Ramsey—Impressions Of Blackness In Gymnastics

by Carolyn King

Michelle Ramsey was Des Moines' only black to go to State Meet all three years during her attendance at Hoover High School. Michelle started taking acrobatics at the age of 4½ in a program started by her present coach at the YWCA.

She later took gymnastics at Watson's Dance & Gym, coached by Marv Watson, becoming a member of the Watson Gymnastic Team and a trophy winner in various out of state meets. During her attendance at Hoover, besides the thrilling experience of going to "state", she was nominated for High School All American.

Last year, as a freshman, Michelle attended Grand View College and was a member of the Gymnastic Team coached by Charles Jacobson. At the end of their regular season, Grandview competed in Region VI AIAW Championships held in Ames, Iowa with teams from Iowa, Missouri, Kansas and Minnesota.

As a result, they were also invited to compete in the AIAW Small College National Gymnastics Championships hosted by Washburn University in Topeka Kansas. They competed with 20 other teams from all over the United States such as Nevada, Washington, Idaho, California, Colorado, Georgia, Louisiana, New York, Connecticut, Wisconsin, Minnesota and Grandview College of Iowa.

As a team, they placed Third in Team scoring. On an individual basis, Grandview placed three (3) members of the team in the top 12 places in any event, which gave them the status of "All-American". Michelle finished 9th in the Vaulting event.

Due to several reasons, Grandview College decided not to continue with gymnastics. So, Coach Jacobson accepted the position as Head Coach of Gymnastics at the University of Missouri at Columbia; and Michelle was faced with a decision — to take the opportunity she was now being afforded and go to University of Missouri or stay in Des Moines.

Missouri had not had a Gymnastic team until now — so the seven former Grandview Gymnast are "blazing the trail" — in Gymnastics. Michelle is one of the former Grandview gymnast attending the University of Missouri at Columbia this year.

Attention FHA Homeowners!

HUD Assistant Secretary for Housing, Lawrence B. Simons, said the Department will:

1. Re-evaluate the rejected claims of certain homeowners for repair, or reimbursement of repairs made on structural defects they claim existed when they bought their FHA-insured homes.

2. Reconsider the requests of certain former homeowners who lost their FHA insured homes through foreclosure.

If you feel that HUD improperly denied relief under the Department's single Family Assignment Program or under the 518 (b) and (d) repair claims program, contact Citizens for Community Improvement at 1521 - 6th Ave. or call 282 - 9412 for more information.

Last year, Michelle was a Debutante for the 1st Alpha Kappa Alpha Sorority, Inc. Cotillion Ball held at the Hilton Inn and received some scholarship moneys. She is a member of the Shiloh Baptist Church Combined Choir and the daughter of Mrs. Margo Ramsey and the late John Ramsey.

Rod Rodgers Dancers Perform At Roosevelt

Monday morning at precisely 8 AM, 400 - 500 Roosevelt High students were assembled in the auditorium listening to Vice Principal Betty Hyde's introduction of Rod Rodgers, director and choreographer for the Rod Rodgers Dance Company.

The director explained that his company was formed fifteen years ago, integrated and focusing primarily on Black modern dance. Rodgers reminded the students that dance is a universal form of communication with infinite forms and cultural influences ranging from the Caribbean, Africa, the Orient, to classical ballet of the Western world.

Rod Rodgers invited the students to pay close attention to four examples demonstrated by four members from the company.

Tangents, a skillful illustration of use of oriental technique in the creation of distinctive Rod Rodgers choreography. Precise geometric patterns formed with long slender sticks — a dance smooth as velvet and executed with breath-taking grace.

Creature, the second presentation, was choreographed by Shirley Rushing, a member of the company. Creature is a subtle portrayal from the animal world. Noel Hall, a strong, powerful figure in the dance; flexes his feet ballet style, perches on one leg, evoking an image of a Black swan undulating his supple back and "wings" part of a modern dance influenced by the discipline of classical ballet.

Don't Need No Help, a free-flowing, exuberant modern dance suggesting African influences. A colorful phrase heard among slaves in America best describes Don't Need No Help. 'Coattail poppin' and sassy!

Percussion Suite is a fourth example of modern dance with a cymbal and wrist and ankle bells accompaniment in an oriental tradition. The dance is in sharp contrast to Don't Need No Help. It is a new and exciting experience for people in the western parts of the world.

Rodgers were Tamara Guillibeau, Noel Hall, E. Laura Hausmann and Shirley Rushing. Music

IEWS and REVIEWS

Glad to hear that there is a very good chance that the Good Park swimming pool will be renovated, although the people haven't said when. I hope it is in time for the season of 1980. No doubt people around town were surprised at the amount of intense feeling that the closing of the pool created.

People who almost never expressed any opinion about anything talked about the pool and the decision to close it in none too favorable terms. What most of us feared was that the pool would be closed forever and a new one built away from the park.

I heard of all sorts of confidential propositions to rebuild the thing. But, on the other hand if the offers were so confidential, how come I heard about them? I wonder if the people in power were swayed by the outpouring of feeling in the black community.

Would the people have gone to the polls and registered their displeasure by voting against councilmen who had favored closing the pool? I don't know, but this was one of the few times in recent years that large numbers of black people were on the same thought wave, whether it was known downtown or not.

A new pool would call for a new program and some dedicated workers up there. There is no way the managers Vern Ashford, Frank Robinson and Cecil Brewton could be emulated today because dedicated people in public work are scarce as hen teeth. Today most people work for one thing; the paycheck.

The guys I mentioned worked for dough, but they also worked to improve the black kids who came to swim in the pool. It would be a good guess to say that those three people taught an average of a hundred kids to swim each year, kids who otherwise might have never learned to swim.

Their programs had the community constantly in mind and they were rewarded by the large gathering of spectators who turned out to view their water programs. It may be that a program can be launched from downtown that will draw the kids in the area to the pool. If that happens, other programs will take hold and grow also.

As the pool attendance fell off the interest in other programs declined, and we have to believe it took the closing of the pool to make the people in the area realize how much they appreciated the whole park.

Like I said, I hope the thing is ready to go next summer.

NIGERIA: AN AFRICAN STATE IN TRANSITION

In the period between 1970 and 1974, General Gowon had to maneuver his government delicately and attempt to moderate the many disputes between the army commanders (wanting demobilization), the army (fearing demobilization), the state military governors, large segments of the population seeking the creation of more states, and other popular elements suspicious of the 1973 census. Gowon was a "compromise" leader who also worked diligently to restore the unity of the officer corps and army which was so sharply divided by ethnic fears. Neither his position nor his personality were strong enough to control the military officers of the armed forces in the Eastern Region before the civil war or the military governors of the 12 states he created in 1967. Public corruption flourished in the state governments, and Gowon did little to discourage it. The national economy, devastated by the civil war, fell prey to runaway inflation. In response to widespread strikes by public and private workers to back up their demands for wage increases to offset that inflationary pressure, Gowon yielded quickly, and the wage settlement he granted only magnified the basic problem. When, in October of 1974 he announced his decision to postpone the return to civilian rule indefinitely (due, he said, to the political dissension over the 1973 census), most civilians and military officers were sufficiently convinced of Gowon's incompetence to rule to decide to act. In late July of 1975, junior military officers overthrew Gowon and selected General Murtala Mohammed, a Muslim northerner from an aristocratic family, to become the new head of state. General Mohammed moved rapidly and decisively to deal with the many problems Gowon had neglected to deal with and announced a schedule which called for the return of civilian rule in October of 1979, and that schedule has yet to be modified.

By the time Gowon was overthrown in 1975, important changes had occurred within the armed forces. While the army was led primarily by officers from the southern regions of Nigeria at the time the military took power in 1966, it was now led by officers from the northern part of the country (primarily Hausas and Fulanis). Furthermore, between 1966 and the end of the civil war in 1970, the size of the armed forces grew from 8,500 to 250,000, the largest in sub-Saharan Africa. Distinct constituencies developed within the army, based on conflicts between the various ethnic groups, combat and specialty units, and military and civilian officers (like military governors). Promotional disparities during the wartime period created problems between junior officers who rapidly rose to higher ranks and senior officers in competition for positions and appointments. Many officers from the larger ethnic groups were inclined to favor civilian rule because of the political situation of their group, while many officers from the smaller ethnic groups, often the beneficiaries of rapid promotion and close associates of Gowon, resisted that notion. A small number of military officers served in civilian positions, and, because of their relative independence from the active members of the armed forces, also strongly resisted the return of civilian rule because it would eliminate their jobs. Gowon consistently refused to rotate officers among these essentially civilian governmental positions and, with the degree of corruption which existed in these governments, many felt that civilian rule was necessary to protect the position and reputation of the military within the populace. Other issues also created dissension, including the nature and scope of demobilization (which ethnic groups would gain or lose power and influence thereby), military budget allocations and how they are to be spent, and the role the armed forces should play in the implementation of socioeconomic programs once civilian rule was reestablished. To compound all of this, military officers were given the right to speak out publicly on important issues in 1974, and much of this disunity in the armed forces became reflected in the relationships between the various ethnic groups. One result of this military dissidence was the removal of Gowon from power, and he fled to Great Britain with what was estimated to be between 112 and 320 million dollars he had accumulated over the years in foreign bank accounts.

While the federal government (FMG) performed indecisively and generally poorly under Gowon's leadership, it acted rapidly and decisively under Gowon's successor, General Murtala Mohammed, and, for the first time since independence, Nigerians had a truly popular national leader. Very shortly after he assumed power, he postponed indefinitely the already badly mismanaged upcoming Black

Speakin' Out

"In the future we must become intensive political activists. We must be guided in this direction because we need political strength more desperately than any other group in American society."

Martin Luther King

We have this tendency to direct all our energies to the national campaign i.e., the presidency. More of us vote for the president than for officials in our own locale. I think this is a hangover from the civil rights era when we concentrated so much of our attention on Wash. D.C.

This must change. Our energies can be put to better use locally. The local officials are our direct route to the power source. Why do you think they stagger local elections on the odd numbered years and elect the president on the even years. Why don't we vote for the president at the same time we vote for the Mayor?

There are two reasons for this. Number one is that the power structure does not want the chance of a sweeping, dramatic change to occur. Some members of the old guard must remain to guard against a radical change.

Secondly, the local elections allow the presidential candidates the opportunity to somewhat feel the pulse of the people. If a number of liberal mayors have been ousted they view this as a conservative trend and adjust their rhetoric to this phenomenon and vice versa.

Where was I? Oh yeah the concrete steps. First of all you need concrete, sand, water and a frame for the steps. Then you read the directions on the concrete bag Wait a minute I got my types of concrete steps mixed up. Mixed up did I say? I must still be talking about steps to a house.

I'm straight now. I meant concrete steps toward building a solid political base. Let's take Des Moines and use it as a micro-cosm representative of America.

The church. The church is the strongest institution in the Black community, so it is only logical that we should start there. The Black Ministerial Alliance, Organization of Black Ministers or whatever is the Black version of the Jewish Council of Rabbi's should exhort their congregations to political activity. They should, as a group, sponsor a forum to expose the candidates to the community and vice versa.

Then whatever organizations exist in the Black community should also sponsor forums. Then all groups should meet to discuss the best candidate. Once the best candidate has been chosen there are two things that must be done in order to make the endeavor a success.

First of all is the need for adequate public relations. Money should be spent to promote the candidate. The churches could take up one collection specifically for this purpose.

Secondly, we must work!...Work, work, work, to support the candidate of our choice. All too often groups endorse a candidate but do nothing actively

A Black Look At Politics

William S. Morris

Black America is politically collapsing. So-called black leaders are running away from the chronic illnesses of our inner-city areas, namely rampant unemployment and rising black-on-black crime rates, flocking to issues which have little impact on the day-to-day concerns of most black Americans.

American Middle East Policy and the Palestinian question have gotten more attention in recent weeks than at any other time in history, prompting many observers to speak of a "Crisis of Authority" in America, for blacks and whites; that is, we no longer know in whom to believe. In an age of myth-exploding, or debunking, blacks have, it seems, given up on themselves. Many meetings and gala affairs of once-strong civil rights organizations have degenerated into petty social gatherings, where self-congratulatory speeches are accompanied by shows of the local "who's who".

In-fighting and back-stabbing, embezzlement, and political self-seeking have rendered black America politically fractured, hostile, and disillusioned. This is not to say that in-fighting and social extravaganzas are anything new; they have been around as long as human societies have.

The distinction is that, by the late 1970's, blacks have indeed been "bought off" by the almighty dollar, which has rightly or wrongly replaced the almighty God in our order of priorities. Simply stated, many blacks are becoming more economically comfortable, and no longer really care about the collective fates of their less fortunate brethren.

Any guilt they may feel about the lives of inner-city poor people are eliminated by writing a donation check to the NAACP or National Urban League. While both of the above groups can certainly use the funds for good cause, a more glaring problem has raised its ugly head, one which threatens to tear apart the black body politic.

Basically, the problem is that as more blacks move into middle-class and even upper-class social stratum, they get an odd notion that they alone (as a group) can act as spokesmen (and spokeswomen) for all blacks. While this was once practical during the 1950's and 60's, when blacks were not so politically and socially fragmented, by the late 1970's it has become ridiculous, and potentially dangerous.

Social cliques and occupational associations of black professionals and white collar employees, male and female, have resulted in isolation and insulation from the problems of poor people, problems which "uppity nigras" find increasingly difficult to understand, no matter how much hot air is offered to the contrary.

Poor blacks often resent the condescending attitudes of middle-class blacks, who are many times unfairly accused of "playing the (Uncle) 'Tom' role".

Poverty has been a very basic part of being black in America since 1650. Perhaps "moving up" financially does require losing some of this traditional "blackness." Maybe a new generation blackness is emerging, one which provides for money and success. And along with this new attitude comes an inability to sacrifice for the common good: we look out only for ourselves.

I am truly sorry to have been so long-winded this week, but I fear black America has compromised itself and lived out Martin Luther King, Jr.'s, greatest fear: we have sold our souls to the devil in exchange for the "mean green."

The question remains, what, if anything, can be done about it?

to support that candidate. Leaflets must be distributed, phone campaigns carried out, etc.

The importance of working cannot be over-emphasized. Not only does hard work increase the candidate's chances of winning but it impresses upon candidates in future elections the need for the Black community's support.

Many people have criticized me for running in elections where I knew I had no chance of winning. I think this should be done as often as possible in elections where a Black candidate cannot win. Just because we can't win doesn't mean that issues affecting us should not be brought to the surface.

I advocate a policy of running Black "shadow" candidates for office for a variety of reasons. As a matter of fact I believe the black community should create a "shadow" government but that's a little deep for right now.

"Shadow" candidates could raise issues pertaining to the Black community. "Shadow" candidates can organize the Black vote and "Shadow" candidates can give many Black people a reason to vote. Those who sometimes correctly state "there ain't nobody to vote for" would have someone to vote for. In short, "Shadow" candidates allow us to sharpen our

Forgotten Man

Dear Editor:

I am writing in desperation my name is Edward and I am presently confined. I am so lonely for some one just to write to me. I am afraid I have become the forgotten man. I would gladly pay for an add but I don't have any money.

I only receive $12 dollars a month and my personal hygiene costs me more than that. I am so lonely and this is my only means I know of to just get a friend. Thank you for your time and whatever effort put forth in my behalf. Thankful and Sincerely,

Needs correspondence

Dear Editor:

I am presently incarcerated at the Southern Ohio Correctional Facility in Lucasville, Ohio. In this predicament, I am very lonely without any correspondence or friends. At my tender age of manhood it is very painful to be without companionship.

I am a young Black man who's in urgent need of correspondence from anyone who can relate to loneliness, struggles and the necessity for friendship. I will answer all letters received in the best of faith and with sincerity. My Name and address is: Willie Johnson No. 145 - 438, P.O. Box 45699, L - 2 - 70, Lucasville, Ohio 45699.

CAB Board

Dear Kalonji.

I am responding to your September 13, "Speakn' Out". There were a couple of statements in your article that need some clarification and I would like to address myself to those allegations.

"... do you believe as has been alleged by some, that the neighborhood priority board system has been designed to dilute the power of the Black Communities (by making it necessary for them to submit decisions affecting the Black community to the predominantly white Citizens Advisory Board (CAB) thereby denying them the autonomy, hence power to make decisions affecting the Black Community?"

The board is called the Central Advisory Board and it is made up of 33 members. There are six prime service areas (PSA's) Pioneer - Columbus, Four Mile, Southeast, Logan, Woodland - Willkie, and Model City. Each PSA has three representatives to the CAB. Thus, there are 9 blacks (3 from Logan, 3 from Woodland - Willkie, and 3 from Model City); and 9 whites (3 from Pioneer - Columbus, 3 from Four Mile and 3 from Southeast).

There are 3 minority persons representing the public sector and 1 representing the private sector. This makes a total of 21 whites on the board and 12 black. The Chairman of the Central Advisory Board and the Vice Chairman are black.

Perhaps when you say, 21 white and 12 black that seems to be almost a two for one ratio, however, the blacks on the Board representing their prime service area are very concerned with the needs of the black community and with the needs of all individuals.

They voice their opinions very strongly and stand up for what they feel is right. The CAB respects the opinion of all members. I think the responsibility goes further than the CAB when you begin to look at the ultimate outcome.

The CAB presents recommendations to the City Council regarding community development funds after having made thorough examination of the presentations. Long hours of debate precede decisions and many times trips before the City Council are required. Another issue the CAB has kept before the City Council is the issue of Good Park Pool.

The process by which the community development funds are disbursed is a democratic process and one in which each individual is given a chance to be heard and to express his or her opinion. The final recommendations of the CAB go to the City Council for the ultimate decision.

There are times City Council agrees with the recommendations of the CAB and other times when they do not. One such time for example, was the Urban Broadcasting Company. The CAB after hearing presentations and having been informed by Dr. Charles Knox himself, voted to fund the proposed radio station in the amount of $40,000.

It was at the City

Council level that the project was defeated and this was upon recommendation from the City Manager who in his "blue" letter stated that the community development funds were not for this type of private funding.

There are rules and regulations attached to the dispersing of the community development funds and this particular item falls outside of the boundaries in which entities can be funded. In a recent study, the city of Des Moines was commended for its citizen participation process as relates to HUD and CDBG funds.

Support Tom Mann

Dear Editor

This letter is addressed to all my Brothers and Sisters in Des Moines, but more specifically to the Black residents of the 31st Senatorial District where Tom Mann is the Democratic candidate. I am urging everyone in this district to vote on Tuesday, November 6 for Tom Mann for State Senator.

Tom is a young, articulate and well-qualified Black man who worked hard for the Democratic nomination, and who is working hard for your support. In recent door-to-door campaigning with him, I have witnessed how he has taken the campaign literally "to the people"

This aspect of his campaign is particularly important because it shows first of all his interest in the people and their concerns, and it shows us just how hard he is willing to work for us.

As a Black man, Tom's election as State Senator offers us a unique opportunity to participate in the making of history. Never in the history of Iowa have we had a Black state senator. We have that opportunity ... and on November 6 we ought to turn out in huge numbers like never before to elect Tom Mann as our first Black State Senator.

As you know, Tom is on leave from his position as Director of the Iowa Civil Rights Commission. He came to this position after serving as an assistant attorney general. Tom was born on a farm in Tennessee, graduated from Tennessee State University in 1970, and received his law degree from the University of Iowa in 1974. When he received his appointment as Director of the Civil Rights Commission, he was the youngest person ever to hold that post.

All too often I am told that Black people in Des Moines have no political clout, and our vote is either taken for granted or is written off as not necessary for a candidate to win. I cannot urge you more strongly to put an end to that lie. But if we are to convince people that Black people in Des Moines are capable of directing our own destinies, we must not be apathetic. We must use the strength and power of the ballot in this election and in all elections.

If you are not currently registered to vote, do so now. If you have any questions, call 255-5338, the Committee to Elect Tom Mann, and we will be glad to assist you.

John A. "Tony" Williams

political sword.

This is not to say we shouldn't run legitimate candidates. Quite the contrary. "Shadow" candidates and legitimate candidates are complementary. As a matter of fact it would be the "Shadow's" job to get support for legitimate candidates.

One of the facts that I point to with pride is that people — some old, that had never voted before in their life, cast their first ballot for Kalonji in my bid for city council in 1977.

I have been thinking about running for president in 1984, to raise Black issues nationally. I don't know how feasible this is. I would need a lot of support from the home folk, but I do know that I got the heart and I'm just "crazy" enough to do it and just sane enough to be effective.

I know that I have spaced out somewhat on this article. Please forgive me. I have written so many letters as of late to people trying to make something, anything of significance happen in this election, that my mind is deluged in political theory. I sincerely hope the message of political action rang clear.

Do something. Vote! Urge others to vote. Love.

Young Begins Plumbing Company

Last June Larry Young took a giant step. He opened his own Plumbing Company. After serving a four year apprenticeship and working as a journeyman plumber he is raking a minimum salary of $25,000 per year to be an entrepreneur who might end up with little or nothing.

However, we think it is commendable that Larry is doing this and hope that the support he gets from the community will determine that it was the right move for him to make.

Lawrence (Larry) W. Young is a Master Journeyman Plumber. He is 26 years old, born June 3, 1953, lived in Des Moines since 1968, attended Irving Junior High and graduated from Tech High School. Mr. Lyle Smithson of Tech talked Larry into trying to become a plumber. He quit a good job in October, 1973 to become an apprentice. In Larry's own words, "I thought being a plumber was dumb, especially the thought of playing in someone else's toilet." Now he is glad he went ahead with it.

Larry is married, his wife's name is Vivian, he has a four year old son Lawrence (Cubby) and a two year old daughter named Brandie. His business is being operated out of his home at 1156 Ascension at the present time as an economy measure.

Larry started his business on $1,400.00 which was immediately absorbed by insurance bonds. He has to take money out of his household account to get started. Now he is surviving from what profit there is from job to job. He tried to get a loan from S.B.A., but became very discouraged with S.B.A.'s thinking and loan procedures. His own bank told him he had too many bills to borrow from them — so he put everything he had on the line and if he doesn't succeed in this business everything he has will be gone.

Larry says, "I believe in giving my customers a fair price and a very good finished product. Satisfaction is guaranteed." People on Social Security will be given a 10% discount on labor. He is available 24 hours a day in case of emergency.

Shelley Douglass To Lecture At ISU

Shelley Douglass, activist, feminist and author will lecture at Iowa State University, Monday, Oct. 8. Her talk, "Resisting Trident," will be at 8 p.m. in the Gallery of Memorial Union.

Douglass is a staff member at the Ground Zero Center for Nonviolent Action in Poulsbo, Wash. She is currently writing a book about the interrelationship between feminism and nonviolence.

In the 1960's, Douglass participated in the Selma to Montgomery march, the Milwaukee housing integration marches and the Milwaukee school strike. She was active in the movement against the war in Vietnam and took part in the Hickam campaign against the air war in Insochina in 1972.

She has been active in communities concerned with social change for the last 13 years.

Douglass has conducted workshops on nonviolence, feminism and other areas of social change.

She earned a degree from the University of Wisconsin in U.S. social history and has done graduate work in theology at the Vancouver School of Theology.

Former Iowan Visits Hometown

Mrs. Norma Jean Williams, a former Iowan, who now resides in Bloomington, Minnesota, returned to Des Moines to visit with her daughter, Tracy Lynn Williams and father, Mr. Wallace O'Neal Jackman. Norma is the Office Manager/Columnist for the Minneapolis Spokesman/St. Paul Recorder Newspapers.

Norma Jean Williams began her career with the Minneapolis Spokesman and St. Paul Recorder Newspapers six years ago working and training with the late Cecil E. Newman, founder of the two oldest minority newspapers in Minnesota. By 1977, she was office manager and created the Bachelor and Bachelorette in Minnesota column.

In her weekly column, she features Minnesotans in different occupations and professions. Each week for the past year she has hosted a noon radio show interviewing guests for KFAI, 90.3 FM and most recently she joined the staff of KMOJ-FM, 89.7

for an evening talk show keeping her listeners informed on current issues and coming events.

On June 24, 1978, Norma produced and directed the first 1977-78 Bachelors and Bachelorettes in Minnesota presentation and has recently successfully completed her second show, 1978-79. During her visit she has been a guest of Mrs. Beverly Wallace; attended one of her old school mate's wedding, Angie Wilcots; Ms. Marsha Collier; Mr. and

On Tuesday September 18, 1979, Logan/CCI residents went before the Board of MTA with a request for rerouting bus service on DeWolf St. through Cleveland Ave. to East 14th St.

They made a presentation which included a map of the Logan neighborhood to underline their contention that the neighborhood has limited transportation service. The Board authorized Mr. Steve Spade MTA route manager, to reconsider Logan's proposal at the next staff planning and financial budget meeting.

Logan residents also requested shelters on E. 17th St. Ct. & Cleveland, E. 14th St. & Cleveland and E. 17th St. Ct. & University. The Board will consider the proposals made by Logan/CCI residents on shelters in January, 1980.

Steve Spade agreed to come out to the Logan neighborhood meeting in order to inform residents on the progress of the Logan proposal for routes and shelters.

Education Information

The Mid - City Public Library at 1305 University Avenue is initiating a new community service for those interested in continuing their education.

The Education Information Center (EIC) will serve as a link between the potential student and the learning resources available in South Central Iowa. A community - based information center, the EIC is directed at assisting "non-traditional learners" — that is, older returning or parttime students.

Information available at the Mid - City EIC will cover such areas as high school completion, college entrance procedures, part - time and correspondence study, continuing education units and professional advancement. The emphasis is on materials for those persons interested in completing their high school education or in continuing on to further courses at the post - secondary level.

Librarian Linda Roberts will be available to help answer questions about classes, programs, and procedures. In addition, a looseleaf handbook entitled "Educational Opportunities in South Central Iowa" is being developed and will be available to library users. This informational service is free and can be obtained by stopping in or calling Roberts at 283 - 4271.

Edna Griffin

I've been talking to myself this past week about trusting myself to remember important matters, I think impossible to forget. I know better but failed to do better by including the item among the list of details to be in the news story about the Gateway sponsored parade.

Tom Mann went by in the parade. My really big 'blooper' was the statement, Elaine Szymoniak was the only political candidate participating in the neighborhood event. Edna Griffin got a somewhat frosty telephone call.

Thomas Mann is running for the Iowa Senate. He has both the support of the resigning senator and the Democratic Party. That doesn't mean he's got it made. Here's the problem as stated in Tom's campaign material.

Senate District 31, which includes north central Des Moines, Saylorville and Ankeny, is as diverse as the state of Iowa. It includes urban, rural and suburban neighborhoods. It is made up of House Districts 61, represented by Richard Byerly of Ankeny, and 62, represented by Norman Jesse of Des Moines.

Although the district is regarded by some as a 'safe' Democratic seat, Tom does not have the advantages of incumbency, high political visibility nor personal wealth. Unfortunately, past elections have indicated that Democratic voters traditionally do not turn out in large numbers for special or off-year elections.

Also, it is already clear that Tom's opponent and the Republican party are on the attack and planning a tough campaign for the seat to increase their

Birthday Fete For Williams and Wilson

Robert Wilson and Felix Williams were honored with a "surprise" champagne breakfast and bar-b-que in celebration of their birthdays. This elaborate cookout was held at Easter Lake where prior reservations for the shelter house located at "Lookout Point" provided a beautiful scenic view for the special occasion.

Chef - the - day was Roderick Becton who prepared breakfast which included a "champagne toast" to Felix and Robert which expressed deep admiration and esteem.

Hot dogs, etc. were grilled for lunch; bar-b-que ribs served for dinner. Volleyball, fishing, yard darts, dancing and card games were enjoyed.

Robert and Felix received gifts and were presented a birthday cake designed especially for the celebration. Those who shared this special occasion were: Elaine Williams, Gloria Burrell, Rhoba Turner, Ann Landry, Ernie Reid, Rod and Annette Becton, Eddie and Barbara Robinson, Bill and Janice Ridley, G. W. and Josie Williamson, Walt and Ruth Humphrey.

Burrell promotion

Donald E. Burrell, son of Mr. and Mrs. Wesley O. Burrell of 804 25th St. has recently been promoted to the position of Associate Agency Director with Supreme Life Insurance Co. of America.

Mr. Burrell, former resident of Des Moines, started here in the insurance business in 1968 and moved away with his first promotion in 1970.

Mr. Burrell will be residing in the Chicago area where he will be working out of the Home Office in Chicago, Ill.

He has a daughter, Donise Burrell, who is a junior at Drake University.

He wishes to thank the many relations, friends and associates that helped his start in the insurance business in the Des Moines area.

Donald Burrell

existing majority in the Iowa Senate. End of quotation from campaign material.

I've been thinking about Tom's campaign in addition to talking to myself. I've lived in this city, believe it or not, a little over 32 years. These are some of my mutterings while letting the cats in and out of the house.

Why can't we who are Colored / Negro / Black unite long enough to invite, for example, Mexican - Americans, Chicanos, and others from all walks of life to join us in support of Tom Mann? How much is Omega Psi Phi contributing to the campaign as an example to other fraternities? Why can't Omega Psi Phi have a fund - raising shindig?

Who are the people creating opportunities for Tom to speak throughout Senate District 31? Who is willing to do some of the speaking? Arrangements of opportunities on TV — even radio to debate Tom's opponent might be arranged. There are a few ready possibilities for interviews. Do not allow the Republicans to carry on a quiet, secret campaign.

There is a need for Tom in the Iowa Senate to keep not only his district (if elected) informed but all who need to keep track of what's happening in regard to energy, employment, funding of special programs for unemployed youth, housing 'wheeling and dealing' as well as funds for child care and senior citizens. We need to remember Republicans have the cutting of taxes as a number one priority regardless of who gets hurt.

Underneath my dissatisfaction with Black lethargy, is a belief in the possibility that Tom Mann can win if our people get out there and help make it happen. The Griffins are willing to give financial support. I will contact a few whom I know live in District 31 and explore the possibilities of speaking engagements, if needed.

We will support whatever effort is made to raise funds in the Black community. It might even be possible to help with voter registration or chauffeuring to the polls.

I sincerely hope that my feeling that too many are waiting for the 'white folks' to do it all, is wrong. It is not at all likely there will be a better opportunity to elect a Black man or woman to the Iowa Senate in the future.

ST. PAUL A.M.E. CHURCH

St. Paul A.M.E. Church under the leadership of Rev. Lewis E. Grady, Jr. is moving very positively toward the future.

The pastor wishes to thank the congregation for their cooperation in reorganizing the church for the new conference year.

Our church choir is scheduled to sing at the Living History Farm during the visitation of Pope John Paul II.

The Pastor plans to attend the 4th District planning session in Cassopolis, Mich. on Sat. Oct. 6, 1979.

Our second church conference will be held Sunday immediately following the morning service.

A teenage and young adult Bible Class will be held each Wednesday at 7:30 P.M. in the main Sanctuary. Our regular Wednesday evening Bible Class will continue as usual.

Plans are being made for our installation service on Sunday October 21, at 7:30 P.M.

Let us not forget that next Sunday is World-wide Communion Sunday and also our special dedication day.

Let us not forget our sick and shut-ins. St. Paul A.M.E. Church wishes to welcome Pope John Paul II to the City of Des Moines. We stand ready and willing to be of assistance.

Mr. Everett A. Mays, Director of Public Relation;

Rev. Lewis E. Grady, Jr., Pastor; Rev. Felix E. Dickerson, Assistant and Sister Barbara Barbour, Licentiate Minister.

NEW FRIENDSHIP CHURCH OF GOD IN CHRIST

The New Friendship COGIC is yet praising God from whom all blessings flow. We just consummated a glorious region No. 3 Mission Conference which took place at New Friendship. The daily workshops were very inspiring and informative and the nitely service was enjoyed by all in attendance. The highlight of the conference was the message given by our International President of Missions, Elder C. L. Moody of Evanston, Illinois on Friday Nite. We have delegates from Minnesota and North Dakota and of course Iowa.

On Sunday morning the message was brought by Sis. C. McQuerry; and truly the Lord did come in and bless our souls; music was rendered by the Youth Choir.

On Sunday nite the Old Ship of Zion was presented in behalf of the Building Fund. We want to thank all who participated and especially Ms. McCeil Clinton and her daughter Ms. Carolyn King for their untimely efforts in helping to bring the old ship.

On Tuesday evening is our Bible Study, please come out and join us. This is a weekly structured Bible discussion that can be enjoyed by all.

Beginning Wednesday, is our State Women's Convention of the Iowa Jurisd. COGIC which will take place at E. 17th & University, Mo. R. Robinson is State Supervisor of Women's Dept.

On Sunday, September 30, Pastor Daye will be preaching and we expect the spirit of the Lord to come in and bless our souls.

We are sincerely praying for our Sick and shut in which include Mo L. Jenkins, Mo. J. Broadus and Mo. L. Brown.

On Sunday afternoon, Sept. 30 at 3:30 PM,

Pastor Daye and the Youth choir will be in service with the Mt. Olive Baptist Church. Please meet us there.

On Sunday afternoon, October 7, 1979 at 4 PM, a musical will be presented by Mo. E. Alexander in behalf of the Pastor's anniv. Come and enjoy the Lord with us.

SHILOH BAPTIST CHURCH

This Sunday, September 30, 1979, Rev. B. Jamison will preach and the Children's Choir will sing.

Last Sunday Rev. Jamison brought us a very fine message taken from the 4th Chapter of St. Matthews; 4-11 verses. His topic, "Temptations of Jesus". The Prayer Service on Wednesday evening at 7:30 p.m. to 8:30 p.m. Bible Study will follow at 7:30 p.m. to 8:30 p.m.

The Nursery Committee will meet on Saturday, September 29, at 11:00 a.m. Also the Nursery will be open on Sunday mornings for those parents who want to leave their babies to pre-school age children. Sis. Lois Hunt, chairperson.

The Gospel Choir will rehearse on Friday evening at 7:30 p.m. All members please be present we are getting ready for our engagement in Ottumwa, Iowa on Sunday, October 14, 1979.

The Combined Choir will rehearse on Thursday evening, September 27, at 7:30 p.m.

Next Sunday afternoon at 3:30 p.m., the Rev. H.

I. Thomas and Choir will be the guest of the Mission and the Matrons.

FROM THE PASTOR:

But He answered, and said, it is written, man shall not live by bread alone, but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God. St. Matthew, 5th chapter: 4th verse.

ST. JOHN BAPTIST CHURCH

Fraternal Day will be Sunday, September 30, at 11:00 a.m. Several of the black lodges of the city will be guests at the morning service.

Rev. Phil Tindrell will deliver the sermon and music will be provided by the combined choirs of St. John church. Mrs. Ida London will be serving as program chairman. The public is cordially invited to attend this service.

PRAYER OF FAITH CHURCH OF GOD IN CHRIST

The Lord Blessed us to be in another great and Dynamic Meeting, which was the 2nd Regional Home and Foreign Missions Conferences on September 20, 1979 thru September 22, 1979. The meeting was held at New Friendship Church of God in Christ.

All who attended this meeting was greatly blessed. Workshop was held during the day sessions. Evening session was regular service. Those who were unable to attend this Home and Foreign Meeting certainly missed a treat.

We cordially invite you to attend our services here at Prayer of Faith Church of God in Christ.

Pastor, Elder Eddie Davis.

MANAGING YOUR MONEY

Do-It-Yourself Moving

Planning to move? You can save money by doing it yourself and renting a van or truck to haul household goods to your new home or apartment, say experts with the Budget Rent a Car truck division.

To select the right van or truck for your move, Budget says, begin packing well in advance to get an idea of the cargo space your household goods will fill. Number and list the cartons you pack. Calculate the cubic footage that each carton contains by multiplying the length times the width times the depth. List each cubic footage total next to the carton's measurement, then add all totals to find out how much space your cartons will take.

Next, measure furniture, household appliances and mattresses and add the cubic footage total to the cartons. Shapes and sizes of household goods also will dictate the size of vehicle you will have to rent. (A 10-foot couch will not fit into an eight-foot cargo space.)

Budget recommends getting a total cubic footage for all household goods and adding 20 percent to the figure. Boxes and furniture do not always fit neatly into a cargo area. Rent a van or truck that most closely fits the total cubic-foot figure and shape that you have calculated. Common cargo hold sizes ranging from 650 to 1200 cubic feet, with flat bed lengths ranging from 12 to 20 feet.

The Predictable Power Bill

Now with Budget Billing, your Iowa Power bill can be the same amount each month — an average based on your energy costs for the entire year. With a predictable power bill, your monthly budget planning can be a lot easier.

How Does Budget Billing Work?

To figure your Budget Billing amount, Iowa Power will carefully calculate your electric and/or gas expenses for the coming year, taking into account your past usage, the effects of weather, projected rate increases and other factors that determine the size of your bill. This total amount is then divided into 12 equal payments — your monthly Budget Billing amount.

At least once each year, we'll compare your actual use to your Budget Billing amount. If you've paid more than necessary, we'll credit your next 12 bills. If you've paid too little — based on actual use — the additional charge will also be spread out over the next 12 bills.

Make It Even Simpler With Ener-Chek

Budget Billing customers can also sign up for Ener-Chek. Under this plan, you authorize your bank to pay your monthly Budget Billing amount automatically from your regular checking account. Your monthly bank statement will then include an Ener-Chek receipt showing the amount deducted from your account and information related to energy use.

Choose Your Own Billing Date

If you choose Budget Billing (with or without Ener-Chek) you may request Iowa Power to bill you on a specific date each month — payday, for instance, or the day your social security check arrives.

Find Out More Today!

You can find out what your Budget Billing amount would be by calling Iowa Power or stopping in at your local office. And if you decide you want Budget Billing, we can arrange to put you on the program right away.

Iowa Power loans available for heating conversions

A program to assist residential customers in converting heating systems to electric heat pumps or natural gas has been announced by Iowa Power.

Jim Lyon, Executive Vice President, said this week the new plan makes available loans of up to $1,800 for residential customers who convert their heating system from a fuel not sold by Iowa Power to the electric heat pump or a natural gas furnace.

Lyon said the program should serve a dual purpose. "We hope to make it easier for those in older homes to convert their heating system to a cheaper, more efficient fuel and at the same time improve our own service efficiency."

He added that Iowa Power already provides natural gas and electric service to many of the homes which currently use other fuels for heating.

Details of the loan plan call for repayment in 36 months at nine percent annual interest. For example, if the amount financed is $1,800, the total charge over 36 months would be $2,060.62, or $57.24 per month. These monthly installments are added to the service bill.

Lyon noted that increased supplies of natural gas and conservation have combined to further enhance the natural gas outlook. "We do not anticipate any difficulties in meeting the heating needs of our customers this winter and in the future," he said. "Natural gas for residential users will be available."

In a related matter, Iowa Power announced that it has raised the maximum loan for re-insulation to $700. The maximum had been $500 since the inception of the re-insulation financing plan in 1973. The new rate also applies to house re-wiring.

It's now official. Figures released by the Energy Accounting Department indicate the Company's new all-time record electric peak demand is 1,119 megawatts. That figure was reached during the late afternoon hours Tuesday, August 7, breaking the record peak demand of 1,085 megawatts set one day earlier.

Both figures easily surpassed the previous record peak demand of 1,064 megawatts set in July of 1977 and equaled in September of last year. Iowa Power's projected peak for 1979 was 1,123 megawatts.

Affirmative Action

The miniscule rate of minority hiring by public employers — state and local governments and the like — is a national scandal. The Southern Regional Council has produced detailed studies outlinging this lamentable situation as it concerns the South — but, per usual, public employers “up North” are not much better.

The following consists of a number of questions and answers that you or your organization should pose in order to get information and action on affirmative action. Keep in mind that public employers are more sensitive to community pressure than private employers, since our tax dollars pay their salaries and a “representative government’s” racial composition should be “representative” of the public at large. Moreover, the facts on minority hiring in the public sector are more readily available than in the private sector, where such data is accorded the confidentiality of CIA secrets or exclusive patents. In any event, note carefully the following:

1. Is Affirmative Action Required Under Law?

Guidelines for the State and Local Fiscal Assistance Act (the General Revenue Sharing Act) and the Intergovernmental Personnel Act require affirmative action.

Further, public employers who have not moved to correct the effects of past discrimination and to prevent future discrimination via affirmative action are subject to findings of illegal discrimination under Title VII of the 1964 Civil Rights Act (as amended).

Moreover, Executive Order 11246 requires most federal contractors to adopt AA plans (those who work for private employees should especially note this). The requirement affects contracting policies of numerous state and local governments but not personnel policies.

2. Is the AA plan available to anyone who wishes a copy?

The plan should be made available to any employer or member of the public who requests it.

3. What should I look for in the plan so I won't be fooled by the verbiage and numbers?

First, make sure there is an analysis of the possible lack of minorities hired (in the jargon, “under-utilization”).

Make sure that the so-called “relevant job market” is not drawn in such a way as to make the public employer’s record appear better than it actually is. For example, if the “relevant job market” is considered the metropolitan area rather than the city (where, in most instances, Blacks are concentrated), then the employer can more easily justify a lack of Black employees. For example, if the Atlanta Police Department’s “relevant job market” is the city alone, with its high proportion of Blacks, then it will be required to have a higher percentage and number of Black employees than if the “relevant job market” were the greater metropolitan area (with its high proportion of whites).

4. Should I examine recruitment, interviewing, testing, ranking, certification, etc. which directly affects hiring, promotion, dismissals, etc. of Blacks?

We all know that there are more sophisticated barriers to the hiring of Blacks besides abject, unrestrained racism. Employers frequently use testing and the other aforementioned categories to bar Blacks. Make sure that the employers’ policies comport at least with the “Uniform Guidelines on Employee Selection Procedures” issued by the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission (headed by Eleanor Holmes Norton) and other federal agencies in August 1978.

5. What steps are being taken to implement the plan?

Is the plan being administered by someone with the authority, time and staff to make it work? Have AA responsibilities been communicated to all persons in managerial positions? Has the plan been publicized? Does the plan require all those who contract with the city to conduct affirmative action? These are just a few of the questions that need to be answered in order to determine the plan’s effectiveness.

The above five points only scratch the surface but do provide some idea of what needs to be done. The Southern Regional Council has in print a detailed check-list similar to the above, which will help in monitoring your government’s role in affirmative action. They can be reached at: 75 Marietta St. in Atlanta or you can write us (AACC) at 126 W. 119 St., New York City 10026.

TAKE TWO YEARS. FOR YOURSELF.

If you’re a recent high school graduate, chances are you’re thinking about your future.

Should you try to get a job?

Should you go to college?

Maybe you just don’t know right now.

Maybe you need some time.

Maybe you should take two years for yourself—with the Army.

As a high school graduate, you can take advantage of the Army’s Two Year Enlistment Option.

You’ll get a chance to soldier in Europe and do some growing up. Plus you’ll meet new friends. Learn new skills. Earn good pay. And be eligible to participate in the Veterans’ Educational Assistance Program (VEAP).

You’ll also have a better idea of what you want for yourself in the future. Because the future is still two years away when you take two years for yourself with the United States Army.

Congressional Black Caucus Reports to the People

"Balancing the Budget on the Backs of Blacks and Other Minorities"

By Rep. Louis Stokes

During his presidential campaign, Jimmy Carter pledged to balance the federal budget by fiscal year 1980. Since the 1976 campaign, a greater push for a balanced budget and "fiscal restraint" has been provided by the Proposition 13-spawned "tax revolt."

Elected officials have responded to this mood of fiscal conservatism by looking for ways to cut government spending. Although it is unlikely that the federal budget will be balanced in 1980, there will be a tremendous amount of political pressure to balance the budget in 1981.

The issue is not whether to balance the budget. There is near general agreement that the federal budget should be balanced. In fact, the landmark Humphrey-Hawkins Act had a balanced budget as one of its objectives.

The issue is how much it will cost this country to balance the budget if spending policies are not changed. For blacks, the elderly, the disadvantaged and other minorities, the real issue is what will be the sacrifices for a balanced budget.

On July 20, 1979, as Chairman of the Budget Committee Task Force on Human and Community Resources, I held a hearing on the "Long Term Implications of Current Budget Trends on Employment, Minority Business and Education."

Two of the witnesses, Dr. Benjamin Hooks, executive director of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People (NAACP), and Dr. M. Harvey Brenner, professor at Johns Hopkins University, raised some new issues about how the current economic situation and prospective budget trends will affect human resources.

Combining extensive experience in national affairs and relatively new mathematical models, both men provided me and my colleagues on the Task Force with new data and crucial facts about the actual cost of a balanced budget.

Dr. Hooks testified that if congressional leaders stick to current policies, the unemployment level would rise from the current level of 5.7 percent to over 8 percent by 1980. Realizing that black males are already unemployed at 2½ times their white counterparts, any rise in unemployment would be particularly devastating within the black community.

Dr. Brenner presented a new statistical method of evaluating changes in social pathologies that would result from a balanced budget. Social pathologies are social phenomena such as increased rates of some diseases, incarceration, homicide and suicide.

Based on data gathered between 1940 and 1973 by the Joint Economic Committee, Dr. Brenner found that an unemployment increase of one percent would result in a 4.1 percent increase in suicides, 3.4 percent rise in mental hospital admissions, 4 percent increase in incarcerations, 5.7 percent rise in the homicide rate, 1.9 percent increase in cirrhosis of the liver and 1.9 percent rise in cardiovascular disease.

During 1970, there was a 1.4 percent increase in the unemployment rate. During that same year, there was an increase of 1,540 persons who committed suicide, a rise of 5,000 admissions in state and mental hospitals, 47,000 prison admissions and 1,740 cases of homicide. The mortality rate for 1970 increased by 51,570.

Proceeding one step further in this analysis, transposing these statistics into dollars, this government spent as a result of higher unemployment, $63 million for suicides, $82 million for mental health care, $210 million for the penal system, $434 million for homicides and $1.3 billion for the treatment of cardiovascular disease. The total mortality costs as a result of unemployment was $6.6 billion.

These figures constitute a conservative estimate of the costs this country has had to make as a result of only minimal shifts in the unemployment level. With a shift from 5.7 to 8 percent unemployment within the total population, the costs would be proportionately higher.

For population segments, like minorities, who are already disproportionately represented within the unemployment figures, the costs could be substantial. Furthermore, these statistics do not measure the damage to society as a whole.

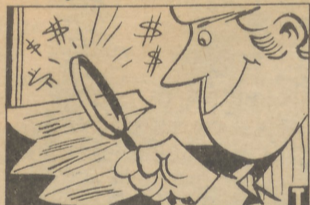

A balanced budget in 1980 or 1981 will certainly not be without heavy social and economic costs. These costs must be measured and evaluated before economic decisions are made. The American people should be apprised of all the pluses and minuses of a balanced budget.

In old China, a key was given to an only son to lock him into life.

INTS FOR HOMEOWNERS

Are you getting all you should from your insurance? If you have possessions such as jewelry, works of art, or a stamp collection, you may want to insure them separately. Protection on these items is normally restricted by the standard homeowners policy. The amount of coverage is usually limited.

For example, in the standard homeowners policy there is a $500 theft limitation on furs, jewelry and watches, a figure that is easily exceeded today. And, under the standard policy, coverage applies only when a loss is caused by one of the perils listed in the policy. Coverage for the items separately insured is normally "all risk." While there are a few restrictions (like wear and tear, deterioration, etc.) the coverage provided is much broader.

With increasing inflation comes the need to review and, where necessary, update the coverage you now have on your home. This is particularly true, says the Colonial Penn Insurance Co., of homeowners 50 or older who purchased their homes 15 to 20 years ago. Unless your insurance protection has kept pace with increasing construction costs, you may find yourself seriously underinsured. If you shop around, you may find that updating your coverage will cost no more than you're now paying—and in some cases, the cost may even be less.

If your personal belongings are stolen from your car, most standard policies will cover you only if the thief leaves visible signs of forced entry. However, with theft extension, coverage is provided regardless of signs of forced entry. Some companies include this coverage automatically.

Weatherization Training For Under-Unemployed

Two midwestern utilities and several public agencies have combined efforts in a unique job training program designed to help reduce residential energy use in central Iowa as well as develop the job skills of some under employed and unemployed Iowans.

Fourteen men and women just completed seven weeks of instruction in how to inspect for energy leaks and correct conditions causing the leaks. The program was coordinated by the

Central Iowa Regional Association of Local Governments

(CIRALG), the prime sponsor in central Iowa for the Comprehensive Employment and Training Act (CETA).

Northern Natural Gas Company, Omaha, a wholesale natural gas supplier to the upper midwest, recruited an experienced instructor and paid his salary. Iowa Power, Des Moines, paid for the training facility, located at 424 10th Street. In addition, representatives of both companies helped determine the kind of skills and type of training needed.

The CETA trainees were recruited by the Red Rock Community Action agency and the Gateway Opportunity Center, both located in Des Moines. They are now qualified to work with private firms doing weatherization or are eligible for positions in CETA Public Service Employment (PSE) weatherization projects underway at the Red Rock and Gateway agencies.

The PSE projects are aimed at making the homes of low-income elderly energy efficient. The Red Rock project will cover the counties of Boone, Jasper, Marion, Story, Warren and Polk, excluding Des Moines. The Gateway project will serve Des Moines proper.

Homes insulated and otherwise weatherized federal programs made have been selected from weatherization applications submitted materials, but not labor, late last year when available.

Free Screening Clinics

Free Well Elderly Screening Clinics are being held at various sites throughout the city. A physical assessment is given by a Public Health Nurse to anyone 60 years and older.

Our New Day Begun

Blacks and U.S. Foreign Policy

As the debate continues over the resignation of Andrew Young as U.S. Chief Representative to the U.N., it is well that black Americans consider ever more seriously the challenge that has been thrown at them concerning their rightful involvement in the development and conduct of American foreign policy.

What Mr. Young's critics have deliberately chosen to overlook is that he conducted his office not as a black American but as a representative of the U.S.

government in full pursuit of this nation's interests. In this regard, he diligently sought to avoid being anti-anybody, only pro-American.

That is a very basic ingredient that differentiated his approach to foreign policy from that of most American diplomats. The fact that his bold attempt to encourage dialogue and elevate foreign policy issues above worn-out rhetoric drew so much fire indicates how desperate this nation is for new approaches to dealing with the more recent members of the United Nations, most notably Third World countries.

Regrettably, however, too many Americans saw Ambassador Young as the black ambassador at the U.N. rather than a highly qualified diplomat representing their country. That was a main reason for the violent protests that greeted some of his statements.

Pointedly overlooked by most of these critics, however, is that in every war since the founding of this nation, black citizens have borne arms and died for their country. Their blood was spilled from Bunker Hill to Vietnam. It is to be expected that should the United States become drawn into a war in the Middle East, black Americans will once more be called upon to sacrifice their lives.

Black Americans deplore the arrogance that is implicit in the questions that have been raised about their expressed concern for peace in the Middle East. As we previously noted, black Americans strongly protest the callous, ruthless behavior of the United States State Department toward Mr. Young.

Blacks deplore just as strongly the history of racism and the bureaucratic recalcitrance that is so endemic to that agency. Black Americans protest the history of employment discrimination at the State Department and call upon the President and Secretary of State to exert their full authority in pressing for the desegregation of that institution. Every effort must be made to place and advance blacks in positions of authority there.

Africa provides the United States with the bulk of many scarce minerals that industry needs. Black people furthermore, have historical and cultural roots in that continent. The moral aspects of the gross violations of human and political rights by the white minorities in southern Africa constitute a direct affront to black Americans. So it is imperative that we who have so much to contribute to the further improvement of relations with countries on that continent continue to be even more involved in developing U.S. policy on Africa as well as the rest of the world.

Given these realities, it must be understood that neither Jews, Italians, Germans, Irish, Chinese, British, French or whatever other ethnically or nationally identifiable group has any more right to be involved in the development and conduct of United States foreign policy than Americans of African descent. If there is any single area where the melting pot concept applies, it is with foreign affairs. For we either all pursue the common interests of this nation together or help it sink separately.

DM Housing Council Loans Available

Are you interested in a loan to purchase a home?

Are you interested in a loan to rehabilitate your home?

If you are, come to the Des Moines Housing Council office (in TinyTots Day Care Center at 1325 16th Street on Tuesday between the hours of 5:15 p.m. and 7:45 p.m. There will be financial counselors there to talk with you about loans. The counseling is provided by Des Moines Savings

ISEA urges more parental aid

"Parents are educational partners!"

That's the theme for an extensive campaign the Iowa State Education Association (ISEA) is launching this fall to encourage parents to get more involved in their children's education.

"Parents and teachers must share the responsibility for developing children into stable, self-confident adults," noted ISEA President Kenneth Pfile.

"Because neither party can accomplish this mission without the cooperation of the other, the home-school relationship ranks as one of the major concerns of teachers," Pfile said.

"Teachers feel a greater need for parent involvement now," Pfile explained, "because we are working with students with wide ranging needs and capabilities." Resettlement of non-English speaking families in Iowa, mainstreaming of handicapped students, integration, plus the growing disintegration of the family unit are factors that have placed new challenges on schools and teachers.

"Teachers are prepared to cope with these changes and challenges; the support and backing we get from parents will determine how successful we will be," Pfile said.

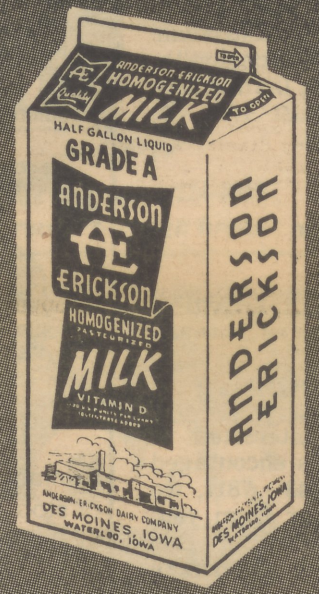

Public service radio and television spots as well as printed posters and brochures are being utilized to carry the ISEA campaign message to parents.

A brochure entitled, "Parents Guide to More Effective Schools," contains specific suggestions on how parents can help children with their education at home and when they visit school.

A free, complimentary copy of this brochure can be obtained by writing ISEA, 4025 Tonawanda Drive, Des Moines, IA. 50312.

(b) Any person seeking a sound variance under this section shall file an application with the noise control division. The application shall contain information which demonstrates that bringing the source of sound or activity for which the sound variance is sought into compliance with this subchapter would constitute an unreasonable hardship on the applicant, on the community, or on other persons. The application shall be accompanied by a fee in the amount hereinafter set forth. If, prior to the giving of notice as outlined in subsection (c) of this section, the variance request is withdrawn, the applicant may, upon application to the department of building, be refunded that portion of the application fee which is in excess of $10.00. The refund of any fee of $10.00 or less shall not be made:

(1) Variance for one day or any portion thereof through one week 25.00

(2) Variance for over one week through one year 25.00 plus 5.00 for each week in excess of the first week, of which the excess fee is refundable upon denial or revocation.

Any individual who claims to be adversely affected by allowance of the sound variance may file a statement with the noise control division containing any information to support his claim. If the noise control division finds that a sufficient controversy exists regarding an application for a sound variance which is under consideration or for one previously granted, a public hearing may be held by the director of the city building department.

Baughner Supports Limit On Taxes

Gary Baughner, the Republican candidate for the special election in Senate District 31, announced this week that he will support a constitutional amendment to limit taxes and government spending.

"I don't see any other solution," Baughner said to a group of Ankeny citizens. "Under our present system, taxes increase almost twice as fast as inflation. Even with this growth of revenues, our government continues to spend more than it takes in."

"I believe that government needs to learn the same lesson that the rest of us have learned: to live within our means."

Baughner, an Ankeny businessman, warned that if we don't impose reasonable ceilings now, we could be faced with unreasonable ceilings in the future. "People will only take so much, and right now we are coming close to taxing them out of homes and jobs. If we don't offer some relief, we could end up with a Proposition 13 in Iowa."

"We need to maintain, or even increase, our support for basic services — police and fire protection, our roads, the education of our young, and so on — but we can do this without raising taxes by over twenty percent a year." Baughner pointed out that state taxes are up twenty-one percent this year.

Baughner said that property taxes are the biggest problem. "The present limits just don't work. If we limit levies, then the valuations go up, and if we limit valuations, then the levies go up. What we need," he said, "is a limit on the amount government can spend."

Baughner said that he supports the constitutional approach because it's the only way to guarantee limits. "I don't really blame government officials for the present situation," he said. "They are beleaguered on all sides with requests for more programs and more money for existing programs. A constitutional restriction will force them to say 'no.'"

"Such an amendment," Baughner added, "would not prevent government from growing at all, it would merely limit growth to the increases in inflation."

Teacher Corps Community Council Vacancies

Teacher Corps, a federally funded program operating at Drake University and the Des Moines Public Schools, has several vacancies on its Community Council.

The Community Council, an advocate for community in designing and implementing projects to improve educational opportunities for children in project schools, is a twenty-one (21) member elected body of parent/guardians, teachers, and residents of four school communities: Tech High School, Brody Jr. High School, Callanan Jr. High School and Edmunds / Jefferson Elementary Schools.

As Community Council members, persons receive opportunities to receive training, graduate or undergraduate credit from Drake University as appropriate, and opportunities to travel locally, regionally or nationally. This is an excellent opportunity for parents and residents of these school communities to become a part of the decision-making process and become more involved in children's educational growth and development.

If you are interested in filling one of these vacancies, and are a parent / guardian or resident of the above listed school communities, please call Winston Black, Community Coordinator, at 271-3100.

LOOK ON SPORTS

You didn't have to read the papers or listen to or watch the news to know what happened around Iowa Big three football. Unless you were on another planet, you had to know that Iowa U gave Nebraska all the Cornhuskers wanted, and that nobody went home until the last whistle was blown.

Iowa State hung on in spite of a rash of injuries for three quarters with Texas while Drake pulled the upset that just about every coach dreams about when they dusted Colorado. No matter that the Buffs have yet to win their first game. This was Colorado, a Big Eight team, and we did em in.

Anyhow, the better than sixty thousand fans saw a dam it to hell ball game at Iowa City that wasn't decided until the last minute. The team that was supposed to lose by from three to four TDs nearly pulled it off.

But, do you know, Iowa just can't keep on losing those close ones like that. They need to break into the win column this weekend, and just might do it. One more loss like the last two and they may begin to think they aren't supposed to win, and when you get that feeling, strange things happen to your ball club.

So, look out, Iowa State. State can tell themselves that they really want to do well in the Big Eight, and if they do drop the Iowa game, won't feel too badly about it. But they certainly don't plan on losing the game, even if they do.

In Drake's case, you might say that the lamb killed the butcher. Now, this could be just about the weakest Colorado team in years, in spite of all that dough they laid out to get their new coach, but just the name Colorado makes you think you are playing with the big boys. That win might give the Bulldogs the push they need to go on to a great season, whether the Buffs are weak or not.

There has been so much written about the three teams that there isn't really much to say about the games.

As we listened to the Texas game, it sounded as if the home boys got away with some late hits that resulted in injuries to the State boys. Maybe it just sounded like that. I hope so, for there is no place in football at any level for late hits that could hurt people. The game is rough enough without that.

And, back at the ranch, East High was trying to prove that they could win without Oakley, and did. Wonder would they have put him back in the game if they had gotten behind? I understand he hurt his leg, and they thought he should be kept out as a precautionary measure.

And North just can't seem to get anything going. Must make those spirits of the former North heroes turn flip flops in their graves as they know the Polar Bears can't come close to winning. Guys like Curt Morton, Jenks Hunter, Joe Brown, Sammy Cohen and the likes.

And what do you suppose the fellows who played on some of the fine North teams in the thirties and forties think? Tech seems to be in a rut also but could slip on somebody.

As it stands now, it will be Dowling, Valley and East for the Metro title. If East gets by Dowling, they should take it.

This is the week that Ernie Shaver takes on Larry Holmes for the heavyweight title, without Muhammad Ali waiting in the wings to insist that he is the real champ. Shaver can take out just about anybody he can hit, but I wonder if he can hit Holmes. He didn't get the job done in their first meeting, and hasn't gotten any better. Might be in better shape and that may make a difference.

Rights On Trial

(A report by the Des Moines Human Rights Commission)

Perhaps the most damaging evidence a firm can present against a person is a record of absenteeism or tardiness. Even excused absences can be held against a Complainant if there are too many of them.

Specifically the firm can say that they need to have people on the job and cannot function unless they can depend upon people to be punctual and at their place of work. Even if a person is temporarily too ill to return to work the firm may terminate that person due to business necessity.

Obviously the individual's inability to work because of illness is generally not intentional, and to terminate the person because of illness often seems unfair. However people should be aware that an action that is seemingly unfair is not necessarily illegal.

Mrs. Hattie T. Westermoreland, a black female, worked in an Air Force warehouse at Fort Bragg, North Carolina. She informed her supervisor S.R. Smith, that she would not be at work the next two days. The two days in question would just precede her vacation time. Mr. Smith told her that he could not allow her the time off and if she was not at work her job would be endangered. She came to work the following day but was absent the second day and was terminated.

The courts said, "the penalty of discharge for an employee's failure to appear for work for one day, after she had been warned that she should appear, was proper and the procedure used to affix that penalty was fair. Although the penalty was severe, it was not to be disturbed in the absence of any racial motive for the discipline."

Mrs. Westermoreland has since re-applied for work at the same place and was re-hired.

In another case, Shakir Talib, who worked for a magazine called "Congressional Quarterly" and was a member of the World Community of Al Islam, received a call from his Mosque asking him to come immediately. Mr. Talib was at work and asked his supervisor at the magazine if he could have permission to leave. The supervisor asked what he would be doing and how long he would be gone and Mr. Talib said that he didn't know. Mr. Talib was then told that his job would be in jeopardy if he left. He did leave and served as a security guard for Wallace D. Muhammed at the Presidential Inauguration.

When Mr. Talib didn't return to work that day or the following day, which was the magazine's deadline day, he was terminated. He filed charges against the magazine of discrimination on the basis of his race and his religion.

The magazine was able to show that they had more accommodations to Mr. Talib's religion in longer lunch hours for prayer sessions and he was never denied permission to attend religious services. The statistical evidence that was gathered concerning the racial make-up of terminated employees was inconclusive.

There was no hard evidence of racial discrimination and while Mr. Talib had volunteered to be on call for security duty for his Mosque, he did not submit evidence that his religion required him to provide that kind of service, therefore the court ruled in favor of the magazine.

A black male who worked for the Joint Airlines Military Traffic Office (JAMTO), was absent from work on three occasions when he participated in civil rights activities. He was terminated for those three unexcused absences and "poor job performance."

It was never established whether or not Complainant had a poor performance record. It was established that the black man (his name is not given) followed established procedures for calling in his absences and that his attendance record compared favorably with his white co-workers.

The Equal Employment Opportunity Commission ruled on the matter and decided that race was a factor in the discharge because white employees with worse records of attendance were not treated as harshly and the firm knew his absences were for civil rights activities.

In summary, the courts recognize the employer's right to insist upon good attendance and promptness. The strictness of the rules may vary considerably from company to company, but so long as a company applies its rules without discriminating by race, age, sex, national origin, or disability, the company's enforcement of the rules will probably be upheld by the courts.

THOUGHTS AND COMMENTS

Festival of Arts, set up a committee to review the existing National Development Plan (whose implementation had lagged seriously due to the sharp drop in oil revenues) and the excessive and often unnecessary capital projects thereunder, removed all state governors (most of whom were dismissed summarily from the military following investigation), compelled all senior civil servants and federal commissioners to retire, began a purge of government workers to remove the most inefficient and corrupt (which spread to universities and private corporations as well), established a number of commissions to investigate crucial national problems (like corruption, the creation of more states and the establishment of a new national capital) and whose recommendation were rapidly implemented, and established a schedule for the promulgation of a new constitution and the holding of free elections to bring on the return of civilian rule. General Mohammed's direct approach to these and other problems worked well in many areas, but was less successful in dealing with the problems of Nigeria's crowded cities. It also was unsuccessful in dealing with the planned demobilization of the armed forces because it left the implementation to the individual army commanders themselves who often differed on who and what was to be eliminated. On February 13, 1976, however General Mohammed was assassinated during an attempted military coup engineered by junior officers unhappy with promotion procedures and the planned demobilization. The coup was uncessful, and, outside of the deaths of General Mohammed and about 20 staff officers (including the Army Chief of Staff), very little changed. Lieutenant General Olusegun Obasanjo, Mohammed's successor, quickly announced his intention to adhere to the schedule for return to civilian rule as well as the other basic policies of his predecessor, and to this point in time he has done so. The only basic change of policy that he has accomplished to date is to stop the demobilization plans of the army commanders for the time being until the economy is improved to the point it can find jobs for those ex - servicemen.

GREAT TUMMY ACHE WAR

Getting kids off to school is a daily battle in some homes, thanks to something you might call The Great Tummyache War.

If "I can't go to school, I have a tummyache" has become a regular occurrence in your household and there's no evidence of a medical problem, then the epidemic of early morning illness may be due to "school phobia," a fear of going to school.

Many children go through a phase of being quite fearful about school early in the year, but that should disappear after the first few weeks, says Dr. Mark A. Stewart, professor and head of child psychiatry at The University of Iowa.

This reluctance to go to school may be rooted in fear of the unfamiliar — perhaps it's a new school or teacher, or the child has been absent for a while with illness.

Parents should be understanding and sympathetic, but respond with firmness to these early morning butterflies, Dr. Stewart says.

"Accept that they're worried, but point out that the only way to overcome their school fears is simply to go to school."

Dr. Stewart suggests adopting as a family rule for schoolday absences: "Go to school unless the thermometer shows more than one degree of fever."

Early preventive measures can make it much less likely that The Great Tummyache War will accompany a child's early years in school.

A child raised to be socially independent, who is given opportunities to deal with everyday stress and become self-confident, is not likely to have difficulty adapting to new situations such as school, he says.

"Parents who are overprotective are storing up trouble for themselves," perhaps infecting their child with some of their own fears of the world.

"You've got to let go and allow a child to take risks such as riding a bike along busy roads," Dr. Stewart says, even if it causes you to "sweat a little" from worry.

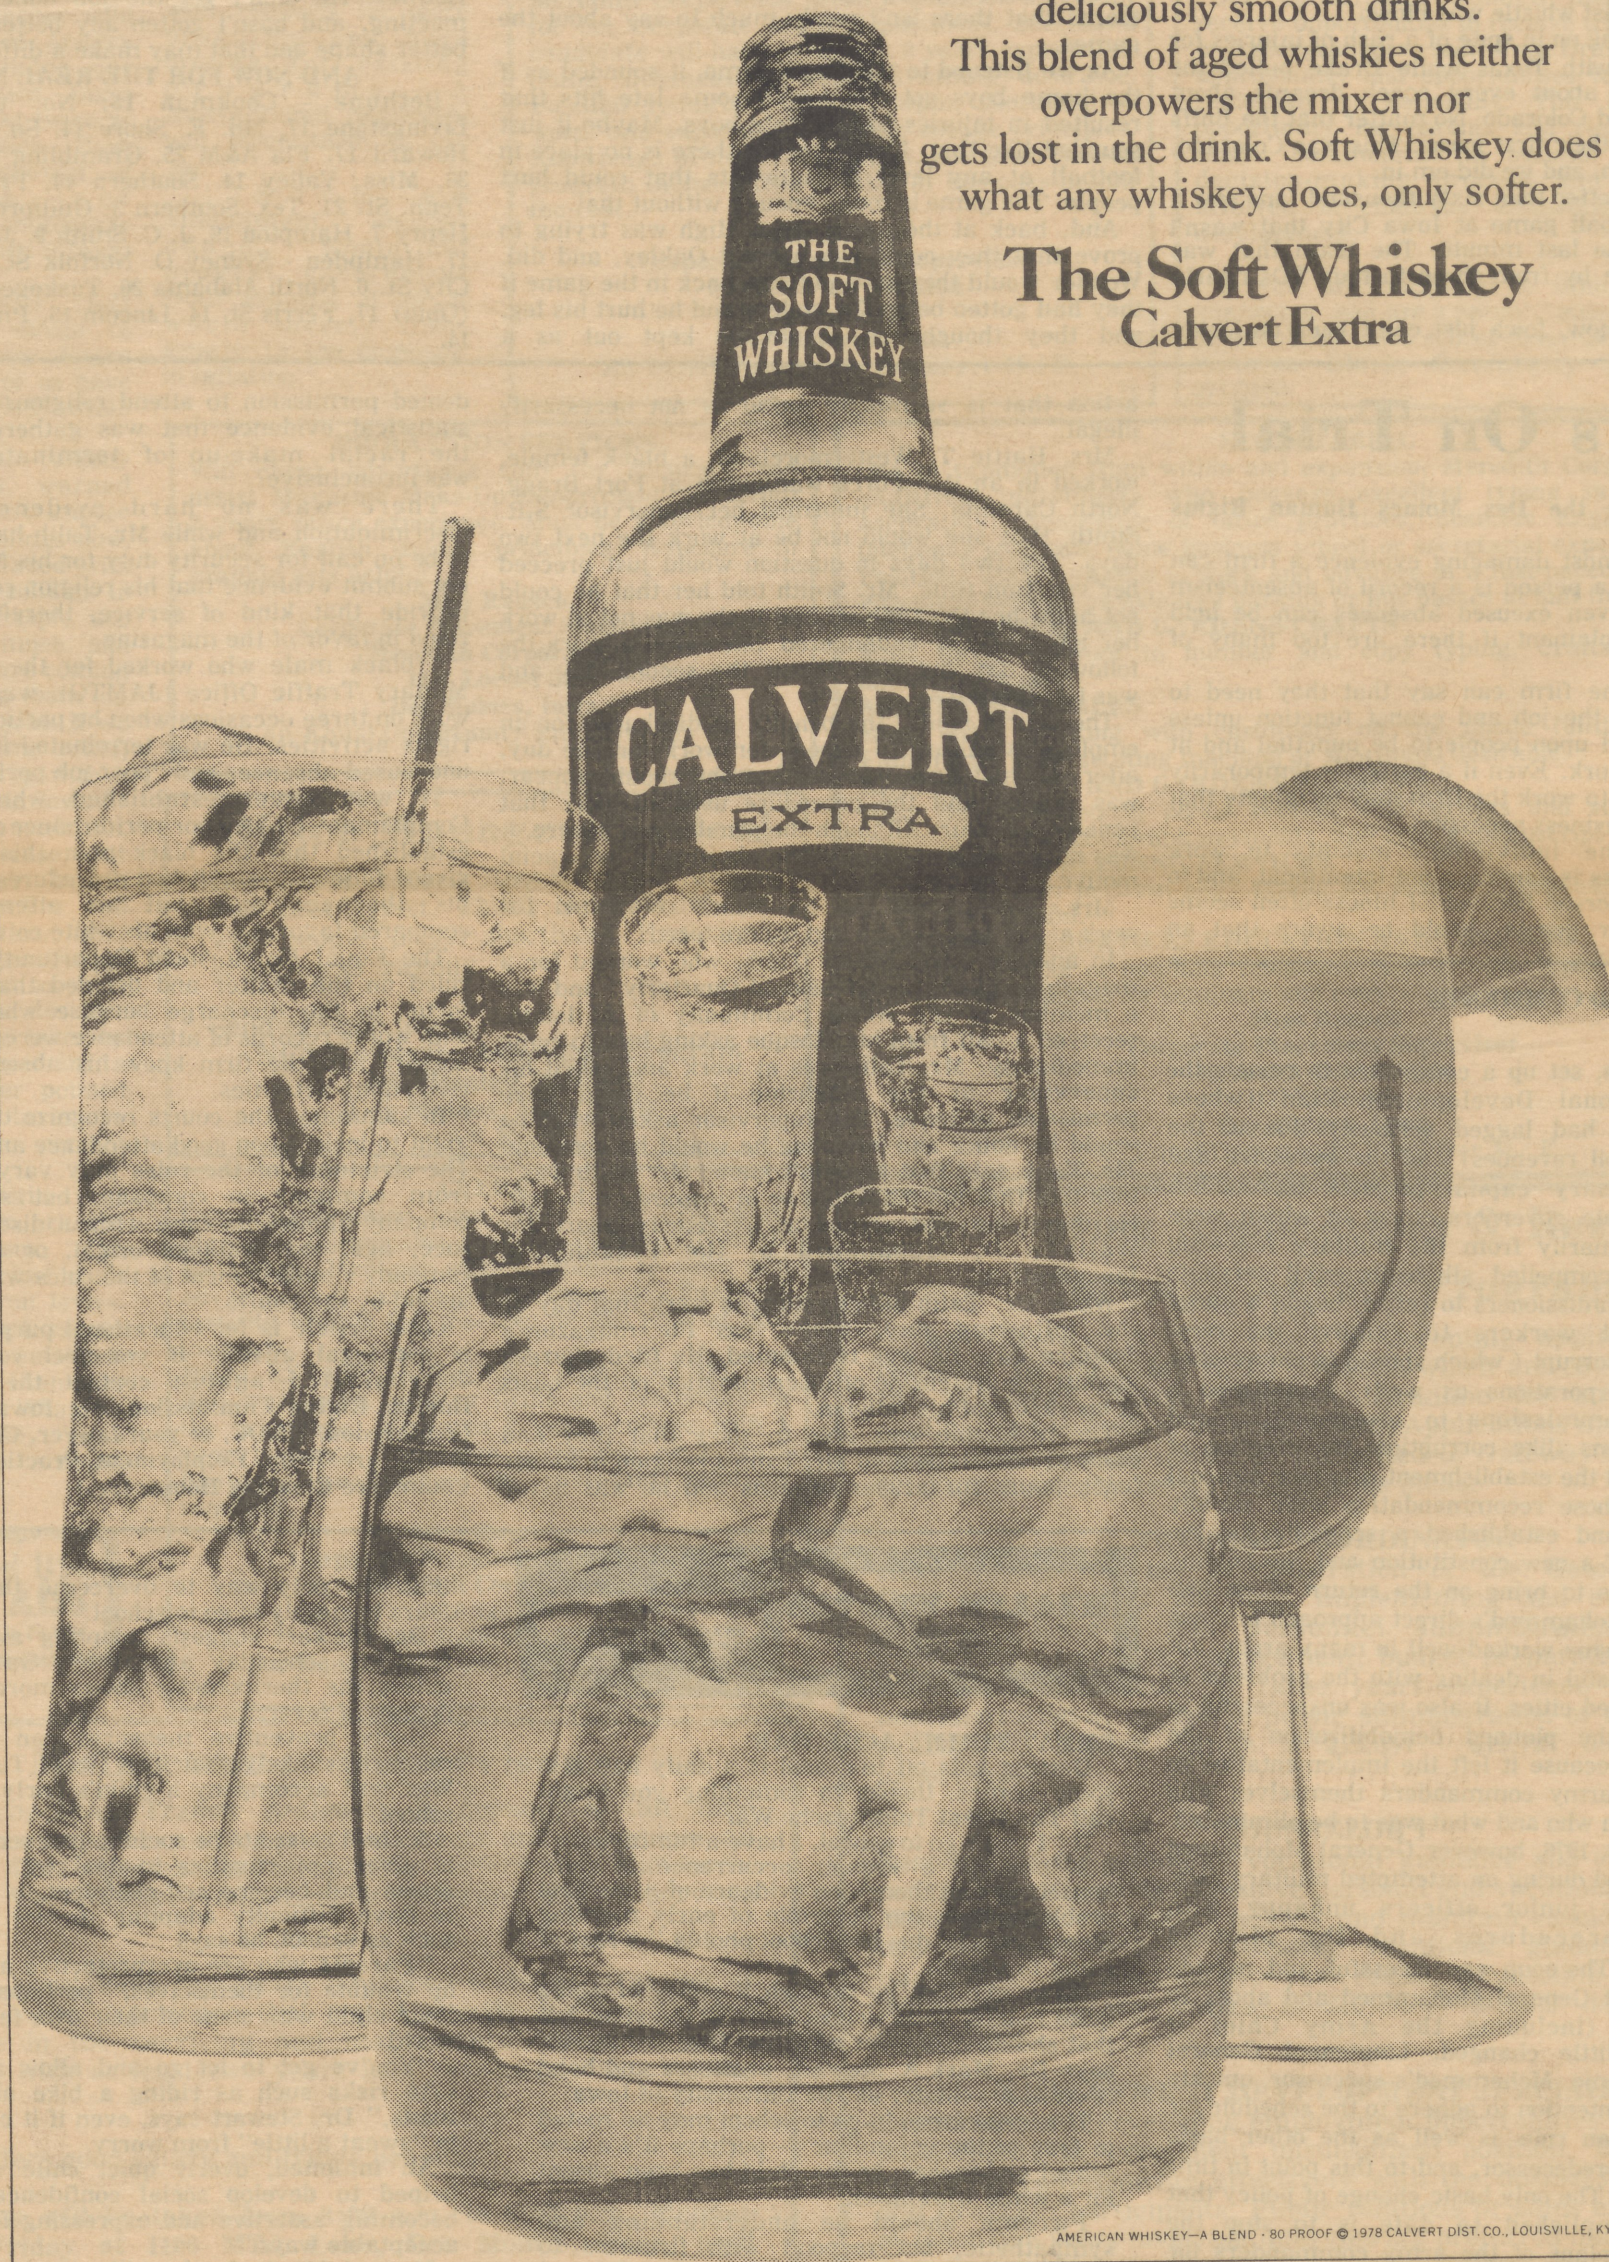

An inhibited, overly quiet child should be helped to develop social confidence through becoming assertive and expressing feelings in acceptable ways.

If a child absolutely will not go to school unless literally dragged there, then parents should seek professional assistance.
