IEWS and REVIEWS

by Allen Ashby

Since this is Black History month, I thought it might not be a bad idea to do some thoughts about Des Moines and its black history as it looked to me over the years.

I didn't really come to know what was happening until around 1924 or 25, so that is as far as I will go back. Except that my mother and several old timers have often told me that while in that time Des Moines was as segregated as some Southern cities, that pattern didn't develop until 1917.

In spite of Iowa's civil rights law there were theaters you couldn't buy a ticket to, restaurants you could not drink a cup of coffee in and parts of town that you shouldn't be caught in after dark.

Some of the outstanding people I recall were of course J. B. Morris, editor of the Bystander and an attorney. Other lawyers were Charles Howard, a protege of George Woodson and one of the most feared criminal defense lawyers in the state. Woodson taught Howard well, and he became as tough as Woodson. Then there were John L. Thompson, Herb. Wright, director of the Negro Community Center, S. Joe Brown, and his wife, Sue, along with Gertrude Rush, whom I believe was the first black woman lawyer in Iowa.

Other people were Doctor Alvin Jefferson who became the first black member of the staff at Broadlawns hospital, Dr. Linford Willis, a dentist. In 1926 the late Joe Ritchey came here from Iowa City and soon became the leading dentist.

Reverend George W. Robinson who was probably the most influential minister in town because of his long tenure at the Corinthian Baptist Church and some I may have left out.

Working in the city hall were Tracey Blagburn and Suzy Hart in the engineers department, and Harry Wilson in the city clerk office. Letter carriers were Branam Hyde and Bob Dacus, while S. Proctor and Nelson Thompson were postal clerks.

Two of the most successful business men were Mr. Hyde who came up with the H&H cleaning product that became a national product, and Archie Alexander who was one of the leading civil engineers in Iowa.

In spite of the segregated pattern in the city, there were black businesses in the loop area. There were two barbershops that catered to white trade only, but would cut black peoples' hair after regular business hours, and some accepted that. There was also another such shop out by old North High which is now Moulton School.

This was the setup of things around town as it looked to me then.

For recreation there was the old Negro Community Center which later became the present Wilkie House, the Crocker branch or black branch of the YMCA and the Blue Triangle YWCA located on Fourteenth and Center. The difference was that the girls could go to the central YWCA and take part in some activities and the boys could not at the YMCA. But we were so busy working on our program that we didn't have time to worry about segregation.

I didn't really get active into things until after I graduated from high school. I recall the fierce and bitter campaign that went on when the Ku Klux Klan tried to take over the school board. That was my first attempt at a political fight.

I might have dropped it there, but in 1928 Al Smith, a Catholic, ran for the presidency against Herbert Hoover and I never heard so much hog wash about Catholics as I did then. So I got mad and let the world know that I was going to vote for Smith.

That made Arthur Branam and I the only two black Democrats in town. Branam got slightly liquored up one night and told a Democratic rally that within ten years blacks would be voting sixty percent Democratic. That made a headline story in the paper the next morning and caused all kinds of waves among black political leaders. Branam was denounced from every black pulpit in town, and everybody who had a chance to speak took his or her turn at swatting the guy.

Time proved the man to be a better prophet than even he thought he was. If this thing hasn't gotten too far out by next week, maybe I'll take it up from there.

Thoughts and Comments

By James B. Morris III

The segregated (or dual) housing market which we all know exists in this country is paralleled by an equally segregated home financing market wherein the amount of mortgage credit available to homeowners or prospective purchasers has been much more available to whites while minorities have had to rely on less favorable terms or forms of financing.

This discrimination in the lending practices of financial institutions with respect to minorities has led to a concentration of unconventional concentrations in areas with roughly comparable minority populations. This lack of the conventional means of home credit and financing in older minority or racially changing neighborhoods is not just the result of individual discrimination.

In the process of underwriting loans, financial institutions consider not only the creditworthiness of the potential buyer (credit underwriting), but also the present and future value of the property involved (property underwriting). Individual discrimination is most prevalent in the process of credit underwriting, but, more importantly, the standards utilized in the property underwriting process, (especially as to soundness and value) have relied heavily, traditionally, on subjective evaluations of neighborhood trends.

Property underwriting is an essentially uncomplicated process. Financial lending institutions, regulated by both state and federal governments, are required by law to protect their home mortgage investments by giving them for less than the full value of the property. This is necessary to provide that if the buyer defaults on the mortgage and the individual lender has to reacquire the property by foreclosure, the value of that property will be sufficient to allow the lender to regain the full amount of unpaid principal and interest after paying the legal costs of foreclosure and the costs associated with its sale.

In order to estimate the true value of the property for the purposes of making a loan, these institutions are required to have it appraised by a qualified appraiser. In doing so, while an appraiser estimates the present market value of the property, lenders are concerned about whether the property values may drop so quickly that at some point in the future when it may become necessary to foreclose, the value will be sufficient to cover their losses.

Thus lenders must also estimate value trends within that area and base their decision as to whether or not to go forward on any individual loan both on the present appraised value of the property and their subjective estimates of the value trends in that area.

Appraisers are the recognized experts on the estimation of value and value trends. The professional standards, techniques and models which they use in making a determination of present values are the same ones utilized by lending institutions in developing their own property underwriting precedents. Since the 1930's, when the earliest significant literature on the appraisal process appeared, appraisers have considered neighborhood trends to be the most important factor in the determination of value.

A major principle which has influenced the evaluation of neighborhood trends has been the blatantly racist assumption that I identified last week and which shows up time after time in that literature: that age, and especially racial change, lead directly to declining values and general neighborhood deterioration. In general terms, the literature consistently warns appraisers of the impending decline in a community after "the influx of inharmonious social or racial groups" or defines the homogeneity (racial, for example) of the population of an area as a factor which contributes to stable or increasing property values.

It also, as a rule, looks to a neighborhood as having a sort of "life cycle". Older, inner city neighborhoods tend to be viewed as entering a phase of decline which will likely end in blight. Since the segregated housing market has, for the most part, restricted minorities to these older neighborhoods, underwriters and appraisers can (and usually do) utilize both age and racial composition as significant negative influences in making lending decisions in them.

Thus the nature of the loan underwriting process is a major factor in the deterioration of urban inner-city neighborhoods that depend almost exclusively on home mortgage and improvement credit from financial institutions for their vitality.

Next week we will examine the major method of financing available to inner-city residents in the obvious deficiency of home mortgage credit and its most obvious and crucial weaknesses of it.

Speakin' Out

THE BLACK REVOLUTION: FAR FROM DEAD

One fact that was ascertained as a result of my recent trip to Harlem is that the Black revolution is far from dead. What was also made apparent is the fact that the media for whatever reason is covering up the reality that militant struggles are still occurring. Imagine this; between five and ten thousand people, mostly Black march all the way from Harlem to the U.N., a distance of about five miles, the U.N. is evacuated (check that out) in anticipation of violence and not one peep from the media concerning this event.

My first reaction was that maybe the Big Apple is so large that the event went unnoticed. Then I saw on the news a report on a very small demonstration concerning Cambodia. That demonstration took place a few hundred feet from where thousands of Blacks were demonstrating. It became clear that the media was consciously overlooking the Black Solidarity Day march, which was organized to bring international attention to the plight of Blacks in the U.S.

Let me reiterate: It is not the Black revolution that is dead, its the coverage of it that has died. Let me give another example to illustrate my point. Remember when Lewis, Chaney, and Swerner, the three civil rights workers were killed by the Ku Klux Klan in the early sixties? This event was so well publicized that even today these names are still indelibly etched into my memory.

Compare their murders with the recent murders of five I repeat five activists in North Carolina three months ago. Those murdered included a very beautiful, dedicated sister. Their deaths have largely gone unnoticed because the media since the late sixties has ignored the revolutionary movement still occurring in this country.

Hours before the Harlem march Sister Assata Shakur was liberated from a prison. Assata has been described as the "Soul" of the Black Liberation Army, a revolutionary underground force which is an offshoot of the Black Panther Party. Her liberation from incarceration will no doubt have profound implications in terms of the direction of the Black revolutionary movement. She is one of the hundreds of militants arrested in connection with a revolutionary activity that is not (but should be) considered a political prisoner.

Speaking of prisoners, are you hep to the Pontiac Brothers? Probably not. Its another clear example of media silence on Black issues. The Pontiac Brothers are twenty-eight Black men and three

Looking for a pleasant — yet healthful little spot to feed the kids and rest your tired tootsies while shopping at Valley West Mall? Try JL'S FRESH BAR.

This new restaurant is located on Brandeis' second floor. A tiny but bright and airy little place, JL's boasts a number of health food and slimming dishes: tasty salads and sandwiches. A darling childrens menu complete with jungle animals the "Animal Alphabet Menu" is a cute addition and souvenir for the little ones.

The real trump card is that JLs serves Haagendaz ice cream straight from New York. Ever since my teenybopper days when I read that wives of the Beatles and other show biz personalities wolfed down this expensive ice cream (to combat depression they claimed) I've had my taste buds set for this brand. Although I'm not an ice cream lover, this is the best ice cream I've ever tasted — it even made Baskin Robbins taste like Costellos Ice Milk.

We had the "Rum Raisin" with huge pieces of fruit and liquor so pungent it was like drinking a rum and Coke — if you can imagine getting high off ice cream! Again, JR's Fresh Bar is just that — a fresh, pleasant alternative to the fast food blahs we've all probably developed the past few years.

As you've probably heard by now, the pseudo-intellectual Des Moines Symphony board has fired a true and dedicated artist, conductor Yuri Krasnopolsky. It seems Des Moines can't stand too much class and talent. At any rate, as I was about to meet friends for drinks last Friday, I spied Maestro Krasnopolsky going over scores in the lobby of the Ft. Des Moines Hotel.

I thought to myself Des Moines' loss is another Metro area's gain. It seems at Saturday nights concert, many of the other Season Ticket subscribers agreed with me — the audience was extremely warm, attentive and many gave Krasnopolsky a standing ovation.

Even though Saturday nights three offerings were less than monumental tributes to their composers, the soloist, violinist Elmar Oliveria was a tremendous artist. This virtual youngster, a 28 year old visiting professor from the State University of New York; was one of the best musicians I've ever heard. The sheer volume of music — the speed, virtuosity and intricate technique of his playing was phenomenal.

Concerto for Violin and Orchestra by Tchaikovsky, a terribly long and detailed piece was handled as child's play by the soloist. Look for Oliveira in the coming years to be known as a young Isaac Stern or Yasha Heifetz.

Scherzo a la Russe by Stravinsky opened the evening. A pleasantly short and vibrant number, it began the evening on a light "note". This piece seemed uncharacteristic of the late Russian master's usual harsh, heavy, exotic and sometimes doleful music.

Last, after intermission Saint-Saens' Symphony No. 3 in Minor Op. 78 (with organ) dazzled everyone but me — it seemed an interminably long affair. Dr. Carl Staplin, did an admirable job as organist but somehow did not manage to ignite a fire within this audience member.

Again I hope Krasnopolsky's career does not suffer at the hands of the local yokels toying with his life and livelihood. He is truly a fine conductor.

Latino men that were involved in a prison rebellion in Pontiac Illinois that left three white guards dead.

The rebellion started as a protest against the inhumane conditions of the prison. Seventeen men (all Black) are facing the electric chair and fourteen others are facing life. To top it off the Governor of Illinois is personally taking charge of prosecuting these brothers.

How is it that these incidents can go largely unnoticed? But more important than how is why these incidents are obscured to the point of oblivion, and what will be the inevitable consequence of obscuring these most significant events.

One thing is sure; and that's that white America is in for a shock. Most Americans believe that the serious struggles of the late sixties are passe', and that it was a transitory phase. Let me assure you that that is not the case.

As I have said before the struggles of the late sixties were a prelude to revolution. The revolutionary core is much larger than it was in the late sixties. In other words the number of committed individuals has increased and the depth of commitment among the survivors of the late sixties has intensified.

The only element missing is the mass appeal of the movement which was nurtured in part by the mass media. Once the revolutionary element crystallizes the next phase of struggle will be more intense and will have a protracted nature, i.e. longer lasting.

America was totally unprepared for the last explosion of Black Rage and they will be totally unprepared for the next one. Why? Primarily because they would prefer to smooth things over and act as though Niggahs ain't mad no, no.

They would rather listen to the words of deluded Knee-gros who say what they want to hear than establish a dialogue with those who promote interest of the disinherited, dispossessed, depressed Black masses who constitute the real revolutionary force in America.

The media is playing a major role in keeping Americans ignorant of the impending danger. Their conspiracy of silence will only serve to lull the American masses into a false sense of security. The revolution is by no means over!

NAACP Urges Iowa City To Deny License To Disco

"There is no doubt that this decision will have a lasting effect on race relations in Iowa City," stated the local NAACP while urging the city not to renew the liquor license of Woodfields disco.

The bar's license expires Feb. 24 and a decision on the matter was postponed for two weeks at the council meeting on Jan. 29 amidst pressure for postponement from Iowa City NAACP, NOW, and AFL. Harry Ambrose, owner of the disco, "knowingly and recklessly tolerated discrimination against blacks" the city Human Rights Commission ruled this summer. The council acted on the ruling on July 31, suspending the bar's liquor license for four months.

On October 25, with 36 days remaining on the suspension, the state Beer and Liquor Control Department temporarily lifted the suspension until it could rule on an appeal by Ambrose. The liquor control department's hearing board will probably not make a ruling before the license expires.

In a joint press conference with local representatives of the National Organization for Women and the American Federation of Labor, Iowa City NAACP President Robert Morris urged the council to deny the renewal request.

"Legally, the decision will determine whether Woodfield's will stay open for business by selling liquor on the premises. Morally, the decision will determine whether acts of discrimination and bigotry such as this will be tolerated by Iowa City government or whether it will establish a just position in this matter," Morris said.

Morris, along with Diana Miller Jones, president of Iowa City - Johnson County NOW, Dennis Ryan of the Iowa City American Federation of Labor and Rev. Thomas Mikelson, Iowa City NAACP vice president, urged citizens to lobby the council to deny Ambrose's renewal request.

Ambrose said that he believes there is no reason for the council to deny him a new license.

"They don't have any reason to turn me down for a license," he said. "Even if I was guilty, I've almost done all my time. The state isn't going to decide on whether I should get my license renewed. They're going to decide if I should or shouldn't do the rest of the 36 days."

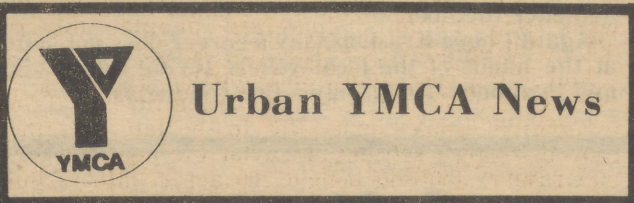

"I don't see how even Tuesday they could turn me down. Because of the NAACP? They (the council) can't pass sentence on me twice," Ambrose said. "They want me to pay the price, and I did - I was closed for three or four months. They got all that. They still won.

In response to this,

Morris stated, "It's not a matter of who wins or loses, he will most probably get his license renewed anyway. It's the precedent it sets for this community of which I am concerned.

Black History — Lost, strayed or stolen. Such seemed the fate of the black mans' contribution to America's culture and development. Carter Woodson was very concerned about this lack of awareness so in 1915, he organized the Association for the Study of Negro Life and History.

The association publishes many important volumes in this field thus facilitating in a more systematic manner, the study of Black History. In 1911, another concerned black, Arthur Schomburg, founded the Negro Society for History Research as a sort of rebuttal, after one of his teachers remarked:

"The black man has no significant history."

The research center located in Harlem, N.Y. (a branch of the N.Y. public library), contains, besides an extensive rare book section, including works by Phylis Wheatly, Ben Bannakers' almanac's, address of protest by free men of color David Walker, Fredrick Douglas, Booker Washington, etc. more than 45,000 books, pamphlets, newspapers, 4,000 manuscripts, 200 scrapbooks, 1,000 microfilm and many other mediums of recorded history.

Thus in a sense the Black man has been re-discovered — not wholly in Iowa where his contributions are still lost, strayed or stolen, to a certain extent.

Iowa was not a slave state, her future was secured with the Mo. Compromise, but a few slaves were brought into Iowa by some early white traders, government officials, as house servants and miners; these blacks were not welcome! In 1838-39 members of the first territorial assembly met in Burlington and drew up a body of laws as follows:

After April 1, 1839, no Black or Mulatto was to be permitted to settle in Iowa unless he presented a certificate of freedom and give a bond of $500.00 as surety that he would not become a public charge. If a Negro came without the above credentials the county commissioner could hire him out for the best price for a period of 6 months and two years later laws were passed to keep the races apart socially and banned mixed marriages.

There was the question of the vote, the right to serve in the militia, holding office, etc. but by 1886 these privileges were granted and of course previous to these rights Alexander Clark had won for his daughter Susan and all of Iowa's children the right to attend public school in 1868.

Iowa because of its close proximity to Mo. was an important stop on the underground railroad. Perhaps the most famous centers of underground activity was Salem, Tabor, Earlham, Des Moines, Grimes, Iowa City, West Liberty, West Branch, Springdale, Tipton, DeWitt, Low Moor, Clinton, Washington, Crawfordsville and Muscatine.

Negroes upon settling in Iowa usually selected the most suitable land after crossing the Mo. border. Thus Clarinda, Keosauqua, Mt. Pleasant, Oskaloosa, etc. had the largest black populous. River towns such as Keokuk, Burlington, Montrose, Dubuque, Davenport etc. provided good employment with the railroad and industrial expansion.

Many famous and well known Iowans had their beginnings in the early and mid 1800's. S. Joe Brown, Lewis Henry, Winstons, Dr. Watts, Archie Alexander, Gertrude Bush, J. B. Morris, The Londons, Wilsons, Howards, Geo. Woodson, E. A. Carter, P. W. Jones, Lobbins, Seabrooks, Lambs, and B. F. Cooper to name but a few. These pioneers were professionals, business people, miners, domestics etc.

And a few like Adam and Martha Johnson were farmers. The Johnsons left the cotton fields of Tenn. to farm in Knox County, Ill. In the late '80's they moved to Iowa settling in Taylor Co. near the town of Gravity. Johnson bought 160 acres, later selling some to the C.B.&Q. railroad. He retained enough to leave a well developed farm to his sons one of whom is Adam Johnson, well known Des Moines resident and former owner of the OK Barber Shop for many years.

Taffy pulls was a favorite winter pasttime in the 1800's here is a favorite. 2 C. sugar, 1 C. light molasses, ½ C. water, 2 t vinegar, 2 T. butter, ½ t. soda. Butter sides of a 2 qt. pan. Combine sugar, molasses, and water. Stir constantly. Bring to a boil. Add vinegar. Cook to light crack stage. Remove from heat, add butter, sift in the soda. Mix. Pour onto a buttered platter.

Do not scrape the pan. Pull while still as warm as you can handle. Dip fingers in cornstarch and use only finger tips to pull. When candy is light taffy colored and becomes hard to pull cut into fourths. Pull each into ½" thick strands. Snip into bite size pieces with buttered scissors. Wrap in wax paper.

MT. HEBRON BAPTIST CHURCH

On last Sunday morning, Pastor Harris brought a very inspiring message, he chose for a topic "Power of God and man," the combined choirs sang, as if it were the last time, Holy Communion was served and we were blessed with the visitation of the Holy Spirit.

That afternoon the program sponsored by Mother Porter, entitled "Reachout", was something to remember, it brought to our attention again that as Christians it is our duty to Reachout, by Love, By Faith, and testimony, and draw lost men unto his Kingdom. Mother Porter must be commended for her fine work, she doesn't make a lot of noise, but moves swift, and her programs are just beautiful. I believe it is the Love she portraits.

Look, Therefore, To This Day

By
Lynda Walker-Webster

When one initially thinks of the month of February, it is easy for one to think of the birthdays of George Washington and Abraham Lincoln, especially for those whose places of employment recognize those days as holidays. We may also recognize February as the month, that for years has been set aside as Black History Month — but that has not yet been significantly embedded enough in our minds.

What seems to come first to the minds of most, is Valentine's Day. Yet what actual significance has or does it play with each of us at that time?

From the beginning of our early classroom days, we were oriented into making or coloring in valentines to take home to our parents. Also were the remembrances of the decorated brown paper bags that lined the black board chalk trays. Each bag displayed the name of a different child in the classroom. Thus giving everyone in the entire school the opportunity to drop a valentine into the bags of those that they desired to.

St. Valentine's Day is observed as a day of love and affection. A day when we are given the "extra" or "special" opportunity to send a card of other token to those persons that we hold dear to our hearts.

It is indeed a lovely day to recognize! But so is every other day of the year. Love is to be, and should be, expressed day in and day out. Valentine's Day, since it is set aside for expressing affection, should then be a day to give, as well as a day to receive. We are always excited when we receive a valentine in the mailbox, — but wouldn't it have also been nice to have given someone else that same pleasure?

There is tragedy in the reality, that for many people, a simple valentine card must express the words, "I Love You" for them. They simply can't say it, and may also find it difficult to express through other means. And pitifully, that valentine card just may be their yearly contribution to their loved ones.

The words, "I Love You", should roll off our minds, — be inhaled into the caverns of our hearts, exhaled across the threshold of our tongue with such rhythm and substance when we feel it, — instead of girdling it within us with such non-committal emotions. But still, for some, it is so hard. (As well as it being so easy and meaningless for others to say.)

How little do people realize the power and effect in hearing those words from someone you may love, or, want to love. How often have we heard someone say, after it is too late, that, "I wish that I had been able to say, "I love you"?"

And of course, there will always be those who choose to tamper with love by degrading relationships that had once held so much meaning. And their degrading is done in the name of worldliness. — and those rejecting sincerity and dedication in the name of lust. Playing with the minds, hearts and emotions of those who love us should be a mortal sin! It is without doubt, a real downer.

For love is not to be played, or to be played with. Have we gotten away from how God has desired that we should love one another? In I Corinthians, 13 it says:

"Love is patient and kind; love is not jealous, or conceited, or proud; love is not ill-mannered, or selfish, or irritable; love does not keep a record of wrongs: love is not happy with evil, but is happy with the truth. Love never gives up: its faith, hope and patience never fail. Love is eternal— There are faith, hope and love, these three; but the greatest of these is love."

Yet how far away from that are we? Even true love and sincere love often crosses the boundaries of those realms mentioned.

Have we ceased to feel the needs, or to understand the needs of others? We need to really give our love, selflessly, as well as to project it. We need to receive it when it is given.

We need to release ourselves from the often rigid circumstances that we allow ourselves to be bound in. We need to release our laughter that often hides within us, — share our tears, and enjoy our lives and the lives of those we love, — and enjoy it as it is given.

We need to escape beyond our problems, see more than our own fantasies; we should be willing to listen, instead of always being listened to. There is desperately the need to share more, — of ourselves! And to learn from, and observe those who tend to look to us as their objects of love, affection and admiration.

"Love is always open arms. If you close yours arms about love, you will find that you are left holding only yourself."

the Mt. Olive Bapt. church on Sunday Feb. 17, at 3 p.m. Our choir is to bring the music.

Feb. 17, the Morningstar Bapt. Sunday School will present Young Witnesses for Christ at 6 p.m. A variety of performers from various churches will be on program as witnesses for Christ. Supt. Tiny Jenkins is asking all those who attend and those who don't to attend this inspirational program.

And soon with me the labor will be wrought;

Then grows my heart to other hearts more tender.

The time is short."

D. M. Craik
As we journey toward that Holy City in Heaven, assimilate the characteristics of Jesus Christ. Your positive compassion and image will have an affect on people and situations, far and wide, as an ocean wave. To me, that was the message of Rev. Grady's sermon, "Time For Sharing", last Sunday. Rev. Marshall Smith, of Bethel A.M.E. Church, will give the message for this coming Sunday.

Rev. Grady, accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. Larry Carter, will be the guest speaker in Van Meter, Iowa at the Van Meter United Methodist Church Sunday, February 10th.

Our Licentiate Minister, Ms. Barbara Barbour, has chosen St. Paul A.M.E. Church, Washington, D.C., as her ministerial residence where she was spiritually uplifted. We all know what that will mean to her ambition.

Goodies on the agenda for February: On the 10th, Sisters Pat Miller and Marsha Collier solicit your attendance at the Third World Art Expo at the Greater Des Moines YWCA between the hours of 2:00 p.m. and 5:00 p.m. (Exhibits and soul food to be sold); Bethel A.M.E. Church Steward Board will feature the University of Iowa's Voices of Soul at 5:00 p.m.; On the 17th, for Founder's Day, the Layman's Organization will feature Sister Ardeth (Jackie) Fair as the guest speaker for the morning services, and a drama entitled, "A Gift of Heritage" will be presented at 4:00 p.m.; on the 22nd, at 6:00 p.m. the Richard Allen Usher Board is having a Chili Supper for $1.00; on the 24th, our illustrious Bishop Hubert N. Robinson will give dignity to our church and city. Also, on this date we hope to have the exhilarating feeling that we and the church have met our Budget Claims obligations.

Last Wednesday night, God sent His lovely Darla Kay to live with her parents, Richard and Darla Collier. She weighed 6 pounds and 14 ounces, and 19½ inches long. Both mother and daughter are coming along fine. Pray for them, as well as the sick, convalescent and shut-ins.

Census Participation Important For Minorities

Every household in the U.S. on March 28 will receive by mail a ticket to participate in an event that happens only once every 10 years.

The ticket will be in the form of a questionnaire issued by the Census Bureau and will be used for the 20th Decennial Census of Population and Housing, better known as the 1980 Census.

What is the census? It's the official, usually periodic, count of population and recording of economic status, age and sex. The Census Bureau is urging all Americans to participate in the event, especially minorities.

In the past minorities were undercounted and as a result lost thousands of jobs and millions of dollars in revenue sharing. According to the bureau, 7.7 percent of the black population as well as an estimated 7.7 percent of the Asian and Hispanic populations were missed in 1970 compared to a 1.9 percent undercount for whites.

The Constitutional purpose of the census is to provide the basis for fair apportionment among the states of seats in the House of Representatives. Census data is used also to guide the distribution of additional billions of dollars in funds to state and local governments.

In order to assure that minorities are not undercounted in 1980 the bureau designed a Community Services Program (CSP) to educate minority communities by emphasizing the importance of each person's participation in the 1980 census count. It has trained 200 persons (10 times the number in 1970) to work with communities, churches and schools to answer questions and conduct workshops on the census.

Advisory councils for each of the minority groups also were set up to advise the bureau on how to get greater minority participation.

"We are very much in favor of the census and we are encouraging people to participate," said the Rev. Julio Gomez, national coordinator for Methodists Associated Representing the Cause of Hispanic Americans (MARCHA). "Some of our people are afraid of the census, especially undocumented workers, but we're trying to show them that there will be no problem with this," he added, referring to the fact that all census data is supposed to be confidential according to Title 13 of the U.S. Code.

Esther Estrada said she feels there still will be a definite undercount of minorities, Hispanics in particular, in the 1980 census. Ms. Estrada is director of community education and activation program, Mexican American Legal Defense and Education Fund (MALDEF). She is a member of the Census Bureau's Advisory Committee on the Hispanic Population.

"On the surface it appears they are doing things to get a better count, but on the other hand they haven't done enough," said Ms. Estrada. "Of the $1 billion the bureau has spent on the census, the smallest amount was spent on community outreach. Two hundred CSP workers are not enough for the whole country."

Ms. Estrada said the census form will be made available in Spanish only upon request. "If people don't take the time to read the paragraph which tells them this they won't know to ask for it," she added, citing this as one reason the Hispanic population may be undercounted again.

Another reason Ms. Estrada said she feels there will be an undercount is the intimidation Hispanic communities have been receiving about undocumented workers. "Already because of the raids that have occurred in recent months, there is a distrust of government officials."

According to Ms. Estrada, California has the largest Hispanic population in the U.S. About a year and a half ago MALDEF organized nine community awareness census projects located in Los Angeles, Chicago and Texas.

"We started these projects because we realized what the census will mean to us economically and it's important for us to make sure we're counted," she explained.

According to Tania Azores, chairperson of the Advisory Committee on the Asian Population, "there has never before been any real outreach to the Asian community" by the Census Bureau to participate.

"I think the programs (the bureau has organized to get greater minority participation) are good; they're just not carried far enough," she said. While CSP has reached many Asian communities, she noted, there are many that have not been reached because Asian communities are widely scattered. CSP staffs are usually located in target areas where minority populations are at least 250,000.

"There is a language problem," Ms. Azores added. "When a CSP worker who speaks Korean goes into a Japanese community, you don't get the same results as you would when a Japanese goes into a Japanese community to talk about the census. The impact might not be the same. Of the 200 CSP workers only nine are Asian or Pacific American."

Ms. Azores said her committee requested reading materials for those communities which CSP workers won't reach. The Census Bureau promised the materials but, according to Ms. Azores, they have not been received and she expressed concern that they won't be received in time for the census.

"I'm hoping there will be a better count (of minorities)," said Doris Sanders, chairperson of the Advisory Committee on the Black Population. "I think the bureau has come a long way since 1970." Ms. Sanders said she felt that the Census Bureau could have done more to insure a better count of minorities in 1980 and stated that the bureau still has not taken action on some of her committee's recommendations.

"I think blacks will be better counted this time because there is more awareness. More people realize the importance of the census than ever before," added Ms. Sanders.

She said the census questionnaire in the past was considered complicated by many persons and therefore significant numbers of people had just not been willing to take the time to fill it out. "The form is still complicated," she said. "We suggested that the form be made simpler but the bureau still hasn't done so."

"It's necessary to have as full participation as possible in the census," said Thelma Barnes, executive director of Black Methodists for Church Renewal, as she cited some of the reasons the census is important including the fact that it affects the amount of money spent for such projects as community programs. "All of these things relate to assistance and employment, all of which affects the black community," she added.

No national advisory committee was established by the Census Bureau for Native Americans. "They offered to set one up for us but we told them we didn't want one," said Sam Deloria, director of the American Indian Law Center in Albuquerque, N.M.

"Indian communities are organized differently than other minority communities. We wanted to insure the accountability between each tribe and organization rather than have a barrier. We wanted them to meet with each tribe directly," he explained.

Mr. Deloria is one of several Native Americans who have been working with the bureau on getting greater participation of Native Americans in the 1980 census. He said he feels that Native Americans will participate more in this census than ever before. "It's the first time the Census Bureau has even lifted a finger to get Native Americans to participate."

Other uses of census data include: statistics about the total population 18 and older who have less than five years of schooling to determine the amount of money allotted to each state under the Adult Education Act; statistics about the population unemployed or with low incomes to determine whether a community qualifies for assistance under the Public Works and Economic Development Act; statistics to determine housing needs funds for serving children and adults; statistics to determine where services are needed for the sick, for mothers and their babies and the elderly and handicapped. The census is used also to plan shopping centers, businesses, roads and bridges and new industry.

The deadline for census questionnaires is April 1, Census Day. Those households that do not mail back-completed questionnaires as requested will be visited by census takers who will obtain the required information.

ALLEN ASHBY with a LOOK ON SPORTS

There isn't much that can be said about the games of Iowa, Iowa State and Drake over the past week end. These conference races are getting closer than ninety-nine is to one hundred. In the Big Ten and the Missouri Valley there are any number of clubs that could take the title, or throw the races into more knots than a Boy Scout can untie.

Iowa doesn't have too much of a chance to figure in the tie for the Big Ten race, but you never can tell. If, by some chance they won all of the rest of their games, they just might get a small piece of the crown. Drake is in just about something like that. But the odds against either team winning all of their games are too great to quote.

The way teams in these races are knocking each other off, about the best one can do is play them one game at a time, and hope for the best. Iowa State has yet to win a game without their coach, but they aren't playing ball that badly. Just can't get the most scores at the right time.

This scrambling of title chases seems to be general all over the country. You read about the rated teams getting beat in their conferences just about every week end.

On the Pacific coast, we thought we had laid UCLA to rest, saying that they were no longer to be feared. Then they come up and dust the conference leaders but good. Accounts of the game say they looked like the old Bruins under Wooden. They may not be going anywhere in the Pac Ten, but they will likely be a big factor in helping decide who does go where.

On the East coast and in the South the rated teams are falling to the teams who are in their second division, and does that scramble up the national ratings. DePaul had better be glad they are not in any league. But we have to believe that somebody is going to get them before the year ends. But, even with one loss they would have to be number one. They have played as tough a schedule as anybody, and are still unbeaten, the only major college team like that.

You read about the things that are going on in college athletics now and people say they are shocked that athletes are turned out at the end of their playing years and are carried through school so they can play. I don't know how long that has been going on. I think it was done when I was in school, and that wasn't yesterday. It has been so long since an athlete went to the school of his choice and played out his string and then graduated that people don't expect it to happen any more.

One of the big reasons for this gathering of athletes under such false colors is, I think, the signing of letters of intent. As I get it, if you sign one of those things, you can't change your mind, or can you?

But the days when an athlete chose his school because maybe his brother or dad went there and he played for the school are out like high button shoes. You don't pick your school; the school picks you. Imagine a $200,000 budget for recruiting. Do you suppose this is to pay the traveling expenses of the recruiters? And why do you suppose there are so many assistant coaches on the staff?

I could go on like this forever, but it wouldn't help one bit.

We have a pretty good war going on here in the city among our high schools. For a while it looked as if Hoover was going to run away with things, but now they have to prove themselves over and over again. East has a slim chance and you have to give Lincoln a chance unless they get set down by Hoover again.

Have to give the North teams credit. They play every game as if they were number one. They have to have something good happen to them soon. Tech has gained a large measure of respect, and that should tell the rest of the league something.

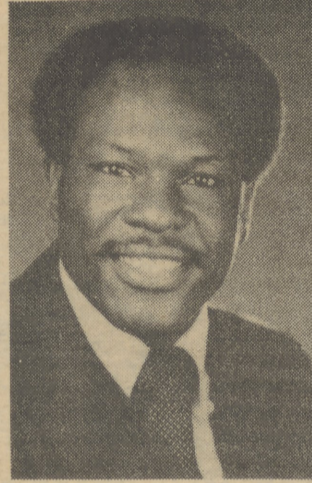

NOT MANY THIS TIME. Central St. (Ohio) 71, Kentucky St. 68. Lincoln (Mo) 67. S.W. Mo. 65. Tenn. St. 65. Fla. A&M 51. Alcorn 88, Southern 85.
