Rodgers To Conduct Dance Class

Rod Rodgers

A master dance class will be held at the Willkie House, Inc., 900-17th Street, Des Moines, Iowa, by Rod Rodgers Dance Company, April 9, 1980, at 7:30 p.m.

Rodgers is best known for the development of a permanent repertoire of concert pieces for his New York based dance theatre company, which was started in 1964. That repertoire has featured works which reflect his extensive background in music and dance, including more literal dance drama and social commentary and non-literal sculptural dance landscapes.

The company is also known for works which celebrate the music of popular black artists and an unusual approach to percussion dance plays which is unique to Rodgers' choreographic style.

For the past decade, the company has had extensive national tours, and in 1978 Rodgers and his dance theatre, as cultural emissaries, were sent to five countries in Africa, to Damascus, Syria, and Portugal by the United States International Communication Agency.

Rodgers has also served as an arts consultant specializing in dance and community-oriented cultural programming. His consultant services have included the New York State Council on the Arts, the Association of American Dance Companies, the Black Theatre Alliance and the Massachusetts Arts and Humanities Foundation.

He has published numerous articles on dance theatres and is widely known as an articulate spokesman for his art.

He has lectured and taught dance courses at numerous colleges and universities and conducted special dance courses at New York University, Nassau College and the College of New Rochelle. He has worked with students at all age levels and has an unusual ability to bring elements of dance as a performing art into basic technique.

Rodgers' teaching approach combines solid practical exercises and a great variety of challenging choreographic phrases excerpted from his broad repertoire.

In addition to directing his New York based dance company, Rod Rodgers staged and directed "The Black Cowboys" which was commissioned by the Afro-American Singing Theatre, and was performed at the City

Center of Music and Drama; he directed and choreographed several productions for Voices, Inc. including a WCBS-TV special "Journey into Blackness."

More recently, he did the choreography for "The Prodigal Sister", a new black musical with score by Mikki Grant, and the choreography for the lead acting role in a WABC "Like it is" special based on the poem, "This is My Beloved."

He has received awards for outstanding work in audience development programming from AUDELCO, and was a 1965-66 John Hay Whitney fellow. Mr. Rodgers has also received choreographic commissions from the National Endowment for the Arts, in Washington, D.C.

Post Office Promotions Announced For D.M. Blacks

The promotion of Andrew T. Wolder and Mattie L. Bates is evidence of the achievements of the U.S. Postal Service in the area of equal employment opportunity, according to acting manager of the Iowa Postal District Joseph Matukonis and the Des Moines Postmaster Francis X. Sarcone.

Wolder was promoted to the position of District Director of Customer Services for the Iowa District, and Mattie L. Bates was promoted to Employee Development Specialist for the Des Moines Sectional Center.

Bates, a career postal employee with over 16 years service, began as a postal clerk. She later progressed through a number of positions including window clerk, machine operator, personnel assistant, EEO Counselor, and Associate Employee Training Advisor before attaining her latest position.

In the job of Employee Development Specialist, she will have the responsibility for administering training guidance and career development for 5,000 employees in the Central and Western Sections of Iowa. Her staff maintains not only the ongoing programs such as job skills, driver's training and testing, employee orientation and safety but also correspondence courses, postmaster training and special emphasis program training.

In her new position, Ms. Bates will be one of the highest ranking females in the Postal Service in Iowa and the highest ranking minority female.

Wolder entered the Postal Service in 1956 as a clerk but later transferred to the carrier division. He entered the ranks of management in 1968 and at one time was the manager of the University Place Station in Des Moines. He has served in various positions during his postal career.

In 1979 he was the Acting Postmaster and Sectional Center manager for the Fort Dodge, Iowa area. This area encompasses some 700 square miles with 75 post offices and over 400 employees. His permanent position was manager of Delivery and Collection for the Des Moines, Iowa, Sectional Center. In this position he had the responsibility for the delivery and collection systems of nearly 300 post offices in central Iowa.

In addition to his postal career Mr. Wolder is active in community affairs. He is well known in Des Moines and Iowa for his participation and accomplishments in civic events. One of his most frequent endeavors is the presentation of a workshop entitled

"Working Communications" which he designed and presents to special emphasis groups around the state.

The Federal Executive Council of Des Moines, a body of Federal Employers, selected Mr. Wolder as its "Equal Employment Opportunity Employee of the Year" in 1979 as a result of his efforts and his involvement in helping people.

In his new position, as district director, Mr. Wolder will administer the customer services programs for the Iowa Postal District, an area that covers the state and extends into the western edge of Illinois. There are over 800 post offices and nearly 10,000 employees. His responsibility will include not only the delivery and collection system functions, but also public relations and consumer products retailing.

Mr. Wolder, in his previous position, was the highest ranking minority employee with the Postal Service in the state of Iowa and the first to attain that level.

IEWS and REVIEWS

by Allen Ashby

With all the fuss about President Carter and the fact that he is trying to trim the national budget in places where it will hurt the people with the least the most, you have to wonder what the other guys offer. Ronald Reagan, who will likely be the Republican nominee has never been a friend of the people who have nothing.

So where do we go? I have said it and have heard it said that black voters ought to sit this one out, but what would that get us?

Read an interesting article the other day that set me to thinking. This writer argued that the black middle class and those blacks who have it made big have as much at stake in the election as any white middle class. He says that the black blue collar workers and professional people, in other words those who have jobs, should vote against the have nots.

Then I remember what happened in the early forties and fifties, and I think the guy may have something at that. It would merely be history repeating itself.

Right here in Des Moines I recall black voters who became great Democrat leaders and worked hard to get their men elected. But when things began to look up and the depression was chased away by the war industries, these Democrats became Republicans and were among the severest critics of the New Deal. And it was like that with white voters, too.

I can think of people who were on their heels in the thirties and got help from the government to get back on their feet. Came World War two, and these people got rich. So they severed all ties with the people who brought them there and became Roosevelt haters.

There are black people in town today who have become better than well off who started out as Democrats and who used the programs to get what they had. Now, maybe that was the thing to do. A person helps himself by siezing his opportunities, and these people really did that.

So, maybe the guy who wrote the article I read had something when he said that we could fare worse under Carter than under Reagan.

Actually, what I think the fellow was really trying to say was that there is no longer a black vote that can even be promised by anyone. Just as the old party lines in other groups of voters are being broken up, so is the black voting block beginning to do what the individual members want to.

For instance, here in this city, you could count the blocks of voters and almost predict how they were going to vote. The funny thing about that was that the political leaders among us blacks were almost never on the right side, but the office seekers never did see it.

But now that we are spread all over town, and we each vote about as we want to, or believe, and there is nobody to even to try to swing us into line as it was called in the old days, although they did a poor job, it will be interesting to see how the black vote goes in this thing.

I have to think that if I had a house out on the avenue or in the suburban area and was breaking my neck to meet mortgage payments, I would have to take a long hard look at somebody who wanted to raise my taxes, whether I were black or white.

Thoughts and Comments

By James B. Morris III

Although legislation has been proposed in many states which would compel banks to make community investment a priority by requiring them to reinvest funds so deposited from within their prime service areas back into them in a specified percentage of what they receive from them in profits, there is yet to be any enforceable and effective legislation (federal, state or local) which specifically prohibits the practice of redlining and provides sufficient enforcement machinery to make such a prohibition effective.

A Black Look At Politics

William S. Morris

Last week I examined the increasing conservatism of the U.S. Congress, particularly in regard to fiscal appropriations and budget cuts for 1981. "Balanced budget fever" has spread from the states to Congress, and on to the President.

Social aid programs for the poor and aged have been slashed by axe-wielding Housse Republicans and conservative Democrats, who continue to seek further increases in defense spending.

The states have just begun to feel the budget-cutting crunch in the last month or so, and the situation will continue to worsen. Interest rate hikes have flattened trading on various commodities, and the bond market in particular has collapsed, making revenue-raising extremely difficult at state and local levels.

Coupled with public demands for tax cuts, localities and municipalities have really become stuck between the proverbial "rock and a hard place."

Yet, what effects will all this have on black Iowans, who have traditionally had little or no real influence in decision-making matters? The situation is still rather unclear, but several good and bad trends seem to stand out.

For one, a true coalition, of sorts, was finally assembled recently in order to confront the Des Moines City Council on its proposed Affirmative Action hiring policy. I had spoken of the real need for a multi-party coalition to speak for minority needs some time ago, and Atlanta Mayor Maynard Jackson reiterated my call.

Without the mutual support of other groups in the community, blacks can forget about political influence, for the most part. We simply can't do it alone, as there are so few of us in Iowa. Representatives from the National Organization of Women (N.O.W.), the Native American and Hispanic communities, the NAACP, and the citizens group ACORN, came together to protest an issue relevant to all, that being jobs and fair hiring practices.

Without calling the City to task over this important issue, a watered-down and largely ineffective Affirmative Action policy would have been approved without much debate. With Congress threatening to cut Federal funds for CETA (largely a waste of tax money anyway), and President Carter's new multi-billion-dollar job training program for Thus, to this point in time (including the decision of the U.S. Supreme Court approximately two weeks ago that, by unanimous ruling, states may not impose their own regulations to prevent racial bias in the lending practices of federally chartered banks and savings and loan institutions) there is neither a legal prohibition of redlining or other discriminatory lending practices nor viable enforcement and monitoring government agencies to uphold it, and the federal government, whose nearly total reliance on the judgment and morality of individual financial institutions to prevent discriminatory lending practices on their part, is both the primary cause of the development of the segregated housing market in this country and the only hope for the prevention of future abuses.

Although it bears the most blame for the rise of the problems, it will likely be, due to the power of the banking industry's lobbyists, the last to act.

The federal government, which allowed the segregated housing market in this country to develop and at some points fostered it, made the situation much worse by making the inner-city neighborhoods thus affected dependent upon minority youths (which is painfully necessary, what with black unemployment nearing forty percent or more), states and municipalities will have to be relied upon to carry the additional Affirmative Action load.

With the Federal budget making sharply lower amounts available for revenue-sharing, this will make it easier for local governments to pay less attention to the needs of minority voters. In short, the task will not be easy.

Hopefully, the coalition previously mentioned, and/or others, will "keep the heat" on city and state officials. Unfortunately, it seems the various groups will probably "go their own ways" until another problem arises, requiring similar coalescing.

Minority representation on such bodies as the Central Advisory Board has also been quite valuable, as C.A.B. plays an important role in the fund allocation process.

Several Des Moines inner-city projects for black and Native American citizens have been able to receive money that may not otherwise have been available, thanks to the actions of a few C.A.B. members. The elderly and the handicapped will also need to keep an eye on the budget process. When programs for the poor are sliced, so too will aid for senior citizens and the disabled. We will all lose some program aid, this is unavoidable, what minority groups must do is to utilize what funds are available for the maximum benefit of the community, and not to waste it on unrealistic "pipe dreams."

federally guaranteed mortgage credit rather than working to insure the input of funds from conventional sources.

The "drug" which the government thought would cure the obvious problem did little more than to make the ill-effects these neighborhoods suffered from this "overdose" as bad or worse than the original "disease," especially in times of high interest rates and federal budget reductions.

The federal government produced the "drug," the mortgage bankers "supplied it," and the realtors who made high numbers of sales in the affected areas were the "pushers." The impact of this "overdose" upon the credit flows in inner city neighborhoods is currently being assessed, but it would seem obvious that at times when the national economy is depressed or recessed and mortgage money is not readily available, urban areas are two-time losers.

The federal government has allowed this situation to develop by its neglect and inaction in the face of known shortcomings, and must take the lead in eliminating it. Whether it will has yet to be seen.

With Federal monies for minority job programs being all but eliminated by a "flow with the tide" Congress, the private sector will have to assume more responsibility for providing minority citizens with marketable job skills.

Also, businessmen will have to provide the initiative themselves for hiring blacks, Hispanics, and women. True, they don't have to do anything but pay taxes and die, but pressure from a broad-based coalition, coupled with Federal tax breaks for businesses who hire and train minorities, may be part of the answer.

Black businessmen and corporate executives, in particular, must try to help the chronically unemployed. These men and women must use their positions in corporate and community life to initiate some positive minority hiring practices.

None of this "I'm sorry brother, but this company filled its quota of blacks when they hired me." Black professionals have a similar commitment to get law, medical, business, and engineering colleges to reevaluate their admissions procedures as regards qualifications and the validity of certain types of test scores.

As far as Des Moines is concerned, I cannot help but wonder what "Blacks in Management," a Des Moines-based group of black corporate execs and businessmen, was hoping to accomplish by sponsoring a basketball tournament a few months ago.

"A BLACK LOOK AT POLITICS" by William S. Morris

The last thing black teenagers need is a clinic on basketball, which is already horribly over-emphasized as a means to escape the inner-city. B.I.M. had better stick to their original intention of attracting black youths into various business and marketing jobs.

For next week, I will examine the role of sports in the maturation process of black children, and how the glorification of a few professional athletes has resulted in widespread despair, disillusionment, and exploitation for all but a small, select group of ghetto youths.

On Mary Brubaker Show

Marsh Collier, chair of Act-So (Afro-Academic Cultural Technological Scientific Olympics) will appear on the Mary Brubaker Show on KCCI-TV, Channel 8 on April 7, 1980, at 9:00 a.m.

GASIFICATION: Turning Coal Into Cleaner Energy

The world's largest reserve of fossil fuel energy is not in the Middle East. It's right here in America. The energy locked up in our nation's coal reserves could supply our needs for hundreds of years . . . if we could use it. But right now, much of our coal — including the kind found in Iowa — can't be used economically. High sulfur content makes it too dirty to burn and too expensive to clean.

A Possible Solution

Most of the pollutants in high-sulfur coal can be eliminated through a process called coal gasification. Instead of being burned directly, the coal is first processed into a combustible gas. Although this gas is too low in heating energy to be used directly in homes as a substitute for natural gas, it's ideal for firing a boiler in an electrical generating plant. The only problem is finding a method of coal gasification that is economical for large scale use.

Iowa Power is helping fund research on a coal gasification method called the KILnGAS®

System. So far, basic engineering studies and a small pilot plant have been successfully completed. The next step will be construction of a large-scale demonstration facility that can be used to produce gas for a power plant. If this experiment proves feasible, it could pave the way for widespread adoption of coal gasification by both electric utilities and many industries.

Making The Most Of What We Have

Development of a practical coal gasification process would allow us to make better use of an energy resource that's in abundant supply right here in our own country — high-sulfur coal. By itself, this won't solve all our energy problems. But it's a step in the right direction.

View Point

By

James E. O'Daye, Sr.

Sitting in a corner doing nothing is fine if you are taking inventory of your progress. But it can be degrading if you are trying to figure out a plan to harm someone. Let us unravel the 365 days of the year into four sections of 90 days each to see what we have.

From January to March we have 90 days. On the 4th year we have 91 days.

From April one to June thirtieth we have 91 days always. No more-NO less.

From July one to September thirtieth we have 92 days always. No more-No less.

From October one to December thirty-first we have 92 days always. No more-No less.

If January 31st and March 31st were given to February it would make three months of 30 days each. But February wants to be different. So every 4th year February creates a day of it's own, for the simple reason January and March would not relinquish their day to February. So we have 90 for January, February, and March; April, May, and June we have 92; July, August, and September we have 92; and for October, November, and December we have 92 and that makes 365 days total.

Every 4th year February creates a day of it's own and which makes 29 days or 91 days in the first quarter.

Every twenty years the U.S. president who is elected meets some kind of misfortune. Now let us take under consideration the possibility that Nixon might have moved the jinx to another set of years. Who know, only time will tell.

Well this inventory is up. I will move out of this corner and see what is happening on the streets.

LOOK ON SPORTS

Baseball strikes, basketball playoffs and such had to take a back seat to the news of the death of Jess Owens, the guy who shattered Adolph Hitler's myth about superiority of races. Everybody who can read knows the story of the four gold medals won by Owens in the 1936 Olympics.

I became acquainted with Jess when he was a student at Ohio State and came to the Drake Relays. At that time we had a custom of going around to interview all the black athletes on the morning of the races. And then, in those days, the black athletes had to take their meals in their rooms and not with the rest of the teams.

Something seemed to make Jess and me hit it off as if we had known each other all our lives. We had a long talk, and even though I never saw him for several years, when we met at the twentieth gathering of former Drake Relay stars who were honored at the Relays of I believe, 1956, our greeting was "Hi, Jess." and "Hi, Ashby."

I thought that was something for people you didn't have any real close relations with. I was sure he had forgotten me, and even now, I wonder how come.

But Jess was that kind of a man. I saw him a couple of times after that, and it was always the same, in spite of the fact that he was usually surrounded by news men and well wishes, he never forgot to look around and try to spot me in the crowd.

Probably the reason Hitler scrambled from the reviewing stand that day in Berlin was the fact that another black runner was right behind Owens in the two hundred meters. Mack Robinson, the older brother of Jackie Robinson, was second in the two hundred and the U.S. relay teams in the four hundred and eight hundred meters was all black.

Well, Jack and I corresponded for several years after 1937 until WWII. I lost track of him when he joined the merchant marine but I also met him at that twentieth reunion and we took up where we had left off like it had been yesterday. And do you know Mack never forgot the fun we had on his visit to the Relays and the body guard we gave him and his date during his all too brief stay in Des Moines. Funny how these things come to mind after all these years.

A fellow asked me the other day if there were any promising young black tennis players in Des Moines. I had to tell him that I didn't really know, but thought that Russ Saunders, with a few more seasons might be one.

I have watched the kids at the parks last summer and I would have to say that they just aren't dedicated to the game as we used to be. Perhaps this is because there are so many things to do that we didn't have a chance to get into.

But we, at least three of us, Chet Williamson, Brother Bill Ashby and maybe I used to work all summer trying to perfect one shot and then we would get it down and the season would end, and we had to learn the thing all over the next year. Wonder what we would have done if we had been able to work on indoor courts.

But, then maybe we might not have been able to afford the price of those courts. On the other hand, we would have likely scuffled and done everything legal to raise money to get on them if they had been available in our heyday. But my tennis season ran from around the middle of May until Labor Day.

Then it was football and from that into basketball, so I would have had to make a choice if there had been indoor tennis. Of the three sports, I would have placed football third, so I might have been just a would be tennis player and fooled around with a basketball.

We are working towards our Y Camp reunion for the campers of the period dating from the first Y Camp in 1919 to 1946. We have held several meetings and have engaged the Logan Opportunity Center on E. 17th St. Court. The rest of our program depends on how much money we come up with.

So our committee decided to ask each fellow who plans to be at the reunion for a donation of $5. If we have any money left over after our meeting, it will be put in care of the group to build on for next year.

So, if you went to Y Camp in the years I have mentioned, you will likely be contacted by members of our committee. These members are Chet Williamson, Chet Simms, Bill Mason, Morton Graves, Lee Kemp, Tommy Avant and me, Allen Ashby, we hope you won't turn them down, and we are sure you will be rewarded by an evening well spent renewing our old Y camp days.

If you want to mail any money in, you can mail it to Chet Williamson, 1157 14th St. Place, 50314, or Allen Ashby, 700 E. 5th St. Apt. 213, 50316. We hope to see you there.

There will be a meeting at 700 E. 5th St. on April 12 at 7 P.M. to finalize our plans, and you are welcome to be there.

ACORN Meets With Iowa Power On Energy Costs

On Wednesday, March 26th, members of ACORN (the Association of Community Organizations for Reform Now) met with President Jim Lyons, and other officials of Iowa Power and Light. The meeting was set up to demand that the utility implement policies that would help low and moderate income people cope with the rising cost of energy.

Spokesperson Bill Cook said, "ACORN is concerned about the effect of skyrocketing energy prices has on low income people. The affluent can afford to pay the bills, but for the poor it often becomes a question between heating or eating."

Discussion centered around seven demands that ACORN members said were necessary to protect the health of low and moderate income people during the winter months. These demands included:

No person should be forced to pay more than 15% of his monthly income on utility bills during the winter months. ACORN maintained that asking a person to pay more than this amount during the winter was unreasonable. Utility officials refused, claiming that they didn't have the right to ask a person to reveal their income, and that they wanted their policy to remain flexible.

Next ACORN asked that no customer be shut off if the temperature was below 40 F. A similar rule is currently in effect, but the trigger temperature is 20 F. Jim Lyons of Iowa Power said that he could not respond until the company had looked into the effect of such a policy.

ACORN members then pointed out that customers were not allowed onto the budget billing plan until all past bills were paid. They asked that all people be allowed on the plan, and were told that the company was now looking into just such a policy.

ACORN also requested the company institute a program in which SSI recipients be placed on "life line" rates, and that this be used as an experiment to see if such a rate structure is viable in Iowa. Iowa Power officials thought that this was an interesting idea, and said the company would look into it.

Finally, Iowa Power officials were presented with information showing that a percentage of a customers bill goes towards new power plant construction. ACORN's point was that this meant customers were actually investing in the company, and should therefore be paid a rate of return on their investment and have a say in company policies, as do stockholders. Lyons, however, alleged that he did not know if customers were paying for new construction, but that he would look into it.

This meeting was the most recent attempt by ACORN to get Iowa Power to enact policies that would help low and moderate income survive rising energy costs. Last year ACORN and C/LEC (the Citizen's / Labor Energy Coalition) succeeded in getting the commerce commission to establish conditions under which no "shut offs" could occur.

Then last fall ACORN held a demonstration at Iowa Power headquarters, where they demanded that the utility be more reasonable in dealing with overdue bills.
