in all the countries they have visited. This is in keeping with President Carter's proposal that this country would insist on human rights for the people of all countries which collaborate with America, and in many cases, receive large sums of foreign aid. They have also dealt deeply in the problems of South Africa and apparently are making some headway in convincing their leaders that blacks should have a fair shake in the government and economic policies of these countries also.

America, as the leading industrial nation in the world, is looked upon for guidelines in improvement of conditions in many countries where their people have not had an opportunity to fully participate in what these countries have to offer. The larger industrial countries have long collaborated with this country realizing that each has something to offer each other. Of course we ourselves need to clean up some of the inequalities that exist under our own feet. Fortunately, efforts are made to do so even though they are slow at times.

Democrats Reverse Negro Support of Republican Party

There was a time when the Democratic party was looked upon with hate by Negroes. The South pretty well dominated the party because of the historic situation that prevailed with reference to inequality for Negroes in the southern states.

During these times the Republican party was looked upon as the party for Negroes for its founders greatly based their appeal for equality for Civil Rights for the Negro. During the era before Woodrow Wilson, many leaders became unwilling to follow the slow pace which the Republicans pursued and had permitted the South to bargain away their rights both by law and force. They turned to Woodrow Wilson, a college president, who championed equal rights in his campaign. But once elected he proved a turncoat, contributing greatly to discrimination in the District of Columbia. He was the father of the Railway Labor Board which served to eliminate most Negroes as brakeman, firemen and flagmen which had been proverbial jobs for them.

Along came Franklin Roosevelt in 1933 when the depression was at its height, with programs that helped to feed the poor and create some type of job that even the poorest were able to get. This made a great impression on the Negro voter and not only he but his wife contributed greatly to many programs that were beneficial to the Negro. All with the result that Negroes left the Republican party in large numbers and today still stutter about what to do to get them back.

Today, Negroes are mayors in many of the large cities and wield strong political influence in the Democratic party enabling some democratic officials in pulling through because of their vote.

President Lyndon Johnson, while a strong opponent of Civil Rights when he first entered Congress, became a strong supporter while leader of the Democratic party in the Senate and later when he became president. It was he who said that a man without a right to vote could make little progress. In his administration, the voting rights bill was passed which enabled Negroes in the South to vote and today many are holding public office for the first time since Reconstruction days.

President Carter, another southerner, has continued the upward swing in Negro participation in government and economic advancement, much of which had never been done before.

Unfortunately, Iowa Democrats have not kept up with what is going on for the support of their ticket. The

Energy: A Minority View

By Bayard Rustin
President, A. Philip
Randolph Institute

Mr. Rustin, an eminent black spokesman and board member of Americans for Energy Independence, defines the need for growth against "naive idealists" whose "pastoral fantasies" would deny the social and economic benefits of technology not only to our racial minorities but to entire populations in the Third World.

It has become part of the conventional wisdom of certain segments of the intelligentsia that economic growth must be significantly reduced or halted altogether by the wealthier industrial countries. The advocates of the zero growth philosophy more often than not are passionate supporters of a more equitable social order, particularly for racial minorities here and for the darkerskinned peoples of the underdeveloped world.

That there is a glaring contradiction between their opposition to growth, on the one hand, and their avowed support for a more equal society on the other, seems not to have dawned on many of these people. In their naive idealism (and, in some cases, scarcely camouflaged elitism), they would deprive society of a key means for ending poverty and misery at the very moment that the most deprived groups are demanding a rightful share of the fruits of the modern industrial, technological, economic order.

However, not all anti-growth proponents are well-intentioned, but simplistic-minded, foes of development and technology. Nor are they necessarily eccentric adherents of the environmental movement. There is, in fact, a growing movement comprised largely of scientists and economists who are actively engaged in the formulation of "alternative" models of economic and social life.

They are drawing up a blueprint for a future society which would rely much less than the present one on technology, traditional sources of energy, and economic growth. And since the architects of these alternative societies look upon themselves as liberal, or even radical in political outlook, their schemes almost always contain formulas for creating a more egalitarian economic order.

Remedy Worse than Problem

Invariably, the authors of these plans for the future assure us that unless society mends its ways and views social problems from their own new and elevated level of consciousness, the world and its people are doomed to environmental chaos and racial conflict on a heretofore unimagined scale. In a sense, they are correct, since bold action will in fact be required to resolve the smoldering difficulties confronting the world. Unfortunately, the prescription of the zero-growthers would be worse than the disease.

Take for example, the currently fashionable proposals for the development of labor-intensive, as opposed to highly technologized, energy-intensive industries. There is a certain seductive quality to such proposals, promising as they do a less hectic, and more family and community oriented way of life.

But when the advocates of the new way of life are asked to elaborate on the kinds of jobs that would be the basis for this pastoral economy of the future, we are presented with vague and rather exotic concepts like "craft industry," "low specialization," "common units," "local bartering," and "village emphasis."

Not surprisingly, the economists of the counterculture have converted few, if indeed any, blacks to their line of thinking. That is because blacks have had ample experience with labor-intensive, small-scale economics, and found the concept to be far removed from the "small is beautiful" paradise that its current proponents believe it to be.

Negroes know better than anyone else that labor-intensive industries, such as small agricultural units, are more likely to demean the human spirit than to elevate it. For the southern rural black, the advent of industrial society meant a measure of economic emancipation, just as today the newer technologies are making possible increased opportunities for escape from the less-pleasant aspect of heavy industry.

DEAR EDITOR:

I am writing this letter as an appeal for correspondence and friendship. I hope you will be kind enough to publish it.

I am a lonely man who is incarcerated in the Chillicothe Correctional Institution. Loneliness in a place like this can almost be unbearable. It is a feeling that has to be experienced to be understood.

I do not wish to be swallowed up in a vacuum of emptiness nor do I wish to become a faint shadow of some hidden dream.

It is not pity I seek, but rather a more meaningful strength in the understanding of others as well as myself. I believe that when you share a tear or a smile or a thought with another then you are less a stranger.

If anyone would care to write to me please address your letters to:

DMACC Board Views Urban Sites

Following a closed door session, the Des Moines Area Community College (DMACC) Board of Directors announced they are considering four locations for a new Urban Campus, presently located at the old Sabin Elementary School, 5th and College.

The four sites discussed were:

The parking garage at 4th and Grand in downtown Des Moines.

The old Dowling High School Campus at 10th and College.

The former Irving Junior High School at 16th and Forest.

An urban renewal tract located between 6th Ave, 9th St., the MacVicar Freeway and University Ave.

Board President Walter Hetzel said these four sites discussed at the meeting held Monday might not be the only sites considered. The board instructed Supt. Paul Lowery to get the best offer from the owners of these sites and bring them to the board for further discussion.

The Uranium Smugglers

By Laura Parks

W.E.B. DuBois predicted before his death that the peace of the world would be decided in Africa. The famed black scholar, educator, author and political activist maintained that the struggle for control of Africa's riches would supplant conventional East-West confrontations between black Africa and colonial interests.

Since the prediction the history of African liberation followed uneven, contradictory paths with only occasional threats to the peace of the world. Recently Angola provided threats of confrontation and dangers to peace but these dissipated in the murky waters of past Watergate Presidential election politics.

Now, however, developing confrontations in Rhodesia and South Africa increase the likelihood of a major conflict if the peaceful transfer of power to black majority rule fails.

Concern over rising Rhodesian and South African opposition to black demands has given way to fear that South African whites may precipitate conflict conceivably involving most African states as well as the United States and the Soviet Union.

This danger together with the knowledge that South Africa possess and continues to build atomic weapons prompted bizarre C.I.A. revelations about the 1968 mystery disappearance of 200 tons of uranium ore from the high seas.

In 1959 South Africa began active atomic research for industrial and military purposes. The plan was to follow the traditional paths in atomic development eventually reaching desired goals. With black Africa throwing off the shackles of colonialism with unusual speed South African leaders decided to speed up atomic program. Plans for atomic bombs were shelved in favor of atomic cannons and other small tactical nuclear weapons, deemed more suitable to African terrain and demographic concentrations.

About the same time Israel, surrounded by Arab states, but with secret designs to expand her frontiers, also started on atomic research with the generous support of France and the U.S., the idea being to provide Israel with the muscle to intimidate oil rich but then weak Arab neighbors. In those days neither France nor the U.S. wished to see the emergence of powerful Arab nations, nor the rapid disintegration of long held positions in Africa. South Africa and Israel became vital strategic centers to hold off the Arabs and the Africans.

In 1963 the French government gave Israel an atomic reactor capable of producing raw materials for atomic weapons. The progress was satisfactory in terms of normal scientific development and slow in terms of the political-strategic aims she had in mind.

Following the Israeli victories in the 1967 war against Egypt atomic weapons research was speeded up in anticipation of expected Egyptian and Arab actions. However, Israeli Uranium stockpiles were meager for atomic weapons target planned by the government.

The Israeli government became a major exporter of sophisticated weapons systems in 1969 while developing and retaining atomic weapons. Over the years Israeli, South African scientific, and military contacts increased with Israel providing South Africa with weapons systems and atomic technology and know how.

From available reports the inescapable conclusion is that the governments and intelligence services of France, Belgium, Israel, the United States and West

Germany knew what was happening but chose to hide it from public view because in 1968 all the ranking government leaders looked upon Israel and South Africa as key bastions in defense of common interests.

Today the situation has changed. In relation to the Arab world, Israel has become insignificant when compared with the vitally needed oil riches of the Arab states and the friendship they are more than eager to share with the oil consuming nations.

The danger of alienating black Africa persists as long as South Africa, Rhodesia and Namibia remain under colonial style domination. There are inescapable signs that here too a shift in policy away from South Africa and Rhodesia is under way in favor of long term and mutual profitable relations with black and Arab Africa.

Dr. DuBois' prophesy is more than valid now that atomic weapons have come to Africa and the Middle East. But now, thanks to the brilliantly leaked revelations the world may decide to keep a sharp look out for uranium smugglers and start on the serious business of curbing the terrifying spread of nuclear weapons.

Business in the Black

By Charles E. Belle

Carter Can Help Our Crowd

Crowding out of jobs is coming to be the thing for blacks before, during and after the last occupant of the White House. This underemployment occurs when skilled people cannot find jobs at the highest level that they are capable of performing.

This has an effect on the entire job market. When people take substitute jobs for which they are overqualified, there is a crowding downward. In no other ethnic group is this more devastating than among blacks.

This is obvious to anyone who has ever opened the back door to a post office and yelled "Doctor." There are so many black Ph.D.'s in the P.O. that chatting at the water fountain in an urban post office annex is like going to a faculty meeting at the University of California at Berkeley.

President Carter can change this crime. He can appoint about 1,000 top executives at salaries ranging from $47,000 to $66,000. An internal White House memo reveals that all

SAFETY SENSE

Toward Better Gardening

More and more people are discovering that growing a healthy garden is a matter of having power—power equipment. One tool that many find makes the job a lot easier and more efficient is a power tiller. Here are some tips on how to use one safely from experts at the Outdoor Power Equipment Institute.

1. Before you even start the engine, become familiar with the owner's manual. Make sure you understand all the controls, attachments, safety devices.
2. Never remove guards or shields.
3. Keep children and pets out of the area.
4. Proper clothing can be a safety factor. Wear rough-soled, heavy-duty shoes.
5. Stop the engine if you're leaving the equipment, unclogging blades, making repairs or refueling.
6. If you spill gasoline, wipe it up immediately.
7. Don't smoke around fuel. Remember, fumes ignite.

guarantee good vibes in the black community. But the test of his "trust me" theme will be if only 120 or about 12 percent, the average black population of the country, is exceeded by the stroke of his pen.

The President of the United States will have a unique opportunity to build a strong black economic base. More than any other President before him, James Earl Carter, Jr. can put his personal stamp on the powerful federal judgeship.

These judicial jobs will occur at the rate of over 30 a year. Plus Congress can create an additional 100 judicial positions. The placement of black lawyers in these positions not only protects us from racist pigs on the money pot, but opens up administrative positions often sought by sad black lawyers who were passed over for justly earned judicial roles.

The law degree destines too many blacks for any job position when put before a white man. When the Brother is administering, he is not likely to be suing, but soothing.

Sweet talking, President Carter has promised to appoint more women and minorities to the judicial bench. But a Justice Department spokesman said, "Affirmative action is not a mandate for judgeships. We want the best qualified people."

Attorney General Griffin Bell, was one of those Georgia back woods people picked for the highest post in the Justice Department. Black folks can best start "trusting" President Carter when he picks black Ph.D.'s from the post office and black city counselors at-law in correlation to the racial lines of this country to fill the over 1,000 jobs with five figure pay at the President's finger tips.

SOCIAL SECURITY ADMINISTRATION

Q: I left my job 18 years ago to get married. I haven't worked at all since that time but I'm going back to work now. Am I still entitled to the social security credits I earned for the time I worked before I married?

A: Yes indeed, your earnings credit remains on your social security record permanently. When you return to work, the credits you earn under social security will be added to your social security record and will help build up protection for you and your family.

Q: I'm 17 and a senior in high school. My stepfather died recently. I know my mother can't get social security widows' payments because she's only 44. However, someone told me that I may be able to get social security checks on my stepfather's earnings record. Is there any truth in that?

A: Yes, you have the same rights on your stepfather's social security earnings record as you would have on your natural father's. If your stepfather worked long enough under social security, you can get monthly payments until you're 18, or 22 if you attend school full time and remain unmarried. Also, if you're in the care of your mother, she may be able to get monthly payments until you reach 18. Your mother should get in touch with any social security office as soon as possible.

Upbeat Notes On Harlem

Noted black writer Frank Hercules, appearing in the June issue of Reader's Digest, says he's in love with Harlem.

Despite a high rate of crime, violence, poverty and substandard housing, "Harlem remains a key fortress for black people in the United States," he observes. "For me, there has always been alchemy in the sights, scents and sounds of Harlem, where people live out the raw stuff of life in seesawing transports of triumph and tragedy ... I observe how squalor and degradation exist side by side with elegance and exaltation. And I testify to the transmutation of all these diverse elements into hope." He continues, saying: "Despite the formidable difficulties Harlem faces, it is a triumphant, not a defeated, community. It celebrates the invincibility of the human spirit."

Speaking of Harlem's ubiquitous numbers game, Hercules writes: "To 'hit the number' is to rocket to the moon and walk there, spending your winnings like a billionaire gone crazy. So that when in the shortness of time you revert to your impoverished state, the people on your block will still remember that sudden wealth did not make you a skinflint."

For the people of Harlem, Hercules says, the unforgivable sin is to be a phony. "You may be anything you please, provided you're 'for real,'" he writes. "The bizarre, the grotesque, alien, exotic, squalid, monstrous, beautiful, sublime — each has its place in Harlem. Out of the searing, age-old experience of being black in a hostile culture, an instinctual response assays in a lightening flash the true and the false."

Truth crushed to earth will rise again. (italy) This maxim by the British writer, Thomas Carlyle (1795-1881) has developed a kind of charming, burnished patina over the years. But its cold unswerving prophecy of retribution is unquestioned.

It comes to mind in respect our ambassador to the United Nations Andrew Young, the handsome, unflappable, likable young warrior from Congress via toe civil rights movement. His head is on the public opinion chopping block with some white liberals among the first in line, tight-lipped and sweaty-palmed, itching for the privilege of swinging the axe.

Andy needs all of his friends now. And I count myself among some of his closest and best. It is not likely that President Carter will muzzle his outspoken emissary to the United Nations, thus forcing him to quit the post with all the bitter repercussions that would surely bring.

But the most ominous thing that seems in the immediate offing is that escalating criticism and carping rebuttals from State Department "old African Hands" now cornered with their bankrupt (often neo-colonialist) policies toward Africa, will somehow blunt the effectiveness of what Young is saying.

I am not a foreign policy expert so I can not fly speck statements on our African policy with any certainty of accuracy. I am a humanist, however, which is essentially, what Young, a Methodist preacher is also.

It does not take a foreign policy expert to know that our posture historically towards Africa and especially toward Southern Africa where blacks are oppressed in the worst way, to know our policy is wrong and foolhardy — or at least it has been until recently. Possession of common sense and a sensitivity to the humanity common in all of us, are all one need possess.

Andy Young has been saying a lot of things that have needed saying by men and women in high sensitive political positions, most of whom have lacked the courage or do not possess the burning rage to do so.

I do not always agree with every word he says nor with his presumed feeling of necessity to apologize for some of his off-the cuff remarks. But I believe in Andrew Young. I believe in his honesty, probity, integrity, his hard common sense, his strongly balanced, mature personality and judgment that helped guide him and Dr. King and many of us who might have despaired or acted rashly out of desperation to be heard, through the rough dark days of our struggle for human and civil rights in the 60s and early 1970s.

Andrew Young has been forged in one of the most searing of crucibles — the unrelenting, protracted struggle for civil rights. He is not apt to do rash things, or speak untruths damaging to the country he loves so well.

I have sat many nights with Dr. King, with other strategists of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference (SCLC) — sat and sweated and planned, and plotted strategies. These were all crucial strategy sessions for the freedom, indeed the very lives of a lot of blacks and their supporters depended on the correctness of these decisions.

In the middle of it all sat Young, pensive, cool, unflappable, his always a voice of calm and reason above a cacaphony of angry and explosive suggestions by young, hot-headed field staffers.

Andrew Young may not be the best thing since sliced bread. But he is the best thing that has happened to our Mission to the United Nations in some time and we ought to do our best to keep him there.

For my part I would prefer our truth at that level to remain in the here and now in the person of Andy Young. Knowledge of Carlyle's maxim, however, is a comforting reassurance.

Grant Given To Study Blacks In Congress

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The Joint Center for Political Studies has received a $66,000 grant from the American Revolution Bicentennial Administration (ARBA) to undertake a six month research project on Black Americans in Congress, 1870-1977.

The objective of the project is to compile a body of historical and biographical data dealing with the lives of the 45 black Americans who have served or are serving in the United States Congress. This data is to be the basis for the production of a documentary film designed to inform the general public of the contributions of these legislators to our nation.

In announcing the project, Joint Center President Eddie N. Williams observed: "At a time when Americans are emphasizing the need to trace their roots, it is disappointing to note that there is no in-depth audio-visual documentation of the lives and experiences of the black members of Congress. Altogether, 45 blacks, including the 17 incumbents, have been members of Congress since 1870. It is important that we document their contributions and thereby fill the gap that

BOATERS MUST WATCH WAKES

DES MOINES — Iowa boaters are held responsible for the wake caused by their boats as they pass through the water according to the Iowa Conservation Commission.

Large wakes can damage shoreline features as well as boats moored to docks. Excessive hull wear on bumping the dock, swamping, and even the capsizing of boats have resulted from wake action. Since boaters are capable of controlling the wake of their boats, past court actions have held boaters responsible for damage caused by their wakes.

Specially zoned "no wake" areas exist in many Iowa waters. These regulations specifically protect approved activities or natural shoreline and are enforced by waters officers. These waters are marked with buoys in such a manner as to outline the particular area.

FAMILY VACATION IDEA: SEARCHING FOR ROOTS

First it was America's two-hundredth birthday. Then came the phenomenally popular book and television series, "Roots."

These influences, plus the considerable curiosity and nostalgia that is in most of us, are causing a burst of interest in where we come from. A surprising number of persons are doing some searching for their own roots.

Some families, says Regina B. Fineran, Polk County extension home economist, are talking about combining this interest and their family vacation plans.

"As families have spread away from original settlements, many now find themselves far away from the family home. And a trip back is one way to start recapturing the past," she points out.

The search for family history can be as casual as a Sunday drive to visit an elderly relative. Or it can become a research effort of considerable dimensions. Family time and interest will determine that.

In any case, according to Fineran, some advance planning will pay off. Know what to look for and where it is most likely to be found.

Fineran has a little brochure that will help the would-be genealogist plan a starting place. It is called "Genealogy — Try It, You May Like It." It is available from Fineran at the County Extension Office, 3612½ Second Avenue in Des Moines, Iowa 50313; or telephone 284-4158.

at the First Baptist Church in Ottumwa, Iowa, with the Ida B. Wells Club as hostess after a call was sent out by Ms. Josephine St. Pierre Ruffin, president of the "Women's New Era Club. As a result of a letter written to England by a southern newspaper editor reflecting the moral character of colored women in America. The women united and challenged the disgraceful remarks and image all over the United States by organizing clubs to fight the evils and distasteful remarks.

Joins National

Ms. Helena Downer was the first president, Mrs. Gertrude Johnson the organizer. Clubs were organized in Keokuk, Des Moines, Sioux City, Davenport, Marshalltown, Cedar Rapids, Buxton, Mason City, Centerville, Council Bluffs, Iowa City and Waterloo. In 1910 the Iowa Association of Colored Women's Clubs joined the National Association of Colored Women's Clubs, Inc., with headquarters in Washington, D.C.

The association has provided many educational and social privileges for colored girls and boys in America. In 1919 a home was purchased at Iowa City for girls attending the University of Iowa. A scholarship loan fund to help worthy students attain higher education had been established; $500 was donated to Simpson College, Indianola, Iowa towards the George Washington Carver Science Hall; $1,000 was donated to the Kidney Foundation at Iowa Lutheran Hospital in Des Moines. Today the Association gives scholarships to worthy students seeking to further their education in Iowa schools. Applications may be sent in writing to Mrs. Emma Turner, Cedar Rapids, Mrs. Pauline Humphrey and Mrs. Rose A. Johnson, Des Moines.

Alexander, Ms. Naomi Dobson, Ms. Jeanne Morris, Ms. Gertrude Rush, Ms. Juanita White, Ms. Jessie Walker, Mrs. R. A. Rubella Increase Alarming High

An alarming increase of 69 per cent in the number of rubella (German measles) cases reported for the first 17 weeks of 1977, compared to the same period a year ago, threatens some five million women of childbearing age," says Dr. Arthur J. Salisbury, vice president for medical services of The National Foundation-March of Dimes.

If a pregnant woman becomes infected, especially during the early months, the disease can be fatal or cause lifelong impairment to her baby.

According to the Center for Disease Control (CDC), 10,511 rubella cases are on record for the period ended April 30, 1977. This contrasts with 6,205 cases shown for the same weeks in 1976. Indications are that this rise will continue.

"To prevent the needless tragedy of birth defects caused by rubella, expanded immunization efforts are urgently needed," says Dr. Salisbury. "About 10 per cent of the women of childbearing age have no immunity against rubella."

With the licensing of the rubella vaccine in 1969, prevention of birth defects caused by the disease became possible. Mass immunization drives, assisted by many March of Dimes chapters, have been carried out by local health departments for children under 12. This is the age group most likely to spread the infection to pregnant women.

Congenital rebella is a cause of infant death, blindness, deafness, heart damage, and mental retardation. Many of these children suffer from multiple defects. A rubella epidemic in 1964-65 resulted in tragedy for some 50,000 babies: about 30,000 infants died before birth, and another 20,000 were stricken with defects.

Vaccination campaigns have brought about a steady decline of rubella among young children. Nationwide, reported rubella has fallen two-thirds below prevaccine levels.

GI Bill students desiring advance payment for fall school semesters must submit their request in writing to the school, the Veterans Administration advised.

Toll-free telephone lines to regional offices for benefits' information is available to about 90 per cent of the nation's veterans, according to the Veterans Administration.

A FOCUS ON CONTEMPORARY EDUCATION

Upper Iowa University will present a Continuing Education Course, "A Focus on Contemporary Education," Educ. 487, at East High School, Monday through Thursday, June 13 to July 1, 6:30 - 9:30 p.m. Registration is Saturday, June 11, from 9:30 to 11:00 a.m. Cost, $80; credit, three semester hours. For further information, contact Ann Bakerink, 276-3017 (days), or Bill Charles, 262-6049 (evenings.).

Aubrey C. Lewis, corporate vice president for administrative services with the F.W. Woolworth Co., has been presented a Distinguished Service Award by the 100 Black Men of New Jersey, Inc. for his efforts and contributions as a charter member of the board of the New Jersey Sports and Exposition Authority.

The accompanying citation singled Lewis out for his ' ' o u t s t a n d i n g professionalism and courage of conviction in relating and instilling within his fellow trustees of the New Jersey Sports and Exposition Authority, contractors, owners, union officials and community leaders, an a w a r e n e s s and understanding of sensitive employment issues which benefit the entire community.' ' The citation continued:

 "As Chairman of the Authority's Affirmative Action Committee, Lewis has played a vital role in developing, implementing and evaluating the critical Affirmative Action component of the New Jersey Sports and Exposition Authority's manpower program, the success of which warrants this recognition.

"His gifted ability to gain total cooperation in this venture is compatible and in keeping with his life style. Since his childhood days in New Jersey Aubrey has been known as a 'doer' — a person who makes things happen. A man whose leadership has exhibited extreme sensitivity, both in his position as an executive with the F. W. Woolworth Co. and as a trustee of the Sports Complex, it has only been a natural and innate response that he has assumed the necessary role of relating and communicating the aspirations of the black community before the Authority."

One Hundred Black Men, Inc. is made up of men in business, industry, public affairs, government and the professions. It is dedicated to achieving meaningful gains for the black community in housing, education, employment, health services, the professions and government.

Lewis, is working closely with the 100 Black Men of New Jersey in organizing a football game classic between Howard University and Florida A&M University scheduled to be played at the New Jersey Sports Complex on Sept. 10. The proceeds will fund college scholarships for underprivileged students as well as other charitable activities carried out by the organization.

Lewis, a resident of Montclair, joined Woolworth as executive office personnel representative in 1967. In 1970 he was promoted to assistant vice president for career development and in 1972 he was elected to his present position as assistant corporate vice president for administrative services. He is a graduate of the University of Notre Dame. Prior to joining Woolworth he was an agent with the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

In 1971 he was named a commissioner of the New Jersey Sports and Exposition Authority. As chairman of the Authority's Affirmative Action Committee he has been the chief coordinator of a program involving the Authority, unions, contractors and community, which has been cited as one of the best affirmative action packages ever put together for blacks, women and other minorities in the nation.

Iowa Power announced today its participation in a large new electric generating station near Muscatine, Iowa, in Louisa County. The jointly owned 650 megawatt plant will burn coal and is expected to be completed in January, 1983.

Mark Putney, Senior Vice President and General Counsel of Iowa Power, said, "We have agreed to own 33% of the plant or about 211 megawatts. This addition will be very helpful in meeting our projected additional electric demands in 1983 and thereafter. It will also provide for future electric loads of several municipal systems which have agreed to long range planning with Iowa Power."

"The Louisa unit by itself, however, will not be sufficient to meet all increased electric demands from 1985 - 1990. Additional new electric capacity will be required after the Louisa plant and Iowa Power is still considering the nuclear option in that time frame," Putney added.

Commenting on substantial new coal requirements Putney said, "This new unit will burn more than two million tons of coal per year.

ALLEN ASHBY

This wasn't the greatest week end of sports that I ever saw. There were track meets all around, both girls and boys, the Younker's Kodol tennis meet, baseball and some activity on the tube. And what did I see of it? Not too much. Chased the Kodol tournament all over town Saturday and was in on the final matches Sunday.

Watched the Bobby Riggs exhibitions and was reminded of the time Chet Williamson and I saw him walking down the street over thirty years ago. He had the same strut then that he has now.

Also thought about the black tennis players who came along when the guy was a junior. Jimmy McDaniels, who was Riggs' chief rival for the California state high school singles title. You couldn't help but wonder if Jimmy would have done as well as did Bobby if he had the same opportunity. But McDaniels was born too soon, as were a lot of us.

Chet and I often discuss the chances for black players today, and we nearly always wind up by saying how we would have liked to have been in the same atmosphere. Maybe we might have not done too good. But we were really dedicated to the game and our development as players. Chet had the patience, determination and the willingness to work at it. I may have nor may not have had them. But it would have sure been fun finding out.

Our late brother Bill always worked hard, but he wanted to see instant results. Sometimes got them and sometimes he didn't. But, if I had it to do over again, I don't know what I would change. Well, maybe if I could, I would have spent more time with kids who wanted to learn the game, even if they were hard to find.

Oh, yes, our Hilltop team of Janet Milton and Toney Stingley were beaten in the quarter finals, but they said they were glad to have been in the thing.

And in this background we are getting ready to stage our Hilltop Open. Our date will be August 9 through the 14. Haven't heard from the Iowa closed meet about our switch on dates, but whether we do or not, we are going ahead.

Then next fall everybody will have something to talk about and holler about at the Tennis Association meeting. Maybe something can be worked out that won't make us look as if we don't know what we are doing. If we can't switch, our meet won't be as big as it normally is, but maybe neither will the other one. I think we will both lose some people.

I wish there were some way to get across to the young athletes of today the importance of finishing school. So many of the young blacks I see are working hard at basketball, football or such in hopes of making it in the pros. Man, what we need are people with skills that can help humanity. Doctors, lawyers, teachers, engineers, and skilled blue collar workers.

I don't suppose anybody ever got the message to the kids that there only around four thousand professional athletes in the whole country. I mean athletes who make their living at all of the games you can name. Football, baseball, basketball, hockey, tennis, golf, boxing and the rest of them. Less than five thousand, and you have an idea of the millions of kids who want to make it in these sports. Now, that you know what the odds are against your getting one of those big contracts, will you stay in school and learn to make a living?

I suppose this could be applied to the people who want to be entertainers. I don't know how many of them there are, but the chances of your making it in that business are probably just about as good as they are in sports. One sees so many bright kids who say they are bored with school because it doesn't have a challenge to them. Well, you have to make your own challenge. Challenge yourself to learn what it takes to become a skilled worker of any kind, and I bet that will motivate you if you really want to get into it.

Don't get me wrong. I am all for athletics. If you have a strong body and are good enough to get a college scholarship, fine. But use that scholarship to learn something besides the game you are paying for it with. Then if you don't get in the pros, you can always go to work.

I don't know how many fine athletes I have seen who have played out their eligibility and quit school without a degree or having learned very much. Then the pros turn them down, or they don't make it, and they drift.

Recall a fine fullback from one of our midwestern schools, who was labeled certain to make it as a professional player. He didn't, drifted from menial job to menial job, and finally went to prison for stealing. While in prison he got hold of himself and studied to become a social worker, and when he got out, had learned his lesson.

Is that what you want? What brought this on? I had to have something to write about.

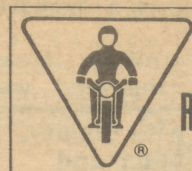

STATE PARK
DESIGNATED CAMPSITE
SYSTEM COMPLETED

DES MOINES — The Iowa Conservation Commission has finalized their study of campsites to comply with State Department of Health guidelines, according to Fred A. Priewert, Director of the Commission.

Figures show that in past seasons on normal weekends about 3,500 campsites were being utilized while on holiday weekends over 6,600 campsites were being used. Under the new quota system now in effect, there will be a total of 4,507 state park campsites. The new figure was based on the Department of Health guideline of eight camping units per each sanitary installation.

Priewert said that temporary toilet facilities are being placed in several state parks where area is available and public use of additional campsites warrants such facilities. This action will increase available campsites by 318 units for a total of 4,825 campsites for 1977.

Priewert explained that there should be adequate camping sites in most areas on normal weekends. However, on holiday weekends such as Memorial Day and July 4th there will be a shortage of sites in certain parks. Priewert said that if a state park is filled, potential campers can obtain alternate campground information for private, county, and city areas within a 25-mile radius from the state park check-in station. "Several state parks have not had all available campsites filled on normal or holiday weekends", Priewert noted.

RIDING TIPS FOR THE MOTORCYCLIST
Safety First

Motorcycle safety is no accident. The Motorcycle Safety Foundation offers these simple tips for road riding that can improve your riding while making it safe and enjoyable.

1. Even a surface that is "normal" for other vehicles has bumps, debris and loose material that are obstacles for motorcycles.

2. Keep your head up and your eyes moving so you can anticipate hazards ahead of time.

3. Take the path of least resistance and go around (rather than over) an obstacle if you can.

4. Slow down before you reach an obstacle by either applying and releasing the brakes, or down-shifting.

5. Avoid depressing the clutch or brake while going over a rough or slippery surface; this should be done before reaching the hazard.

Viral Infections Connected With Asthma:

Viral infections play a significant role in triggering asthma attacks in young children, a research pediatrician said recently in the first public report that something other than allergic response is involved in the disease.

"It's not all allergy," said Dr. Elliot F. Ellis of the State University of New York at Buffalo. "A large proportion of attacks of asthma during early life can be seen to be clearly related to a viral infection."

"In many kids, you can relate the first asthma attacks to a viral respiratory infection like flu," Ellis said. "In some way, the virus has done something to them."

The findings, developed the last five years, were reported by Dr. Ellis at a science writers' seminar recently in conjunction with a meeting of the American Congress of Allergy and Immunology - held in New York City.

The findings were called an important advance in basic understanding of asthma and are expected to have a major impact on the future treatment of the disease, which affects nine million Americans. Widespread practice involves desensitization shots for asthmatics.

Underlying the reaction to the virus is the belief that the asthmatic has a basic genetic defect involving bronchial tubes or airways in the lungs. Dr. Ellis said the viral infection has been clearly related to the asthma onset and the worsening of existing asthma in children aged one to five, particularly those two to three.

Viral infections also have been found to be related to "late onset" asthma in persons 40 to 50, such as menopausal women who develop a flu-like illness.

Genealogy Aids Study of Diseases:

Medical researchers are using the genealogy records of the Mormon Church in a search for the genetic roots of cancer and other diseases.

As a first step, scientists at the LDS Hospital and the University of Utah Medical Center are putting family histories into a computer.

Dr. Mark Sklnick, the population geneticist heading the team, said it will be a year before researchers are ready to compare the genealogy of 250,000 Mormon families with medical records to test several genetic hypotheses about disease.

Their research could help in the early detection and prevention of cancer and other diseases, said Dr. Homer Warner of the University's medical biophysics and computing department.

The research is funded by a National Cancer Institute grant. It first will try to determine whether cancer runs in families.

If a strong family relationship is found, search will begin for distinguishing traits of cancer-prone families.

Dr. Warner hopes to find a relationship between certain genetic markers, such as fingerprints, and cancer, and use them to identify high-risk individuals within families.

"If a family at risk can be identified, then it might be possible to identify individuals within that family who have traits corresponding to genes which might predispose them to cancer," he continued.

Black Caucus Mad About Racist Remarks

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The Congressional Black Caucus demands a full investigation of the "racist remarks" which a Republican Congressman is alleged to have made while discussing the investigation into the assassination of civil rights leader Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. Congressman Parren J. Mitchell, Chairman of the Caucus, asked for the investigation in a letter to John J. Rhodes, "Minority Leader" in the United States House of Representatives.

Syndicated columnist Jack Anderson recently reported that John Ashbrook, a Republican Congressman from Johnson, Ohio, objected to the Capitol Hill probe into the assassination of the slain Nobel Peace Prize Winner, and reportedly said that he believed that time and money should not be wasted "investigating the murder of some nigger". The Caucus letter indicated that this alleged racial slur by a public official must be investigated to determine the true facts.

The Congressional Black Caucus, whose membership includes Cleveland Democrat Louis Stokes, House Assassinations Committee Chairman and District of Columbia Delegate Walter Fauntroy,

Chairman of the Assassinations subcommittee investigating Dr. King's death, strongly urged the House Republican party leadership to release the results of its investigation. When the report is released, the Caucus further stated, "Representative Ashbrook (should) take the first opportunity possible to publicly set forth his personal and political attitudes and practices toward Black Americans, should the investigation be inconclusive."

"The implications of such a statement, for the King Family, for the Black people in Representative Ashbrook's Congressional district and political party, and generally for all decent-thinking people, are so serious that if it is shown the racist statement was made, then nothing less than a public apology made in the U.S. House of Representatives is acceptable," stated Congressman Mitchell.

Back in 1800 when John Adams was president, the population of the U.S. hit five million. Now it's over 215 million.

ENERGY Saving Ideas

Tips To Help You

Keeping Your Cool

More than 25 percent of the heat gain in most American homes is estimated to come through windows exposed to sunlight—and this can increase air conditioning bills and waste electricity.

Experts suggest that a good way to save energy and money is to shade your house to keep it cool. Stopping the sun on the outside before it gets through the windows is seven times more effective at cooling than blinds and curtains on the inside.

One way to accomplish this is with awnings and shade trees. But a new method has been developed, consisting of a specially woven fiber glass screening which blocks up to 75 percent of the sun's heat and light outside the window while allowing fresh air to come in and you to see out. The easily attached covering, called VIMCO Solar Shield, will save an estimated 40 cents per square foot of window for an air conditioner running 100 days, at an average cost of less than $10 per window. When the sun's heat and light are desired, the shield can be rolled up to the top of the window without removal.

excellent athlete. In his senior year he was first team all state in football, and played both varsity basketball and baseball. "We whipped Roosevelt soundly in both football and basketball during my senior year at East High," wrote Dr. Thomas in a biographical questionnaire used as a source for this story.

In the fall of 1957, Dr. Thomas entered Wesleyan University in Middletown, Connecticut, as an English major. He graduated in 1961 with honors and a bachelor of arts degree. He then continued his education at Yale Law School, earned a J.D. (Doctor of Law) degree and graduated in June, 1964.

Between 1964 and 1966 he was a General Attorney for the U.S. Department of Justice, Civil Rights Division. Dr. Thomas described this job writing, "While a Justice Department attorney I served in the Deep South in voting rights cases during the height of the civil rights movement. This put me in a unique position to bridge many gaps during the time when laws made it possible for the first time for Blacks to enjoy all the public accommodations in Alabama, Mississippi and Georgia."

Then in 1966 he became the Executive Director of the Iowa Civil Rights Commission, a position he held for two years. During the year before his appointment to Yale, between 1968 and 1969, he was Liaison Officer for the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission. Also he was trained as a cryptanalyst (a person who breaks down and deciphers coded messages) in the United States Army Security Agency Reserves from 1966-1972.

Currently, Dr. Thomas is a Trustee of the Law School Admission Council, a member (non-practicing) of the Iowa State Bar Association, and a member of the American Bar Association. He is married to Effie Reed Thomas and they have two children, Michael, who is eight years old, and Karin, who is four years old.

He enjoys tennis, golf, and salt water fishing. He is also interested in police work and is a member of the Yale University Police Board. Since leaving East in 1957, Dr. Thomas has traveled to 48 of the 50 states, including Alaska, but not Hawaii and he has visited Europe, Africa, and the Caribbean.

Because he was the Commencement speaker for the East High Class of 1975, Dr. Thomas had the opportunity to visit East High, his alma mata, at that time. Of this experience he states, "I will always remember fondly giving the Commencement address at East High School in 1975."

Understanding high blood pressure

Your doctor has just told you that you have high blood pressure (hypertension) and that you need treatment. It is important that you understand a few things about blood pressure in order to cooperate as full as possible with your physician.

Hypertension is no longer a disease to be feared, yet you cannot sit back and ignore it. Recent studies have shown that modern treatment is helpful and can prevent many of the complications that occurred in some patients prior to the availability of effective therapy.

What is high blood pressure? Normally, when a doctor records your blood pressure, he writes down two numbers, an upper one called the systolic pressure, and a lower one known as the diastolic pressure. The systolic pressure represents that blood pressure in the arteries when the heart is pumping; and the diastolic pressure is the pressure in the arteries at the time the heart is filling with blood for the next beat. Usually, in any person under the age of 40, a systolic pressure greater than 140-145 is elevated. When the diastolic pressure is consistently greater than 90-95, the diagnosis of hypertension is justified.

According to the Iowa Heart Association, it should be clear that modern treatment of hypertension may be complicated and may require a great deal of time and care on the part of both the doctor and the patient. It should be emphasized that not everyone with hypertension should be treated with drugs. Some people may do just as well on other therapy, such as diet.

If you would like to learn more about high blood pressure, its development and treatment, write for your free, single copy of "How You Can Help Your Doctor Treat Your High Blood Pressure." Send your request to: Iowa Heart Association, 3810 Ingersoll Avenue, Des Moines, Iowa 50312.

Social Security Information

It's very important that people tell social security how much cash they have in checking or savings accounts when they apply for supplemental security income (SSI) payments, according to William R. Durst, Social Security District Manager in Des Moines.

"Many people have been found ineligible for SSI checks because of money in their checking or savings accounts and have had to pay back the SSI payments they receive," Durst said.

The SSI program, administered by the Social Security Administration, makes monthly payments to people with little or no income and limited resources who are 65 or over or blind or disabled. To be eligible, people generally can have resources of $1,500 or less for one person and $2,250 for a couple, including cash in checking or savings accounts.

Failure to report resources in checking or savings accounts is one of the most common causes of SSI payment error, according to Durst.

"If we don't know about people's resources over the limit," he said, "we may incorrectly find them eligible for SSI checks. Later, when we learn of cash over the limit in their accounts, they have to pay back the SSI payments, which can be a problem."

"Social security wants to spare people that problem," Durst said. "But we can only do that if we know what resources they have, including cash in checking or savings accounts," he said.

Social Security can verify whether or not people who apply for SSI payments have cash in checking or savings accounts, according to Durst. "People who deliberately lie about their circumstances to get SSI payments can be prosecuted for fraud," he said.

People can get information about applying for SSI payments by calling or writing any social security office. "When applying," Durst said, "it's a good idea to bring checking and savings account books along—also as many as possible of the following: stocks and bonds, life insurance policies, automobile registration cards, last year's income tax return, W-2 forms, and evidence of all other income. These can also affect eligibility for SSI payments."

People getting SSI payments must promptly report changes in their income, resources, and living arrangements to social security.
