Day Camp Held At Union Park

Several community organizations and volunteers pitched in to make a recent summer day camp held at Union Park that stressed elevating youth's self-image, and their cultural and historical knowledge a huge success.

The two-week day camp, held in late July, attracted some 300 participants from across the city, particularly the Woodland-Wilkie neighborhood.

The Inner Urban Alcohol Program (IUAP) Institute of Cultural Education (ICE) and the Carter G. Woodson Cultural Center conducted the day camp, funded with a Des Moines Park and Recreation grant.

The day camp, held from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. each day, featured a variety of activities, including seminars on Black history and culture and positive self esteem. Sight-seeing tours, a trip to the Des Moines Zoo, creativity sessions involving arts and crafts, music and dancing all combined to make each day busy and enlightening for the participants — who ranged from 7 to high school age.

Lee Scott, outreach and prevention director with IUAP, said the rented school bus was "filled to brim" daily, as from 50 to 75 participants flocked to the park. He said he hopes the program will be bigger and better next summer.

Twyla Woods, who is a teacher at Findley Elementary school and chairperson of ICE, along with Shahid Muhammad, director of Carter G. Woodson Cultural Center, served as instructors, concentrating on encouraging the participants to feel good about themselves through discussion of Afro-American culture, history, and American history.

Muhammad said that the participants were initially hesitant to get involved in the discussion, but after warming to the occasion, they contributed enthusiastically in the spirit of things. He said the sessions were fruitful and showed there is a great need for additional seminars on Black heritage and positive self-images for larger audiences.

Scott and Woods emphasized that Tiny Tot Child Care Center and Evelyn Davis should be thanked for their contribution of the daily lunches for the participants. Many parents chipped in also, helping make the activities smoother, especially considering the large crowds.

And Elizabeth Manuel of IUAP was a workhorse as coordinator of the arts and crafts activities and assisting in the other festivities.

King Responds To Stolen Goods Allegations

By Carolyn King

Of late, reports of the media and other pressures seem to plague the Black leaders in our community; not only on the local level, but nationally as well. Last weeks publicity was geared to Mr. Robert King, Chairman of the City's Central Advisory Board, who is currently under investigation in connection with alleged thefts this summer from the Younker's warehouse where he worked.

Mr. King denied stealing any merchandise from the Warehouse and charged that "forces" in the city are trying to destroy him as a black leader. Mr. King stated at a press conference "there has never been any stolen merchandise in my home."

King who was dismissed as assistant warehouse manager stated he was shocked by his dismissal. He said it was unwarranted and is working through his union to get his job back.

King stated "my record of service is impeccable and I am deeply concerned about the threat to my good name, honesty and integrity from publicity about the Younker's investigation."

King stated his constitutional rights and credibility as a black spokesman are threatened by news leaks. Further commenting, Mr. King stated he has taken home only "salvageable" merchandise from the Younker's warehouse and that he had an informal agreement with his supervisor to take home salvageable merchandise provided it was used for charitable purposes.

A Younkers employee for 33 years, Mr. King said 15 of those years he has been responsible for distributing merchandise the store couldn't sell among various non-

National Bar Association Meeting

The National Bar Association recently held (August 3-9th, 1980) it's 55th Annual Convention in Dallas, Texas. The theme of this convention was "A Strategy for Black Lawyers in the 1980's: Communication Solutions for Self-Determination."

The National Bar Association is the oldest Black legal organization in the world, having been in existence for some 55 years. The Association represents the interest of some 12,000 minority lawyers nationally. More than 40 chapters make up the foundation.

The NBA was founded and organized in Des Moines, Iowa in 1925. Until very recently, Iowa did not have an active NBA affiliate chapter. But, that was remedied with the formation of the Iowa National Bar Association, in June of this year. The INBA represents the interest of over 40 minority lawyers and law graduates in the state of Iowa.

This year's convention was attended by Attorney Louis Martin, President of the Iowa National Bar Association. Attorney Martin indicates that a minority Bar Association is needed nationally and locally as a catalyst for change, review and synthesis. Black lawyers are in demand to lend their talents and skills for the betterment of all people. Black lawyers are in such strategic positions that they have the opportunity to implement change by policy making, influence and economic clout.

Minority Bar Associations are not separatist in nature. But, we as black people have a specific agenda that bears articulating and only through such organizations as the NBA and the INBA can we affectively call the meeting to order. We must continue to broaden the base of attorneys, law students and judges organized to serve as the collective voice of Black America, setting forth foundations throughout America and the Third World.

Highlights of this year's annual convention included workshops on Black on Black Crime, Sexual Harassment, The Campaign for Comprehensive Sanctions Against South Africa, The Undocumented Alien Worker: Its impact on Black Workers and many, many more.

Major speeches were delivered by Andrew Young, former Ambassador to the United Nations, Louis Clayton Jones, Esq, Co-founder National Conference of Black Lawyers, and J. Clay Smith, Esq, Commissioner, Equal Employment Opportunity Commission.

According to Attorney Martin the Iowa National Bar Association is needed in Iowa to serve as a catalyst for the concerns and motivations of Blacks in Iowa. It is the hope of the INBA to be of service whenever and wherever called upon.

The current officers of the Iowa National Bar Association are:

IEWS and REVIEWS

by Allen Ashby

You can go so far, but your past will catch up with you. A couple of fellows out of my past of forty years ago caught up with me the other day.

One of them, J. Nelson Thompson, had been keeping in touch with me during most of the year, so he knew where I could be found. The other guy, Maurice K. Patterson, was a track star at Drake in the very early nineteen twenties. I remember when he came to the Drake Relays in 1919 from Crawfordsville Indiana high school.

There were Pat and three white runners and they blazed around the track in the high school mile relay setting a record. So Patterson came back to Drake and was on their track team as a hurdler and quartermiler. I don't think he was ever happy in Des Moines, and he gave it a good try, but wound up in Kansas City, Missouri, where I would guess he has been for all these years.

He wanted to be a lawyer, and may well be for all I know. He had just about everything to make it as one. A keen mind and an ability to grasp situations quickly plus a great speaking voice would have made him really good in a courtroom. Today, with his voice, he might have made it big in radio or tv.

The guy was the first real protester I ever saw, refusing to wear his Drake letter sweater because he didn't like the way blacks were treated at the school. I know you couldn't get into the D. Club if you were black, and that burned Pat.

Besides protesting, Pat would take to fists if he got riled enough. I can recall a couple of incidents when he did just that, but generally he was easy to get along with.

Chet Williamson, the late Earl Newcombe and I never forgot the debt of gratitude that we owed him when we arrived in Kansas City for a tennis meet. Our car had broken down and it had taken all of our money to get it back on the road again and we didn't even have money for a cup of coffee which was a nickel then. Pat and his wife fed us until we got some money from home and wouldn't let us pay them, although I thought they could have used the money.

They probably kept us from defaulting because we would have been too weak to play if they hadn't taken us in. I never saw the guy in all these years and often asked people if he was still alive. Well, he is and it was great to hear his voice.

J. Nelson Thompson has had an interesting career since I last saw him in about 1942. He was assistant Attorney General for the state of Missouri in Kansas City, named in Marquis' Who's Who in American Law, the only black lawyer from K.C. named and in the Best Lawyers of America in its first edition published this year.

Besides that he has done quite a bit of writing under the pen name of Jack Nelson, which is his name; John Nelson Thompson. He seems to have spent a lot of time traveling around the Bahamas, West Indies and Mexico, and used the material for articles in a piece known as A La Diverz, an interesting magazine.

In his letter to me he said he was going to travel around that part of the world and write, so he must have a life I might envy. He wrote a long piece to me about his early days in Des Moines and at Drake from which he graduated. It was interesting to those of us who were around in those times, but there was just too much mention of a fellow I know to come out with it.

Nelson was on the old West High football team when I was playing for East High, and we bumped heads quite a bit one afternoon. His mild manner belied his toughness, because he was a good lineman and might have made the West varsity, except in those days they just didn't use blacks at that school for varsity football.

I have to remember lots of fun we had at the old Y camp and how some of the tougher boys tried to pick on Nelson and wished they hadn't. Yep, it was good to hear from those fellows and talk over old times. As the years go by, incidents are magnified and the stunts get more dangerous, but such is life.

Thoughts and Comments

By James B. Morris III

Although there was no widescale economic dissatisfaction to the government of Fulgencio Batista prior to its ouster in 1951, there was, within the populace and the army, great discontent about the graft, corruption, fiscal irresponsibility, foreign political, economic and social controls and the resulting social insensitivity, especially to black Cubans.

Fidel Castro, who had gained a considerable following from his early opposition to the Batista regime, had led an almost suicidal attack against the military fortress of Moncada in the city of Santiago on July 26, 1953. After serving some time in prison as one of the few survivors of the ill-fated assault, he was given amnesty by the Batista government and emigrated to Mexico to plan his renewed challenge to Batista.

Castro's political group, the 26th of July movement, included the Argentine revolutionist Ernesto "Che" Guevara, but he and many of his comrades-in-arms were wiped out by government troops in December of 1956 shortly after landing in Cuba.

The survivors of this group, numbering less than a thousand, withdrew into the Sierra Maestra mountain range and waged a two year guerrilla campaign which eventually brought them to victory in January, 1959. Although there was conflict and vagueness in their political philosophy, their support numerically insubstantial, and their administrative skills unknown, the movement was able to acquire support from poor peasants, urban workers, non whites, and young idealists. Under the personal direction of Fidel Castro, the revolutionary government adopted a pragmatic form of socialism designed to achieve equality and social justice among the populace by means of social, agrarian and economic reforms.

The practical effects of this in post-revolutionary Cuba is the basis of this and several succeeding articles. Much of the information contained herein comes from the "Crisis" magazine article written by Dr. Albert R. Griffin, an Assistant Professor at Boston University, which appeared in May of 1980. Dr. Griffin's article is divided into four categories (education, employment, housing and personal freedom), and my comments will be so confined.

In the field of education, the eradication of illiteracy among all Cubans was given initially a high priority by the post-revolutionary government. Fidel Castro once remarked that "education is the revolution", and financial expenditures for education have generally been the highest in Latin America. In all schools (public and private) in 1959, fewer than a million students were enrolled, in sharp contrast to the figure of nearly 3,100,000 by 1976.

The large number of private schools of pre-revolutionary Cuba were quickly dissolved, and a state-directed educational system was introduced.

It included, among other things, (1) a general education of 12 grades preceded by a pre-school program; (2) university education; (3) teacher-training education; (4) adult education, directed toward the elimination of residual illiteracy and continued study by workers; (5) technical education, parallel somewhat to the general education; (6) language instruction; and, (7) specialized education. Education is free at all levels, with supplementary benefits available to insure its completion.

Dr. Griffith's article suggested that the Cuban Revolution has been successful in opening up educational opportunities for the black populace. As opposed to the segregated situation in pre-revolutionary Cuban education, there are now substantial numbers of blacks pursuing a college education. It must be kept in mind that the numbers of blacks in Cuban higher education observed by Dr. Griffith also include a number of foreigners who have come to Cuba to study.

Substantial numbers of Jamaicans, Guyanese and Africans were observed, but few were in the most specialized educational areas, and they were generally unwilling to discuss their feelings about life in Cuba. Most noteworthy is the fact that there is no mention of black Cubans in these specialized areas. From the observations of Dr. Griffith about the scarcity of blacks in the more specialized and professional jobs, it would seem quite likely that Cuban education is no less segregated by color beyond the general level, to some degree, and thus not dissimilar to the situation in the United States.

But, considering the fact that the Cuban literacy rate is some 90 per cent higher than anywhere else in Latin America, education for all Cubans has been an unmixed success. Younger Cuban students freely accept each other, regardless of color or relative

Getting Ahead

Robert V. Morris

Well, I am happy to return to the Bystander this week even though it will be tough to replace the brilliant column "A Black Look At Politics" written by my brother William. It was a pleasure to read a column written with such an exceptional understanding of politics in this country.

Last year my column dealt mainly with the institution of higher educational and its positive and negative effects on black and minority students and the problems they encounter in their educational pursuit.

In researching and preparing the column I used the University of Iowa, where I am currently in attendance, as a reference due to its black and minority student and faculty population which is the largest of any University or College in this state. I felt, and still feel, that it is truly representative of major Universities across the nation.

It will be my intention to continue talking about education but I will also discuss politics and social issues which affect blacks and minorities in this country, and this state.

There is no doubt that these areas heavily influence each other and "conservative" domination in any one could be to the detriment of blacks and minorities in general. This conservative movement which is blatantly anti-black, anti-minority, and anti-poor is a potential "falling axe" on the neck of the oppressed.

Educational programs such as special support and financial assistance will be major targets of this hostile movement.

This conservative or "right-wing" movement holds the belief that blacks have received "too much" help and should have overcome any past injustices by now and thus don't deserve any more "special" treatment which they proudly label reverse discrimination.

I will examine over the weeks what changes have come and will come from this conservative movement which will have a tremendous effect on all areas of government and education, especially those areas directly related to blacks and minorities.

I will also review current issues occurring in all areas of American society that concern black Iowans and black Americans.

Since I last authored this column, I have founded and become first President of the Iowa City Branch of the NAACP, and thus have been exposed to a multitude of political realities both locally and nationally. This exposure will be of use to me in this column.

Keep your eye on "Getting Ahead" - it will be interesting.

Minority Focus On Solar Energy

Solar energy may well be a major energy source in the 21st century. Today, experimental research in solar energy is being conducted and solar construction and pilot projects are springing up worldwide.

Many minority organizations already have turned to solar energy to raise the quality of food, to help fight the high cost of food and to supplement the availability of fresh produce in their neighborhoods.

Solar greenhouses are being built by local residents across the country to help feed their communities. Solar energy is being used to heat homes to combat the ever increasing cost of traditional heating sources in low-income neighborhoods. But solar energy by itself is not what is making all of this possible. The real energy is coming from the communities themselves, by utilizing solar energy projects. Solar energy is not only feeding and heating communities, it is providing jobs and training for local residents.

It is anticipated that jobs in the solar energy industry will double by 1981 and triple by 1983. The increase is business opportunities for minorities is evidenced by the number of large corporations with solar energy divisions and the number of architectural, construction and engineering firms adding solar energy to their areas of capabilities.

Will minorities be able to keep up with this demand for jobs and business opportunities, as well as keeping up with government programs designed to encourage the use of solar energy?

To help minorities meet the projected requirements of this relatively new industry, the U.S. Department of Energy is sponsoring a "Minority Focus On Solar Energy" Conference, September 15, 16, 17, 1980 at the Sheraton National Motor Hotel, Arlington, Virginia. The conference will specifically address minority participation in government subsidies and programs in solar energy, job and business opportunities in private industry, and current programs of community organizations using solar energy.

THE CUBAN REVOLUTION AND EDUCATION

social or economic status to a degree nearly unrecognized in the United States.

Cuba's needs for trained personnel have required the government to commit large amounts of resources to education and thusly the abolition of many of the artificial barriers to it that continue to exist in the United States. It would seem that Cuban blacks, much more so than their American counterparts, have more stress placed upon the completion of an education with a no less politically defined and directed content.

What is more important is that, although politics are directly and unashamedly pushed into the curriculum, students are taught from the beginning that they are Cubans one and all. Although Cuban education may be segregated in its higher levels, there would seem to be, from the first contacts of a young student with the educational system, a sense of equality of opportunity which exists no-where in this country.

In sum, the average black Cuban would seem to be much better off in terms of access to and stress upon education than the average American black, and that those Cubans who have sought to emigrate recently to the United States would be much better off educationally had he or she remained there.

The African-American has long possessed a faith in the power of education. He has believed that education is the key to many of the shackles that bind him. This was also believed by his master, who made it a crime for him to learn to read and write.

But there were impetuous abolitionist and quakers who defied these laws and took chances by offering education to many blacks both free and enslaved, among these was a Feias Neau who opened the first school for slaves in New York in 1704, and Boudoin college graduated the first black to graduate from a college or university — John Russwurm in 1826.

Lincoln University, Penn. was the first Negro college founded in 1854, close behind it came Fisk Un. of Nashville in 1866.

There are many such halls of learning now Morehouse of Atlanta, Wilberforce Ohio, Hamton Rodhes Vir. and Tuskegee Inst. of Ala. but two of the most interesting because of their beginnings are Piney Woods, founded by Lawrence Jones and Bethuns-Cookman College in Fla. Jones, Marshalltown, Iowa graduated from Univ. Iowa gave up a secure livelihood as a teacher to go into the deep Piney Woods to help the abandoned.

The sky was his ceiling logs his seats, and a bonfire his heating plant. Jones said he ate dried peas for breakfast, drank water for lunch, and swelled up and busted for dinner, to make his dream a reality. In 1954 "This is Your Life" discovered this little professor, and from that time the going was easy — from one 15 year old boy, a cabin, fifty dollars, and forty acres, Piney Woods, Miss. now boast dorms for boys and girls, classrooms and administration buildings, trade shops, etc. spread over some 2,000 acres.

Mary McLeod to had faith and not much else that some day she would head a college for girls. She received her education from Moody Bible Inst. in Chicago 1904 found her in Daytona Beach, Fla. in a tumbled down shack, 5 little girls, $1.50 capital and soapbox furniture. This was the beginning of the now most prestigious of colleges, Daytona Educational and Industrial Training School.

To keep going she sold fish and sweet potatoe pies from door to door. (She married Albert Bethune, who also helped) but her biggest break came when she invited James Gamble (Protrac and Gamble) to visit her school, moved by this ladys faith and determination he gave her much needed financial assistance and become her advisor and life long friend. She merged with Cookman Inst. in 1923, at which time she had and enrollment of 800 and 32 teachers, and property worth over a half a million dollars.

We no longer need worry about a school lunch packed in a small square tin box with a jelly sandwich or a peanut butter sandwich, a banana and sometimes a cold fried egg, cold biscuit, and maybe some cookies. What with the hot school lunch and in some cases breakfast programs all subsidized by the U.S. Government. Time marches on!

The grand finale of the Special Summer Dance and Music Workshop Program at Irving Multi-cultural Center, 16th and Forest, last Friday night received a level of community support and enthusiasm rarely experienced anywhere. Gateway Dance Theatre and supporters are to be congratulated for their vision and confidence in the community.

First on stage were the 6-11 year olds in green leotards to share what they had learned in their two weeks of instruction from Shirley Rushing, one of the finest teachers in the field of dance.

You could hear a pin drop in the auditorium as mothers and fathers, brothers and sisters, aunts and uncles, friends and neighbors watched warm-up exercises carefully. The youngsters created a dance from their warm up movements. Their part in the program finished with their imitations of birds. Very lovely!

Dance 1, the 11 and older young people fascinated the audience with their spontaneous portrayals of sadness, an explosion, and happiness. The young people completed their part of the program with a choreographed dance of African gold miners, a lively colorful number.

The enthusiastic applause became expressions of pride and admiration at intermission. Pride in an individual performer, pride in the fact that such an event was taking place in their community. Particular pride remains in having one of the very best teachers for our children. Shirley Rushing, quite frankly, endeared herself to the community which confidently expects her back next summer.

It was the Music Workshop students turn after intermission. Director Terry Shane, assisted by Ann De Neui, flutist and Woodrow Smith, Drum Instructor, the sound was impressive. The students worked well together in the five selections offered. One classical number by Bach and four modern numbers. The sixth number was a flute duet played by Bill Webster and Instructor Ann De Neui. Speakeasy, Misty, Believe In Yourself, and Touch Me Baby were the band numbers.

Vocalist DeLora Jones was magnificent, accompanied by the Furgersons, Joh, Lee and Tom, Steve McCrory, Woodrow Smith, Terry Shane, Bill Webster and Ann DeNeui. We can look forward to hearing them again next year.

For those who missed Shirley Rushing's performance at the D.M. Art Center, last Friday night included two solos, plus dancing with the Gateway Dance Theatre. Her first offering, Creature and a number called, It's A Long Dance From Africa To America. Jazz Suite included Gateway apprentices: Sherri Davis, Kirk Douglas, Kevin Green, and Vicki Long, in addition to the Gateway Dance Theatre members.

Gospel Suite (new work in progress) was performed by the Gateway Dance Theatre and guest artist Dorian Williams - Byrd. This is a number which would be acceptable, in my opinion, in many churches as part of a religious service. Gospel Suite is in Black church tradition.

The kind of support given the 1980 Special Summer Dance and Music Program indicates such a program can carry on through the year in preparation for an expanded 1981 Special Summer Workshop.

Registration for fall dance classes will begin this Monday, August 25 through August 28 at Irving Multi-cultural Center, 16th and Forest for new students. Dance II meets Monday and Thursday at 6:30 to 7:15 P.M.

Dance I meets 7:15 to 8:15 P.M. at Irving Multi-cultural Center, 16th and Forest Ave. New students should register early. If there are questions, call Penny Furgerson — after 6 P.M. at 282-8696.

ST. PAUL A.M.E. CHURCH

1201 Day Street
Rev. Lewis E. Grady, Jr., Pastor

"He who God's will has borne and done,

And his own restless longings stilled; What else he does, or has foregone,

His mission he has well fulfilled."

From the German "What Shall We Preach?" With all of the eagerness and spontaneity of a young minister, Rev. Ernest Baty most capably filled our pulpit, in the absence of Rev. Grady, last Sunday.

Among the things that must be emphasized, for a minister to preach, Rev. Baty enumerated: Be Born Again; Gospel to All; Concern of the Health and Welfare of God's Children; Deliverance From Bondage and Sin; Cross of Calvary as a Mortgage for Our Salvation; etc. Rev. Baty burst out singing, "Pass Me Not, O Gentle Saviour" hoping St. Paulians would feel the Holy Spirit that was upon him.

Our Pastor, Rev. Lewis E. Grady, Jr., has been returned to us. His sermon, for next Sunday, will be, "A Strange Land". Let us see if St. Paulians can formulate a new St. Paul A.M.E. Church for the coming year.

Don't forget to enhance your dinner with the exotic foods the Hostess Club will exhibit and have for sale this coming Sunday. Also, remember Church Conference will be August 31st, right after the morning services.

It saddens our hearts that Sister Jacqueline Taylor has left our church family, but, we know that she has gone to join a most Holy Church. Comfort her family with your prayers and friendship.

If you had to choose between two individuals with either of two characteristics: goodness or organizer, which would be best to follow and to understand why Jesus was crucified?

are, neither are His ways as our ways ... His thoughts are as high above our thoughts as the heaven is above the earth .. He spoke! and worlds came into existence!

He scooped out the seas by the great hem of His garment, now WHO ARE YOU TO CHALLENGE GOD?

and you poor little women ... You are just a rib of man ... so when you seek to be equal to man, you should remember the words of Jesus, when he spoke to the woman at the well ...

When He told her, you have said well, when you say you have had five husbands, and the one you have now is not yours ... So I am saying to the women, don't seek a Husband ... All you women who are seeking husbands, don't just seek a husband, a husband is easy to find ... but seek your rib ... seek the one that you are a rib of — If any man lacketh wisdom let him ask of GOD ...

After a glorious and rewarding spiritual service, where everyone felt the presence of GOD in their soul, and were inspired to go into the week, prepared and fortified with the presence of GOD, and the knowledge that I can do all things through Christ, who strengthens me ...

Our prayers and our sympathies remain with our precious sister Linda Carter and her family, following the loss of her mother. May God bless you, and may Heaven Smile upon you is our prayer.

See you in church Sunday ... If you are thinking about Heaven, think about Heavenly Temple, and if you really want to go to that place that Jesus has prepared for those that love him, then come pitch your battle against sin with us, and let us join forces against evil, and work for the upbuilding of the Kingdom of GOD ...

SEE YOU IN HEAVENLY TEMPLE SUNDAY — WHERE THE PRESENCE OF GOD IS BETTER FELT, THAN TOLD ABOUT ...

Nutrition study to be launched

The school district Committee for Better Nutrition is seeking ideas, suggestions and comments from school district residents on how best to implement a new policy on the sale of food in schools.

The policy, adopted by the School Board on July 1, says all foods offered or sold by the Des Moines Public Schools "will reflect a concern for better nutrition and better health." In addition, new federal regulations restrict the sale in schools of carbonated beverages and certain types of candy until after the last lunch period of the day.

Sandra Leggett, chairman of the committee, said "now is the time," for school district residents "to express concern for good nutrition in your schools. We hope that you may have the chance to try some 'new' nutritious ideas during the school year and relate your ideas and their success or problems" to the committee.

Leggett may be contacted at Casady attendance center, 1801 16th Street, Des Moines, Iowa 50314.

The School Board asked the committee of parents, students, school administrators, health educators, teachers and food service personnel to gather information and recommend ways to implement the new policy.

Leggett also said committee members will be willing to supply information to parent groups, school faculties; student councils and similar organizations.

No change in lunch prices

The price for school lunches for students in the Des Moines Public Schools will remain at 60 cents, at least through the first semester, according to Janice Dudley, food service director.

As in the past, 5 and 20 meal tickets will be sold, she said.

However, there have been some changes in the food service prices, including elimination of free milk, an increase in the price of milk to 8 cents per carton and a drop in the price of the reduced price meal from 20 cents to 10 cents.

Mrs. Dudley said the reduced price lunch price may change in about 60 days because new regulations are expected to be issued by the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

She said the elimination of free milk and the increase in cost of purchased milk was necessary because the milk reimbursement was reduced by two cents per carton.

The adult single meal price has been increased by 10 cents to $1.10 although 5 and 20 meal tickets will be sold to adults at $1 per meal, a new practice this year. She said adults are charged more for their meals because state and federal reimbursement is paid only on student meals and commodities are received only for student meals. Thus, Mrs. Dudley said, adult meal prices must reflect the total cost of the meal or milk.

Roosevelt and Tech high schools and tenth grade at Lincoln high school will attend orientation sessions at their new schools Wednesday, Aug. 27.

The orientation sessions, scheduled at 9 a.m., the day before classes start, will give the new junior and senior high school

An estimated 32,500 students will return to classes in the Des Moines Public Schools August 28 for the opening of the 1980-81 school year.

The total enrollment is expected to be about 1,500 below the 34,043 students counted on the official enrollment date last September.

Students will be dismissed a half hour early on the first two days of the new school year and then will enjoy a day off for the Labor Day holiday on Sept. 1.

The opening of school this year will be the first under the school district's new superintendent, Dr. William Anderson. A native Iowan, Anderson has been superintendent of schools in Hampton, Va., for the past three years. He previously taught and served as superintendent in several Iowa school districts. He was named in June by the Des Moines School Board to succeed Dr. Dwight M. Davis, who resigned after 15 years in Des Moines to become superintendent of schools in Colorado Springs, Colo.

Another change this year will be the new location for Temple school, a school for teen age parents. The school, previously located at 1300 Sixth Avenue, has been moved to the former Irving junior high school building at 16th and Forest.

State law requires that all school children be immunized against measles, polio, rubella, diphtheria, whooping cough and tetanus. Exemptions are granted if a physician certifies the vaccines would be injurious to the health and well being of the child or members of the household or if the child is a member of a religion which opposes immunizations.

The regular class day for students will be 8 a.m. to 2:15 p.m. at junior high school, 8 a.m. to 2:45 p.m. at senior high schools, 8:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. at Smouse and Van Meter schools.

Two schedules have been set for elementary schools. Students will attend school from 8:55 a.m. to 3:05 p.m. at Brooks, Douglas, Edmunds, Findley, Garton, Granger, Greenwood, Hanawalt, Hubbell, Jackson, Lovejoy, McKinley, Monroe, Oak Park, Perkins, Pleasant Hill, Stowe, Studebaker and Wright. Announce morning schedules for school buses

Approximately 4,500 Des Moines Public School students will be transported to and from school each day, starting Thursday, August 28, most of them by school district buses. Some students will ride regularly scheduled Metropolitan Transit Authority buses and some MTA buses will be chartered for school routes.

Free transportation is provided as required by state law, to elementary and junior high school students living more than two miles from their designated attendance center and to senior high school students living more than three miles from school. Transportation also is provided for students assigned to special education classes outside their home attendance area, to students whose health or physical condition prevents them from walking the required distance to school and to students assigned from the home school to another attendance center for educational programs within the school district such as Traditional school and the Voluntary Transfer Program.

A change in state law requires bus drivers in cities to use the school warning and stop lights and stop sign whenever loading and unloading passengers. The signs require motorists on two-lane streets either following or meeting school buses to stop. However, on four-lane streets, only motorists traveling the same direction as the school bus are required to stop when the warning lights and stop sign are used.

Karen Bellis, supervisor of transportation, said Des Moines school bus drivers were not always required to use the warning lights and stop sign in the past.

Justice, Equality For Students And Parents

Reprinted from The University of Northern Iowa Lab School

As you walk through the backdoor of Gloria Kirkland's Price Lab classroom, you must carefully step around two cardboard African huts built for the classes' study of Africa. At 3:15 on Monday afternoon the teacher and student teacher chat about the day as they pick up remnants of the activities.

They deftly duck under the green construction paper and Kleenex jungle flowers strung across one corner of the large room next to an enclosure full of stuffed animals, obviously part of the jungle.

It's quiet now, but earlier the room buzzed with 18 children performing varied activities. After a morning of working with 20 early childhood students followed by 18 in the afternoon, teacher Kirkland settles back into one of those small chairs and talks about her ideas on educating her 4 to 6 - year - old students.

"The most important thing for all children is self - concept," says the Ph.D. from Indiana State University. "If you build on self - concept, then you won't have the discipline problems and learning will occur naturally."

Kirkland's teaching centers around building self - concept through activities that meet students' individual needs. Her classes reflect a mixture of children and activities. The children who are in the same class for two years, have different backgrounds, experiences, emotional needs and physical capabilities.

"The children benefit from each other," says Kirkland, a former day-care center director. "Kindergartners supposedly have an effect on nursery age children because of their maturity, but this isn't always true. We look at the individual child and focus on that child's needs."

Part of the self - concept idea involves letting children make choices, but having a plan for them. Kirkland and Judy Finkelstein, the other PLS early childhood teacher, make weekly lesson plans to give children the cohesiveness Kirkland says they need.

"I came up through a new era of teaching children with more emphasis on creativity and letting the child make choices and be involved in decision making. I try not to use models for children to copy."

Kirkland's class ripples with action one afternoon as they study African art. One table of six children smell like the Ivory soap they carve while another table of three children work with red and brown Playdough. Still a third table of four children work with hand looms and a few more children put together sculptures with paper candy holders, Styrofoam and toothpicks.

"My teacher is a teacher because she teaches good," offers one student between knife strokes on the soap she carves. Gloria Kirkland moves from table to table, asking questions, making comments.

"I believe in justice and equality for all children and parents. If you start early enough, hopefully, by the next generation there will be more objectivity," says the woman who took the PLS job because it meant she could teach children instead of college students.

Part of that justice and equality means getting children and parents strongly involved. Every week Kirkland and Finkelstein write letters to the parents telling them the happenings of the previous week, the focus of the current week and suggested follow - up at home activities.

"It is a lot of work but I really believe in parent involvement, not just at the pre - school level. The parents and children are part of the curriculum and it's tremendous."

The parents respond in kind. Two hundred parents or relatives of Kirkland's 38 students came to a Thanksgiving feast earlier this year.

The children prepared this dinner as well as other treats for themselves and their parents throughout the year.

"Oh, they love to cook," laughs Kirkland. "Cooking involves all sorts of things. You have to read the recipe, follow the directions, measure the amounts, see the chemical changes and then you enjoy eating what you've created," explains the teacher.

Kirkland also views her teaching role and belief in self - concept as part of her responsibility to other PLS teachers. One of few blacks on the PLS staff, Kirkland last year conducted a two day in-service training session for the teachers about black children.

"People don't always intentionally mistreat black children. It's usually a lack of awareness. But, I am willing to help people better understand black children. I tell the teachers and students they can come and ask me anything anytime."

Her special interests in early childhood and minority children drew Kirkland to the local branch of the NAACP where she is youth advisor. She is also state education chair for the Iowa - Nebraska conference of the organization. For her work in that area she was selected by Iowa Governor Robert Ray as one of the 10 Outstanding Minority Women in Iowa

"My committee looks at what's happening in schools for black children and other minorities. Right now we're looking at the higher rate of expulsion and suspension for blacks in Waterloo schools.

We work with the Iowa Department of Public Instruction, inform them as to how the school system could help and we also have a group of blacks willing to provide in-service training in the schools. We want to be sure we have a multi - cultural approach."

Kirkland has been at Price Lab only two years but those two years prompted Dean of the College of Education Dale Nitzschke to comment that Kirkland is doing "an absolutely magnificent job."

The early childhood assistant professor "feels good because the parents and I can see progress in the children." She loves her job. "The children ask neat questions, and they keep you really happy."

I want to let children explore, to find out all they need to know to learn what the world is about. I'm prepared to be there when they need me."

Air Force Academy Grad To Speak

Second Lieutenant Sue Slavec, a 1980 graduate of the U.S. Air Force Academy, will be speaking to minority and other high school students throughout the Des Moines area who are interested in the academy.

As a cadet, Lt. Slavec majored in Behavioral Science receiving a bachelor of science degree upon graduation. She was retained at the academy as an admissions advisor to assist minority candidates seeking entrance to the academy.

Why should a minority high school student be interested in attending the academy? Primarily because he or she can get an education at a school which is recognized for its outstanding academic program and also for its outstanding career opportunities following graduation. The academy pays for each student's tuition, room, meals, school equipment and medical care, and allows an additional $400 per month to help cover necessary personal expenses.

The average class at the academy consists of 15 to 20 students which permits personal discussion between the cadet and the instructor. Basic courses in the sciences, social sciences and humanities are required during the first two years. This allows each cadet to attain a basic knowledge of many subjects.

During the final two years, cadets develop their own potential and tailor their program to suit their individual talents and interests. After graduation, the Air Force guarantees the student a job as a second lieutenant.

The basic eligibility requirements are as follows:

- (1) Be at least 17 and not have reached 22nd birthday by July 1 of the year of entry.
- (2) Unmarried.
- (3) A United States citizen by the date of entry.

Any student who can meet these requirements and is interested in a top quality education and a guaranteed job as an officer in the regular Air

(TEST NEW ANTI-SICKLING COMPOUNDS)

The design and development of compounds for the treatment of sickle cell disease is the goal of a study by Dr. Joseph Walder, assistant professor of biochemistry at the University of Iowa.

The research is being aided by a three-year $39,000 grant from the National Easter Seal Research Foundation.

Sickle cell disease is a genetic disorder, primarily of blacks, which results in an abnormal form of hemoglobin, called hemoglobin S.

"Molecules of hemoglobin S have a tendency to aggregate and form rod-like fibers within the red blood cells of persons with sickle cell disease," Walder said. "These fibers distort the shape of the red blood cell and give rise to the characteristic sickled form."

The sickled red blood cell is less deformable than the normal red cell and, as a result, tends to become trapped in and block small blood vessels.

The blockage of blood vessels by the sickled red cells is the principal problem in patients having sickle cell disease. As a result of the blockage, tissues are injured or die because of an inadequate supply of oxygen. At present there is no adequate treatment Force (a position similar to a junior executive in most large companies) should plan to speak with Lt. Slavec between Sept. 19 to Sept. 20.

Please call Lt. Col. Joseph Freilinger, the academy liaison officer coordinator, at (515) 281-3176 for the actual times and places.

for the disorder.

One approach to treatment is to develop compounds that interact with hemoglobin S and prevent it from aggregating within the red blood cell. Although there are compounds known to have this effect, they are not sufficiently specific and cause toxic side effects.

The compounds Walder is investigating appear to be both highly specific for the hemoglobin molecule and potent inhibitors of the sickling process.

"The compounds we are studying react selectively at a well-defined site on the hemoglobin molecule, and, as a result, interfere with the contacts made between the molecules in the sickle cell fibers," he explained. "We are hoping to develop compounds with increased specificity so that they may be used without undue side effects."

Bursting Bubbles: Positive Aspects Of Loneliness

By Niambi D. Webster

The following is a list of attitudinal situations experienced daily by thousands of women throughout the country, as expressed by the ten women interviewed. Remember although each person is labeled, they can be equally experienced by any combination of the three situations.

"Where Have All the Friends Gone?"

The career-minded women, whether married or single, those interested in achieving more out of life than staying home and portraying housewife stereotypes, find little time for idle gossip, visits to friends and daily love affairs.

Their lives are centered around being aggressive, successfully employed women, who are involved in political and/or local community affairs. It's not uncommon for them to spend a lot of time away from home, or found heavily engrossed in one of the ten best selling books. The reading, writing and work they bring home from the office all add up to overtime, but at the expense of who?—the children, a husband or the boss?

How important are future promotions, higher wages and more fringe benefits? When it becomes apparent that the value of keeping in touch with friends, spending more time with lovers and making constant contacts with family is important, it's often times too late, they have already backed themselves so far into an isolated corner or totally dismissed the closeness once present in the relationship.

When career-minded women become upset, they need a friend, a shoulder to cry on or an understanding ear to listen to their problems, frustrations and/or success', but the corner has become overcrowded with too many material matters, there's no room for additional human compassion to get in.

"Don't Burn Down Bridges that Helped you Across"

The college student is remotely concerned with the problems of the world and isolates herself by studying, with the intentions of learning how to solve all the problems of the world or in response to the pressures from classes and peer pressure. Has she been shipped off to college to seek her fortune?—a man to take home to meet the folks?—a degree, which denotes a good job upon graduation?

Perhaps by engrossing herself in her studies, maintaining a high GPA becomes too much priority, while friends, lovers and family too often become low on her list of priorities. Should she go home for break or stay at school and catch up on assigned homework, and/or rest?

There's no need to go home to be bothered by little siblings, she wouldn't be able to study. Also, she'd feel obligated to go out at least once with friends, so they won't think that she's gone away to college and become too snobbish or arrogant. Yet when her pocketbook is empty, the first call she makes is home, seeking friends to bail her out of financial depression.

After a rough day of classes, she remembers the long lost lover who gently soothed and pacified her frustrations. Bored with studying, she reverts to a forgotten friend to entertain a pizza. How soon we forget the good times that we shared with our friends, the laughs and happy moments spent with family. Memories cannot be remembered by pictures alone, they must be felt and continually expressed to loved ones often.

"A House is Not a Home"

The housewife, busy trying to make ends meet at the grocery store, pinching pennies trying to save money for a new dress or pair of shoes. She doesn't have time to worry about the loneliness creeping into her life. Her schedule moves from cleaning house, washing clothes, ironing, not to mention cooking breakfast, lunch and supper.

She frequents the hairdresser, figure salon and supermarkets. "...can't talk to you now, got to hang up..." to turn on the t.v. and watch five hours of soap operas. She picks up the kids and takes them to doctor appointments, baseball, football and soccer practice.

There's not much time for friendly chats with neighbors: "Lunch?—Well maybe after exercise class or the appointment with the hairdresser." Her loneliness has caught up with her, if she doesn't have time to loaf, to share thoughts with friends, to entertain quiet moments with her spouse or visit her relatives, why buy a new dress, why keep up her hair?

One cannot exist solely on errands, appointments and soap opera life, it takes more than knowing you have a home to go to, but knowing that there will be someone there when you need them.

To be continued...find out next how to cope with and use the state of loneliness to your advantage.

East Side Fish Market

The newly completed Eastside Fish Market was the scene of a special recognition ceremony July 28. Owners Bill and Dave Veach were presented a plaque by their fellow Eastside business men and women representing the East Des Moines Bureau of the Greater Des Moines Chamber of Commerce.

The plaque was inscribed: "Presented to EASTSIDE FISH MARKET. In recognition of their investment in the rebirth of Downtown East Des Moines by the East Des Moines Bureau of the Greater Des Moines Chamber of Commerce Federation 1980 A.D."

The new facility, built next door to the building the firm occupied since 1940, has more than twice as much floor space. The old building, one of the oldest in the city, is being torn down to provide customer parking. However, interest has been shown by Living History Farms in preserving the Mid-Victorian Facade.

In making the presentation, Tom Fredregill, Vice Chairman of the East Des Moines Bureau, called attention to the reawakening of activity in Downtown East Des Moines. Among the new developments he mentioned was the Botanical Center; the new ownership of Capitol City Bank by the Hawkeye Bank Corporation; the expanded facilities for Tai Industries; the relocation of American Marking Company and the Italian Importing Company; the new copying machine facility being completed by Koch Brothers at East Third and Locust; and the restoration work being carried on at the Studio Building at East 6th and Grand and across the street from the Eastside Fish Market at Iowa Window and Building Maintenance. In addition, Fredregill pointed out, renovation is planned for the Commercial Office Supply building and Plain Talk Printing Company.

"Our financial institutions, our banks and savings and loans, are working together and working with the business people in the area to rebuild this oldest part of Des Moines. With 4,500 paychecks every week going into the Capitol Complex within walking distance of our businesses and the redevelopment spirit and cooperation of our members, we believe we can redevelop Downtown East Des Moines so it will enhance the total downtown revitalization of Des Moines and be a community we can be proud of," Fredregill concluded.

Thank you and God bless all of you.

Signed by: wife, Geraldine B. Jones, a mother, Georgia Sparkman, foster nieces and nephews, and other relatives.

The family of Mr. Raymond Damon Jones want to share this thought with you.

Perhaps you sang a lovely song,
Or sat quietly in a chair;

Perhaps you sent beautiful flowers,
If so, we saw them there.

Perhaps you sent or spoke kind words
As any friend could say;

Perhaps you were not there at all—
Just thought of us that day.

Perhaps you prepared tasty food,
Or maybe furnished a car;

Perhaps you rendered a service unseen,
Near at hand or from afar.

Whatever you did to console the heart,
We thank you so much—whatever the part.

The family of Henrietta Eola Coil want to share this thought with you.

Perhaps you sang a lovely song,
Or sat quietly in a chair;

Perhaps you sent beautiful flowers,
If so, we saw them there.

Perhaps you sent or spoke kind words
As any friend could say;

Perhaps you were not there at all—
Just thought of us that day.

Perhaps you prepared tasty food,
As any friend could say;

Perhaps you were not there at all—
Just thought of us that day.

Perhaps you prepared tasty food,
Or maybe furnished a car;

Perhaps you rendered a service unseen,
Near at hand or from afar.

Whatever you did to console the heart,
We thank you so much—whatever the part.

Or maybe furnished a car;

Perhaps you rendered a service unseen,
Near at hand or from afar.

Whatever you did to console the heart,
We thank you so much—whatever the part.

ALLEN ASHBY with a LOOK ON SPORTS

We are getting to the final days of our Hilltop closed tennis tournament. Because we went for a single elimination, we didn't have as many entrants as we usually had. There were about sixteen, compared to twenty or twenty one in other years.

This thing had at least its share of defaults and no shows. Funny thing, we set the deadline for Friday night before the meet opening and held a public drawing for all to see. And, wouldn't you know it, it rained Saturday and we couldn't play that day.

So Sunday we got out the draw sheets and decided to hold the doubles draw until the first round of singles was completed. Little did we know that the first round of singles wouldn't be over until nearly 5 p.m. But what really got us was the fact that fellows kept walking around with their money in their hands and then at the last minute would try to enter the singles and after we had closed the doubles, that, too.

So we heard the usual complaints about a lousy meet, but these don't do anything to me, but they don't help the blood pressure of Chet Williamson, who was mad enough to fight. Because I have heard and seen how lousy tennis meets can be run, and compared to these, our Hilltop closed and Open are run like clockwork.

When you hear about players being forced to play people from their town or club, and see how openly the favorite players are protected, you have some grounds for complaints. Most of the people who criticize our meets don't have too much to do with the running of a tennis meet, so they have only their ideas about how they should be run.

The tennis meets I am talking about are national meets and sectional ones that have people cussing their operation, so, so local meets, move over. In fact, I heard some criticism of the USTA meet last year, so I didn't feel so bad about our little meet.

But, enough of that. This meet set some sort of mark for defaults after the thing had got started. Mike Walden, whom I had picked to win it all said that his work schedule would prevent him from playing any more, and had to default after winning his first round match.

Marion Williams won a match and defaulted his semi-final to his doubles partner, Rozelle Caldwell. In the other semi-final Nate Allen set down Bob Conners in a match that was much longer than the score indicated.

Allen met Caldwell in the final and I had pegged the thing as a tossup, but Rozelle did Nate in in straight sets. Then he teamed up with Marion Williams to tackle Rus Saunders and Vic Smith in the doubles final. The strength of Williams and Caldwell is in the way they keep the ball in play and use everything, head, mouth and whatever to make it.

Well, Smith and Saunders had a simple solution for that game. Every time they got a soft shot they would knock the hell out of it on the theory that if you couldn't get to the ball, you couldn't return it. And that worked for them with a straight set win for the championship.

On the whole, the meet was a pretty good one, and I don't think the players who participated had much to complain about but for the fact that some players insisted on showing up late and this made it tough so the next guy would want to show up late also, and since you didn't do too much about the first one, there wasn't much you could do about that one. So next year, if I am involved in the thing, there will be a time limit and no exceptions.

DRESSED TO KILL and PROM NIGHT are two films drenched in blood with a psychopathic killer wreaking havoc and slashing lovely ladies to bits in both. The difference between the two is that throughout the former, director Brian De Palma (THE FURY, CARRIE) keeps you on the edge of your seat and super tense.

In PROM NIGHT, an obscure Canadian production, you witness a throat slashing, a garroting, an ax slaying, a fiery van crash and a decapitation — I met all with a jaded yawn. I never felt terror or anxious anticipation in NIGHT, so it seems it's not what you do in a film to scare people, it's how you do it.

Fans of horror films will remember PSYCHO, the original versions of FRANKENSTEIN and DRACULA, THE NIGHT OF THE LIVING DEAD even, because of their styles, their spellbinding effects, the director's and/or cinematographers techniques.

As another DM critic suggested, Brian DePalma does not fit into the above category because though you're scared to death while IN the theatre, once you leave a 'what was that all about' attitude descends. DRESSED TO KILL as you've probably heard, tells the tale of a crazed drag queen on a rampage of death with a straight razor in his clutches.

That he is after only "loose" ladies may be a comment on our free loving lifestyles or a coincidence but it's fairly obvious after a while who the killer is. But you still remain spellbound as to how, where and why he'll strike or slash next. Angie Dickinson (and a double) show a lot of skin in the film.

This is only the R rated version but there still is plenty of nudity and steamy sex — keep the preteens at home. The final scene is straight out of CARRIE and is a negative comment on DePalma's view of his audiences' intelligence or their memories.

PROM NIGHT has only two "names" in it — character actor Leslie Nielsen, who sleep walks through a few scenes in this story of the destructive side of childhood; youthful murder and revenge. Jamie Lee Curtis (late of HALLOWEEN & THE FOG) portrays the sister of a slain child whose revenge is key to the plot.

Simson productions really should be sued for plagiarism in this one — the crazed psychotic who escapes from a mental institution to terrorize beautiful young nymphets is straight from HALLOWEEN; the dance contest was "borrowed" from SATURDAY NIGHT FEVER; and the Prom night which turns into brutal tragedy from CARRIE.

It's all there and all old hat in PROM NIGHT. Maybe that's why the film seems so surprisingly dead — as if it had been filmed in a vacuum. Ms. Curtis better watch it. She's on her way to grade B horror schlock movie heroine type casting. Neither one of these films will make it into the "Scary Movie Hall of Fame". Be forewarned folks.
