Black History Week Celebration At Willkie House

Tuesday Feb. 19 marks the kick-off of Black History Week at the Willkie House, which culminates with a Community Debate on Sunday, Feb. 24.

All are invited to join in the events sponsored by the Willkie House, 900 17th St., in conjunction with the Institute of Cultural Education (ICE), a newly formed local organization.

Black History Week commemorates the proud tale of the rich Afro-American heritage. In tribute to the centuries of growth, struggle, strength and survival, it is especially important to take a glimpse into the past, present and future development, having just crossed the threshold into a most crucial decade — the Eighties.

Scheduled events for the week include:

* Tuesday, Feb. 19, Film Festival and Kung Fu demonstration, beginning at 7 p.m. Free to public.

* Wednesday, Feb. 20, Art Exhibition, featuring outstanding local talent, beginning at 7 p.m. Free.

* Saturday, Feb. 23,

Disco Dance Celebration, 9 p.m. — 1:30 a.m. $2.50 at door.

* Sunday, Feb. 24, Community Debate, 4 p.m. $1 contribution asked. Topic: "Should Blacks Abandon the Democratic Party?"

The debate will be formally structured with a panel of Democrats that includes Paula Baker and Tony Williams, both on the Polk County Democratic Central Committee. The Republican panel consists of attorney Al Parrish, of the executive committee of the Polk County Republican Central Committee, and Vince Chapman, President of the local chapter of the NAACP.

The debate, coordinated by Kelly Evans, Assistant Director of the Willkie House, seeks to generate an exchange of ideas concerning some of the serious issues confronting the community. It is the first in a series of forums at the Willkie House on a variety of subjects.

There will be a 45-minute period during the debate allowing the audience to comment on the discussion and to question the panelists.

During this election year, the topic is timely, particularly in light of the Iowa precinct caucuses that commanded national attention in recent weeks.

The art exhibition will feature the works of noted artists, such as Floyd Shepard, Archie Martin and Don Michael.

The Black artist has long represented the cutting edge in the struggle to define the Afro-American existence, even before setting foot on American shores in bondage. As the spearhead of Black culture, Art symbolizes the total spirituality, character, values, wisdom, joy, humanity, and will of a people.

Tuesday's Film Festival features: "Black History: Lost, Stolen or Strayed?", narrated by Bill Cosby. The second film is entitled, "Black and White Uptight."

In addition to the scheduled events, a junior and senior high school essay contest is being offered, with $50 cash prizes to first place winners in each division.

Second place winners are awarded $25.

The purpose of the contest is to stress the importance of scholastic achievement, the pursuit of knowledge, and heighten the awareness of Black historical figures.

The topic is: "If you were to choose an Afro-American figure other than Martin Luther King who deserves a national holiday, who would you choose and why?"

Essays must be 2-5 pages in length, typewritten, and double-spaced. All entries are to be received by the Willkie House by March 12.

For more information on the events, contact Twyla Woods at 243-7817.

Come and enjoy the Black History Week Celebration at the Willkie House Feb. 19-24.

Brotherhood Begins With Respect

Close friends of J.B. Morris III and J. Michael Mayer are examples of brotherhood in action. Both are attorneys and met at the University of Iowa where they graduated from law school. Brotherhood does not need to be a dream, it can be reality, as these two men demonstrate in their daily lives.

For more on Brotherhood Week and how we all can promote brotherhood in our community, see page 8.

King Refused Trip Funds

By Carolyn King

Robert King, chairperson of the Central Advisory Board was refused reimbursement by the Des Moines City Council for travel expenses to a White House meeting on community action programs.

Prior to his trip, King asked the City Council to defray expenses for said trip in the amount of $372.00. The request was denied because the trip was politically motivated and designed more for personal benefit and there was doubt King could obtain information the City did not already know. King used his personal vacation time and money to make the trip.

The meeting was held in conjunction with the 15th anniversary of CSA's War on Poverty Programs. By his presence at the meeting, Mr. King was able to learn of several programs that would be beneficial to the City of Des Moines and programs that the City should investigate and/or implement.

He obtained information and documentation that would be of importance to the City of Des Moines; moreover, upon his arrival at the meeting he learned that of the 250 CAB Directors and Chairmen chosen to go to Washington, D.C., all had their expenses paid by their respective local Community Action Agencies and that he was the only person attending who had paid his own way.

Mr. King presented his report to the CAB meeting on Feb. 5 and motion was made and approved to recommend to City Council that Mr. King be reimbursed for his attendance at this meeting.

IEWS and REVIEWS

by Allen Ashby

As I go into these impressions of black history in Des Moines as I saw it, I have to remind that these are my impressions of what was happening and that somebody else may see the same happenings entirely different. But here we go again.

The election of 1928 saw the Republican Herbert Hoover in the White House and shortly after the Great Depression hit. Blacks were hit as hard as anybody. The first to go were the black businesses in the loop.

There was a black loan company called the Standard Loan that was located between Walnut and Court on the second floor. That went under. G. W. Scott had a pool hall on Grand between Seventh and Eighth, and it had to move up on Center Street. Gadberry Tucker had a clean car business in the block between Sixth and Fifth. Tucker had just about all the business he could handle. His lease wasn't renewed, so he had to go.

Among the people hit by the job layoffs and store closings were poor whites and blacks. So you had what were called soup kitchens set up in old houses or vacant store fronts and people took pails, pots or whatever and made the trip to the soup kitchens at least once a day where they got their container full of soup and a loaf of bread.

Came the presidential campaign of 1932. The Democrats were elected and things began to happen.

Under the Republicans banks began to close until it was common excuse to keep from paying one's bills because "the bank took all my money." And lots of times the guy was right.

The new Deal came in and it wasn't directed at any segment of the population. Everybody was poor, so the programs were set up for people. This meant that blacks were just some more people in the thing, unless some little person wanted to make something out of it, and that could soon be straightened out by letting the proper authorities know about it.

There were work programs for people in just about every group, and there was no thought of keeping different colors or races apart. One thing I recall about the work program was the fact that there was a setup of workers that had an all black supervisory crew. When somebody wanted to add some white workers to this crew, the city hall bunch said that they didn't believe that white men would work under black supervision. Lacey Spriggs, foreman of the project, told the City Fathers that this was survival. "These men are hungry, and there are no jobs you can walk off and get another one the next day. They don't care who bosses them."

And the guy turned out to be right. This mixed crew became one of the most efficient groups of workers and never had any friction.

The most noticeable thing about the pattern of segregation was that as business began to fall off, places were not so particular about who patronized them. Theaters began to open their doors and weren't so insistent that people take certain seats. Small restaurants began to welcome blacks, although the really big ones still clung to the old ways.

During the two years between 1932 and 34 Negro Democrats as we were called then began to come out of the woodwork. I don't know if they had always been there and afraid to come out, or if they were opportunists. But we had a state and county democratic organization that were financed by the main party.

Our group traveled around the state telling blacks why they should vote Democratic. People like J. B. Morris and Archie Alexander and Mrs. Lillian Edmunds were staunch Republicans and were the leaders in the fight against us. I would guess that the black vote was about fifty fifty in 1934.

But in the next two years the battle for black votes was fierce. There were not so many of us, but we could make the difference in a close vote.

In 1936 the National Democrat party hired a writer to do a series of articles to tell blacks why they should vote Democratic. The articles ran in the Bystander beside the editorials by J. B. Morris and other writers for Republicans.

As I look back, I don't think that any words turned the blacks against "the party of Abraham Lincoln." For the first time in a long while poor workers, black and white, received a weekly paycheck and it gave a person some measure of dignity. So they weren't about to vote against that setup. As one guy put it, Nobody shoots Santa Claus. And the trend was national, so black voters just followed the trend of events.

Some of the leaders in the Iowa Democrat party were people like Theodore Martin Sr., who was the first state chairman, Henry Mease and his brother Quinten Mease, secretary of the Crocker YMCA, and Lawrence W. Oliver, who later became one of our outstanding lawyers. When the Democrats renewed their hold on the statehouse, black voters got some recognition.

As I look back, I think that the people, instead of going after some new jobs, wanted to replace the black Republicans who were there, and thus didn't gain too much ground.

But old timers like Morris and S. Joe Brown said it when they said that if Iowa blacks wanted to count in state politics, they should cling to the Republican party. They would dominate state politics with a stumble here and there, but in the long run, they would be in command. And those folks have been proven right.

REDLINING: THE INSTALLMENT CONTRACT

Perhaps the most common source of "mortgage" funds for inner city residents has been the installment contract. An installment contract for the sale of real property is a contract of sale which provides for the payment of the purchase price to be made in installments over a period of time and for the deed to the property to be delivered at a future date, generally upon payment of the final installment of the sales price.

Although no formal mortgage is involved, the contract works in much the same manner as a mortgage loan. In effect, the seller is lending the buyer the money to purchase the real property with the contract installments repaying the principal and interest of the loan over the term of the contract, much like a mortgage.

Unlike the formal mortgage, however, it distinctly disfavors the contract purchaser, especially the inner-city resident or prospective buyer in that area, who, because local financial institutions will not extend a mortgage loan, has to accept such a contract on much harsher terms than if such credit were extended. Among the most glaring weaknesses of the installment contract form for inner-city buyers are the contract term, high contract interest rates and forfeiture/foreclosure procedures.

I will address each problem in the order given above, and assume throughout that the contract in question contains specific language as to each item, as most do.

The contract term (period of existence) itself can be a serious problem. Aside from the tax considerations involved which accrue to both the buyer and the seller under such a contract, the seller adjusts the amount of the downpayment and installments to fit not only the circumstances and reliability, but also upon his determination of the local trends in property values.

A contract seller who has little confidence in either the creditworthiness of the buyer or the likelihood of lower property values in the future (or both) is much more likely to require a much larger downpayment and higher monthly payments than would a

CENTREMETRO AND BLACKS: A BLESSING OR A CURSE?

On Friday, February 8th at 1:30 a meeting was held at the Tiny Tot Child Care Center. Mr. Bill Ludwig, chairman of the New Construction Task Force/Private Sector presented the Centremetro plan to concerned individuals in the Black community. Some present at the meeting adamantly expressed their reservations in a highly emotional tone. Others raised questions of a highly academic nature.

The atmosphere prevalent at the meeting came as a total surprise to Mr. Bill Ludwig and Mrs. Marilyn Staples who are advocates of the plan. They had not expected any oppositions to the plan and had never incurred any before. Of course heretofore the plan had only been presented to various business, civic, and governmental agencies.

They were unaware of the strong feelings of the Black community in regards to any move that is viewed by the Black community as displacing us again. The Black community of Des Moines has never been allowed to stabilize in particular location. There has always been some kinda plan to keep us movin'.

We have been nothing more than urban nomads. We must stabilize geographically if our power is to be felt by the political system or in any other way.

University Ave. is the first street Blacks have centered around that goes from one end of the city to the other. This is why it is important that we maintain our present location. To move again would be another set-back. The implications of Centremetro combined with the Phoenix plan for University Ave. are very negative. Negative that is unless we involve ourselves to make them positive.

Some of the questions raised at the meeting were:

1. Will this new housing raise the taxes presently being paid by the residents of the area? Yes, but state law limits this to 6 per cent.
2. Will this plan result in Blacks being displaced as is the case in other Black communities throughout the U.S.? Not if the Black community adopts a no sell policy and Blacks who are able purchase the new housing.
3. Since three of the four target areas are predominantly Black did it occur to you to consult the Black community first. No.
4. Did you even conceive of facing any opposition in the Black community? No.

It became clear to all who were present that these plans were drawn up without considering any input at all from the Black community. Add to this the fact that we had to initiate this meeting and we no doubt arrive at the inescapable conclusion that this plan was not designed to benefit Black people! However the consensus was that even though it was not designed to benefit the Black community it can benefit us if we organize to sit tight on our property.

Some were of the opinion that there is nothing we can do. "They've already committed the money, they're ready to build, we can't stop them" shouted one person as he made ready to leave. But most felt that if the Black community was more knowledgeable of the plan we could organize to make the plan benefit us.

The key point however was raised after some of those that felt hopeless left, and that was that this plan cannot succeed without the support of the Black community. How?

Sure the houses will be built but who would want to move into a house in a hostile neighborhood? And if most of these new houses do not go to Black people then surely there is cause for hostility.

The presenters of the plan were forced to concede to this point. This is our only safeguard to ensure that this plan not just benefit white suburbanites who want more affordable housing close to the core of the city.

As for whether the Centremetro plan is a blessing or a curse for Blacks; only time will tell. But it's clear that if it doesn't benefit Blacks it can be made to not benefit anybody.

A Black Look At Politics

William S. Morris

This week I must stray from the "beaten path" of politics for a moment, to comment on a recent article in the Des Moines Tribune concerning race and genetics in determining intelligence. My readers will have to bear with me in this endeavor, as I cannot find the article in my stack of old newspapers, and thus must rely on memory for the majority of the subject matter.

In brief, the article in question, a critique of a book written by a nationally-known psychologist (whose name escapes me at this time), attempts to deal with the controversial subject of genetically-determined intelligence characteristics, as they relate to race. Are black children inferior to white children in terms of "brain power" and test scores?

I have read similar works dealing with the question of race and intelligence (including those by William Shockley, who also says "white brains" are superior to "black brains"), and, by and large, they tend to center around the subject of I.Q. (Intelligence Quotient) test scores.

There are several different types of I.Q. tests, ranging from the traditional "Stanford - Binet" test, to the "Wexler" test, and the new "BITCH" test, designed specifically for black children by a black psychologist.

For the most part, statistical evidence irrefutably supports the notion (or hypothesis) that black children do significantly worse on most types of standardized tests, than white children. This applies across the board, for most students, whether it be on the Iowa Test of Basic Skills, or Law School and Medical School aptitude examinations. Sad to say, black students simply don't score as well as their white counterparts.

What do I.Q. tests measure, and just what do they prove? Psychologists and sociologists are divided as to the validity of such examinations, and subcultural characteristics must be taken into consideration. Most experts agree that standardized intelligence tests measure only that knowledge which is considered valuable by the majority in any society; in America, that means white, middle-class society.

Like it or not, if black Americans are to progress socioeconomically in this country, they must adopt at least some of the traits that white people respect. This is what "street people" often refer to as "playing the 'Tom' role", in a radicalized sense.

This becomes, then, a two-edged sword: on the one hand, "success" implies taking on some of the trappings of white society; yet, this often means renouncing one's "blackness". Obviously, knowledge that is necessary to survive in white society may bear little resemblance to that required for existence in inner-city areas.

Survival in the ghetto is quite far removed from suburban living. Thus, since black students who receive lower test scores in school many times go on to become successful doctors, lawyers, accountants, and businessmen, how valid are such standardized test scores?

The problem here is that I.Q. test scores are permanently attached to a person's educational record for life, to be examined and weighed by potential employers and college entrance boards. Expectations follow, rightly or wrongly — "if a person does well on standardized tests, he'll (she'll) likely be a good employee."

Chronic black unemployment is a partial result of this process, as are teachers evaluations of black students performance. You may be surprised to learn that a child's physical attractiveness also goes a long way in determining what a teacher expects, and thus how he (she) grades that student. Unless they are very bright, "ugly" students perform less well than their "attractive" classmates.

In conclusion, the R & T article contends that the statistical complexity of the study interferes with criticism of the book, methodological or otherwise. Formulae, cross-sectional data analysis, and the like are formidable subjects, with which I have only rudimentary familiarity from my college days.

They are indeed, difficult to critique. Then again, a study conducted by a world-famous psychologist several years ago has recently been exposed as totally falsified; he made up his results, assistants' names, and much more.

How much significance black America attaches to studies dealing with the connection between intelligence and race is irrelevant. What is more crucial is how white society evaluates test scores, and how black children are treated in our school system. Basically, as it now stands, the question of the relationship between race and intelligence will never be resolved. The challenge to black parents in the 1980's will be how to motivate their children to strive for excellence in all that they do.

Children should be taught to always try their best, and not be afraid to fail. Failure is a part of the human experience. And middle class black children do just as poorly in school as poor black children, by and large. Studies prove this. This will be the main challenge to black families in the 1980's. Are we equal to the challenge?

MINORITY GROUP AFFILIATES WITH CHAMBER OF COMMERCE

The Minority Business Association (MBA) has affiliated with the Greater Des Moines Chamber of Commerce. The Board of Directors of the MBA has also set as a membership requirement that any member of the MBA must also become a member of the Chamber.

Jim Mitchell, President of the MBA, points out that this is a very minimal investment compared to the vast resources available to his group through the Chamber. He anticipates that both the Chamber and the minority group should find the association mutually advantageous.

The Board of Directors of the MBA will meet monthly on the fourth Saturday of each month at the Chamber of Commerce Briefing Room in the Ruan Center. The meeting will begin promptly at 10 a.m. The next meeting is set for February 23, 1980. Prospective members are encouraged to attend.

THOUGHTS AND COMMENTS

mortgage lender with a correspondingly shorter contract term, reflecting a sort of "take the money and run" attitude. This is reflective not only of a lack of confidence and trust in those interested in acquiring inner-city real property and their ability to perform the contract provisions over a lengthy period of time, but also the biased and unfounded assumption that inner-city neighborhoods and those who live in them lack the pride and determination to prevent the sort of deterioration which leads to lowered property values.

The amount of the downpayment and installments is generally geared to the prospect of whether or not the seller expects to receive a "balloon" payment; i.e., whether the balance due under the contract will become due immediately at a future date because the buyer is unable to fulfill all of its terms. The probability of the necessity of such a payment increases as the term of the contract decreases, and the probability of a foreclosure or forfeiture increases.

In redlined inner-city areas where most or all of the local financial institutions refuse to extend first mortgage credit, the buyer under an installment contract is often forced to sell the property in order to make such a payment, which will likely start the process again; in this way, the problem is a circular one, for the next prospective buyer, if there is one, will likely face more severe terms and run into similar problems in acquiring the property, leading to neighborhood deterioration and housing abandonment.

A further major weakness involves the interest rate which the contract places on the amount of the outstanding principal. Since an installment contract is considered to be of a private nature, the state usury laws and mortgage interest rate ceilings that would apply to a formal mortgage. Thus a contract seller can charge whatever interest rate the buyer is willing to pay.

Even if an inner-city purchaser was able to make the required payments and thus avoid foreclosure or forfeiture, they would likely be subject to paying a relatively high rate of interest on the principal amount, compared with that involved with a mortgage.

Core Supports Affirmative Action for City

by Ora McQueen

CORE was among several organizations who met with the Des Moines City Council with concern for the present Affirmative Action Plan. The plan is the city's written commitment to undertake specific planned action to insure equality of opportunity in both city policy and programs of employment.

CORE takes the position that the plan is much too general in nature and should be broken down to specific departments rather than city employment as a whole. Also that specific timetables should be made so that the goals of the plan can be observed and met.

The Labor and Industry Committee of the NAACP conducted a study into city employment and found some discrepancies and misrepresentation on statistical data released by the city in "Minority Utilization Report," a document that gives information on minority employment. Herman Wadsworth who heads the Labor and Industry Committee for the NAACP revealed that in 1978 the city showed a total of 1898 employees. Of this total figure, 121 were minorities. This represents 6.4 percent of the intended 7 percent utilization goal used by the city for hiring minorities.

However, the Labor and Industry Committee found that the total figure of 1898 included part time, fulltime, casual labor, Civil Service and non-Civil service employees. The minority employment figure of 121 was also a figure that had been lumped together to make the employment look better on paper as it relates to minorities.

The actual findings by the committee showed 1881 fulltime employees 73 of which falls under the Federally - assisted programs of Neighborhood Development and Urban Development. The goal of the Federally - assisted programs is 23.4 percent minority employment. Of this, the city has reached a 22 percent goal. These goals of the Federally - assisted programs should not be confused with regular city hiring practices.

So therefore, not counting the federally - assisted employees, the city shows a total employment figure of 1808 regular full time persons. Of this total, 1722 or 95.3 percent are of the white race. One thousand five hundred forty of these are white males and 182 or 10.1 percent are white females. Sixty eight or 3.8 percent are minority males and 18 or 0.9 percent are minority females.

Since all the minorities are lumped together represented by one figure, it makes it difficult to determine if all ethnic groups are represented in all levels of city employment. Also, it cannot be determined whether the salaries compare favorably with white employees, especially the white male.

Those addressing the City Council were representatives of ACORN, NAACP, Inter - City Parrish, CORE Inner Urban Alcohol, local black attorneys and a white city employee who stepped forth to reveal his own findings since being employed by the city for 20 years.

CORE along with the other supporting organizations feels that the city should serve as an example to private industry and open up employment to those who are qualified. The city is now almost 4 percent short of its intended goal of 7 percent minority employment. CORE further supports the position that the City Manager as well as the City Council serve as a "watchdog" on city employment practices and insure that equal opportunity in recruiting and hiring have been afforded to all segments of the community, especially the black community since it represents the largest percentage of the city's minority population.

Des Moines Mayor, Pete Crivaro and Councilman - at - large, Tim Urban pledged to meet with the Labor and Industry Committee in an ongoing dialogue to insure fair and equal employment for the city. Councilman Russ Levine took the position that the city has hired qualified people to do the job of hiring. Hiring practices should be left to those in charge and not to the City Council or the City Manager. The City Manager, Richard Wilkey had no comments. His office has been criticized for not having minorities on his staff.

Thirteen boys and eighteen girls qualified for the YMCA state swimming championship this past weekend at the Newton YMCA. These swimmers will represent the Urban YMCA February 16th and 17th at the State meet in Ft. Dodge, Iowa.

This is a great improvement over the 1978-79 team that qualified thirteen swimmers in total. The team has been practicing in the North and East High swimming pools, with home meets being held at North.

YBA Sets Pot Luck Dinner

The YBA league East has set a Pot Luck

This dinner will give the kids and parents of all the teams a chance to get together for an informal dinner. All the kids will be given certificates of participation at the dinner. The league started November 17th and was held every Saturday (except during Christmas) from 9-11 a.m. at East High School.

The league consisted of six teams with nine on each team. The dinner will be held in the East High Cafeteria.

That's Entertainment

Peggy Spates Johnson

As I was telling a friend, I've begun to judge all comedians by Richard Pryor, a pretty hard act to follow. Also it is an unfair practice to any other comic I encounter.

I kept telling myself that as I watched the Cosby concert last week. Bill Cosby wowed two audiences at the Civic Center with reminiscence of his childhood, his children and his family life. Cosby is a funny man — a cool, yet warm and touching comic.

He's the kind of comedian who produces grins, smiles, guffaws and belly laughs. All the while you're nodding your head in fond remembrances about all the changes we've all went through as a child and then a parent. Cosby's style is totally different from Pryor's — the almost total lack of obscenities or cuss words to start with.

His background is also different: that of the lower middle class black family who have both parents at home. Both of them working and struggling to provide for their family's economic needs and yet instill a sense of morality and the "judeo - Christian ethic in their kids. The exact background I and many of my friends originate from.

Pryors' street life — being brought up in a house of ill repute by a slick, street-wise grandmother, would naturally produce a sarcastic bitter, "laugh or lose you mind" type of mentality. So, so much for comparisons when the two comics come from such different perspectives.

I was disappointed in the numbers of blacks at the 9:30 show — why can't we support our own "super stars"? I realize that blacks have to have a crossover audience in order to make it, but golly folks, the man is a legend in the area of comedy — inflation or no.

Cosby opened up the show with a sly jab at the "uniqueness" of the "BIG D-M" as he called Des Moines. Supposedly his cardplaying buddies (Paul Newman, Sammy Davis and the like) were all angry with Cosby for not being allowed to hop on a plane to visit us here in Iowa.

As I stated, Cosby concentrated on his five children, his wife Camille and the day to day crazies that go along with raising kids — even if you're a Hollywoodite (by way of a Massachusetts hideaway). His monologue on the arrival of his first child from the Lamaze classes as compared with the actual birth up to bringing the baby and all the flowers home in a fast moving Ferari was like Deja-vu to me.

Particularly when Camille forgot all about the breathing techniques she has so carefully learned and stood up in the hospital bed to holler "MORPHINE!!!!"

Also I thought we were the only family who had a mad dog who tried to "check out" the new baby by attacking his master. I guess there is a giant script of life we all seem to memorize and act out as we go through the years.

He later compared his upbringing to the way his parents now treated their grandchildren when he jokingly lamented, "These aren't the same people who raised ME..." Cosby is a refreshing respite from the day to day harshness of big city problems and world trials and tribulations.

Although a realistic and a highly creative, driven man (his PhD degree came through work on the FAT ALBERT series), he makes black family life a little sweeter, funnier and touching to all of us. The problems or race discrimination and economic chaos somewhat faded during his two hour show. Speaking of economics, where can you get 2 hours of good entertainment for $10 anymore?

GRANNYS family entertainment center opened last week in Des Moines. After being bombarded with advertisements I dragged the family out to the new location north of Dahls on Merle Hay road. Its a bright, pleasant, though relatively small alternative to say, The Land of Oz or Happy Joes.

I could tell the place had a bad case of opening week jitters and the "Not quite readies." GRANNYS consists of an ice cream parlor — after a week of dieting I had to break down and get a sundae; a miniature golf course; bump cars ala Riverview park; "Computer Goof" which was not in operation — whatever it consisted of; a Batting cage that my 2 year old tried desperately to get into the baseballs flying at 50 miles an hour; a large game room — pinballs and such and last, a small area of kiddies rides at 5C a shot.

The latter is an especially good idea when toddlers want to ride each 'animal' 10 times each. Problem was 3 of the six rides were not functioning. The idea of GRANNYS is a sound one but it was opened before it was really ready.

Suggestions from this corner are: more help — the few poor girls there seemed swamped; better training of the help they have — many didn't seem to know what the heck was happening; making sure all rides and games are working properly; ending the use of tokens, cash would be easier and quicker; and being sure the correct prices are posted.

GRANNYS is ok for the kiddies, but it better get its stuff together or it won't be there next year at this time.

Rev. Marshall Smith, of Bethel A.M.E. Church, did an excellent job of carrying out our church services in the absence of Rev. Grady, last Sunday. For the morning services, Sister Ardeth (Jackie) Fair will be featured as the guest speaker, supported by a mystery soloist and the Richard Allen Chorus. HOLY GHOST TEMPLE COGIC this is an article written by a 11 year old (the Pastor's daughter — Doris Jean Johnson) She wrote this article in Bible Study class Tuesday eve. Feb. 5 — Sister Bettie Frazier teaching — I quote to Grandma (Sister Frazier)

Bishop O. J. Johnson had remarks about the lesson. Our subject of our lesson was Man's weakness, Christ's power. I think this lesson is very good. Did the man hear Jesus' words there was a man at the pool. The man by the pool was a Jew. Christ is the true Bethesda, or the house of mercy. On this porch was the multitudes. Some people didn't like the Jews. The gentile didn't see Jesus when he rose again.

Look, Therefore, To This Day

By
Lynda Walker-Webster

Last year there was such an interesting response from printing a few of my favorite cliches in this column, that I thought perhaps we would do it again with some different ones. In addition to a few that triggered mental responses from me, I am printing a few of those that some of you have shared with me.

"The 'big head' is an affliction of the upper part of the skull, caused by feeding conceit into a vacuum."

"God does not comfort us to make us comfortable, but to make us comforters."

"The most glorious victory over an enemy is to turn him into a friend."

"Examine many of your troubles and you'll find your own name stamped on them as the manufacturer."

"Throw mud and you will have dirty hands, whether or not the mud hits the mark."

"Often those of whom we speak least on earth are best known in heaven."

"Satan has a reserved seat in many a sanctuary."

"Dignity is what some people stand on when they are short."

"Conscience is a still, small voice; and half the time when it tries to speak up, it finds that the line is busy."

"Trust God without terms."

"He who cannot forgive others breaks the bridge over which he himself must cross."

"There is a vast difference between having something to say and having to say something."

"The straight and narrow path is the only road that has no traffic problem."

"Your neighbor's windows look a great deal better when you wash your own."

"To err is a human failing; to forgive, a human achievement."

"You are a loser in life if you see in the mirror someone else's image whom you have to please."

—Maxwell Maltz

"Live through your mistakes, not with them."

(The following quotes are by the Country Parson:
"A fellow's life, like his basement, wouldn't be so hard to put back in shape if he'd clean it up a little every day.")

"The old circuit rider had a lot of horse sense — probably because he spent more time on his horse than the modern preacher spends in his study."

"I wish everybody could celebrate the birth of Jesus without getting a hang-over."

"There are two ways to stop malicious gossip — stop listening and stop talking!"

"It's hard for a preacher to win converts in a community where some church members are not so honest."

"From the mouths of rivers and men flow the filth and contamination they have picked up along the way."

And last but not least, the cliché that was the most popular of those printed last year:

"There are two types of church members; pillars and caterpillars. The pillars hold up the church while the caterpillars run in and out."

Jesus walked by all of the people. He saw this man — he was there for a long time. He was there five years setting there before Jesus was born. Nobody will help the man up. Jesus said to the man rise, take up thy bed and walk, and the man walked. The Bible said that God is light. Adam was healthy and strong. But he did wrong by eating the wrong fruit. Jeremiah was the crying soul. If that man cousin see that man walk he would be talking. The church people bother the man. Some people are jealous. Keep it up Dorris Jean that wasn't a bad summary of a Bible Study lesson for a 11 year old. May God bless you in your writing of notes and articles. Jesus will dot all the is' and cross all the ts. He's the great teacher.

4TH ANNUAL BLACK HISTORY PROGRAM

On Sunday Feb. 24, at 4 p.m. The Maple Street Baptist Church will be celebrating their Black History Program. This program will be in the honor of Dr. Carter G. Woodson, the father of Black History.

The year 1980 will be a very special year for the constituents of the National Baptist Convention, USA, Inc. During this year, we will celebrate three great anniversaries, 200th years since the founding of Sunday School, the 100th year of our convention and the 75th birthday of our National Congress of Christian Education.

In these celebrations we shall review the past, consider the present and look forward to the future. Understandably, there will be overlap in making these significant milestones in these areas of our work or service unto our Lord and Savior, Jesus Christ.

For each of these movements has influenced the others; and together they have enabled our fellowship of Baptists to render a fruitful ministry for more than a century.

This program is sponsored by the Sunday School. Superintendent, Linda K. Clark, Pastor, Rev. George H. Parrish.

NEW FRIENDSHIP CHURCH OF GOD IN CHRIST

God is moving by his spirit all over this land. Certainly it is as the Bible says, that in the last days, God would pour his spirit out upon all flesh. We can truly say that God is continuing to move at New Friendship church.

On this past Sunday, the word of God was spoken by our own Missionary E. Alexander, who did a beautiful job in the absence of our Pastor Elder Daye. Pastor Daye was in service in Rock Island, Ill. with Elder T.C. Reid. He was meeting with Sis. Reid, as they have been appointed to the State Mission Work. Pastor Daye brought back the word that they had a wonderful time in the Lord.

On Saturday at 1 p.m. the majority of saints will journey to Cedar Rapids, to the State Leadership Conference being held at New Jerusalem COGIC where our Bishop H. Bassett is Pastor. On Sat. from 4 - 7 there will be a Chili Supper at the church, 1317 Forest, sponsored by Missionary H. Malone. For more information, please call 265-6996.

National Brotherhood Week

February 17-23

"EVERY BIGOT WAS ONCE A CHILD FREE OF PREJUDICE" Sister Mary De Lourdes

by Don McEvoy

BROTHERHOOD WEEK — WHO NEEDS IT?

A decade ago Brotherhood Week embarrassed me, notwithstanding the fact that the organization that pays my salary has been its sponsor since 1934. I wrote an acerbic piece entitled "Brotherhood Week Bugs Me!" and suggested we withdraw the life-support system from a comatose patient, let it die with dignity, offer a suitable eulogy and be done with it once and for all.

I very clearly pointed out that it was not the ideal which I opposed but rather the absurdity that after all these years we still need a specially designated week to remind us of our unity as humankind. It was the charade of it all that got to me. The abuse of it. The caricature of a great idea. The jokes about it and the parodies on it, these were what bugged me.

But Brotherhood Week simply would not die. When mid-February drew near the requests for materials and posters and speakers and films came rolling in. From schools and civic clubs and church groups and PTAs and newspapers and radio and television stations. What do you have for us for Brotherhood Week they pleaded.

So, for the 46th consecutive year the National Conference of Christians and Jews is urging Americans to observe Brotherhood Week starting on February 17.

I've come around. I have become reconvinced of its abiding value. It is a time of reminder. It is a time of inventory. It is a time of renewal. It is a time of recommitment to those ideals we ought to live by every week of the year but so easily forget in our daily struggles for survival. It is a time for goal-setting and determination that America is going to press on toward the complete elimination of every vestige of bigotry and discrimination. It is a time to get out all the old unpaid I.O.U.s representing our debts to this nation's racial, religious and ethnic minorities and set up a schedule of repayment. It is a time to determine to make the American Dream of "liberty and justice for all," come true.

"Brotherhood and Sisterhood Begin With Respect" is the theme this year. That is something I can buy in to.

Brotherhood Week, Who needs it? I do. And I suspect you do, too.
(Don McEvoy is Senior Vice President of the National Conference of Christians and Jews. The opinions expressed are his own.)

HEY, YOU GUYS ARE ALL GOING OFF IN DIFFERENT DIRECTIONS! ...WHAT WE REALLY NEED AROUND HERE IS SOME....

*THAT'S THE POWER OF ALL COLORS WORKING TOGETHER!

AN AMERICAN INSTITUTION

In 1934, some 300 communities in the United States shook off the doldrums of the then current depression long enough to observe something called Brotherhood Day. The observance caused only a ripple of response in the participating communities and it received virtually no national recognition. But to a group of men and women banded together in a relatively new organization known as the National Conference of Christians and Jews, that day in April, 1934 was exciting and inspirational.

And in Denver, Colorado, a Catholic priest, Monsignor Hugh McMenamin, was seeing the fulfillment of an idea he had almost casually proposed to the National Conference two years previously. The suggestion grew out of this situation: Monsignor McMenamin was sitting in his study one July day, looking at his calendar with July 4 standing out in red with the wording, "Independence Day." The priest thought, "Wouldn't it be fine if for just one day we celebrated our interdependence?"

Those who worked to promote that first Brotherhood Day saw it become a full week's observance in 1940, and four years later, more than 2,000 communities, among which, for the first time every state was included, celebrated Brotherhood Week. Since 1940, Brotherhood Week dates have always been the full week that includes Washington's Birthday. Today, countless communities of the nation observe the event in some manner.

The Observance of BROTHERHOOD WEEK is one of the programs of the National Conference of Christian and Jews in cooperation with schools, churches and synagogues, civic, service and community organizations, and interested individuals.

The NCCJ is a non-profit human relations organization engaged in a nationwide program of intergroup education to eliminate prejudice and discrimination. Founded in 1928, the NCCJ works to build bridges of understanding among all groups, to bring the forces of enlightenment and education to bear upon racial and religious prejudice, and to achieve implementation of the moral law: giving to others the same rights and respect we desire for ourselves. It enlists all those, who without compromise of conscience or of their distinctive commitments, work to build better relationships among persons of all religions, races and nationalities.

NCCJ's educational program follows a multiple approach at various levels to the intergroup situation in the community. This program includes dialogues, institutes, seminars, and workshops, in addition to the Brotherhood Week observance.

Brotherhood in Des Moines

Historically, February is a human rights month. George Washington was born in February. Abraham Lincoln was born in February. National Negro History Week is in February. Brotherhood Week and Brotherhood Month all in February. All of these have some bearing on the progress made in the field of human rights.

Negro History Week was established in 1926, although the study began in 1915, the National Council of Churches in America, Committee on Racial Relations in 1924, and the National Conference of Christians and Jews is observing its 44th year.

Following World War I, considerable antagonism between races and religions was generated by such groups as the Klu Klux Klan which had made its way into northern communities. In order to combat these sentiments, the National Conference of Christians and Jews and also the Committee on Racial Relations conducted extensive campaigns over the country, directing attention to the improvement of better racial and religious relationships among the people of this country.

In 1924, George Webber, then secretary of the Des Moines Y.M.C.A., organized a camp-out at Mitigwa, in the Ledges near Boone, Iowa, as I remember consisting of John Cownie, Harvey Ingham, S. Joe Brown, Will Tone, Rev. G. W. Robinson, Rabbi Mannheim and James B. Morris. At this conference, the problem of race and religious tolerance was explored. Out of this conference grew Des Moines Interracial Commission with a membership consisting of both sexes.

Recognizing the value of such an organization to the schools, several teachers became prominent in it. H. T. Steper, principal of North High School, was the first president and succeeding presidents was included school teachers, lawyers, ministers, social workers, bankers and other concerned citizens.

The Interracial Commission and the National Conference of Christians and Jews held seminars in churches and schools and were available to other organizations seeking to better acquaint themselves with the problems they espoused. Most of the schools have set up some type of Negro history studies, but have not had the courage to place it in their curriculum so that Negro history would be a required subject or at least required reading for all students. (Maybe had this been done, more people would have known the facts displayed in the recent televised show, "Roots".)

The Interracial Commission, like the National Conference of Christians and Jews, confined operations to the creation of sentiment to compliment the activities of the NAACP and B'nai B'rith, among the Jews.

The Des Moines Commission was instrumental, in cooperation with other organizations, in leveling off the segregation that existed in Des Moines. Some of these achievements were securing Negro teachers in Des Moines Public Schools of opening employment in areas where Negroes had never been hired and the almost total elimination of discrimination in public accommodations. The commission in conjunction with other groups, was a moving force in the establishment of the Des Moines Commission of Human Rights and job discrimination and the first Civil Rights Commission.

Since the establishment of the Des Moines Commission on Human Rights and Job Discrimination and the Iowa Civil Rights Commission these organizations have somewhat given over to the newly created forces to do the work they had started.

Perhaps you sent or spoke kind word
As any friend could say;
Perhaps you were not there at all—
Just thought of us that day.

Perhaps you prepared tasty food,
Or maybe furnished a car;
Perhaps you rendered a service unseen,
Near at hand or from afar.

Whatever you did to console the heart,
We thank you so much—
whatever the part.

ON SPORTS

While Drake is struggling to stay alive and Iowa State is trying to win at least one more game, Iowa's Hawks have tightened the Big Ten cage race a couple of notches. It seems like a big job, but if they can win the rest of their games, they might end up in a tie for first. If they drop one more, they will have a high finish, and you have to wonder what they would have done if they could have kept their initial starting team intact. But right now it seems as if they have five fellows who are used to playing together, and sometimes that makes a tough combination.

You will recall how traveling teams used to tour the country with just five players, and the more they played, the tougher they got because they knew just what each guy could do and how to compensate for any weakness that some of them might have. So that is the case with Iowa, I think.

I listened to Drake coach Bob Ortegell praise Lewis Lloyd, saying that he deserves to be an all American, and also hoping that he stays around at Drake for at least another year. Bob may be right about Lewis being all-American, but there are so many good players around the country that you could pick at least a dozen All-American teams and have plenty left over.

You would have to say that Lloyd belongs on at least one of them. Make it in the pros? People who say he is ready may be pushing the big fellow too fast. Knowledgeable people say he needs another year of seasoning before he goes up.

But then they said that Moses Malone was too immature and would never make it in the pros. Maybe Malone was lucky that the first league he got into wasn't quite as tough as the NBA and he got some seasoning. Now he can play with any team in the league, and he was barely seventeen when he started.

There were a couple of others, one of them being Jim Chones of Marquette, so it can be done.

I have to take a break from basketball to get in my licks about boycotting the Olympics. I didn't have an opinion either way, but I think that the United States has never supported any boycott of any international program by any nation for any reason.

They didn't go along with the black nations when they protested the presence of South Africa and New Zealand. They literally got out and fought with their fists to see that South Africa played in the Davis cup tennis matches in spite of protests. So it is small wonder that they aren't getting the world-wide sympathy that they want now.

Then the stunt to send Muhammad Ali off to the African nations was about as dumb a trick as one could imagine. Granting that Alie would give it his very best, he just doesn't have the tools to do the job.

There are so many educated blacks in the country many of whom are liked and trusted by the Third World nations that you wonder why one of them wasn't picked. To me it looked like a case of "You go over and talk to those boys and get-em in line. Something like the Republicans did with Joe Louis when he was champ.

Sure, blacks admire their athletes, but they aren't going to follow them just because they are athletes with no rhyme or reason. Also you have to wonder if there would be a push for an Olympic boycott if this weren't an election year.

Back to the business at hand. Looks like Hoover just about wrapped up the metro crown and the East girls did the same when they both pulled off wins last weekend. People who pick the teams are saying that it wouldn't be smart to bet against East defending their state title, but the odds against that are very long.

In the boys East, Dowling and Roosevelt are apt to finish in a dead heat with Tech not far behind. It all comes down to this week.
