Frederick Douglass School Communicates Through Mime

Renee Bailey, member of the Douglass Mimes

A group of students at the Frederick Douglass Learning Center celebrated the last week of school in a dramatic interpretive fashion. The students were assisted by Ms. Lois Vincent — a Douglass teacher and an arts apprentice from the Iowa Arts Council.

The students met after school for five weeks and performed various skits on life at Frederick Douglass Learning Center and also they practiced doing poetic and dramatic readings, with the help of Ms. Vincent and Mrs. Mary Jane Graves.

The crowd that came to hear them perform — the students and staff — grew restless as they eagerly anticipated the program. The cast grew nervous and anxious to get it over as they hurried about making last minute preparations. Some were made up in white face, in hopes that they would achieve a professional appearance.

Rhonda Anderson stunned the audience in her poetic interpretation of Langston Hughes, "Ballad of the Landlord." The entire group performed Gwendolyn Brooks, "We Real Cool" poem, which relates the perils of the high school drop - out and change of lifestyles.

"We Lurk Late" — stay out late, "We Sing Sin" — cuss... "We Jazz June" — dance... "We think gin" — drink... and ultimately from leading a fast life... "We Die Soon!"

Ms. Vincent and Mrs.

Graves presented awards to student who participated in the Career Exploration Center (CEC) at the Urban Campus and presented five students with gifts whom had perfect attendance, at CEC.

The students also presented a "bubble gum" skit.

The students involved in the program were Rhonda Anderson, Virginia Allen, Mel Rogers, Sonja Fogeson, Rene'e Bailey, Cindy Boozell, Lonnie Moore.

VIEWS and REVIEWS by Allen Ashby

With the primary campaigns out of the way, it will be interesting to see what the opposing candidates come up with in the next five months. Fastening name tags on your opponent is one that sure to be widely used.

In the fifties it was communism. You didn't have to know what a Communist really was or what Communism really stood for. Just call your opponent a sympathizer or a fellow traveler before he or she called you one and you were in business.

A lot of people got elected to various offices by battling Communism, although they wouldn't have recognized it if it walked up and slugged them. And a lot of fine careers, not all of them political, were wrecked by that charge.

Then in the sixties when the blacks began to rise up it became the in thing to run against them. Most of George Wallace's campaign oratory was directed at blacks, although in a rather subtle manner, except when he was running for governor.

People got elected to mayorships and governorships by running against blacks. Crime in the streets came to mean black crime, or so people thought, forgetting that there never was and never will be a color tag on crime. That hasn't entirely run its course yet, but it is being pushed aside by the charge of liberalism.

Just call your opponent liberal. Now I would bet that a big majority of folks don't know what a liberal is, but the name makes them think of riots in the streets and long haired hippies. It is so bad now that elected officials who want to give everybody a square deal find themselves defending themselves against the charge of liberalism.

Don't come out against abortion, recognizing that it should be a personal thing, and you are a liberal. Stand for the right of a defendant to a fair trial or for the right of people to have a fair shot at a job or such, and you are too liberal.

So now that the candidates have been decided on, we shall see who tries hardest to get out from under the liberal tag, or who claims to be the most conservative.

Really, there should not be such tags put on people. A candidate should be able to express his opinions and stands without being blanketed with either name.

And in the middle of all of this we have our high unemployment among young black teen agers, who are growing up without ever having even asked for a job, and people will say that such unemployment is necessary to combat inflation.

If you want to sink yourself politically, come out for trying to find some way to put these young people to work. "No more tax dollars for welfare." makes a good rallying cry, but putting people to work is not welfare, or is it being too liberal?

Speakin' Out

DEHAVAN: A BLACK PERSPECTIVE

Let me say at the onset of this article that I emphatically support Union Local 552 in their struggle to achieve justice. I emphatically support the concept of collective bargaining which grew out of a very militant struggle (witness F.I.S.T.) something which Black people are very familiar with.

I also emphatically support the right of Black people to be equally represented in the labor force, something which even the most conservative of statistics proves is not happening.

Now to the point. I have approached several Black workers at Delevan, and told them I support the strikers. What shocked me is that every Black person I have approached at Delevan also supports the strikers. I was told "Black people understand very clearly that the worker's demands are just."

I then asked them why did they continue to cross the picket lines and was told "It's all about survival" I also understand this line of reasoning.

What must be made clear is the fact that the Black workers are in sympathy with the strikers and if the strikers who are all white (to the best of my knowledge) had any kind of political awareness that they would support Black people in their quest for social, political, and economic equality.

The very fact that there are no Blacks in Local 552 to join the pickets clearly shows the racism of Delevan and the Union. Black people crossing the line at Delevan already sympathetic with the strikers, might join in total support if only Blacks had been adequately represented in the first place.

I am asking the strikers at Delevan to be a little more understanding of Blacks that cross the picket line. In the eyes of the strikers they might still be "scabs" but the struggle of Blacks to get jobs is just as right as the right of union workers to keep their jobs.

I for one, do not believe the strikers at Delevan have gotten militant enough. I was talking to Dan Rowen about the police protecting the scabs and he stated that the police were not the opposition. I beg to differ; "Your either part of the solution, or your part of the problem" there's no half way point.

This raises another question if the striker were to become more aggressive how would this affect the Black "scabs". There have already been a couple of "racial incidents" and the person that drove the car through the crowd was Black.

I have been told that he didn't give a damn about the strikers. If this is true then it must be understood that his feelings and actions were inconsistent with the other Blacks at Delevan. I would certainly hope that the white strikers at Delevan would be a little more understanding of the Black situation and while not letting them cross the picket line, also not acting in a racist manner toward them and especially not take any physical actions toward the Black women, for if a choice were forced upon me I would hate to go with my race.

In the final analysis we are talking about the powerful versus the powerless. Both the strikers and the Blacks are representative of the powerless. In the eyes of justice there is no distinction between those fighting to keep jobs and those fighting to get jobs.

Benjamin L. Hooks Executive Director, NAACP NEW DAY BEGUN

Reliving the Sweet Case

Since its founding just after the turn of the century, the NAACP has maintained as one of its principal concerns the question of open housing for minorities. This epoch-long campaign resulted in the enactment of the 1968 Open Housing Act. This law finally assured the Federal Government's official protection against racial and other forms of discrimination in housing.

Despite historical gains in expanding housing opportunities for minorities, Charles Smith, Jr., a Mobile, Alabama black man today faces a charge of murder because he was forced to defend himself against attackers who sought to drive him and his family out of their newly purchased home in a white neighborhood.

The case is a haunting reminder of the Ossian H. Sweet tragedy of 1925. Upon moving into his new house in a Detroit suburb, Dr. Sweet and his family found themselves under attack by a white mob who sought to drive them out of the neighborhood. In defense, shots were fired from the Sweet house killing one member of the mob. Consequently, Dr. Sweet, his wife, two brothers and seven other persons were charged with first degree murder.

The NAACP retained Clarence Darrow, one of the most celebrated trial lawyers in American history, to defend Dr. Sweet. Two years later, a Michigan judge dismissed all the charges.

In the Smith case, the family — his wife Beatrice, and children, twins Ruthie Derschelle and Reuben Dynelle, 13, Robbie Deneitia, 11, and Rakema Dionne, 7, — moved into his home at 275 South Faure Drive. The neighborhood was suspected of being a Ku Klux Klan stronghold.

Soon, a brick was thrown through a window. This was followed by two more brick-throwing incidents. Next, a fire bomb was thrown into their backyard. Mr. Smith doused the flame with a garden hose and called the police. As had happened earlier, the police did nothing. This time, though, the police, accompanied by the Fire Marshall and a Federal Bureau of Investigation agent, returned the following day to look around.

But, instead of inspecting the fire bomb are, the FBI agent gave the Smith's house a thorough search. The investigators also denied that the Klan was involved because, one maintained, the institutional purveyors of racial violence took pride in their work

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Mr. Allen Ashby
Editor Iowa Bystander

While in Des Moines for the relays this spring, I read your article of April 13th and certainly enjoyed it. You mentioned about how tough it was during the 30's around the old Crocker "Y". How, we had to play basketball in the cold weather, the equipment we didn't have, but still, we competed.

We may not have had the facilities that the kids have today, but we had an "Allen Ashby" and a "Quenten Mease", two guys that gave almost all of their time to help the kids of that depression ridden era.

Mease, the organizer and administrator and you, with words of encouragement, advice on conditioning, competition, stance, poise, and guts to "hang in there" when the going was tough. You were a "one man coaching clinic", and a great help to me and so many others. It's about 40 years late, but THANKS Allen.

Sincerely yours,

Finally, two white teen-agers sought to accost and attack two of Mr. Smith's children and their teen-age friends as they were driving to a local store on Labor Day. Sensing trouble, the youths sped back home. There a fight broke out between Mr. Smith's children and two white attackers.

Mr. Smith, who had a permit to carry a pistol, fatally shot one of the men, 20-year-old Daniel Neal, just as he allegedly was swinging a machete at him. The police, whom the Smith family had called during the fight, now arrived and arrested the father on first degree murder charges.

The NAACP, however, maintains that the case was one of conspiracy between the two white men and, possibly, a larger segment of the community, to deny the Smith's their constitutional and legal rights to purchase and enjoy their home.

Strange Fruit

Imani James Harris is a young black man on death row in Atamore prison, Alabama. His death sentence date was set aside by the Alabama Supreme Court. That leaves Imani James Harris still on death row without an order for retrial of the case. What kind of justice is that?

News came this past weekend that William Wright II, the second of the Wilmington 10, has been released on parole. In January, 1978 Wright's sentence was reduced from 20-24 years to 13-17 years. Gov. Hunt commuted the total number of years to be served by the Wilmington 10 from 282 years to 226. The first of the ten to be paroled was a white woman in 1977.

In case you may have forgotten what this case was about - the issue was activity in school desegregation in Wilmington, N.C. White nightriders brought terror into the Black community without a single arrest made.

Did you know the prosecuting attorney became deathly ill when he saw ten Blacks and two whites in the jury box. When the prosecutor's health improved the new jury drawn was more acceptable - ten whites, and two Blacks. The Wilmington 10 went to prison because the U.S. Supreme Court refused to hear the appeal. So often justice for Blacks proves to be "a strange and bitter fruit".

This unequal justice reaches other minorities and the poor, generally, for reasons demonstrated during the Nixon - Ford administration and Pres. Carter's present pre-occupation with human rights abroad. On the international scene there seems to be some equally "strange fruit" in store for John and Jane Doe, U.S.A.

Last week it was Brzezinski spreading alarm. This week President Carter is talking loud and tough to the Russians. Keep both eyes on Africa, folks. It's American planes carrying Moroccans, French Legionnaires, and any who fight for a price in Africa. The price will, of course, be paid by American taxpayers without regard to race, color, creed, national origin or sex.

The question is how long we Americans will take to realize our taxes are being used to support Black African dictators as well as white.

Africa has been the source of more than big game for two or three centuries. The right of Africans to the wealth of their continent and their right to trade as equals in world markets are propositions before us. If the African people are not concerned about Cubans or Russians, why should black Americans be "all shook up" about Cubans or Russians in Africa.

Brush your teeth, take your blood pressure medicine regularly and live long enough to join in the celebration of African freedom across their great continent.

Marks of a Christian--Humility

The Marks of a Christian - Humility - Galatians 6:7
Luke 14:7-11

Today men can talk hours about themselves and they are always the hero of their own stories. They never tell the tales about the times in which they were the "goat". A ball player talks about his home runs and the tremendous catches that he made, but never about his errors and his strike outs. When some men give a little money to a charitable cause, this gift is often brought up in their conversation.

When he carries food to a poor family he will soon tell about it. I have often visited men who talked for a long time about what they had done in the church and for the Lord, but they say nothing about what the Lord had done for them. Humility is needed everywhere, but most of all in our service for Christ. Too many Christian workers want the high places. If you don't permit them to be the whole show, they become peeved and quit.

The great apostles boasted only about one thing. His glory was in the cross of Christ. He did not talk about what he had done for Jesus, but always he had talked about what the Saviour had done for him.

Jesus was the central figure in heaven, but He humbled Himself and took upon Himself the form of a servant. On the night before He died, He was not thinking of Himself but of others. He took a towel, girded Himself, and washed the feet of His disciples. This was example of pure humility. Let us learn to stoop. Let us not be exalted in our own opinion, but let us put Christ and others first.

"Look, Therefore, To This Day

By

Linda Walker-Webster

Each year during this season, the educational institutions of the world shower forth upon the earth, a fresh new layer of "hopeful" graduates.

Tired and anxious students as well as proud and relieved parents look to this time as a consummation of many long hard years of WORK! For the average black graduate, sacrifices became an integral part of the struggle for completion. And for the parents, there is now a sigh of relief, not only in terms of finances, but sigh of thanks that all parties involved hurdled those thousands of puddles of frustration that kept forming along the way.

And, I might add that with each black man and woman emerging from those learning institutions, it is indeed an milestone for all of us. For those whose blood, sweat and tears paved the way along, long ago, and for those of not so long ago. The blood, sweat and tears diminishes with each milestone, but those that are yet to come, will still, and perhaps rightfully should, pay someone some dues.

Whether or not we partake in the formalities of "Pomp and Circumstance", which always accompanies the ceremonies of graduation, ... it is still indeed Payday! But, ... we can dwell in Utopia only momentarily, then we must move on!

Whether it has been a high school diploma, or a degree of higher education that we have just attained, the process has not ended! It has only begun! For the knowledge that we have gained will rapidly begin to atrophy unless it is applied and passed on.

During these many years of learning, our minds served as mere warehouses to store knowledge that someday we would need. We stored the teachings of those whom the bureaucracy deemed "worthy" to teach us. Some of us, however, unknowingly became sponges, absorbing and believing any thing anyone tried to teach us.

But now, we enter that warehouse to retrieve those things necessary for worldly survival, life and living, employment, etc. We must choose wisely from among MANY things. We must choose expediently, but not rigidly. We must choose with firmness, yet with pliance and flexibility. We must choose with compassion, but not with flaccidity. There are many choices from which we may select. And there are many choices that we must select. Hanging in limbo is fine for a short while, if "hanging" is your thing. But there are so many folks out there "hanging", ... waiting for some kind of sign or direction, that "hanging" often transposes itself into being "hung"!

There are many forks in the road. Many voices that are preaching. Many hands that are reaching. And there are questions of, "which voice do I listen to, and which hand do I take? If any!

Some of us do not always possess the capability of choosing our own direction. Thus, a little aid has often sent us on our way. Sometimes that aid has been right, and, sometimes quite wrong. Whatever happened to listening to the sound voice of "common sense", which seemingly is not audible to all ears.

The competition is often rough. The survival is often tough. Society has provided plenty of margin for failure. But God has provided plenty of room for success. Faith is the key. Confidence is the password. Prayer is the answer.

Life's mountainous decisions and choices become mere ant hills when we KEEP Him in our life. He is always standing by whenever we need Him. Yet such is often the case, that we wait until a crisis threatens us before we find it Necessary to call on Him? He should serve as an ever present example in our daily lives and living.

Unfortunately there are many graduates who mistake their acquired knowledge for superiority and power. But mistaken they are! For the knowledge that we obtain, like food, must be digested into each of us individually. Thus becoming a part of our own knowledge.

Book learning is definitely not wisdom. And possessing knowledge is not necessarily the key to life's kingdom. We can utilize our education to the fullest by giving forth that which we have learned, to others. Our minds should be like fountains and not like reservoirs. A reservoir merely retains its water, and it eventually becomes stagnant. A fountain sends its water, showering, and its water is used again and again.

"The true wealth of a nation lies not in its gold or silver but in its learning, wisdom, and in the uprightness of its sons".

NEW FRIENDSHIP CHURCH OF GOD IN CHRIST

The New Friendship COGIC brings you greetings in the name of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ. On last Sunday morning and night the Lord came in and blessed our souls. Pastor Daye's sermon was entitled "Who Can Receive the Holy Ghost?" He truly left no stones unturned.

ALLEN ASHBY with a LOOK ON SPORTS

There should be at least one guy out of the heavyweight fight picture come this weekend. Ken Norton puts his half of the title on the line against Larry Holmes. It seems that the fighters are divided into two groups. In the first group and all under thirty are Holmes, Shaver, Jimmy Roberts and one or two more that we can't come up with just now, but they are there, including the heavy puncher from South Africa who is supposed to be able to punch out elephants.

The next bunch would have Norton, Frazier and Ali. They are all past their prime, and they seem to hang in there on experience, although it didn't make the difference with Ali against Spinks, who surely belongs in the young group. But those young fellows are going to keep pushing each other around until one of them takes out the last of the old timers.

Holmes looked as if he could have a good chance to get by Norton, if the way he fought against Ernie Shaver is any criterion. He jabbed and moved well, and knew his way around the ring.

It is the consensus of opinion that Jones is the best boxer of the bunch, and he demonstrated that he can punch if he wants to. So nobody should sell him short.

If, as several boxing experts agree, Leon Spinks is ready to be plucked by the first one who comes along, who would you think it would be? He has confidence that he can handle Ali again, and if the great one doesn't really train, just might.

Unless the young man is a better boxer than he was his last time out, he stands a pretty good chance to stop one of those block buster wallops from Shaver, Frazier or Foreman and if he should, it could be Good Night Irene.

But I have a feeling that Spinks' handlers are teaching him new tricks while he is waiting for September. I would guess that we will see Spinks come into the ring against Ali with a whole new bag of tricks. Because if he fights as he did in their last battle, and the Mouth is ready, the title will change hands again, and what will the WBA do then?

The best crowd pleaser in professional boxing now is Sugar Ray Leonard. His handlers are carefully picking his spots for him, but even so the fellow gives them a good show every time he gets into the ring. He could make his way to the top, but if he never does, he will make dough because people will pay to see him as long as he puts on the show that he does.

We watched him last week and he had lots of the moves of Muhammad Ali in his hey-day. Once in the middle of a furious exchange Leonard fainted his man into fits, and didn't throw a punch. Now where do you suppose he got that?

Arthur Ash is playing his way back into shape again. As it stands now, he will pressed to get to the quarter finals in the big meets, but he should do a bit better come the U.S. Open Meet. He might make it to the round of eight at Wimbeldon. At thirty-five he can't hope to be as tough as he was a few years ago, but he should make it to the top twenty.

I heard about this young black player in France, but I could never get his name straight, and I can't now. But people who have seen him say he is destined to rate at or near the top before long.

If there are any really promising young black players in this country, they are playing in the ATA, and they don't get the ink they need to rate high there. At one time the winner of the ATA meet got to play in some USTA meets.

But now the two organizations are recognizing each other so that if you play in one you can play in the other, but you must have played in the required number of meets sanctioned by each body to get a ranking in either body. That is, you must have played in the number of meets specified by the ATA to get an ATA ranking. And you must have played in the USTA meets to get their ranking.

You can't get rated by one organization by playing in the other.

Got off into tennis because I know it is time we got our Hilltop show on the road, and we must git to gittin'.

Acorn Supports Delavan Strikers

The Iowa Association of Community Organizations for Reform Now (ACORN) Executive Board voted last week to support UAW Local 552 in their efforts to settle the Delevan strike. ACORN supports the local's effort to protect employees from company favoritism, and to respect seniority rights.

"Our Capitol area businessmen and politicians are always clamoring about the need for more downtown development to enhance the area's reputation. Why aren't they worried about what this union breaking is doing to this area's reputation?", stated Eula Grove, Chairperson of the Capitol Area Action Group.

The major problem that ACORN attacks is that low and moderate income people do not have an effective voice in the decisions that affect their lives. This lack of powerlessness extends not only to City Hall, the Banks, and Utility Companies, but all too often to the workplace as well. ACORN feels our country's greatest underutilized resource is its people.

Delevan's action from the first was to destroy the rights of the Delevan workers, many of whom have worked 20 years for the company. ACORN urges the Delevan Manufacturing Co. to immediately take back all the strikers who wish to return, and to work with the union to peacefully settle all differences.

Hunger Hike 1978

Again this year, our churches will have an opportunity to really do something about hunger — both local and world wide through the Annual Des Moines Area HUNGER HIKE to be held Sunday, September 17. Persons of all ages will dramatize their concern by hiking ten miles and challenging many others to pledge generously for each mile hiked. With many groups using the "wakathon" method (the Hunger Hike was perhaps the first) it is now primarily up to our churches if we are to be effective in this local effort to raise over $17,000 to help the hungry.

Why don't you begin planning now for a great effort in September!

Nation's Press React To Washington Post on Wilkins

In what later turned out to be an erroneous report, the nation's major newspapers and broadcast facilities last week accused retired NAACP Executive Director, Roy Wilkins, of working with the late FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover in an attempt to discredit the late Dr. Martin Luther King. The story, originally appearing in The Washington Post, noted that an FBI memo actually referred to Wilkins, who met with FBI Assistant Director Cartha DeLoach on November 27, 1964 — and promised to "tell King that he can't win a battle with the FBI and that the best thing for him to do is to retire from public life."

In fact, however, according to George Lardner, Jr., the Washington Post reporter who wrote the story, his "informed sources" specifically noted that Mr. Wilkins was not the "national Negro leader" J. Edgar Hoover and his assistant felt they could use to "remove King from the national picture." Further, said Lardner, the FBI description of an ambitious, "new and much younger" Black leader did fit the description of Roy Wilkins, who at the time (1964) was 63 years old.

Benjamin L. Hooks, former Federal Communications

Commissioner and the man who succeeded Mr. Wilkins, said it was "unfair for anyone to have to defend their reputation against a ten-year-old statement drafted from notes." He added, "what we may need is an amendment to the Freedom of Information Act to guard us all from the tyranny of an individual's recollection."

Racial segregation in the Quad-Cities

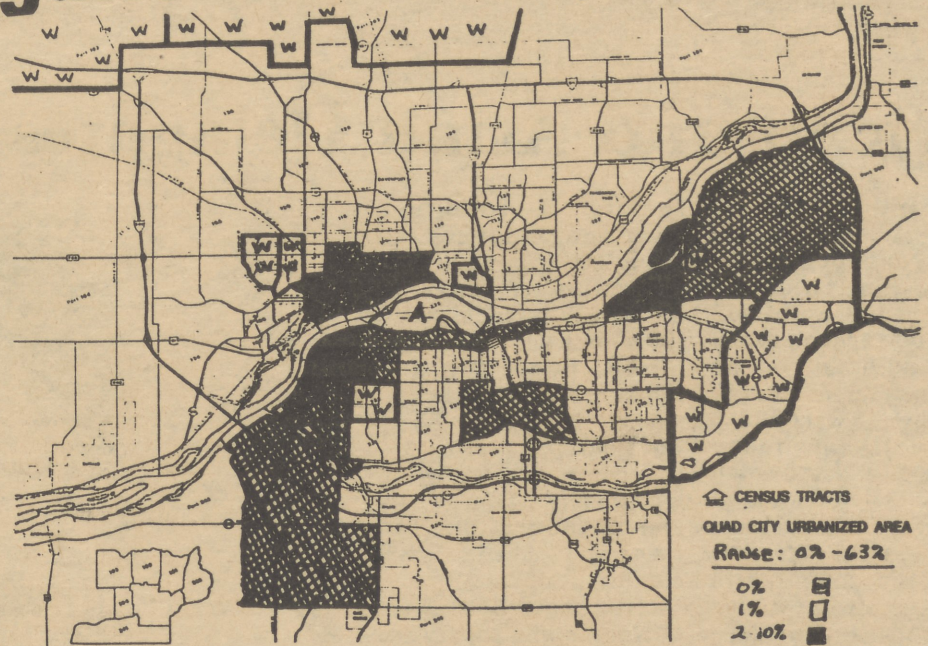

Dr. Michael Halstead teaches sociology at St. Ambrose College in Davenport. Previously, he did studies of racial segregation in New Orleans, Louisiana, and taught at the State University of New York, Fredonia.

Q. There is very little written or discussed on the subject of racial discrimination and other urban ills on the local level. Where do we stand in the 1970's in the Quad Cities?

A. Well, the 1970 census data show a severe concentration of blacks in a handful of census tracts -- in particular, on Rock Island's west end, in Davenport's central area, and in parts of East Moline. Frankly, as an outsider used to living in larger metropolitan areas, I was surprised to find the degree of segregation you have here. For example, in central Davenport, the area from Warren to Main Street and Fifth north to Fifteenth Street is almost 40% black, and in West Rock Island, there are concentrations from 50% to 63%. Those are high. Chicanos are relatively more dispersed, but they too live in disproportionate numbers in areas of Moline and East Moline-Silvis. The general picture one gets when looking at the major indicators of poverty and blight--i.e., low incomes, unemployment, lack of schooling, and so forth-- is that the concentration of social ills in the Quad-Cities is striking. But the most important thing to notice is the great difference between these "inner-city" tracts and the large number of tracts which have a scarcely tabulable percent of minority persons, have very high incomes and the like.

Q. You mean, for example, north and east Davenport, Bettendorf, and the southern parts of Moline and Rock Island?

A. Precisely. It is difficult to exaggerate the social differences between these areas and the inner city areas. For example, that of occupation: in one inner-city Davenport tract, there is a total of 39 high white collar persons (i.e. doctors, businessmen, lawyers) living there. By contrast, in one of Davenport's north-side tracts, there live almost 1,000 high white collar people. Another example: one inner-city tract had almost 30% of its families below the poverty line in 1970, while the east Davenport (McClellan Heights) area had one out of 200. This kind of social-economic gap constitutes the central reality of our cities today, and the Quad-Cities are hardly exempt! My impression, after inspecting these neighborhoods and looking at the relevant data, is that the degree of segregation and blight has in many cases worsened rather than improved since 1970.

Quad-Cities: Black Population

Q. What is the solution? Massive government programs, the obvious thing, have been in a shadow since the 1960's. People have criticized "throwing money at problems".

A. As Julian Bond once put it, "I don't know what else you could throw at them." The fact is that sooner or later we're going to have to undertake a huge infusion of resources, a centralized governmental commitment to save the cities. The problem has not been the channelling of money or resources to the inner-city. The ineffectiveness of the War on Poverty programs and other efforts was due to the lack of coordination and overlap, the lack of controls that characterized these programs, and still do. The problem lies mainly, though, in lack of a sustained commitment and funding. Too, we use a lot of money dealing with symptoms rather than causes. Beefing up police forces is a classic case. In education, to take another example, money is spent to bus schoolchildren, where the real problem has to do with housing segregation, income and the poor level of services in the inner-city. The real shortcoming of the system, in short, is not that of "throwing money at problems". It is in not getting the money where it needs to go. There is a lack of political will to change what really needs changing. So, our urban services are shotgunned. The poor have to travel to four or five different agencies, get four or five band-aids for what are really deeper problems. We're winging it from year to year, and structurally nothing happens.

Q: Any prognosis?

A: Honestly, I suspect a return of the civil disorders of the mid-'60's. Despite the negative idea people have of the programs of the '60's, many blacks and other minority people did make small gains. Many of those gains have been wiped out in the '70's, and if the economy continues to get worse -- and there are plenty of reasons to believe it will -- there are going to be plenty of frustrated and angry people. This could only add up to a bad scene, as in the 1960's or in the black-out looting in New York a year or so ago.

Q: What about the future of these problems in the Quad-Cities specifically?

A: Of course I don't know the background that well, but I have the feeling cities like Davenport, Rock Island and Moline could go either way. I mean, they're big enough to have big-city problems, as our discussion here indicates; and yet they're small enough to make things more easily manageable or not in the "out-of-control" category. There are some bad signs, for sure. Middle-class flight from the older parts of the cities has gone far. I notice recurring talk of freeways for Davenport, which is part-and-parcel of this flight. Freeways essentially serve middle-class people, and the development on the fringes. Also, the social-economic imbalances I mentioned are a living reality for thousands of people right here in Davenport. On the other hand, a lot of these problems could be worked on successfully, given the size of the area and the relatively limited nature of the urban decay. We need to be doing so much more than we are, though. This area is growing, and with each year we stand the chance of going further down the tube.

African and Asian Delagates in Israel Agree On Need

By Walter Ruby

HAIFA, ISRAEL - "The goal of ending poverty, ignorance, and hunger in the world will never be accomplished by philanthropy or by governments. It is people, working voluntarily in many walks of life, that are the key."

This was the message former Prime Minister Golda Meir imparted to delegates from Africa and Asia to the International Seminar on Volunteer Action in the Development of Society, held here recently.

The ten-day conference brought together experts from 32 countries, including Ghana, Sierra Leone, Nepal and India, to discuss ways of mobilizing volunteers and increasing the scope and impact of voluntary action.

Mrs. Meir said that Israel's special tradition of voluntarism stems from the fact that "our people had to volunteer to come to this country, which was once sand, rocks, and full of malaria. Volunteers built this country."

The conference attracted participants from developed and developing countries who were involved in many different facets of voluntarism, but all agreed with Jamaica's Ms. Gloria Scott that "voluntary action is needed to build up the world's human capability."

Ebenezer Serash Aidoo of Ghana, who had organized literacy camps and formed a volunteer organization for retarded children, says, "There is no question that voluntarism will be an extremely important force for stimulating development throughout the Third World."

Jere Thomas of Sierra Leone organizes students and young people in work camps during holidays and vacations. "In just six weeks, we can build a community center or hospital. The potential for this kind of voluntary action is almost limitless."

Professor Haresh Jegtiani of India has formed a volunteer watchdog agency to eradicate corruption in public life. "Voluntarism is a new tradition in India, but one that offers much hope for the future. By showing the poor people that corruption can be overcome, we are helping them to understand that they can control their own communities".

Mrs. Angur Baba Joshi of Nepal, who supervises volunteers in child welfare, says, "In the developed countries, voluntarism is a desirable thing. But in a poverty-stricken country like Nepal, it is a vital necessity. An enormous amount must be done simply to meet the most basic needs of our children. As the resources of government are very limited, volunteers must play a large role."

The delegates agreed that voluntarism is as important for the volunteer himself as it is for those he is helping. Said Mrs. Joshi of Nepal, "I get an immense sense of self-satisfaction from this work. If you can wipe away just two tears of misery from a suffering child, you feel you have accomplished a great deal."

Golda Meir seemed to sum up the feelings of the participants when she said, "Don't believe anyone who tells you he is making a personal sacrifice by working as a volunteer. As he gives of himself, he gains many things as well."

"Can those of us who are better off ignore the fact that a majority of the world is illiterate and hungry? Can we live happily in a world divided between haves and have nots? The volunteer needs to do this work not only to help others, but for his own peace of mind and soul."

GOLDA, SIERRA LEONE DELEGATE AGREE ON BENEFITS OF VOLUNTEERISM: Mr. Jere Thomas, administrator of Sierra Leone's Volunteer Work Camps Association, is greeted by former Israeli Prime Minister Golda Meir at an international seminar on volunteerism held recently in Haifa, Israel. Experts from Africa, Asia and developing countries from all over the globe took part in the meeting.

Homes of Oakridge Special Playground Equipment Request

Where will 530 children living in the Homes of Oakridge project play when school is out? How can lively youngsters be "contained" in the area — keeping them off the streets, away from multi-windowed apartment buildings, far from nearby professionals' office buildings? The project manager and staff and the Oakridge Boards of Directors plan to convert a portion of open area into a colorful, safe, attractive play space through purchase of planned playground equipment. Then, providing limited supervision of play within the area.

Selected are seven pieces of rugged, fun-for-all equipment at a total cost of $6,000: zoom-around spiral Tornado Slide, a Frontier Outpost, Geodesic Climber with free-fall design, Tot Swings, Whirl, swing bench, and some regular benches for parents. The inclusive area will be partially fenced at an additional cost.

Homes of Oakridge, a Des Moines Area Religious Council sponsored project, is seeking contributions to meet this need. Are there individual, organization or church group funds which may be used to aid the establishment of the playground? If so, contact Sister Margaret Toomey at Homes of Oakridge (244-7702) or Harold Varce (274-4018).

(Price of some of the single pieces: Tot Swing, $450.00; Whirl, $550.00; Swings, $446.00; Climber, $684.00; Outpost, $1154.) These would be great projects for mens, womens, youth groups, or adult church school classes.

Also needed for indoor activities year round are little chairs for children and regular sized stacking chairs. These will be used in the recreation area where arts and crafts are taught, movies are seen, games are played, etc., by Oakridge residents of all ages.
