BIM Hosts Successful Basketball Classic

by K. G. McElroy

A unique endeavor was successfully undertaken at Cooper Park (adjacent to St. Paul Church), on Saturday, June 30 and Sunday July 1. The first BIM Summer Basketball Classic was held.

Participants were outstanding high school graduating seniors representing the following areas: All-Iowa, Chicago, Des Moines and Detroit.

Des Moines and Detroit emerged as the winners in Saturday's games and successfully completed their bid for Sunday's Championship game. Dowling's Bob Hansen, North's Ricky Galbreath and Lincoln's Rich Bates, teamed their talents with Iowa City Regina's Mark Gannon to win the tournament by a close 113 to 101.

Detroit's team played a very competitive game and displayed a lot of talent as well as perseverance. In the final 3 minutes of the game, all but 4 Detroit players had fouled out.

In the consolation game, Chicago defeated All-Iowa by a score of 93 to 78. Calvin Pierce stole the show with his skillful and frequent slam dunks. He received a lot of assistance from lead scorers Kenny Everett and Mike Glover.

The judges for the tournament were Tech Basketball Coach, Mel Green; BIM Board Member and past

Chairperson, Nancy Freeland; and former Drake basketball star, Ron Caldwell. They chose the following players for the All-Tournament Team:

Kenny Everett - Chicago
Thomas White - Detroit
Bob Hansen - Des Moines
Mark Gannon - Des Moines

Rich Bates - Des Moines

Leading tournament scorer, Lincoln's Rich Bates, also claimed the MVP title and trophy with a 30 point per game average in both Saturday and Sunday's games.

All the players did an outstanding job in the competition as well as in displaying excellent sportsmanship and BIM would like to thank them all for participating. The two-day event was well attended as crowds filled the park in one of the first rain-free weekends since winter.

The forming of a basketball classic has been a new endeavor for all concerned. Completely free of charge, this event is the first of its kind in Des Moines. It is BIM's hope that through the tournament, they can incorporate all aspects of their goals by bringing together the community and by highlighting some of the best basketball players in the Midwest.

BIM would like to thank all the individuals who gave their time, energy and support in making this first BIM Basketball Classic an all-star success.

Board Nomination Papers

Nominating petitions for persons planning to run in the Des Moines School Board election in September now are available at the office of Peter J. Cunningham, school board secretary, at 1800 Grand Avenue.

Candidates must secure the signature of at least 10 voters on the petitions and file them with Cunningham no later than 5 p.m., August 2.

The election September 11 will be to fill two seats on the board. The terms of Mrs. Jack Spevak and Mrs. Karen Williams expire this year. Mrs. Spevak has announced that she will not seek reelection after serving on the board for 14 years.

Affirmative Action—What Now, After Weber?

Now that the euphoria of the victory in Weber v. Kaiser Aluminum has died down, it is time to consider soberly our credits and debits in the ongoing struggle for affirmative action.

First, the good news: Weber lost. A collective bargaining agreement between an employer and union calling for affirmative action was upheld by the Supreme Court. Hence, the message to Black workers is clear: have affirmative action negotiated directly into the contract. Further, the Supreme Court has upheld the use of quotas.

Though maligned by the press and pundits, the fact remains that quotas are constitutional, have been held to be so by the overwhelming majority of Federal Circuit Courts of Appeal, and have been validated by the Supreme Court. In addition, the Supreme Court has interpreted Title VII of the Civil Rights Act in such a way that it can continue to benefit the original beneficiaries: Blacks.

Along with this, as Justice Blackmun's concurrence implicitly notes, societal discrimination as a basis for affirmative action — and not just discrimination perpetuated by an individual company — can be a valid basis for affirmative action. These are all victories; they cannot be sniffed at; they were all won thanks to the tremendous organizing efforts of labor and civil rights' groups.

Now for news that is not so good: The constitutional basis for affirmative action is not mentioned. Weber was decided on the basis of interpretation of a statute — Title VII. Thus, moves by the right wing in Congress to amend the statute can be expected.

In addition, the Supreme Court has yet to state clearly that Blacks have a constitutional right to affirmative action. An historical reading of both the 13th and 14th Amendments to the U.S. Constitution brings us to no other conclusion. A Supreme Court opinion stating this clearly would go a long way toward reversing the myth of "reverse discrimination."

Furthermore, Executive Order 11246, a further legal basis validating affirmative action is explicitly omitted from discussion. This is significant. In Weber, the Supreme Court interprets Title VII as permitting but not requiring affirmative action; thus, in a sense, it is stronger.

Note also that Uniroyal, the tire giant, is challenging the Executive Order right now in Court. The Executive Order requires that all companies having 50 or more employees that do more than $50,000 a year in Government business develop an affirmative action plan. That is 175,000 companies with 41 million workers.

If Uniroyal wins, it can fairly be said that the loss will be greater than if Weber had won. Once again, we are reminded that freedom is a constant struggle, that we must be eternally vigilant, that like taking a bath, freedom has to be won time and time again.

The Uniroyal challenge is matched in significance by the case to be argued before the Supreme Court this fall, Fullilove v. Kreps. This is a challenge to the Public Works Act that called for 10% of government contracts to go to minority business. A loss in Fullilove will send the already tottering Black economy spinning.

Weber does not provide a definitive answer as to how Fullilove will be decided, though it should go a long way toward providing insight. Weber does not speak, as well, to the validity of recently proclaimed Equal Employment Opportunity Commission Guidelines on Affirmative Action

Des Moines NAACP Finds A Home

The Des Moines branch NAACP has finally found a home. After searching for several months, the branch will open an office in space located in Willkie House Community Center — 900-17th Street.

Vincent C. Chapman, president, commented that the officers and board members are looking forward to serving the community from their new quarters by the end of August.

Chapman, fresh from convention, and ecstatic about winning a place on the December ballot for a seat on the National Board of Directors, said that the office is being equipped and furnished through grants from Xerox Corporation and a local business man.

Chapman said, he hopes that the community will continue to support the NAACP. The office will be staffed with volunteers until paid staff can be secured.

IEWS and REVIEWS

What do I think of the proposition to make North High and Tech one?

Well, just the thought of closing North makes anyone who is past fifty think of a lot of years. I think there always were more black people at North than there were at East, and there just weren't too many at old West.

We at East used to think of East as the school where blacks had a good chance to do whatever they could do, but North had the biggest number of athletes. At East we had people on the speaking teams and on the school paper staff, but we never had more than a couple of fellows on the football team until the forties.

North was the first to have a real integrated football team. Old timers never get tired of telling about the team they call the greatest North team of them all. That team had five black players, four Irish boys, one Jewish player and one Italian. And then after the years of this great team, North continued to have more than just a couple of black athletes.

I recall the time that the late Harry Bell was coaching North and they were to play a game at Mason City. The people who ran the hotel and restaurant objected to the black players. Bell didn't say much but took the whole team down to the railroad station to wait for the next train back to Des Moines.

If the teams traveled by buses as most of them do now, the team would have been halfway home before the important folks in Mason City heard about it. Well, they went to the station and made sure that every North player got equal treatment.

I don't know how the players got along, but I knew a few of the kids as personal friends and I never heard that there was any cleavage among the players. Bell insisted that everybody get along and they did.

Among the three high schools, North, West and East, East was considered to be the best school for blacks, but there were times when I wondered. Since I never knew much about the North pupils academically, I had to conclude that they got their best breaks at East, but there were always so many graduates from North.

In these days, I don't know too much about what goes on in the school or classrooms, but when I was in school, we used to talk about the spirit of equality at East, but at North it was acted out without much talk. There must have been a few differences between kids as there had to be in all schools, but in those early days it seemed to me that the kids at North got along so much better than those at the other schools. Don't know how much there was at West, but most of the black kids there were brains, while we had a few at East and a few at North.

If that school is closed or mixed with Tech, there will go a lot of fine history down the drain. But maybe that is a product of the times, but you couldn't tell any North grad who is past fifty that.

Thoughts and Comments

By James B. Morris III

Perhaps the most important stake the U.S. has in continuing the sanctions against Zimbabwe - Rhodesia lies in its need for crude oil from the "Front-line" Black nations like Nigeria. With the severe limitations, in terms of price and supply, placed upon the world's reserves of crude oil by the incessant thirst of the industrial nations of the Western hemisphere for it, the U.S. cannot afford to be shut out or limited in purchasing the vital substance by anyone.

The Carter Administration, in developing its African policy in general and that of Zimbabwe - Rhodesia in particular, has been acutely concerned about the attitude of Nigeria, which currently is the second largest supplier of oil imported by the U.S. (following the restrictions placed by the new Islamic government in Iran upon the export of its crude oil resources). Although Nigeria has never specifically threatened the U.S. with an oil embargo, it has warned "foreign governments" that it would make an "appropriate response" to the lifting of sanctions.

Great Britain, who now does more business annually with Nigeria than it does with its former colony South Africa, already is facing Nigerian ire. Because its new Tory government has publicly stated it is considering the lifting of its sanctions, a British firm was refused permission to bid on a large government contract.

Nigerian oil has a quality which makes its crude much more attractive and valuable to the U.S., in its current circumstances than that from other sources. Nigerian oil is quite light and "sweet" (low in sulphur), which, when processed, yields more gasoline than heavier crude. Although Nigeria currently ships slightly more than half of its production to the U.S. (which accounts for roughly 12 per cent of our imports), with supplies on the world market as tight as they are, it could easily get along without this country as a customer.

Although Administration officials denied that the possible loss of crude oil supplies from Nigeria (and lesser amounts from other Black African states) was not a factor in its decision to continue sanctions, there can be little question that it was. And those who have chosen, for one reason or another, have decided to support the lifting of sanctions, must have forgotten about Nigeria's importance. Without Nigerian crude oil supplies available to this country, and alternative sources of energy being currently unavailable, the lifting of sanctions would cause an energy situation much worse than we faced earlier in this decade due to the Arab embargo.

Perhaps the most critical factor in the Administration resistance to Congressional pressure to lift the sanctions is the attitude of the new Tory government in Great Britain and its leader, Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher. The question of how long the U.S. will maintain its sanctions has been tied to whether the British government continues to maintain its own, a situation which is currently in doubt.

About a month ago the new British Foreign Secretary, Lord Carrington, indicated that the Thatcher government was willingly abandoning the agreement it had earlier reached with the U.S. (the so-called American plan) whereby both agreed that any meaningful settlement sufficient to allow diplomatic recognition of or lifting economic sanctions against a Rhodesian government must include the participation of the Patriotic Front. Prime Minister Thatcher seemed to agree that such agreement had been "overtaken by events", dispatched a top civil servant, Sir Anthony Duff, to Rhodesia to begin preliminary negotiations with the Muzorewa government, and announced that she would soon send a permanent envoy, which would indicate an intention to diplomatically recognize it.

In a 12 minute speech written by the Prime Minister's senior advisors and read by the Queen at the state opening of Parliament, she said that her government would "build on" the Rhodesian election

A Black Look At Politics

William S. Morris

Please excuse my absence last week, readers, as the Wednesday holiday messed up my scheduling. In any event, I shall pick up where I left off. Two weeks ago, I briefly examined black unemployment in the U.S., focusing on minority joblessness in the state of Iowa.

I also reviewed the role that local political leaders play in responding to community needs, paying attention to the political choices available to blacks living in an area where their numbers are small. Given the relatively small black population in Iowa, can officials afford to ignore minority demands, as far as jobs and housing are concerned?

Sadly, the situation looks as if they can, and do, ignore many of the needs of Iowa's black community, insofar as they may differ from white interests. True, a case may be made for playing down the differences between black and white Iowans, but clearly blacks have some specialized needs which whites do not have, in Iowa, as well as nation-wide. Rather than elaborate on these, I should like to focus on the respective performances of the Democratic and Republican parties in Iowa, as to the needs of this state's black community.

Unfortunately, and partially due to limited black political clout, neither major political party in Iowa has done much to assist blacks, economically or socially, outside of Federal government mandates. Despite the "liberal" label attached to the Democratic party, its role in Iowa, politics has traditionally been rather conservative, though usually less so than its Republican counterpart.

Iowa, is however, a conservative state, thus its long history of Republican political leadership. Black Iowans should be extremely wary of aligning themselves automatically with out examining the party platform, especially as regards jobs, unemployment benefits, busing, housing, urban renewal, school closings, and police - community relations. To date it has often been quite difficult to detect just who stands where on which issue, and many candidates for office intentionally "waffle" on controversial issues, such as abortion, so as not to alienate certain groups of voters.

Also, it is often very hard to identify where a candidates' primary areas of support are located, especially organizations who lend their support and financial assistance on the basis of one or two issues.

If Iowa blacks, especially those in Des Moines, would really take a good look at their local representatives' voting records, they would most likely be surprised. Blacks must determine whether their votes are being taken seriously or not by incumbent officials, for they are often ignored. And Democrats are just as bad as Republicans in this respect. These people know that Iowa blacks are no longer united on traditional issues, hence minority balloting is fragmented, and therefore largely ineffectual.

The Republican party in Iowa has not done very much for blacks either, although their performance in some areas has been more tolerable than in others. One problem here is that blacks have not, for the most part, gotten involved in the party, due to its conservative, and sometimes racist stance on many important issues.

Too, Republicans have not done anything to attract black voters, and their conservative views often clash directly with the needs of the black community. Iowa Republican support for such national candidates as Barry Goldwater in 1964, and for such local candidates as reactionary Senator Roger Jepsen, must be eyed with suspicion.

The best bet politically for black Iowans would seem to be a coalition with some like-minded organization, given our limited numbers. What sort of group this would be, I cannot say; even some traditionally liberal women's groups, such as N.O.W., are shifting their political goals away from areas of special concern to blacks.

The upcoming 1980 Presidential election, and the next Des Moines mayoral election will challenge us in many ways. Blacks must find out which candidates are most receptive to our offers of electoral support, and beware of those who would tell us only that which we want to hear. In short, we had better find out who stands where, lest black people encounter a "rude awakening" in the politically not-too-distant future.

Edna Griffin

Of all industrialized countries, only the United States and South Africa fail to provide comprehensive health care for their people. The introduction of more than 20 bills on health care shows there is general agreement there is need for a reform of the nation's health system.

Most of the bills undertake to control the rising medical costs to the individual through government payment of all or part of the expense.

The bill receiving the widest support of trade unions, and many professional and community groups is Kennedy's Health Care For All Americans Act. Kennedy has been introducing this legislation since 1970. The bill offers a wide range of benefits: physician and hospital care, home health services including skilled nurses up to 100 days a year, lab tests, x-rays, mental health treatment, and prescription drugs for the chronically ill senior citizens.

The Kennedy program is expected to cost the government about $28 billion a year. This particular bill does not specify the amount of maternity care or child care, family planning services, or abortion care that will be covered. The Kennedy bill proposes no exclusions of old ailments, no limits on preventive care, no waiting periods, no deductibles, no out-of-pocket expenses for the consumer.

The Kennedy staff say their bill makes health care a right that goes beyond helping people "cope" with medical costs to setting standards for health care and working toward the prevention of disease. To improve access to care, this plan would encourage neighborhood health centers, services such as home care for the chronically ill, and other specific programs for such groups as poor minority women. Finally the bill sets up advisory councils on which consumers will be a majority, although it does not specify that women must be represented on them.

For many activists, the big problem with the new Kennedy program, and what separates it from his old Health Security Act, is that it gives a major role to commercial insurance companies instead of making the government the basic insurer. The Kennedy staff claim that the private companies would be heavily regulated.

Employers and individuals continue under this system to buy plans from the commercial insurance companies or from Blue Cross / Blue Shield, but the companies must offer the same mandated health benefits to everyone, they must reimburse the providers at rates set by the government, and there would be limits on what they could charge.

They would have to compete for sales by means of offering additional health benefits, such as dental care and drug coverage, or cash rebates. Instead of choosing standard health insurance, consumers could elect to join health maintenance organizations (HMO) or other prepaid group practice programs.

According to Kennedy staff, insurance companies could no longer charge women — or their employers — more money because they use the health system more than men, therefore making more claims. Nor could companies exclude from coverage conditions that they consider "voluntary", such as pregnancy, or exclude certain categories of people from benefits, such as unmarried pregnant women or diabetics (two out of three diabetics are women).

A part time or low-paid employee would have the same coverage as a full-time worker, and no employee would have to pay more than 35 percent of the premium cost, based on her wages. Those who earn less would pay less. Self-employed individuals would buy coverage under national group rates. The government continues to pay for the poor and the elderly, but they are entitled to the same benefits and the same choice of insurers as everyone else.

Hospitals and doctors who choose to participate must, in turn, become bargaining agents with the health insurance companies (supervised by the government) for fees, set annually, and cannot charge more than the limits.

Critics of the Kennedy program are doubtful that the insurance companies and doctors can be regulated. The critics argue that any system which pays per-service fees will drive up costs by encouraging doctors to give unnecessary treatment, as happened with Medicaid and Medicare bills.

Such rising costs, they predict, will force cutbacks in services, and the first to go will be preventive care — primarily used by women. The next service to be cut would be those for "voluntary" conditions, such as pregnancy or "luxuries," such as abortion. In other words, say critics, it is a system doomed to fail.

to restore normal relations, while continuing to consider" the wider international implications." She went on to introduce a new "conservative era" in Great Britain, and outlined her vision of the new society. All would seem to indicate that the U. S. may have to stand alone in maintaining the economic sanctions, and the Carter Administration could not continue that for very long.

But Great Britain may have to go slow in its seeming haste to recognize the new government in Zimbabwe-Rhodesia. Margaret Thatcher is well aware that her country cannot afford to offend African members of the British Commonwealth. For example, as Britain's trade with Nigeria now exceeds its trade with South Africa (and a major portion of that involves crude oil), a loss of access to its oil supplies would be a crucial loss which could not, at this point in time, be made up for by recent North Sea discoveries.

Action on recognition of and lifting of sanctions against the Muzorewa government will also have to be delayed, it is clear, until after the Organization of African Unity's meeting in July and the Commonwealth Conference set for early August in Lusaka, Zambia. Further the issue is not likely to reach the floor of Parliament until mid-November, and by that time it may be possible to determine the probable longevity of the Muzorewa regime. But a change in British policy is clearly in the winds, and it is only a matter of time until recognition and the lifting of sanctions occurs. U.S. Secretary of State Cyrus Vance has spent much time in discussions with the British government trying to at least slow down their eventual movement toward normal relations with Zimbabwe - Rhodesia in order to see if Muzorewa can or will live up to his campaign promises of peace and social justice. Whether he will be successful in that is unknown.

What does it all mean? I have attempted here to discuss the most important and obvious factors which the Carter Administration has had to consider in making its decision to continue the sanctions. There are other factors, including the political repercussions among American Blacks were the Administration have opted to discontinue the economic, political and social isolation which the sanctions had imposed, which I ignored, because others will discuss them in due time.

A number of State Department Africa specialists and U.N. Ambassador Andrew Young think that the President has legitimate grounds for maintaining the sanctions, but the debates on the Panama Canal Treaty and the Strategic Arms Limitations Treaty in the Senate may change all that. The President's political advisors have argued that the President should not waste valuable political "chips" (favors) on Rhodesia with those two crucial issues looming on the horizon.

As much as Carter may need to avoid confronting the Senate over the Rhodesia issue, oil is still the trump card. Whatever the decision is as to sanctions, oil will be at its heart.

Unless and until some alternative is available to this country's energy problem and our access to adequate supplies of crude oil is found, the Muzorewa government will have to do without American recognition of its existence.

Benjamin L. Hooks

Our New Day Begun

Betrayers of the Constitution

Despite the Supreme Court's commendable reaffirmation of Title VII equal employment opportunity and affirmative action provisions of the 1964 Civil Rights Act in the Weber v. Kaiser case, it is clear that the spirit of meanness that has been dogging this nation in recent years is worsening instead of abating.

No clearer example of this situation exists than the drive by Ohio Democrat Don Mottl to get Congress to approve a constitutional amendment barring the Supreme Court from upholding school busing for integration programs.

Oh, how low have the mighty fallen. That Americans would see the day when 218 congressmen, duly elected to uphold the constitution of this nation, descend so low as to seek to destroy the form of democracy that has permitted this nation to extend the beacon of freedom to every citizen is a national tragedy, indeed.

Betraying Justice

Americans should recognize that the 218 congressmen who voted for the discharge petition to bypass the Judiciary Committee to bring the measure quickly to the House floor for action are betraying the principles of justice and liberty that are embedded in this country's democratic system. They are traitors of this nation, for they would destroy the very foundations of decency that represent the bedrock undergirding that glorious document known as the U.S. Constitution.

The NAACP therefore calls upon all voters, black, white or whatever color to express their outrage over this betrayal by those whom they elected to uphold their system of government and to represent them.

Americans should write, telephone and send telegrams to their congressmen telling them that although they are not up for reelection for another 17 months, their betrayal will not be forgotten, nor will it be forgiven. There is still time to stop this movement. We must stop this dangerous action.

Congress went on its Fourth of July recess and returns on July 23. The first order of business then will be consideration of the petition. There will first be a 20-minute debate. If Rep. Mottl wins 218 votes to reaffirm the discharge, there will then be a one-hour debate on the amendment itself. It will require a two-thirds vote to approve the measure.

150 Votes Needed

Amendment opponents therefore need 150 votes to win safely. No doubt, there are many undecided congressmen who can be swayed one way or the other.

Already, the NAACP national network of state conference presidents and branch leaders have been mobilized. They have been called on to visit, phone, write and send telegrams to their congressmen and to speak out about the extensive threats of the Mottl Amendment. They will similarly mobilize the NAACP membership, supporters and allies.

But this action is not enough. Time is short. All Americans who recognize the Mottl danger must let their congressmen know that they will visit the wrath of the voters upon them come next election day and throw them out of office if they vote in the House to support the bypass petition.

The amendment is a purely racist matter that would wreck the delicate balance of the judicial system, executive branch and legislature. It is ludicrous. It says that no one can be compelled to go to a school other than the nearest one in the district. It does not mention busing, but it is actually worse than an anti-busing amendment.

Urban YMCA Receives National Award

The Urban YMCA was awarded a National YMCA Certificate of Eligibility today for the excellence of its health and physical education program—a program which presently involves 300 young people in Des Moines.

The certificate will enable the Urban YMCA to enter its registered amateur athletes in official regional and national sports competition with YMCAs around the country and to participate in national physical education programs.

Dee Arends, Chairperson of the Urban Board, presented the certificate at the Central YMCA to Sylvester Hughes, Chairman of the Urban Health and Physical Education Committee, praising the Department for its leadership in providing recreation and physical fitness programs for the whole community.

The YMCA's policy-making boards and committees have committed the Association to a competitive sports policy for youth that stresses "Fair Play" and the values families and youth can derive from such involvement.

YMCAs must also conduct a balanced program of physical education, have a physical education committee and volunteer leaders to give guidance in policy and program development, and use the national YMCA programs in its building, camp and the community.

The entire program is carried out under the guidance of qualified professional leaders operating under policies established by the Association's Board of Directors.

"Perhaps most important of all," Jock Johnson, Executive Director, said, "a YMCA must continually evaluate, revise continually evaluate, revise and modernize its physical education program to meet changing community needs."

Report of NAACP Convention

Des Moines delegates, Rebecca Banks, Larry Carter, Sheila Stewart, and alternate Shirley Steele were among the more than ten thousand people who rose in a standing ovation for Rosa Parks when she was awarded the Spingarn Medal at NAACP National Convention. It is the highest honor bestowed by the NAACP.

More than twenty years have passed since this gentle, soft-spoken woman refused to give up her seat on the bus in Montgomery, Ala. and move to the back.

Alex Haley, writer, and Ambassador Andrew are two recent recipients of the Spingarn award.

To all of you who did not attend the barbecue on last Saturday, you missed a treat. The pork and chicken was very good, and we raised a large sum for our building fund. We would like to thank our pastor, who did a splendid job and all others who contributed their services.

Parents, Youth's Day is approaching, so please send the kids to practice so that everyone will have a chance to participate. Let's all pray for the sick and shut-ins and put a smile on our face and a kind word in our heart and pass it on to a friend.

It didn't rain on my parade 4th of July in Chicago, but I was a little disappointed. Any shadow of disappointment drifted away as we watched boys and girls in their holiday best scurrying about and listened to their laughter in the wide open spaces of Grant Park.

There is something special we senior citizens hear in the laughter and open joy of little children, especially on a sunny holiday in the park. I appreciated the elegance and beauty of the gowns and headresses of Muslim women as they mingled with friends and supporters.

I was back in Des Moines before I realized why there had been a moment of personal disappointment. By way of explanation, let me quote Ralph Metcalf, Jr. regarding the New World Patriotism Day celebration, July 4th. "There is nothing so powerful as a powerful thought, as a positive idea. Certainly when Imam Wallace Deen Muhammad came up with the idea for this masterful parade, it was certainly one of the greatest ideas we have had in our community in sometime. I think I speak for all involved when I say that we greatly appreciate the leadership he has shown in organizing this parade." There are probably many in all walks of life who agree, in principle, with both the need and the time for achieving a common purpose.

The possibilities of such an idea attracted my attention. I arrived with the expectation of seeing at the head of the parade First Lady Rosalyn Carter, Chicago Mayor Byrne, Muhammad Ali, Ralph Abernathy, and Senator Charles H. Percy, among the dignitaries. After reading the Chicago Sun-Times the following day, I realized I had forgotten an important lesson, two lessons, as a matter of fact.

Both the First Lady and the Chicago Mayor were absent.

When I returned to Des Moines, I re-read my Muslim newspaper. There it was - First Lady Rosalyn Carter was expected, Mayor Byrne had accepted. A later explanation by the Mayor - "My acceptance was 'tentative' - that means 'if nothing happens,' doesn't it? The Krishna Hari participated in the parade. There was no participation or certainly no visible participation of a single Christian denomination, Black or white. That is sad but understandable.

If you can imagine for a moment a non-Muslim woman sitting in with the planners of New World Patriotism Day, these are some of the questions I might ask most respectfully. How do you define new world patriotism as you reach out to the wider community? I'm not sure I'd have the courage to mention the difficulties of accepting an invitation by those who have been long 'rebuked and scorned' over the years.

If this obstacle has been eased over the past three years, is it possible to interest people in world patriotism when we are conditioned to think of loyalty to the United States? It is possible that such a question would make me instantly invisible and unheard. You will understand if you have ever been treated as if you weren't there? It is most unlikely I'll ever be asked my opinion by Muslims. Enough of these imaginings! They have cured my disappointment.

While in Chicago, I had an unexpected opportunity to interview an Indian South African. While waiting for lunch I learned the young man had a wife and child. I think he was still upset by the following incident. While waiting for a train to Johannesburg, a white employee ordered him and his family to leave a small bench against the wall. The young man was told that it was reserved for employees!

I do not mention his name because he must rejoin his family in South Africa. A moment of silence was all I could offer. He knew I understood such pain. After lunch, my friend shared the following information: eighty percent of the Black population has been pushed on to thirteen percent of the least valuable and infertile land by the four percent white population. I have read and written about this. I was glad, however, for the exact figures and to verify other information I have read.

My new friend explained that the South African master plan is to be put in operation in the near future. Broederbond, a rough translation, I think would be brotherhood - white brotherhood. This is a blueprint of South African views and policies. This plan includes moving into neighboring countries with the excuse of wiping out guerillas. The plan also includes the undermining and overthrow of the Ugandan government as a beginning.

It surprised me to hear first hand of the discrimination against the Indian population of South Africa. I forgot to ask what percentage of the population they represent. They are restricted to Black schools and universities. They are also limited to restaurants for Blacks with the exception of restaurants calling themselves international in the cities. The young man was proud of the fact that Biko was a classmate.

Our holiday weekend included an impromptu birthday party for our oldest daughter and a few of her friends. It was a 'roasting' along with the cake and ice cream. My husband and I agree - her friends know Phyllis well!

Celebrates Birthday

Charles "Jap" Simmons was surprised on his 77th birthday by a feast served by his wife Mary Ruth and daughter Lynda Walker-Webster, shared with the Richard Allen Chorus, Lawrence Carter and Harriette White.

Jap received gifts depicting titles of chorus songs that he has led through the years. A symbol trophy was presented to him for years of devotion and service to the chorus.

The chorus celebrates birthdays monthly so Jap also received his mound of individual fun, gifts along with Pat Harris and Sue Andrew, July "babies".

We wish Jap many birthdays and more years that the chorus can share with him.

The Annual Communication for the Iowa Grand Court, R.E.O.A., convened Monday June 18, 1979 in Davenport, Iowa. The session was opened in Ritualistic form with Lady Virginia White and Sir Knight White, both of Burlington, presiding.

At the end of the Ritualistic work, election of officers was held. Those elected to Grand offices for the ensuing year, 1979-1980:

Grand Royal Matron, Lady Barbara Palmer - Des Moines
Grand Royal Patron, Sir Knight Eugene V. Freels - Clinton
Grand Royal Associate

Matron, Lady Bertie Hayter - Des Moines

Grand Royal Conductress, Lady Charlotte Weldon - Burlington

Grand Royal Associate Conductress, Lady Clementine Amos - Waterloo

Grand Royal Treasurer - Lady Marietta Payton - Davenport

Grand Royal Secretary - Lady Meredith Burke - Clinton

Grand Royal Registrar - Lady Clemmie Hightower - Clinton

Grand Royal Lecturer, Lady Janice Riddley - Des Moines.

The members of Iowa

Grand Court wish to extend a special thanks to Lady Delores Bell, Des Moines, Chairperson of Ways and Means, and Lady Desie Burt, Fort Madison Chairperson of Arts and crafts. These two ladies turned in an excellent report for their respective offices during Grand Court. Also a special thanks to the members of Naomi Court No. 1, Davenport, who worked so hard to make this, one of the best sessions ever.

Soul... Food and Thought

There has been considerable concern and lack of concern about the return to earth of the 77 ton man-made marvel, the Skylab. Its 4,000 mile long and 100 mile wide path has provoked jokes, wagers, souvenir hawkers, and insurance companies have been moved to add "skylab" clauses to their policies.

As a child, gazing up at a beautiful full moon, we often speculated about the "Man in the moon," or referred to the heavenly body as a glob of "green cheese", and like the late Vaughn Monroe, we enjoyed "Racing with the Moon." Little did we know that we would live in an age of brilliant scientist and brave men who would plant the American flag on Mr. Moon, and bring back to earth glowing reports on conditions there.

A giant step indeed from the headlines of April 1909 when Admiral Robert E. Peary and Matthew Hensen discovered the North Pole. Altho Peary, renowned scientist and explorer, is given the credit for this important discovery, it was in reality a two man feat. The team of Hensen and Peary were together on many surveying trips, beginning in 1887. When they surveyed canal sites in Nicaragua.

Hensen was born in Wash., D.C. Always a restless child he grew tired of living with an "aunt" upon the death of his parents and ran away to Baltimore, Md. where he dreamed of following a life at sea. A Captain Childs took a liking to young Matthew and hired him as a cabin boy. But to enjoy what he wanted he had to work hard to get what he never had — the opportunity to learn. Aboard ship "Katie Hines" with Capt. Hines as his teacher young Hensen soon learned to read, write, and to study geography, navigation, history and mathematics. All of which prepared him for a life of exciting explorations.

Hensen was a valuable aid to Peary in establishing friendly relations with the Eskimo and expert handling of the dogs and equipment. From 1891 - 1907 Peary and Hensen sought to discover the pole and failed; people branded them as foolhardy but 1908 found them setting out again for literally the "top of the world." Four other explorers accompanied them when they left Cape Sheridan Greenland. The going was tough, snow - blindness, frostbite, and physical exhaustion felled the other four.

But the explorer friends pushed on picking up four Eskimos to replace the men they had lost, and on April 6 Peary painfully took a reading with his sextant; carefully calculating to avoid the possibility of errors. After determining the precise point Peary asked Matthew Hensen to place the American flag on the spot. EUREKA!

A good deal of the Eskimos diet consist of fish. Here is an excellent recipe you might want to try the next time you have the grill out.

WINE SAUCED TROUT

- 1 1/2 oz. can tomato sauce
- 1/2 C. dry red wine
- 1/2 C. oleo
- 2 T. lemon juice
- 2 T. chopped green onion including tops
- 1 t. sugar
- 1 t. dry salad herbs
- 1/2 t. salt
- few drops hot pepper sauce
- 6 pan dressed trout

Combine all ingredients. Simmer uncovered for 15 min. Grill fish 10-12 min. - turn - grill 10-12 min. brushing fish 2-3 times with the sauce on both sides. Serve the warm sauce in generous portions with the fish and hush puppies.

CATCHING A FEW COSMIC RAYS

Cosmic Rays.

The name sounds mysterious. Perhaps even sinister. To some people the words probably create images of a Space-Age weapon spouting death rays in a science fiction movie.

In real life cosmic rays are not Hollywood death rays; however, they are no less mysterious to the scientists who study them. According to Mark Pesses, a research associate in the Department of Physics and Astronomy at The University of Iowa, cosmic rays pose one of the more intriguing questions in all of space exploration.

Do cosmic rays, which travel at nearly the speed of light, originate within solar flares, perhaps, or are they born within the vast star- and dust-speckled interiors of far-off galaxies? Scientists don't know, but by using sensitive instruments flown aboard spacecraft they have measured the energy levels of the tiny protons and other sub-atomic particles that are collectively known as cosmic ray particles and found them to be amazingly powerful.

Bombarding the earth from every direction, cosmic rays have energy levels almost a billion times higher than the highest energy yet produced in man-made atomic accelerators on earth.

Recently the theory on how cosmic rays gain this energy was revised.

In a paper presented at the May 29 meeting of the American Geophysical Union in Washington, D.C., Pesses described how Enrico Fermi, one of the architects of the atomic bomb, had made an error in calculating how cosmic rays attain their high energy levels.

According to a widely accepted theory, cosmic rays gain energy when they bump into other energy sources in space. These sources include interstellar shock waves, which are nothing less than the energy of the stars flowing out in ripples through space. The shock waves catch hold of the cosmic ray particles and accelerate them in much the same way as a wave catches a surfer.

Now the problem with Fermi's model of cosmic ray acceleration is that he described the process as being a mechanical one, as though two cars had collided, one bumping the other in the rear and thereby accelerating the car in front.

In truth, says Pesses, the collisions that give cosmic ray particles their tremendous energy involve electric and magnetic forces. Consequently, Fermi underestimated by a factor of 10 the amount of energy that cosmic ray particles can acquire during their "surfing" collisions in space.

The idea for the model was first proposed by two University of Kansas researchers in 1972, and since then Pesses has developed a mathematical framework for it. He has verified that it works within the solar system by using data from the Pioneer II spacecraft.

The revision may seem insignificant, but it could prove important to anyone interested in learning how cosmic rays are born.

Pesses, a student of U of I space physicist James A. Van Allen, for whom the earth's Van Allen radiation belts are named, says his theory will make possible more accurate cosmic ray calculations and may one day lead scientists to better understand the origin of cosmic rays.

Affirmative Action. Do not be surprised if these are challenged in court soon.

In sum, the thrust of Weber is positive but not for a moment should we deceive ourselves into thinking that the war is over; simply, a battle has been won. If we are not to be pushed back further, we must continue the campaigning that produced a defeat for Brian Weber.

In particular, we must press labor unions, for if one is to explain how we went from the disaster of Bakke to the hope provided by Weber in less than a year, the simple answer is the involvement of labor.

Unions filled amicus briefs and mobilized with civil rights groups on Weber, while either supporting Allan Bakke or remaining silent.

Blacks in unions should make sure their union is doing its j-o-b on affirmative action. In sum, though the Weber decision was generally positive, like Eduoard Mondlane, martyred leader of the liberation struggle in Mozambique, we are compelled to say once more: "The struggle continues..."

LOOK ON SPORTS

This is the period of the Pan Am games, so there should be news for everybody. But we have seen lots of the fellows and girls in these games in meets here at home. Several of the athletes representing places like Jamaica, Cuba, and such have been over here competing for American schools. Well, maybe not Cubans, but most of the Central Americans have done so.

The question is how will the Americans fare in the big one in 1980. Our trouble is that so often we can't get our best athletes to compete in these games. They get out of college and right away they have to start making a living. And sometimes they win one event in one Olympic meet and turn professional. That is where the dough is.

We have Ray Leonard, John Tate, Leon Spinks,

Bruce Jenner and we don't know how many more won't be trying for their second Olympic medal.

In contrast to this, the Europeans sometimes are around for their third or fourth try at the games. Thus they become veteran performers, and hard to beat for our ontrippers.

The wonder is that our kids do as well as they do what with all the pressure on them. To win means more money than lots of them have ever seen so they really want to do well. And if the athletes from some of the European countries don't win, they are in trouble with their people who are in charge of the various athletic programs.

Which shoe would you rather wear?

We are getting set for our Hilltop Tennis meet. At this writing it will be hard to say how many we will have, but we hope it will be a good number. We have some competition in that the Missouri Valley meet is held on the same week end, but not too many of the people who play in our meet make it down to the valley. We don't even know who we will have for our defending champs, but there will likely be at least a couple of them there.

The cry has come up about selecting the all star baseball teams for the annual game between the major leagues. Can't help but wonder how the whole Boston outfield got picked.

It reminds me of the time when the fans chose the two teams. That was in the days of Jackie Robinson, Hank Irvin, Hank Thomas, Larry Doby and the rest.

Well, people got post cards printed with the names of all of the black major leaguers, and all you had to do was send in the card. You didn't even have to pay the postage or sign the thing.

Those cards were handed out like they were going out of style. I don't remember if they had anybody else named there or not. Do you think that is what happened at Boston? It did at Cincinnati, I think, once. The whole starting Red lineup was voted in by the fans. So it can be done.

But now people would have a tough time picking the black players in either league. There are so many of them, they couldn't all be included on any team, even though an all black lineup would be formidable.

Each time I look at that new tennis court on Tenth and Day, I have to think what would we have given for a deal like that.

And, do you know there are lots of kids who don't want to learn the game. They want to play, but aren't willing to go through what it takes to learn. And it really turns me off when I see kids trying to hit the ball just any way. It may be that I haven't seen all the kids in action, but the NJTL league is having difficulties in some parts of the city, and it isn't necessarily the black kids.

Could be that tennis has reached its peak and is leveling off. A fellow asked me who I thought would be the next Arthur Ash. He was a bit surprised by the reply that nobody was looking for another Ashe, just some tennis players.

News From The U.S. Commission On Civil Rights

Army Contracts: The Department of Defense has been selected by President Carter to open up large Army procurement contracts to minority-owned businesses in a two-year pilot program. The program allows the Small Business Administration to take any disagreements over awarding contracts to the head of the Army, who has to settle the dispute in some cases by making counter contracts within five days.

The SBA has five additional days to work out price and terms. This process gives minority firms greater leverage in dealing with procurement officers and allows the SBA to go after big dollar contracts, particularly in the area of manufacturing.

Jurors Excluded: California's Supreme Court overturned the convictions of two black prison inmates sentenced to death for the murder of a white prison guard in 1973. In a unanimous decision, the justices ordered a new trial for Eugene Allen and Ernest Graham because the prosecution acted to exclude all 14 black prospective jurors during their trial in March 1976.

Oppose PACE: Three civil rights groups charge in a District of Columbia Federal Court suit that the Professional and Administration Career Exam (PACE) given by the Office of Personnel Management to fill hundreds of thousands of Federal jobs discriminates against Hispanics, blacks, and other racial minorities. The NAACP Legal Defense Fund, the lawyers Committee for Civil Rights, and IMAGE of California state in their suit, Luevano vs. Campbell, that the PACE exam has never been properly validated. They add that its adverse impact on minorities is "so severe that it threatens to segregate the middle and upper levels of the executive branch of the Federal government."

In the 1977 PACE given in the San Francisco region, the suit cites, 25.2 percent of the white applicants scored 90 percent or above, while only 1.1 percent of the black candidates and no Hispanics scored that high.

Black General: Colonel Frank E. Petersen, 46, of Topeka, Kansas, has been confirmed by Congress to be the first black general in the 203-year history of the U. S.

Marine Corps. A highly decorated Korean and Vietnam Veteran, Petersen was also the first black marine pilot. He says it will be years before another black Marine becomes a general because there are only seven black lieutenant colonels and no black colonels left in the Marine Corps.

Urban Emphasis: Greater program emphasis on blighted urban areas is projected for the Ford Foundation by its new president, Franklin Thomas. Thomas, a 44-year old black New York City attorney, succeeded retiring McGeorge Bundy in the $120,000 a year post.

Flawed Houses: The housing in which Black Americans live is flawed twice as often as the housing of the total population, according to a report released by Housing and Urban Development. Copies of the article can be obtained from HUD, Office of Policy Development and Research, Room 8124, Washington, D.C. 20410.

MOUNT OLIVE BAPTIST CHURCH

Fifty years in bring the message and twenty-nine years at Mt. Olive, yes that is what Rev. H. R. Fields has done. He has brought God's word to many of us. And now it is our turn to show Rev. and Mrs. Fields how much we appreciate their being at Mt. Olive.

Sunday July 1st was the beginning of the Pre-Anniversary Program. Our guest churches were Shiloh Baptist, with Rev. V. W. Jameson, as Master of ceremonies. The sermon was given by Rev. A.C. Crawford from Morning Star Baptist Church.

On Monday, July 2 Union Baptist Church was our guest and Rev. H. I. Thomas brought the message.

On Thursday, July 5 Rev. James Harris of Mt. Hebron Baptist Church delivered the services.

On Friday, July 6 our guest will be the Rev. E. T. Green of Macedonia Baptist Church. The program will start at 7:30.

On Sunday, July 8th will be the Anniversary Program which will start at 3:30 p.m. Our guest church will be Corinthian Baptist Church and Rev. F. W. Strickland, who will be Master of Ceremonies and Maple Street Baptist with Rev. George Parrish, Pastor of Maple Street Baptist Church, President of Iowa M.C. Baptist Convention will bring the message in honoring Rev. and Mrs. Fields. There will be an anniversary tea following the service.

God bless you. Come out and be with us. Sis Toni Jenkins

MESSIAH TEMPLE

"Choose Ye This Day". Today is the day to choose which god you will serve was the lesson brought to us by Reverend Jacob Reed last Sunday morning from the 24th chapter of Joshua, verses 14-24. It is important not to be wishy - washy about following our Lord. If you are going to do as He wishes, then do so all the time. Anytime you fail to do as God asks, you are not following Him but are following Satan. The choice is yours, and so are the consequences.

Sunday school is at 10:30 with worship services at 11:30. Fellowship is every Sunday evening at 7:00.

Prayer meeting and Bible study is every Wednesday evening at 7:00. The lesson next Sunday evening will be brought by Reverend Jacob Reed. We are currently studying the book of Acts in the Bible study. These lessons are not only informative, but also are uplifting as we seek to hide the word in our hearts.

Reverend Jacob Reed, Pastor.

REMEMBER: "Choose ye THIS day" You may not have another.

New World Patriotism - The Call For Human Dignity

Our continuing series of articles will resume next week. This week I would like to report to you the July 4th activity of the World Community of Al-Islam in the West.

Thirty-five members of the Des Moines Muslim Community and friends traveled to Chicago, Illinois for our annual New World Patriotism Day Parade and picnic.

The New World Patriotism Day was a concept developed by the Leader of the World Community of Al-Islam in the West - The Honorable Wallace Deen Muhammad. Iman (Minister) Muhammad has championed the cause in the reconstruction of the family life. He teaches that the family is the very fabric of the society and unless we direct our energies toward building strong families our society will be reduced to a state of weakness, corruption and stagnation.

Iman Muhammad has issued a call for Human Dignity - He says that this (Human Dignity) should be the object of everyone - the Clergy, the Government, Education, etc.) that we struggle to establish dignity for the human being.

This is our duty to God and to our fellow human beings. If this is done we will have a New World and the true patriotism that goes with it. In the past as Americans we have failed to unite on the motive for our patriotism.

Many Americans are patriotic - in a racist economic, militaristic sense. Some are patriotic simply because there is no place on earth better than the good ole U.S. of A.

But what would be more beautiful than our patriotism being born out of human compassion and concern for the dignity of all of human beings. As Americans we must move in this direction. The ultimate concern has got to be one another - the people.

The Honorable Wallace Deen Muhammad along with Heavyweight Boxing Champion, Muhammad Ali, Rev. Ralph Abernathy, Senator Charles Percy, Comedian Activist Dick Gregory and many other dignitaries marched down Michigan Avenue in downtown Chicago to dramatize the need for Human Dignity.

After these honorable leaders took their positions in the reviewing stand, Rev. Ralph David Abernathy delivered a stirring invocation followed by Senator Charles Percy who spoke proclaiming Muhammad Ali the Ambassador of Good Will to the people of the earth - the Honorable Wallace Deen Muhammad and Muhammad Ali briefly spoke both issuing a cry for us to move toward excellence.

The parade then followed with some 200 entries (99 floats). Afterwards we assembled in Grant Park for a picnic, entertainment and exhibitions.

There were civic leaders speaking - church choirs and other talented entertainment and a rousing and inspirational lecture given by the Honorable Wallace Deen Muhammad - who was followed by a strong commitment to serve in the path of Allah (God) by Muhammad Ali.

The day was concluded with a boxing exhibition from Muhammad Ali - He looked overweight - older - slower and his skills looked worn. However, Muhammad Ali's boxing skills are not important, what is important is that he is putting himself full time in the ring to fight for human dignity - How about you.

and nudge me when I've said enough.

If Jesus said it, that's it.

Rev. James Harris, Pastor. Remember God opened the doors and you are welcome.

HEAVENLY TEMPLE COGIC

Pastor - Bishop A. B. Carter, Sr.

The first Sunday proved to be most spiritually rewarding one with a new Deacon ordained, and a great indepth lecture on sinfulness of saints. Bishop charged us to be good parents, good mothers and fathers "never go out to exclusive flingdings" and "switch around" playing "Mrs. Cool" or "strut around" playing "Mr. Cool". And leave your "poor little kids at home crying for mama and daddy," never be ashamed of your children, he said. You will develop mental problems in them.

Sunday night communion was administered to us by Pastor, after which he sang out:

Jesus is on the mainline. Tell him what you want!

The spirit of God was so high that saints fell to the floor, speaking in tongues and glorifying God.

Young children 7, 8 and 9 years old were blessed as well as teenagers and adults.

It truly was a glorious 1st Sunday.

To god be the glory for the things he has done.

"Quality You Can Taste"

Khalid Tells Of Bad Experiences At Handicapped Inc.

by Stephanie L. Michael

For a few the nightmare at Handicapped Industries Inc., a non-profit organization located at 1711 Sixth Avenue, is coming to a climax. But for one former employee, Rehema Khalid the nightmare may never end.

Rehema is a former native of San Francisco, Calif. She moved to Des Moines last year and began working for Handicapped Industries as an assessment counselor. After working two months at the agency she claims turmoil and chaotic conditions erupted.

"Promises of raises and beneficial changes were made by former executive director Phil Shuman. I soon found out along with other employees that the promises he made would never come about. We all soon learned that Handicapped Inc. was Larry Preminger's baby and he would always be in full control."

"The paranoia in the office was so great it began to affect some of my fellow workers personalities. After awhile it got to the point where I'd shut my office door to concentrate only on my work. I didn't want to deal with the chaos in the office."

Rehema says being an educated black woman also intimidated some of her fellow workers at the agency. She says many times she was not informed about staff meetings and was not consulted concerning patient evaluations.

"The craziness in the office came to somewhat of a stand still after I noticed someone had rummaged through our desks. The next day I confronted Shuman, because I felt he was the individual that had done the spot check. At first he would not confess to it, but later he admitted his guilt."

"When Preminger heard later about the incident, he realized what Shuman was up to. There was nothing but daily confrontations between Preminger and Shuman after that. When Shuman eventually got fired, he told all of us in the office he had to leave because there was a shortage of funds at the industries, but all the staff knew he was lying. We all knew Shuman was trying to get enough information to start his own Handicapped Industries program that's why he went through our desks."

Khalid says her first real discussion with former Handicapped Industries president Larry Preminger, came about after a confrontation with one of the secretaries. She says after coming into his office, Preminger started telling her derogative stories about black people and used terms such as gal, girl, negro and colored.

"When I told him politely the first two times that I didn't want to hear the stories and didn't like the terms he was using, he acted as if he didn't hear me. The third time I raised my voice asking him to curtail his talk and for us to discuss the reason he called me into his office. He then advised me that black people are not really black and should not be called that, in fact he said, black people are really colored.

I informed him that I did not want to be subjected to those stories, nor would I allow him to refer to me in what I considered racist remarks. I also stressed I would in fact correct him should he choose to do it again."

Khalid says after that explosive incident she and Preminger would only communicate on a professional basis about her patients. Otherwise she would avoid him.

During the remaining months Rehema worked at Handicapped Industries she says the rumor of a new administrator was circling the office. Preminger appointed Roy Stotts and he began working for the office in February of this year.

"The first time Stotts appeared before the entire staff he talked about how he was going to try to change things, but we all had to be open and honest. Then before the meeting was over, he looked directly at me and said some of his best friends were blacks. I just shook my head at him in disapproval of his comment."

"As Stotts tried to communicate with staff members in the office, he used to come to my office and tell me how he had helped a number of blacks. He even told me that the sun couldn't shine on some blacks in the state of Iowa because of the prejudice here. But the derogatory statement, out of the many he made that affected me the most, concerned him seeing a fat lady at a state fair when he was five. He said he thought all black women were fat until he met me. I began to wonder about this man that constantly carried a bible and preached of brotherhood and Christianity."

Rehema says at one point the agencies board members held a meeting to discuss her salary and the type of increase she should receive if she was elevated to a higher position. At that meeting her husband was discussed and some confidential information about him was brought up. That discussion could permit him to sue board members. Much of the information discussed concerning Rehema and her husband was incorrect and fictitious. Rehema later confronted a board member about the whole incident and an apology was made to her.

"It appeared that after I went to speak to the board member Stotts and Preminger really let me know their real feelings about me directly. Stotts always carried himself in my eyesight, as if he didn't really respect women, particularly those who stood up for their rights. I always felt as if both, Stotts and Preminger talked to me at times as if I were some kind of animal, like I was not a human being. Also those racial slurs that were thrown in my direction were totally inappropriate."

"In February of this year I noticed that Stotts started to look over my personnel file to find some type of discrepancy. I guess he was looking for an excuse to fire me. But he couldn't find anything. I always did my work to the best of my ability. I was only concerned about my clients and that's all that was important to me."

In the early part of March Rehema Khalid resigned from Handicapped Industries, Inc. and filed a discrimination suit with the Regional Association of Local Governments (CIRLAG). She says her resignation was one of "forced submittance."

"When Preminger and Roy Stotts got word that I had filed suit against them, the real trouble began for me. Preminger told me I would not get away with this and he would get even. He said he would fix me and he would make sure negative references would be given to all prospective employers."

Bill Shepard was the CETA EEO officer who represented Khalid against Preminger and Stotts. But Shepard did not know all the details that occurred for Rehema.

"Before I resigned from the agency I used to get obscene phone calls from someone telling me that they were going to get me. I also was confronted by a man on the street driving a car. He shouted to me several times that they were going to get even with me. A friend of mine was even followed home once after leaving my house. She and her neighbors also believe someone tried to get inside the building at one time. But she didn't tell her neighbors they may have been after her."

Rehema said the threats and harassment came to a dramatic climax when two white men grabbed her one night while coming out of Merle Hay Mall. One said "We told you we'd fix you." and they raped her.

"I am consulting a physician and we have talked about the incident. Rape is not an easy thing to talk about, especially when it happens to you."

Rehema says the car that contained the two men that raped her had no license plate. But she says she could recognize the men if she had to.

"I didn't call the police after the incident, first of all because I wanted to keep it a secret from my husband. Second, I knew the police would do nothing. It's my impression that in this country the police wouldn't choose to believe a black woman over a white male. Black women aren't considered of any worth in this society."

"This whole situation has been very painful. I have been raped and now I can't even find a job. I think I have been black-listed. I have even gone to the point of contacting the governors office for help. I have worked at another agency since Handicapped Inc., but that didn't work out either. I don't understand why people in this state are so afraid of educated black people who are proud of themselves and what they can do for other people."

At this time, Khalid has dropped her suit with CIRLAG concerning Handicapped Industries, Bill Shepard EEO officer says a conciliation was reached between Rehema and Preminger.

"The conciliation came about because there was nothing that Preminger could offer to suffice my grievances, let me make this perfectly clear. In essence that case came to a stagnation point. Right now, I'm going to have to deal with things in my own way. I'm going to have to seek legal counsel and get to the bottom of this whole mess. Maybe I should ask the same question as Handicapped Industries radio program asks, "Why Me Lord."

Former Handicapped Industries president Larry Preminger was questioned about his alleged threat to Khalid. He replied saying he never made such a threat and that the whole question was totally unfounded. He stated he could care less about doing something to Khalid because he considered her not to be an ideal employee.

"I had no need to have done anything to her. That just doesn't make any sense."

NOT SO FAST

Slowing down is more than just a safer way to drive. It's also a great way to save gas and money. You'll get about 20 more miles from every tank of gas if you slow down from 70 to 55 mph on the highway. And that's just one of the easy ways you can save gasoline.

Radial tires save you about 3¢ on every gallon. Keeping your tires properly inflated saves another 2¢ a gallon. And a well-tuned car can save you about 4¢ a gallon more.

Saving energy is easier than you think, and with the rising energy costs we're facing today, it's never been more important.

For a free booklet with more easy energy-saving tips, write "Energy," Box 62, Oak Ridge, TN 37830.

NEWS ABOUT TOWN

Mr. Morris Chipley has been appointed to the Board of Commissioners for the Linn County Commission of Veteran Affairs. Mr. Chipley is the only Black Commissioner for the State of Iowa.

Mr. Bill Hood was the Men's Day speaker at New Hope Baptist Church, Gary, Indiana, the 4th Sunday in June.

Mr. Hood has also been re-appointed for another year on the United Way Budget Committee. At the Annual meeting of the Red Cross, he was elected to a 3 year term on the Board of Directors.

Mr. Leo Roper, an employee at Quaker Oats for the past 12 years, has been selected for the 1979 Outstanding Young Men of America Award. This award is given in recognition of outstanding professional achievement, superior leadership ability and exceptional service to the community.

Mr. Roper attended Tennessee State University, Kirkwood Community College and Parsons University. He is a native of Tennessee and has an extensive background in community involvement. He is a member of the Chamber of Commerce, Linn County Retarded Childrens Association, American Society of Quality Control, Cedar Rapids Golf Association and Mason's Lodge. Mr. Roper is also vice-president of the Cedar Rapids Jaycees which honored him last year as Jaycee of the Year Award. He has been a Boy Scout Scoutmaster for the past nine years.

Mr. Roper is married. While attending UNAC - 5 in Los Angeles, California, Bishop and Sis. Hurley Bassett visited several friends and relatives including Dr. Exum, a well-known gynecologist in the Los Angeles area. Sis. Bassett was the guest the 4th of July in the home of her sister-in-law in Pamona, California.

Ms. Charlesetta Dawson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Leo Dawson will be teaching kindergarten at Roosevelt Elementary School in Waterloo, Iowa this fall. Ms. Dawson received her B.A. in Early Childhood Education from the University of Northern Iowa, Cedar Falls.

NOTICE OF PUBLIC HEARINGS ON PROPOSED THREE YEAR COMMUNITY DEVELOPMENT PLAN

The Central Advisory Board of the City's Community Development Program has developed a proposed Three Year Comprehensive Community Development Plan for the years 1980, 1981, and 1982 to be funded pursuant to the Community Development Act of 1974, as amended, in the anticipated amounts of $5,755,000, $5,900,000 and $5,900,000 for the respective years of 1980 through 1982.

The City Council of the City of Des Moines has determined that two (2) public hearings should be held, as required by Community Development regulations, on July 30, 1979 and August 6, 1979 in the Council Chambers, City Hall, East 1st and Locust Streets, Des Moines, Iowa, for the purpose of obtaining citizens views on community development needs in the City of Des Moines and allowing citizens the opportunity to participate in the development of the City's 1979 Application for Community Development Block Grant Funds.

All citizens wishing to express their views on the community development needs, as well as to comment on the proposed Three Year Community Development Plan and the development of the City's 1980 Block Grant application, will be given an opportunity to state their views at the hearings to be held on July 30, 1979 at 6:30 p.m. and August 6, 1979 at 6:30 p.m.

Dated this 10th day of July, 1979.

Rights On Trial

(A Report by the Des Moines Human Rights Commission)

Reginald O. Wallace, a black man, worked for Debron Corporation in Missouri until he was terminated in October of 1971. The cause for termination was a company policy stating that anyone whose wages were garnished more than once in a twelve month period would be discharged. Wallace was the second man discharged for that reason by the company; the first was a white man.

Wallace's lawyer based his case against the company on a ruling in Griggs vs. Duke Power that said policies could appear to be racially neutral, and could be created and enforced without racist intent, but still be illegal if the policy had an unnecessary and adverse impact on minorities. Because black people as a group have less income they are more likely to have their wages garnished, said the lawyer.

Debron said the Griggs rule didn't apply because that case involved unnecessary educational requirements. The Debron lawyers said black people couldn't help it if they were denied educational opportunities so it was fair in the Griggs case for Duke Power to be told to eliminate educational standards that weren't necessary to perform the jobs. However, they continued, Wallace was being paid on a par with the white workers and took on his debts by his own free will and knowing the possible consequences. Therefore, he shouldn't be considered a victim of racism in that regard.

Also, Debron claimed the Griggs case applied to companies with a history of discrimination to overcome. Debron had no such history.

The reason Debron gave for firing people whose wages were too often garnished was that in their experience "the capability, enthusiasm, efficiency, and quality of performance of any employee whose wages are garnished more than once in a twelve month period noticeably decrease on account of his wages being partially withheld for the benefits of his creditors; at the same time, there is an increase in expense, inconvenience, and annoyance..."

The District Court agreed with Debron and ruled against Wallace who appealed. The U.S. Court of Appeals reviewed the case and ruled in favor of Wallace.

The Appeals Court said "there is no evidence in the record that garnishments generally are the result of voluntary conduct undertaken with the knowledge of the consequences, and we are unwilling to take judicial notice that such is the case in face of studies indicating that poverty is the root cause of many garnishments."

Dealing with the problems of employee enthusiasm and company efficiency the Appellant Court said the statements "imply that the company may be able to prove the actual impact of garnishment on employees, but did not provide the District Court with basic supportive facts which establish a business necessity justification as a matter of law ... Debron must at least prove that its garnishment policy fosters employee productivity and that there is not acceptable alternative that will accomplish that goal equally well with a lesser differential impact."

What's it all about ?

There's a new look to your Service Bill from Iowa Power. We've made it easier to read and added more data. And we'll be adding still more information . . . to help you better understand the relationship between energy consumption and cost.

Look over the new bill format. We think you'll find it helpful as you plan and budget your energy expenses.

If you have any questions about the new bill, contact your local Iowa Power office. We'll be glad to answer them.

Meter Readings

The meter reading on the beginning and ending dates of the billing period. The difference is the amount of energy you have consumed during this period.

Service Dates

These are the beginning and ending dates of the current billing period. The number of days in a billing period may vary slightly from month to month, depending on holidays, bad weather, etc.

Rate Code

These figures are your Customer Rate Codes. The codes vary according to type of service used and are explained further on the back of the new bill. For specific information about rates, contact your local Iowa Power office.

Adjustments

This information reflects previous payments received and/or adjustments to previous bills, as well as any late charges which may have been added.

Days In Month

Comparison of number of days in current billing period with corresponding period last year.*

Premise Number
When contacting us, it is helpful to have this number handy, as it helps us find your account and answer your questions quickly.

Top Section of Bill

This section is to be returned with your payment. You may wish to retain and file the other section of the bill for future reference.

Energy Used

The amount of energy used. Electricity is measured in kilowatt hours (KWH), gas in hundreds of cubic feet (CCF).

Cost of Energy Used

The individual figures include "cost adjustments" — the increase or decrease in the price Iowa Power must pay to its suppliers of electric generating fuels and wholesale natural gas, compared with the price for fuels established when the rates were originally set. Also shown are applicable city franchise fees (currently in effect only for customers within the city of Des Moines).

Total Electric/Gas Bill
Identifies the total cost for each individual service.

Total Current Bill

This is the total cost of energy for the current period. If you have no balance remaining from your prior bill, this is the amount you should pay.

Total Amount Now Due
The net amount due now.

Due Date

Last day to pay net total due, and the amount due if paid after due date. (Paying this bill before the due date will save money for you.)

Total Use Comparisons

Comparison of your electric and gas consumption during this billing period with corresponding period last year.*

Temperatures

Comparison of average temperatures during this billing period with the corresponding period one year ago.*
