Four Honored At Tribute To Black Women

The Gold Coast Lounge was the scene of history last week, as four women received recognition for "community enrichment" in the First Annual Tribute to Black Women.

More than 140 persons jammed the lounge to witness the crowning of Minnette Scott, Catherine Williams, Evelyn Davis and Etta K. Brown — and also relish a stirring performance by the Langston Hughes Company of Players.

In a genuine display of warmth and gratitude, elation creased the faces of the honorees as they were bestowed with the symbols of the community's verdict — a plaque and a long-stemmed rose.

The affair was sponsored by the Institute of Cultural Education (ICE), and ballots had been distributed throughout the community to choose women who have projected a positive image in exhibiting strength, leadership, and loyalty in serving their community and individual families.

A host of individuals portray those attributes, as reflected in the balloting, and it was a shame that only a handful could be singled out.

Receiving quite an ovation when handed her award was Minnette Scott. For nearly 30 years, she has shown unbending commitment and sacrifice by caring for foster children in her home, including a 19-year old handicapped woman since she was two weeks old.

Few could argue with the community's choice of Catherine Williams, the Deputy Commissioner of the Iowa Department of Social Services who rose to her present position by overcoming the stiff obstacles in hard-pressed times common to persons of her sex and race.

A former dancer, Mrs. Williams started out as a stenographer at the department in 1948. She received the Excellence Award from Social Services in 1978 for her work.

Also receiving prolonged applause was long-time community stalwart Evelyn Davis, Director of Tiny Tot Child Care Center since 1967. Mrs. Davis' dedication was best described by mistress of ceremonies Ruth Ann Gaines-Rhone: "Through the child care center she has proved that people would rather work than be on ADC."

Mrs. Davis has had a community health clinic named after her and also received the George Washington Carver Outstanding Community

Roper came to Des Moines from Lebanon, Missouri. Prior to his insurance agency, Roper started his own business as a manufacturing representative traveling

His advice to young people — "you need education to be competitive in the business world." As part of his civic involvement, Roper is a member of the NAACP, Blacks in Management and Minority Business Association.

IEWS and REVIEWS

by Allen Ashby

This the last full month of school, whether it is grade school, high school or college. Grade schools going into high school are probably wondering what they will face in high school, high school graduates are as worried about what is in college, and college people are wondering about a job. They all have something in common, that worry about how things will turn out.

Athletes really have it rough. Time was when a person picked his college because his dad or some other relative went there, but now you have to sign a contract that is called a letter of intent if you are going to a school. And I wonder if they do it in high school.

I can recall some merry scuffles around here to get certain junior high athletes to go to one or another high school. There is no recruiting in the Des Moines high schools, but what is done will pass for recruiting until a better word is found. So the kid goes to his school and is expected to produce immediately.

At one time it was thought that a first year student in high school or college wasn't ready for varsity competition, but now they are sure the athlete is.

Then you have to think that maybe the athlete will graduate and maybe he or she wont. When the eligibility is used up, the athlete is gone, or so it is in most cases, and he or she doesn't have anything to trade on the job market.

Now, I know that this has been going on for as long as I can remember but the difference way back when was that up to twenty years ago a person with two or three years of college could get a pretty good job, but not now.

You don't pick a school because one of your relatives went there, but on the basis of how much can I get for me. So you have to deliver when you are called upon, or maybe get let out, and there goes your free ride. And with all the time needed for practice in athletics, one doesn't have as much time to study as one really needs.

Tutors? They have been with us in both colleges and high schools for as long as I can remember. So now we have these exposes on exploiting black athletes, because athletes of all colors are exploited. One can think of athletes here in the city who used up their three years of college and sometimes wound up on the police force or in the fire department. But they were not black.

It is the dream of so many youngsters to make it big in high school so they can get an athletic scholarship to some college and then on to the pros. But it isn't that easy. Do you realize that there are just about five thousand professional athletes in the entire country, and that includes all sports.

Now when you consider the hundreds of thousands of people playing the games in all of the colleges around the country, you can see what the chances of making it really are unless you are a super star, and there are maybe not over twenty of them who come up every year in all the sports.

But maybe there is hope. Quite a few of the people I have talked to during the past year have said they are going to college for a purpose that does not include professional athletics.

As one fellow put it, "If I get good enough to get a contract, I might give it a try, but right now, I want to be a doctor." So maybe they aren't all looking at the big moon in the sky and hoping to reach it, because it is a hell of a distance to it.

(7) Make sensitive and flexible housing code enforcement a vital part of neighborhood revitalization efforts; clearly, a housing code enforcement program is not enough in itself, for it must be coupled with a practical basis for determining exactly what is required to improve the existing housing and with counseling and advice services for residents of these areas to aid them in locating financing and contractor services.

Such a multi-faceted code enforcement strategy should be concerned not only with the differences between owner-occupied and rental housing, but also with an emphasis on aiding families in the neighborhoods to acquire adequate housing and protecting them from further deterioration.

In this regard, there is also an obvious need for a detailed specifications sheet for rehabilitation work, written from local housing code requirements, upon which a contractor can bid for a job and a lender can make a loan.

(8) As regards housing code enforcement, housing rehabilitation codes should be enacted which are less stringent than those for new construction, so as not to discriminate against older housing built in a different day to different standards and practices;

there was an effort in the 1960's by the FHA to develop such a set of codes, and the results of that effort should be reviewed in order to provide the cities with a model rehabilitation code upon which they can act.

(9) An examination of the possibilities of making zoning changes in order to promote home ownership should be made, with a view towards, for example, making a zoning change from multi-family to single-family in a specific neighborhood or neighborhoods.

(10) Building permit and inspection services should be streamlined and simplified, so that the process of obtaining these services does not, in and of itself, discourage the needed rehabilitation efforts; in some cases, due to excessive levels of paperwork and delays, builders and developers find it much easier and less costly to work in suburban areas which generally have smaller and less

A Black Look At Politics

William S. Morris

Black Americans traditionally have little input into the process of formulating U.S. foreign policy. Until quite recently, blacks have been pre-occupied, probably quite correctly, with employment and civil rights in the fifty states.

The struggles of our Third World brethren in Africa, Asia, and Latin America went largely unnoticed, due to our own impoverishment in America, and the quick action by whites to label anything anti-status quo as "communist."

Whether in Alabama, Zimbabwe, Kenya, or Chile, when colored people attempted to work for improved facilities and human rights, white Americans would immediately cry "communist-inspired revolutionaries," and ally the U.S. with any dictator who promised to protect American interests.

As if oppressed peoples were too stupid (or docile) to recognize their own plight, without Russian "rabble-rousing." True, nationalist movements in many developing countries have carried a Marxist sentiment, but it was secondary to the goal of self-determination. Peoples in traditional or pre-industrial nations ruled themselves (and many others) for centuries before white men had dared to travel abroad.

What of contemporary U.S. foreign policy, now under the guidance of new Secretary of State Edmund Muskie? The Carter Administrations seems desirous of extending better relations to black Africa, Latin America, and the turbulent Middle East.

Our policy with the Soviet Union seems caught up somewhere between detente and the Cold War. The question remains whether black Americans should involve themselves further (outside the South African and Zimbabwean questions) in foreign affairs, especially with minority unemployment and black-on-black crime on the rise.

So-called black leaders have sought to enter the foreign policy scene by intervening in the Middle East and elsewhere. While black Americans do have a legitimate concern over U.S. policy toward the Third World in particular, I cannot help but see the recent journeys by the Reverends Jesse Jackson and Joseph Lowrey as publicity stunts.

Like so many blacks in positions of relative authority (including the Congressional Black Caucus), these people are frustrated by their inability to improve the economic pictures for black Americans. They turn, therefore, to largely symbolic gestures to placate an angry, disgruntled constituency. While the situations in South Africa and elsewhere command the attention of black Americans, foreign policy cannot employ the terminally jobless, nor can it put food on the table — at least not in the short run.

If our current generation of "leaders" cannot affect the problems confronting minority citizens, then perhaps it is time for a change. To be sure, the American political system does not allow for too much "boat-rocking", and changes will have to be made within the "system," if they are to be effective.

Yet, those who need help the most are likely those who have the least input into the policy-making process. Foreign policy is not the sort of thing that can offset worsening economic conditions, by and large.

When money gets tight, people's attentions focus on their own pocketbooks, not on foreign affairs. This realization has finally caught up with President Carter, perhaps too late.

I cannot say with any degree of certainty where this country is headed, nor to what degree problems plaguing minority citizens will be alleviated. This is not the fault of President Carter, nor of Congress, but is simply a function of a changing international picture.

Whether colored peoples can reach across national boundaries and unite for mutual benefit is, of course, wildly speculative. What is perhaps more plausible are economic agreements between, let us say black American-owned companies and firms in Africa, or between Hispanic-American-owned businesses and nationalized industries in Latin America.

Students from Africa have told me of white multinational corporations who tell host governments in the Third World that "there are no black people in the U.S. anymore," to dissuade the possibility of black international cooperation. With the tightening grip that OPEC (which includes oil-rich Nigeria and Venezuela) has on the industrialized West, the possibilities for mutual economic benefit by the worlds colored peoples is obvious.

Yet, there are tremendous and formidable obstacles that must be circumvented before this can become even a remote possibility, not the least of which being ancient tribal animosities, inter-nation rivalries, internal political instability, a lack of economic diversification, and outright class conflicts.

The prospects, therefore, do not bode well for such an eventuality. Economic conditions can change, however, and this should never be overlooked, especially as to the viability of new modes of technology.

Then again, despite the potential I have described for international economic cooperation between colored peoples, it all pales in light of the fact that even in the wealthiest nation in world history, the United States of America, there are areas in the rural South and West where living conditions for blacks and Native Americans have remained largely unchanged for some one hundred years.

The abject poverty which plagues these communities rivals the destitution of even the most primitive refugee camps in Afghanistan, Cambodia, and Uganda. White people like to rationalize all this, and soothe their guilty consciences by saying "well, in America, at least they have the freedom to try." Really? For most who suffer deprivation, their fate was largely determined at birth.

For next week, I will examine the role of the black vote, in an election year when a large swing vote could mean victory in a tight Presidential race. The question is, can we still swing it?

(11) Methods should be developed to provide security and parking facilities for work crews and materials in order to facilitate inner-city rehabilitation, and, in general, make it easier to locate and acquire laborers to work on these jobs.

(12) Promote tax relief programs which would aid and stimulate rehabilitation by providing that for some period of time after the property is rehabilitated, property taxes will not be thereby increased; St. Louis, as an example, allows 100% tax abatement on the value added by rehabilitation for ten years and 50% for the next fifteen years, while Boston, in its grant program under housing assistance, does not increase the tax assessments on properties brought up to housing code standards by rehabilitation on the theory that the original assessment thereon was made on the assumption that the property already satisfied them.

Next week, I will consider a series of recommendations for the federal government in the housing rehabilitation and neighborhood revitalization areas. After that, in the final phase of the recommendation process, I will look at the FHA, realtors and builders, and the neighborhoods suffering from such deterioration themselves.

Job Fair For Handicapped Held Recently

For the first time in Iowa a job fair was held May 2 and 3 specifically for the handicapped.

The Vocational Rehabilitation Division of the Iowa Department of Public Instruction, cooperated with the Iowa Commission for the Blind in the creation of the job fair held at the Vocational Rehab Center in Des Moines.

About 50 applicants, some of them bused from other parts of Iowa, interviewed with 16 employers. The applicants were primarily college graduates.

Speakers for the program that preceded the interviews included Marvin Tooman, Chief of Placement for Vocational Rehabilitation and the primary organizer of the fair, Dr. James Mitchell, Deputy Superintendent of Schools for Iowa, John Taylor, Executive Director of the Iowa Commission for the Blind, and Drs. Carl Shawhan and Desmond Bragg of the National Rehabilitation Job Development / Job Placement Specialist Program.

Dr. Shawhan told the employers that hiring the handicapped does not increase insurance rates, and that the handicapped as a group have good records for production and attendance. He warned the employers however, that the worst thing they could do is give preferential treatment to the handicapped on the job.

Shawhan said that preferential treatment caused resentment among co-workers and was not good in the long run for the handicapped person who was not encouraged to improve.

The employers were told not to be so afraid of accommodations for the handicapped. "I know a worker," said Shawhan, "who has only head movement." He earns $17,000 a year and the only money spent for accommodating his handicap was $40.00.

Tooman added that the average cost of accommodation was

Employers who attended the fair were: Traveler's Insurance, American Republic Insurance, Ardan, Banker's Life, Blue Cross / Blue Shield, Central National Bank,

Iowa State Department of Revenue, Iowa Des Moines National Bank, Iowa Merit Employment, Iowa Power & Light Company, KSO, Meredith Corporation and the federal departments of Health Education and Welfare, General Services, Office of Personnel Management, and the Iowa Department of Social Services.

Tooman said he was very happy about the fair experiment and said more job fairs would almost certainly be held.

Pastor - Bishop A.B. Carter, Sr.

Mother's Day was a joyous occasion for the saints, with the Pastor, Bishop A.B. Carter, Sr., serving all of the mothers and women; Bishop Carter asked the mothers and women to remain in the sanctuary while he and the Brothers went down into the church dining room, prepared and served a delicious full course dinner. "A lovely Mother's Day cake, white trimmed with red roses and coffee for desert."

It was a splendid day and all present enjoyed it to the highest.

Bishop A.B. Carter, Sr. and son, Steve, have just returned from a business (flight) trip to Houston, Texas; Mother Carter has just returned from a flight to Washington, D.C. where she joined in

CORE Observes Black Liberation Month

by Ora McQueen

The month of May is an important period in the history of Black Liberation celebrated by blacks in both the United States and in Africa. May was first observed as Black Liberation Month in 1972 at Addis Ababa, the capital and largest city in Ethiopia. The first occasion was supported by about 35,000 U.S. blacks and about 30,000 black supporters from Africa.

Since 1972, there have been conferences and other events held in both countries commemorating the liberation of black people worldwide. The whole month is centered around educational forums, energy crisis, police repression, support of liberation armies in Africa and other issues that relate to racism and/or imperialism.

The objective of these conferences and other events is to show a binding of blacks in Africa and America. Gene Locke, First chairman of the African Liberation Support Committee (ALSC), addressed the first conference in 1972. At that conference, he stated: "What is binding us together now is the reality that we are one people, that our objectives are one and that our struggles are one."

CORE was represented at the first conference in 1972. As a member of the Organization of African Unity (OAU), CORE is an important linkage between the United States and Africa. CORE's National Director, Roy Innis was the first North American to be seated as a delegate and a U.S. representative at the OAU in 1972. Innis has worked for several years to bring about international communication between American, African and other blacks, especially in the area of economic development.

The Des Moines Chapter of CORE has designated the month of May as a membership month a commemoration to what the month of May represents to blacks locally, nationally and abroad. A strategy meeting to set priorities and define local issues affecting blacks in Des Moines will be held in the conference room of the Tiny tot Center at 16th and Forest on Tuesday May 20th at 7:00 p.m.

Membership information can be obtained at that conference or by writing to: Des Moines Chapter of CORE, P.O. Box 1161, University Station, Des Moines, IA 50311.

Other dates being observed in the month of May in keeping with the theme and occasion is May 19th which is the birthday of Malcolm X, slain Muslim and Civil Rights Leader. Also the anniversary of Brown vs. Board of Education on May 17th.

A special observation of Brown vs. Board of Education will be held at Kyles AME Zion Church, 907 15th Street, on May 27th. Several community speakers will be featured in a panel discussion. An analysis will be made of the progress of black education since the Brown decision. This event is being sponsored by the local Chapter of the NAACP and other local support groups.

Retires After 30 Years

Mrs. Lillian K. Mapp, of 7509 Palm Drive in Urbandale, retired May 2 from 30 years of continuous service in the Federal Government. She spent the entire period with the Veterans Administration.

On her retirement, Mrs. Mapp was honored Thursday, May 1 during a reception of fellow workers at the Veterans Administration Medical Center in Des Moines and again on Friday, May 2 at a luncheon and later at a dinner at the Adventureland Inn. Out of town guests attending the events were her mother, Mrs. John W. Kemp, of Richmond, Virginia; a sister, Mrs. Berthel Carmichael, of Washington, D.C.; and a brother, Robert H. Kemp, of Richmond, Virginia. She is the wife of John F. Mapp, Jr.

Mrs. Mapp began federal service in Richmond, Virginia in

Lillian Mapp

1950 as a statistical clerk in the Veterans Administration Hospital there. In 1955, she was reassigned to the Medical Record Department as a Medical Records and Research Clerk. Because of her interest and desire to make a career in the medical records field, she entered the Medical Record Training Program through the American Medical Record Association and the Veterans Administration.

Upon completion of this training in 1958, she received credentialed status as an Accredited Record Technician. She became Assistant to the Chief, Medical Record Library Service during the remainder of her time at that hospital.

Mrs. Mapp was transferred to the Veterans Administration Hospital in Becksville, Ohio in 1961. In 1965, she transferred to the Veterans Administration Hospital in Des Moines, Iowa where she became Chief of the Medical Records Department at that facility. She then was selected for further training in the program and was sent to George Washington University in Washington, D.C. During her career, Mrs. Mapp has received numerous awards for Outstanding, Sustained Superior performance, Quality Increases, and Suggestions.

Mrs. Mapp has served as clinical instructor at the Medical Center for students from Ottumwa Heights College in the Medical Record Technician Program and from the Des Moines Area XI Community College in the Medical Secretarial Program. In addition to these responsibilities, Mrs. Mapp planned, developed and taught a course in medical terminology and anatomy which she continued until her retirement.

Mrs. Mapp is a member of and actively participates in the American Medical Record Association in which she recently completed a three-year term as a member of its Continuing Education Committee on the national level. She is also a member of and past president of the Iowa Medical Record Association and has served in a number of other offices in that organization. She is a member of the Advisory Board of the Medical Secretarial Program at the Area XI Community College.

She expects to remain active in her retirement by participation in her professional medical records associations, the Des Moines Chapter of Links, Inc. of which she is a member, and Aldersgate United Methodist Church.

Rape Prevention, Self Defense Discussed At Clinic

An enlightening clinic on rape prevention was held at the Willkie House on Saturday May 10 in which the legal rights of potential sexual assault victims and various self-defense techniques were outlined.

Earnest Baty, formerly with the Iowa Highway Patrol and a state agent with the Division of Criminal Investigation (DCI), conducted the workshop with La Montie Gause, a second-degree black belt. Both teach a self-defense course with the YMCA.

The workshop was sponsored by the Institute of Cultural Education (ICE) in conjunction with the Willkie House as part of a month-long series of activities in tribute to the Black woman.

Rape has been described as any sexual intimacy forced on one person by another, but is mostly viewed as not a crime of uncontrollable passion, but rather a cruel and calculated, brutal act directed by men against women.

An excerpt from a recent article in the magazine Black Books Bulletin by Kalamu ya Salaam is an appropriate backdrop for the rape prevention workshop:

"... In America women are seen and projected as sexual objects, objects which are pliable, mindless and almost of another species. Women as sexual objects may be bought (prostitution and marriage) or stolen (rape).

By extension, sex becomes a possession that men consume rather than a social relationship that women and men share."

Salaam adds: "... Rape is the most violent form of sexual imperialism, i.e., the act of rape is an act of denying women authority, autonomy or self-rule in the same way that political imperialism (takes away the independence) of colonized nations and peoples."

Baty stressed at the beginning of the clinic, which was attended by about 20 persons, that he had no perfect solutions to avoid the incidence of rape, which he said often goes unreported. (One estimate is that a reported rape occurs in this country every 10 minutes.)

Baty said the purpose of the clinic was to raise the consciousness and confidence levels of potential rape victims to the point where they begin thinking prevention and preparing for the possibility of an attack.

With increased awareness, more "resources and recourses are available" when one is confronted with rape so it might be prevented rather than reacting in panic, Baty said.

Baty listed several things an individual should know or do to become more skillful in fighting rape.

One, he said, is that an individual must have knowledge of or access to the law. They must know what rights they have in defending themselves because even though a woman might be only trying to ward off an attack, there are laws in the Iowa Code restricting what "reasonable force" can be used in self-defense.

Baty would not interpret those sections of the code dealing with "reasonable force," but warned that criminal charges could be filed against a rape victim or potential victim who shoots or injures a person that a woman feels is about to harm her — or any innocent bystander injured in the course of defending herself.

Baty suggested that when an individual is confronted by a rapist, (when one returns home to find the rapist in her home) any weapon one has is a potential weapon against the individual — including keys, Mace, or a pocket knife. "Many times the best defense is running," says Baty. "One must know his or her own capabilities and limitations."

He also suggested that whenever entering your home, to leave one arm free (if for example, you're carrying groceries) and close the door behind you after entering the home.

He also said one should flip on a light switch and stand in the doorway to allow your eyes to adjust before going into your home where an attacker could be laying in wait.

Baty also suggested rearranging keys on a key ring so that the house key is right next to the car key. Many times, by fumbling with keys as you approach your home, you are vulnerable by announcing your presence to a potential rapist who might be lurking in the shadows near your home.

If ever walking on the street at night, Baty said one should rely on the "sixth sense — that amber light of caution" known as intuition, or "picking up vibes" in which the body senses danger and is signalling you to run, react, turn around, or do something.

Baty and Gause demonstrated several judo techniques and self-defense tactics such as learning the 24 pressure points of the body to attack in order to fend off a rapist.

They described how women in their self defense class, who have been instilled with discipline and mental and physical preparedness, use various arm holds, choke holds and other elements of surprise to defend themselves.

They described how "a 6-foot, 10-inch, 270-pound man" was rendered ineffective against women in their self-defense course at the YMCA because they knew the correct techniques.

Another course will be offered at the YMCA this fall for women and adults. A Y membership is required along with a $15 fee for the 10-week course.

Backyard Bounty

By Jan Riggbach

Guess which vegetable ranks third — right after tomatoes and beans in popularity among home gardeners. It's the cucumber!

Dubbing 1980 "The Year of the Cucumber," The National Garden Bureau suggests that one reason for the cuke's growing popularity is its appeal to weight-watchers: a nice big cucumber supplies plenty of vitamins and minerals, but only 25 calories!

A successful cucumber plant needs warm weather; fertile, well-drained soil; and water ... lots of water.

One of the easiest ways to meet the moisture requirement is to sink a clay pot in the soil, surrounded by a group of cucumber seeds. The pot can be quickly filled with water, which will slowly seep into the soil for the vines to draw upon. A thick layer of mulch will help keep the moisture in the soil.

To meet the warmth requirement, I usually plant cucumbers (along with warmth-loving melons, peppers, and limas about a week later than tomato plants. Where drainage is a problem, it helps to hill the soil up into a little mound for each group of seeds. A shovelful of compost in each hill will meet the need for fertile soil.

I always sprinkle a half-dozen radish seeds around each cucumber hill. The radishes protect the little plants from the cucumber beetle. Other gardeners report achieving good protection from cucumber beetles by covering the little plants with nylon net or cheesecloth.

I've found that growing the vines up a trellis or fence not only saves space, but also makes nicer-shaped cukes. And it makes picking them easier, too. New studies show that climbing vines produce double the yield of sprawling ones, and that they continue bearing longer.

Looking forward to your bumper crop of cucumber, you might want to send for a copy of "Creative Cukery," with 13 unusual ways to use them, from a refreshing drink to a mousse. It's available for 50 cents from the National Garden Bureau, 1186 Los Altos Ave., Los Altos, CA 94022.

Beginning gardeners who need some basic information for a low price can get it ... from Gardens for All, a non-profit organization to help people become more independent through gardening. Called "Your Independence Garden," the 48-page book is available for $1 from: Independence Garden, Gardens for All, 180 Flynn Avenue, Burlington, Vermont 05401.

"A backyard garden — an Independence Garden, we call it — allows you to stay home, have some fun, and be productive. A bonus is the fact you can't buy better tasting vegetables than those you grow yourself," says Jack Robinson, President of Gardens for All.

MODEL CITY BOARD-PUBLIC HEARINGS

These open hearings are the first step in the development of the City's Comprehensive Development Plan. Later the month, issues raised by residents at these hearings will be used by the boards at their Annual Planning Conference, to formulate a needs statement for their neighborhoods. The needs statement are a reflection of the NPB priorities and will be used by the City's Central Advisory Board in making recommendations to the City Council about the kind of programs that need to be implemented or continued to improve the quality of life in the city's neighborhood.

For more than a decade, the needs of the neighborhoods, expressed by the citizens themselves, have figured importantly in the development of programs funded with community development block grant funds, programs that might not have existed had it not been for the activities of the NPB's.

Through NPB planning, for example, water & sewer facilities have been brought into areas of the city that did not have them, four (4) community centers have been built or rehabilitated and recreational programs serve thousands of residents each year: streets have been paved, sewer lines laid; and some 850 homes have received rehabilitation - in new roofs, furnaces, plumbing, wiring, foundations etc. - and a portion of Four-Mile Creek was straightened to ease the threat or previously frequent flooding.

More recently, because of the resident's concern that earlier housing programs provided rehab to home interiors only and were not contributing to the overall exterior appearance of the neighborhood, two projects were developed which allowed for exterior rehabilitation while taking care of internal code violations as well. These projects, in conjunction with the PSA Loan Project, offer a loan/grant combination and underscore the NPB & CAB interest in getting private dollars invested in the city's communities.

Residents of the prime service areas are encouraged by their boards to attend the open neighborhood hearings at the following:

NCCJ PRESIDENT URGES PRESIDENT CARTER TO GRANT ASYLUM TO HAITIAN REFUGEES

The President of the National Conference of Christians and Jews has urged President Jimmy Carter to grant political asylum to the Haitian "boat people."

Dr. David Hyatt asked Mr. Carter to exercise the Attorney General's "parole authority" prior to May 15 in order to grant approximately 10,000 Haitians facing deportation asylum here in the United States.

More than 2,400 Haitian peasants have landed on Florida shores since March and some estimates say that 25,000 Haitians may have arrived in South Florida in the last decade.

Dr. Hyatt, who has publicly applauded Mr. Carter's defense of human rights, cited the President's "many splendid and courageous humanitarian moves" including Mr. Carter's opposition to Soviet oppression, his support for the Cambodian and Vietnamese boat people, and his offer to the Cubans seeking refuge from the Castro regime.

"We wholeheartedly support your policy commitment to the protection of human rights and are convinced by evidence from a wide variety of sources that these Haitian refugees would face persecution and even death if returned to Haiti," said Hyatt.

"The South Florida community has borne the responsibility of providing these refugees minimal human services," continued Hyatt. "We request your immediate attention in this national matter."

Rebecca Waugh, of 817 S.E. Second, Ankeny, a mandala weaving.

Leaders of clubs receiving honorable mention are Phyllis Frette, of 2510 Sixty-second St., and Linda Strait, of 8120 Valdez Circle, Urbandale.

LOOK ON SPORTS

The tennis season for us is about to start. First comes the Hilltop section of the Younker's Kodol meet. This is a really fun tournament, and people always like to qualify for the final sixteen. I have always wondered why we haven't had black tennis players in the thing.

One year Janet Milton, daughter of John Milton, who has been in Hilltop meets since the year one, and Ray Stingley won our meet, and there hasn't been a black player in it since then or for that matter before then.

Watching the courts at Good Park, I have seen one or two girls who might give an account of themselves on the court even if they didn't win. A fellow asked me why we didn't have more black girls and women in the game around here. He thought it was because Esther Myers seems to own the Hilltop meet, and most of the kids think they couldn't beat her, and so won't get into the game. I don't believe that is the reason. Although she has a seemingly good start, Esther won't last forever, and the kids ought to be trying to be her replacement.

We are getting our stuff together for our thirty second Des Moines Hilltop open, and have to wonder how the energy problem will effect the draw. Maybe we will find out in the Kodol meet, because several people usually come in from out of town, and so we will see what happens.

The think I miss with the coming of spring is the bunch of semi-pro baseball teams that used to play out of Des Moines. We had I don't know how many black teams and just too many white teams, and they didn't ever think to intergrate, so each played in its own atmosphere.

There were the Des Moines Cubs, a team on the south side, managed by Carl Greer, The Capitol City Giants who were around, I believe longer than any team in the city, The Black Barons, who were kept alive for their last years by Hauge Thompson. Tommy liked to play the game and was the spirit behind the Barons for quite a while.

Then there were several black baseball players who sold their talent to small towns around here. Jap Crowe and Hugh Casey, pitchers, and catcher Tyree. Now I may have this battery reversed, and somebody will likely let me know. I am not naming the ball clubs that were thicker than flees on a mangy dog during the thirties and twenties.

Service Award from Simpson College in 1979.

Ohio native Etta K. Brown was equally humble and thrilled upon being honored. She came to Des Moines in 1977 and worked as a psychologist for the Des Moines school district for a year before starting her own private practice.

Ms. Brown's consulting firm, Dynamic Management, provides guidance and counseling to Black children and parents free of charge.

Prior to the awards ceremony, the Langston Hughes Company of Players, led by Niambi D. Webster, set the atmosphere with a mix of poetry, prose, song and dance embodying the soul and essence of Black womanhood.

Impressive in their various roles were Toni Jones, Lucia Howell, Dee Anne Davis and Pam Nickerson.

The afterglow of a beautiful evening saluting the Black woman in the Des Moines community will linger in the hearts and minds of those in attendance for some time to come.

SPARE TIME PROGRAM

"India" a slide presentation, will be given by Ambrose Moses, Tuesday, May 20, at First Baptist Church, 8th and High Streets.

the last in the spring series "Making Your Spare Time Worthwhile" sponsored by the Department of Community and Adult Education of the Des Moines Public Schools.

All programs in the series are free.

View Point

By

James E. O'Daye, Sr.

Responsibility, where does it start? And where does it stop? Who shall I turn to? What must I do? Tell me! Won't someone step forward? I could go on and on crying, afraid to sleep and if I should doze, be afraid to wake up.

First I must not panic, I must calm myself, relax, and you must do likewise. "God is greater than any problem we have." Just remembering that I can relax and carry on.

Why are there so many poor people? Why? Why? In view of all the productive wonders of modern science. One answer might be a battery of new and surprising questions that turn the table on me, the questioner. How can we know whether we are poor?

What standards of comparison have we? Are earthly creatures poorer than the inhabitants of Mars? Do we make similar statements about natural phenomena, complaining that the boiling point of water is too high or that the iron is too heavy?

Here we run into one of the great difficulties of the social sciences. We have no right to speak of this world as being poor since we cannot compare its level of living with that of other worlds of which no traveler returns.

Poverty is a subjective rather than an objective thin. This and similar observations about enriching one's soul with the beauth of sunset or the song of birds or the wealth of friendship are part of the ancient wisdom of amn.

A happily married but underfed couple may, in one sense be richer than a well fed couple filled with reciprocal hate. It is also part of the creed of many economists who refuse to measure wealth in terms of income. Since wealth in a final analysis is satisfaction is not a public fact, the sciences do not present us with similarly exasperating problems. A cubic inch of lead does not, in China, weigh one pound and in the United States, ten; The boiling point is not 212 degrees at sea level in South Africa, and 150 degrees in New York City.

We might be tempted to complain that for the world as a whole, gravity pulled to hard and the boiling point rose to high. In some countries levels are high and people prosper, in others the people languish in poverty. In face of these observations we find some justification for asking why so many are poor.

Cutting through the knot of philosophy we ask again: Why is the world so poor? Why are there so many poor people? Why? Why? Why?

I would like to thank all of you for the many phone calls! THANKS AGAIN.

Into a life full of uncertainties comes...

The Predictable Power Bill

Now with Budget Billing, your Iowa Power bill can be the same amount each month — an average based on your energy costs for the entire year. With a predictable power bill, your monthly budget planning can be a lot easier.

How Does Budget Billing Work?

To figure your Budget Billing amount, Iowa Power will carefully calculate your electric and/or gas expenses for the coming year, taking into account your past usage, the effects of weather, projected rate increases and other factors that determine the size of your bill. This total amount is then divided into 12 equal payments — your monthly Budget Billing amount.

At least once each year, we'll compare your actual use to your Budget Billing amount. If you've paid more than necessary, we'll credit your next 12 bills. If you've paid too little — based on actual use — the additional charge will also be spread out over the next 12 bills.

Make It Even Simpler With Ener-Chek

Budget Billing customers can also sign up for Ener-Chek. Under this plan, you authorize your bank to pay your monthly Budget Billing amount automatically from your regular checking account. Your monthly bank statement will then include an Ener-Chek receipt showing the amount deducted from your account and information related to energy use.

Choose Your Own Billing Date

If you choose Budget Billing (with or without Ener-Chek) you may request Iowa Power to bill you on a specific date each month — payday, for instance, or the day your social security check arrives.

Find Out More Today!

You can find out what your Budget Billing amount would be by calling Iowa Power or stopping in at your local office. And if you decide you want Budget Billing, we can arrange to put you on the program right away.

The predictable power bill. It means one less surprise, in a life full of uncertainties.
