DM Council Votes Development Funds For Pool

By Ora McQueen

Des Moines City Councilman Archie Brooks proposed to the City Council Monday that replacement or repair of Good Park's swimming pool should be taken from community development funds and The Council approved his proposal.

Just one week ago, the Council voted to use part community development and part revenue sharing money to finance the $390,000 project. A group of Des Moines citizens representing several different organizations spoke in opposition to federal funds being used for the overhaul of the pool. It was pointed out that such funding is intended for economic development in the six prime service areas and pool repair should be made with Park and Recreation money or other capital funding.

Brooks said the Council has voted to spend more money than it actually has. Although his proposal spends more community development money on the pool project, minority programs of the six prime service areas will not be affected.

He is expecting new estimates on the pool will be about $50,000 less than the latest estimate. If the estimate is not lowered, Brooks is counting on a $45,000 contingency fund set aside by the council. The fund was set aside while the council investigate a land-lord tenant counseling program and a 10-watt minority operated radio station.

Councilman Tim Urban and Councilwoman Szymoniak have pledged to work with board members and technicians of Urban Broadcast Co. to get more information about the total operation of the station. Then they would consider supporting the project.

Des Moines Mayor Pete Crivaro contacted an anonymous individual who stated he would agree to lease radio equipment to the city for the setup of the radio station. The city in turn could lease it to the station.

Board members of the station are opposed to the latter plan. Their reasoning is that the city will want to program the station rather than permitting members of the minority community to plan their own station management and programming.

There will be a meeting between the Urban Broadcasting Co. and the city officials on Wednesday night to work

The reunion of the Crocker YMCA members and Y Camp participants was held at the Logan Community Development Center last weekend. Above is a group picture of the participants, some of whom came from as far away as New York and California.

According to Allen Ashby, a principal organizer of the reunion, the high point of the summer for most of these men as children was the one week a year the YMCA permitted the black children to use the summer camp grounds located near Boone.

IEWS and REVIEWS

by Allen Ashby

The big day finally arrived. We had held a meeting every week for at least a month and a couple before that. From our optimistic guesses of around a hundred, we faced reality and said we would gladly settle for around twenty five or thirty. So we had thirty five people who signed the register and about a half dozen who didn't. They came from places like Americus, Georgia; Roosevelt, N.Y.; Chicago and Texas and California.

And I have never seen a bunch of people so genuinely happy to see each other. For three hours there was so much yelling and talking about what we did at Y Camp that you couldn't hear yourself think. We hadn't planned on a regular program, and it was just as well.

Quinten Mease the executive director of the Crocker Y during the years of the period we were interested in, was persuaded to say a few words, and that opened the flood gates. There were at least a half dozen speeches, and every one of them related how glad the speaker was to be at the gathering. Most of them wondered what took us so long to think of something like that.

The guys had changed somewhat. It seemed that the older the Webb Brothers got, the more they look like each other. Some came on canes, and some had hearing problems, but they were all former Y campers. Hinkey Brewer, who was probably the youngest fellow in the room, said that he represented the Y campers who came after us, and he wanted them in on the next gathering.

When we set up the thing, it was intended for the boys who went there from 1919 to 1946. We thought that time period and the one following that was two different time periods. But some of the fellows figured that we were all Y Campers and Crocker Y boys, so we should be included in any future plans.

There was no singing, probably because the master of ceremonies couldn't carry a tune in a basket, and thus never proposed singing. But, man, there was plenty of talking, with people gathering in small bunches trying to fill in the time since they had last seen each other.

The only pall on the whole evening was the fact that the guy who proposed the thing last year couldn't be there because of illness. Mr. A.P. Trotter, long time chairman of the Crocker Y board of management and later a member of the central Y board gave us the idea last year when we were at a small gathering, and we took it from there.

Food was prepared for the appetites of the bunch when we were campers. As it was, some of the old timers scored pretty heavily, but lots of them were contented with a cup of coffee or punch and maybe a really light meal.

There was so much emotion that one couldn't help but sense it, probably because the Y camp and Crocker Y represented a high point in so many of the lives of the group for so many years that they never got it out of their systems. Y camp was the ultimate goal of our summer, and we would stop at nothing legal to raise funds to get there. We didn't have time to think about anything but beating the other groups of campers in games and scuffles.

A permanent group to set up the next meeting on a motion by Tommy Avant, and we shall get together soon. But, whatever happens in the future, we can say that for one three hour period a group of middle aged and old men turned back the calendar and became boys once more.

Thoughts and Comments

By James B. Morris III

In Des Moines, it now appears that, based upon the previously mentioned Sunday Register article, Savings and Loan Associations are making a serious effort to establish favorable track records for lending and counselling in the poorer neighborhoods. Although most of such institutions heartily defend their past lending records and practices, they also concede, according to the article, that they have increased their attention to inner-city needs due to the passage of the Community Reinvestment Act, implemented by Congress in early 1979.

This Act requires that a Savings and Loan Association (or any other commercial financial lending institution) which has not done a good job in providing housing money to low and moderate income neighborhoods may be refused permission by the federal government, on that basis alone, to expand into new territory, open a branch office to take deposits and make loans, or to merge with another financial institution.

Although local lenders concede that the interest in making loans to neighborhoods that have declined over time is due partially to federal legislation and regulation, most neighborhood spokespeople agree that new home purchase and home improvement loans are far more plentiful now than ever before, although the current crises in the industry and the overall economy may effectively nullify that in the immediate future.

There are other pressures, however, which may make Savings and Loan Associations more interested in inner-city lending in the future. Joe Egan, the District Director of Community Investment for the Federal Home Loan Bank located in Des Moines, indicates in that same article that there is a probability that Savings and Loan Associations will soon lose the break they now enjoy over commercial banks in attracting savings deposits (the legal authority to pay 1/4 of a percentage point more in interest to consumers for most types of deposits), in return for which they would get a number of new powers (such as the authority to have checking-type accounts, issue small loans and provide many other services now reserved primarily to commercial banks).

As the degree of difference between the legally authorized powers of commercial banks and Savings and Loan Associations decreases, the latter institutions will need to provide their services to the widest possible range of the community if they wish to be looked on as community financial centers, he concluded.

What does this mean? To me at least, it means that the major home purchase and improvement lenders, not just the Savings and Loan Associations as is now the case, will have to make a much more determined effort to provide services to previously overlooked minority and poor residents of this city in order to survive the decade of the 1980's.

Although these local institutions have made great strides in attempting to spread their services to the inner-city neighborhoods hardest hit by redlining in the past over the past year or so, the fact remains that little will really change until the lending practices and standards are changed by the mandate of their regulating agencies, whether state or federal. Without changes in these standards on an industry-wide basis and programs to change the attitudes of the industry toward inner-city lending, little can really change on the local level.

The "ball" (the impetus to effect changes in policy) now rests in the hands of neighborhood, community, state or national groups who work and lobby to bring pressure on these regulating agencies who are the only ones with the power to force changes if necessary, and, if the "handoff" (bringing pressure to bear) is promptly and forcefully made, the "runner" (regulating agencies) may yet have the chance to "score" for the neighborhoods he so completely ignored in the past.

Only time will tell.

Affirmative Action

"AFFIRMATIVE ACTION AND THE 1980 ELECTIONS"

Many recognize that affirmative action is at root a political struggle, moreso than a legal one. Politics got us the 1964 Civil Rights Act. Politics are taking away our hard-earned gains of the Sixties. Hence, 1980 as an election year should be viewed with more than passing interest by affirmative action advocates.

The November elections are just around the corner and it appears that the choice we are being handed is Jimmy Carter ("born'again" right winger with more guns and less butter) vs. Ronald Reagan (sometimes spelled "Ray'gun" a man who achieved prominence by attacking "welfare mother").

For Black voters and all fair-minded people, this choice is a Hobson's choice—no choice at all. Some might argue that we should vote for Carter as the "lesser evil," but voters have been doing that for years (recall Carter vs. Ford in '76 or Johnson v. Goldwater in '64 or Truman v. Dewey in '48 — the list is veritably endless) and look where it has brought us.

The so-called "misery index" (the rate of unemployment added to the rate of inflation) is at the highest level in the nations history with Blacks are being disproportionately hit. Another "victory" for Carter and we'll be in the positions of the "victor" Pyrrhus, King of Epirus or the troops at Thermopylae—i.e. another "victory" like this and we'll be totally undone.

The political situation of Blacks is exacerbated by the miniscule percentage of Black elected officials. If ever there was an area deserving of affirmative action, this is it. And the sad fact is that the situation is not improving but getting worse.

For example, the number of Black elected officials in the United States increased by only 2% between July 1978 and July 1979—the smallest annual increase since 1970, when the figures first were collected by the Joint Center for Political Studies.

But even this figure is misleading since the 2% increase reflects 23 officials from the Virgin Islands included on the roster for the first time.

Yes, the number of Black elected officials has increased over the past 10%, but they still represent only 1% of the entire total of 490, 265, while Blacks comprise 15% of the nation's total population.

A closer examination reveals once again that like most employment areas, Black elected officials are disproportionately represented at the lower rungs of power. Forty-eight percent of all Black elected officials are at the municipal level.

Of the 191 Black mayors, 70% are from communities with populations of 5,000 or less. Twenty-five percent of all Black elected officials serve in education positions, school boards and the like.

With all due respect to the officials involved, though, it is positive that we have Black mayors of villages and hamlets and Blacks on school boards, this does not represent where power rests in this country.

Even when Blacks rise to positions of power and influence, all too often they are hounded from office by howling political lynch mobs. Look at George Brown, former Lieutenant Governor of Colorado, or Mervyn Dymally, former Lieutenant Governor of California, or Edward Brooke, former United States Senator from Massachusetts.

This is not a new phenomenon, as the example of Harlem's flamboyant Congressman Adam Clayton Powell reminds us.

The overwhelming majority of Black elected officials are in the Democratic Party—which just happens to be the party of Sam Nunn, James Eastland, Howell Heflin, George Wallace (a recent endorser of Carter) and other enemies of Black progress.

If the proverbial man from Mars came to the U.S. and tried to figure out Blacks, figure on making progress when their votes are virtually guaranteed before hand to a party controlled by southern racists and white male corporate big-wigs, he'd no doubt hop back on his flying saucer and retreat confusedly into the solar system.

Before it is raised, let it be noted that the Republican Party is just not a serious alternative: the party of Strom Thurmond, Barry Goldwater and Jesse Helms is too monstrous to even contemplate.

So where does this leave us? Well, the old-timers

Neighborhood Improvement Corp.

The Iowa Neighborhood Improvement Corporation, Inc., has recently been formed in Des Moines, Iowa. The new non-profit corporation has specified its primary goals to include providing housing "rehabilitation know-how" through educational and counseling services for landlords, tenants, and homeowner's.

The corporation, which elected Terry Sims, of 1064-14th St., Des Moines, as president, is developing strategies and communications throughout the community and the State of Iowa, in the interests of the poor, handicapped, aged, underprivileged and minorities.

According to Mr. Sims, the Iowa Neighborhood

Improvement Corporation, Inc., will maintain its home office in Des Moines and is planning to expand its operations to include offices in major cities throughout the State of Iowa.

Under his leadership, Sims feels, the corporation will efficiently, effectively and economically provide services for neighborhood improvement throughout the State. Mr. Sims stated that the Iowa Neighborhood Improvement Corporation, Inc., will rely solely upon funding from the private sector, and that a fund raising campaign will be underway within the next few weeks.

Those lazy, hazy, crazy days of summer arrive at the Botanical Center on May 8th at 10:00 a.m. when Flower Festival opens to the public. Yellow, orange, purple, white, red, pink, and blue — all of the colors that make summer such a bright and joyous horticultural time will all be represented.

Uniquely tricolored gazanias highlight the show. Seldom seen in Iowa, these quaint daisy-like flowers are guaranteed eye-catchers. Diminutive cup-flowers, showy marigolds, bold tuberous begonia, floral carpet snapdragons, flowering tobacco, brightly hued caladiums, feathery cockscomb, and cone flowers all promise to draw rave reviews. By popular demand, the pastel hued transvaal daisies have agreed to extend their engagement in the dome.

On display for the first time will be the fountain sculpture designed by Isabel Bloom. A renowned sculptress, Mrs. Bloom is a native of Davenport, Iowa.

The Botanical Center is open Monday through Thursday, 10:00 a.m. - 6 p.m.; Friday 10:00 a.m. - 9:00 p.m.; Saturday and Sunday, 10:00 a.m. - 5:00 p.m. Admission is 50 cents for adults; and 25 cents for students, senior citizens, and children over 6.

Social Services Council Concerned With Budget

Budget conservation plans were the prime concerns of the Council on Social Services when they met in Des Moines last Thursday and Friday.

The Council both listened to and discussed proposals to trim expenditures to meet the Governor's Economy Task Force recommendations. Commissioner Michael V. Reagen shared his concerns with the Council regarding anticipated shortages in program areas and outlined methods the Department will try to take to cope with these fiscal dilemmas.

Gracie Larsen, Council chairperson, commented that the cooperation of all state agencies and divisions would be necessary to provide the flexibility needed to effectively provide service needs in all categories. "One of the first steps," she said, "might be to arrange a meeting between Ron Mosher (the State comptroller) and Mike. We should also meet with the counties to further the cooperation that will be needed to meet these service needs."

Chuck Sweeney, director of Operations Control, also addressed the Council, bringing them up-to-date on the monitoring functions of that division, which includes the Legal, Audits, Fraud, Appeals and Fair Hearings, Affirmative Action, ACT, Evaluations and Quality Control bureaus.

"I'm glad to see such thorough efforts to coordinate and improve the Department's accountability," noted Madalene Townsend, Council member from Davenport. "We've needed these people working together in one shop for a long time."

Sweeney also told the Council that departmental directors are making every effort possible to maintain all current vacancies and stretch staff through resource sharing. "Good, I'm glad to see us doing something positive. When the total effects of these budget cuts hit, we're going to need that sharing to effectively help the increased numbers of clients who will turn to us," Fritz Robbins (Waverly) commented.

"You seem to be keeping several options open for dealing with the hiring freeze," added Dolph Pulliam (Des Moines). "It's going to be important to retain as much flexibility as possible, both for our staff and for our clients."

Another dollar stretching method that will be used by the Department, where applicable, is consolidation.

One such area of major interest to the Council was the recent administrative consolidation of the Iowa State Penitentiary at Fort Madison and the John Bennett Correctional Center, a move that resulted in an immediate cost savings of $76,000. Council members reiterated their concern over staffing shortages and rising populations at Fort Madison as well as at other correctional facilities around the state.

However, Adult Corrections Director Hal Farrier assured the Council and Commissioner Reagen that the rising populations are being carefully monitored. "We are looking for extra beds," Farrier commented, "but every state in the Midwest, with the exception of Nebraska, is doing the same thing. Our correctional staffs are busy, but positive, and committed to working together."

A lighter moment came during Friday's session when the Council took a break from their budgetary concerns and presented the Bureau of Evaluations with a certificate for the best evaluation practices from the American Public Welfare Association. The Council also honored Jo Sheeley, Bureau of Evaluation, for twenty years of service to the people of Iowa.

Don Burger, representative of the Community Relations Service of the U.S. Justice Department, has met with city officials and the Coalition of Community Organizations. He discussed the issues of the proposed city Affirmative Action plan affecting city hiring practices and the spending of federal monies allocated to Des Moines.

Burger did not point to specifics other than the hiring practices of the city. However, he listened to and took complaints from the organization on issues of spending practices by the city of federal funds. He promised to look into the situation. His role is purely that of a conciliator that will work with the city and community organizations to help resolve the dispute.

The Coalition of Community Organizations will elect six representatives to negotiate with Burger and city officials on the Affirmative Action Plan. The names of the negotiators will be released sometime next week. The negotiating team for the city will be the City Manager, Mayor Crivaro and at least two City Council members.

would not be enough water in the city to control such a fire, as we witnessed. We are thankful for God's blessings, and we are happy to announce, that funds raised through our

Hooks Assails President's Budget Cut Proposals

Benjamin L. Hooks, Executive Director of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People said April 14 that President Carter's proposals to cut even deeper into social program spending, "will impose upon the nation's poor and Black people an intolerable burden of sacrifice and suffering — and we can accept neither."

Hooks said, "in the campaign to balance the budget on the backs of the poor and powerless, citizens of goodwill must speak up against this latest form of moral irresponsibility." He added, "the immediate victims and targets are the same citizens who Mr. Carter promised to help when he was running for President in 1976."

In assailing the Administration's budget cut proposals, Hooks stated that there was no "certain relationship between government deficits and inflation." He recalled that the 1920 federal budget ran a surplus while the country experienced nagging inflation. "Yet, inflation declined in 1974-76, from 12% to 4.8% while we had a budget deficit of over 112 billion dollars."

"As knowledgeable economists and others have pointed out," Hooks said, "the President's projected budget cut might reduce inflation by .2%, but it would be immediately off-set by the .5% price increase in the new oil import fee."

Hooks closed by saying, "if Mr. Carter is serious about ensuring social justice and racial equality, then he must assume the lead in re-invigorating the American people's commitment to liberal ideas and efficiently - run social programs.

"He must pursue and implement the promises of full employment and the Humphrey - Hawkins Bill. He must take bold measures to safeguard the health and welfare of our people, by restructuring the present tax system and re-ordering federal spending priorities.

"These bold measures cannot be taken if he is intent on urging and implementing devastating cuts in social programs. The end result of such a reckless policy, will be to put equality and domestic concerns on the shelves of the nation's archives — and that would pose significant dangers to our internal peace."

View Point

By James E. O'Daye, Sr.

Fellow citizens this is not a time for panic. I find it frightening that most of the women who insist it is their inalienable right not only to register and be drafted — but to be allowed to participate in combat haven't the faintest idea (notion) of what life in the armed service during wartime is all about.

Most women in our military service have until now, (today April 1980) been nurses, officers, clerical workers or involved in support activities, which is as it should be. They enjoy a fairly decent existence with a minimum amount of privacy and self - respect all of which would quickly vanish — given a huge draft like that of World War II.

There are some almost paralyzing dehumanization effects when whole masses of people are flung together to be processed into fighting units. It is a brutal affair — anyone who has not experienced this can adequately comprehend what it is like for hundreds — thousands of naked people to be herded through the most ghastly physical examination — each one of them printed and marked up so that it looks like a busy day at the stockyards, prodded, piked and peered into by batteries of proctologists — urologists and ear and throat men — given shots — injections — bloodlettings — eye-tests — ordered into this line — then into that one by a hoarse, — bawling petty officer — (very petty) — all the while eyes rolling in confusion and bewilderment.

Having been thus turned into jelly — all these recruits have ill-fitting clothing flung at them by sadistic supply clerks. Their heads are clipped as if it is shearing time and they are broken into companies and placed under the tyranny of some diabolical whose sole purpose in life is to stamp out all signs of individualism and creativity and to forge an efficient, mindless team.

This is a task that requires the unique ability to intimidate and subjugate — There is no management training or persuasion involved. It is rather a simple ruthless dictatorship with no due process of law what-so-ever. Some of the best of these types are to be found among cruel sergeants of the Foreign - Legion or those Marine Corps bullies with shaved heads and voices able to peel paint.

Were women to be treated this way? I imagine they would request presidential inquiries, court martials or worse. There is a tradition that goes back to The Roman Legions and beyond that the forging of fighting armies is best achieved by a kind of savagery and inhumanity quite outside the confines of civilization as we know it.

The purpose is twofold: — to be better than the enemy and to save one's own life. I do not mind if my sons have to go through this, but I do not want my daughter to have to go through it, no matter what others might think about their equal rights.

I hesitate to contemplate what might happen should women, too, go to war. — Someone has got to stay and keep the home fires burning and tend the light of civilization as well.

Focus On Small Business

Dear District Director:

As a small business owner I am determined to stay in business despite some tough survival odds against me. I can take competition, labor troubles, difficulties in getting capital, but trying to get government off my back — regulations, paperwork, taxation, inflation — seems almost hopeless. I would like to sound off to someone — but how do I do it?

What you say makes sobering reading. Small businesses identify government actions as their greatest source of difficulty — more than market competition or any other private sector difficulty. Small businesses are increasingly irked at the amount of employee time spent on doing what government — not the marketplace — requires them to do.

Small business owners are upset at the number of government forms they have to fill out. Small business owners feel discriminated against in the tax process.

Recently, several avenues of relief from government taxation and red tape have opened up for small business. That's because small business is beginning to speak as a unified voice.

Small businesses and small business organizations are forming their own "big" lobby that will work for their interests, just as "big" lobbies work for big business, big government, and big labor.

Last year, for example, this "big" small business lobby campaigned for — and got — remedial tax relief for small business despite opposition from some government agencies, labor organizations, and other interest groups.

The new unifying voices for small business come from three sources.

First, coalitions among small business trade groups have been formed to support major public policy issues affecting small business. The changes in tax policy voted last year are one example.

Second, the House and Senate of the U.S. Congress have formed separate Small Business Committees that now have the power to draft legislation for small business.

Third, the Small Business Administration itself, a 26-year old government agency created to foster a good climate for small business, has taken on a greater advocacy, or "ombudsman" role for small business. SBA continues to offer standard services for getting government contracts, loans and management assistance.

These three factors bode well for small business.

Two important developments emerge from these increased "lobbying" activities that offer an excellent chance for small business persons, like you, to be heard. The first is a major White House Conference for Small Business to be held in January, 1980, in Washington. About 2,000 delegates will attend. They will be small business persons.

SBA also is creating "Project 200 Plus," with a goal of organizing 200 or more small business opinion leaders from each state to "tell it as it is" to the government.

THE UNIVERSITY OF IOWA HEALTH NEWS SERVICE

Salty Diets

Rain or shine, the salt always pours over the food of most Americans. The average daily American diet contains an estimated 2.8 to 12 grams of sodium, while substantially less is necessary for good nutrition.

Salt is 40 percent sodium and 60 percent chloride. Most of the sodium we eat comes from ordinary salt used in cooking, preserving foods, and at the table. Everyone needs some sodium to live, but that need can be met without using salt because sodium is found naturally in many foods.

Not only is extra salt unnecessary, but shaking it on food may not be good for the health of hundreds of thousands of Americans with high blood pressure. Hypertension increases the risk of heart attack, stroke, and kidney failure.

Physicians often recommend cutting down on salt or sodium in the diet to help patients control high blood pressure, says Dr. Annette Fitz, professor of internal medicine in the University of Iowa College of Medicine.

"This would not necessarily be recommended, however, for patients whose hypertension might be associated with kidney disease. I also would caution elderly people with modest high blood pressure not to cut their salt intake without first consulting a physician."

It is difficult to get patients to stick with a low-sodium diet, Dr. Fitz says. "Also, Iowans consume such high amounts of sodium that even if they cut their sodium intake in half, they would still be consuming too much sodium to bring about an appreciable lowering of blood pressure. Generally salt intake must be lowered below 4 grams per day to achieve a definite lowering of blood pressure."

Another problem is that if your physician has recommended that you cut down on your sodium intake and you want to give it a real try, you will find it difficult to locate recipes and other cooking tips.

An excellent guide has been published by the American Heart Association. "Cooking Without Your Salt Shaker" is a 145-page, spiral-bound volume. Among its sections are a guide to buying low-sodium foods; how to substitute herbs and spices for sodium; 94 pages of recipes, including entrees, sandwiches, vegetables, salads and dressings, breads, soups and sauces; and desserts; and a section of nutrients analysis.

The book can be purchased for $5 by writing to the Iowa Heart Association, 3810 Ingersoll, Des Moines, Iowa 50312.

SMALL BUSINESS WEEK

The week of May 11 thru 17, 1980 has been proclaimed "Small Business Week" by President Carter.

Small Business Week is sponsored annually by the U.S. Small Business Administration to recognize the importance of small business in our free enterprise system.

Governor Robert Ray has joined with President Carter in signing a proclamation which states: "The small business community constitutes the single most important segment of our free enterprise system. It accounts for forty-eight percent of our gross national product, more than half of the American labor force, and continues to be the major source of inventions and new jobs. Small business is truly the backbone of the American economy. I urge my fellow citizens to learn more about its role and importance in our society."

In his proclamation the Governor asks all citizens to join him in expressing the pride taken in our nation's small business sector.

LOOK ON SPORTS

The seventy first running of the Drake Relays. They were held over the past week and if you were anywhere near this planet, you must know about the results that you are interested in. So what do you write about for a paper like this one.

Time was when I could tell all about the black athletes, and I would really have a slug of them to talk about. But, now they get all the coverage they can handle in the national press and airwaves.

So I have to think about the things that impressed me the most, and two of them would have to be the boys and girls from Prairie View. They just about ran away with everything they got in. The girls were so impressive that Essie Kelly won the award for the outstanding woman athlete of the meet.

Pat Kelly of the same team got one vote. The guy who did that explained that he thought he was voting for Kelly and got the girls mixed up. And Jackson did really tear up when she anchored the 800 relay.

In fact, one of the guys sitting next to me said they just ought to vote for the whole Prairie View team, girls, that is.

And the fellows didn't do too badly. They were disqualified in the 800 relay. The jury didn't buy the story of Evans White that the Western Illinois runner had really bumped him. And the sad part of it all was that Prairie View had the race won in record time, and didn't have to even come close to a bump. They finished second to Lincoln in the 4 x 200 relay.

White was to have run in the 800 meter race, but didn't turn up. We thought he would use that race as a chance to prove his point because he had said that the runner with the best kick would probably win that one, and he does have one heluva kick.

The girls took 400 meter hurdles with Debra Melrose of Prairie View setting a new record, eclipsing the mark set by Iowa State's Debbie Esser last year. Melrose' time was :59.02

If Mike Carter ever gets well, he might toss the shot out of the stadium. He got off the winning heave and left at once to catch a plane. Some wise guy suggested that he might bring down the plane with his shot.

In the other special events there was one happening. The 110 meter huddles had been all black for so many years that blacks thought they owned the event. Well a fellow named Dan Lavitt put a stop to that. He nosed out David Lee who was supposed to win the thing, in spite of the fact that Lavitt is unbeaten so far this year.

As the winners in the events were brought to the press box I would wander up to the interviews. I wasn't interested in what they said nearly as much as how they said it. And I would have to say that the two most articulate winners were Vince Parrette of K. State, winner of the triple jump and Melvin Lattany of Georgia, who won his third straight 100 meter race and broke his record of 10:29 with a 10:24.

Both fellows had intelligent things to say when they expressed themselves on the Olympics, and spoke with easy fluid speech without the usual "Ya Know", or the "Anda". Parrette is interested in music, saying that a person can't compete in track for a lifetime, but can in music.

Then there was this kid from East Waterloo, Kim Sykes, who ran so many blazing races to anchor his teams in the 800, 1600 meters and sprint medley that everybody around me said "I'm voting for that guy." And every year I have to wonder what would happen if all of those blacks running for schools like Alabama, Texas, Texas A&M, Georgia, Baylor and such were packed into schools like Prairie View, Grambling and such. Might be interesting. Oh, well, wait till next year.

By Jan Riggensch

It's spring, and Midwest gardeners are sprouting a new crop of garden questions. They ask:

Q. "How do you make the best use of eggshells in the garden? They don't disintegrate with the rest of the garbage when I've buried it in my various patches."

A. It's true that eggshells don't break down as fast as the rest of the garbage. This question made me recall an incident that happened when my youngest daughter, Kelly, was four. She was helping her daddy spread compost on our garden.

"Isn't this neat?" my husband said to her. "We take all our garbage, make it into compost, then use the compost to grow new food."

Kelly saw some eggshells in the otherwise finished compost and said: "Looks like we'll have plenty of eggs!"

While eggshells won't grow eggs, they're great for a garden as a good source of calcium and small amounts of nitrogen and phosphorus. You can speed their decomposition by crushing them before adding them to the compost (or burying them in the garden).

Or crush them and add them to the soil before planting tomatoes, to help prevent blossom end rot. Or, mix equal parts of crushed eggshells and wood ashes to add to the soil before planting cabbage to help prevent club root.

Q. "Do you have a recipe for whitewash?"

A. Mix water and hydrated lime, until it's the thickness of paint. When painted on the trunks of fruit trees, whitewash helps protect them from borers, sun injury, and diseases that enter through the bark.

Dig the soil away, about an inch from the base of the tree, and paint up to the lower branches. Painting the mixture on three times a

Solar Energy Workshop

Can solar energy cut your utility bills? You may find the answer to this question at a Solar Energy Workshop / Fair scheduled for Saturday, May 3rd, at Des Moines East High School.

The day - long solar conference features expert speakers, displays, and films on all aspects of solar energy. Co - sponsored by the Iowa Center for Local Self - Reliance and the Des Moines Schools Dept. of Community and Adult Education, the workshop / fair is designed for the general public. An overall view of solar energy systems and designs will be presented.

Speakers will give talks on solar principles and economics, solar hot water heating, passive and active solar heating, include the Iowa State Solar Office; Paul Sidles, U.S. Department of Energy; Roy Berger, Architect; Dr. Don Spencer, U of I Mechanical Engineering Dept; and Gary Swan, United Federal Savings. There will be a 30 minute question and answer session after each speaker's presentation.

Solar equipment will be on display, and participants will be able to talk with solar businesses and get an idea what it would cost to use solar energy.

From Doc and Katy Abraham's "The Green Thumb Garden Handbook" comes another idea: use nine cups hydrated lime, one cup bleached flour, and one can red pepper, plus enough water to make it the consistency of paint. Keep the trunks painted from early spring until killing frost.

No doubt the red pepper would add some Sprinkling either sand or wood ashes around the bothered plants will help too, since slugs don't like to crawl over these materials. repelling qualities!

Q. "Our lettuce and endive are always destroyed by slugs. Is there a remedy?"

A. The best remedy I've found is a trap made by recessing cans in the soil and filling them with a yeast solution: three teaspoons bakers' yeast in a cup of water. Use a fresh yeast solution daily as long as there is evidence of slug damage.

recall that Blacks have not voted Democratic at all times. Indeed, before 1932 and Herbert Hoover, Black voters were inextricably tied to the party of Lincoln; the great Frederick Douglass was moved to aver, "The Republican Party is the ship, all else is the sea." But Hoover's "do-nothing" policy in the face of a similarly horrendous "misery index" called for drastic action.

Drastic action is required once more. Our African brothers and sisters, e.g. in Zimbabwe, have learned that by aligning with the Soviets and Cubans, the Western countries treat them with more respect and are less able to steam roller them. Black voters in this country should recognize that you concessions from the "powers," not necessarily by aligning with them but aligning with those that challenge the "powers."

Hence, we should emulate Julian Bond, who is involved with the Citizens' Party, which is mounting a third-party challenge to Carter and Reagan. Or we can emulate Angela Davis, who is running for Vice-President on the Communist ticket. Some might say this is throwing your vote away. The response is that following the old path is an endorsement of the highest "misery index" in this country's history, $2 per gallon gasoline, $3 per dozen eggs, etc.

We'll praise a Paul Robeson or W.E.B. DuBois, we'll support a ZANU in Zimbabwe but we refuse to act on the lessons they attempted to bring to our attention.

Until we do, affirmative action will continue to be just another casualty in the bigger war of politics.
